Public Safety gives up state law enforcement powers

Department will become the college’s private security detail next year
Kurt Koehler
Campus Beat Editor

Soon Public Safety patrol cars will no longer have Hope College Police emblazoned on their sides. Starting in the 2003-2004 academic year, Hope College’s Department of Public Safety will no longer have the power to enforce state law on and off campus. The department will revert to a campus safety and security force with the power to enforce college regulations and other minor incidents. Public safety would still take a lot of the more minor incident reports such as lost wallets and backpacks. Those are things that Holland Police would take, but there wouldn’t be much they could do to remedy that. Public Safety knows the campus more intimately and would be able to follow up on that,” said Greg Maybury, director of Operations and Technology.

The Michigan Commission on Law Enforcement Standards (MCOLS), the state board that certifies both individual police officers and their departments, recently issued a finding that state law precludes Hope College, as a private college, from exercising full police powers. This finding, indirectly, arose out of a case involving a challenge to Hope College’s privilege to have a private law enforcement agency. The finding will have more SECURITY on 2

Hope defeated by Calvin 74-70
Men’s basketball travels to Calvin, comes back with loss
Olim Alimov
Staff Reporter

For many, the 150th game between Hope and Calvin was worth waiting for. More than 4,500 fans attended Saturday’s showdown, which ended in a 74-70 Hope loss. The Flying Dutchmen (2-1) walked into the game against Calvin (3-1) in second place in the MIAA behind conference leader Albion (3-0). Calvin had suffered MIAA season losses to the Flying Dutchmen but a recent win against the Flying Dutchmen, Saturday, might have been one of the few things Calvin fans were interested in. Calvin’s center Don Overbeek’s three-pointer with 11 seconds left tied the game at 70-70. Hope then had the ball with seven seconds left to make a move, especially since Hope led 6-0 to start the game and scored 29 of the first 34 points in the game.

Forward Katie Nienhuis (’03) shoots a basket as the flying Dutch remained unde#0* and grabbed 7 rebounds. The knights quickly made a run of their own to take a one point 20-19 lead. On the next possession, Overbeek went up high and dunked the ball to give Hope the lead. The Flying Dutch trailed by one 34-35 before Greg Immink (’05), who scored 6 points and made 2 steals, “Every Hope-Calvin game is a part of history and to be a part of that tradition is definitely something special.”

The team then stepped it up on the defensive side. The Flying Dutchmen then went on a 19-6 run to take the lead and end the game with a 74-70 win over Calvin. Max Boersma led all scorers with 16 points and 3 assists. Calvin’s center Don Overbeek also led all scorers for the game with 29 points.

“...If you get beat, life goes on and you just have got to get back up.” -Matt Taylor (’04)

State moves to reduce scholarships’ value
Budget cut leaves students scrambling
Anjey Dykhuis
Campus Beat Editor

Every year, high school seniors are assaulted with a barrage of paperwork and junk mail begging them to apply to this or that college. Every year, some students push certain colleges aside because tuition is simply too expensive. The state of Michigan has tried to lessen the financial strain on college students by offering scholarships for both need and reward. However, this spring is the last semester that two scholarships, the Michigan Competitive Scholarship and the Michigan Tuition Grant, will be offered at the value originally disbursed.

The Michigan Competitive Scholarship is based on a qualifying ACT score and financial need. To be eligible for the Michigan Tuition Grant, students must demonstrate financial need. Over the semester began, “Basically my life made a difference for good. Heaven is brighter today because of Max’s homecoming to be with his Lord and Savior; Earth is dimmer because of his absence from us,” said Hope College President James Bultman.

He also helped Hope by co-chairing two important capital campaigns, Campaign for Hope, which surpassed its goal in 1987, and Hope in the Future, which topped its objective in 1994. Preceding his death, he was also helping with the current campaign, Legacies: A Vision of Hope. In addition, Max Boersma served as president of the more BOERSMA on 2

Hope remembers trustee
Avid Hope supporter will be missed
Anjey Dykhuis
Campus Beat Editor
For the past 61 years, Max D. Boersma, 78, has been affiliated with Hope College. He graduated in the class of 1946 and was a leader on the Board of Trustees for over 20 years, from 1981 until his death, serving as secretary from 1982 to 2000. On Friday, Boersma fell ill while playing tennis at DaWitt Tennis Center. He was transported to Holland Community Hospital, where he died.

“His was a life lived well and that
Nick Denis
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

A musical fracas between eight bands prompted the WTHS Battle of the Bands to be postponed because we did not feel like the show would present last week's last Wednesday.

"It's too bad that the Battle of the Bands was canceled..."—Jamie Pierce ('03)

This also will help it be an even better show—for example, we were having a tough time finding a sponsor to give us more time to come up with a cool prize package," De Avila said.

The cancellation of Battle of the Bands did, however, not shut down Hope's Saturday night music scene. Ryan Werdell, back in Andy Volk ('04) of Hope organized a show in the basement of Voorhees hall. "Prior to even knowing battle of the bands was canceled, the idea of playing in the basement or Voorhees had been floating around. However, getting it cleared by the R.D. was the remaining concern," Volk said.

"Hope for August and Lyle! were having a hard time convincing the campus administration that we are considered reliable and loyal to our bands that we want to promote," said Oegema.

Rescheduling may not be an easy task. "We are in the same building as the Knickerbocker. It's already reserved for most of the semester—we're looking at perhaps an April date," De Avila said. Despite the difficulties that got the original show canceled and the new problems with reserving the Knickerbocker theater, De Avila remains optimistic about the success of the concert.

"The Knickerbocker is already reserved for most of the semester—we're looking at perhaps an April date," De Avila said. Despite the difficulties that got the original show canceled and the new problems with reserving the Knickerbocker theater, De Avila remains optimistic about the success of the concert.

The cancellation of Battle of the Bands did, however, not shut down Hope's Saturday night music scene. Ryan Werdell, back in Andy Volk ('04) of Hope organized a show in the basement of Voorhees hall. "Prior to even knowing battle of the bands was canceled, the idea of playing in the basement or Voorhees had been floating around. However, getting it cleared by the R.D. was the remaining concern," Volk said.

"Hope for August and Lyle! were having a hard time convincing the campus administration that we are considered reliable and loyal to our bands that we want to promote," said Oegema.

Rescheduling may not be an easy task. "We are in the same building as the Knickerbocker. It's already reserved for most of the semester—we're looking at perhaps an April date," De Avila said. Despite the difficulties that got the original show canceled and the new problems with reserving the Knickerbocker theater, De Avila remains optimistic about the success of the concert.

"The Knickerbocker is already reserved for most of the semester—we're looking at perhaps an April date," De Avila said. Despite the difficulties that got the original show canceled and the new problems with reserving the Knickerbocker theater, De Avila remains optimistic about the success of the concert.

"I always said I'd like to retire halfway between my current job and whatever I have planned for the future..."—Dan Hendricks ('03)

Tuition Grant and Michigan Tuition Grants, among greeks

A group of Greeks here on campus is out to disprouse stereotypes. At the start of last year, a few students representing fraternities and sororities at Hope began to meet on a weekly basis for prayer, worship, fellowship and discussion. It has since evolved into what is known today as Greek Life.

"I really felt the need to join together with other Greeks on campus to start supporting each other, blur the lines of a false sense of competition between different fraternities and sororities, and allow others to see that we are all dealing with the same struggles, spiritually, socially, and otherwise," said Greek Life Leadership Team member Rachel Peckenaugh ('04).

Greek Life, which is run similar to the popular junior high and high school Christian group Young Life, combines a time of worship, study, prayer, a message by one of the Leadership Team members, which often spans small group discussion, and time afterward put together a fellowship. Each week a discussion is usually led by a small group format where three or four students will break away from the larger group to discuss how to maintain a Christian outlook and a Christ centered life in the midst of the obvious temptations that exist as a member of a Greek organization.

"It is really encouraging to me to see that I am not alone in wanting to live for Christ while at the same time be an active member in my organization," remarked Bethany Buzanis ('04).

Greek Life, although 100 percent of student involvement comes from Greek members, also supports Greek Advisor Amber Garrison as well as Hope College Assistant Chaplain Paul Boersma. "God is doing some great things on this campus involving the Greek system," Boersma hailed. "Greek Life is just one of the events that accentuates a lot of the positives of the Greek System here at Hope.

A few times a semester, Greek Life brings in guest speakers such as Boersma or other local pastors or church leaders, to encourage and instruct in a more formal setting. In addition, aGreek Life, although 100 percent of student involvement comes from Greek members, also supports Greek Advisor Amber Garrison as well as Hope College Assistant Chaplain Paul Boersma. "God is doing some great things on this campus involving the Greek system," Boersma hailed. "Greek Life is just one of the events that accentuates a lot of the positives of the Greek System here at Hope.

A few times a semester, Greek Life brings in guest speakers such as Boersma or other local pastors or church leaders, to encourage and instruct in a more formal setting. In addition, aGreek Life, although 100 percent of student involvement comes from Greek members, also supports Greek Advisor Amber Garrison as well as Hope College Assistant Chaplain Paul Boersma. "God is doing some great things on this campus involving the Greek system," Boersma hailed. "Greek Life is just one of the events that accentuates a lot of the positives of the Greek System here at Hope.

A few times a semester, Greek Life brings in guest speakers such as Boersma or other local pastors or church leaders, to encourage and instruct in a more formal setting. In addition, aGreek Life, although 100 percent of student involvement comes from Greek members, also supports Greek Advisor Amber Garrison as well as Hope College Assistant Chaplain Paul Boersma. "God is doing some great things on this campus involving the Greek system," Boersma hailed. "Greek Life is just one of the events that accentuates a lot of the positives of the Greek System here at Hope.

A few times a semester, Greek Life brings in guest speakers such as Boersma or other local pastors or church leaders, to encourage and instruct in a more formal setting. In addition, aGreek Life, although 100 percent of student involvement comes from Greek members, also supports Greek Advisor Amber Garrison as well as Hope College Assistant Chaplain Paul Boersma. "God is doing some great things on this campus involving the Greek system," Boersma hailed. "Greek Life is just one of the events that accentuates a lot of the positives of the Greek System here at Hope.

A few times a semester, Greek Life brings in guest speakers such as Boersma or other local pastors or church leaders, to encourage and instruct in a more formal setting. In addition, aGreek Life, although 100 percent of student involvement comes from Greek members, also supports Greek Advisor Amber Garrison as well as Hope College Assistant Chaplain Paul Boersma. "God is doing some great things on this campus involving the Greek system," Boersma hailed. "Greek Life is just one of the events that accentuates a lot of the positives of the Greek System here at Hope.

A few times a semester, Greek Life brings in guest speakers such as Boersma or other local pastors or church leaders, to encourage and instruct in a more formal setting. In addition, a
Concerto/aria features student performers

Musical talents showcased in annual concert

Jared Gall

First visiting writer of term reads work Tuesday evening

Katie Taylor

Del Michel gives presentation

Professor explains language of artists in the abstract

Maureen Yonovitz

VWS continues

First visiting writer of term reads work Tuesday evening

Katie Taylor

STAFF REPORTER

Jared Gall

Jared Gall

Hannah Schroeder ('05) and Octavia Reese ('05) rehearse for Concerto/Aria, which takes place Friday at 8 p.m. in Dimnent Chapel.

In annual concert, the top thing one can do has nothing to do with arrows or shotguns, but a little to do with bows. As far as soloing is concerned, the top thing a music student can do is to be a part of the upcoming Concert/Aria concert.

"It is such an honor to be a part of this performance," said Octavia Reese ('05), a cellist performing Antonio Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Cellos along with Hannah Schroeder ('05). "We both have had sadly grins on our faces ever since we saw the list of winners." According to Hope Music Director Richard Piippo, soloists are picked earlier in the semester by a panel of four judges from the College music department, the top thing one can do has nothing to do with arrows or shotguns, but a little to do with bows. As far as soloing is concerned, the top thing a music student can do is to be a part of the upcoming Concert/Aria concert.

"It is such an honor to be a part of this performance," said Octavia Reese ('05), a cellist performing Antonio Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Cellos along with Hannah Schroeder ('05). "We both have had sadly grins on our faces ever since we saw the list of winners." According to Hope Music Director Richard Piippo, soloists are picked earlier in the semester by a panel of four judges from the College music department, the top thing one can do has nothing to do with arrows or shotguns, but a little to do with bows. As far as soloing is concerned, the top thing a music student can do is to be a part of the upcoming Concert/Aria concert.

"It is such an honor to be a part of this performance," said Octavia Reese ('05), a cellist performing Antonio Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Cellos along with Hannah Schroeder ('05). "We both have had sadly grins on our faces ever since we saw the list of winners." According to Hope Music Director Richard Piippo, soloists are picked earlier in the semester by a panel of four judges from the College music department, the top thing one can do has nothing to do with arrows or shotguns, but a little to do with bows. As far as soloing is concerned, the top thing a music student can do is to be a part of the upcoming Concert/Aria concert.

"It is such an honor to be a part of this performance," said Octavia Reese ('05), a cellist performing Antonio Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Cellos along with Hannah Schroeder ('05). "We both have had sadly grins on our faces ever since we saw the list of winners." According to Hope Music Director Richard Piippo, soloists are picked earlier in the semester by a panel of four judges from the College music department, the top thing one can do has nothing to do with arrows or shotguns, but a little to do with bows. As far as soloing is concerned, the top thing a music student can do is to be a part of the upcoming Concert/Aria concert.

"It is such an honor to be a part of this performance," said Octavia Reese ('05), a cellist performing Antonio Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Cellos along with Hannah Schroeder ('05). "We both have had sadly grins on our faces ever since we saw the list of winners." According to Hope Music Director Richard Piippo, soloists are picked earlier in the semester by a panel of four judges from the College music department, the top thing one can do has nothing to do with arrows or shotguns, but a little to do with bows. As far as soloing is concerned, the top thing a music student can do is to be a part of the upcoming Concert/Aria concert.

"It is such an honor to be a part of this performance," said Octavia Reese ('05), a cellist performing Antonio Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Cellos along with Hannah Schroeder ('05). "We both have had sadly grins on our faces ever since we saw the list of winners." According to Hope Music Director Richard Piippo, soloists are picked earlier in the semester by a panel of four judges from the College music department, the top thing one can do has nothing to do with arrows or shotguns, but a little to do with bows. As far as soloing is concerned, the top thing a music student can do is to be a part of the upcoming Concert/Aria concert.

"It is such an honor to be a part of this performance," said Octavia Reese ('05), a cellist performing Antonio Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Cellos along with Hannah Schroeder ('05). "We both have had sadly grins on our faces ever since we saw the list of winners." According to Hope Music Director Richard Piippo, soloists are picked earlier in the semester by a panel of four judges from the College music department, the top thing one can do has nothing to do with arrows or shotguns, but a little to do with bows. As far as soloing is concerned, the top thing a music student can do is to be a part of the upcoming Concert/Aria concert.

"It is such an honor to be a part of this performance," said Octavia Reese ('05), a cellist performing Antonio Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Cellos along with Hannah Schroeder ('05). "We both have had sadly grins on our faces ever since we saw the list of winners." According to Hope Music Director Richard Piippo, soloists are picked earlier in the semester by a panel of four judges from the College music department, the top thing one can do has nothing to do with arrows or shotguns, but a little to do with bows. As far as soloing is concerned, the top thing a music student can do is to be a part of the upcoming Concert/Aria concert.

"It is such an honor to be a part of this performance," said Octavia Reese ('05), a cellist performing Antonio Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Cellos along with Hannah Schroeder ('05). "We both have had sadly grins on our faces ever since we saw the list of winners." According to Hope Music Director Richard Piippo, soloists are picked earlier in the semester by a panel of four judges from the College music department, the top thing one can do has nothing to do with arrows or shotguns, but a little to do with bows. As far as soloing is concerned, the top thing a music student can do is to be a part of the upcoming Concert/Aria concert.

"It is such an honor to be a part of this performance," said Octavia Reese ('05), a cellist performing Antonio Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Cellos along with Hannah Schroeder ('05). "We both have had sadly grins on our faces ever since we saw the list of winners." According to Hope Music Director Richard Piippo, soloists are picked earlier in the semester by a panel of four judges from the College music department, the top thing one can do has nothing to do with arrows or shotguns, but a little to do with bows. As far as soloing is concerned, the top thing a music student can do is to be a part of the upcoming Concert/Aria concert.

"It is such an honor to be a part of this performance," said Octavia Reese ('05), a cellist performing Antonio Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Cellos along with Hannah Schroeder ('05). "We both have had sadly grins on our faces ever since we saw the list of winners." According to Hope Music Director Richard Piippo, soloists are picked earlier in the semester by a panel of four judges from the College music department, the top thing one can do has nothing to do with arrows or shotguns, but a little to do with bows. As far as soloing is concerned, the top thing a music student can do is to be a part of the upcoming Concert/Aria concert.

"It is such an honor to be a part of this performance," said Octavia Reese ('05), a cellist performing Antonio Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Cellos along with Hannah Schroeder ('05). "We both have had sadly grins on our faces ever since we saw the list of winners." According to Hope Music Director Richard Piippo, soloists are picked earlier in the semester by a panel of four judges from the College music department, the top thing one can do has nothing to do with arrows or shotguns, but a little to do with bows. As far as soloing is concerned, the top thing a music student can do is to be a part of the upcoming Concert/Aria concert.

"It is such an honor to be a part of this performance," said Octavia Reese ('05), a cellist performing Antonio Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Cellos along with Hannah Schroeder ('05). "We both have had sadly grins on our faces ever since we saw the list of winners." According to Hope Music Director Richard Piippo, soloists are picked earlier in the semester by a panel of four judges from the College music department, the top thing one can do has nothing to do with arrows or shotguns, but a little to do with bows. As far as soloing is concerned, the top thing a music student can do is to be a part of the upcoming Concert/Aria concert.

"It is such an honor to be a part of this performance," said Octavia Reese ('05), a cellist performing Antonio Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Cellos along with Hannah Schroeder ('05). "We both have had sadly grins on our faces ever since we saw the list of winners." According to Hope Music Director Richard Piippo, soloists are picked earlier in the semester by a panel of four judges from the College music department, the top thing one can do has nothing to do with arrows or shotguns, but a little to do with bows. As far as soloing is concerned, the top thing a music student can do is to be a part of the upcoming Concert/Aria concert.

"It is such an honor to be a part of this performance," said Octavia Reese ('05), a cellist performing Antonio Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Cellos along with Hannah Schroeder ('05). "We both have had sadly grins on our faces ever since we saw the list of winners." According to Hope Music Director Richard Piippo, soloists are picked earlier in the semester by a panel of four judges from the College music department, the top thing one can do has nothing to do with arrows or shotguns, but a little to do with bows. As far as soloing is concerned, the top thing a music student can do is to be a part of the upcoming Concert/Aria concert.

"It is such an honor to be a part of this performance," said Octavia Reese ('05), a cellist performing Antonio Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Cellos along with Hannah Schroeder ('05). "We both have had sadly grins on our faces ever since we saw the list of winners." According to Hope Music Director Richard Piippo, soloists are picked earlier in the semester by a panel of four judges from the College music department, the top thing one can do has nothing to do with arrows or shotguns, but a little to do with bows. As far as soloing is concerned, the top thing a music student can do is to be a part of the upcoming Concert/Aria concert.

"It is such an honor to be a part of this performance," said Octavia Reese ('05), a cellist performing Antonio Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Cellos along with Hannah Schroeder ('05). "We both have had sadly grins on our faces ever since we saw the list of winners." According to Hope Music Director Richard Piippo, soloists are picked earlier in the semester by a panel of four judges from the College music department, the top thing one can do has nothing to do with arrows or shotguns, but a little to do with bows. As far as soloing is concerned, the top thing a music student can do is to be a part of the upcoming Concert/Aria concert.
Martin Luther King Day could be just what Hope needs

Hope has missed a wonderful chance to further promote understanding and diversity. This isn’t the first time that the college has passed on this prospect. I am, of course, referring to Martin Luther King Day.

The observance of Martin Luther King Day could be a large step toward the diversity education and understanding that is so desperately needed. Instead of using this national holiday as a vehicle to better the college community, however, the powers that be decided to hold classes on Monday. If the college wanted to do anything that it could to contribute to Martin Luther King Day and make it mean something, it would not pass up such an educational opportunity. Instead of continuing with the normal day of classes, it would be more beneficial to our community to hold seminars and host speeches on diversity and understanding. The holiday was installed to remind us of the struggles that the African-American community has gone through to be recognized as equals and the peaceful advancements made by one of America’s great leaders.

Not all students let the college’s decision to skip the observance of Martin Luther King Day stop them from recognizing the great achievements made by a great man. In many classes on Monday, an email drafted by the Black Student Union was read aloud in classes to inform students about Martin Luther King Day and what it means to our community. Also, cards embossed with a cross and BSU meeting times were passed out in Phelps.

Maxine Gray (*04), president of the Black Student Union, said that this campaign was an attempt to remind the campus of the power that MLK Day has in a perfect opportunity to work toward diversity, but we need to be aware of this need year round. To Gray, Hope’s choice to skip the observance of this national holiday does not signify blatant disrespect, but she believes there is room for improvement. According to Gray, BSU is working toward some kind of observance for MLK Day.

Whatever the day is observed in the future, it would be in the community’s best interest to start a new tradition next year. It’s too late to do something this year, but with some planning, next MLK Day can help us become more understanding.

Diversity is still an issue at Hope, attend seminars

To the Editor:

Hope College...where you can have a student body of 3,000, and have less than 1 percent of them show up to a Dialogue on Race about the Civil Rights Movement. Where you have a community so bent up on “caring” and “Christianity,” yet few actually apply it. Where it is so important to “look Christian.” Where an adult authority figure on this campus tells a student that she was “not happy” about articles that were posted up detailing hate crimes and current issues of discrimination and bigotry. Why is it that in the year 2003, right after the holidays, and “peace and love to all,” I can still walk the sidewalks of Hope College and hear a white couple mocking a foreign accent? Why is it that some read my words are uncomfortable to the fact I used “white” as a qualifier, yet don’t think twice about saying “that black girl over there.” It disturbs me that there are people on this campus that don’t even know that February is Black History Month. It disturbs me that there are people on this campus that are bothered by the fact that there is a Black History Month, while completely failing to realize that every single month in America is Black History Month and that the contributions of non-white people to our world are glossed over or ignored. It angers me to hear people whining about affirmative action, while ignoring the fact that America has always operated on a system of affirmative action—but that it just favored white, protestant males. The civil rights movement is not over. There are still so many inequalities, so many injustices happening everyday, single day in America, single day on Hope College’s campus. There may not be the community-sponsored screenings on Saturday evenings anymore, but 80 percent of the people on death row now are non-White.

The mother of Emmett Till, a young black man whose face was cut off, his eyes gouged out, and shot in the head at the beginning of the civil rights movement is still alive. The families of other civil rights martyrs are still alive, and the grief is still very real and still very relevant. There are many events going on for Black History Month, and there are posters all over the campus detailing these events. I see the campus body to attend these events. They don’t take a lot of time. But they will affect you. They will go a long way towards opening hearts, educating minds, and changing this campus for the better.

Angela Matuznak (*04)

Student grateful for Tony Campolo’s message

To the Editor:

The Veritas Forum left me with a lasting impression of some of my favorite parts of Christian philosophy, such as really living out life to its fullest, a life of purpose and meaning, a life committed to serving Christ and helping people. I am thankful to the faculty, staff, students, and friends of this college who, through their prayers and actions, have made Hope into the welcoming, encouraging, supportive, Christian environment that I so often find myself in. With all the different Christian fellowship groups, bible studies, chapel services, retreats, missions trips, prayer meetings, etc., I have been able to take part in groups that I feel comfortable in. I know other Christians here who are not in the same groups as me, but who also are able to experience beautiful Christian fellowship. It is a beautiful thing when we find ourselves with friends who support us in whatever we are going through, who pray for us and with us, who accept us as the people we are, and who encourage us to continue seeking the Lord. The Veritas Forum was another example of this type of environment. I know things at Hope are certainly not perfect, and if you haven’t found yourself in this type of religious environment, I pray that you will. And for any of you who missed the Veritas Forum, just ask someone who went where she got out of it.

At the forum, Tony Campolo described a big problem that our society has. He described it as the truth that pressures us to work really hard in order to earn a bunch of money we don’t need, which keeps us away from our families, and makes us emotionally dead. He reminded us that in Christ we have something much better to live for, such greater purpose and meaning. I appreciated that he told us that we should sign up for a mission year, and that he encouraged us to spend time with the poor. He said that when we look at the poor, we see Christ in them, and that can release us from all that holds us back.

James 1:2-3 “Religion that God our Father accepts as pure and faultless is this: to look after orphans and widows in their distress and to keep oneself from being polluted by the world.”

Lynette Wehrman (*03)

Letters to the Editor Guidelines

Open to anyone within the college and related communities

The Anchor reserves the right to edit due to space constraints

No personal attacks, poor taste or anything potentially libelous

Letters chosen on a first come first serve basis, or a representative sample is taken

No anonymous letters, unless discussed with Editor-in-Chief

Editor-in-Chief may verify identity of writer

The Anchor reserves the right to refuse publication of any letter submitted

Letters over 500 words in length will not be considered for publication

Mail letters to the Anchor c/o Hope College, drop them off at the Anchor office (located in the center of Dewitt, behind WTHS), or e-mail Anchor@hope.edu

Letters to the Editor

OPINION

Your voice

“THE LARAMIE PROJECT” by Moses Kaufman and the members of Tectonic Theatre Project

Based on more than 210 interviews with the people of Laramie, Wyoming following the murder of Matthew Shepard in 1998.

Each performance to be followed by a roundtable discussion: $7 general admission

Feb. 14, 15: 19-22

DeWitt ticket office: 395-7800

$5 staff and faculty

$4 students

Student grateful for Tony Campolo's message

The Veritas Forum left me with a lasting impression of some of my favorite parts of Christian philosophy, such as really living out life to its fullest, a life of purpose and meaning, a life committed to serving Christ and helping people. I am thankful to the faculty, staff, students, and friends of this college who, through their prayers and actions, have made Hope into the welcoming, encouraging, supportive, Christian environment that I so often find myself in. With all the different Christian fellowship groups, bible studies, chapel services, retreats, missions trips, prayer meetings, etc., I have been able to take part in groups that I feel comfortable in. I know other Christians here who are not in the same groups as me, but who also are able to experience beautiful Christian fellowship. It is a beautiful thing when we find ourselves with friends who support us in whatever we are going through, who pray for us and with us, who accept us as the people we are, and who encourage us to continue seeking the Lord.

The Veritas Forum was another example of this type of environment. I know things at Hope are certainly not perfect, and if you haven’t found yourself in this type of religious environment, I pray that you will. And for any of you who missed the Veritas Forum, just ask someone who went where she got out of it.

At the forum, Tony Campolo described a big problem that our society has. He described it as the truth that pressures us to work really hard in order to earn a bunch of money we don’t need, which keeps us away from our families, and makes us emotionally dead. He reminded us that in Christ we have something much better to live for, such greater purpose and meaning. I appreciated that he told us that we should sign up for a mission year, and that he encouraged us to spend time with the poor. He said that when we look at the poor, we see Christ in them, and that can release us from all that holds us back.

James 1:2-3 “Religion that God our Father accepts as pure and faultless is this: to look after orphans and widows in their distress and to keep oneself from being polluted by the world.”

Lynette Wehrman (*03)

Student grateful for Tony Campolo's message

The Veritas Forum left me with a lasting impression of some of my favorite parts of Christian philosophy, such as really living out life to its fullest, a life of purpose and meaning, a life committed to serving Christ and helping people. I am thankful to the faculty, staff, students, and friends of this college who, through their prayers and actions, have made Hope into the welcoming, encouraging, supportive, Christian environment that I so often find myself in. With all the different Christian fellowship groups, bible studies, chapel services, retreats, missions trips, prayer meetings, etc., I have been able to take part in groups that I feel comfortable in. I know other Christians here who are not in the same groups as me, but who also are able to experience beautiful Christian fellowship. It is a beautiful thing when we find ourselves with friends who support us in whatever we are going through, who pray for us and with us, who accept us as the people we are, and who encourage us to continue seeking the Lord.

The Veritas Forum was another example of this type of environment. I know things at Hope are certainly not perfect, and if you haven’t found yourself in this type of religious environment, I pray that you will. And for any of you who missed the Veritas Forum, just ask someone who went where she got out of it.

At the forum, Tony Campolo described a big problem that our society has. He described it as the truth that pressures us to work really hard in order to earn a bunch of money we don’t need, which keeps us away from our families, and makes us emotionally dead. He reminded us that in Christ we have something much better to live for, such greater purpose and meaning. I appreciated that he told us that we should sign up for a mission year, and that he encouraged us to spend time with the poor. He said that when we look at the poor, we see Christ in them, and that can release us from all that holds us back.

James 1:2-3 “Religion that God our Father accepts as pure and faultless is this: to look after orphans and widows in their distress and to keep oneself from being polluted by the world.”

Lynette Wehrman (*03)
Hope police lose powers

HPD to take over many campus safety responsibilities.

Kurt Koehler
Grosse Point East

It is a little-known fact to Hope students and members of the Holland community that the college’s Department of Public Safety has full powers to enforce the law, as deputies appointed by the county sheriff, both on and off campus. For one motorist that fact came to light on July 15, 1997, when, according to press sources, Hope College Public Safety officers driving from one college-owned property to another stopped and arrested the motorist, David VanTubergen, citing him for drunken driving.

The traffic stop transpired off campus. The location of the arrest led VanTubergen to file a motion to suppress all evidence relating to the arrest, which also led to his conviction on two grounds.

VanTubergen claimed that Public Safety was not authorized to make traffic stops or arrest anyone outside of college property and that the employees of a religious school to enforce the law violated federal constitutions prohibiting the establishment of religion. The motion claimed that this constituted an advancement of religion, because “knowing their paycheck comes from a Christian college, they could greatly affect the (officers’) actions” and that “allowing a Christian college to become a public police force is an excessive entanglement.” These arguments were rejected by two appeals courts and the Michigan Supreme Court, which held that Public Safety could enforce the law off of Hope’s campus.

After the courts ruled in their favor, the college thought the issue was behind them. “It was upheld that the law enforcement authority granted to public safety was legal. At that point we thought that it would not be an issue, but it was after that case was resolved that MCOLES felt that it needed to clarify exactly who should have law enforcement authority,” said Greg Maybury, Hope College director of Operations and Technology. “The Michigan Commission on Law Enforcement Standards (MCOLES) issued an opinion that they felt any agency denying law enforcement powers as a secondary resource is not legal. That is not backed up with legislation yet, but there is legislation in process to say that sheriffs’ departments (in Michigan) cannot authorize non-direct lines of supervision.

There were a lot of groups that had deputy powers because a sheriff would authorize them or a chief would authorize them. MCOLES group said that is not what’s really in the intent of the legislation. They really don’t have a problem with Hope College having police powers, but they’re trying to tighten up some of the groups that have police powers that really shouldn’t.”

All of these issues centered around interpretation of Michigan Public Act 120, which allows public community and four-year colleges and universities to have their own law enforcement agencies. No mention was made of private colleges in the act. According to Maybury, MCOLES is concerned about private colleges with multiple statewide campuses like Baker College and Davenport University. “They would essentially have a statewide police force outside the jurisdiction of some local authorities,” Maybury said.

Currently, Hope College is one of only two private educational institutions in the state to have its own law enforcement agency. Ultimately, the decision whether or not to allow Public Safety to keep its police powers was up to Hope College. In order to maintain the powers, Hope would have had to seek legislation allowing the college to keep them.

Such legislation likely would have required Hope, as is required of public colleges maintaining law enforcement agencies, to establish a civilian oversight committee, composed of faculty, students and staff, empowered to hear grievances against police department members. Maybury recommends disciplinary actions to officers found guilty of misconduct.

“They were willing to work with us to have us keep our police power by legislative relief. The administration got together and said what do we want public safety to be about in the long-term. Is law enforcement one of the key components? They determined that really safety and security are the key components of Public Safety,” Maybury said. “Law enforcement was not as big an issue since we’re right in the middle of downtown. The Holland Police Department is on our doorstep. If we have a serious problem they can be here within two minutes. We don’t have the only private college in the state that would have it. Right now we’re assuming that, through the end of this academic year, we’ll continue to work with our police powers and then, instead of trying to renew it next year, we’ll just go to a safety and security environment (force).”

Both Maybury and Dean of Students Richard Frost agreed that the safety of students, faculty and staff would not be jeopardized by the change at Public Safety. “I think there will be minimal impact. I think our staff is extremely well trained in terms of making sure we continue to provide a safe and secure environment for our students. That is of utmost importance,” Frost said.

“We will still do patrols around campus, respond to emergencies; we will still be doing the shuttle vans, we will have a very strong presence to ensure the safety and security of our students. The side that will change slightly is that we will now work more closely with the Holland Police Department. You’ll see them being invited to things in different ways... Holland Police Department will be more visible engaging in some investigations and enforcement as the need be. I would never want them to feel that they couldn’t come and that is part of a community.”

Steve Scholl, public safety officer, unlocks doors for those who unwittingly lock themselves out.

Law enforcement is not as big an issue (as safety and security) since... the Holland Police Department is on our doorstep.

—Greg Maybury

January 22, 2003

Steve Scholl, public safety officer, unlocks doors for those who unwittingly lock themselves out.
This is the story behind where Hope’s symbolic monument came from.

Erin Riley
Staff Reporter

Where did the anchor in front of Graves Hall come from?

Lois Dykema, Gerald Auten, Bob Donia and Barb Alhart, 1967 Senior Class officers pose for their Milestone photo. Upper left, workers in 1964 install the legendary college landmark.

Anchor Facts
- Weighs 1,790 lbs.
- Is 6 feet long and nine 9 inches.
- Came from Baldt Anchor Chain and Forge Division of the Boston Metals Company, Chester, PA.
- Was placed on a stone base that weighed five tons.

Alpha Phi Omega
- The simple most represented national undergraduate intercollegiate organization in the United States.
- APO was started in 1925 at Lafayette College in Pennsylvania.
- APO was brought to Hope’s campus in 1959.
- Women were permitted into APO in 1976.
- It remains Hope’s only national service organization.

John Nodop

“Captain Hook forgot his anchor here and we stole it. We totally owe one to Captain Hook. That’s what I heard.”

—Kate Vanos 05

“I think it was probably donated by somebody to be in memory of someone.”

—Rebecca Mars 05

“It was dropped from the sky by God as a blessing It’s His favorite college.”

—Glenn Lester 05

“The story behind the anchor is a legend. John Painott brought it over on his boat.”

—Stiles Knecht 05

The Anchor of Hope

Erin Riley

This is the story behind where Hope’s symbolic monument came from.

STAFF REPORTER

as anyone ever really thought about the anchor that represents Hope College? The symbol is on almost every sweatshirt, Christmas ornament, pen, pencil, folder, planner, notebook and even shot glasses available in the bookstore. Most people probably walk past that 9 feet long, 1,790 pound anchor at least a couple times a day without ever giving it a second thought.

The credit is due to one idea conceived by an Alpha Phi Omega (APO) fraternity member in 1964. John Nodop, had been reading an APO newsletter about a chapter in Colorado who had obtained a live panther as a school mascot. His eyes wandered to the anchor-patterned curtains that draped the windows in Kollen Hall. According to Nodop, there was, the inspiration that became the symbolic representation of Hope College.

Though very late into the night, Nodop immediately ran over and hunged on the bedroom doors of a few of his fellow fraternity brothers, Wayne Groesbeck (’67), Albert McGrehan (’66), Richard Dickson (’66) and R. Douglas Dixon (’69).

“They thought I was crazy but agreed to the idea just to get me the hell out of their rooms,” Nodop said, chuckling.

Groesbeck recalls, “I pointed to a 16-inch wrought iron replica on the Kletz wall, and said, ‘see, an anchor’. John, never easily deterred, said, ‘that’s not an anchor; that’s a toy. I mean an anchor that can hold a ship’.”

Soon after, the APO brothers got approval from Dr. Calvin Vanderwerf, Hope’s president at the time, and the Nu Beta chapter of APO agreed to sponsor it.

“Nu Beta’s treasury was inadequate for a really good party, let alone an anchor,” said Groesbeck. According to Groesbeck, they were able to raise the funds necessary with support of administration and appropriate “schmoozing” of the alumni association.

They obtained a maritime mailing list from Dickson’s father who had a publishing business for specialized companies. The project was getting bigger and the members found it difficult to find time to hand address all of the letters. One fraternity brother had been a signalman in the Navy, responsible for typing up messages received over the radio.

“He said he could type as fast as we could talk,” said Nodop. “We all thought it was a joke.”

But it was no joke, he typed up all 300 address labels on a typewriter without one error in less than two days. After sending hundreds of flyers requesting an anchor an offer returned. A shipyard near Lake Superior directed them to a company named Baldt Anchor Chain and Forge Division of the Boston Metals Company, Chester, PA. After contact, the company offered to donate the discontinued Admiralty pattern anchor they had been searching for. They received two blueprints to choose from and Nodop, of course, chose the biggest one.

“I didn’t want a toy. I wanted one as big as a house,” he said.

Following a year of hard work and delays the project was completed. The anchor was shipped for free by the Holland Motor Express Company and placed on a stone base, weighing 5 tons, designed by a local artist and adorned with a plaque whose inscription came from a campus contest conducted by the Nu Beta chapter. The school agreed to offer a $50 savings bond to the winner.

“Nu Beta’s treasury was inadequate for a really good party, let alone an anchor,” said Groesbeck. According to Groesbeck, they were able to raise the funds necessary with support of administration and appropriate “schmoozing” of the alumni association.

They obtained a maritime mailing list from Dickson’s father who had a publishing business for specialized companies. The project was getting bigger and the members found it difficult to find time to hand address all of the letters. One fraternity brother had been a signalman in the Navy, responsible for typing up messages received over the radio.

“He said he could type as fast as we could talk,” said Nodop. “We all thought it was a joke.”

But it was no joke, he typed up all 300 address labels on a typewriter without one error in less than two days. After sending hundreds of flyers requesting an anchor an offer returned. A shipyard near Lake Superior directed them to a company named Baldt Anchor Chain and Forge Division of the Boston Metals Company, Chester, PA. After contact, the company offered to donate the discontinued Admiralty pattern anchor they had been searching for. They received two blueprints to choose from and Nodop, of course, chose the biggest one.

“I didn’t want a toy. I wanted one as big as a house,” he said.

Following a year of hard work and delays the project was completed. The anchor was shipped for free by the Holland Motor Express Company and placed on a stone base, weighing 5 tons, designed by a local artist and adorned with a plaque whose inscription came from a campus contest conducted by the Nu Beta chapter. The school agreed to offer a $50 savings bond to the winner.

“In those days, $50 was nothing to sneeze on,” Nodop said.

A sophomore girl at the time, Diane Hale Smith (’67), won the contest with a verse from Hebrews 6:19. Later, a professor noted that the verse chosen was actually the same verse VanRaalte used in his dedication address on the founding of Hope College. The plaque reads, “We desire that everyone of you lay hold on the hope set before us, which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast—Hebrews 6:11, 18, 19.”

“It fit in place like it was meant to be,” said Nodop.

The anchor continues to be the symbol of hope for Hope College and a reminder for many of the hope Hope College has inspired through it’s years. The anchor monument is part of that legacy. Nodop said, “A picture of the anchor sits on my desk and reminds me daily that Hope College was indeed, ‘my anchor of hope...’ for my future which is too quickly becoming my past.”

Seen & Heard

“IT is a real anchor that came from a shipyard in New England.”

—Kate Vanos 05

“CAPTAIN Hook forgot his anchor here and we stole it. We totally owe one to Captain Hook. That’s what I hear.”

—Stephen Gombis ’04

“I think it was probably donated by somebody to be in memory of someone.”

—Rebecca Mars ’05

“It was dropped from the sky by God as a blessing It’s His favorite college.”

—Glenn Lester ’05

“The story behind the anchor is a legend. John Painott brought it over on his boat.”

—Stiles Knecht ’05
Cosmos found in violation of policy

WTHS

The Philadelphia Center
Live, Work and Study in Philly!
Visit Linda Koetje in the Communication Department for more information!
www.philacotr.edu
experience life:
education at work

You are welcome to attend Mid-Winter Home Educators Conference sponsored by Reformed Bible College to be held January 31 and February 1 at Fair Haven Ministry Center in Hudsonville, Michigan. Tickets are available at the door - $35 adult and $55 teenagers. Doors open at 1:00 p.m. Friday for shopping in our vendor area with a special information session for beginning homeschoolers at 2:00. Seating for Friday evening sessions beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Sessions feature Sally Clarkson of Whole Heart Ministries and Dr. Joe Wheeler of Focus on the Family Publishing. Special bonus sessions and book signing with Monte Sпорт, author of Remarking Your Child’s Heart. Saturday morning begins at 8:00 a.m.

For additional information go to www.midwinterconference.org

Listen to 89.9 fm, WTHS, the voice of Hope College.

Engaged?
Planning your wedding?
Room set-up
Men Center pieces
Video Presentation
Table head table
Cake Cutting

There’s so much to remember, so much to do!
Let our staff assist you in creating the wedding reception of your dreams at the Haworth Inn.

Let us let you enjoy your day.
Join us for the
Haworth Inn
Wedding Reception Showcase
•See representatives from Bridal Boutiques, Tuxedo Shops, and Photographers
•Ask questions of our Catering Manager and Event Coordinator
•Pick up our free Wedding Reception Checklist
Monday, February 3, 2003, 6:00 - 10:00 p.m.
at the Haworth Inn Ballroom

Top 7:
Count: 70

Today's

Watch this space

Worth Inn

Anchor Lee: Haha! We have dragged you further down the spiral of wasting money on little army men! -Warboss Nick

No comment.

Nick Denis
Entrav e-Gear
A long-time campus fraternity this week finds itself faced with charges of violating several Risk Management policies, and a possible threat to the status of their charter.

A brief new release from the Greek Judicial Board received Tuesday states that the Cosmopolitan fraternity was found in violation of policies concerning the sale of alcohol at an off-campus Cosmopolitan house.

These violations have resulted in the Cosmopolitan fraternity being placed on a probationary status until the end of the 2002-2003 academic year. At the conclusion of this semester, the fraternity will be placed on a probationary status for one year.

According Billy Norden ('04), president of the Cosmopolitan fraternity, they “...are currently appealing the decision, (and) we are taking steps to eliminate any questions of our adherence to Risk Management policies at our social functions.”

Amber Garrison, Greek Coordinator had no comment. John Norden, the Cosmopolitan fraternity's faculty advisor, was not available for comment.

Anchor Emo joke of the week: Q: What do you call chauvinistic Emo? A: Machissimo

Free Mumia!!!

Lyle! tonight at Parrot's at 10:30.

www.lyterocks.net

Lyle! tonight at Parrot's at 10:30.

Free Mumia!!!

Anjey's advice of the week- Don't eat live goldfish...they squirm.

Anjey's advice of the week- Don't eat live goldfish...they squirm.

Money- It's a gas...

Girl in the fourth row- Dating me...a universal law? I hope so!

That is definitely the best of all possible worlds -Boy in the third row

Free Mumia!!!

Lyle! tonight at Parrot's at 10:30.

www.lyterocks.net

Lyle! tonight at Parrot's at 10:30.

Free Mumia!!!

Anjey's advice of the week- Don't eat live goldfish...they squirm.

Anjey's advice of the week- Don't eat live goldfish...they squirm.

Money- It's a gas...

Girl in the fourth row- Dating me...a universal law? I hope so!

That is definitely the best of all possible worlds -Boy in the third row

Free Mumia!!!

Lyle! tonight at Parrot's at 10:30.

www.lyterocks.net

Lyle! tonight at Parrot's at 10:30.

Free Mumia!!!

Anjey's advice of the week- Don't eat live goldfish...they squirm.

Anjey's advice of the week- Don't eat live goldfish...they squirm.

Money- It's a gas...

Girl in the fourth row- Dating me...a universal law? I hope so!

That is definitely the best of all possible worlds -Boy in the third row

Free Mumia!!!

Lyle! tonight at Parrot's at 10:30.

www.lyterocks.net

Lyle! tonight at Parrot's at 10:30.

Free Mumia!!!

Anjey's advice of the week- Don't eat live goldfish...they squirm.

Anjey's advice of the week- Don't eat live goldfish...they squirm.

Money- It's a gas...

Girl in the fourth row- Dating me...a universal law? I hope so!

That is definitely the best of all possible worlds -Boy in the third row

Free Mumia!!!

Lyle! tonight at Parrot's at 10:30.

www.lyterocks.net

Lyle! tonight at Parrot's at 10:30.

Free Mumia!!!

Anjey's advice of the week- Don't eat live goldfish...they squirm.

Anjey's advice of the week- Don't eat live goldfish...they squirm.

Money- It's a gas...

Girl in the fourth row- Dating me...a universal law? I hope so!

That is definitely the best of all possible worlds -Boy in the third row

Free Mumia!!!

Lyle! tonight at Parrot's at 10:30.

www.lyterocks.net

Lyle! tonight at Parrot's at 10:30.
Skating Dutchmen defeated by Calvin 3-1

Hockey team falls to Knights, defeats Muskegon on Sat.

David Yetter
Sports Editor

In front of a record crowd at the Jolly Roger Ice Arena in Grand Rapids, The Hope Ice Hockey Club fell to the Calvin Knights by a score of 3-1. An announced crowd of 2,159 saw a very aggressive, but scoreless first period.

Calvin scored the first goal of the game about six minutes into the second period. Hope battled back and answered a few minutes later with a goal by Steve Fugitt ('06).

The teams battled each other the rest of the second period and played pretty evenly. It looked like the period was just about winding down, but Calvin scored another goal with just over a minute left, making the score 2-1.

Both teams played very well to start the third period. There was a lot of checking, much to the delight of the crowd that was almost too rowdy. Fans from both schools were on their feet all night, but trouble arose when Calvin fans started to chant Calvin, Calvin, Calvin.

There was some commotion in the game and Hope players Will Farrar and another goal in the third period from Jon Sedon ('04). We played pretty well over the weekend but we didn't capitalize on our chances," says George Dickinson ('05).

"We need to step it up next weekend and convert some of our good shots into goals."

The Flying Dutchmen remain first in their division, but need to play better if they want to keep their spot. Calvin now has the same number of losses as Hope, but the Knights have only won nine games.

Hope plays at Saginaw on Friday and host Jackson on Saturday.