HOLLAND CITY NEWS.

WILLIAM H. ROGERS, Editor.

SATURDAY, MARCH 22, 1884.

The State Teachers Institute for this county will be held at Coopersville commencing at 10 o'clock a. m. on Monday, March 31 and will close on the following Friday. Prof. A. W. Taylor of Coopersville is the local committee. Prof. I. Esterbrook, of Olivet College and Prof. C. F. R. Bellows of the State Normal School are to be the conductors of the Institute. It is becoming a well established fact that an interchange of views, such as is given in these Institutes, is of great practical benefit to those who attend them. The teachers that are found in the front ranks of their profession are generally those who take interest enough in their work to avail themselves of such means of improvement. The Institute law, as amended by the last Legislature, allows teachers, whose schools are in session at the time appointed for the County Institute, held under the direction of the State Superintendent, to close their schools during the continuance of such Institute without forfeiting their wages for as many half-days as they are in attendance at the Institute. This removes a cause that has prevented many teachers from attending these Institutes in the past; and in view of the inducements to self-improvement thus furnished by the law, County Examiners and School Boards will both exercise wisdom and practice justice by giving preference to those teachers, other things being equal, who seek all such means better to prepare themselves for the work of their profession. Full particulars in regard to board, etc., may be obtained upon application to the local committee.

BAUER.

Two of the handsomest upright pianos that have ever been brought into this city were received by Geo. T. McClure, corner of Eighth and River streets, last week. They are manufactured by Julius Bauer & Co., of Harlem, New York. These instruments possess new and valuable patent improvements, found in none but the Bauer, and are considered by musicians first-class in every respect. Call and see them now on exhibition at McClure's. Mr. McClure has been very fortunate in procuring the agency and territory for these instruments. Below find testimonials of Mrs. L. T. Kanters of this city and Miss Minker, teacher of music, of Chicago, Ill.

Geo. T. McClure.
DEAR SIR:—I have used the Bauer piano for nearly a year and I can testify with pleasure to its excellent qualities, which I think are fully equal to the best in the market, in regard to solidity and durability and superior in regard to sweetness of tone and elasticity of touch. I do most heartily recommend them to those who contemplate purchasing a first-class instrument. Mrs. L. T. KANTERS.

MESSES. JULIUS BAUER & CO.
GENTLEMEN:—I have examined the beautiful style "L." you sold to Mr. Chas. Temple and am pleased to say that it is superior to any Piano I have ever played on. I shall ever recommend them to all my friends. Miss MINKER, Teacher of Music, Chicago, Ill.

The frost is nearly out of the ground.
Now is the time to manufacture "alates."
SHERIFF J. VAUPELL was in town last Monday on official business.

ALL three of the Allegan papers, although burned out, came to hand on time last week.

A LITTLE stranger put in an appearance at Dr. O. E. Yates', home last Thursday morning. It's a girl.

Go to the Musical Entertainment next Monday evening at Hope Reformed Church at 7:30 o'clock. It is free to all.

WORK will soon be commenced on the construction of our system of water works. The first lot of material arrived last Monday.

MESSRS. A. AND H. DE KRUIF, of Zeeland, returned from their trip through the north-west last week. They express in glowing terms their admiration for that section of our country.

WE understand that Mr. J. R. Kleyn has the contract for furnishing all the material and for putting up the large addition to the dry house of the Cappon and Bertsch Leather Company's tannery.

WHEN you are asked for the loan of your umbrella, jackknife, lead pencil, or any other of those articles that no one is supposed to return, you can preserve your veracity and at the same time work off a rank old joke by saying "its Lent."

ALL persons who desire to improve in music should become members of the convention to be conducted in this city by Prof. Chandler, of Kalamazoo. He comes highly recommended. Classes will be formed next Monday at Hope Reformed Church.

MR. B. WYNHOFF has secured the agency for the new Chicago lamp, a lamp that will burn kerosene of any test, producing a white light that is superior to gas and a great deal cheaper. These lamps are on exhibition at his store on Eighth street every night. Call and see them.

A FAMILY of musicians known as the McGibney family are booked for an entertainment in Lyceum Hall during the second week in April. The family comprises a full brass band, a full chorus, and a full orchestra. The exact date of their entertainment will be given next week.

TOWNSHIP committees and our friends throughout the country will please bear in mind that we have been adding largely to our stock of material and type and are prepared to do election tickets and slips, and in fact all kinds of job printing, in the best possible manner and on short notice.

THE ladies of the Methodist Church will give a New England Supper next Wednesday evening, March 29, in the lecture room of the church. The supper will be served from six until nine o'clock. Fifteen cents a meal will be charged. Let all attend and help the ladies in the object for which they are laboring—the building of a new parsonage.

A NEW time card goes into effect on the Chicago and West Mich. R'y next Sunday. We have not been able to get the exact figures, but understand that the morning train from Allegan and the morning train to Chicago will be about half an hour later. Also that the fast train south will run through to La Crosse instead of stopping at New Buffalo.

THE date of Col. Copeland's visit to this city is April 2nd. He has promised to give us his amusing lecture entitled "Handsome people." As the Colonel is liked well here as a lecturer, and as there has been no lectures here this winter, he will undoubtedly have a good audience, and, judging from his former efforts, his lecture will no doubt be entertaining.

THE mill and factory of J. R. Kleyn on the corner of Sixth and Cedar streets, opposite T. Keppel, is running and is doing some excellent work in the manufacture of Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Brackets, and Stair Railing. Mr. Kleyn is prepared to furnish anything in the building line and will take contracts for furnishing materials and for the erection of all designs and kind of buildings. Those who intend building should give him a call before proceeding with their work.

LAST Monday an accident occurred on the track of the Chicago and West Mich. R'y at Beach Tree that might have resulted in the killing of James Reynolds who lives at West Olive. He was employed on the section laying steel rails. The work being done the men started home with the hand car. When about half way home he was accidentally thrown off, the car passing over him cutting a wound in his scalp four inches in length and otherwise injuring him. He remained unconscious for twenty-four hours. Dr. R. B. Best of this city was summoned as speedily as possible and dressed the wounds, and reports at present writing that his patient is doing as well as can be expected.

MR. G. J. TE VAAWEEK, of Roseland, Ill. was in the city this week.

SPRING poetry is not wanted so please don't trouble us with your manuscript.

A LACE neck handkerchief was lost last Sunday night. See notice in another column.

GEO. TUBERGEN, of Grand Rapids, was in town last Thursday looking up old friends and acquaintances.

THE name of Sherman station on the Chicago and West Mich. R'y is to be changed to Brave, which is the post office name.

At a meeting of the citizens of Allegan, held since the recent fire, it was resolved to rigidly enforce the fire limits ordinance. This will assure the rebuilding of the burnt district with brick.

THE annual meeting of the stockholders of the Chicago and West Mich. R'y company for the election of directors etc., will be held in the company's office in Muskegon on Wednesday, April 16.

MRS. JAMES ALLING, nee Anna Wiemink, was buried in the Graafschap cemetery on last Wednesday. Mrs. Alling died at her residence in Custer, Mich., on Sunday, March 16. She leaves her husband with two children. Mr. and Mrs. Alling formerly resided in this city.

NEXT week the political pot will boil. Our citizens should exercise the greatest of care in selecting the officials for the coming year, as the enterprises and improvements already on foot will need tried and trusty men in charge of the municipal reins. Be careful then in making the nomination.

DR. B. J. DE VRIES leaves to-day for Ann Arbor where he will attend the graduating exercises of the Dental School of the University. He then intends attending the sessions of the State Dental Association, to be held in Detroit, returning home by April 1st. His dental parlors will be closed during his absence.

ONE of our subscribers at Big Rapids writes us that his attention was called the other evening to the playing of Bert Barnes, manager of our telephone exchange, and some friends, upon the violin guitar through the telephone. He says that the music sounded very sweetly coming from his former home. Barnes and our exchange are becoming celebrated for the music they produce.

YESTERDAY morning Ed. J. Harrington left for the west for a large number of horses, having sold nineteen head the past week to an Eastern buyer. Since his last trip Mr. Harrington has bought, sold and exchanged a number of horses with people in this vicinity, and is building up quite an extensive reputation as a dealer in horses. Farmers and others who desire to improve their horses, will do well to call and see "Ed" and get a good exchange or "trade."

THE trial of McPhillips, who so cruelly and wantonly shot down Gerrit Timmer, of North Holland, some few weeks ago, has been in progress this week at Grand Rapids. The jury was obtained last Wednesday and their names are as follows: David Miller, T. J. Grimson, W. L. Jones, Richard McGann, E. J. Reynolds, J. C. Murray, E. H. Cady, L. B. Brewer, Alfred Putnam, Arthur Furner, Marcus A. Pierce and John B. Brittain. The trial has been largely attended and it has been almost impossible to obtain admission to the court room. The prosecution rested their case on Wednesday after examining some twenty witnesses. The opening argument for the defence was made by Sam Clay who said that he intended to prove that the prisoner was not himself when he did the shooting. This is all we have been able to learn up to going to press but will give the result of trial in our next issue. It is to be hoped that McPhillips will get all the law allows him—a long life in Jackson prison.

THE action of Rev. J. A. De Bruyn in retiring from the Holland Christian Reformed Church, to which we referred last week, was one of the most courteous and manly that could characterize any minister. After careful investigation he came to the conclusion that the "separatists" or "seceding body" were not the real Reformed Church. Instead, however, of remaining in the church where he was so ably and so acceptably preaching, and seeking to draw people over to his convictions, he conscientiously withdrew and announced his personal preference for the Reformed Church in America, while at the same time he left his own congregation in a united and comparatively undisturbed condition. We think ministers of all denominations would do well to show such a spirit. When, for any cause, they become dissatisfied with their own churches, how much better quietly and quickly to withdraw, rather than to remain and find fault with existing forms and teachings, and thus disturb the peace and divide the people of the churches with which they retain their connection. Loyalty is one of the best evidences of love, whether applied to the truth preached or to the church in which it is preached.

THE total amount received for Theological instruction at Hope College is $7,464.

DON'T fail to attend the lecture at the College Chapel next Wednesday night, March 26.

PETER STEKETEE & Co., have received a large stock of Spring goods. Look out for advertisement next week.

MR. JACOB J. VAN ZANTEN, son-in-law, of ex-Mayer Van der Veen, has been appointed as assistant instructor of the Classical Academy of Orange City Iowa.

MARRIED:—At the parsonage of Hope Reformed Church in this city on Thursday the 20th inst., by Rev. Thomas Walker Jones, Henry J. Zwemer to Emma L. Woodhull, both of Saugatuck, Mich.

AN exchange very wisely remarks: It is certainly very funny to hear a man howling about patronizing home industries, when he uses a rubber stamp to make the most horrid daubs of letter heads and cards with which nice paper is spoiled.

If you would like to know what our forefathers ate for supper in years gone by go to the Methodist Church next Wednesday evening. You will then learn of the food which gave them their strength and endurance. Warm meals from six until nine o'clock will be served. The ushers, table waiters, and ladies present will be in costume.

MR. E. J. HARRINGTON has received a large stock of very fine spring and summer clothing this week and is selling them at remarkably low prices. Boys' suits from $2.50 up and men's suits from $4 to $20. We were shown by him a suit of all wool goods this week for $14 that was really a good bargain and we can recommend to all our readers the clothing emporium of E. J. Harrington when in need of a good suit of clothes. Look out for further announcement next week.

NEXT Monday evening, March 24th, there will be a Musical Rehearsal at Hope Reformed Church in this city, under the direction of Prof. E. L. Chandler, of Kalamazoo. Prof. Chandler is an accomplished musician, having been engaged for a long time in giving instruction in vocal and instrumental music. He has been invited to this city to conduct a musical convention. This convention will be organized next Monday in connection with the rehearsal. We are pleased to make this announcement. There is a large amount of musical talent in this city and we have no doubt a fine convention can be formed under such an able leader. We hope all lovers of music will be present next Monday. No admission will be charged.

LAST Friday night a meeting of the Republican city committee was held in the rooms above E. J. Harrington's store. The committee were all present and the utmost harmony prevailed. The time for holding the general caucus was fixed for Thursday evening, March 27, and the ward caucuses on Wednesday night, March 26. Resolutions were passed condemning the use of "party runners" on election day, and a committee was appointed to see the Democratic committee and try and do away with this objectionable feature. Lyceum Hall was selected as the place for holding the general caucus. The ward caucuses will be held in the following places: In the first ward at the city hall; in the second ward in Besman's old store; in the third and fourth wards in Eagle Engine rooms No. 1.

THE DOCTOR

It is the doctor; mark his easy grace,
The kindly smile that lights a thought on face, Carefully bending over the well-watched bed,
Where the poor sufferer rests his weary head;
Drawing the curtain just a little wider,
To see that the light is not too dim;
"An' how are we this morning? but so, so."
"Oh, B. me was not built in a day, you know; You sleep, you say, but poorly through the night."
But better toward morning—that's all right;
The movement of the pulse is somewhat quick.
But that one must expect when one is sick.
Pray let me see your tongue. There, that will do.
You'll be a new man in a day or two;
The weather is against you, damp and raw—
The like of it I think I never saw.
You want a little rest and change of diet;
Good nursing above all, and perfect quiet;
Yes, on the whole, best keep your bed to-day,
And don't let business trouble you, by the way.
Your liver's somewhat torpid, nothing more;
Good morning; take your mixture as before.
Hence to the parlor, writes a recipe,
And bowing blandly, takes his leave—and fee.

ST. JOHN'S WIFE.

It was in olden times, before croquet or lawn parties were in vogue. When the good wife wanted a few friends to meet at her ample board, for a social chat, a quilt—there was always one on hand—was stretched upon the frames, the larder stored with good things, and invitations were sent far and near for the ladies to meet in the afternoon, with gentlemen and tea in the evening.

Behold, then, a goodly number gathered in the front room of Farmer Goodwin's house, matrons and maids; but the latter were expected to do little work, and they gathered in groups on the piazza or strolled through the yard.
Neighbors' affairs were talked over, weather and housekeeping fully discussed, and occasionally a choice bit of news of a more interesting character made known. On this particular occasion it consisted in the fact that St.
John was going to marry. Some glanced up in surprise, but matter-of-fact, Mrs. B. exclaimed, "How do you know?" I've heard that story so often as to lose all faith in the report.

"Oh, it's a fact this time, for Miss Jay told me herself that Abigail St.
John had engaged her to come and sew for her three weeks. She is to have her black silk made over, and has one or two new ones. She expects to go South with an invalid friend; but you all know she would never leave her brother unless there was some one coming to take her place."

All concurred that it was a good thing. They did not consider Miss Abigail just the person to make her brother happy. True, she was a good housekeeper, but then she was a considerable of a scold, and St. John was such a mild, pleasant, kind-hearted man, how had he ever borne with it? Such a contrast, too, to the first Mrs. St. John.

St. John was a general favorite—always had a pleasant greeting for every one. So the elderly ladies remarked; and as for the younger ones, certainly his handsome face and agreeable manners were attractive. The lady elect was next in order.

"Folks say," continued Mrs. S., "its the widow Granger's daughter over at Plumville. At any rate St. John has been seen to stop there quite often of late."

"Well, perhaps she'll make a good wife," the lady's glance rested for half a minute on her own daughter, who was standing by the window, "but I've heard she's a proud, high-spirited body."

So they chattered on while Miss Abigail in her pleasant sewing-room stitched, all unconscious of their disparaging remarks, her thoughts going out to the new home in the far South, and her heart rejoicing that her days at the farm were over. Miss Abigail dearly loved her brother, and at his request, five years before, gave up her own home, came and tended the sick wife, and had since kept house for him.
She had carefully concealed the skeleton—for this house was not exempt from one. St. John was unconscious of it, Miss Abigail knew. In her endeavor to make the best of it, she felt she was losing her own peace of mind and serenity of temper. She had found it, and so had the young wife who now slept so quietly in the churchyard. For an instant the sister's heart went out in pity to the young girl who was to take her place. But it was not for her to give her warning; and Rose Granger, in her cozy village home, dreamed bright dreams of a future strewn with flowers.

People might harp on the ills of life; for her part she did not more than half believe them. It was their own fault, they brought them on themselves; but she, oh, it would be so different! And the bright air castles rose.

Yet she was not without the range of the gossip's tongues. They were busy at Plumville, too, and Rose Granger, calm, self-possessed young lady though she was, had not failed to note certain looks and mysterious nods, although apparently oblivious to them, and vaguely she wished, as so many others have done, that people would not interest themselves in her affairs. One old lady, presuming on her age and long acquaintance to offer a little advice, remarked to her some day:

"I wish you much happiness, and you have apparently made a wise choice.
Mr. St. John is intelligent, and owns a good property, so you can have every comfort you wish. Then, too, he's agreeable and kind-hearted. But trouble comes in all lives; all men have their faults,"—then misinterpreting the expression on Rose's face, she continued, "but I don't wish to frighten you, my dear; I've no doubt you can manage him."

"Manage him!" exclaimed Rose indignantly. "I loathe the idea. No woman who has any respect for herself would stoop to such manueuvring."

"Very fine talk, my dear; but to let you into a matrimonial secret, most wives have to; they would have a sorry lot if they didn't."

Rose's lip curled, and she deigned no reply. The words came to mind the next time she met St. John; but a glimpse of his handsome face and sparkling eyes dispelled all unpleasant thoughts. That face spoke to her of a perfect manhood; yet a close observer of human nature would have read in that easy nonchalant manner, and beneath that glance, a certain lack of energy. Not that St. John was indolent, quite the reverse. He was always busy and full of plans, but he lacked the perseverance necessary to fulfill them.
Some other time would do; meanwhile something else was in hand.

Time glided by, and one summer evening Mrs. St. John arrived at her new home. Miss Abigail remained with them a few weeks; then, early one Monday morning, her brother carried her to the depot, and after their departure Mrs. St. John gathered up the clothes preparatory to washing. The cistern pump was broken, and in peering in she discovered that the cistern was empty. She met her husband on his return with: "What am I to do?
I've everything ready for washing, and there is not a drop of water in the cistern!"

St. John smiled at her look of distress, and replied: "And hasn't been for years; the cistern leaks."
"Why! what did Abigail do?"
"Used well water, I suppose."

His wife made no reply, but, gathering up the clothes, said: "I will wait till we have rain," and carried them back to the closet. St. John was a little abashed at her manner, and exclaimed, "I'll have it repaired right away. I meant to have done so before."

So Rose washed dishes and cleaned the floor in well water, and the pile of soiled clothes accumulated in the closet, but no rain came.

One day St. John came into the sitting-room, where his wife sat reading.
"Where have you put my shirts, wife?
There is not one in the drawer."

Rose laughed. "You'll find them all in the clothes-basket, I guess, waiting for rain."

"But—but I've agreed to go to Benton on business, and this will hardly do to wear," and he glanced disconsolately at his soiled linen. "Couldn't you cleanse some water?" he asked, hesitatingly. "Abigail used to believe."

"I never did such a thing in my life," replied his wife. "The lye makes ones hands so sore. Besides, it hurts the clothes; they never look nice and white.
I've heard mother say one or two washings in cleansed water would ruin clothes. Then, it's such hard work to wash in it; I don't believe I'm strong enough to do it," and she returned to her book.

St. John was in dismay. He hesitated, and he was fastidiously neat in his personal appearance. Rose finally glanced up at his troubled face. "Go over to our neighbors and ask her for a pail of rain water. She will not think it strange that we are out, there has been such a drought, and I'll do you up a shirt in a short time."

"Bless you, wife! Where's the pail?" and St. John started off. "I'll stop at the village on my way to Benton."

"How about the mason?" inquired Mrs. St. John, the next morning.
"Bless me! I forgot," replied her husband, "I'll be sure to remember it next time."

But next day there came a rain, and all the tubs, pouncing barrels and pails were put under the eaves, and there was water enough for the present; and the trouble having passed, St. John was not the one to remember it. He never looked so far ahead as to ask, "What shall we do next time?"

A new difficulty presented itself to the wife. She went into the pantry, and in lifting down a pan, splash! dash!
she was drenched with water.

"What's the matter?"
"The roof leaks a trifle," replied her husband.

"I think it is a trifle," murmured Rose, as she examined the ceiling more closely, and saw the drops oozing through. "I wondered," she said aloud, "what made this plaster so loose. It will rot the timbers, won't it?"

"Of course, but I intend to have the house reshipled."

"Does any other room leak?" she asked.

"Yes, the spare cham"—but his wife was already half way up the stairs, for the day before she had spread her light silk upon the bed. "Just it time!" she exclaimed as she snatched it up. But oh! the white spread with the ugly stain across the foot!

"What shall I do?" she asked in dismay.

"I'll get a couple of pans," replied her husband, who had followed her up.
"That's the way Abigail managed."

"I declare," laughed Rose, as the pans were deposited under the leaks, "I shall catch water enough to last the rest of the summer."

St. John felt more ashamed than he had ever been in his life. "Rose, you are not a bit put out, and how Abigail used to scold! I dreaded rainy weather."

"Why don't you get it repaired?"
"I did intend to, I will, now."

"I don't wonder Abigail scolded," thought the wife. "Five years in a leaky house! I won't scold, I don't believe in it; but"

"Let us go down to the parlor now, and I will finish that book," remarked St. John. So rains and leaks were forgotten; and husband and wife spent the afternoon cozily while the storm raged outside.

St. John had to leave home on business, to be gone several days. Rose carried him to the depot, and hastened back. She thought she would hurry with her baking, and then drive over to her mother's and spend the afternoon.

The bread was quickly moulded, but on going to the wood box to replenish the fire, she found it empty. Out she went to the wood pile, but not a stick was to be found. St. John had gone off in such a hurry he had forgotten it.

"What shall I do?" she exclaimed,
"The bread cannot be wasted." Searching around she found a rail that looked easy to cut, and procuring a saw, she set to work; but it was not until half an hour's hard work, that she had enough to finish the baking.

"Believe I am too tired to think of going to mother's," and while she hesi-tated there came a tap at the door.

"I saw your husband go off this morning," remarked the neighbor who entered. "I suppose you would be lonely, and so thought I'd drop in and spend the afternoon."

An easy chair was offered, the old lady drew forth her knitting, and the more rapidly she knit, the more talka-tive she became. She inquired in regard to Abigail, and then spoke of the years she had spent there.

"It was so sad about his first wife, you know. She was one of the prettiest little bodies you oversaw, not grand and stately like yourself, but a wee mite, with a baby's face, white and pink. She was very frail. She used to say she wasn't sick, but she grew thinner and weaker, and so sad-looking. If she had not had such a generous, kind-hearted husband, I'd a-thought it more a trouble and worry on her mind than any physical ill. But the ways of Providence are often mysterious, and she died, though I don't believe any doctor could tell what ailed her, and Mr. St. John had the best he could get. They called it general debility. Then—Miss Abigail came. She kept a neat, tidy home for her brother, but then her disposition was so different from Mrs. St. John's.
We were all heartily glad when you came."

The young wife kept a pale face bent over her work, and was glad when her visitor rose to go. After her departure, Rose put aside all thoughts of her mother's, and getting her sun bonnet, strolled across the fields till she reached the cemetery; then she searched for the St. John's lot. A tall marble bore the names of his parents, and beside them was another nameless grave; high grass grown over all, and a half-drooping rosebush with a few fading blossoms.

"Poor little Amy!" Rose dropped be-the grave, but not to weep. The dead was at rest, and for herself, tears would not avail. Six weeks a bride, and her future already overcast.

"Mysteries of Providence!" she murmured, and for a moment her thoughts toward her husband filled her mind.
"I see it all—a weak, quiet person, she worked, with her inconveniences and annoyances, bore all, and said nothing, and at last her strength gave out. Abigail scolded and failed to mend the matter, and I—I must do. I always said all people have their failings, and of course my husband would have his;
but I really don't believe it. I felt St.
John was perfect; but unless he does differently, my life will be wretched.
Mine is not the nature to die, or scold and fret; but to live on and have things move in this slipshod manner is impossible."

"Who is that?" inquired St. John, as they sat at the tea-table the evening of his return.

"Oh," replied his wife, "it's only Mr.
Reese. I have hired him to stay for a week and cut wood." St. John looked up in surprise.

"You left me without any the other morning, and I had to cut for my baking. I am not used to that kind of work."

"I know I did, but I never once thought of it until after the cars had started. I did feel troubled to know what you would do."

"And," continued his wife, "I went to the village yesterday, saw the mason, told him the cistern needed repairing, and that you would expect him over as soon as you came back."

St. John gave a low whistle. It was something new, this taking liberties with his arrangements. His wife saw his face clouded.

"And no doubt you have engaged shingles for the roof." The tone was worse than a blow. For an instant her heart sank, but rallying quickly, she lightly replied, "No, I expect you to do that to-morrow; and mind," she added playfully, yet in a voice of determination, "if you don't I will. I must have a convenient house to work in.
You don't want me to scold, or die."

"Die!" he exclaimed, "who talks of dying?"

"Or what is worse," she continued, unheeding his interruption, "lose my love and esteem for you. You think these things are trifles, maybe, but consider they must go a good way toward making my life comfortable and happy."

Later, when the evening shadows were gathering, Rose joined her husband on the piazza. "I was over to the churchyard the other day, and it looked so neglected."

"Yes, I know, that's another of the things I've meant to do. Really, Rose, I believe you will think my life has been all meant to."

"We must get some one to re-sod the lot," she replied, "and I will plant some flowers."

There were tears in St. John's eyes, and he murmured, "Poor little Amy!" Rose came close to her husband. "I wish you would tell me about her." He glanced at her an instant, then went on talking of the dead, smiling as others had done. "Such a mystery!" But Rose saw the wife with disappointed hopes, and only a long life of worry and unnecessary toil before her, and she wondered not that the frail life died out. But it was not for her to tell him.

"Never too late to mend," St. John said when he came back from town.
I've engaged the carpenters, Rose, and the shingles will be here to-morrow.

The old habit was not broken up at once, yet St. John soon found that whenever he failed to have a necessary thing done, Rose hired it.

After some years Abigail came back on a visit. "How well you look, Rose," she remarked to her sister, "as young as when you first came."

"Happiness does not tend to make people grow old," replied Mrs. St.
John, "and my life has been very happy, with fewer cares than fall to the lot of most women."

"Do you know," continued Abigail, "that I dreaded to have you come, in fact, I pitied you? But you seem to have found no skeleton such as troubled me."

"Or rather," responded Rose, "I found and buried it."—Woman's World.

A Talk on The Mediterranean.

We sat down on the rocks and looked at the blue sea. "It is commonplace to be continually calling it blue," I said; "but it is inevitable, for no one can look at it without thinking of its color."

"It has seen so much," said Mrs.
Clary, in her earnest way; "it has carried the fleets of all antiquity. The Egyptians, the Greeks, the Phœnicians, the Carthaginians, and the Romans passed to and fro across it; the Apostles sailed over it; yet it looks as fresh and young and untraversed as though created yesterday."

"It certainly is the fairest water in the world," said Janet. "It must be the reflection of heaven."

"It is the proportion of salt," said the Professor, who had come back around the rock corner of the knobs. "A larger amount of salt is held in solution in the Mediterranean than in the Atlantic. It is a very deep body of water too, along this coast; at Nice it was found to be 3,000 feet deep only a few yards from the shore."

"These Mediterranean sailors are such cowards," said Inness. "At the first sign of a storm they all come scudding in. If the Phœnicians were like them, another boyhood illusion is gone! However, since they demolished William Tell, I have not much cared."

"The Mediterranean sailors of the past were probably, like those of the present, obliged to come scudding in," said Verney, "because the winds were so uncertain and variable. They use lateen-sails for the same reason, because they can be let down by the run; all the coasting xebecs and feluccas use them."

"Xebecs and feluccas—delicious words!" said Janet.

"I still maintain that they are cowards," resumed Inness. "The other day, when there was that capful of wind, you know, twenty of these delicious xebecs came hurrying into our little port, running into each other in their haste, and crowding together in the little pool like frightened chickens under a hen's wings. And they were not all delicious xebecs, either; there were some good-sized sea-going vessels among them, brig-rigged in front with the seven or eight small square sails, they string up one above the other, and a towel out to windward."—Miss Con-

The Origin of the Circus "Safety-Net." Among the throng of "artists" on that far-off March day there came a bright little fellow of 10 or 11 years, a rope-dancer and a favorite with the crowd.
Light and agile, he trips along the slender rope that stretches high above the arena. Right before the magistrate's box the boy poises in mid air, and even the thoughtful young director of the games looks up at the graceful motions of the boy. Hark! a warning shout goes up; now, another; the poor little rope-dancer, anxious to find favor in the eyes of the young noble, over-exerts himself, loses his balance on the dizzy rope and, toppling over, falls with a cruel thud to the ground and lies there before the great state box with a broken neck—dead. Marcus hears the shout, he sees the falling boy. Vaulting from his canopied box he leaps down into the arena, and so tender is he of others, Stoic though he be, that he has the poor rope-dancer's head in his lap even before the attendants can reach him. But no life remains in that bruised little body and, as Marcus tenderly resigns the dead gymnast to the less sympathetic slaves, he commands that ever after a bed shall be laid beneath the rope as a protection against such fatal falls. This became the rule; and, when next you see the safety-net spread beneath the rope-walkers, the trapeze performers, and those who perform similar "terrific" feats, remember that its use dates back to the humane order of Marcus, the boy magistrate, seventeen centuries ago.—St. Nicholas.

How to Pronounce "Boston."
The word must be pronounced with due reverence. The accented o of the first syllable is not the ordinary short o, but the same prolonged and pronounced with a marked reverence, as in the kindred word God.
These are the only two words in which the vowel has the peculiar sound; and a true Bostonian, who properly appreciates Boston culture, always takes pains to make the vowel in the name of his sacred city fill the month, as roundly as in that of his deity.—Independent.

The religion of the ancient Egyptians tice; I have brought you truth, I have committed no fraud against men, I have not tormented the widow, I have not lied in the tribunal, I have not others weep, I am pure."

Another man thus cries:

"I have given bread to him who was hungry, water to the thirsty, garments to the naked, and a home to the forsaken one."

Still another cries:

"I have protected the poor against the powerful, I have given hospitality to every one, I have been benevolent and devout, I have cherished my friends, and my hand has been open to him who had nothing. I have loved truth and

PROF. TYNDALL ON RAINBOWS.

The Cause of an Interesting Phenomenon Explained.

Lecturing at the Royal Institution on the above subject, Prof. Tyndall observed that the oldest historical record of a rainbow was found in the passage, "I do set My bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth." The sublime conception of the theologian preceded that desire for exact knowledge which was characteristic of the men of science. Whatever the ultimate cause of the rainbow might have been, the proximate cause was physical, and the aim of science had been to refer the rainbow to its physical principles. Progress toward that consummation had been very slow. Slowly the ancients mastered the laws of reflection; still more slowly were the laws of refraction dug from the quarries in which nature had imbedded them. He used that language because the laws were incorporated in nature before they were discovered by men. It was by the scientific genius of the Dutchman Snell that the world obtained in 1621 the first approximate explanation of the rainbow, his discovery having, however, been rendered possible by the observations and measurements of earlier philosophers. The great Descartes completed the solution. There was a certain form of emotion called intellectual pleasure excited by poetry, literature, nature, and art, but he doubted whether there was any pleasure of the intellect more pure and concentrated than that of the scientific man, looking at a difficulty which had challenged the human mind for ages, saw that difficulty melt before his eyes and become crystallized as a law of nature. Such pleasure must have been that of Descartes when he succeeded in uncovering the law which rules the most splendid meteor of our atmosphere. Since Descartes' time further light had been thrown on the matter by Newton, who found out the secret of the colors of the prisms; by Thomas Young, who, eighty-two years ago, was appointed Professor of the Royal Society, and who discovered the causes of the rainbow's supernumerary zones; by Sir George Airy, the late Astronomer Royal, who demonstrated the truth of Prof. Young's scientific principles by more accurate calculations; and lastly, by the late Prof. Miller, of Cambridge, and Dr. Gall, of Berlin. Prof. Tyndall described how, in the Alps, last year, and subsequently at Hindhead, in Hampshire, he had witnessed the rare phenomenon of a white rainbow, caused by reflected light on a misty atmosphere. By clever and amusing experiments the lecturer showed how this remarkable effect might be artificially produced, and how, when the moisture in the air was composite, as, for instance, where water spray was mixed with paraffin oil spray, a still more wonderful rainbow resulted, such as was to be seen at almost all times from a famous mountain in Western China, whither the people flocked from far and near to witness what they called "The glory of Buddha."—London Telegraph.

"So you want a position as clerk, do you?" asked the proprietor of the hotel of a dapper young applicant.

"Well," said the landlord, "we want a clerk, but—" and he hesitated.

"But what?" asked the young man.

"You seem to have no diamond breast-pin."

"Yes, I have. I've got a big one, but I thought I wouldn't wear it this morning."

"In that case," said the hotel proprietor, with a relieved look, "the position is at your service. I thought at first you had a diamond yet to purchase, and the way business is going on just now it might cramp me somewhat."—Philadelphia Call.

An Important Fact.

The voluntary testimony of thousands established beyond all doubt a fact of vital importance to the sick and debilitated, viz., that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is an absolute specific for remittent and intermittent fever, dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness, mental depression, sleeplessness, chronic diarrhoea, and all diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels. The unmedicated stimulants usually prescribed in these cases only aggravate the symptoms, instead of removing them. The Bitters, on the contrary, act as a corrective and invigorant, without producing the unpleasant and dangerous consequences of the old-school practice. The action is mild and soothing to the irritated stomach and bowels, promoting digestion and preventing flatulence, nausea, headache and all internal irregularities. A wineglassful before meals greatly assists digestion. The convalescent may use them with great benefit, as a means of restoring strength and cheerfulness.

HEREDITARY TAINTS.

Some Revelations on a Subject Which Concerns the Welfare of the Race and the Happiness of All.

[Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.]
To any one who has studied the laws of life, and especially those which relate to reproduction, an experience such as we are about to relate will come with special force and interest. The transmission of certain mental traits of prominence, and of certain physical traits of equal prominence, are facts which all acknowledge, but which none can understand. The father may be distinguished—the son, an imbecile; or the parent may be decrepit and unknown, and the child achieve the highest place possible to humanity. But through it all, there will be certain characteristics, which mark the individual as descending from certain ancestors. Too often, indeed, these characteristics are infirmities, and often of a physical nature.

These facts were strikingly brought out during a conversation, which a representative of this paper recently had with Mrs. Carrie D. T. Swift, who is the wife of one of our most prominent citizens. This lady related that she inherited from her parents certain tendencies, over which she had no control, and which were in the nature of blood difficulties, assuming the form of rheumatism. Her experience can best be described in her own words. To the writer she said:

"I felt the beginning of this hereditary taint many years ago, in vague pains, which seemed to come unaccountably and at un-called for times. They were annoying, exhausting, and interfered not only with my duties, but also totally destroyed my happiness. At first, they would be only transient, appearing for a day or two, and then disappearing; then again they would come in such violent forms, that it was impossible for me to lift a cup to my mouth. Afterwards, my feet and hands swelled so that it was impossible for me to draw on my shoes or gloves without the greatest effort. I realized what the difficulty was, but seemed powerless to avert it. I finally became so bad that I was confined to the house and to my bed most of the time. My joints pained me continuously and my feet swelled to enormous proportions. Knowing that I inherited this tendency, I had about abandoned hope, when I began the use of a remedy, which was recommended to me by a friend as being specially efficient in cases of a similar kind. To my great gratitude, I found that it relieved me, restored my appetite, and I am able to say that now I have gained forty pounds in weight, feel perfectly well, and am in the best possible condition, owing, wholly, to Warner's Safe Rheumatic Cure, which was the remedy I used."

"No one would ever suspect you had suffered so, Mrs. Swift, to see you know," remarked the reporter.

"That is what all my friends say. Only yesterday, an acquaintance of mine, whom I had not seen for some time, hesitated before speaking, and apologized by saying, 'Why, I really did not know you, you have changed so for the better since I last met you; how well you do look.'"

"Have you any objection to giving the name of the party who first mentioned this remedy to you?"

"Not the slightest. It was Mr. R. H. Furman, the photographer."

The newspaper man, after bidding Mrs. Swift good-by, repaired to the photographic rooms of Mr. Furman, when the following conversation ensued:

"Have you been a sufferer from rheumatism, Mr. Furman?"

"Well, I should think I had."

"For how many years?"

"Twelve or fifteen."

"Did you try to cure it?"

"Yes, I tried everything, and at last went to the Hot Springs of Arkansas, and nothing seemed to do me any good until I tried Warner's Safe Rheumatic Cure."

"And it cured you, did it?"

"Yes, completely."

"And you can cordially recommend it?"

"Yes, indeed, more cordially than anything I have ever known of. It is simply a wonderful medicine. I believe that two-thirds of all cases, both acute and chronic, could be cured as I was cured by the use of this remedy. In fact, I know a number of persons who have been in the worst possible condition, and are now completely well, wholly through its use."

The statements above made are from sources the authority of which cannot be questioned. They conclusively prove the value of the preparation named and show that even hereditary taints can be removed by the use of the proper means.

Hard to Believe.

It is hard to believe that a man was cured of a kidney disease after his body was swollen as big as a barrel and he had been given up as incurable and lay at death's door. Yet such a cure was accomplished by Kidney-Wort in the person of M. M. Demeroux, of Ionia, Mich., who says: "After thirteen of the best doctors in Detroit had given me up, I was cured by Kidney-Wort. I want every one to know what a boon it is."

THE SURGEON'S KNIFE

Required to Remove a Stone from the Bladder—This Dangerous Operation Might Have Been Avoided by the Timely Use of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy (of Rondout, N. Y.).

Mr. Simon Tietzell, formerly of Rondout, N. Y., had been treated for seven years by various physicians for what they called Stricture of the Urethra, without benefit. He finally consulted Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who found his trouble to be Urinary Calculi, or Stones in the Bladder. The Doctor at once removed the foreign bodies with the knife, and then gave his great kidney and liver medicine, FAVORITE REMEDY, to prevent their reformation. The entire treatment was eminently successful, and Mr. Tietzell's recovery was rapid and complete.

While FAVORITE REMEDY is a specific in all Kidney and Bladder diseases, it is equally valuable in cases of Bilious Disorders, Constipation of the Bowels, and all the class of ill apparently inseparable from the constitutions of women. Don't forget the name and address, Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. The Doctor would have it understood that, while he is engaged in the introduction of his medicine, FAVORITE REMEDY, he still continues the practice of his profession. He treats all diseases of a chronic character, and performs all the minor and capital operations of surgery.

Rescued from Death.

In 1877 I was admitted to the hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs. I got a bottle, when, to my surprise, I commenced to get well, and to-day I feel better than for three years."

Catarrh.—For fifteen years I have been greatly annoyed with this disgusting disease, which caused severe pain in my head, continual dropping into my throat, and unpleasant breath. Eminent Testimony.

N. Y. Witness, Aug. 15, 1880.

"I find that in addition to the pure spirits contained in their composition, they contain the extracts of hops and other well-known and highly-approved medicinal roots, leaves and tinctures in quantities sufficient to render the article what the makers claim it to be, to-wit, a medicinal preparation and not a beverage—unfit and unsafe to be used except as a medicine."

"From a careful analysis of their formula, —which was attested under oath—I find that in every wine-glassful of Hop Bitters, the active medicinal properties aside from the distilled spirits are equal to a full dose for an adult, which fact, in my opinion, subjects it to an internal-revenue tax as a medicinal bitter."

GREEN B. RAUM, U. S. Com. In Rev.

Hardened Liver.

"Five years ago I broke down with kidney and liver complaint and rheumatism. Since then I have been unable to be about at all.
My liver became hard like wood; my limbs were puffed up and filled with water. All the best physicians agreed that nothing could cure me. I resolved to try Hop Bitters; I have used seven bottles; the hardness has all gone from my liver, the swelling from my limbs, and it has worked a miracle in my case; otherwise I would have been now in my grave."

J. W. MOREY, Buffalo, Oct. 1, '81.

Poverty and Suffering.

"I was dragged down with debt, poverty and suffering for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring. I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor, I commenced using Hop Bitters, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have seen a sick day since, and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost. I know it."

For the Holland City News:

The Blessing of the Lord, it Maketh Rich.

Would it not be making rich, in the sense of "having something precious," if every woman—mothers, sisters and daughters should search the "sacred word" to see if there was not a charge left for them also. "Let them have dominion!" These words, from the Great Author of our being, must have a signification. All cannot be queens, in the sense in which Victoria bears the name, but "let them have dominion," surely has a signification, and it is our duty to search and see what it is. Certainly it does not require of woman to go beyond her proper sphere. But it is our duty to find out what that sphere is, and having found it, qualify ourselves to fill it. When woman occupies her legitimate position, what noble, sensible son of Adam will accuse her of arrogating aught to herself? Woman knows she is queen in the domestic circle, and if she wisely bears the sceptre there it will soon be perceptible. To fill properly her position in the home circle she will feel that He who gave her this position requires much more of her, than caring for the physical organization. The beasts of the field are not wanting in that kind of care. The subjects of her little domain are endowed with mental, moral, and spiritual natures. Great are her duties even in this little home circle. These dear ones of her own fireside, go forth generally to reflect her image. How great the love and wisdom of the creator in fitting her so nobly for this little realm. Does she always know her duty or her power? Vigilant and loving as is her nature, in but few isolated cases does she realize that the enemy has placed numerous snares, gins, and pitfalls to entrap these for whose safety she is responsible. How tenderly has she cared for her own little fold for years, but now, when necessity requires them to go beyond her threshold, she seems almost insensible of the danger that surrounds them, and abates her watchful care when most they need it. The great Creator has richly endowed woman with all the requisites for her sphere, but she must search His word to know "what the Lord will have her to do." There is something for her to care for even beyond the domestic circle.

A Lawyers Opinion Interest to All.

J. A. Tawney, Esq., a leading attorney of Winona, Minn., writes: "After using it for more than three years, I take great pleasure in stating that I regard Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, as the best remedy in the world for Cough and Colds. It has never failed to cure the most severe colds I have had, and invariably relieves the pain in the chest."

We have received the March number of Brainard's Musical World illustrated, and find the usual choice selection of musical reading, news, correspondence and able editorials. The portraits of eminent musicians, and other illustrations, are excellent, while the songs and piano music are unusually fresh and pleasing. "We Were Comrades Together in the Days of the War," is a song that will attract and delight old soldiers and their families. Don't fail to get a copy of this excellent magazine. Price, 15 cents per copy; or, $1.50 per year. S. BRAINARD'S SONS, 136 State street, Chicago, Ill.

The famous statue to be erected in New York harbor would be very quickly in place if all contributions to it were as munificent as that of the Travelers Insurance Company, no less than $1,700 given outright, besides paying for the distribution of a special press addition of a large picture of the statue to the entire press of the United States. We have received a copy of it, and it is worthy the character of the company, which is the highest praise that could be given.

Vegetable Sicilian

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfillment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.
