The Anchor, Volume 123.03: September 16, 2009

Hope College

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.hope.edu/anchor_2009

Part of the Library and Information Science Commons

Recommended Citation
https://digitalcommons.hope.edu/anchor_2009/14

This News Article is brought to you for free and open access by the The Anchor: 2000-2009 at Hope College Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Anchor: 2009 by an authorized administrator of Hope College Digital Commons. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@hope.edu.
Hope and community get down

Lindsey Sisson
Guest Writer

On Saturday, Sept. 12, Hope College students, faculty, alumni and members of the Holland community gathered on the lawn of Windmill Island for a picnic lunch and a handful of activities to celebrate Hope College’s 44th annual Community Day.

“Community Day is held each year as a fun way to celebrate the outstanding relationship between Hope College and the community,” said Lynne Powe, associate director for public and community relations. “We’re celebrating our 44th picnic, which is a collaborative effort between the City of Holland and Hope College. It’s become a great tradition for alumni, families and friends to come out to celebrate Hope College’s 44th Community Day.”

WINDMILL ADVENTURES AND RIDES—Members of the community toured Windmill Island and merry-go-round rides were offered at the annual celebration.

Student Congress prepares for new year

Elena Rivera
Guest Writer

Student Congress may be a well-known secret at Hope College, but it doesn’t want to stay that way.

“Student Congress is here to be an advocacy group for students,” said Scott Witcher ‘10, vice-president of Student Congress. “It’s really the best resource on campus.”

Student Congress works daily with the school’s administration to make sure that Hope reflects its students’ needs. Members of Student Congress sit on different boards and task forces, such as the Trustee Board and the Green Task Force, to ensure that all across campus students’ opinions are heard. Priscilla Oddo ‘10, president, stressed that Student Congress is an open forum for progress, but as with everything worth changing, it is a process rather than an immediate course correction.

The best way students can get involved in Student Congress is through elections, which took place Sept. 10 for representatives of different cottages and dorms. These elections brought in 20 to 25 new members, who came together at a Student Congress mocktail party on Saturday to meet fellow delegates.

Other ways students can get involved include participating in the various events Student Congress hosts throughout the year. Looking towards the year, Student Congress hosts throughout the year. Looking towards the new year as a fun way to celebrate the outstanding relationship between Hope College and the community,” said Lynne Powe, associate director for public and community relations. “We’re celebrating our 44th picnic, which is a collaborative effort between the City of Holland and Hope College. It’s become a great tradition for alumni, families and friends to come out to celebrate Hope College’s 44th Community Day.”

WINDMILL ADVENTURES AND RIDES—Members of the community toured Windmill Island and merry-go-round rides were offered at the annual celebration.

Knicks celebrate 100th anniversary

Erika Ter Louw
Guest Writer

Loyalty and brotherhood have been at the core of the Knickerbocker fraternity since their early beginnings in 1909.

The class of 1913 quickly decided as freshmen that they had a bond that could not be broken. At a time in Hope College’s history when only two fraternities existed, they decided to add to the Greek community and form a recognized fraternity. Thus, with 12 founding fathers, Kappa Eta Nu was born.

As in years past, the Knickerbockers are planning several events this fall. One of their long-standing charitable events is a can drive for muscular dystrophy. Outside of fundraising, the Knicks are also planning several traditional events such as rafting at the Pull and Knick or Treat. Currently, KappaEta Nu has three members: Scott Witcher ‘11 serving as president, Chris Bueter ‘10 as vice president, and Carl Dunker as Secretary.

Knicks celebrate 100th anniversary

Erika Ter Louw
Guest Writer

Loyalty and brotherhood have been at the core of the Knickerbocker fraternity since their early beginnings in 1909.

The class of 1913 quickly decided as freshmen that they had a bond that could not be broken. At a time in Hope College’s history when only two fraternities existed, they decided to add to the Greek community and form a recognized fraternity. Thus, with 12 founding fathers, Kappa Eta Nu was born.

Since their beginning the Knickerbockers have had an influential presence on Hope’s campus. Like much of the Greek community, the Knicks have participated in many annual fundraising events for the Red Cross Blood Drive, the Muscular Dystrophy Association, the American Cancer Society and the AIDS Reality forum.

As in years past, the Knickerbockers are planning several events this fall. One of their long-standing charitable events is a can drive for muscular dystrophy. Outside of fundraising, the Knicks are also planning several traditional events such as rafting at the Pull and Knick or Treat. Currently, Kappa Eta Nu has three members: Scott Witcher ‘11 serving as president, Chris Bueter ‘10 as vice president, and Carl Dunker as Secretary.

Knicks celebrate 100th anniversary

Erika Ter Louw
Guest Writer

Loyalty and brotherhood have been at the core of the Knickerbocker fraternity since their early beginnings in 1909.

The class of 1913 quickly decided as freshmen that they had a bond that could not be broken. At a time in Hope College’s history when only two fraternities existed, they decided to add to the Greek community and form a recognized fraternity. Thus, with 12 founding fathers, Kappa Eta Nu was born.

Since their beginning the Knickerbockers have had an influential presence on Hope’s campus. Like much of the Greek community, the Knicks have participated in many annual fundraising events for the Red Cross Blood Drive, the Muscular Dystrophy Association, the American Cancer Society and the AIDS Reality forum.

As in years past, the Knickerbockers are planning several events this fall. One of their long-standing charitable events is a can drive for muscular dystrophy. Outside of fundraising, the Knicks are also planning several traditional events such as rafting at the Pull and Knick or Treat. Currently, Kappa Eta Nu has three members: Scott Witcher ‘11 serving as president, Chris Bueter ‘10 as vice president, and Carl Dunker as Secretary.
Students aim to Flush Away Hunger

Kate Schramperfer / Guest Writer

Earlier this week, students walking to class were faced with a strange sight: a bright blue and orange toilet sitting in the Pine Grove. The oddly decorated toilet is the icon of a new project named Flush Away Hunger that aims to help those struggling with the reality of hunger in the Holland community. The program started on a student trip to Montana organized by the Center for Faithful Leadership. The students were approached with given a challenge. To help alleviate hunger in Allegan County, they returned to Hope fired up and began to work on the seemingly daunting task immediately.

Although several of the students behind this venture are affiliated with the Christian Fellowship leadership group, there are also some others, like Benjamin Thomas (‘11) who are non-religious.

Asked about the passion behind the project, Thomas said, “When we think about hunger, we think Third World; we don’t think our world. This is real, and it is scary.”

The money raised by Flush Away Hunger will go to people in the Holland area through the Allegan County Food Pantry. Thomas said the idea of the toilet is inspired by a kind of fundraising he and others involved in the project witnessed in high school. Flush Away Hunger activists acquired a toilet and had it painted in what he called “a vibrant and distinguishable way.” Then, those behind the venture say they will move the toilet from its place in the Pine Grove and set it up in front of a house, dorm room, cottage, apartment or even a professor's office. In order for the toilet to be removed, the recipient will have to pay $20 to Flush Away Hunger. After paying, he or she will get to choose where the toilet goes next.

The Flush Away Hunger toilet will start making the rounds within two weeks. Thomas said that the group planned on getting the word out around campus before they officially began. After the period of two weeks, which will be called "Student Time," the actual fundraiser will begin.

For the plan this toilet is ultimately bigger than a campus-wide fundraiser. Flush Away Hunger hopes to eventually have the program expand to encompass the whole city, so that toilets would be popping up in front of yards and business parking lots all over Holland. The more it spreads, the better, according to Thomas. “This might seem weird,” he admits, “but we call it creative.”

Kate Schramperfer / Guest Writer

Earlier this week, students walking to class were faced with a strange sight: a bright blue and orange toilet sitting in the Pine Grove. The oddly decorated toilet is the icon of a new project named Flush Away Hunger that aims to help those struggling with the reality of hunger in the Holland community. The program started on a student trip to Montana organized by the Center for Faithful Leadership. The students were approached with given a challenge. To help alleviate hunger in Allegan County, they returned to Hope fired up and began to work on the seemingly daunting task immediately.

Although several of the students behind this venture are affiliated with the Christian Fellowship leadership group, there are also some others, like Benjamin Thomas (‘11) who are non-religious.

Asked about the passion behind the project, Thomas said, “When we think about hunger, we think Third World; we don’t think our world. This is real, and it is scary.”

The money raised by Flush Away Hunger will go to people in the Holland area through the Allegan County Food Pantry. Thomas said the idea of the toilet is inspired by a kind of fundraising he and others involved in the project witnessed in high school. Flush Away Hunger activists acquired a toilet and had it painted in what he called “a vibrant and distinguishable way.” Then, those behind the venture say they will move the toilet from its place in the Pine Grove and set it up in front of a house, dorm room, cottage, apartment or even a professor's office. In order for the toilet to be removed, the recipient will have to pay $20 to Flush Away Hunger. After paying, he or she will get to choose where the toilet goes next.

The Flush Away Hunger toilet will start making the rounds within two weeks. Thomas said that the group planned on getting the word out around campus before they officially began. After the period of two weeks, which will be called "Student Time," the actual fundraiser will begin.

For the plan this toilet is ultimately bigger than a campus-wide fundraiser. Flush Away Hunger hopes to eventually have the program expand to encompass the whole city, so that toilets would be popping up in front of yards and business parking lots all over Holland. The more it spreads, the better, according to Thomas. “This might seem weird,” he admits, “but we call it creative.”

Kate Schramperfer / Guest Writer

Earlier this week, students walking to class were faced with a strange sight: a bright blue and orange toilet sitting in the Pine Grove. The oddly decorated toilet is the icon of a new project named Flush Away Hunger that aims to help those struggling with the reality of hunger in the Holland community. The program started on a student trip to Montana organized by the Center for Faithful Leadership. The students were approached with given a challenge. To help alleviate hunger in Allegan County, they returned to Hope fired up and began to work on the seemingly daunting task immediately.

Although several of the students behind this venture are affiliated with the Christian Fellowship leadership group, there are also some others, like Benjamin Thomas (‘11) who are non-religious.

 Asked about the passion behind the project, Thomas said, “When we think about hunger, we think Third World; we don’t think our world. This is real, and it is scary.”

The money raised by Flush Away Hunger will go to people in the Holland area through the Allegan County Food Pantry. Thomas said the idea of the toilet is inspired by a kind of fundraising he and others involved in the project witnessed in high school. Flush Away Hunger activists acquired a toilet and had it painted in what he called “a vibrant and distinguishable way.” Then, those behind the venture say they will move the toilet from its place in the Pine Grove and set it up in front of a house, dorm room, cottage, apartment or even a professor's office. In order for the toilet to be removed, the recipient will have to pay $20 to Flush Away Hunger. After paying, he or she will get to choose where the toilet goes next.

The Flush Away Hunger toilet will start making the rounds within two weeks. Thomas said that the group planned on getting the word out around campus before they officially began. After the period of two weeks, which will be called "Student Time," the actual fundraiser will begin.

For the plan this toilet is ultimately bigger than a campus-wide fundraiser. Flush Away Hunger hopes to eventually have the program expand to encompass the whole city, so that toilets would be popping up in front of yards and business parking lots all over Holland. The more it spreads, the better, according to Thomas. “This might seem weird,” he admits, “but we call it creative.”

Kate Schramperfer / Guest Writer

Earlier this week, students walking to class were faced with a strange sight: a bright blue and orange toilet sitting in the Pine Grove. The oddly decorated toilet is the icon of a new project named Flush Away Hunger that aims to help those struggling with the reality of hunger in the Holland community. The program started on a student trip to Montana organized by the Center for Faithful Leadership. The students were approached with given a challenge. To help alleviate hunger in Allegan County, they returned to Hope fired up and began to work on the seemingly daunting task immediately.

Although several of the students behind this venture are affiliated with the Christian Fellowship leadership group, there are also some others, like Benjamin Thomas (‘11) who are non-religious.

Asked about the passion behind the project, Thomas said, “When we think about hunger, we think Third World; we don’t think our world. This is real, and it is scary.”

The money raised by Flush Away Hunger will go to people in the Holland area through the Allegan County Food Pantry. Thomas said the idea of the toilet is inspired by a kind of fundraising he and others involved in the project witnessed in high school. Flush Away Hunger activists acquired a toilet and had it painted in what he called “a vibrant and distinguishable way.” Then, those behind the venture say they will move the toilet from its place in the Pine Grove and set it up in front of a house, dorm room, cottage, apartment or even a professor's office. In order for the toilet to be removed, the recipient will have to pay $20 to Flush Away Hunger. After paying, he or she will get to choose where the toilet goes next.

The Flush Away Hunger toilet will start making the rounds within two weeks. Thomas said that the group planned on getting the word out around campus before they officially began. After the period of two weeks, which will be called "Student Time," the actual fundraiser will begin.

For the plan this toilet is ultimately bigger than a campus-wide fundraiser. Flush Away Hunger hopes to eventually have the program expand to encompass the whole city, so that toilets would be popping up in front of yards and business parking lots all over Holland. The more it spreads, the better, according to Thomas. “This might seem weird,” he admits, “but we call it creative.”

Kate Schramperfer / Guest Writer

Earlier this week, students walking to class were faced with a strange sight: a bright blue and orange toilet sitting in the Pine Grove. The oddly decorated toilet is the icon of a new project named Flush Away Hunger that aims to help those struggling with the reality of hunger in the Holland community. The program started on a student trip to Montana organized by the Center for Faithful Leadership. The students were approached with given a challenge. To help alleviate hunger in Allegan County, they returned to Hope fired up and began to work on the seemingly daunting task immediately.

Although several of the students behind this venture are affiliated with the Christian Fellowship leadership group, there are also some others, like Benjamin Thomas (‘11) who are non-religious.

Asked about the passion behind the project, Thomas said, “When we think about hunger, we think Third World; we don’t think our world. This is real, and it is scary.”

The money raised by Flush Away Hunger will go to people in the Holland area through the Allegan County Food Pantry. Thomas said the idea of the toilet is inspired by a kind of fundraising he and others involved in the project witnessed in high school. Flush Away Hunger activists acquired a toilet and had it painted in what he called “a vibrant and distinguishable way.” Then, those behind the venture say they will move the toilet from its place in the Pine Grove and set it up in front of a house, dorm room, cottage, apartment or even a professor's office. In order for the toilet to be removed, the recipient will have to pay $20 to Flush Away Hunger. After paying, he or she will get to choose where the toilet goes next.

The Flush Away Hunger toilet will start making the rounds within two weeks. Thomas said that the group planned on getting the word out around campus before they officially began. After the period of two weeks, which will be called "Student Time," the actual fundraiser will begin.

For the plan this toilet is ultimately bigger than a campus-wide fundraiser. Flush Away Hunger hopes to eventually have the program expand to encompass the whole city, so that toilets would be popping up in front of yards and business parking lots all over Holland. The more it spreads, the better, according to Thomas. “This might seem weird,” he admits, “but we call it creative.”
On Sept. 11, 2001, the United States was the scene of a series of coordinated attacks by Al Qaeda. The Sept. 11 news organization reported a total of 3,030 lives lost during the attack. The organization also reported that in 2009 that another 2,337 citizens were injured from the attacks. The suicide attacks led to the collapse of the World Trade Center, one of the most important buildings in the American capital. The attack also led to the destruction of the Pentagon, a key military installation located in the state of Virginia.

On Friday citizens across America remembered and honored the victims of 9/11 eight years after the attacks. ACNN new source reported in early September that Gov. Granholm ordered the flags to be at half mast and declared a moment of silence at 8:46 a.m. EDT, marking the time when the first plane hit the north tower of the World Trade Center.

Memorial services were held by Detroit Mayor Dave Bing, Gov. Granholm and various other organizations. The WMRT radio station reported on Friday that Holland’s Gadolho’s New York Deli offered free sandwiches to police officers and firefighters from 2 to 4 p.m. on Friday afternoon.

Aside from the state and national events, Hope students themselves reflected and remembered the attacks from their own perspectives. “It’s not every day some of the most important buildings collapse and thousands of people died,” Larry Weymouth (’13) said. “It’s something that is just a bit hard to forget.”

This is the same story for many Hope students. For Weymouth, he remembers the day’s events detail by detail. “It was raining, and we had indoor recess; my substitute teacher was listening to the radio with the headphones on, and when I suddenly set them down and told us about the attacks and left the room. The next day was my birthday. I felt so terrible, I cancelled my party and just watched TV with a friend all day,” Weymouth said. “For me, it’s something that feels just like yesterday.”

Weymouth was not the only one who remembers the details. Craig Tank (’11) was sitting in seventh grade English class when the principal informed students about the announcements. “I really didn’t think much of it until I got home later that afternoon and saw all over the TV that’s when I got a real grasp of what was going on,” Tank said. “My first thoughts were the sadness for the families of the people who died. Whether it’s a sibling, mother, father, or someone else. [You] kind of get a feeling of grief for everybody.”

Americans overseas had different experiences. Rebekah Chew (’12) was living in Kyrgyzstan at the time of the attacks. “It was the morning after the attacks when I found out,” Chew said. (Kyrgyzstan’s time zone is 11 hours ahead.) “I was in my room when my mom came in and told me that America was attacked yesterday by terrorists.”

The significance wasn’t as evident to Chew until she went to school that day. “My Russian cancelled class for the first hour and we had an assembly in recognition of the attacks,” Chew said. “As an American, they asked me to go up to the front and light this candle with an American flag on it.”

The fact that something did happen (in America) is just a shock,” Weymouth said. “It is something you’ll never forget especially with how the information was presented to you.”

The impact of the event went a lot further than just personal experiences. For Chew, a direct connection to the events in Kyrgyzstan, the weeks following 9/11 were even more significant. “There were a lot of mission organizations [that] were concerned for the safety of my parents,” Chew said. “Everyone worked to evacuate; even the American embassy ordered us not to leave our home until the situation was over.”

“I guess it was because Americans were scared the world didn’t like them, which actually does make sense because they have little relation to the Middle East.”

Senior English major student Kei Mayami (’11) said that in the weeks after the attacks, news of the attacks was all over the news. “I think one of the main reasons is because of how Americanized Japan has become over the years,” said Mayami, who visited ground zero recently. “At New York I found a lot of Japanese citizens from Japanese citizens who sent 1,000 paper cranes to the States. It was just another sign of hope that we shouldn’t forget about the people who died!”

For Hope students in remembrance, it’s a matter of honoring and remembering. “It happened to my country. I feel a connection to it. Remembering is how I pay tribute to it!” Tank said. “9/11 was the biggest world historical event in my lifetime. Once you see or experience it you really can never forget that.”

The following is the text of the speech President Obama gave at the Pentagon on the morning of Sept. 11, 2009.

Secretary Gates, Admiral Mullen and members of the Armed Forces, fellow Americans, family and friends of those that we lost this day – Michelle and I are deeply humbled to be with you. Eight September have come and gone. Nearly 3,000 days have passed – almost one third of the three that we share. Our feelings are the same, however, and we know, because of the time and no dark skies can ever dull the meaning of this moment.

So on this solemn day, at this sacred hour, once more we pause. Once more we pray – as a nation, as a people, in cities streets where our two towers were turned to ashes and dust; in a quiet field where a plane fell from the sky; and here, where a single stone of this building is still blackened by the fires. We remember with reverence the lives we lost. We read their names. We press their photos to our hearts. And on this day that marks their death, we recall the beauty and meaning of their lives: men and women and children of every color and every creed, from across our nation and from more than 100 others. They were innocent. Harming no one, they went about their daily lives. Gone, in an instant, but the mountains may fall and the earth may give way; the flesh and the heart may fail. But after all our suffering, we fill the empty places in your homes. But on this day and all that follow, you may find solace in the memory of those you loved, and know that you have the unending support of the American people.

Scripture teaches us a hard truth. The mountains may fall and the earth may give way; the flesh and the heart may fail. But after all our suffering, we fill the empty places in your homes. But on this day and all that follow, you may find solace in the memory of those you loved, and know that you have the unending support of the American people.

Scripture teaches us a hard truth. The mountains may fall and the earth may give way; the flesh and the heart may fail. But after all our suffering, we fill the empty places in your homes. But on this day and all that follow, you may find solace in the memory of those you loved, and know that you have the unending support of the American people.

Scripture teaches us a hard truth. The mountains may fall and the earth may give way; the flesh and the heart may fail. But after all our suffering, we fill the empty places in your homes. But on this day and all that follow, you may find solace in the memory of those you loved, and know that you have the unending support of the American people.

Scripture teaches us a hard truth. The mountains may fall and the earth may give way; the flesh and the heart may fail. But after all our suffering, we fill the empty places in your homes. But on this day and all that follow, you may find solace in the memory of those you loved, and know that you have the unending support of the American people.

Scripture teaches us a hard truth. The mountains may fall and the earth may give way; the flesh and the heart may fail. But after all our suffering, we fill the empty places in your homes. But on this day and all that follow, you may find solace in the memory of those you loved, and know that you have the unending support of the American people.

Scripture teaches us a hard truth. The mountains may fall and the earth may give way; the flesh and the heart may fail. But after all our suffering, we fill the empty places in your homes. But on this day and all that follow, you may find solace in the memory of those you loved, and know that you have the unending support of the American people.

Scripture teaches us a hard truth. The mountains may fall and the earth may give way; the flesh and the heart may fail. But after all our suffering, we fill the empty places in your homes. But on this day and all that follow, you may find solace in the memory of those you loved, and know that you have the unending support of the American people.
The documentary banned from airing during the 2008 elections now faces the Supreme Court.

Obama looks to reignite push for health care reform with address to Congress.

‘Hillary: The Movie’ stirs debate over free speech

The documentary banned from airing during the 2008 elections now faces the Supreme Court.

President Barack Obama’s address on health care reform to a joint session of Congress on Jan. 6 was met with mixed reviews from both lawmakers and private citizens. "I am not the first president to take up this cause, but I am determined to be the last," he said, after tracing efforts to reform health care in the United States back to the presidency of Theodore Roosevelt. According to the president, there are now at least 30 million American citizens without health insurance and 14,000 Americans who lose their insurance every day.

Obama discussed the many issues surrounding the current health care system including insurance security in job changes and moving, rising health care costs and the occurrence of dropped coverage by large employers. The president then touched on the main proposals of the two major political parties. He discussed how many Democrats in the United States admire Canada’s single-payer system and would like to emulate it, while many Republicans would like to eliminate the employer-based system and allow individuals to purchase their own health insurance independently. Obama said that while both plans have merit, either one would constitute too radical a shift from the status quo. "I believe it makes more sense to build on what works and fix what doesn’t, rather than build an entirely new system from scratch," he said.

Obama emphasized the common ground between legislators of both parties but expressed his disapproval of the "pay-as-you-go" approach and "scare tactics" that he believes have dominated the debate over the last few weeks.

The president summarized his plan as "consumer protections for those with insurance, an exchange that allows individuals and small businesses to purchase affordable coverage, and a requirement that people who can afford insurance get insurance.”

The president’s remark that “there remain some significant details to be ironed out” was met with laughter from many legislators.

Obama then attempted to alleviate the worries many Americans have about health care reform. He assured the audience that his plan would not require them to change their existing coverage or doctor. He also promised that the plan would not provide federal dollars to fund euthanasia or abortions and that he would not sign a bill that would add to the deficit or take funding away from Medicare.

In response to his statement that his health care plan would not cover illegal immigrants, Rep. Joe Wilson (R-S.C.) exclaimed, “You lie!” Wilson publicly apologized to the president for his comment shortly after. Though the president accepted his apology, many Democrats believe that he deserves further punishment.

Dr. Jack Holmes, a Hope College political professor, said that Wilson’s outburst was clearly inappropriate and against protocol. However, it is also “indicative of the frustrations a lot of people have,” said Holmes. When asked how he thought the speech would affect the health care debate, he said that “it might open it up a little bit and move it forward, but it would sure be good if they (the Democrats) did something to attract bipartisan support.”

Holmes also lamented the president’s lack of details and said that the government option included in the plan might make it hard to pass.
One man play: “A Show of Force” comes to Hope Sept. 17-18

Caitlin Seay
Guest Writer

Every time Donnie Mather gets on stage, he brings conviction and dedication to his craft. For his role, he must be prepared both physically and mentally, because he is the only one on that stage. Mather must bring everything he has to every performance because it takes a lot more than average acting skills to captivate an audience by himself. Mather not only acts in this play, but he also developed the entire concept of it. “I wanted to respond in an artistic way to what was happening in our country, in our time,” Mather says. His solution: “A Show Of Force,” a one-man play that encompasses many political points of view. A recent press release states that Mather gathered inspiration from a number of different places “from the war poetry of Wilfred Owen to William Shakespeare; from the Bible to Mark Twain; from the jazzy song and dance of the 1940s; from General Patton to Sun Tzu’s The Art of War.”

It also mentions that during the developmental stages of the piece, Mather actively sought out opinions by doing extensive research and interviewing “a wide range of citizens.”

Many years of hard work have put into this show, and according to Michelle Bombe, coordinator of this event, he makes “the characters [come] alive in a fluid and visceral way.” Mather’s is a “very physical style of theatre that also is often very poetic and imagistic in nature.”

During the show he wrestles with questions that have tortured the human mind for years: questions of war, peace and justice. Throughout the show, Mather explores the nature of war and violence and the tumult of emotions that follow them.

The show promises to be a uniquely entertaining experience. Bombe called it “a piece that young people should be seeing” and further commented, “Everyone will come to their own personal conclusion.” His character is full of questions and contradictions that are sure to leave the members of the audience questioning their own beliefs. Mather worked for many years under the direction of Anne Bogart and was very influenced by her viewpoints technique. Viewpoints, as Bombe explained, is “a technique of improvisation that expands the performer’s awareness of time and space.”

Mather also incorporates his training in the Suzuki Method of acting, a very physical and expressive acting style. Much of his acting abilities rely on an innate spontaneity.

This production will be funded by the patrons for the arts and the A. J. Muste Lecture Committee. The Muste Lecture Committee continually strives to find those who believe in nonviolent action and in an effort for peace, they lend their support.

Mather’s performances will be held on Thursday, Sept. 17, and Friday, Sept. 18, in the DeVitt Studio Theatre at 8 p.m. Tickets are free, but seating is limited. For those interested, tickets are available in the DeVitt ticket office weekdays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

ALL EYES ON DONNIE MATHER — The New York actor performs a play singlehandedly from a script constructed of texts from various political points of view.
Luna Negra Dance kicks off GPS series Sept. 24-25

Visiting Writers Series: A look at founder Jack Ridl and first author Gregory Orr

Ann Malone Guest Writer

Of the Luna Negra Dance Theater, the Chicago Tribune wrote, "Artistic director Eduardo Vilaro and his beguiling dancers are an established, respected and treasured troupe on our arts landscape."
The Chicago-based Luna Negra has been entertaining for a decade. The group makes its home at the Harris Theater, performs regularly at the Ravinia Festival and tours both nationally and internationally.

Founded in 1999 by Eduardo Vilaro, the company has been an environment where contemporary Latino choreographers have been able to give expression to their stories and bring new life to the cultures of their communities. In 2008, their production "Nuevo Folk" was voted in the Top 5 Dance Shows by Chicago Companies in Newcity’s "Top 5 of Everything." In March 2009, the company was featured in a window display at the flagship Macy's on State Street, Chicago. The window, which fronted Randal Street, featured pictures and costumes from the company's production of "Carmen Act 1," by Nancy Turano, one of the company's honorary choreographers. The group is on its tenth tour and will be giving the opening performance in this year's Great Performing Series at Hope College.

The company consists of multiple choreographers, collaborators and dancers. All 10 dancers have studied and performed with different companies all over the world. One dancer is from Detroit and has studied at Grand Valley State University. Even in such a diverse company, with members' hometowns ranging from Havana to Hong Kong, Hope students can find a Michigan connection.

One of the goals of Luna Negra Dance Theater is to "celebrate and explore Latino tradition and identity, moving beyond cultural stereotypes and expectations of Latino movement and dance forms."

Using a multitude of dance styles, from classical ballets to modern to Latino dance, the company creates beautiful pieces of art, combining both fluidity and precision. Their creativity is varied as well; their dances range from sultry and passionate to playful and childlike. In a piece from their 2005 performance of "4 Coreografos Latinos," a female dancer gave off dust as she danced around a steadfast male, creating a dreamlike effect.

The July 2009 performance at Millennium Park in Chicago had a catchy beat, and the dance resembled the last dance in the film "Dirty Dancing," complete with beautiful, powerful lifts. Clearly, the company doesn't lack style and flair; they master each dance style beautifully.

The company plays with costuming also. Ranging from almost avant-garde to traditional to flamenco, Luna Negra does not resemble a troupe of tall girls in tutus. Instead, this ethnic company of dancers forms a collage of color, style and culture.

Luna Negra Dance Theater will be performing Sept. 24-25 at the Knickerbocker Theatre, 7:30 p.m. as the season starter of the Great Performance Series.

Lindsay Wolf Asst. Arts Editor

The Jack Ridl Visiting Writers Series, established in 1982 by English professor emeritus Jack Ridl and his wife Julie, opens Thursday with poet Gregory Orr.

According to the VWS website, the mission of the series is to provide Hope's campus with "a literary experience that will enliven, enthrall, and excite...Every event offers opportunities to interact with the writers and to discuss their craft and creative process."

In a 2007 interview conducted by Hope students, Jack Ridl explained why he started VWS: "The primary reasons for starting VWS were three-fold. One, for students to meet established writers and find out they were people and to demystify the sense that a prominent author is intimidating ...The second reason for starting VWS was that Julie and I wanted to add something to the community after being given so much, especially by students, and we wanted to see how we could give to students what wasn’t already here...The third reason was that the (creative writing) students here...The third reason was that they were becoming so good [at writing] that we didn’t publicize it or toot its horn."

The first featured visiting writer of the year, poet Gregory Orr, is an accomplished poet of short, lyric free verse. Orr is the author of nine collections of poetry, including his most recent volume, "How Beautiful the Beloved" (2009), three books of essays, including "Poetry as Survival" (2002) and a memoir entitled "The Blessing" (2002). The author’s early work is influenced by traumatic childhood events, including a tragic hunting accident in which he accidentally shot and killed his younger brother. His mother's unexpected death and his father's addiction to amphetamines also impacted his writing material. His poems "A Litany," "A Moment" and "Gathering the Bones Together" deal with the inconceivable events of his childhood.

During [on tour in 1998] a public broadcast of his essay "The Making of Poems," Orr explained, "I believe in poetry as a way of surviving the emotional chaos, spiritual confusions and traumatic events that come with being alive."

Orr was born in 1947 in Albany, N.Y., but grew up in the Hudson Valley. The author received his B.A. from Antioch College and his M.F.A. from Columbia University. Orr has been recognized for his written material with many awards and fellowships, including a Guggenheim Fellowship, two poetry fellowships from the National Endowment for the Arts, and the Award in Literature by the American Academy of Arts and Letters.

Orr currently resides in Charlottesville, Va., with his wife and two daughters. He teaches at the University of Virginia, where he founded the MFA Program in Writing in 1975. Orr will share his artistic talent with the Hope community on Thursday, Sept. 17, at 7 p.m. at the Knickerbocker Theatre. Admission is free.

"I believe in poetry as a way of surviving the emotional chaos, spiritual confusions and traumatic events that come with being alive."

— GREGORY ORR
When anxiety comes knocking:

My palms are sweating. My heart’s racing like a horse in the Kentucky Derby. Oh, and my lip is starting to hurt from my biting it so hard. Who knew that my professor calling roll would cause me to be so anxious?

You’re starting the third week of classes. You’ve already dealt with homework and, perhaps, even a paper or two, but now the quizzes and exams start, and academic stress ensues. But that’s not all. Maybe that roommate you thought you loved has started an annoying habit of leaving the TV on all night or smacks his breakfast in the morning while you’re trying to get some shut-eye before your 9:30 a.m. class. And how could you forget all those clubs and student groups you’ve signed up for since the Activity Fair? You’re finding yourself overwhelmed at the thought of it all, and you can’t hide your anxiety anymore.

Fix the problem before it starts:

Organize. Coming from someone who’s already slightly OCD about a clean desk, I am slightly biased. However, when things have their place and you are aware of assignments before they’re due, you can plan ahead! To-do lists for a week can be overwhelming; therefore, just make one for each day. “I plan to do this, and this, and this, and that’s it! After that, it’s my time.” Set a cut-off point and don’t try to accomplish too much.

Know your limit. All those clubs you signed up for at the Activities Fair sounded great, but now that you’re sailing, working for the yearbook and singing in the choir (not to mention already playing a varsity sport), you just don’t have the time for that and your homework! Prioritize. Saying “no” can be difficult, but it’s a necessary skill that needs to be learned. Determine what you can handle, and don’t be afraid to make some sacrifices. Your sanity will thank you.

Find your place. Living with other people (especially if you’ve never had a roommate before) can leave you feeling without a place to call your own. When you’re stressed out and just want to be, you need a place where no one’s watching you or asking you mindless questions (“Have you seen my fish food?”). You have writer’s block or your CAPA is asphyxiating you? GET OUT. Take a walk through the Pine Grove or down Eighth Street and just breathe. Empty your mind for 15 minutes and think about the starry night or what you did this summer. If I said “think happy thoughts,” would you think I’m lame?

Talk to a “safe” person. Everyone needs to vent sometimes. When you’re stressed out, and you can’t simply scream, talking to someone is second best. Call your family or visit your friend. As long as you’re comfortable sharing your stress with them, and they’re okay with that, too, do it! Sometimes talking about your problems diminishes the imagined size of them.

But sometimes, the previously stated tactics won’t work. Life transitions (such as high school, college, entering the “real world”) can instigate anxiety disorders and even depression. If you feel like you’re falling, ask for help! Hope College provides outlets for students to help them deal with these transitions: take advantage of the resources given.

Make an appointment at the Counseling Center. They’re here to help with any problem, big or small, and can help advise you on your options. Set up a weekly or bi-weekly meeting just to get out what’s been lying heavily on your chest.

Contact Campus Ministries, and set up an appointment with one of our devoted chaplains if you’re seeking spiritual renovation. Hope College is filled with empathetic faculty and staff who are here to benefit you.

If you’re feeling weighed down, don’t wait until you’re crushed to ask for help. This is college, and most say it’s the best time of your life. You only have a few years here. Do what you can to make it enjoyable experience that you’ll want to relive over and over again!

The Counseling Center is located in the Student Development section of DeWitt. The Health Center is located on the first floor of the Dow Center. Campus Ministries is located at the Keppel House on 10th St.

Stop by the Health Center if your anxiety or depression is physically exhausting you, and you find yourself unable to turn your mind off to eat or sleep. They can provide sufficient resources to allow you a decent night’s sleep.
Musings on mutual misunderstanding

Emily West
Co-Editor-in-Chief

Happy birthday mom!

Thursday, Sept. 10, was my mother’s birthday. I did not call; I did not send a gift; I did not mail a card. I did not even send an email.

Does that make me a horrible person? Well, yes and also no. Let me explain; I love my mother. I really, really love my mother, but I do not have the same love for birthdays. In fact, I find the idea of birthdays rather unsettling. Yes, the birth of a child is wonderful and something to be celebrated. But this magical emergence of a soul-body into the earth’s atmosphere is not what is celebrated on birthdays.

Birthday cards usually rhyme, make a political comment, joke about farting, allude to alcohol or jest about the process of aging. Birthday cards do not read, “I celebrate how you developed from a tiny, fertilized egg into a marvelous creature with legs, eyes, fingers and elbows. I celebrate that miracle today because birth X years ago last Thursday, I have no answer. I do not understand how I got here. How did I get here?” is always a good question to ask. So, when I ask myself how I got to feeling obligated to go out, purchase a product that reveals my affections for my mother and my awareness of this anniversary of her birth Y years ago last Thursday, I have no answer. I do not understand how I got here.

I am not comfortable with how birthday-performance pressure makes me feel. So here is my birthday tribute to my mother, and I have but one question to those of you who are birthday-celebrating experts: Did you write a whole column about your mother’s birthday?

Emily sends some love to Kristen. You are the best, much healing to you.

Write Letters to the Editors

If you are passionate about an issue, concerned about a problem, or excited to share an idea:

Email letters to anchor@hope.edu

Grace & peace

Grace Olson
Columnist

The book collector

The Fourth of July let me down, and not because I didn’t see fireworks. Traveling home from Holland, I rode the Amtrak into Chicago and spent a few hours in the city before catching the commuter train to the suburbs. I planned to hike the 20 blocks from Union Station to a two-storyed used bookshop on the corner of Wabash and Illinois.

While I can spend hours in any bookshop, only in used bookstores does my wallet ever open: the fragrance of yellowed paper! Dog-eared pages! Someone’s thoughts threading along the margins, and only $5.50!

But, no sensible shopkeeper stays open on a holiday, so I walked back to the station, feeling my loss. I was hoping to find Wallace Stegner’s “Angle of Response”, because I couldn’t tolerate the cumbersome typeface of the copy I was reading. Or, if not Stegner, maybe “Cloudstreet” by the Australian author Tim Winton. Over Christmas break, on a friend’s recommendation, I spied his book “Dirt Music” tucked into the corner of my hometown’s used bookshop. Hypnotized by Winton’s rendering of Western Australia, I was on the hunt for “Cloudstreet” so I could fall back under his spell.

Assuming they’re open, thrift stores rarely disappoint. If you’re in the mood for anything ever featured in Oprah’s Book Club—”A Million Little Pieces,” “The Poisonwood Bible,” or “White Oleander”, maybe—you’re sure to find at least six copies of it, because what else do you do with a book once your book club has finished? I’ve uncovered glossy-paged photography and design books, and I’ve come across a few great cookbooks, but the astronomical number of fad diets requires endurance to comb through that section.

Amazon.com has revolutionized my used-book-hunting habits. Several years ago, hit with the memory of a beloved childhood book (something wintry, lifting lines of poetry, a recipe for chocolate cake), I searched the Internet for any possibility vaguely matching my criteria. Weeks later, “Happy Winter” surfaced among lists of out-of-print children’s books, and I ordered it. What if it’s the very book I read 15 years ago?

Buying a book new deprives you of the pleasure of its history. Without this exchange of previously-read books, I would never have been privy to the note jotted into “Mountain Man Dance Moves”, a book of ridiculous lists. Imagine the game of trading book lists, exchanging of previously-read books, I would never have been privy to the note jotted into “Mountain Man Dance Moves”, a book of ridiculous lists. Imagine the game of trading book lists, exchanging.

Despite this absurdity, the front page of my book reads, in green gel pen: “Erin—this is the funniest book EVER! Bound to put a smile on your face while you are working through infusion #4. You can also read it post cancer :) I love you! Abby”.

My book has been somewhere! It has been held and loved. With nothing more than green pen, this silly book has united me with the poignant story of two girls I’ve never met.

So, I’m a sucker for used books, which led me to my newest discovery: Book Village, a narrow shop on College Avenue, wedged beside Gregor dogs. Shelves stretch ceilingward, jazz hums in the air and these books, with all their histories, wait patiently for me to return, wallet in hand.

Grace implores you, if you run across any copies of Cloudstreet, marked up or not, let Grace know. Shall be eternally indebted to you.
From the inside out

Ann Green
Photography Editor

Ka mate, Ka mate, Ka ora, Ka ora

As football fans in America are gearing up for this year’s Fantasy Leagues, the rest of the world is finally ready for the International Cricket Champions Trophy Tournament and are just getting over the excitement of rugby season (which ended in May, mind you).

There is such a difference in sports around the world. It’s cricket or rugby everywhere else, but in the US of A, now is the season for American football. The sport where each play lasts an outstanding six seconds, as opposed to the rugby plays that are kept alive until someone scores, or the cricket games which go so long there are meal breaks.

If you’ve ever seen an All Blacks match, it’s constant scrambling and throwing backwards with an occasional punt just for fun. Terminology such as “sin bin,” “maul,” “scrum,” and “dummy kick” make the sport of rugby sound like a new edition of “Street Fighter”.

In America, we place bets on fantasy players from week to week, who excel not only in football but also in the beloved sport of dog fighting, in hopes of winning a few dollars. Sports fans abroad, however, shew pride in their country and never give up on their team as a whole, no matter how their record turns out (similar to Cubs fans as I understand them).

Coming back to Hope from a semester abroad, I’ve thought and rethought just about every aspect of my life. My developmental psychology experience tells me that the new knowledge I’ve gained follows the Piagetian process of accommodation. It’s changing the ideas and presuppositions in your head to fit the new and real ones you’ve been presented with.

New Zealanders (or Kiwis as they are affectionately called) have a laid back, “no worries” attitude that I hope to bring to life in the States. I feel as though my perspective has been broadened and I see a lot of things on a larger scale. I’ve been trying not to sweat the small stuff (and who likes to sweat, anyway?), but being around you Americans again, sometimes I can’t help it.

It’s a struggle to not fall into the old habits of always being on time and checking everything off the endless “to-do lists.” I’m not saying to be rude and skip out on events or to scrutinize each other, but can we all just chill out a bit?!” Have a meeting at 10? Try being on time instead of 15 minutes early. Forget to read Chapter 3 for lecture? You’ll get to it sometime this week. Didn’t return a call? Friends understand and will be there tomorrow. Like Jesse McCartney would say, “Don’t Stress, don’t stress, don’t stress.”

Developing this attitude has helped me come to appreciate aspects of Holland that I never before thought twice about. Central heating and air conditioning, all 15 hours of the “Today Show”, driving on five-lane highways and on the “right” side of the road, big screen movies on their release and the endless to-do lists. It’s changing the ideas and presuppositions in your head to fit the new and real ones you’ve been presented with.

Ann would like to thank Katie for attending the All Blacks game with her in Dunedin. It was an experience that she’ll never remember.

Parentheticalities

If we achieve nothing else
Kaili Doud Columnist

I’m sure I can’t be the first person at Hope ever to discuss this phenomenon in writing, but it has occurred to me recently that mealtimes in Phelps don’t simply involve the retrieving and consumption of food in and of itself.

To an innocent bystander (a touring high school student’s mother, for example), a lunchtime scene would merely reveal a cafeteria filled with college students bearing curiously hearty appetites.

But, when we look closer, we can see that these mealtimes are frosted with the subliminal, anticipatory competition of many a dessert-seeking creature. I suppose that, really, most of us are quite open about the subject as we stand in line for our chance at laudable triumph.

Indeed, I refer to those esteemed, boxy metal contraptions at the back end of the cafeteria: the self-serve, delicious, flavor-diverse, dairy sludge dispensing machines.

The general consensus is that, of course, most of the student body has at some point or another tried to master the art of “swirling” or idly positioning frozen dairy product onto choice sugar or “Great Tasting” cake cone.

Certainly some of us are more commonly successful than others (personally, I’d prefer to have a few mistake curls and the occasional incredibly stunning winning手里), but it is true, perhaps universally, the day dream becomes reality when the art has been mastered.

Just several dinners ago, as I stood in line for my ninth attempt this year, a gentleman several opponents ahead of me let out a jubilant “Yes!” along with a celebratory fist pump with the completion of his undoubtedly perfect cone.

Needless to say, he received polite applause and a pat on the back, but Jealousy sets in quickly, and one mustn’t allow such distractions to meddle with performance.

One must live under the invariable belief that every dog has its day.

I imagine that the skill of those individuals who had the extraordinary pleasure of succeeding habitually will deteriorate over time.

Or, maybe the majority will soon overshadow the percentage of said predisposed masters. In spite of this undeclared competition, however, I suppose it is true that each and every come-maker deserves recognition for his or her efforts.

So today, while you’re standing around waiting for your next opportunity at success, congratulate your predecessors for their hard work.

And if someone happens to create a faultless wonder, smile, tell him or her it’s awesome and advance boldly to the threshold.

Kaili doesn’t have much to say here, but she hopes, of course, that everyone is having a swell day.
Men's Golf
Saturday, Sept. 19, MIAA Jamboree at Adrian, noon
Thursday, Sept. 24, MIAA Jamboree at Kalamazoo, 1 p.m.
Saturday, Sept. 26, MIAA Jamboree at Trine, noon
Monday, Sept. 28, HOPE HOSTS MIAA JAMBOREE, 1 p.m.
Monday, Oct. 5, MIAA Jamboree at Calvin, 1 p.m.
Tuesday, Oct. 6, at Red Poling Classic at TPC, 9 a.m.
Thursday, Oct. 8, MIAA Jamboree at Adrian, 1 p.m.
Home tournament played at Wuskowhan Players Club

Women's Soccer
Sept. 18, at Ohio Wesleyan, 6 p.m.
Sept. 19, at Ohio Northern, 4:30 p.m.
Sept. 23, at Aquinas, 4 p.m.
Sept. 26, at Rochester, noon
Sept. 30, at Alma, 4 p.m.
Oct. 3, at Wheaton, 7 p.m.
Oct. 6, ADRIAN, 4 p.m.
Oct. 10, at Olivet, noon
Oct. 14, KALAMAZOO, 4 p.m.
Oct. 17, TRINE, 3 p.m.
Oct. 20, at Saint Mary's, 4 p.m.
Oct. 24, ALBION, noon
Oct. 28, at Calvin, 4 p.m.
Oct. 31, MIAA Tournament first round, noon
Nov. 5, MIAA Tournament semifinals, 3 p.m.
Nov. 7, MIAA Tournament championship, noon

Cross Country
Sept. 18, at Michigan State Invitational, 2 p.m.
Sept. 26 Host MIAA Jamboree at Ridge Point Church
Oct. 3 at Lansing CC, noon
Oct. 10 at Rose-Hulman, Ind.
Oct. 17 at UW-Oshkosh
Oct. 17 at Manchester, Ind.
Oct. 31 MIAA Championships at Adrian
Nov. 5 NCAA Great Lakes Regional at Rose-Hulman, Ind.
Nov. 21 NCAA Championships at Baldwin-Wallace, Ohio
All meets at 11 a.m. unless indicated

Football
Sept. 19 - UW-EAU CLAIRE, 1 p.m. ET
Sept. 26 - at Wheaton, 7 p.m. CT
Oct. 3 - at Trine, 1 p.m. ET
Oct. 10 - ALBION, 2 p.m. ET (Homecoming)
Oct. 24 - ADRIAN, 1 p.m. ET
Oct. 31 - at Olivet, 1 p.m. ET
Nov. 7 - at Alma, 1 p.m. ET
Saturday, Nov. 14 - KALAMAZOO, 1 p.m. ET

Women's Golf
Sept. 17, MIAA Jamboree at Albion, 1 p.m.
Sept. 23, HOPE HOSTS MIAA JAMBOREE, 1 p.m.
Sept. 25-26, at Bethel College Invitational (Black Horn GC), noon
Oct. 1, MIAA Jamboree at Kalamazoo, 1 p.m.
Oct. 3, MIAA Jamboree at Saint Mary's, 1 p.m.
Oct. 9-10, MIAA Championships at Bedford Valley, 1 p.m./9 a.m.
Home tournament played at Macatawa Legends CC

Volleyball
Sept. 16, SAINT MARY'S, 7 p.m.
Fri., Sat., Sept. 18-19, at Wittenberg Ohio-Michigan Border Battle
Friday - vs. Mount Union, 1 p.m.
Friday - vs. Mount St. Joseph, 5 p.m.
Saturday - vs. Ohio Northern, 10 a.m.
Saturday - vs. Wittenberg, 4 p.m.
Sept. 22, at Albion, 6:30 p.m.
Sept. 25, KALAMAZOO, 7 p.m.
Sept. 26, CALVIN, 1 p.m.
Sept. 30, TRINE, 6:30 p.m.
Fri.-Sat., Oct. 2-3, at Illinois Wesleyan Barker Classic
Friday - vs. Capital, 5:15 p.m. CT
Friday - vs. Illinois Wesleyan, 7:30 p.m. CT
Saturday - vs. UW-Platteville, 12:15 p.m. CT
Saturday - vs. Millikin, 2:30 p.m. CT
Oct. 6, at Adrian, 6:30 p.m.
Oct. 9, at Alma, 6:30 p.m.
Oct. 14, OLIVET, 6:30 p.m.
Oct. 20, at Saint Mary's, 7 p.m.
Oct. 23, ALBION, 6:30 p.m.
Oct. 24, at Kalamazoo, 11 a.m.
Oct. 28, at Calvin, 6:30 p.m.
Fri.-Sat., Oct. 30-31, Midwest Challenge
Friday - Hanover at Trine, 5 p.m.; at Trine, 7 p.m.
Saturday: ADRIAN, 10 a.m.; MANCHESTER, noon
Nov. 3, MIAA Tournament first round
Nov. 6, MIAA Tournament semifinals
Nov. 7, MIAA Tournament championship

Students Join with community

* Community, from page 1
where the college does such a good job of communicating what an impact the college has on the community and the community on the college," said Guy Packard, a Holland community member.
"It's really great that it brings us together so that we can get to know each other and the Holland community somewhere outside of Hope," said Yessenia Aguierre (12).

Community Day is an established tradition at Hope College. It began in 1966 when the college held an ox roast for the community and students for the Centennial Celebration. Every year it alternates between being held on campus or off campus at Windmill Island. Since the first ox roast, it has been held annually as a way to bring Holland residents and the Hope community together.

Student Congress starts new year

* Congress, from page 1
future, Oddo talked enthusiastically about the plans Student Congress has for the 2009-2010 school year, including Relay For Life and the successful root beer kegger.
Witcher included the Teaching Hope program and this year’s theme of the economy. The Teaching Hope program culminates in an address by a famous speaker.
Student Congress was established to serve the student body, to be a steward of the money the school receives, and to make sure the administration is an ally in the college process.
Hope football looks to carry on 100-year tradition

Daniel Owens
Guest Writer

One hundred years of tradition. One hundred years of excellence on the field, in the community and in the classroom. As the 2009 season begins, the Hope College football team looks to build on a strong finish in 2008 and add to the already rich history of Flying Dutchmen Football.

The Dutchmen were picked to finish third in the MIAA in a preseason media poll. Following a disappointing 3-7 effort in 2008 that saw the team drop their first seven games, the Dutchmen rebounded in the offseason with a successful conditioning program.

“A lot of guys worked really hard in the weight room and the preseason camp this year was the best I’ve been a part of,” senior tight end and co-captain David DeBoer (’10) said.

Easily the largest team at Hope, the preseason football roster consisted of 148 players including 42 returning letter winners. While having nearly 150 players on a team can create challenges, DeBoer firmly believes that the friendly atmosphere of the team is an integral part of the Hope football experience. “We’ve really been bonding as a team this year and team chemistry is through the roof. Our practices have been productive and there are guys pushing each other at almost every position,” DeBoer said. Despite the team’s work ethic, their efforts have fallen short in the first two games of the season as they fell to Illinois Wesleyan 27-25, on Sept. 5, and Carthage, 26-19, this past Saturday. Bright spots for the Dutchmen thus far include placekicker Steve Hazekamp (’10) being honored as the MIAA player of the week for his performance against Illinois Wesleyan along with the emergence of junior quarterback Chris Frys (’11) who threw for over 300 yards in his first career start against Illinois Wesleyan and 225 yards against Carthage.

Each of the team’s first two games was tightly contested, with Hope leading at some point in the second half. “We want to win and we’ve had a lot of close games that just haven’t turned out in our favor,” DeBoer said. “The key to getting over the hump is doing the little things well. We have to avoid penalties, missed assignments and always hustle. The seemingly small details can make all the difference in close games.”

While DeBoer acknowledged his desire to win, he said he will not measure the success of the season by wins and losses. “Playing football at Hope has been a great experience for me,” DeBoer said. “From the moment I arrived on campus I had 150 friends to sit with at lunch, and that type of camaraderie has been awesome. If I can look back at this season and say I had fun and we came together as a team, 2009 will be a success.”

The Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association announced its 2009 season honor roll as the MIAA recognizes the contributions of the athletes who represent Hope’s football program. The team had 16 players named to the MIAA Academic Honor Roll and 14 to the MIAA Academic All-Conference Team. The football program also received the MIAA Sportsmanship Award for the second consecutive season.

The MIAA Commissioner’s Cup was presented to Co-Athletic Directors Tim Schoonveld and Eva Dean Folkert, President Jim Bultman and emeritus Athletic Director Ray Smith on Saturday. The Commissioner’s Cup is given to the member who has the best cumulative finish in the 18 MIAA sponsored sports. This was the ninth year in a row that Hope has either won or shared the Commissioner’s Cup. In addition, Hope finished first in both men’s and women’s all-sports standings last year and this year with four champions and no team finishing in lower than fourth place.

Softball coach Karla Wolters to retire after spring season

Sydney Jeske
Staff Writer

The Dutch softball team has felt the absence of Karla Wolters. Wolters has coached the Flying Dutch softball team for over 57 seasons in softball, including 42 returning letter winners. Her records by sport include 14-9 in tennis, 19-7 in basketball, 24-21 in field hockey and 45-13 in softball. Her records by season are 624-380. Her 22-season record in softball is 495-302. She is ranked 77th all-time in winning percentage for Division III coaches. Her years at Hope are 27-25 and 225-275. The team has been a part of the MIAA for 7 seasons and 26 years, 1991-1995. She was named the region softball coach of the year in 1995. Wolters was also the MIAA Coach of the Year in 1995 and 1996. She was the MIAA Coach of the Year in 1995 and 2001. Her career collegiate coaching record over 31 seasons is 664-380. Her 23-year softball record at Hope is 495-302. She is ranked the fifth winningest NCAA Division III coach all-time.

Wolters is a 1973 Hope College graduate. She was a standout student-athlete during her undergraduate years playing in 13 varsity sports seasons and lettering in softball, field hockey, basketball and volleyball. In 1986 she was voted the NCAA Division III coach-of-the-year by the Intercollegiate Volleyball Coaches Association. She is among the most successful coaches in the history of the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association with 20 conference championships in softball, volleyball, field hockey and women’s basketball.

Hope College in 2008 honored the Wolters by naming the college’s new softball stadium in their honor.

Soccer teams split weekend

Hoe’s men’s and women’s soccer teams won and lost one game each over the weekend. On Friday, the men defeated Kenyon, Ohio, 3-0, with goals from John Herbert (’10), Mitch Kinner (’12) and Ben Rosema (’11). Logan Neil (’12) and Andrew Gooorhouse (’11) kept the Kenyon Lords from scoring. The women also beat Kenyon on the same day with a score of 3-1. Alyson Epilso (’13) scored one for the Flying Dutch while Tricia Bajema (’13) added two more. Kelsey Bos (’11) had seven saves in the game. On Saturday, the women took on Division III Legends. Women’s soccer went 1-1 against the Flying Dutch, 100. The women played against Buffalo and won, 3-0. The women’s soccer team has a 3-1 record for the season.

MEN’S GOLF FARES WELL IN JAMBOREES

Hope’s men’s golf team has begun conference play for the season with two jamborees. They placed third in their first jamboree on Sept. 8, hosted by Olivet. Charlie Olson (’13) finished in second place with 72 strokes. Chris Ansell (’11) made history when he shot a hole-in-one on the 11th hole. He is the fourth golfer in modern MIAA history to do so. On Saturday, the golf team traveled to Alma for the second jamboree of the season. Their win there put them through to the national championship which was won by the Hope men. The teams also finished first in both men’s and women’s all-sports standings last year and this year with four champions and no team finishing in lower than fourth place.
Hope College volleyball off to strong start

Sports September 16, 2009

The Hope College volleyball team started their quest toward another conference championship and national title by traveling down to St. Louis over Labor Day weekend.

The tournament was hosted by Washington University, which was ranked fifth in the nation. The Flying Dutch came into the 2009 season ranked 22nd in the country and won their first two matches by sweeping Webster and Augustana in straight sets on Friday.

On Saturday the first test of the season came in the tournament semi-finals against host Washington University. “Going into the game we were confident in ourselves that we could pull off the upset,” returning letter winner and outside hitter Traci Baker (‘11) said. “We weren’t intimidated by the ranking; we knew we were pretty good ourselves.”

The Lady Dutch did just that. They defeated Washington University in a four-set match, winning the first two sets, dropping the third, but bouncing back in the fourth. The team continued their tournament run matching up against Millikin in the tournament semi-finals at 7 p.m.

The Tournament was a great opportunity to coach the athletes. Stafford is enjoying this opportunity to coach the team.

“I am very excited to be the coach of the women’s golf team,” Stafford said. “We have a great group of girls and everybody at Hope has made me feel very welcome.”

The group is made up of three freshmen, six sophomores, one junior and one senior. They will be “led by Captain Cassie Sneller (‘10) and Megan Scholten (‘12),” said Stafford.

“I hope we can reach our goals," said Sneller. "One of these goals stands out as the most important. “Our number one goal is to maintain the high academic standards past golf teams have achieved,” Stafford said.

But playing well is important to the team too. “Of course, we would like to be competitive for the MIAA championship and for NCAA bids,” added Stafford.

Another key player for the team, Scholten, was a first team all-conference player last season and placed third in the conference player standings at 81.2 strokes per round.

The team’s season consists of both a fall and spring schedule. Four 18-hole tournaments compose the fall schedule, while the spring schedule will consist of three 18-hole rounds.

The fall schedule determines the MIAA champion and the spring determines the NCAA qualifier to the NCAA Division III championships.

Already this season, the Flying Dutch have played in two tournaments. They began their season at the Bulldog Invitational on Sept. 5, hosted by Ferris State, in which Hope placed 12th out of 18 teams. Scholten, who placed 22nd in a field of 106 golfers, led Hope.

Following the Bulldog Invitational, the golf team participated in the Olivet Invitational this past weekend. The team established a one-stroke lead on Friday, the first day of play. The tournament wrapped up on Saturday. The team held on to their lead and walked away with first place out of the fifteen teams participating.

Scholten once again led the Flying Dutch with rounds of 77-79–156 for an overall third place in the tournament. Sneller finished fourth, one stroke behind Scholten with rounds of 79-78–157. Scores of other Hope golfers were Lauren Zandstra 89-82–171, Charlotte Park 87-87–174 and Andrea McCarty 91-93–183.

In Sneller’s opinion, the team should be able to find much success this season if everything continues how it has started. “We just have to keep practicing hard and playing mentally tough,” Sneller said.

Tomorrow, the Flying Dutch will travel to Albion where they will begin 2009 conference play with the first MIAA jamboree of the season. Their home season will begin next Wednesday at Macatawa Legends Country Club for their first and only home match. Tee off will be at 1 p.m.

Women's golf season's start under new leadership

Kaeli Kust

Ending last season with a national ranking of 25 and a third place finish in both the regular season MIAA standings as well as the MIAA’s qualifying round for the NCAA championships, the Hope College women’s golf team is back this season with a national ranking of 23 and a third in the conference player standings.

One new addition to the team that really test us as a team," Baker said. "Walking away 4-0 and as tournament champions, we are all very excited and confident to start conference play and go after our team goals.”

One new addition to the team is sophomore transfer Jacie Fiedler from Division I DePaul University. Fiedler said the transition from DePaul to Hope has gone very well.

"The girls on the team have been great; they have made the transition on and off the court an enjoyable one," Fiedler said.

In most sports, the jump from Division I school down to a Division III program can be dramatic. Fiedler argues otherwise: "Sure, practice time is cut down, but the players here are good players and we have the experience to get us ready for the conference and national title berth by traveling down to St. Louis over Labor Day weekend.

The tournament was hosted by Washington University, which was ranked fifth in the nation. The Flying Dutch came into the 2009 season ranked 22nd in the country and won their first two matches by sweeping Webster and Augustana in straight sets on Friday.

On Saturday the first test of the season came in the tournament semi-finals against host Washington University. “Going into the game we were confident in ourselves that we could pull off the upset,” returning letter winner and outside hitter Traci Baker (‘11) said. “We weren’t intimidated by the ranking; we knew we were pretty good ourselves.”

The Lady Dutch did just that. They defeated Washington University in a four-set match, winning the first two sets, dropping the third, but bouncing back in the fourth. The team continued their tournament run matching up against Millikin in the tournament semi-finals at 7 p.m.

The Tournament was a great opportunity to coach the athletes. Stafford is enjoying this opportunity to coach the team.

“I am very excited to be the coach of the women’s golf team,” Stafford said. “We have a great group of girls and everybody at Hope has made me feel very welcome.”

The group is made up of three freshmen, six sophomores, one junior and one senior. They will be “led by Captain Cassie Sneller (‘10) and Megan Scholten (‘12),” said Stafford.

“I hope we can reach our goals," said Sneller. "One of these goals stands out as the most important. “Our number one goal is to maintain the high academic standards past golf teams have achieved,” Stafford said.

But playing well is important to the team too. “Of course, we would like to be competitive for the MIAA championship and for NCAA bids,” added Stafford.

Another key player for the team, Scholten, was a first team all-conference player last season and placed third in the conference player standings at 81.2 strokes per round.

The team’s season consists of both a fall and spring schedule. Four 18-hole tournaments compose the fall schedule, while the spring schedule will consist of three 18-hole rounds.

The fall schedule determines the MIAA champion and the spring determines the NCAA qualifier to the NCAA Division III championships.

Already this season, the Flying Dutch have played in two tournaments. They began their season at the Bulldog Invitational on Sept. 5, hosted by Ferris State, in which Hope placed 12th out of 18 teams. Scholten, who placed 22nd in a field of 106 golfers, led Hope.

Following the Bulldog Invitational, the golf team participated in the Olivet Invitational this past weekend. The team established a one-stroke lead on Friday, the first day of play. The tournament wrapped up on Saturday. The team held on to their lead and walked away with first place out of the fifteen teams participating.

Scholten once again led the Flying Dutch with rounds of 77-79–156 for an overall third place in the tournament. Sneller finished fourth, one stroke behind Scholten with rounds of 79-78–157. Scores of other Hope golfers were Lauren Zandstra 89-82–171, Charlotte Park 87-87–174 and Andrea McCarty 91-93–183.

In Sneller’s opinion, the team should be able to find much success this season if everything continues how it has started. “We just have to keep practicing hard and playing mentally tough,” Sneller said.

Tomorrow, the Flying Dutch will travel to Albion where they will begin 2009 conference play with the first MIAA jamboree of the season. Their home season will begin next Wednesday at Macatawa Legends Country Club for their first and only home match. Tee off will be at 1 p.m.