Gay film series delayed by administration

Hope students blocked from file-sharing program

Pigs hit the streets

Downtown filled with colorful sculptures.

Emmy Moellman and Sarah Howard

Arts Editor and Staff Reporter

Matt Cook

A film series about gay and lesbian issues was originally planned for this fall, but it was delayed by a decision from Provost Jack Nyenhuis and his dean's council. The series, called the Gay/Lesbian Film Series, was to run from September 12 to October 19, and included 5 films on topics ranging from growing up gay, to techniques used to "convert" gays and lesbians, to gay issues in the classroom.

Sponsors of the series included the Cultural Affairs Committee, Van Wylen Library, GLOBE, Women's Issues Organization, Hope Democrats, Sexual Harassment Policy Advocates, and the women's studies, psychology, sociology, religion, and theater departments. It was coordinated by Jane Dickie, professor of psychology and director of women's studies.

After a series of conversations in August with the dean's council and a group of faculty and students assembled by Nyenhuis, Dickie was told to delay the films.

"Our concern regarding the series initially planned for this fall was, by its approach it was going to stir up the divisions of the past and would not achieve what we understand to be the purpose of the series: to create understanding," Nyenhuis said.

The original recommendation from the dean's council was that the series be delayed for an entire year, but after some protest from some senior students, the goal is to be able to show the films during the spring semester.

"more FILMS on 3"

Hope students blocked from Napster

They are among 300,000 kicked off by Metallica.

Matt Cook

A film series about gay and lesbian issues was originally planned for this fall, but it was delayed by a decision from Provost Jack Nyenhuis and his dean's council. The series, called the Gay/Lesbian Film Series, was to run from September 12 to October 19, and included 5 films on topics ranging from growing up gay, to techniques used to "convert" gays and lesbians, to gay issues in the classroom.

Sponsors of the series included the Cultural Affairs Committee, Van Wylen Library, GLOBE, Women's Issues Organization, Hope Democrats, Sexual Harassment Policy Advocates, and the women's studies, psychology, sociology, religion, and theater departments. It was coordinated by Jane Dickie, professor of psychology and director of women's studies.

After a series of conversations in August with the dean's council and a group of faculty and students assembled by Nyenhuis, Dickie was told to delay the films.

"Our concern regarding the series initially planned for this fall was, by its approach it was going to stir up the divisions of the past and would not achieve what we understand to be the purpose of the series: to create understanding," Nyenhuis said.

The original recommendation from the dean's council was that the series be delayed for an entire year, but after some protest from some senior students, the goal is to be able to show the films during the spring semester.

"more FILMS on 3"

Hope students blocked from Napster

They are among 300,000 kicked off by Metallica.

Matt Cook

A film series about gay and lesbian issues was originally planned for this fall, but it was delayed by a decision from Provost Jack Nyenhuis and his dean's council. The series, called the Gay/Lesbian Film Series, was to run from September 12 to October 19, and included 5 films on topics ranging from growing up gay, to techniques used to "convert" gays and lesbians, to gay issues in the classroom.

Sponsors of the series included the Cultural Affairs Committee, Van Wylen Library, GLOBE, Women's Issues Organization, Hope Democrats, Sexual Harassment Policy Advocates, and the women's studies, psychology, sociology, religion, and theater departments. It was coordinated by Jane Dickie, professor of psychology and director of women's studies.

After a series of conversations in August with the dean's council and a group of faculty and students assembled by Nyenhuis, Dickie was told to delay the films.

"Our concern regarding the series initially planned for this fall was, by its approach it was going to stir up the divisions of the past and would not achieve what we understand to be the purpose of the series: to create understanding," Nyenhuis said.

The original recommendation from the dean's council was that the series be delayed for an entire year, but after some protest from some senior students, the goal is to be able to show the films during the spring semester.

"more FILMS on 3"
Hope is "Best Buy"

Fiske guide ranks Hope at top in value

Andrew Lotz
Eerdmans Cover

Hope College is among one of the 40 private and public colleges and universities named as a "Best Buy," by the "Fiske Guide to Colleges 2001."

Hope was selected from a field of over 300 schools in both the United States and Canada. The guide picked only two colleges from Michigan as "Best Buys." The other is Calvin College.

Colleges with the "Best Buy" designation are described by the guide as being among "the best and most interesting institutions in the nation." According to the Jim Bekkerking, vice president for admissions, the "Best Buy" designation implies that the college is a good value for students.

"The value is a combination of factors," Bekkerking said. "As good customers, families take into account the value of experiences and the rewards for the student, and measure that against the cost of sending the student to the school."

The guide selects schools for the category that offer the best education at a modest price.

For each selection, the guide writes an essay covering the academic scene, the make-up of the campus and student body, and a host of other factors like financial aid, housing, food, social life and extra-curricular activities.

Each college's statistics like enrollment numbers and relative cost are also printed.

"There is a cost-benefit ratio that every family has to take into account," Bekkerking said. "Hope has results that speak for themselves in that regard. That doesn't mean that cost isn't a burden, but when we look at academic strength, Christian character, fine facilities and great staff, the formula works well."

"The Fiske Guide to Colleges," published annually and edited by Edward B. Fiske, has been published for almost 20 years.

Hope has been featured in the book regularly, and this is the third time that it has been named a "Best Buy."

The Fiske guide is not the only publication that ranks Hope well among colleges and universities. Hope is profiled in the Kaplan/Newsweek College Catalog, and is a recommended choice for schools that offer a high level of individual academic attention from faculty and staff.

Hope is also included in "The Best College for You," a guide to 1500 schools published by Time and the Princeton Review, as one of the 500 top choices.

While the guides all give potential students a number of reasons to consider Hope, the decision to attend Hope must come from the students.

"From our perspective of working with students, it's a combination of factors and a different blend for each individual," Bekkerking said. "One common theme is the quality of the academic program. Beyond that is a focus on the good quality of life and relationships at Hope."

"I consider this to be one of the biggest blessings in my life," Schock said. "They all come with people believing in Christian Perspective on Nonhuman Creatures and the Endangered Species Act."

"The Fiske Guide to Colleges" is a permanent presence on this campus, Schock said. "As others will lead to capabilities and hard work by him as well as others will lead to capabilities that the department does not have now.

The studio is currently wired to broadcast and seen by a large audience of viewers.

The public is invited to the reception. Admission is free.
Megan Krigbaum

Barry Bandstra, a Hope professor of religion had no comprehension of how famous his website, "Reading the Old Testament", had become. One day he went into Britannica.com, typed in "Old Testament", under the web's "best search", and was given his own site with a four-star, superior rating.

"No one notified me," Bandstra said.

Bandstra's website has also received a commendation from Newsweek.com, and has been acknowledged by people around the world. He recently received a letter from a teacher in the Philippines that praised his site. "Reading the Old Testament", which can be accessed through www.hope.edu/bandstra is similar to a textbook and CD-ROM that Bandstra wrote, also called "Reading the Old Testament.

According to Bandstra, it provides a new approach to making resources available. Intended for college freshmen and sophomores, it contains a complete Bible which enables students to simply click on a reference and go straight to the Bible, eliminating the step of having to search through a bound Bible to find referenced passages.

Bandstra's website also supplies quizzes so that students can test themselves to see if they are learning key ideas. It includes full color graphics and links to the history of western art, including that of Michelangelo and Rembrandt-something the book cannot offer. Bandstra feels that art gives another individual's perspective on the words of the Bible.

"It's hard to judge the quality of many sites," Bandstra said.

Bandstra says that his website is one among many websites and books written by Hope College professors that are well received.

"There is a scholarship combined with teaching here that is unparalleled," Bandstra said.

Bandstra's next Internet project is a Hebrew tutorial which he plans to use to teach in his classes here.

"A Conceivable Necessity: The Gay/Lesbian Film Series," in which she discussed how she felt the series fits the goals and values of Hope College. "The web can confuse the issue," Hoogewind said. "Sometimes it gets busy and we suspect a lot of that is due to us."

The goal is to make sure students are educated and aware of copyright laws.

According to Nyenhuis, the reason for the delay is to allow for further planning. This includes expanding the planning group.

"We want to ensure that the discussion is structured so that a diversity of viewpoints are presented for the purpose of education," Nyenhuis said.

He was also wary of straying into a controversy beyond Hope College.

"We wanted additional time to plan a strategy that would enable us to have a discussion without an inflaming of the issue in the local press," Nyenhuis said.

In response to concerns raised by the administration about the Gay Lesbian Film Series, Jane Dickie wrote a statement in August called "Reading the Old Testament" had a four-star, superior rating. "It's nice for people who can't afford to buy the music to get it," Bandstra said.

"We believe it is entirely appropriate to have the discussion of human sexuality, especially homosexuality, as part of the education at Hope," Nyenhuis said.

These classes included the films from the series on their syllabi for the fall semester will still view the films privately in their classrooms.

"There is a scholarship combined with teaching here that is unparalleled," Bandstra said.

Bandstra's next Internet project is a Hebrew tutorial which he plans to use to teach in his classes here.

"A Conceivable Necessity: The Gay/Lesbian Film Series," in which she discussed how she felt the series fits the goals and values of Hope College. "The web can confuse the issue," Hoogewind said. "Sometimes it gets busy and we suspect a lot of that is due to us."

The goal is to make sure students are educated and aware of copyright laws.

According to Nyenhuis, the reason for the delay is to allow for further planning. This includes expanding the planning group.

"We want to ensure that the discussion is structured so that a diversity of viewpoints are presented for the purpose of education," Nyenhuis said.

He was also wary of straying into a controversy beyond Hope College.

"We wanted additional time to plan a strategy that would enable us to have a discussion without an inflaming of the issue in the local press," Nyenhuis said.

In response to concerns raised by the administration about the Gay Lesbian Film Series, Jane Dickie wrote a statement in August called "Reading the Old Testament" had a four-star, superior rating. "It's nice for people who can't afford to buy the music to get it," Bandstra said.

"We believe it is entirely appropriate to have the discussion of human sexuality, especially homosexuality, as part of the education at Hope," Nyenhuis said.

These classes included the films from the series on their syllabi for the fall semester will still view the films privately in their classrooms.

"There is a scholarship combined with teaching here that is unparalleled," Bandstra said.

Bandstra's next Internet project is a Hebrew tutorial which he plans to use to teach in his classes here.

"A Conceivable Necessity: The Gay/Lesbian Film Series," in which she discussed how she felt the series fits the goals and values of Hope College. "The web can confuse the issue," Hoogewind said. "Sometimes it gets busy and we suspect a lot of that is due to us."

The goal is to make sure students are educated and aware of copyright laws.
When will Hope be ready?

Timing is everything. From football games to getting three papers done in a weekend, timing is everything. This adage wisdom was referred to once more this month when Hope decided to postpone the Gay/Lesbian Film series. Eleven campus groups and academic departments were told that the timing simply wasn’t right for them to conduct their series. The film series was simply the wrong thing at the wrong time, as far as the leaders of the college are concerned. The official reasoning is that the administration does not want to stir up division from the past right now, and there is no more than a hint of controversy on Hope’s radar screen.

But many students may now be asking about the financial situation at Hope College. Their concerns are valid, but all point to the same over-arching issue: Hope College is having trouble with consistency in its financial strategy. Hope instance, one alert reader told me of the elaborate display of fireworks after the football game, which caused him concern after hearing about copy charges for class handouts and magazine subscriptions. He was concerned that the college spent a great deal of money producing colored lights in the sky over the Municipal Stadium, yet could not spring $35 dollars to provide an entire class of students with access to an important resource. Frankly, I too am disturbed by this, and other instances of wasted financial priorities at Hope.

In the past years, I have observed that the college was able to provide a little capital to expand by a faculty member’s office and put money on the card, bring to their laundry. Talk about an inefficient project and program. Inefficient projects and programs should come before anything else. Take the process of doubling as public safety, and the workers in the business office teaching modern dance. Hope will be able to solve its staffing concerns and further advancing the liberal arts perspective for all who work at Hope.

These suggestions should work well for the college, and they fit the already present attitude that the college is a vehicle designed for making money. By promoting the idea that the college is a place for students to make money, or the idea that educational opportunities for students should come before fireworks displays after football games, the college is detracting from its money-making capabilities. It is my wish that the administration of Hope College finally follow a bit of my sound advice, and truly focus the college on what is most important to us all: the bottom line.

More Financial Advice

Recently, more than a few students have come to me with concerns about the financial situation at Hope College. Their concerns are valid, but all point to the same over-arching issue: Hope College is having trouble with consistency in its financial strategy. Hope instance, one alert reader told me of the elaborate display of fireworks after the football game, which caused him concern after hearing about copy charges for class handouts and magazine subscriptions. He was concerned that the college spent a great deal of money producing colored lights in the sky over the Municipal Stadium, yet could not spring $35 dollars to provide an entire class of students with access to an important resource. Frankly, I too am disturbed by this, and other instances of wasted financial priorities at Hope.

In the past years, I have observed that the college was able to provide a little capital to expand by a faculty member’s office and put money on the card, bring to their laundry. Talk about an inefficient project and program. Inefficient projects and programs should come before fireworks displays after football games, the college is detracting from its money-making capabilities. It is my wish that the administration of Hope College finally follow a bit of my sound advice, and truly focus the college on what is most important to us all: the bottom line.

Letters to the Editor Guidelines

Letters chosen on a first come first serve basis, or a representative sample is taken

Letters chosen on a first come first serve basis, or a representative sample is taken
Why people hurt themselves to deal with emotional distress.

Jane Bast
Herald Tribune

Amy, a Hope College sophomore, first started hurting herself five years ago. Her mom was dying of cancer, a situation that left Amy feeling powerless. In order to deal with the pain, she made small cuts with a razor blade on her wrists, stomach and thighs.

“I just felt like a lot of things were out of my control,” said Amy. “[Cutting] was something I could control.”

It’s called cutting behavior, but many students know it by a harsher name, self-mutilation. Cutting behavior has been mistakenly linked to suicide, but the two are not the same.

“Cutting behavior is sometimes termed parasuicide, with the intent not being death, but the intent being pain,” said Director of the Counseling Center Kristen Gray. “And with the physical pain giving relief to emotional distress.”

The behavior has gained recent national attention after several major news magazines, including Newsweek, featured cover stories on the topic.

“It’s become more visible in the last ten years,” Gray said. “But I don’t think it’s new.”

The behavior may manifest itself in many ways, not just in razor cuts. A person suffering from cutting behavior may choose to burn themselves with cigarettes, make deep scratches, hit their forearms against a sharp table edge, or repeatedly smash a hand against the wall.

“People do different behaviors based on what the person discovers works best for them,” Gray said. “It’s highly individualized.”

And it can become addictive.

“One of the ways that people look at cutting behavior is that it gives a sense of relief because cutting releases adrenaline,” Gray said. “It becomes a pure addiction and a very self-reinforcing habit. Instead of identifying the emotions and how [a person] can help to change that, [the person] just does more cutting.”

Although the behavior isn’t intentionally suicidal, occasionally a person will cut themselves too deeply. Then the behavior becomes a medical threat. Also, self-inflicted injuries can lead to permanent scarring.

“Scarring is a risk people don’t take seriously at this point in their lives,” Gray said.

But what leads a person to cut?

“It’s a sense of being overwhelmed by emotional pain and not feeling as though there are outlets and options to deal with it,” Gray said. “A lot of times I hear, ‘I want the other pain to go away,’ and that’s the emotional pain. People are overwhelmed and don’t know where to turn.”

Gray is quick to mention that although the behavior is not technically suicidal, the Counseling Center does not take it lightly.

“Some one who engages in this behavior is in very serious pain,” Gray said. “It’s a very serious issue.”

Besides physical harm, cutting behavior causes untold social damage. By choosing to cut, a person blocks him or herself away from friends and family in order to avoid questions about scars.

“I think a risk is social alienation,” Gray said. “If you have multiple cigarette burns, if your arms are all cut up, people are going to say, ‘That’s not right.’”

Although a person who cuts may feel there are no other alternatives to deal with pain, Gray insists this is not the case.

“There are options, lots of options for somebody dealing with this,” Gray said. “But you have to talk about it. The next time you have an urge to cut, find something else to do.”

Gray also stresses the importance of reconnecting with friends and family when trying to beat the urge to cut.

“Call people, say you want to go to a movie,” Gray said. “Reconnect and don’t let yourself be alone. Take a passion and connect it with a group or activity on campus.”

Also, a student suffering from cutting behavior should spend time with a counselor or therapist.

“Find someone you trust and have that person come to a counseling session with you,” Gray said. “Seek some kind of counseling. Some kind of help that will help.”

Students who wish to use Hope counseling services simply need to make a phone call.

“I remember the sting of the blade as it slowly made its way up my arm and the little drops of blood that surfaced in its wake. And I remember the burn of the cigarette against the skin of my arm. Looking at my belly and thighs, I can no longer see the traces of empty nights, but I know they were there.”

—A journal entry from Amy, a Hope College sophomore

Alternatives to self-injury:

- Stay in a public place
- Call your counselor
- Do relaxation exercises
- Go for a walk
- Call a friend
- Surround yourself with safe and supportive people
- Write in a journal
- Watch a funny movie
- Go for a drive
- Listen to music
- Read a good book
- Clean a closet, a dresser, the kitchen
- RESEARCH COMPILED BY ANGELA ZEMLA

Editor’s note: Amy’s name has been changed to protect her anonymity.
For the next two weeks, I’ll be sneaking in every bit of snow-etched and line-streaked TV that I can. I love the Olympics.

When I was in eighth grade woodshop, I made a clock in the form of the Olympic rings, with red, green, yellow, blue, black and white paint. I loved the Olympics. My love is for the champion’s heart. It comes in no place like it comes in the Olympics.

The idea of the champion’s heart is a romantic one, but it has pulled me to the best places in my life.

When I was in eighth grade, I wanted to be a gymnast. I thought I wanted my ticket to the Olympics until ninth grade, when I got a little more practical. My goal was reduced a bit. My heart was a romantic one, but it carried me through life.

It was heavily fortified by something I called the dream castle I had built deep within me. It was still there. It was still a part of me, even when I watched my classmates laugh and cheer and act as if they were on their way to the olympics. I sat on them all: wood benches, metal benches, folding chairs.

The next year, it was time to tackle the biggest beast of all: varsity tryouts. I did as many timed push ups and sit ups as I could without seriously damaging my body; I crumpled fortress inside of me. I overdid it and lost weight, but I continued to show up to the bench. I continued to show up to the bench to run and get a pair of shoes or a medal, about the size of a half dollar, engraved with “Digging Deep” on the back. This was my coach’s award and it was all worth it.

I will sit for the next two weeks on my blue sofa and gaze at the small television on the its old wooden stand in between tests and papers and homework assignments for the next two weeks. And I will pretend I am the swimmer, the runner, the gymnast reaching for destiny’s end and beyond. And I will believe one again in the champion’s heart. It is this heart, that I have borrowed off of them, that has carried me through life.

Despite the excitement over the 2000 Olympics, the Australians are not getting into it like the Americans did for the ’96 games in Atlanta. “I know very few Australians who are actually going to watch the Olympics,” Seymour said. “Most are trying to stay as far away from Sydney as possible. They think the American students are nuts for attempting to go.”
Students upset with local TV channel options

Andrew Kelczek
Staff Reporter

Hope's cable access is often complained about, but there is not much that students can do about it. The cable available at Hope is limited by the cable available in Holland.

AT&T is the local cable provider. AT&T is the number one provider of Cable Television in Holland. They don't listen to what the students here have to say that would be beneficial to the students. Carl Bussema, a student, is an honorary member of the Alliance for Better Cable.

"My goal is to convince AT&T, in this case, is the cable company, that if they aren't going to upgrade their system, we are doing here at Hope," said Nyenhuis.

At the second officer to the President, Nyenhuis is an honorary member of the Alliance for Better Cable. NYenhuis managed the administrative staff of Hope College as the Dean of Humanities.

"The landscape has changed dramatically," Nyenhuis said, referring to the Van Raalte building, which burnt down in 1980, and the construction of the Dow Center along with many other new buildings on Hope's campus.

Nyenhuis has also seen changes in the student body between 1975 and 2000.

"The students express their faith more overtly than they did 25 years ago [and] the student body is quite a bit more diverse [in terms of minors]," Nyenhuis said.

But the students have changed in more ways than these.

"A higher percent of students are from Michigan. Students today seem to be more involved in community service," said Nyenhuis.

Nyenhuis is an honorary member of the mortar board. He also helped overhaul the general education curriculum that was fully implemented in 1998.

The policy as it stands now may be too restrictive to allow for better cable in Holland, according to their website. However, changes are in the works.

Recently the Holland cable board and AT&T Cable reached an agreement that would allow AT&T to upgrade their system.

"It would allow AT&T to upgrade the fiber. Once they're able to upgrade that, they'll be able to provide more channels and high speed internet connections," Bussema said.

The change will not be a quick one, however. This kind of upgrade is probably going to take 18 months to 2 years.

Charlie White (02), who lives off campus, and his roommates were so disappointed with local cable programming, they purchased a satellite dish. White pays $32 a month for 130 channels, of which 30 of which are music.

"I think here they should have ODyssey Channel, Cartoon Network and the Discovery Channel," Nyenhuis said. "A lot of these channels could be useful resources for classes, obviously not Cartoon Network," Nyenhuis said.

Ben Wing (01) is also surprised by their channel selection and the lack of cable Internet service in the area.

"I say that they should have Comedy Central," Wing said. "But I don't really watch it much, but that it should be a default. It just feels like everywhere else I've been, I've got it as your basic cable channel."

Wing thinks the college and AT&T should explore the option of providing cottages with cable Internet as an option, especially since some cottages already have coaxial cable running into them.

Students upset with local TV channel options

Danielle Koski
Staff Reporter

In 1975 the Vietnam war was ongoing. Gerald R. Ford was President of the United States. Microsoft was set up by Paul Allen and Bill Gates, and Jacob E. Nyenhuis was the administrative staff of Hope College as the Dean of Humanities.

Today Nyenhuis is the Provost of the college, and has been for 16 years. This year he is celebrating his 25th year on Hope College's Administrative Board.

Nyenhuis has been in involved politics since Middle School.

"I chose to spend my summer working towards a lifelong goal preparing for a future in politics. I was a poor business decision," Nyenhuis said. He along with the mayor of Portage, Mich. "I have been involved in politics since Middle School."

The Provost, who manages the development of academics and is the second officer to the President, also handles the interests of the faculty and the staff of Hope College.

"I really love the faculty," Nyenhuis said. "The excellence of the faculty continues to grow both in teaching and scholarly reputation.

According to Nyenhuis, half the faculty are women and nearly 40% of the overall faculty are women today. Fourteen women are full professors and 28 are Associate Professors.

"There is a much broader program of scholarship [then 25 years ago], and the faculty have brought in a great deal of external support," Nyenhuis said.

In 1975 Hope College had only around 2,000 students. Today it has over 3,000.

"The landscape has changed dramatically," Nyenhuis said, referring to the Van Raalte building, which burnt down in 1980, and the construction of the Dow Center along with many other new buildings on Hope's campus.

Nyenhuis has also seen changes in the student body between 1975 and 2000.

"The students express their faith more overtly than they did 25 years ago [and] the student body is quite a bit more diverse [in terms of minors]," Nyenhuis said.

But the students have changed in more ways than these.

"A higher percent of students are from Michigan. Students today seem to be more involved in community service," said Nyenhuis.

Nyenhuis is an honorary member of the mortar board. He also helped overhaul the general education curriculum that was fully implemented in 1998.

Nyenhuis also handles the interests of the faculty and the staff of Hope College.

"I really love the faculty," Nyenhuis said. "(The excellence of the faculty continues to grow both in teaching and scholarly reputation.

According to Nyenhuis, half the faculty are women and nearly 40% of the overall faculty are women today. Fourteen women are full professors and 28 are Associate Professors.

"There is a much broader program of scholarship [then 25 years ago], and the faculty have brought in a great deal of external support," Nyenhuis said.

In 1975 Hope College had only around 2,000 students. Today it has over 3,000.

"The landscape has changed dramatically," Nyenhuis said, referring to the Van Raalte building, which burnt down in 1980, and the construction of the Dow Center along with many other new buildings on Hope's campus.

Nyenhuis has also seen changes in the student body between 1975 and 2000.

"The students express their faith more overtly than they did 25 years ago [and] the student body is quite a bit more diverse [in terms of minors]," Nyenhuis said.

But the students have changed in more ways than these.

"A higher percent of students are from Michigan. Students today seem to be more involved in community service," said Nyenhuis.

Nyenhuis is an honorary member of the mortar board. He also helped overhaul the general education curriculum that was fully implemented in 1998.

"I care passionately about what we are doing here at Hope," said Nyenhuis. "It is something rare we are trying to do here. That is what excites me and has for 25 years."
The Anchor
September 13, 200

What's Up?
Nightlife:

The Groove: Thurs.: College night. 2510 Burton SE. 926-7970.

Howlin’ Moon Saloon: Contemporary country night with line dancing. Thurs.–Sat.: Live music. 141 28th St. SE, Grand Rapids. 956-9790.

Soul Centre Cafe: Sat. gathering next to CenterPoint Church. Snacks, coffee, and Christian-themed live music. $2 suggested donation. 2055 28th St., Grand Rapids. 248-8107.

Arts at Hope:
9-15-16: Hitchcock Film Festival at the Knickerbocker Theatre. "Verigo", "Dial M for Murder", and "North by Northwest".

Concerts:
9-14-00: REO Speedwagon and Styx. Alleghan County Fair.
9-19: Zap Mama: Calvin College.

Jazz night at the Klot, every Thursday: 1:30–9:30.

Staff
Writer
VWS sure to bring smiles and tears
ERS
Series continues to follow its twenty years later the Visiting Writers Series. According to Heather Sellers, professor of English, southern writers are a traditional publication of Hope College. The literary magazine that has been a traditional publication of Hope College’s English department for years is about to undergo some major changes that editor Noah Tucker hopes will open the magazine to a wider range of students on the campus. Opus has had big plans in store for the new school year. These plans will make Opus the best it has ever been.

The literary magazine that has been a traditional publication of Hope College’s English department for years is about to undergo some major changes that editor Noah Tucker hopes will open the magazine to a wider range of students on the campus. Opus this year include putting out three smaller, more selective publications for the year, periodic open mic readings on campus, and a more diverse magazine.

Another change last year’s Opus is that a selection staff for the poetry and literature will be chosen by the editor through an application process. Last year, the selection staff was completely inclusive. Opus is now accepting applications for its selection staff. Tucker invites and encourages all and any students who have an interest in poetry or literature to apply. Tucker hopes to choose his staff by the end of the month.

For publication of Opus, the selection staff reads and discusses each piece of work submitted, and then votes on the pieces which they feel best fit the latest edition of Opus. "If there is a discrepancy as to which pieces will be chosen among the staff for Opus, the staff will come together and discuss each piece and then vote again," said Tucker. "I believe this process is fair and ethical." Editor-in-chief: Noah Tucker, a history and English major with a minor in psychology, will be choosing the selection staff for the year, periodic open mic readings on campus, and a more diverse magazine.

Another change from last year’s Opus is that a selection staff for the poetry and literature will be chosen by the editor through an application process. Last year, the selection staff was completely inclusive. Opus is now accepting applications for its selection staff. Tucker invites and encourages all and any students who have an interest in poetry or literature to apply. Tucker hopes to choose his staff by the end of the month.

For publication of Opus, the selection staff reads and discusses each piece of work submitted, and then votes on the pieces which they feel best fit the latest edition of Opus. "If there is a discrepancy as to which pieces will be chosen among the staff for Opus, the staff will come together and discuss each piece and then vote again," said Tucker. "I believe this process is fair and ethical." Editor-in-chief: Noah Tucker, a history and English major with a minor in psychology, will be choosing the selection staff for the year, periodic open mic readings on campus, and a more diverse magazine.

The literary magazine that has been a traditional publication of Hope College’s English department for years is about to undergo some major changes that editor Noah Tucker hopes will open the magazine to a wider range of students on the campus. Opus has been a traditional publication of Hope College. The literary magazine that has been a traditional publication of Hope College’s English department for years is about to undergo some major changes that editor Noah Tucker hopes will open the magazine to a wider range of students on the campus. Opus has had big plans in store for the new school year. These plans will make Opus the best it has ever been.

The literary magazine that has been a traditional publication of Hope College’s English department for years is about to undergo some major changes that editor Noah Tucker hopes will open the magazine to a wider range of students on the campus. Opus has had big plans in store for the new school year. These plans will make Opus the best it has ever been.

The literary magazine that has been a traditional publication of Hope College’s English department for years is about to undergo some major changes that editor Noah Tucker hopes will open the magazine to a wider range of students on the campus. Opus has had big plans in store for the new school year. These plans will make Opus the best it has ever been.

The literary magazine that has been a traditional publication of Hope College’s English department for years is about to undergo some major changes that editor Noah Tucker hopes will open the magazine to a wider range of students on the campus. Opus has had big plans in store for the new school year. These plans will make Opus the best it has ever been.

The literary magazine that has been a traditional publication of Hope College’s English department for years is about to undergo some major changes that editor Noah Tucker hopes will open the magazine to a wider range of students on the campus. Opus has had big plans in store for the new school year. These plans will make Opus the best it has ever been.

The literary magazine that has been a traditional publication of Hope College’s English department for years is about to undergo some major changes that editor Noah Tucker hopes will open the magazine to a wider range of students on the campus. Opus has had big plans in store for the new school year. These plans will make Opus the best it has ever been.

The literary magazine that has been a traditional publication of Hope College’s English department for years is about to undergo some major changes that editor Noah Tucker hopes will open the magazine to a wider range of students on the campus. Opus has had big plans in store for the new school year. These plans will make Opus the best it has ever been.

The literary magazine that has been a traditional publication of Hope College’s English department for years is about to undergo some major changes that editor Noah Tucker hopes will open the magazine to a wider range of students on the campus. Opus has had big plans in store for the new school year. These plans will make Opus the best it has ever been.
Want the real scoop? Frisbee golf scores, Opus, and WTHS all on one website: http://www.knowwhops.org

M-Okay, so I just couldn’t laugh at the red hair equals poisoned lips joke. But you didn’t laugh at my telemarketing commercial, so we’re even. -A Stoner: I can’t wait to shake my hair gel. It works so well for you, M-fam.

kt, calster, pita, loudog, joel and ariciant: we can’t wait to shake my hair gel. It works so well for you, M-fam.

happy birthday john tammi. you look a day over thirty-five.

ten bucks? -j.

are freshmen, don’t i owe you the best neighbors, even if you night.

kt, calster, pita, loudog, joel and ariciant:

my telemarketing commercial, lips joke. But you didn’t laugh at his loss by coming to the show. Also, check out their website at http://vanderprov.fun.to Randi: You’re doing great, just hang in there and shoot for actually coming to Sunday night meeting.

Robert: Remember the good old days when spotlight used to be finished by 27? Ahhh. Nostalgia. -Andrew

Dangermouse- Your mole sidekick is really a custard-stealing spy.

Want your own classified? Students and faculty can just e-mail the text to the Anchor at anchor@hope.edu, or drop a copy off at the office.

Kent: From hundreds of posters in-stock or thousands available to order.

Looking for a place to worship?

Then come to BreakAway!

BreakAway is a non-traditional worship celebration featuring a praise band, drama, and practical teaching from the Bible. It’s held every Sunday at 10:45 a.m. We don’t think you’ll come just once!

Community Reformed Church
10376 Felch Street, Holland
Located on 104th between James and Riley, for more information, call 772-4907

Average lifetime of a poster—1 semester
Average lifetime of a poster mounted on foam core and laminated—your college career.

Special Introductory Offer
Laminating & Mounting of any poster print

BUY ONE, GET ONE FREE*

Bring your own print or photo or choose from hundreds of posters in-stock or thousands available to order.

*Free product of equal or lesser value. Offer ends September 30th. Must present student I.D. or faculty I.D.

The New Voice of Hope College
91 Douglas Avenue Holland, MI 49424
616-396-1800

Ultimate Fitness
Bring in this ad and receive 10% off a 3 month student membership (regularly $117)

Julie: Remember the good old days when spotlight used to be finished by 27? Ahhh. Nostalgia. -Andrew

Dangermouse- Your mole sidekick is really a custard-stealing spy.

Want your own classified? Students and faculty can just e-mail the text to the Anchor at anchor@hope.edu, or drop a copy off at the office.

The Meaning of Life: Won tons. Lots and lots of won tons.

Want your own classified? Students and faculty can just e-mail the text to the Anchor at anchor@hope.edu, or drop a copy off at the office.

The Meaning of Life: Won tons. Lots and lots of won tons.

Angela Ficken
Juniior, Northemmi University

Win $25,000 for grad school from KAPLAN

—just like I did!

Enter the “Kaplan gets you in... and pays your way” sweepstakes!

Who wins?
One lucky person will win $25,000 toward the first year of law, business, graduate or medical school.

How do I enter?
Complete an official entry form online at www.kaptest.com, at your local Kaplan center, or by mailing to: “Kaplan gets you in and pays your way” Sweepstakes. P.O. Box 9107, Medford, NY 11763. The contest runs from August 15 to October 31, 2000.

When is the drawing?
The winning name will be drawn on January 19, 2001. The winner will be notified by mail immediately following the drawing.

Test Prep, Admissions and Guidance. For life.

Angela Ficken
Junior, Northwestern University

Looking for a place to worship?

Then come to BreakAway!

BreakAway is a non-traditional worship celebration featuring a praise band, drama, and practical teaching from the Bible. It’s held every Sunday at 10:45 a.m. We don’t think you’ll come just once!

Community Reformed Church
10376 Felch Street, Holland
Located on 104th between James and Riley, for more information, call 772-4907

Average lifetime of a poster—1 semester
Average lifetime of a poster mounted on foam core and laminated—your college career.

Special Introductory Offer
Laminating & Mounting of any poster print

BUY ONE, GET ONE FREE*

Bring your own print or photo or choose from hundreds of posters in-stock or thousands available to order.

*Free product of equal or lesser value. Offer ends September 30th. Must present student I.D. or faculty I.D.

Art Gallery & Framing Inc.
28 East 8th St. Downtown Holland
394-0093 10 - 6 Mon. - Fri. Till 6 - Sat. www.moyinhangallery.com

Win $25,000 for grad school from KAPLAN

—just like I did!

Enter the “Kaplan gets you in... and pays your way” sweepstakes!

Who wins?
One lucky person will win $25,000 toward the first year of law, business, graduate or medical school.

How do I enter?
Complete an official entry form online at www.kaptest.com, at your local Kaplan center, or by mailing to: “Kaplan gets you in and pays your way” Sweepstakes. P.O. Box 9107, Medford, NY 11763. The contest runs from August 15 to October 31, 2000.

When is the drawing?
The winning name will be drawn on January 19, 2001. The winner will be notified by mail immediately following the drawing.

Test Prep, Admissions and Guidance. For life.

Angela Ficken
Junior, Northwestern University

Looking for a place to worship?

Then come to BreakAway!

BreakAway is a non-traditional worship celebration featuring a praise band, drama, and practical teaching from the Bible. It’s held every Sunday at 10:45 a.m. We don’t think you’ll come just once!

Community Reformed Church
10376 Felch Street, Holland
Located on 104th between James and Riley, for more information, call 772-4907

Average lifetime of a poster—1 semester
Average lifetime of a poster mounted on foam core and laminated—your college career.

Special Introductory Offer
Laminating & Mounting of any poster print

BUY ONE, GET ONE FREE*

Bring your own print or photo or choose from hundreds of posters in-stock or thousands available to order.

*Free product of equal or lesser value. Offer ends September 30th. Must present student I.D. or faculty I.D.

Art Gallery & Framing Inc.
28 East 8th St. Downtown Holland
394-0093 10 - 6 Mon. - Fri. Till 6 - Sat. www.moyinhangallery.com

Win $25,000 for grad school from KAPLAN

—just like I did!

Enter the “Kaplan gets you in... and pays your way” sweepstakes!

Who wins?
One lucky person will win $25,000 toward the first year of law, business, graduate or medical school.

How do I enter?
Complete an official entry form online at www.kaptest.com, at your local Kaplan center, or by mailing to: “Kaplan gets you in and pays your way” Sweepstakes. P.O. Box 9107, Medford, NY 11763. The contest runs from August 15 to October 31, 2000.

When is the drawing?
The winning name will be drawn on January 19, 2001. The winner will be notified by mail immediately following the drawing.

Test Prep, Admissions and Guidance. For life.

Angela Ficken
Junior, Northwestern University

Looking for a place to worship?

Then come to BreakAway!

BreakAway is a non-traditional worship celebration featuring a praise band, drama, and practical teaching from the Bible. It’s held every Sunday at 10:45 a.m. We don’t think you’ll come just once!

Community Reformed Church
10376 Felch Street, Holland
Located on 104th between James and Riley, for more information, call 772-4907

Average lifetime of a poster—1 semester
Average lifetime of a poster mounted on foam core and laminated—your college career.

Special Introductory Offer
Laminating & Mounting of any poster print

BUY ONE, GET ONE FREE*

Bring your own print or photo or choose from hundreds of posters in-stock or thousands available to order.

*Free product of equal or lesser value. Offer ends September 30th. Must present student I.D. or faculty I.D.

Art Gallery & Framing Inc.
28 East 8th St. Downtown Holland
394-0093 10 - 6 Mon. - Fri. Till 6 - Sat. www.moyinhangallery.com

Win $25,000 for grad school from KAPLAN

—just like I did!

Enter the “Kaplan gets you in... and pays your way” sweepstakes!

Who wins?
One lucky person will win $25,000 toward the first year of law, business, graduate or medical school.

How do I enter?
Complete an official entry form online at www.kaptest.com, at your local Kaplan center, or by mailing to: “Kaplan gets you in and pays your way” Sweepstakes. P.O. Box 9107, Medford, NY 11763. The contest runs from August 15 to October 31, 2000.

When is the drawing?
The winning name will be drawn on January 19, 2001. The winner will be notified by mail immediately following the drawing.

Test Prep, Admissions and Guidance. For life.

Angela Ficken
Junior, Northwestern University

Looking for a place to worship?

Then come to BreakAway!

BreakAway is a non-traditional worship celebration featuring a praise band, drama, and practical teaching from the Bible. It’s held every Sunday at 10:45 a.m. We don’t think you’ll come just once!

Community Reformed Church
10376 Felch Street, Holland
Located on 104th between James and Riley, for more information, call 772-4907

Average lifetime of a poster—1 semester
Average lifetime of a poster mounted on foam core and laminated—your college career.

Special Introductory Offer
Laminating & Mounting of any poster print

BUY ONE, GET ONE FREE*

Bring your own print or photo or choose from hundreds of posters in-stock or thousands available to order.

*Free product of equal or lesser value. Offer ends September 30th. Must present student I.D. or faculty I.D.

Art Gallery & Framing Inc.
28 East 8th St. Downtown Holland
394-0093 10 - 6 Mon. - Fri. Till 6 - Sat. www.moyinhangallery.com
Now Available Exclusively to Hope College Students

The Best Seats in the House for only $2 per show

SEASON PASS

The Price

The Season Pass is $8 and gets you into ALL FOUR Theatre Mainstage Productions for this year. Do the math and that's ONLY $2 a show!

Choice Seats

Season Pass Holders will be able to reserve their tickets a day ahead of everyone else. That means you can swipe the best seats & even reserve some for up to 3 of your Friends!

E-Mail Orders

Season Pass Holders will receive a reminder E-mail 24 hours before tickets go on sale. Simply reply to the E-mail with your reservation and you're all set! You'll save time and won't forget when tickets go on sale!

Quantity of passes is limited

So ORDER NOW!!!

Fill out the form on the right and stop by the DeVitt Theatre Ticket Office next to the rotating doors at the 12th St Entrance. The Ticket Office will open Thursday Sept. 13th and has business hours of 10am-5pm on Weekdays and Noon-5pm on Saturdays. HURRY, OFFER ENDS SEPT. 30th!!!

---

Name (Last,First)

On campus Address OR Off campus Street Address

E-Mail

Phone #

Student #

Would you like to receive brief E-mails regarding:

- Reminders 24 hours before tickets go on sale for Season Pass Holders (required for E-mail reservations) YES
- Other theatre shows (senior projects, Theatre Forum) YES
- Information about auditions each semester YES

---

Information about auditions each semester

YES
Men's soccer wins

Rand Arwady
Sports Editor

Coach Steve Smith's men's soccer team got its season on track this weekend by winning both of its matches to raise its record to 2-2.

“The first weekend we were bringing a pretty young team together,” said goalkeeper Marcus Voss (‘03). He said that putting some games under their belt, combined with another week of practice, made a big difference for the players, culminating in the turnaround this past weekend.

“Playing these two games were a big boost for our team, just realizing what potential we actually have,” said Voss.

On Friday the Dutchmen defeated Milwaukee College of Engineering, 4-1. Hope was led by Adam Chaffee (‘03), who had two goals in a 5-minute span early in the first half. Bryant Loomis (‘03) nailed the third goal of the game in the 88th minute to give the Dutchmen a 3-0 lead at halftime.

The only goal scored for Hope in the second half was by Devin Nuner (‘02) in the 83rd minute. Milwaukee scored a goal in the 88th minute to keep the Dutchmen from the shutout.

Chaffee continued his great performance over the weekend.

“It just feels real good to show what I can do,” said Chaffee. “I think, as a team, we’re going to be doing really well this year. I’m really optimistic. We have a real good chance of winning the MIAA and doing something in the NCAA.”

The Dutchmen hope to continue their winning ways this weekend at the Wilmington Tournament in Delaware. Hope will face Wilmington on Friday and Wittenberg on Saturday.

V-ball beats Calvin

Rand Arwady
Sports Editor

The Flying Dutch volleyball team kept their perfect record in MIAA play with a huge victory at Calvin on Saturday.

“It was really great for us because they’re our biggest rival, and they beat us out for the conference championship last year, which is something we are really shooting for this year,” said team member Laura Hahnfeld (‘03). “I was really cool that we could step it up and play to our full potential.”

The Dutch swept last year’s MIAA champions 3-0 (15-6, 15:13, 15-11) to get some revenge on the Knights, the only team to defeat Hope in MIAA league play last year. Hope is now 2-0 in MIAA matches this season.

Setter Kim Grotenhuis (‘01) had 50 assists, which helped earn her MIAA volleyball player of the week honors.

“This is a great honor, and I’m happy for that. It was nice to add on to the Calvin victory, but I’d rather pick the win over Calvin any day,” Grotenhuis said. Other players contributing to the big win included Amy Brewer (‘01) with 14 kills and 18 digs. Molly Henson (‘02) with 20 digs, Hannahfeld with 11 kills and 16 digs, and Martha Ludens (‘03) with 14 kills.

Hope continues its quest for the MIAA championship with a match Wednesday night against conference foe Adrian at 6:30 in the Dow Center. Adrian is also undefeated in MIAA matches this year.

“We want to make sure we come in and play strong,” said Coach Maureen Dunn. “So far this season [Adrian’s] doing very well. We need to make sure we play our best, and we want to play strong because it’s our first home match.”

FANCY FOOTWORK: After a series of shutdown defeats, including Saturday’s 3-0 loss to Aquinas College, Hope finally scored a victory over MIAA rival Adrian, Tuesday afternoon. Scoring for the Dutch were Emily Dirke (‘02), Liz Dornbos (‘02) on a penalty kick, and Danielle Nave (‘04) who scored her first collegiate goal. Goalkeeper Lauren Hinkle (‘04) delivered the shutout. The victory was the first for new head coach Leigh Sears. The team had a rocky start to their year, after several key team members suffered season-ending injuries. The Dutch host Calvin College Saturday, September 16 at noon.
Wednesday, 1 don't see much of a chance against Calvin. Calvin 3, a victory dance that people in Ohio will be talking about for years. For the Dutch to show that last Saturday's sweep of Calvin wasn't Alma the one that will be the best to watch will be Adrian. Look this week. However of the three matches, Adrian, St. Mary's, and Hope, the 42-0 loss to Big Dogs I on Monday night. Squirrels o* Death) will start off their season Wednesday night. Gramatica as time expires to win the game for Tampa 24-22. Player this year Jason Hanson will kick 5 more field goals, which MSU 51, Missouri 10. Bobby Knight. Knight will join the Indiana Pacers as an assistant coach. Eric will transfer to MSU. Notre Dame will go downhill due to losses of Battle and Irons. Lou Holtz is the man after he previously lost 21 games in a row. Hope football team will go heal Eastern Michigan on Saturday. Not bad for a team that had previously lost 21 games in a row. Hope football team lines up against Valparaiso in Saturday's game in which Hope lost 20-7. The Hope College football team topped ranked NCAA Division I-AA team. 20-7 in front of 5,475 Community Day fans under the lights on Saturday night at Holland Municipal Stadium. The loss leaves Coach Dean Kreps with a record of 0-6 in season openers. One reason for the defeat was Hope's difficulty in moving the ball on offense, forcing punter Vince Scheffler ('03) to punt 11 times for 470 yards. That was almost four times the total yardage of the Dutch offense, which finished the game with only 116 total yards. One of those punts turned out to be the biggest play of the game when Valparaiso punt returner Steve Clancy returned Scheffler's 50-yard punt 64 yards for a touchdown to put the Crusaders ahead 20-7 with only ten minutes to play in the 4th quarter. Clancy broke off five tackles on his way to the end zone. Hope's quarterback J.D. Graves ('01) felt the pressure of Valparaiso's defense all night. There weren't many times that he wasn't scrambling around the field attempting to buy himself some time. He was sacked nine times during the game, and rarely did a play end without Gravies on the ground. Hope's quarterback was held to only 12 completions in 34 attempts for 116 yards, and ended the night with negative 62 yards rushing, uncharacteristic numbers for someone who broke the school record last year as a junior with 2,303 yards in total offense. The Hope offense was able to put together only one good drive all night. In the second quarter Gravies connected with Mike Gie (03) for a 57-yard pass, which set up Hope's only score on Graves' 5-yard touchdown pass to Brian Aldoff ('01). "We were outmanned up front," said Kreps, referring to his young offensive line. Hope graduated all five starting linemen from last year's coMIAA championship team. "I want to give (the Valparaiso defense) a lot of credit because that's one of the best defenses we're going to play all year," said the Hope coach. Valparaiso's defense wasn't the only great defense on the field Saturday night. "The Hope defense did a great job against our running game," said Valparaiso head coach Tom Horne. The Dutchmen held the Crusaders to only 119 yards rushing and 111 yards passing. Recycle the Anchor: "It's swell!" Battle of the Bands Listen to Jane and Andrew on WTHS. 9:00-10:00 pm on Mondays, Tuesdays, and Thursdays.