Dorian Sorority to face judicial hearing

STACY BOGARD
Campusbeat editor

Charges of new member education violations have been brought against the Kappa Beta Phi sorority, and a decision regarding the possible consequences will take place at a hearing this week.

A letter dated March 5 and signed by the women of Kappa Beta Phi was sent to all Greek organizations stating, "This afternoon our organization was made aware that several charges have been brought against us. Sometime next week we will be facing a Greek Judicial Board hearing."

Members of the sorority and Student Development would neither confirm nor deny the validity of these charges. "The possible infractions that result in charges are divided up into three levels, ranging from "requiring pledges to carry items with fear of penalty," "use of mindfolds that are not approved by the Director of Student Activities and Greek Coordinator," to "forced or coerced usage of alcohol, drugs, or food," according to the adopted recommendations from the ad hoc committee on pledging.

"All charges must be brought by Anne Bakker-Gras," said Derek Emerson, Director of Housing and Judicial Affairs. Bakker-Gras is Director of Student Activities and one of her duties is the Greek Life Coordinator. "She (Bakker-Gras), has the right to work out a sanction for level one or two infractions in conjunction with the group, but level three infractions go in front of the Board," Emerson said.

According to Emerson, if an agreement on sanctions cannot be reached, or either the group or Bakker-Gras chooses to ask, a Board hearing will take place.

The hearing will be held in front of a Board consisting of five students, four of which are members of Greek organizations, along with two faculty members chosen from a pool of eligible participants.

After the information is presented, the Board deliberates on whether or not more DORIAN on 7

Cultural Club

Images '98 reflects on the variety of cultures and countries represented by students at Hope.

ANDREW LOTZ
staff reporter

Hope and Holland were presented with the cultures of the world on Saturday, March 7, through the fifth annual production of Images.

The program was sponsored by Hope College International Education and the Office of Multicultural Life.

Images began earlier that day with an international buffet in the Phelps Dining Hall, which presented a variety of foods to students and visitors. The buffet contained chow mein and main dishes from Latin America, cannoli and sweet potato pie from Italy, and wontons and fortune cookies from the Orient.

A letter dated March 5 and signed by the women of Kappa Beta Phi was sent to all Greek organizations stating, "This afternoon our organization was made aware that several charges have been brought against us. Sometime next week we will be facing a Greek Judicial Board hearing."

According to Emerson, if an agreement on sanctions cannot be reached, or either the group or Bakker-Gras chooses to ask, a Board hearing will take place.

The hearing will be held in front of a Board consisting of five students, four of which are members of Greek organizations, along with two faculty members chosen from a pool of eligible participants.

After the information is presented, the Board deliberates on whether or not more DORIAN on 7

Diverse selection of acts to perform at 'Jam'

STACY BOGARD
Campusbeat editor

The third annual Talent Jam will fill the Knickerbocker Theatre with the student-induced productions of music, comedy and lip syncing on Saturday, March 14. Approximately seven acts, including two bands, a pair of duets, a stand-up comic and a lip syncing act will perform at the Social Activities Committee's (SAC) event beginning at 8 p.m. A band that has yet to decide on a name will open the show.

"It's going to be a good show this year," said Steve McBride, SAC Special Events Assistant Chair. "We have a little more variety, because last year was mostly bands and music, but this year we also have a comic."

Ventriloquist and comedian Lynn Trefzger will emcee the event. She has been nominated as Campus Comedy Ventriloquist of the Year from 1993-95. She has also been awarded numerous comedy awards and appeared on television shows including Star Search, A & P Comedy on the Road and Good Morning America.

Tickets are currently on sale at the Student Union Desk in the DeVries Center for $3 and will be $4 at the door. "We usually sell the most at the door because people decide to come at the last minute," said Erin Overmeyer (99), SAC Special Events Chair. Based on judging by music instructor Dave Pernell, International Education Special Programs Coordinator and Office Manager Amy Oly, and admissions counselor Lornia Medel, awards will be handed out for first, second and third place, as well as Best of Show. Trophies and cash will be awarded.

The event was known as Air Jam up until 1996, when the organization decided to make changes. Air Jam had been held annually for the past fifteen years.

According to the April 10, 1996 issue of the Anchor, "The acts tried out and then they simply did not show up to perform. To entice more acts, the event was opened to performers that do more lip sync."

Last year, the jazz band Qube, consisting of Matt Baumann ('99), Josh Wheeler ('00) and Pat Blake ('00), took first place honors. Rebecca DeVries ('97) won second place, and third place was awarded to the lip syncing septuplet The Awesomes.

Fire causes brief alarm

STACY BOGARD
Campusbeat editor

A small fire on the roof of Dimnent Memorial Chapel set off alarm bells last Thursday afternoon, March 5.

The fire began while a crew was repainting the interior of the building. The area was then blocked off between 10th and 12th Streets. The building was cleared and the attic was quickly put out with the extinguishing materials on fire. The small blaze was quickly put out with the extinguishing materials on fire.

Memorial Chapel set off alarm bells when a small fire on the roof of Dimnent Memorial Chapel set off alarm bells. The building was cleared and the attic was quickly put out with the extinguishing materials on fire. The small blaze was quickly put out with the extinguishing materials on fire.

EL NIÑO'S BACK: Laches of snow draped Holland in a winter wonderland beginning late Sunday afternoon. Monday evening classes were cancelled, but were resumed Tuesday morning.
AIM to promote annual ‘Safe Spring Break’

The annual “Safe Spring Break” nationwide program will be featured at Hope this week by the Alcohol Issues Matter (AIM) group. “May the Force Be With You” is the theme for March 11-18, when Spring Break. The reward for filling out the pledge cards on Tuesday, March 11, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. outside Phelps Dining Hall and on Monday, March 16, 5 p.m. to 7 p.m., will be a photo with Darth Vader.

We will be sending the cards and the photos back to the students.

Danforth lecture to feature noted professor

The annual Danforth Lecture will feature University of Arizona professor Dr. Heiko Oberman on Monday, March 16.

Oberman will present “The Quest for the Historical Calvinist: Redrawing the Map of Reformation Europe.”

Beginning at 3:30 p.m., in Winars Auditorium Admission is free.

Oberman is currently the Regents Professor of History and director of the Division for Late Medieval and Reformation Studies.

He is in the process of completing a book on the life of John Calvin, and is also the author of 30 books and more than 100 articles, some of which have received awards.

Oberman has also held positions at Harvard University and the University of Tübingen. He has also served as a guest professor at the University of Zürich, Hebrew University in Jerusalem, the University of Michigan, the University of Wisconsin-Madison and South Carolina at Oxford.

He has received the 1996 Dr. A.H. Heineken Prize for History, one of the highest awards in international academia.

The Danforth Lecture series was established to "deepen and enlarge the religious dimension of the academic's work," which can reflect on the world, interdenominational and yet positive sense of the Judeo-Christian perspective of life and existence.

Students bring home Model Arab League honors

Another member of the Hope community has garnered more honors than representing the College at the national level. Dr. Deborah Sturtevant, associate professor of sociology and social work, was honored by the National Committee for Educating Students to Influence State Policy and Education for her undergraduate teaching that aids students in earning a bachelor's degree in social work.

The prospective field of recipients was large with all faculty members, either full-time or adjunct, eligible with an in-candidacy social work program at their schools.

Sturtevant wins national award

Faculty members at the master's and doctorate levels, and a student at each level of education were also honored.

Sturtevant received her award this past Saturday, March 7, at the Council on Undergraduate Education Annual meeting in Orlando, Fla.

She was honored in particular for her Social Policy class project that serves to help students to send their ideas and positions on social policy issues to state lawmakers. The students are hoping of having an influence on the direction the policy is headed.

The junior-level course helps students to become familiar with the policy-making process, which will be beneficial to them down the road.

“I hope that this builds confidence and gives them a sense that they have a voice and that they will use it on behalf of the people they serve,” Sturtevant said.

Each student chooses an angle of a particular policy that Sturtevant selects, and writes an analytical paper from the social work perspective and a position statement that is submitted to state or agency officials.

“I am pleased that we have some sense of the issues they will be going on to resolve, either support or not support,” Dale said.

The event begins with a plenary session before breaking into committees. They then discuss resolutions and projects which will go before the fall League.

“If more time is needed to learn and experience what it’s like to be part of politics, particularly Arab politics,” Dale said.

Other participating colleges included Aquinas College, Calvin College, and Grand Valley State University.

Students walked away from the experience saying, “I gained a deeper appreciation for and understanding of the Arab world, which is a lot of people here in America to understand, for a misunderstood people,” Kuiper said.

Get happy at Happy Hour!

Parrot’s Lounge

234 S. River Ave.

We’re on the Web

www.parrotslounge.com

Monday

2oz Big Mango DRINKS $3.50 each

Tuesday

Last Night: $100 Specials 6pm-close

Thursday

DJs & Dancing

Beal the Club Specials

Super 1/2 OFF 8-10pm

Friday

LIVE entertainment

Saturday

LIVE Bands

Sunday

$25 in one-hour

Call 396-4577 for band listings

must be 21 or older to enter.
Thoughts on homophobia

March 11, 1998

The campus

Thoughts on homophobia is not a guy ever hit on me—Erich don’t think homosexual reasons. "

posed to it, for religious I’m really op—

exposed—Nicholas with any conservative about people with doesn’t mean I don’t do I agree with the lifestyle. But il

—Seth Gardner (’00)

"I don’t agree with the homosexual lifestyle. I think it’s wrong."—Erch Sheemaker (’00)

"I don’t consider myself homosexual. In no way, however, do I agree with the lifestyle. But it doesn’t mean I don’t love them."—Nicholas Krohli (’00)

I’m not homophobic. But as with any conservative sort of area you’re going to have a tendency to be more close-minded about people with other lifestyles.”—Paula Champion (’00)

"I’m not homophobic. But as with any conservative sort of area you’re going to have a tendency to be more close-minded about people with other lifestyles.”—Paula Champion (’00)

"I don’t consider myself homosexual. In no way, however, do I agree with the lifestyle. But it doesn’t mean I don’t love them."—Nicholas Krohli (’00)

The workshops were the culmination of an independent study Kasuba conducted with Psychology Professor Jane Dickie. In preparation Kasuba performed library research and had personal interactions with workshop facilitators. Approximately 30 people attended each workshop.

"I was impressed with the turnout," Kasuba said. "Students are usually pretty apathetic about attending workshops, but people came to these.”

In part, the second session became more heated due to the presence of a different class, Joel Patterson (’00). One member wishes that more people would just think about the issue of homosexuality for themselves, instead of simply looking into defined structures of morality they’ve either grown up with or been exposed to.

Some members with the endeavor to prove homosexuality a genetically determined condition would cease.

"I don’t want people to accept it because it’s scientifically based. I want people to accept it as love and human concerns,” one member said.

"Mmm..."—Seth Gardner (’00)

MIRIAM BEYER
spotlight editor

Jerry Kasuba (’98) presented two workshops, both entitled, "Confronting Homophobia," last Wednesday, March 4.

In the workshops Kasuba addressed questions such as, "What is homophobia?" and "What does it feel like to be in the closet?"

The workshops were the culmination of an independent study Kasuba conducted with Psychology Professor Jane Dickie. In preparation Kasuba performed library research and had personal interactions with workshop facilitators. Approximately 30 people attended each workshop.

"I was impressed with the turnout," Kasuba said. "Students are usually pretty apathetic about attending workshops, but people came to these.”

In part, the second session became more heated due to the presence of a different class, Joel Patterson (’00). One member wishes that more people would just think about the issue of homosexuality for themselves, instead of simply looking into defined structures of morality they’ve either grown up with or been exposed to.

Some members with the endeavor to prove homosexuality a genetically determined condition would cease.

"I don’t want people to accept it because it’s scientifically based. I want people to accept it as love and human concerns,” one member said.

"Mmm..."—Seth Gardner (’00)

I have never been homophobic, but once I was ever been condemning of the homosexual lifestyle. I am Caucasian, heterosexual, a Christian—and all this, but not homophobic or critical of homosexuality.

As I’ve researched and discussed homosexuality, feminism, and bisexuality with others at Hope, I’ve discovered many who can claim the same combination of self-describing adjectives as I can.

However, I have also encountered several who cannot.

The main conflict seems to be combining "Christiant and "accepting of homosexuality. Many Christians claim that their religious beliefs prevent them from condemning sexualit but that they nonetheless love and reach out to gays, lesbians, and bisexuals; other Christians do not condone homosexuality, nor do they consider homosexuals deserving of love and respect.

I had the privilege this past Sunday of attending a meeting of the G.L.O.B.E. (Gay, Lesbian, Or Bisexual Equality) peer group.

Members of the group allowed me to question them candidly about what it is like to be homosexual at Hope, what kinds of struggles they deal with on a daily basis, what they think regarding the future of society’s attitude to homosexuality, etc.

We chatted for almost two hours, half of the time discussing homosexuality and the other half dishing’ around and laughing. Super-cool people.

When we did discuss serious issues, several concerns were raised. One member wishes that more people would just think about the issue of homosexuality for themselves, instead of simply looking into defined structures of morality they’ve either grown up with or been exposed to.

Some members with the endeavor to prove homosexuality a genetically determined condition would cease.

"I don’t want people to accept it because it’s scientifically based. I want people to accept it as love and human concerns,” one member said.

"Mmm..."—Seth Gardner (’00)

I have never been homophobic, but once I was ever been condemning of the homosexual lifestyle. I am Caucasian, heterosexual, a Christian—and all this, but not homophobic or critical of homosexuality.

As I’ve researched and discussed homosexuality, feminism, and bisexuality with others at Hope, I’ve discovered many who can claim the same combination of self-describing adjectives as I can.

However, I have also encountered several who cannot.

The main conflict seems to be combining "Christiant and "accepting of homosexuality. Many Christians claim that their religious beliefs prevent them from condemning sexualit but that they nonetheless love and reach out to gays, lesbians, and bisexuals; other Christians do not condone homosexuality, nor do they consider homosexuals deserving of love and respect.

I had the privilege this past Sunday of attending a meeting of the G.L.O.B.E. (Gay, Lesbian, Or Bisexual Equality) peer group.

Members of the group allowed me to question them candidly about what it is like to be homosexual at Hope, what kinds of struggles they deal with on a daily basis, what they think regarding the future of society’s attitude to homosexuality, etc.

We chatted for almost two hours, half of the time discussing homosexuality and the other half dishing’ around and laughing. Super-cool people.

When we did discuss serious issues, several concerns were raised. One member wishes that more people would just think about the issue of homosexuality for themselves, instead of simply looking into defined structures of morality they’ve either grown up with or been exposed to.

Some members with the endeavor to prove homosexuality a genetically determined condition would cease.

"I don’t want people to accept it because it’s scientifically based. I want people to accept it as love and human concerns,” one member said.

"Mmm..."—Seth Gardner (’00)
Pluralism debate continues as students offer ‘proof’

Dear Editor,

I am wondering how Miss Schneider’s article about faith in Jesus is correct. After a careful deliberation and intellectual study of my religious beliefs, I’ve always thought that faith is a very important topic to choose to be a Christian of the Christian tradition. In this tradition, faith is not just an opinion about the existence of God, but an actual belief that God exists and is a part of our lives. In this faith, we put our trust in God and His promises, and we live our lives according to these promises.

Faith is a way of life, a way of thinking, and a way of acting. It is a way of understanding the world and our place in it. It is a way of relating to others, and of relating to ourselves. It is a way of relating to the past, and of relating to the future.

When we speak of faith, we are not speaking of a simple belief in something, but of a way of living, a way of being. It is not a matter of whether we believe in God, but of how we live our lives, according to our understanding of God. It is not a matter of whether we believe in the existence of God, but of how we act, according to our understanding of the world and God.

Therefore, faith is not just a matter of believing in something, but of living our lives according to what we believe. It is not just a matter of knowledge, but of action. It is not just a matter of understanding, but of doing.

Sincerely,

[Student’s Name]
All I ever needed to know I learned in my dorm

Simple pleasures are the sweetest:
- Calories don't count after midnight.
- Most of the world doesn't operate on a college schedule.
- Everyone has a different definition of good sleep.
- Friends are the people you can be stupid around and still love you.
- A good parking spot is a precious thing.
- Everyone has a bad day once in a while.
- Happiness is the best policy.

By the way:
- Don't leave dirty dishes in the bathroom, for the sake of the cleaning staff and the other people who use the bathroom.
- Don't buy the most expensive brands at the store. To save money, try the cheaper brands and you may find they taste nearly the same.
- Don't leave your hot pot plugged into the wall outlet when it is empty. It will burn out.
- Don't submerge hot pots, sandwich, or anything with a cord in water.

Ramen Noodles

If you can still stand the sight of Ramen, there might be flavors that you don't know about. Branch out, try a new flavor:

- shrimp
- crab
- beef
- pork
- chicken (baked, stir-fried, or regular)
- hard-boiled eggs
- whatever your roommate has.
- cream of mushroom soup
- Spaghettios.
- whatever your roommate has.

Cost estimation (per serving): $0.45
Preparation time: 45 seconds

3-Way Grilled Cheese

What you need: 1 sandwich maker, a toaster, and a microwave, or 3) an iron. Also butter, cheese, and bread.

What you do: Butter two slices of bread, put a slice of American in between the slices and "grill" it one of three ways: by using a sandwich maker, by toasting the bread first and melting the cheese in the microwave, or by assembling the sandwich and then "toasting" it in a low setting. (Be sure to take the butter off the iron after it has cooked.)

Cost estimation (per serving): $0.35
Preparation time: About 7 minutes

Campus chefs share secrets

It's 11:00 p.m., you've got at least three hours of studying yet, and your growing stomach is keeping everyone in the hallway alive. The list of food possibilities is weak: there's Ramen noodles, microwave popcorn, and canned vegetables. If you're feeling especially inspired you might even make a bagel to toast the in the kitchen (or use the one you have hidden in your room).

Although you might not be able to whip up some extravagant treat at every hunger pang, there are more options for dorm room cuisine than you might think.

Some students at Hope have learned to use their resources to the fullest and have cooked up some creative meals within the limited means of the residence hall.

"Our hot pot is convenient," said Paul Kermisch ('99). "You don't need to go to the Klenz for a grilled cheese. It only costs like $0.35 to make one. My roommate and I made hot peanut butter and jelly. We wound up with Arby's roast beef sandwich, and someone made us pizza pockets once.

Some Wyckoff Hall residents said they have tried some inventive cooking last year. "We cooked lobster here since it is a practical joke for some guys as a practical joke for some guys who lived here last year," said Ja- son Zantop ('01). "We made beef tacos in the kitchen, like spaghetti and spaghetti, and someone made us pizza pockets once.

Campus chefs share secrets

By the way:
- Don't leave dirty dishes in the bathroom, for the sake of the cleaning staff and the other people who use the bathroom.
- Don't leave your hot pot plugged into the wall outlet when it is empty. It will burn out.
- Don't submerge hot pots, sandwich, or anything with a cord in water.

Prepared with a smile by the Social Activities Committee.

March 11, 1998
the Anchor
Spotlight

Dorm Room Dishes

By Dana Lamers

Smothers o' Wave

What you need: A microwave, graham crackers, marshmallows, and Hershey's chocolate bar.

What you do: For a gooey chocolate treat, stack up a couple marshmallows and 1/3 of a Hershey's candy bar on a graham cracker (split in half) and stick it in the microwave for about 30 seconds (microwave cooking times will vary).

Cost estimation (per serving): $0.45
Preparation time: 45 seconds

Stir-Fry Express

What you need: hot pot, instant rice, can of pre-cooked Stir Fry Vegetables, (optional: soy sauce)

What you do: You can whip up a little Chinese dish of your own by just cooking about 1 cup of rice (be sure to keep the cover on the hot pot while the rice is simmering) and then heating up about 1/2 a can of ready-made stir-fry vegetables to pour over the top.

Cost estimate (per serving): $1.30
Preparation time: 1 minute

Koolers

What you need: Kool-Aid, ice, and popcicle sticks or toothpicks.

What you do: Make your desired flavor kool-aid following the package directions. For popsicles, fill the ice tray with kool-aid and put popcicle sticks (toothpicks) in each tray and chill in a freezer. For a slushie, freeze a cup of kool-aid or a juice box and crush the ice after chilling for a refreshing drink.

Cost estimation (per serving): about $0.65
Preparation time: 4 minutes to make, over 4 hours to chill

Other ideas:
- hard-boiled eggs
- cookies from premade dough
- cream of wheat or oatmeal
- flavored rice or noodles
- noodles chilled with Italian dressing
- Spaghetti-o's
- cream of mushroom soup with anything
- half a block of velveeta cheese with a jar of bean dip
- whatever you roommate has.

I learned in my dorm

Dr. Jim Shank said "and I cooked some in the kitchen of the residence hall. Some students at Hope have learned to use their resources to the fullest and have cooked up some creative meals within the limited means of the residence hall. Noah Dale ('99) treated his Duffee Hall friends to some salmon earlier this fall.

"I went salmon fishing a lot," he said and "I cooked some in the kitchen. Usually I just make easy stuff like Ramen and macaroni and cheese. But I've made full dinners in the kitchen, like spaghetti and meatballs, and I've even made full dinners in the kitchen. I made meat and vegetables in the microwave, for example."

"I'm learning my boyfriend's family culinary skills," said Rebecca Zupot ('01). "We made beef tacos one day, and I bought a can of meat and made sloppy joes. Before, we made the Dukstras kitchen and hot pots a lot."

Hot pots, electric sandwich makers, and utilizing the residence hall kitchens, provide students with the chance to cook a hot meal.

"Our pot is convenient," said Paul Kermisch ('99). "You don't need to go to the Klenz for a grilled cheese. It only costs like $0.35 to make one. My roommate and I made hot peanut butter and jelly. We wound up with Arby's roast beef sandwich, and someone made us pizza pockets once.

Some Wyckoff Hall residents said they have tried some inventive cooking last year. "We cooked lobster here since it is a practical joke for some guys who lived here last year," said Jason Zantop ('01). "We made beef tacos in the kitchen, like spaghetti and spaghetti, and someone made us pizza pockets once.

Campus chefs share secrets

By the way:
- Don't leave dirty dishes in the bathroom, for the sake of the cleaning staff and the other people who use the bathroom.
- Don't leave your hot pot plugged into the wall outlet when it is empty. It will burn out.
- Don't submerge hot pots, sandwich, or anything with a cord in water.

Prepared with a smile by the Social Activities Committee.

Talent Jam tickets $3 at the Student Union Desk
$4 at the Knickerbocker Doors
I KNOW WHAT YOU DID LAST SUMMER is playing at Graves Hall all weekend.

DANA LAMERS
infocus editor

It's 11:00 p.m., you've got at least three hours of studying yet, and your growing stomach is keeping everyone in the hallway alive. The list of food possibilities is weak: there's Ramen noodles, microwave popcorn, and canned vegetables. If you're feeling especially inspired you might even make a bagel to toast the in the kitchen (or use the one you have hidden in your room).

Although you might not be able to whip up some extravagant treat at every hunger pang, there are more options for dorm room cuisine than you might think.

Some students at Hope have learned to use their resources to the fullest and have cooked up some creative meals within the limited means of the residence hall. Noah Dale ('99) treated his Duffee Hall friends to some salmon earlier this fall.

"I went salmon fishing a lot," he said and "I cooked some in the kitchen. Usually I just make easy stuff like Ramen and macaroni and cheese. But I've made full dinners in the kitchen, like spaghetti and meatballs, and I've even made full dinners in the kitchen. I made meat and vegetables in the microwave, for example."

"I'm learning my boyfriend's family culinary skills," said Rebecca Zupot ('01). "We made beef tacos one day, and I bought a can of meat and made sloppy joes. Before, we made the Dukstras kitchen and hot pots a lot."

Hot pots, electric sandwich makers, and utilizing the residence hall kitchens, provide students with the chance to cook a hot meal.

"Our pot is convenient," said Paul Kermisch ('99). "You don't need to go to the Klenz for a grilled cheese. It only costs like $0.35 to make one. My roommate and I made hot peanut butter and jelly. We wound up with Arby's roast beef sandwich, and someone made us pizza pockets once.

Some Wyckoff Hall residents said they have tried some inventive cooking last year. "We cooked lobster here since it is a practical joke for some guys who lived here last year," said Jason Zantop ('01). "We cooked it in a big pot and then we put the lobster on the floor for 2 hours, we wanted to make sure the thing was dead."

"Then we hung it in the guys' room and we ate it. It was awesome!"
Jen and Lenzo highlight humor and survival

JILL PIERSON
Intermission
New York Times
beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Jen and Lisa Lenzo will focus on living as a "Minority Within the Minority" at the annual Meyer Lecture tonight, March 11.

This event is sponsored by the Visiting Writers Series in collaboration with Women's Week and will begin at 7:00 p.m. in the Knickerbocker Theater. Live music by Hope College Jazz Chamber Ensemble will precede the reading, beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Jen, best known for her fiction work, has published two novels, Typical American and Moms in the Promised Land. Both have been New York Times Notable Books of the Year.

Jen was chosen to read "because of her writing about the profound complexities of a woman from another culture dealing with issues of assimilation into American culture," said English professor Jack Rill.

Both Rill and colleague Pinckney Benedict say Jen is an element that sets her apart from other writers.

"We live in a humbling age, particularly in the areas of race and gender," Benedict said.

Jen deals with both of those issues using her unique sense of humor.

Jen began her writing career at the age of 30 after earning degrees from Harvard University and the Iowa Writers' Workshop.

After a year in China teaching English to coal miners, she received a surprise grant from a Harvard philanthropic program that spurred her to write.

With a masters degree from Western Michigan University, Lenzo has a class roster that includes Hope College Grand Valley State University and Grand Rapids Community College.

Lenzo recently published her first book, a collection of short stories entitled Within the Lighted City. The book has already received much praise, including a national award from the University of Iowa Press.

"Lenzo is a new discovery, just over the last month or so," Benedict said.

It is an idea for this one-of-a-kind, in-house event that Jen's humor as a "Minority Within the Minority" at the annual Meyer Lecture tonight, March 11.

The Showcase is a fast-paced, time-consuming, and it has been donehoo.

"There will be music of every genre, just over the last 10 years," said Robert Donehoo, the coordinator of the event.

"Dating Violence"
Campus Program
Monday, March 16
4:00 pm
Mass Conference
En Co-Sponsored by Health Services, Department of Psychology

"Out of Bounds"
Men's Program
Monday, March 16
6:00 pm
Mass Conference
En Co-Sponsored by Health Services, Department of Psychology

Stephen Thompson
From Central Michigan University

Sally Smits

In its tenth year, the Musical Showcase will travel to DeVos Hall in Grand Rapids on March 16 and begin at 8:00 p.m.

The Showcase is a fast-paced, energetic concert, collecting diverse style pieces and it requires some students to shift from one group to another.

The idea for this one-of-a-kind, in-house event that Jen's humor as a "Minority Within the Minority" at the annual Meyer Lecture tonight, March 11.

The nine pieces in the annual dance concert on March 12, 13, and 14 at 8:00 p.m. in the DeVitt Theater will be performed in various styles, from the Squirrel Nut Zipper to Elvis Presley to Pizzicato 5 to the Presley.

"There's not any kind of break and you can't afford to take the time to set up." Donehoo said.

Dance 24 offers grace and energy with a lot of audience interest," Donehoo said.

"I can't wear panty hose, so that eliminates a lot of professions," Jen said.

Lenzo recently published her first book, a collection of short stories entitled Within the Lighted City. The book has already received much praise, including a national award from the University of Iowa Press.

"Lenzo is a new discovery, just over the last month or so," Benedict said.

"There really is something for everyone and the concert is a way to expose the college and community to various forms of artistic expression," Kurtze said.

The Meyer Lecture is an endowed lectureship established in 1985 by Pamela White Hadis in honor of her grandmother, Eve Leenhouts Pelgrim Meyer, a Hope alum.

The recognition goes to women who have made exceptional contributions to the arts and humanities, and will serve this year as a prelude to Women's Week.

Ridl said these authors were chosen because they deal with "being a minority within a minority within the larger context of American life."

"Because the Visiting Writer Series has such a following, such a reputation, this serves as a great collaboration," said Fonda Green, director of Special Programs and Julia Rivera.

This event will bring to a close more than two weeks of celebrating women and their contributions through the Women's Week program.

HELP WANTED

Men/Women

Earn $375 weekly processing/assembling Medical I.D. Cards at a medical facility. Offered on a shift basis.

Requirements:

- Must have a high school diploma or equivalency
- Must be able to lift up to 25 pounds
- Must be able to work in a fast-paced environment

Benefits:

- Full-time position
- Health insurance
- 401k retirement plan

Contact:

Call MEDICARDI 541-386-5290 Ext. 118M.

---

FEATURES FROM I

MONTHLY BAZAAR

The bazaar was held in the Knickerbocker lobby. The bazaar featured displays from the Philippines, France, Peru, Mexico, Japan, Russia, and Germany. Many of the tables were manned by international students from the country, or by students who are studying the language.

Experiences:

- Cultural richness of life
- From the solemn patience of the Japanese fencing technique of Kendo, to the light and the cultural richness of life.

Benefits:

- Opportunities to talk about your culture
- The audience think about the cultural richness of life.

---

KLETZ BREAKFAST SPECIALS

Good through Wednesday March 18 at the Kletz

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Item</th>
<th>Price</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>#1</td>
<td>$2.15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>#2</td>
<td>$2.50</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>#3</td>
<td>$2.00</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

- 2 eggs (your choice)
- 2 Pop-tarts
- Nutra-Grain-bar
- 2 OJ
- 2 chocolate milk

---

DORIAN FROM I

The organization is guilty, and then sanctions are decided on.

The group is informed that night sanctions are decided on.

The appeals board will consist of different members chosen from a larger pool.

Sanctions can range from, “15 hours of community service for each member of the organization if the violation occurred as part of a planned pledging activity. Otherwise, 15 hours of community service for each person involved in the violation.”

The organization's due process was violated.

The appeals board will consist of different members chosen from a larger pool.

The appeals board will consist of different members chosen from a larger pool.
Hope ends year in NCAA's

GLYN WILLIAMS
editor-in-chief

The Hope College women's basketball team simply ran out of steam.

The Flying Dutch compiled an impressive 16-10 season record and upset Calvin College 53-49 to win the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association championships.

However, with their 75-71 loss to Baldwin-Wallace College on March 4, the Dutch came up just short of cracking the second round of the NCAA Division III tournament.

"A lot of people expected us to come in here and get whooped," said head coach Brian Morehouse. "Baldwin-Wallace has that advantage in every statistical measurement, but what you can't measure is heart and these girls have a lot of heart."

Against the Yellowjackets, the Flying Dutch jumped ahead to a 35-30 halftime lead but were denied in the paint through much of the second half. Then, costly missed shots stretch the down the stretch and big plays by Baldwin-Wallace lost the game for the Flying Dutch.

"I thought we were going to win until the last few seconds of the game," said a teary-eyed Tara Hosford ('98). "I had so much faith in my team that we would win that I couldn't believe it when we lost."

Lisa Hosford ('99) scored 23 points against Baldwin-Wallace and Kristin Koengsknecht ('01) scored 16 points with eight rebounds. Hosford scored 12 points in perhaps her last game in a Hope jersey.

After Hope's loss to Baldwin-Wallace, head coach Brian Morehouse spoke highly of Holstege and Hosford.

"These girls may not be the prettiest when it comes to scoring or graceful on the court," he said. "But nobody gets the job done better than Holstege and Hosford. Some do it with style but these two know how to get the job done and they've taken us on a long way."

Mike Zuidema
sports editor

In Hope College's second-round NCAA Tournament game with Allegheny, the four season stalwarts put to rest any doubts that might be lingering with the Hope College basketball team.

Led by the tandem of Joel Holstege ('98), Kris Merrit ('99), and Dan Van Heiken ('99), the Flying Dutchmen were able to advance to the "Sweet Sixteen" with a 80-66 win over Allegheny College.

"Our go-to-four had terrific, terrific games," said coach Glenn Van Wieren. "We knew Holstege was an outstanding team, but our guys played superb."

The four combined to score 68 of the team's points and lead a hard-charged defense that stifled the Gators.

Second-seeded Hope will also host the Great Lakes/Soth Region regional games in the Dow Center on Friday and Saturday, thanks to John Carroll's 79-59 defeat of Wooster, the number one seed.

The 23-4 Dutchmen will host 26-1 Christopher Newport, Friday at 8 p.m. in the Dow Center.

"We're going to play well," Van Wieren said. "Every game we play here on out, we're going to play well."

Tickets for Friday night's game will go on sale Thursday morning at the Dow Center ticket office.

If the Dutchmen win on Friday, they will play Saturday at 7:30 p.m. for the right to travel to Salem, Va., and the Final Four.

"We've been waiting for this the whole year," Holstege said. "I've been looking forward to the NCAA Tournament; we didn't look past the regular season, but the tournament is so much fun."

Hope jumped out to a 14-4 lead to begin the game and never relinquished the lead. The Dutchmen led 30-34 at halftime, and an 11-8 run early in the second half gave the team enough cushion for the win.

"When we play with emotion, we're a good basketball team and we played with our hearts," Van Wieren said. "There was 40 minutes of effort, of heart, and emotion from absolutely every player."

Van Wieren also had strong words for Chris Vander Slick ('99) and Brian Paul ('00), who played in the absence of Kevin Van Timmeren ('00), who was suspended for violating team rules.

"We've kind of put Vander Slick and Paul on the back burner all season, but this game had as much to do with them and we couldn't have asked for more," Van Wieren said. "They stepped it up with emotion and effort. They showed up big."

"They've been ready for this all year," Van Heiken said. "They have been working their tails off."

Vander Slick scored six points and grabbed nine rebounds, while Paul had four points and six boards.

Hope was led by Holstege's 19 points, five assists, and four steals. Stegeman scored 17 and Merrit and Van Heiken had 16 points each.

Holstege was also named MIAA Most Valuable Player for the second straight season. Merrit joined Holstege on the All-MIAA first team, while Van Heiken made second team, and Stegeman was an honorable mention selection.

Betsy Vandenberg ('01) scored three points in the 100-yard and 200-yard breaststroke.

Connie Van Auck ('00) scored three points in the 50-yard freestyle and 100-yard freestyle, and 200-yard medley relay.

 selections for the 200-yard medley, 200-yard medley relay, 200-yard breast- and 200-yard backstroke. Also qualified for the 200-yard freestyle relay. Dan Shelley ('98) will be seeded 34.

From one piece into the next — Dr. Floyd initiated that," Ritsema said. "Audiences in the past have appreciated the freshness of the concert, and the fine-tuning that goes into it. The Musical Showcase this year will show just as much effort, with new music, and sets.

"The attendance each year is steadily increasing," Floyd said. "It's becoming an event that people look forward to attending."

Swimmers head to Nationals

Several members of the women's swim team have earned first seeds at this weekends NCAA Division III Swimming and Diving Championships in St. Louis.

Lena Dunato ('00) and Laurel Horton ('01) have earned top seeds in addition to the 400-yard Medley Relay team.

Durante has a top spot in the 100-yard butterfly, and qualifying times in the 50-yard freestyle and 100-yard freestyle. Horton has a top seed in the 100-yard backstroke, and a number two seed in the 200-yard backstroke. She also qualified in the 200-yard individual medley.

Tiffeny Bevans ('01) earned four of the pool's 14 spots in the 200-yard medley relay, 400-yard medley relay, 200-yard breaststroke, and 200-yard backstroke.

Sarah Boren ('02) and Spenser Gurney ('02) are both expected to continue to swim through much of the season. Hoekstra scored 389 points, a record for a senior.

The program has moved forward in the last two years and a lot of that has to do with these seniors."

Jared Lippert ('00) 9th, and Chris Dattels ('01) 52nd.

Brandon Nyboer ('98) also qualified for the 200-yard medley and 400-yard medley relay.

The 200-yard freestyle relay, 400-yard medley relay, 200-yard medley relay, 400-yard freestyle relay team also qualified for the Championships.

Traveling with the team as part of relay teams will be Troy Aumaugher ('98), Dan Dalry ('99), and Joshua Ficke ('01)."