"Jesus and Guitars" sweeps campus

Joe Stalin
Guest Writer

This Friday there will be a Bible Study hosted by Hope College's newest Christian group, "Jesus and Guitars." The event will take place in the basement of DePree and will last from 8 p.m. to midnight. All are invited.

"Jesus and Guitars" is a group of Christian men and women dedicated to bringing the image of "Rockstar Jesus" to the world of conservative worship and orthodoxy.

"The most amazing thing about Jesus is just how amazing He is," said club president, Ron Omeerey. "We’re all about hand-banging to P.O.D, eating pizza like good disciples of Christ and using really really big adjectives to describe God, like ‘incredible,’ ‘amazing,’ ‘stupendous,’ ‘rock-tastic,’ and ‘amazing.’ It’s the only way to really give God the praise.

Past events hosted by "Jesus and Guitars" include "Tongues of Fire Hash Bash," a circle that involved chanting, drum beating, and more than a dozen misunderstandings, and "The Liturgical Mosh Pit," a mob of fists and elbows that were intended to “give the glory to the Lord for His Almighty Awe-someness.

“All are welcome, come as you are," Omeerey said as he tore pages out of Leviticus. "Don’t let the five dollar cover charge stop you from exercising your faith." Security will be provided by the members of the Redbull House who will all be wearing thick blindfolds and black-t-shirts inspired by Dance Marathon. There is a $5 cover charge that will help pay for music, lights, decorations and any fines incurred from noise violations.

LOCAL BAR’S LAWSUIT AND WTFS DORMANCY FINALLY TERMINATE

Saffron P. Mooney INVESTIGATIVE REPORTER

WTFS radio, the "Voice of Hope College" announced Tuesday that their "stuff has been shuffled to the new sound booth in The Mauch. The move has taken place over the past 21 years."

An unofficial official Frost Research Survey revealed that six out of 3,000 Hope students noticed WTFS’s two decade plus period of iteration. Two out of 400 students who walk past the radio station’s abandoned glass window, with lone computer paper and masking tape sign on a daily basis, "arranly cared" that the room was empty and the sign was designed by second graders.

Rancher reporter found one with select card access only to be known as the WTFS staff’s prime voyeuristic make-out chamber. We all deserve our own make-out stations on campus. Only so many people can reserve Dyke-sta Lounge, Blubbers Annex and the 7th floor of Eastern Theological Seminary. I want my empty office! I want it now! WTF, mate," JuanAngry Sexually-fustrated2Christian (’08) said.

DM DATE AUCTION KICKS OFF "LENT: GIVING IT UP FOR THE KIDS"

Kirk Cameron D.C. CHRONICLER

Dance Marathon kicked off its 2007 fundraising season Thursday with its 14:05th weekly date auction. The date auction, the traditional start of Dance Marathon’s 12-month fundraising period, occurred at the Mauch Center just minutes after cleanup of the 2006 event concluded.

The event auctioned off nearly three dozen newly available males and females in the hopes of spawning the next generation of Dance Marathon dancers, morales, committee members, security staff, event management crew, Dream Team leaders and experts in obscure, catchy dances.

"It's for the kids!" said Chelsea Goodheart (’09), her feet throbbing after nearly 147 hours of event setup, participation and teardown. "Anything I can do to help these kids is worth it, it's worth it!"

PITA FLAGS NOPE FOR ‘SQUIRREL FISHING’

DJ Vanilla Z of the Underground

Nope college has been officially declared ‘unsafe for animals’ by People against Inhumane Treatment of Animals (PITA). The organization laid siege to the Pine Grove this week on the 7th anniversary of the Squirrelsky massacre and refused to leave until “the animals get the treatment that they deserve.”

PITA cites Nope as one of top three “Christian” colleges in the nation that practices inhumane treatment towards black squirrels.

“T HE s t u d e n t s and staff of Nope do not understand the importance of proper caring for animals,” Mr. J.P. Squabbit, a local PITA representative, said. “In order to properly support the animals the campus should set up feeding stations to ensure a proper diet.”

PITA presented the concern of the growing popularity of squirrel fishing on Nope’s campus. The art of squirrel fishing has seen increased popularity, not only at Nope, but worldwide, and has even found its place on Wikipedia.org, which defines squirrel fishing as, “the sporting practice of catching squirrels and attempting to lift them into the air using a peanut tied to a string or fishing line, and optionally some kind of fishing pole.”

“Although Nope students may view this game as harmless, they can’t read animal’s minds like I can,” PITA’s animal psychologist said. “I was talking to a squirrel yesterday who explained to me that his self-esteem was crushed when he was made into a fool.”

The PITA members eventually left campus after a string of alleged acts of mistreatment of squirrels at Nope College live in constant fear of those ridiculous flying disk things that college students enjoy,” Squabbit said. Additionally, PITA reported that “squirrels at Nope College live in constant fear of those ridiculous flying disks.”

“Recent findings have informed us of a squirrel that was struck by a Frisbee with such force that it cut off its tail,” Squabbit related, a tear forming in his eye. “This brutal mistreatment of animals is despicable! It must be stopped immediately!”

“Squirrelsky is a message... Give grays rights!” the note reads.

A chalked message released late Monday evening claimed the attack was the work of newly immigrated gray squirrels.

“Squirrelsky is a message... Give grays rights!” the note reads. Nope administrators will meet Thursday to begin preliminary planning in the wake of Squirrelsky’s unfortunate maiming.

“It’s too early at this point to say what will be next for the little fella,” said D. Leder, head of mascot operations at Nope.

CLASSES CANCELED AFTER SQUIRREL TRAGEDY

Students urged to lend thoughts, prayers to small rodent

ON THIS DAY IN HISTORY: April 5, 1999

Kirk Cameron

D.C. Correspondent

Nope’s campus ground to a halt Monday after a horrific attack claimed the tail of Nope’s beloved land surfing mascot, Mr. Squirrelsky. The incident, widely believed to be the work of insurgent, extremist gray squirrels, paralyzed campus activities after the discovery of the maimed animal shortly after 2 p.m. local time.

Students in and around the attack site, preliminarily named Ground Hero, immediately intervened to stabilize the wounded animal and transport it to a local medical facility.

Squirrelsky, the star of numerous SAC events and the school’s unofficial mascot, has graced the campus’s lawns and trees since the early 1990s.

In an official statement Nope College President Him Tultman called Monday’s events a disaster of catastrophic proportions.

“In this time of urgent need, I call on all students to lend their thoughts and prayers to the smallest, and dearest, member of the Nope community,” Tultman said.

Grieving students flooded the accident area throughout the afternoon and early evening, leaving contraband candles and flowers around the cordon surrounding the site.

A ROOM DIVIDED:
The JULIANNA DISCREPANCY

Toe shoes combat killer script papercuts for the coveted Durfee basement marley

Jet To, Guest Writer

What used to be shared rehearsal space is now the scene of brutal guerilla attacks, offensive graffiti and the staging point of greater assaults on department headquarters. The little known Julianna Room, a large room in the basement of Durfee Hall used by dance and theater students to prepare various works, has become the new Jerusalem in a war of artistic religions.

"We were minding our own business, using the time slot we had set aside," said dance major Ivory Toze ('09). "It's perfectly acceptable to pencil in eight hours of time on a Saturday afternoon."

"I'm fed up with waiting," said the show's director, Dana Sparrows. "Every time the theatrical artists are prepared to work, we must wade through our opposables and let the dancers run their routine just one more time."

Apparantly, enough was enough. During last Saturday's rehearsal for Toze's student dance concert piece, 'Broken Pieces of my High School Experience,' six unidentified theater students stormed into Julianna and began reciting their soliloquies at one of the most obnoxious volumes.

"Our focus was completely ruined!" Toze said. "How can these dancers reenact my first sexual experience with that crap in the background?"

"Sparrows recounted the events.

"About twelve, no thirteen, of those skinny little Barbie dolls interrupted my rehearsal and started dancing and humming 'The Dance of the Hours.' Everyone knows that piece should be outlawed. It's a sin that they even thought of stopping that low."

Since this turn of events, there have been numerous strikes on the DeWitt Theater by individuals wearing ski masks, points and black dance belts. The words "Hope theater sucks it all the time." were reportedly sprayed across the stage. Administration closed the building to all visiting high school juniors for the remainder of the week so the mess could be cleaned up.

"There is no way to understand what is happening," said Nope Professor Guy Ellis of the political science department.

"There is no way to understand what is going on in the DREAMS Act because they're trying to hide funds and sneak contingents in," said Nope Professor Gay Ellis of the political science department.

Citing Damtrack's poor past performance, Bill Calaham, chief of staff to state Sen. William Van Nero, likened the passenger railway carrier to a college student who goes to class late, does minimal work and parties big time," were reportedly sprayed across the stage. Administration closed the building to all visiting high school juniors for the remainder of the week so the mess could be cleaned up.

Naturally, the Dow has been hit as well, as every piece of office furniture in the newly expanded Dance department office has disappeared. They are rumored to be scattered among the off-campus houses of theater students, stashed next to stolen signs, posters and small animals.

As there is no end to this continuing conflict in sight, we at the Ranchor will keep you informed. Until then, pick your horse and stay out of the Julianna Room, as it is probably being used by someone with a greater artistic vision than you.

Laillaha illallah

Soon after the cast of "Hate" had conquered Julianna's walls, the dancers struck back with a roaring vengeance.

Sparrows recounted the events.

Drive-thru communion now offered

HOLLAND, MI—A recent Trotter Poll revealed that the traditional way of taking communion has been received poorly by on-the-go Americans.

In Deyoung’s unassuming brick building on the corner of Piusaas Street and Twinkle Ave., anyone with $3.45 can purchase a super-sized Communion Cuisine, which includes a large loaf of prepackaged wheat-flavored “The Body” Wonder bread, a 16 oz. Glorious Grape Juice juice box, and a custard pie with Pipe organs and birds chirping near a burbling brook.

GRACE ON THE GO—Quickie Drive-Thru Communion Is a new Holland based service now offered to the community as a “faster way to purify their souls.” Quickie Drive-Thru is only open on select hours and remains closed on Sunday.

As the new Holland based Quickie Drive-Thru Communion makes clear, the public demands a faster way to purify their souls. The expedient appeal of drive-through fastfood restaurants has transcended into the spiritual realm for many Hollanders.

“Communion has been for too long been perceived as a hokey, dusty, slow ritual,” pastor David Deyoung, owner and manager of Quickie Communion, said. “It is what so many have been crying for and now it has arrived. Stop by for a blessing in a flash!”

Students were upbeat upon learning, or while driving away, the pastor will rapidly chant, speak in tongues and throw some gold and aqua glitter on the customer’s car.

“On Sundays our busy family always makes B.L.T.s or sloppy joes with cheesy rice and red salt on the side. It’s sort of our way of relaxing and taking it easy on the Sabbath. This is the day that our family makes a good warm meal and spends time together watching TV and sleeping. We go to church on Easter and Christmas, but they’re still doing those?” said Jaded Senior (’06). “I swear we’ve been doing these since the first month I came here.”

Student Congress to hold panels on racism panels

Kirk Cameron
D.C. Correspondent

Student Congress announced Tuesday its intent to hold a series of “officially unofficial” panels on recent campus racism incidents in order to judge their effectiveness.

The panels, to be held during finals week, would not be mandatory, except in cases where professors might choose to make attendance mandatory.

After a spate of racial incidents in the fall semester, Student Congress and other campus organizations held 37 public, informal panels on racism, seeking to increase campus awareness of the issue.

New panels will address their effectiveness with an aim towards coordinating 30 new panels in the 2006-07 academic year.

“The aim is to increase awareness,” said Tad Madvin (’07), Student Congress president. “I’m just so really excited about these optional, officially unofficial panels on racism panels.”

MARK IT UP—Student Congress used this large lodic foot imprint for their campus racism awareness advertisement blitz.

Students were upbeat upon hearing about the new panels.

“Oh really? That’s cool, I’ve been to every one this year,” said John Q. Tolerant (’08).

According to a recent Freeze Center study, approximately 150 students had been to every racism panel, although the accuracy of the figures is questionable, as the study was connected to a possible donation for Dance Marathon.

The same study stated that more than 2,000 students had gone to none of the panels. This same population seemed to show little interest in the issue.

“They’re still doing those?” said Jaded Senior (’06). “I swear we’ve been doing these since the first month I came here.”

“What panels?” said Tip I. Calstudent (’09). “Are those the panels that admissions does every Friday?”

The Student Congress sub-committee on racism defended the plans though.

These impromptu sessions are the best way to increase awareness,” said Adorn Rep (’08). “We’re going to keep having them until every minority student knows that Hope is tolerant and accepting of minorities.”

Minority students could not be found for comment.

Some campus groups, however, expressed dismay at the recent developments. "We can't raise a dime here," said Avata President Lider ('96). "It's always this for the kids and that for the kids... honestly, who cares about the freakin' kids, it's all about looking hot anyways."

SLOTH ON THE SLATE FOR NOPE PROFESSORSHIP

Three-toed sloth Surge Carpenter is among the list of potential professors under consideration for hire by the sociology department.

"I'd pick choose Surge (Carpenter)," said political science professor Zoel Poppen. "Unlike the other (potential) faculty members, he has suffered from species-ism and intolerance on countless occasions. His whole life has been an upward battle.

"For instance, countless colleges rejected Carpenter throughout the college application process, despite his having SAT scores significantly higher than the average American high school student," Poppen said.

Locusts swarmed the Pear Muppet train line late Monday night as the train pulled into Holland from Chicago. The locust swarm caused the train to derail. The accident was similar to incidents that occurred along both the Pear Muppet and the Grey Land lines this past week.

No one has been injured in any of the accidents.

The Michigan Legislature voted on a bill that suspended Damtrac's service until the cause of the locust swarms could be attained and damage from all accidents could be repaired.

This indefinite suspension of Damtrac services will most likely continue through the end of the current school year as nearly $1 million worth of damages has been assessed.

Nope College has no means of assisting students in their treks home this year.

"Ncope hopes and prays to God that the student body will be able to find their way home, so to speak, in the wake of this tragedy," Dean of students Mark VanderPique said.

Student complains Ranchor is disgrace to Nope’s name

To the Editor:

It has come to my attention that once again this week you and your paper have chosen to produce a satirical paper instead of the paper I expect each Wednesday evening. Without being too personally aggressive, I find this special edition to be puerile, juvenile, and a waste of my hard-earned activity fee. In this climate of spiraling tuition costs and an increasing number of campus groups, I feel that highlighting fictitious events is hardly a priority. The fate of a fake bussing service for males onto Nope’s campus is the least of my concerns. I’d much rather read hard-hitting reports on pirates, inner-tube water polo action shots and the location of cars with decapitated owls on their hoods. Additionally, the connection of our fine college to the international socialist movement is distressing. What next, al-Anchor? All true defenders of freedom see this paper for what it is— a mouthpiece for the radical, reactionary left. I’ll never spend another hard-earned dollar to buy an Anchor again.

I. Kaet Laugh (’07)

Sheesler confessed that WTFS and the Borraugh are currently “in a mess of legal issues” as real leprechauns that frequent Nope’s 15th Street parties confirmed that the Irish voice featured on Borraugh’s commercial is indeed fraudulent.

“People think that WTFS has undergone a brief period of transition because we’re waiting on underground cables with satellite reception and stuff, but we, your faithful retro-classic/neo-post punk emo/multicultural aware radio station, admit, it’s really because of a secret 21 year old underground law suit with the Borraugh,” WTFS’s official PR statement said.

“We went through a hard time, WTF leprechauns, but we’re back. ‘The Choice’ is back. Nope is ready to be heard; besides, now the Borraugh gives us free Guinness.”

The atmosphere that afternoon was jovial. It was proclaimed an impromptu early May Day.

In those pre-lockdown days, access in campus buildings for thousands of students was nonfunctional. The blue buttons that provide access to campus buildings are nonfunctional.

As the majority of students poured out for their 11 a.m. classes, they discovered to their pleasure that their access to academic buildings was blocked. “We thought it was surely a sign from God,” said Chapel Girl (‘02).

Students, accustomed to easy building access in those pre-lockdown days, proclaimed an impromptu early May Day. The atmosphere that afternoon was jovial, and bright until 6:30 p.m. when the World Trade Fermentation was unable to enter Rhaps after their then-legal full round of Frisbee golf. As darkness fell, terrified students, unable to enter the dorms or cafeterias, erected massive bonfires in the Pine Grove and roasted wild squires for food at the SAC-hosted “Roastin’ Squirrel!” event.

Only a day before Maudry Thursday, many students heralded the events as signs of the Lord’s second coming in 2000, in fact, in the Easter weekend to come. Throughout the evening, the chapel teemed with hoards of anxious, prayerful students, atomizing and preparing for the imminent second coming.

Outside, healthier students responded to the auspicious events in a different manner. A large campus sect constructed pagan altars to the squirrel god. Mr. Squirrelsly, while a minority sect burned sacrifices to their own squirrel god, Squabbi. The night grew moonless and cold. With temperatures falling into the low 40s, packs of frigid, despondent students nayed groups surrounding the existing bonfires. Terror spread quickly. Frightened Douthmest and women pulled down trees in the then-densely forested Pine Grove to erect barricades around their respective bonfires.

As the sun rose on the second day of the door crisis, the campus had descended into tribal warfare. Campus Safety not only police were deployed on the south front of the disorder; on a line extending roughly parallel to Eastern Theological Seminary.

For years, it has been known that there is a ghost living on the fourth floor of Blubber. This poor girl regrettably perished in a chemistry accident involving the lab’s poorly mixed chemicals and an escaped biology frog. The details are sketchy at best.

Though for years, the popular story has denied interviews, she granted one highly coveted statement regarding the renovations planned for Blubber.

Shandi Vanderwilson (‘62) has been spending most of her recent after-days staring out the window at the 200-foot-tall building. In a rage, she has stolen many a cup of warm beverage without donating the suggested $25.

“I just don’t see why this is all necessary,” said Ms. Vanderwilson. “The expansion will be nice, but that would just draw more students into the building. As if I’m not busy enough already,” Vanderwilson said.

The demand of students and staff to move the ghost that haunts Moehreze could not be reached by the Flying Spaghetti Monster. Authorities report that the Flying Spaghetti Monster abducted all trains in Michigan and offered a huge ransom.

Some students have expressed dissatisfaction at the idea of the renovation of Blubber Hall, as it is one of the older buildings on campus that is full of history. Also, there is fear that the beauty of the exterior will be lost by the modernization of the interior.

As darkness fell, terrified students, unable to enter the dorms or cafeterias, erected massive bonfires in the Pine Grove and roasted wild squires for food at the SAC-hosted “Roastin’ Squirrel!” event.

The interior of Tombs Hall is also set to be renovated in the fall. I could have moved over to the Math. or 1 could have moved over to the Scheneccle Science Center, but I think the main issue is that prospective students look at The Math and don’t think ‘that’s haunted.’ But, they see ‘yes, there’s a ghost there! I mean, what’s the next step? Getting rid of all the ghosts? Ain’t gonna happen,” Vanderwilson said.

“My girlfriend called me and she could get out was ‘I was touched by your noodly appendage.’” Al Owen (‘09) said.

Dumtrack officials opened the search for the abducted and the anomalous pasta glob to the public.

For years, it has been known that there is a ghost living on the fourth floor of Blubber. This poor girl regrettably perished in a chemistry accident involving the lab’s poorly mixed chemicals and an escaped biology frog. The details are sketchy at best.
