Sculpture stolen from Nykerk Hall

Chris Russ
Staff Writer

On April 9, Hope College campus safety sent out an e-mail alerting the campus to a theft that had taken place on Hope’s campus. According to Chad Wolters, Hope’s director of campus safety, late on Wednesday night, April 7, a piece of artwork was stolen from the lobby of the Nykerk Hall, the college’s music building.

“It was discovered missing early Wednesday morning,” Wolters said. “The custodian reported it.”

Wolters suspects the thief entered the building through a bathroom window. Two windows were found damaged when the building was inspected as part of an investigation. It appeared that one of the windows was not sufficiently damaged to yield entry, while the other window was.

While there is not a positive link between the broken windows incident and the missing artwork, Wolters said that he is fairly sure that the thief broke in through a window to avoid having to scan a student ID card, which would have placed them on record as being there.

The missing piece, titled “Donut,” was completed by the sculptor Fritz Olsen, a Swedish artist, sometime in the “latter 20th century” according to an information plaque where the piece of art was previously displayed. The sculpture is white mottled marble and is about 23 inches high and 14 inches wide. As the name suggests, it is roughly donut-shaped. The appraised value of the piece was withheld by the Hope department of art and art history.

The sculpture was donated in 2007 by Vernon G. Poest (’39) and Roberto Poest. According to the information displayed with the art, the Poests were “avid fine and native art collectors.” Moreover, according to the plaque, “Many of their pieces were acquired by them through international travel on behalf of Herman Miller, Inc.”

The Nykerk lobby houses another work of art donated in 2007 by the Poests that was sculpted by Fritz Olsen. “Ribbons,” an alabaster marble sculpture crafted in 1993, sits at the other end of the lobby.

As a result of the incident, Wolters said, “We contacted the students that were in Nykerk late that night to ask if they had seen anything.”

He mentioned that the college knew which students to contact based on their records of access card use. At the time of publication, the college had no other leads or information related to the case. Campus safety is working with the Holland Police Department which has been helping with the investigation.

“Campus safety reacted to the crime, Wolters said, “We contacted the students that were in Nykerk late that night to ask if they had seen anything.”

According to the information plaque, the art was previously displayed with the art, the Poests houses another work of art donated in 2007 by the Poests that was sculpted by Fritz Olsen. “Ribbons,” an alabaster marble sculpture crafted in 1993, sits at the other end of the lobby.

As a result of the incident, Wolters said, “We contacted the students that were in Nykerk late that night to ask if they had seen anything.”

He mentioned that the college knew which students to contact based on their records of access card use. At the time of publication, the college had no other leads or information related to the case. Campus safety is working with the Holland Police Department which has been helping with the investigation.

“Campus safety reacted to the crime, Wolters said, “We contacted the students that were in Nykerk late that night to ask if they had seen anything.”

He mentioned that the college knew which students to contact based on their records of access card use. At the time of publication, the college had no other leads or information related to the case. Campus safety is working with the Holland Police Department which has been helping with the investigation.

Interviews with Scott DeClaire (’12) supported the idea that someone would want to steal art and that the only way to avoid this is to scan IDs. Wolters wondered why someone would want to steal art. “I just wondered why someone would want to steal it,” DeClaire said.

DeClaire (’12) said, “I just wondered why someone would want to steal it,” DeClaire said.

DeClaire wondered why someone would want to steal art. “I just wondered why someone would want to steal it,” DeClaire said.
Wednesday
April 21
‘Who Does She Think She Is?’
Screening with producer/director Pamela Tanner Boll, Knickerbocker Theatre 7 p.m.

Thursday
April 22
Habitat Student Ceramics Cullage Sale
9 a.m. - 6 p.m. DeWitt Lounge
Math Colloquium - ‘Do Dogs Know Calculus? Bifurcations at the Beach’
Dr. Tim Permans and Ehsa, Math Dept., VOW 104 11 a.m. - 12 p.m.

Friday
April 23
Earth Jam
Pine Grove

IN BRIEF

CASA OPEN HOUSE SET FOR THURSDAY

The Children’s After School Achievement program at Hope College is holding an open house on Thursday, April 22, to celebrate both the recent restoration of Graves Hall and the children and tutors who are part of CASA. The event will be held from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. throughout Graves Hall. The elementary school children who participate in CASA and their Hope student tutors will be on-site from 4 p.m. to 5 p.m. to help guide visitors through the building and answer questions about CASA. Brief overview of the building’s history and restoration will be presented by Dr. Elton Bruins at 4:30 p.m. and 5:15 p.m.

HABITAT FOR HUMANITY HOLDS SLEEPOUT

Hope College Habitat for Humanity will hold its annual sleepout in the Pine Grove on Thursday, April 22, to raise awareness for homelessness and money for Habitat. The sleepout will begin 10 p.m. and finish at 7 a.m. on Friday. Habitat for Humanity will provide cardboard boxes for all participants to sleep in, but participants may also use tents. Over the past two years, over $3,000 has been donated to Lakeshore Habitat for Humanity through this event.

STUDENT DOCUMENTARY THURSDAY

The Hope College Department of Communication will feature a student documentary short film, ‘Treading Softly,’ by communication student David Clark Moore on Thursday, April 22, at 8:30 p.m. in the Fried-Hemenway Auditorium at the Martha Miller Center. Moore’s film details the effect of the Trans-African highway on Busia, a border town on the Ugandan and Kenyan border. Also, the film honors the memory of David Otai, who spent many hours assisting the editing of the film. The public is invited. Admission is free.

CAMPUS

Wonderful Woman’ recognized

Chantal Pope
Guest Writer

College is said to be the time in our lives to “find ourselves.” We are on our own, usually for the first time, with the world at our fingertips. We have the opportunity to explore our interests and passions; to create a life we’ve always dreamed of.

Some students find their calling in the classroom and some on the field. Others may find their strengths lie in the realm of performance or creative arts.

Then there are a few that dedicate their time and energy to help others, to speak and act in support of those who are marginalized or silenced.

They use their talents to bring about change and encouragement to those fighting for their rights. One of these students was nominated by her peers and Hope faculty as a Wonderful Woman of Hope, a recognition conferred by the women’s studies department.

That scholar is Emily West.

West came to Hope to find what many of us hope for — a calling. A native of Wyoming, Mich., West debated between attending the University of Michigan or Hope College. She eventually decided to give Hope a try.

Now a graduating senior, West looks back on her four years and various roles and involvements and is still somewhat surprised by her nomination as a Wonderful Woman of Hope.

“It’s weird,” West said, but went on to explain that she understands why she might be considered a stand-out woman on our campus for two reasons.

The first reason being that she is a woman and self-described herself as “loud.” Secondly, she is open about her homosexuality in a conservative community.

“I stand out because of the areas in which people know of me. I’m a minority of sorts, and the realm is controversial.”

An active member of various organizations on and off campus, West devotes most of her time to three basic areas of life — schoolwork, The Anchor and the student-led organization Hope is Ready, an activist group that works to educate and encourage meaningful conversation on the topic of homosexuality, particularly on Hope’s campus.

Although much of her time and efforts are devoted to the group, West admits that it doesn’t seem like work to her. She claims that those efforts are the most emotional and probably the most rewarding.

“It’s tough sometimes, but I stay encouraged when we begin to sway new people to see and understand our efforts.”

Though controversial in nature, West’s efforts have proven to be appreciated by many students and faculty here at Hope.

One of West’s peers stated: “Emily is a voice to be reckoned with.”

Another noted, “I’m really inspired by her passion and dedication for change.”

Not only does West use her many gifts and talents on campus, but in community efforts as well. West is involved in the Sanctuary Collective, a GLBT effort in Christian communities, as well as Upward Bound, a summer program for youth in the Holland area.

With graduation coming up, West also has her future plans fresh on her mind. An English and women’s studies double major, West is looking forward to three basic areas of life — schoolwork, The Anchor and her student-led organization Hope is Ready, an activist group that works to educate and encourage meaningful conversation on the topic of homosexuality, particularly on Hope’s campus.

Although much of her time and efforts are devoted to the group, West admits that it doesn’t seem like work to her. She claims that those efforts are the most emotional and probably the most rewarding.

It’s tough sometimes, but I stay encouraged when we begin to sway new people to see and understand our efforts.”

Though controversial in nature, West’s efforts have proven to be appreciated by many students and faculty here at Hope.

One of West’s peers stated: “Emily is a voice to be reckoned with.”

Another noted, “I’m really inspired by her passion and dedication for change.”

Not only does West use her many gifts and talents on campus, but in community efforts as well. West is involved in the Sanctuary Collective, a GLBT effort in Christian communities, as well as Upward Bound, a summer program for youth in the Holland area.

With graduation coming up, West also has her future plans fresh on her mind. An English and women’s studies double major, West is looking forward to three basic areas of life — schoolwork, The Anchor and her student-led organization Hope is Ready, an activist group that works to educate and encourage meaningful conversation on the topic of homosexuality, particularly on Hope’s campus.

Although much of her time and efforts are devoted to the group, West admits that it doesn’t seem like work to her. She claims that those efforts are the most emotional and probably the most rewarding.

“I’ve had so many people surprised, encouraged me, too many to name!” She noted that most of her mentors are women from various areas of her life, particularly from the women’s studies department, as well as supporters from Grace Episcopal Church and even some spouses of Hope faculty.

As she looked back at her years at Hope looking to get involved and find their voice, they chuckled and replied, “Hope is already growing and gaining recognition, and everything has happened from the power and efforts of women.”

“There have been some male supporters, absolutely, but the majority of the work is done by women, on their own time, using their talents, their resources,” West said.

“Many people have their stereotypes of women at Hope College and not all of them are good. I think that the women here deserve more credit than what they are given. They are encouraging and supportive. It’s really awesome.”

West’s efforts and contributions to so many organizations and efforts in the Holland community left her deserving the title of a Wonderful Woman of Hope.

Student writing targeted

Writing, from page 1

English 113 unless they have demonstrated proficiency through the appropriate AP exam. In addition, the required cultural heritage classes aim to foster student writing. However, with the difference in class size between cultural heritage classes, which enroll more than 25 students, and writing classes, which enroll fewer than 20, it may be more difficult to improve student writing in cultural heritage.

The size of these classes may be reduced in the future, and plans are underway to put more emphasis on faculty. Seminars will be conducted this summer to train professors on how to respond to student writing, as well as how to encourage student writing in cultural heritage.

With these plans in place, Hope College is moving to improve student writing and scoring higher on the surveys.
Leaders convene to discuss limiting nuclear stocks

Meghan McNamara

President Barack Obama led the 2010 nuclear summit that ended April 13. Leaders from 47 nations attended to raise global awareness of nuclear terrorism, to better secure nuclear arsenals and materials, and to discuss Iran’s stated ambitions to manufacture centrifuges to speed up uranium processing.

The summit concluded a week after Secretary of State Hillary Clinton and her Russian counterpart agreed to dispose of 34 metric tons of weapons-grade plutonium, enough to make 17,000 weapons, according to CNN.com.

Russian President Dmitry Medvedev confirmed the news and also stated that he was closing a reactor in Russia.

The two countries also signed an update to the 2000 agreement to end weapons grade plutonium in military programs.

According to CNN, Obama said in one of his remarks at the summit, “We’ve made real progress in building a safer world.”

Canada announced that it will help Mexico convert its nuclear research reactor to produce lower grade uranium.

Canada will also send its own uranium to the U.S. for safekeeping. Ukraine also adds itself to the list by declaring it will dispose of its uranium within two years.

The summit was not without its difficulties. North Korea announced that it was backing away from agreements made with former President George W. Bush in relation to the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

Iran also took the stage before the opening of the summit by announcing it was in the process of producing uranium quicker.

The U.S. has asked the United Nations Security Council to issue sanctions against Iran. However, it has been hard to convince China, who has veto power, to condone sanctions against a nation that provides much of the world’s oil.

The Washington Post reported that the Russian UN Ambas- sador Vitaly Churkin said, “I don’t think any of us wants to impose sanctions; what we want is to have a diplomatic solution. If Iran wants to negotiate, it should start negoti- ating.”

Lt. General Ronald L. Burgess Jr., director of Defense In- telligence Agency, told report- ers including The New York Times, “The general consensus — not knowing again the exact number of centrifuges that we actually have visibility into — is we’re talking one year” before Iran has nuclear capabilities and two to five years to manufacture a workable atomic bomb.

“The summit seemed to promise success, especially if countries lock down all nuclear weapons and bomb-usable ma- terial as securely as gold in Fort Knox,” Graham Allison, a Har- vard expert on nuclear terror- ror in the New York Times.

There’s still much to work on in light of Iran’s announce- ment.

Sen. Jon Kyle, R-Ariz., seems to agree, according to CNN.com. “The summit’s purported accomplishment is a non-bind- ing communiqué that largely restates current policy and makes no meaningful progress in dealing with nuclear terror- orism threats or the coercing clock represented by Iran’s nuclear weapons program.”

It’s two steps forward and three steps back when it comes to Iran. Obama urged Paki- stan and Israel to sign the Nu- clear Nonproliferation Treaty, though they refused to sign it, along with India.

Next month will bring the review of the Nuclear Nonpro- liferation Treaty in New York and Iran will participate.

Russia, as cooperative as it has been, makes it clear that although it supported the Unit- ed States and its goals, it can drop out of the new arms reduction accord if the United States missile defense tech- nology improved. They claim that cut- ting programs will still leave Moscow vul- nerable to U.S. nu- clear weapons.

Obama is not deterred. In his opening remarks, he told ABC-News.com, “We have the op- portunity as part- ners to work. I hope our progress is not a fleeting moment but part of a serious and sustained effort. I believe strongly that the problems of the 21st century cannot be solved by any one nation acting in iso- lation. They must be solved as coming together”.

Government files fraud charges against Goldman Sachs

NEW YORK (AP) — Goldman Sachs & Co. reminded investors that the stock market can still go down.

The government charged the bank with civil fraud Friday and the Dow Jones industrial aver- age fell 126 points, its biggest slide in more than two and a half months. The Goldman Sachs news gave a dose of reality to in- vestors who were used to seeing the market climb almost relent- lessly on signs of a recovering economy.

But there are signs inves- tors are already shaking off the Securities and Exchange Com- mission’s charges that Goldman Sachs knew of deals about conflicts of interest in mortgage investments it sold. Stocks ended ed off their lows Friday. That’s a sign that investors are still mak- ing predictions that stocks will bounce higher.

“Some people conditioned to buy the dips and they’ve been rewarded. It’s like a Pavlovian thing,” said Alec Young, equity strategist at Standard & Poor’s.

“The road is littered with the bodies of people that have pre- dicted a pullback in the last cou- ple of months.”

It’s easy to see from recent news why stocks are trekking steadily higher. Big companies like chipmaker Intel Corp. and financial firm JPMorgan Chase & Co. last week posted huge profit gains for the first three months of the year. The govern- ment reported that employers added jobs in March at the fast- est rate in three years. Sales at chain retailers posted the biggest gain last month in more than 10 years.

The problem is that stocks haven’t had a break, and that makes the market more vulner- able to a big drop. The Standard & Poor’s 500 index has risen 76 percent since it hit a 12-year low in March last year.

There have been five periods since then when it lost 5 percent to 8 percent. But those drops still don’t count as a full correction, which most analysts say is 10 percent.

Standard & Poor’s Equity Research predicts that the S&P 500 index will reach 1,270 in the next 12 months but that a drop of 5 percent to 15 percent along the way is possible. The S&P 500 topped 1,280 last week for the first time since before the worst days of the financial crisis in late 2008. To get to 1,270, the index would need to go up 6.5 percent.

By one measure of the mar- ket, stocks are overheated. Yale professor Robert Shiller com- pares share prices of S&P 500 companies to their average earnings over 10 years. Based on data going back more than 100 years, stock prices are about 51 percent overvalued, he said. He cautioned that doesn’t mean a crash is due but that stocks are above their norms.

“It’s kind of pricey now,” Shiller said.

Analysts see other signs that stocks need to stop climbing for a while.

In the past two months, the Dow has gone up three out of every four days. Last week, it closed above 11,000, a level it hasn’t seen since September 2008. Little more than a year ago, it was near 6,500.

-Ninety percent of the com- panies in the S&P 500 index are trading above their average price of the prior 50 days. That hasn’t happened since 1994 and it’s an indication that prices are elevated.

-The Chicago Board Options Exchange’s Volatility Index, which is known as the market’s fear gauge, last week closed at its lowest level since July 2007. That meant fewer investors are pre- dicting big drops in the market. The VIX did spike 15 percent Friday after the Goldman news.

-Last Tuesday, a quiet day for investors, the trading of five stocks accounted for one-fifth of the market’s volume. Four of the stocks were under $5. That points to traders making a quick buck by swapping cheap stocks, according to Joe Saluzzi, co- head of equity trading at Themis Trading LLC. “It’s one baseball card being traded back and forth a thousand times,” he said. “It’s an illusion. Investors often look to higher trading volume as a sign of broad confidence in the market’s direction.”

Analysts say a drop will oc- cur when something comes along to unnerve the market.

“Some people think about or have managed to forget about. Friday’s Goldman Sachs news was one of those surpris- ers. Beyond that, investors know unemployment remains high at 9.7 percent and that the hous- ing market is weak. They also know that the Federal Reserve is starting to turn off the spigot of cheap cash that has propped up banks and flooded in the stock market.”

While no one can say when the market will fall, many ana- lysts predict it’s likely. The only question is when the Fed starts to boost interest rates to avert inflation.

“There is a lot of partying go- ing on because the Fed has been fueling the fire with extraordinarily cheap money,” said Haag. He added that the Fed’s investment of at Silvernails Liepke, fund invest- ment officer at Salient Partners in Houston, referring to low in- terest rates. “I do think that’s the big question, which is which the market will respond to that.”
Polish leader buried in ceremony of patriotism

“We didn’t receive the miracle we were praying for. This journey has ended and now the healing will start.”

VJOZ KACZYNSKI III

We tragically lost our leader, the President, on April 10, 2010. He was killed in a plane crash near Smolensk, Russia, while en route to a state funeral for the First Couple of Poland. Kaczynski’s death has created a profound sense of loss and grief for the Polish nation.

Poles finally appreciate him. I never imagined that Poland would honor Kaczynski in this way.

—Ryszard Stolarski, Mournier

In some ways, the tragedy of Kaczynski’s fatal flight, which was mourned with great sorrow and dignity, exemplifies the national character of Poland. The Polish people, known for their resilience and bravery, have faced countless challenges throughout their history. This tragedy only serves to strengthen their resolve.

Under the eyes of the world that speaks of our sins, we see how penance is grace and we see how penance is necessary.

—Pope Benedict XVI, speaking at a Catholic funeral Mass, a Russian state funeral for the First Couple of Poland.

Kaczynski has become an unwitting catalyst for new words and gestures of trust between the long-divided Slavic nations.

The patriotic Kaczynski wanted to honor them and push Moscow to do more to acknowledge the Soviet crimes, which Moscow had blamed on Stalin’s secret police in 1940, killings known as the Katyn massacre.

Since the plane crash, Kaczynski has seen an outpouring of sympathy and support from around the world.

The plane that crashed, Kaczynski’s personal Tupolev 154, had been the subject of numerous investigations and a diplomatic showdown.

The Kaczynski administration, which had been increasingly fixated on the past and often they bring people closer, and I believe that this is the time for new ties, saying the tragedy has given rise to “many layers of understanding between the people and nations.”

“Sympathy and help we have received from Russian brothers has breathed new life into a hope for closer relations and reconciliation between our two Slavic nations,” Dziewo said. “Great respect toward the president of Russia.”

It was Medvedev’s visit to Poland, and before returning home he de- clared that the two nations are taking a “step into the future 154” together.

“Tragedies can bring out difficult emotions, but very often they bring people closer, and I believe that this is the time for new ties,” Medvedev said.

Many world leaders, including Nicolas Sarkozy of France, were kept away by the plane crash造成的 massive on-time and o- tional costs.

The new president, former Prime Minister Władysław Kaczyński, told the congregation during the lavish state funeral for the First Couple that Kaczynski’s death has created a profound sense of loss and grief for the Polish and Russian nations.

As Kaczynski saw the outpouring of admiration and sympathy for his country and for the residents of my country and Poland needs,” Medvedev said.

Any rift between the coun- tries seemed forgotten Sunday, as did Kaczynski’s more combative position in the 1980s and 1990s. This change would be enacted by transitioning away from coal and moving toward safer energy jobs such as wind turbine manu-

“Now the country has seen its elite exposed – pro- voked profound grief and a sud- den surge of admiration for the man who has been hailed as a champion of free enterprise.”

“Kaczynski had good and bad qualities, but now you shouldn’t say anything bad about the man,” said Karolinska, 19, a student who traveled five hours from Wroclaw to join the 200,000 others packing Krakow’s streets.

Those who long supported Kaczynski saw the outpouring of grief and respect toward his memory as a sign that the broader society was finally coming to appreciate him.

On Wednesday, Medvedev will visit Russia with his focus on Poland’s relationship with the European Union and Moscow’s role in the nuclear arms race. He will also discuss the possibility of a new round of talks on Mr. Kaczynski’s legacy.

With the rescue efforts tak- ing over 100 hours, the teams wandered through more than 3,000 feet of underground passageways by inching their way slowly through debris and fall- ing rocks. The mine workers eventually turned back due to ex- cessively fixated on the past and Stalin’s secret police in 1940, killings known as the Katyn massacre.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has cited the mine’s laws and records. Change is inevitable and necessary.

“Now the country has seen its elite exposed – provoked profound grief and a sudden surge of admiration for the man who has been hailed as a champion of free enterprise.”

“Kaczynski had good and bad qualities, but now you shouldn’t say anything bad about the man,” said Karolinska, 19, a student who traveled five hours from Wroclaw to join the 200,000 others packing Krakow’s streets.

Those who long supported Kaczynski saw the outpouring of grief and respect toward his memory as a sign that the broader society was finally coming to appreciate him.

On Wednesday, Medvedev will visit Russia with his focus on Poland’s relationship with the European Union and Moscow’s role in the nuclear arms race. He will also discuss the possibility of a new round of talks on Mr. Kaczynski’s legacy.

With the rescue efforts tak- ing over 100 hours, the teams wandered through more than 3,000 feet of underground passageways by inching their way slowly through debris and fall- ing rocks. The mine workers eventually turned back due to ex- cessively fixated on the past and Stalin’s secret police in 1940, killings known as the Katyn massacre.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has cited the mine’s laws and records. Change is inevitable and necessary.

“Now the country has seen its elite exposed – provoked profound grief and a sudden surge of admiration for the man who has been hailed as a champion of free enterprise.”

“Kaczynski had good and bad qualities, but now you shouldn’t say anything bad about the man,” said Karolinska, 19, a student who traveled five hours from Wroclaw to join the 200,000 others packing Krakow’s streets.

Those who long supported Kaczynski saw the outpouring of grief and respect toward his memory as a sign that the broader society was finally coming to appreciate him.

On Wednesday, Medvedev will visit Russia with his focus on Poland’s relationship with the European Union and Moscow’s role in the nuclear arms race. He will also discuss the possibility of a new round of talks on Mr. Kaczynski’s legacy.

With the rescue efforts tak- ing over 100 hours, the teams wandered through more than 3,000 feet of underground passageways by inching their way slowly through debris and fall- ing rocks. The mine workers eventually turned back due to ex- cessively fixated on the past and Stalin’s secret police in 1940, killings known as the Katyn massacre.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has cited the mine’s laws and records. Change is inevitable and necessary.

“Now the country has seen its elite exposed – provoked profound grief and a sudden surge of admiration for the man who has been hailed as a champion of free enterprise.”

“Kaczynski had good and bad qualities, but now you shouldn’t say anything bad about the man,” said Karolinska, 19, a student who traveled five hours from Wroclaw to join the 200,000 others packing Krakow’s streets.

Those who long supported Kaczynski saw the outpouring of grief and respect toward his memory as a sign that the broader society was finally coming to appreciate him.

On Wednesday, Medvedev will visit Russia with his focus on Poland’s relationship with the European Union and Moscow’s role in the nuclear arms race. He will also discuss the possibility of a new round of talks on Mr. Kaczynski’s legacy.

With the rescue efforts tak- ing over 100 hours, the teams wandered through more than 3,000 feet of underground passageways by inching their way slowly through debris and fall- ing rocks. The mine workers eventually turned back due to ex- cessively fixated on the past and Stalin’s secret police in 1940, killings known as the Katyn massacre.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has cited the mine’s laws and records. Change is inevitable and necessary.

“Now the country has seen its elite exposed – provoked profound grief and a sudden surge of admiration for the man who has been hailed as a champion of free enterprise.”

“Kaczynski had good and bad qualities, but now you shouldn’t say anything bad about the man,” said Karolinska, 19, a student who traveled five hours from Wroclaw to join the 200,000 others packing Krakow’s streets.

Those who long supported Kaczynski saw the outpouring of grief and respect toward his memory as a sign that the broader society was finally coming to appreciate him.

On Wednesday, Medvedev will visit Russia with his focus on Poland’s relationship with the European Union and Moscow’s role in the nuclear arms race. He will also discuss the possibility of a new round of talks on Mr. Kaczynski’s legacy.

With the rescue efforts tak- ing over 100 hours, the teams wandered through more than 3,000 feet of underground passageways by inching their way slowly through debris and fall- ing rocks. The mine workers eventually turned back due to ex- cessively fixated on the past and Stalin’s secret police in 1940, killings known as the Katyn massacre.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has cited the mine’s laws and records. Change is inevitable and necessary.

“Now the country has seen its elite exposed – provoked profound grief and a sudden surge of admiration for the man who has been hailed as a champion of free enterprise.”

“Kaczynski had good and bad qualities, but now you shouldn’t say anything bad about the man,” said Karolinska, 19, a student who traveled five hours from Wroclaw to join the 200,000 others packing Krakow’s streets.

Those who long supported Kaczynski saw the outpouring of grief and respect toward his memory as a sign that the broader society was finally coming to appreciate him.

On Wednesday, Medvedev will visit Russia with his focus on Poland’s relationship with the European Union and Moscow’s role in the nuclear arms race. He will also discuss the possibility of a new round of talks on Mr. Kaczynski’s legacy.

With the rescue efforts tak- ing over 100 hours, the teams wandered through more than 3,000 feet of underground passageways by inching their way slowly through debris and fall- ing rocks. The mine workers eventually turned back due to ex- cessively fixated on the past and Stalin’s secret police in 1940, killings known as the Katyn massacre.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has cited the mine’s laws and records. Change is inevitable and necessary.

“Now the country has seen its elite exposed – provoked profound grief and a sudden surge of admiration for the man who has been hailed as a champion of free enterprise.”

“Kaczynski had good and bad qualities, but now you shouldn’t say anything bad about the man,” said Karolinska, 19, a student who traveled five hours from Wroclaw to join the 200,000 others packing Krakow’s streets.

Those who long supported Kaczynski saw the outpouring of grief and respect toward his memory as a sign that the broader society was finally coming to appreciate him.

On Wednesday, Medvedev will visit Russia with his focus on Poland’s relationship with the European Union and Moscow’s role in the nuclear arms race. He will also discuss the possibility of a new round of talks on Mr. Kaczynski’s legacy.

With the rescue efforts tak- ing over 100 hours, the teams wandered through more than 3,000 feet of underground passageways by inching their way slowly through debris and fall- ing rocks. The mine workers eventually turned back due to ex- cessively fixated on the past and Stalin’s secret police in 1940, killings known as the Katyn massacre.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has cited the mine’s laws and records. Change is inevitable and necessary.
Creative dance company [undefined] movers, debuts

Karen Patterson

It was one of the first actually holds a special place in between. The short scenes as well as the one-act playwriting Harold Pinter. Annelise Belmonte Ensemble comes together for ‘Pinter Project’ collection of short plays

Janae Stewart (‘11), Chelsea Harkelroad (‘11), Kristen Benner (‘11), Jess Kohnen (‘11), Sarah Stern (‘11) and Zachary Porter (‘11).

The group’s premiere was a beautifully precise movement and left the audience wanting more. The concert began with a playful and light-spirited trio of Harkelroad, Benner and Porter. Large movements and great energy captured the audience’s attention immediately, and colorful costumes that swished and swayed with Benner and Harkelroad’s every movement helped transition the piece. The piece was a reflection of one of [undefined] movers’ motos: expressing a creative dream that could no longer be held inside. Often dance pieces seem to take themselves too seriously. Rather than forcing the joy, the trio used constant movement and expressive faces to show how much they were enjoying themselves.

“It ended being almost a pouty moment in the piece. Porter and Kohnen’s movements and the word ‘pouty’ has important elements of a relationship: trust, tension and playfulness.”

The final piece of the evening showed the fledging company together as a tribute to those the Hope community has loved and lost, as well as those who feel out of place. “I was not only returning to that playwright, but to that period of life where I had started,” Tammi said. “The Dumb Waiter” is about two hitmen waiting in a dingy basement for their next assignment.

Tammi’s work has inspired its own word to describe it: Pinteresque. Tammi describes it as “humor and also an underlying paining of thunder.” The short scenes consist of the entire ensemble of eight characters, mixing and matching partners in the scenes. Madison Tustin (‘11), one of the ensemble members, said “The Pinter Project” has been “an experience in becoming a versatile actor. It really helped me adapt to different characters, different situations. For that reason you have to have really good chemistry with your fellow actors, and thankfully we all work really well together.” In the original casting process, the short scenes had not yet been selected, so the cast ended up reading several of Pinter’s plays, without knowing which characters they were going to play. “It ended being almost a class, and I like that,” Tammi said. “With the participation of everybody, it was more than just learning your lines and finding your character and everything. What I find valuable about this kind of approach is the kind of ownership the ensemble has over the project. We always strive to have students feel ownership over whatever they’re involved in, and this is one way to do that.”

“The Pinter Project” will be performed Friday and Saturday, April 23 and 24, and Wednesday through Saturday, April 28 to May 1, at 8 p.m. in the studio theater in the basement of the DeWitt Center.
At the beginning of the spring semester, the Leadership 391 class was presented with a significant, local, yet invisible crisis: the Latino dropout rate. In previous semesters, Leadership 391 students worked to define the underlying problem, and now it is time for us to take action.

We decided that our first step is to raise awareness of the issue at Hope College, so that we as members of the college community can be truly effective members of the city many of us call home. As we raise awareness of this issue, it is important to point out that although the information presented in this article is valid, it does not apply to all students in these situations.

Background:

In the 1940s, Latino families were recruited and began migrating to the Holland area to work in the fields. Many of these families returned year after year. Some stayed in Holland permanently and new migrant workers continued to come. Today more than 22 percent of Holland’s population is Latino. Many of these families are living in poverty. Poverty is highly correlated with low abilities in linguistics, math and literacy. The lack of English language skills increases the impact of poverty. Living in a home where English is not the first language is a great disadvantage for children who are in a school system where they are taught in English. Even if they do master the language themselves, they are unable to receive any assistance on their schoolwork at home, due to their parents’ lack of understanding. Compounding the impact is the lack of self-esteem students have when they don’t perform well academically and when expectations for them are low.

Statistics:

All these factors impact students’ levels of literacy. By the time students reach the fourth grade, if they are not at the right reading level, they are almost sure to struggle in high school. According to the U.S. Department of Education, only 14 percent of Latino fourth graders can read at or above the basic reading skill level. This greatly decreases their chances of successfully finishing high school. Latino parents also have a difficult time understanding the school system, due to cultural differences in the way school is run in America; they are less likely to be involved in their children’s academic success as a result. In some cases the parent cannot be involved in a child’s academic achievement due to the work hours they must put in to support their family, and this is true for students as well.

All the preceding obstacles are responsible for the high Latino dropout rate in Holland. In 2007 at Holland High School, 44 percent of Latino males and 30% of Latino females who entered the ninth grade did not finish high school in four years, and that is not counting those who didn’t enter the ninth grade. For this reason, it is important for us to continue to assist the "stopgap" efforts that are currently taking place, initiate our own and seek greater collaboration among the organizations involved.
How to help:

Adequate role models in schools are lacking in the lives of these teens. Most of their parents did not graduate from high school, and there are low percentages of Latino teachers in the schools. In addition, many face discrimination, purposeful or not, from both their classmates and teachers. Although these actions can be subtle they can cause a decrease in the self-esteem of these students. We must be mindful of these effects as a community and counteract this attitude by creating programs that will support these students in their academic and life goals.

As members of the Holland community, we should be concerned about our neighbors. If that weren’t enough motivation, we need to think about how the high dropout rate affects all of us. These students make up a large portion of our community. If they do not receive the education they need to succeed the future of the Holland community is at risk. On a national level each student that drops out costs the nation $260,000 in lost economic activity; additionally, 78 percent of juvenile crime is committed by high school dropouts. As stated by the Americas Promise Alliance, “Young people who drop out are twice as likely as likely as graduates to be unemployed; three times as likely to live in poverty; eight times more likely to wind up in prison; and twice as likely to become the parent of a child who drops out.”

Ways to get involved:

Some of the organizations that are addressing this issue include LAUP (Latin Americans United for Progress), Ready for School, CASA, Upward Bound, Urban Youth Ministries and Young Life, just to name a few. These organizations cover a wide range of ages and serve children in a variety of ways, so there are many possibilities for Hope College students to get involved. These organizations provide a support system, good learning tools and, most importantly, role models for students to succeed in all areas of their lives.

When talking to these organizations, we discovered that the biggest problem they face is a lack of resources. This can include lack of money or people to be successful in their endeavors. As students at Hope College, we have the resources to contribute to these organizations with our time and talents. We can serve as role models to the Holland community, making them aware of the issue and showing them that something positive can be done in response. If you are interested in volunteering with any of these organizations please see their contact information below and get involved!

Contact:

LAUP  http://www.laup.org/
Ready for School  http://www.readyforschool.org/
CASA  http://www.hope.edu/admin/casa/index.html
Upward Bound  http://www.hope.edu/admin/upbound/index.htm
Urban Youth Ministries  http://www.urbanyouthministries.net/
Young Life  http://www.younglife.org/
I desire for everyone to be free — to voice their opinions and to act spontaneously. Unfortunately, there are many things that get in the way of our freedom. So, I write this column to promote some healthy, free existence and maybe even some healing.

I have been outspoken about my faith and my ideas about justice. More specifically, I have identified my understanding of sexuality within the context of the Christian faith. I have shared my dream for all people, of all sexual persuasions, to be fully included and accepted into the body of Christ.

My perspective is somewhat unique because when you and I are talking about “the issue” we are not talking about a theological issue like the trinity or predestination; we are talking about me, my life, my love, my desires, my hopes and dreams. I hear time and again, “I love you, Emily, but I do not agree with or cannot accept (insert word) that makes a reference to the fact that my sexual desires are incorrect, invalid and not to be acted upon.” I understand that you want to love me. Your faith tradition has taught you that the conservative position holders must undeniably cause tremendous pain, in order to save the sexual deviants. I am very curious to know the roots of this fear. Typically, the most silenced voices of the minority opinion. So this is a unique situation. The majority opinion, affirmed by Hope’s policies and spiritual programming, is rarely being shared. Why? What are the consequences of speaking up? This position has the administration, pastors, a God and the majority of the students behind them. So, even these conservative voices are still silent. There has to be something more going on here.

As one student said to me, “It’s hard because you need to hold to your beliefs, but when you share your opinion, you will hurt (the LGBT person’s) feelings.” The struggle is really about how we love people. One question to consider is how can we love LGBT persons after believing and voicing an opinion that rebukes, and as a by-product, shames them? In this question, I see the cognitive dissonance of tough love. Corporal punishment provokes a similar problem. Does a guardian’s love for a child require that the guardian cause physical or emotional pain to correct the child and steer him or her along the right path? If the conservatives see non-heterosexuality as sinful, and perhaps a roadblock before salvation, their care and concern for the homosexual’s soul will most likely spur them to action. This is what leads Christians to all types of evangelistic work — to save the souls of the lost. Therefore, the conservative position holders must decide if they are willing to speak words of correction or condemnation which will undoubtedly cause tremendous pain, in order to save the sexual deviants.

I want to challenge all position holders to be bold. Speak what you believe. If it is the truth, there is nothing to fear. If you feel timid to share because you will inflict pain, examine this sensation. The contemplative process will most likely lead you to understand that you have the right to disagree about God; the Bible as guidance, the path of your faith convictions. If you feel you cannot articulate your stance well, use the generous resources on our campus: your chaplains, the library, Western Seminary, your faith tradition, your spiritual experience and prayer. This conversation requires intelligent, caring, conscious people.

God be with us.

Emily would like to extend a thousand thank you’s to all the people who have extended the grace of Jesus to her and to all the friends who have held her in unlimited love along the way.

There are two types of laundry in this world: that done by people and that done by college kids. The problem is that laundry tends to become the base of existence around that third week. Life is running smoothly, what with pleasant-smelling sheets and your favorite shirts all lined up, when suddenly you find yourself lacking undergarments and wearing a sweater in seventy-degree weather. This is the cycle, no pun intended. Of washing clothes — waiting until you’ve got to walk around wrapped in scarves and loose socks to avoid arrest for indecent exposure.

I doubt such a cycle applies to everyone; on the contrary, I would expect that many are quite competent when it comes to laundry. These are what we refer to as “people.” On the other hand, however, are the incompetent launderers.

We the incompetent launderers, you see, often live relatively close to home. Often we have reasons to go there on the weekends or, certainly, over breaks, and thus find it only reasonable to bring our laundry along so as to get it done for free. Frugality, of course: that’s what it is.

Somehow, in many cases, parents of the incompetent launderers seem quite pleased to have something to keep them busy when their kid returns home. Lovely!

Parentheticalities

Kalli Doud Columnist

There are two types of laundry done at home, however, is the fact that it must be folded and put away upon returning to school. Or does it? It’s completely possible to live out of a hamper, even if things get a little wrinkly. Wrinkles are in, right? How cruel of me to be proposing so many questions. Of course wrinkles are in!

To those who actually do their laundry on a regular basis, we don’t mean to drive you insane. Contrary to belief, we are clean, responsible people just too busy with other things to pay attention to the care of that body, clothing-protecting items. If you are an incompe- tent launderer, take pride in your work — or lack thereof. It’s OK to keep your clothes in piles that spill out of your closet! It’s great to have 50 unoccu- pied hangers floating around your room! Is it, perhaps, some of the most creative and resourceful people? On earth — always on the look- out for new, inventive ways to cover your body when you don’t actually have any clean clothes to wear. Be who you were meant to be, and enjoy those rare moments when peace is restored to your wardrobe.

Kalli is actually rather pleased that the weather has gone from warm to chilly. It gives her an extra week of not doing laundry.
Quote for thought
Kate Schrampfer
Columnist

Rather be busy

I know a lot of smart, organized people who write down all their deadlines, commitments and meetings in nice, neat little planners — pretty patterned ones, stern little black ones, blue and orange Hope ones. But I’m not one of those people. Instead of a planner, I have this absolutely huge calendar in my room, and each month has a different color border, and there are all kinds of random holidays written at the bottom of the big, lovely, empty white squares. It’s quirky, like me … and I love my calendar. But there is one problem with it, and that is the same problem that I guess the planner-people have. Those empty squares on my calendar and the empty lines in their planners? They never stay empty for long, which means that my days never relax and lazy, either. I’m not really complaining. I like having lots to do, and I’d rather be busy than bored. Even though my days are full, bursting with appointments, homework and everything in between, they are good days. Day after day like that, soon they all start to run together in a smooth, comfortable blur. There are a few bad days (and even some tragedies) thrown into the smear, but for the most part, yesterday, then last week, then last month all smudge together into a haze.

And this is exactly the problem. These good days, there’s nothing to them. We wake up, go through our routines, take what comes our way passively. We appreciate them, sure, but we don’t get into them. We ought to dig in our heels, pull back and live, really live into each day. People who do this, “at the best, know in the end the triumph of high achievement and who at the worst, if they fail, at least fail while daring greatly” (Theodore Roosevelt). Take the risk of living, and get the reward of a good life.

The semester, the year, is almost over. In just a few short weeks, we’re all going to be scattered across the country, even across the world — some for the summer, some for good. I really, really don’t like thinking about this. Somehow, half of my college career has slipped by already, but I want more than just these good days. I want a good life.

“There is no shortage of good days. It is good lives that are hard to come by” (Annie Dillard). The more I think about this, the more true it seems to me. I’m not a great scholar. I don’t know the magic word that will make your life a “good one”. But I would say to start by asking questions, by talking to other people, by wondering. By looking under the surface of your days, good and bad, and pushing aside your routine so that you can see the reality of life with all its brokenness and its beauty. If you find that real life, I think you’ve found a good life. So live it.

Kate wants to thank you for reading this. She hopes that these ideas stick with you, so that as people of Hope, we can lead good lives. (She will also miss ALL of you very much over the summer?)

Letters to the Editors

Parent supports Hope’s homosexuality statement
To the Editors:

As a parent of a current (and possibly another soon-to-be) Hope student, I have been following the controversy surrounding the issue of “gay rights” on campus. While I believe strongly that, as Christians in this world, we are to face these issues, I also believe that, as Christians, we need to remain anchored in the Word and deal with them through the lens of Holy Scripture. It seems to me that those who would petition the college to alter its policy are seeking acknowledgment approval, and, quite possibly, special protection of certain students based on their sexual orientation. As an institution of higher learning, shouldn’t the focus be on student ability, achievement, performance and educational goals? Gay students have equal opportunities on campus to take classes, do research, participate in extracurricular activities, join established clubs and student organizations, just as any other students may.

I believe Hope’s Institutional Statement on Homosexuality is more than fair and reasonable. To alter this policy would force a specific cultural agenda on the college and student body. Hope is a private, Christian institution and therefore entitled to establish its own policies, regardless of society or the public at large. Those who do not concur with the policies established by Hope College are free to attend another institution more in line with their particular beliefs and standards.

Sincerely,
Kristi Schrampfer

Professor hopes for sculpture’s return
To the Editors:

I always enjoyed seeing it there — and occasionally stopped to admire it. I’m speaking of the sculpture “The Donut.” It seemed perfectly placed in the breezy lobby of Nykerk Hall. Ironically, its value went even deeper. It stood there — small and mobile right by a door — as a testament to the trust that Hope College has in its people and the honesty and goodwill that was then reciprocated.

Just last evening I was in Nykerk watching Vanderveen and reflecting on what a great place Hope is — a packed auditorium, all enjoying each other’s company and home grown entertainment. How neat that the entire campus is available for the Hope community both for academics and for recreation. I don’t want that to change.

So I really hope that “The Donut” is returned. I hope if it was taken by a member of the Hope community, that it was taken as a prank and not as an act of selfishness. Mostly, I hope that the goodwill and honesty of the Hope community can shine brightly and infect each of us that lives within it.

Tim Pennings

Voices of Hope College

Boy: I need to change my socks tomorrow.
Girl: Is that not a normal thing?
Boy: Yeah, but I got my socks especially stinky today.

Male classmate: I have to keep tanning now, look what it’s doing for my complexion!

Roommate: I just realized I had my headphones in for the past hour, and I haven’t been listening to anything.

Girl: Is that not a normal thing?
Boy: Crying ... all summer?

Professor hopes for sculpture’s return
To the Editors:

I always enjoyed seeing it there — and occasionally stopped to admire it. I’m speaking of the sculpture “The Donut.” It seemed perfectly placed in the breezy lobby of Nykerk Hall. Ironically, its value went even deeper. It stood there — small and mobile right by a door — as a testament to the trust that Hope College has in its people and the honesty and goodwill that was then reciprocated.

Just last evening I was in Nykerk watching Vanderveen and reflecting on what a great place Hope is — a packed auditorium, all enjoying each other’s company and home grown entertainment. How neat that the entire campus is available for the Hope community both for academics and for recreation. I don’t want that to change.

So I really hope that “The Donut” is returned. I hope if it was taken by a member of the Hope community, that it was taken as a prank and not as an act of selfishness. Mostly, I hope that the goodwill and honesty of the Hope community can shine brightly and infect each of us that lives within it.

Tim Pennings

Want more out of your courses? Add

The Anchor
The Anchor strives to communicate campus events throughout Hope College and the Holland community. We hope to amplify awareness and promote dialogue through fair, objective journalism and a vibrant Voices page.

Our Mission: The Anchor welcomes all letters. The staff reserves the right to edit due to space constraints, personal attacks or other editorial considerations. A representative sample will be taken. No anonymous letters will be printed unless discussed with Editor-in-Chief. Please limit letters to 500 words. Letters to the Editors: The Anchor welcomes all letters. The staff reserves the right to edit due to space constraints, personal attacks or other editorial considerations. A representative sample will be taken. No anonymous letters will be printed unless discussed with Editor-in-Chief. Please limit letters to 500 words. Letters to the Editors: To submit an ad or a classified, or to request a brochure or other information, contact our Ads Representative at anchorads@hope.edu. To contact our office, call our office at (616) 395-7877.

Contact Information: To submit an ad or a classified, or to request a brochure or other information, contact our Ads Representative at anchorads@hope.edu. To contact our office, call our office at (616) 395-7877.
At Western Michigan University’s Grand Rapids regional site, the Master of Business Administration (MBA) degree program teaches the business knowledge and professional skills required in today’s global environment and prepares individuals to function effectively in administrative and leadership positions.

Students in the Grand Rapids MBA program are able to network with area peers and create business connections in a face-to-face environment. If you’re looking to build upon your bachelor’s degree, consider the WMU MBA program the ultimate resume builder.

Master of Business Administration

- Offers a choice of concentration in marketing, management, finance, accounting, or computer information systems.
- Prepares students to function effectively in administrative and leadership positions.
- Promotes engaging discussions and workplace solutions that can be put into practice the next day.

Best of all, our convenient evening classes meet from 6 to 9 p.m. so you can have a job, an education, and a life.

Visit www.wmich.edu/grandrapids/mba or call (616) 771-4100 for program details and admissions requirements.
Mens lacrosse continues strong season

Arryn Uhlenbrauck
Sports Editor

In 2009, Hope’s men’s lacrosse team had a winning season including an invitation to the CCAA conference championships.

“We finished well last season with a little surprise captain Dillon Fink (’11) said. “Teams that came to play expected to completely run us over, and we shocked a few teams last year. This year we aren’t shocking any teams. Teams prepare to play us, they expect that when we play them we will be difficult to handle.”

The team has greater expectations this year, hoping to both win their division and qualify for playoffs.

The team is currently 7-4 on the season and has lost since falling to Western Michigan University on March 31. Part of the Dutchmen’s success this season has come from the six freshmen and other new players on the squad. According to Fink, this has brought in a strong freshman class that fortified our defense, made us more deep in the goalie position and gave us another scoring threat from the midfield. We had a few other players that played in high school but didn’t play last year to add depth to our roster and increased our speed at the midfield. Also, several newcomers to the sport brought an eagerness to learn and have made great improvements.”

The change in the team is not due entirely to new members, however. There has also been a shift in attitude among the players on the field. “The attitude on the field this year is one of confidence,” Fink said. “You can feel it in practice—most people joking around with each other, a good time, encouraging each other, congratulating each other for good plays and steadily losing tolerance for bad plays.”

One of our major struggles this year was battling our over-confidence from last season. We had a tough beginning to the season this year, but the good teams we faced showed us that we still have a lot to improve on so we have been working hard.”

Last week, the team traveled to Illinois to face off against DePaul in their seventh game of the season. Though some of their away games have been relatively close to home, such as the Western Michigan game and a game against Grand Valley, playing at more distant locations such as DePaul or Indiana University gives the team an opportunity to compare themselves to teams they may not have encountered otherwise. It is interesting to see how we might stack up against division leaders and get a sense of how we might not play many teams from our area.”

Baseball team currently in second place in MIAA

James Nicholas
Assistant Sports Editor

Hope’s baseball team hasn’t lost a MIAA series this season. The Dutchmen are 20-8 on the season with a 12-4 MIAA conference record. Helping their stellar conference record has been the fact that they haven’t dropped a series all season.

“Our goal is to win three out of four games every week,” said coach Stu Fritz. “You are going to be league champions if you can do that. Obviously if you can win all four, that’s the ultimate goal, but it’s pretty tough to beat somebody four times.”

The Dutchmen began this season’s MIAA play by sweeping Olivet in two doubleheaders, first on March 27 and again on March 29. Hope won all four games by a combined score of 46-22, including an impressive 20-4 win in the second half of the doubleheader on March 27.

They then went on to take three out of four against Calvin in doubleheaders on April 1 and April 5.

The Flying Dutchmen edged out Trine in their opening game of the doubleheader on April 1, collecting their fifth straight MIAA win to start the season. They then fell for the first time, 7-4 in the back half.

The other two games of the series against Calvin resulted in Hope victories, 7-1 and 6-2.

Hope kept the momentum rolling on April 10, with a 9-5 victory against DePaul (IN) collecting a devastating 28-2 victory against the Scots in the first half of the doubleheader, then came back with a more mild 5-2 win.

The Scots were able to avoid a Flying Dutchmen sweep by winning the final game of the series on April 12, winning 5-4 after a 3-2 Hope victory earlier in the day.

One key to the Flying Dutchmen’s success thus far this season is pitching, Fritz said. With a strikeout-to-walks ratio of 3.1 and a team ERA of 4.80, the Flying Dutchmen’s pitching staff is exceeding coach’s expectations.

“Pitching has been very solid,” Fritz said. “A [strikeout to walks ratio of 3.1] is the kind of numbers you want. We actually had a streak of 22 scoreless innings during our spring break this season.”

A brief break from MIAA play on April 13 left the Flying Dutchmen with a split decision against Aquinas.

A brief break from MIAA play on April 13 left the Flying Dutchmen with a split decision against Aquinas.

MIAA play picked up again two days later as the Flying Dutchmen won both ends of a doubleheader against Trine, 7-4 and 5-4.

The second set of games against Trine resulted in a split. Hope won the first game 25-6 (marking the third time this season they have scored 20 or more runs in a game) but dropped the second 13-12 in eight innings.

This left the Flying Dutchmen with yet again another 3-1 record coming out of a four-game series against a MIAA team and a 12-4 MIAA record, putting them in second place.

“We feel real good about where we are right now,” said Fritz. “I feel very good about the kids in our program.”

When asked about his prediction for the rest of the season, Fritz was once again optimistic.

“To be honest, we have Adrian coming up and basically you want to keep yourself in control of your own destiny,” Fritz said emphatically. “We are still very much in control of our own destiny. The standings are obviously important but are less important than they will be at the end of the year.”

Adrian is alongside Hope atop the MIAA standings this season. Fritz believes his team has the edge however.

“I really like our club this year,” Fritz said. “We have quality kids from number one to 30. One of the strengths we have is leadership, but the leadership falls on more than just your (senior) captains. It also falls on other seniors and upperclassmen, even underclassmen; you expect leadership from all of them.”

At the same time, Fritz is also familiar with the old saying, “Don’t count your chickens before they hatch.”

“We certainly won’t look past anybody or take anybody lightly,” said Fritz. “We haven’t lost a series yet, but we certainly know how unpredictable this game can be. Our focus isn’t on the series, but the next game being the most important.”

The Dutchmen have three more series against MIAA teams this season. First, against Adrian, then Kalamazoo and finally Albion to round out conference play.

“I’m really happy with where we’re at right now,” said Fritz. “I’m most happy with having a good climate in our program. I enjoy spending time with them, I enjoy practice. We want to take this thing as far as we can and we work hard to get better every day. Fortunately we have a beautiful place to do it every day.”

Even though lacrosse may still be a club status at many schools, that is not a reflection of its popularity. “(Lacrosse) is one of the fastest growing sports, and it is mainly because of friends spreading the word,” Fink said.

The Flying Dutchmen will play their last home game of the spring 2010 season tonight against Adrian. And even though the game might not play many teams from our area.”

Mens Tennis defeats Calvin

After the Dutchmen suffered their first MIAA loss to Kalamazoo College 8-1 last week, they came back with a win over rival Calvin 6-3.

Hope’s lone victory against Kalamazoo came at number five singles by Alex Hughes (’12). With number two singles player Bobby Cawood (’13) injured since the GLCA Tournament and unable to play singles, everyone else played up one position in the match.

Hope almost lost to Calvin against the doubles with their number two team, but Mike Garland (’10) and Jon Lautz (’11) came back to win the match 9-7. John Gardner (’10), Cawood and Hughes won at number one, two, six singles respectively.

Hope’s two seniors are 4-0 in their final regular season. The Flying Dutchmen are 2-1 in the MIAA and are 11-10 overall.

MIAA Player of the Week

Softball
Deidra Enoch
Pitcher

Women’s Basketball to be Recognized

To commemorate the 2009-10 season, the women’s basketball team will be honored at a public recognition, The Flying Dutch will be recognized this Thursday, April 22, at DeVos Fieldhouse.

In March, the Dutch competed at the national championship in Bloomington, Ind., advancing to the title game before losing to Washington University, Mo.

Some of the evening events are a showing of the film, The发育, showcasing the season’s accomplishments and a distribution of a special commemorative poster. There will be opportunities for autographs from the players and for pictures to be taken with Hope’s mascot, Dutch, and the NCAA trophy. The event will conclude with the raising of a banner commemorating the 2009-10 season.

The recognition will begin at 7 p.m. and is open and free to the public.
Men’s tennis splits week

The men’s tennis team fell to Kalamazoo College 1-8 on April 13 but defeated Calvin on April 17, 6-3. They are currently in second place in the MIAA.

See brief on page 11.

Hope Track teams finish second in MIAA Jamboree

James Nichols
Assistant Sports Editor

Men’s and women’s track and field coach Kevin Cole has only good things to say about his teams this year.

“The teams are both the best I have seen since I started coaching here five years ago,” Cole said.

Both teams confirmed what their coach had to say, finishing second in the MIAA Jamboree this past weekend.

The Flying Dutchmen just missed out on first place, falling to Calvin by a mere 7.5 points, 952.5-945. The Flying Dutch also finished behind the Knights but had a larger margin of defeat, 974.5-939.5.

Cameron Llampkin (’11) won both the 100- and 200-meter dashes for Hope, coming in with a time of 22.78 seconds in the 200-meter and 11.01 seconds in the 100-meter.

The Flying Dutchmen also finished first in the 400-, 800-, and 1,500-meter races. Aaron (’10) won the 400, Joel Rietema (’13) won the 800 and Nathan Love (’12) won the 1,500.

Elliot Barney (’12) also came in second in the 400.

The Flying Dutch were only able to finish, at best, fourth in those same events.

They did, however, place first and second in the 100 meter hurdles.

Kori Vandeguchte (’11) won the event with a time of 15.38 and Sarah Venlet (’13) was right behind her with a time of 16.28.

Both the men’s and women’s 4x100 meter relay finished first at the jamboree. The women’s team of Rachel Walton (’12), Verlet, Emily Kreichelt (’11) and Vandeguchte posted a time of 46.85, just 0.05 seconds ahead of Calvin’s team.

Already holding the school record, the men’s team of Christian Everett (’13), Josh Echtinaw (’11), Lamkin and Kyle VanderVeen (’12) finished in 42.32 seconds, 0.23 seconds ahead of Calvin, breaking a MIAA Jamboree record set by Albion in 2009.

The Flying Dutchmen also swept the long jump, hammer throw, and winning the event by 0.6 meters in the triple jump.

Heidi Grooters (’10), already holding the school record for the triple jump, earned a provisional national qualifying distance of 14.27 meters.

The Flying Dutch took the 4x400 relay with a time of 3:22.21, breaking a MIAA Jamboree record set by Calvin in 2008. The 4x400 consists of Frank Prewich (’10), Treiber, Barney and Nicholas Rinck (’12).

As has been the case all season, both teams excelled in the field events at the jamboree.

“I am blessed with good assistant coaches and high caliber athletes throughout field events,” Cole said. “We have a lot of upperclassmen and women in those events, and they have worked hard to keep improving. It is very helpful to have coaches like Matt Svoboda (jumps), Paul Markel (throws) and Ben Vandermeer (pole vault) who can work individually with the athletes to help them improve.”

All three coaches had successful events on Saturday.

Hope finished first, third, fifth and sixth in the high jump on the men’s side. National qualifier John Donkersloot (’11) came in first, followed by Treiber, Dezon Fulton (’11) and Kyle Dietrich (’11) respectively.

The Flying Dutch took the two top spots in the triple jump. Shailee Harper (’13) came in first with a distance of 10.91 meters and Kristin Roschek (’12) followed with a distance of 10.66.

Heidi Grooters (’10), already holding the school record for hammer throw, finished first with a distance of 39.48 meters, 1.17 meters ahead of second place.

Three Flying Dutchmen swept the long jump, taking first, second and third. Echtinaw won with a distance of 6.53 meters while Jeff Minkus (’10) came in second and Treiber came in third.

Minkus, already a national qualifier in the triple jump, earned a provisional national qualifying distance of 14.27 meters in the triple jump.

The Flying Dutch took the 4x400 relay with a time of 3:22.21, breaking a MIAA Jamboree record set by Calvin in 2008. The 4x400 consists of Frank Prewich (’10), Treiber, Barney and Nicholas Rinck (’12).

As has been the case all season, both teams excelled in the field events at the jamboree.

“I am blessed with good assistant coaches and high caliber athletes throughout field events,” Cole said. “We have a lot of upperclassmen and women in those events, and they have worked hard to keep improving. It is very helpful to have coaches like Matt Svoboda (jumps), Paul Markel (throws) and Ben Vandermeer (pole vault) who can work individually with the athletes to help them improve.”

All three coaches had successful events on Saturday.

Hope finished first, third, fifth and sixth in the high jump on the men’s side. National qualifier John Donkersloot (’11) came in first, followed by Treiber, Dezon Fulton (’11) and Kyle Dietrich (’11) respectively.

The Flying Dutch took the two top spots in the triple jump. Shailee Harper (’13) came in first with a distance of 10.91 meters and Kristin Roschek (’12) followed with a distance of 10.66.

Heidi Grooters (’10), already holding the school record for hammer throw, finished first with a distance of 39.48 meters, 1.17 meters ahead of second place.

Three Flying Dutchmen swept the long jump, taking first, second and third. Echtinaw won with a distance of 6.53 meters while Jeff Minkus (’10) came in second and Treiber came in third.

Minkus, already a national qualifier in the triple jump, earned a provisional national qualifying distance of 14.27 meters in the triple jump.

The Flying Dutch took the 4x400 relay with a time of 3:22.21, breaking a MIAA Jamboree record set by Albion in 2009.

The Flying Dutchmen also swept the long jump, hammer throw, and winning the event by 0.6 meters in the triple jump.

Heidi Grooters (’10), already holding the school record for the triple jump, earned a provisional national qualifying distance of 14.27 meters.

The Flying Dutchmen also swept the long jump, hammer throw, and winning the event by 0.6 meters in the triple jump.

Both teams have two more events, one this upcoming weekend at Hillsdale College and the other the weekend after at Northwood University in Grand Rapids. The big event remaining for both teams is the MIAA Field Day on May 6 and 7.

Along with the MIAA Jamboree, the field day determines which teams place where in the MIAA. Each event counts for half of the standings.

Both Hope teams are sitting comfortably in second place after the jamboree but have work to do if they want to win the conference.

“The field day is scored differently than the jamboree,” Cole said. “It’s time-based/individual performance a little more than team depth, so it makes it a little harder for us to win. However, we still have a very good chance on both sides.”