ZEELAND — Newspaper editor Corey Van Koeve, who for years sat on the other side of the council table while covering the meetings, upset incumbent Carl Danielson for one of two council seats in Monday's election.

Drawing his support from the city's north side, Van Koeve, editor of the Zeeland Record, polled 319 votes to become the top vote getter in the council race. Danielson gathered 311 votes while incumbent Gerald Huizenga was returned to office with 313 votes. Robert Tifts had 161 votes.

Voters also returned City Assessor Gilbert J. Van Hoven to office with 360 votes compared with the 203 for Ivan Kleinjans.

The elected office holders will be sworn into office at the April 20 council meeting, City Clerk Leon Van Harn said.

Of the 2,285 persons eligible to vote in the election, 25 per cent, or 571, cast ballots.

Gesture of Help Leads to Arrest Of Four Persons

What started out as a gesture of help by Michigan State Police from Grand Haven resulted in the arrest of four persons at Holland State Park Tuesday night on charges involving minors in possession, carrying a concealed weapon and possession of marijuana.

Officers said they were making routine property inspections at the state park at 10:30 p.m. Tuesday when they noticed a car with its hood up, apparently in trouble.

The troopers went to assist and discovered beer in the front seat of the vehicle and reported when they asked the occupants for identification they began pushing the beer under the front seat.

A further investigation revealed a quantity of marijuana and a switchblade knife on the front seat of the vehicle.

Arrested and lodged in Ottawa county jail were James John Schock Jr., 20, and Gerald Forrest Schock, 18, both of 712 Lake St., Saugatuck; Dennis Mervin Sergeant, 21, of route 1, Fennville, and Eleazar Chavez, 22, of Douglas.

State Police said James Schock was charged with being a minor in possession and carrying a concealed weapon. Gerald Schock was charged with being a minor in possession of beer; Sergeant was held on furnishing to minors and Chavez was charged with possession of marijuana.

The quartet is expected to be arraigned later today in Grand Haven District Court.

Civil War Weapons At Library

The collection of Civil War firearms now on exhibit at the Herrick Public Library is designed to show the principle models of weapons employed by both the Union and Confederate armies during the bloody years of 1861-1865.

The pieces include two converted flint-lock smoothbore muskets of .69 cal. which were reconditioned at the outset of the war. These firearms were manufactured by W. T. Wickham of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania in 1828 and the U. S. Arsenal at Harpers Ferry, West Virginia.

During the war the Union attempted to standardize its weapons and arrived at the U. S. Model 1861 .58 caliber rifled musket. Three firearms of this general type can be seen. One, made by William Muir of Windsor Locks, Conn., is inscribed with the name of the owner during the war years, Isaac S. Ellis. The other two of this type are a special Model 1861 manufactured by a famous name in American Firearms, Samuel Colt and a Model 1864 Springfield.

In an attempt to show the typical firearm which was imported in great numbers during the war, an English Enfield .577 cal. rifled musket is displayed. This firearm, imported in 1862 is marked "Company K, 49th Division, of the 9th Vermont Infantry."

Rounding out the firearms in the 13th Street Showcase is the ultimate weapon produced in the Civil War. This is a seven shot repeating, lever action Spencer Carbine which was carried by a Michigan soldier under the command of George A. Custer.

A sample arm of the Confederacy is shown in the museum showcase, a beautiful brass trimmed .54 caliber Mississippi musket which was manufactured at Harpers Ferry in 1854.

Three handguns are displayed among which is a model 1842 U. S. single shot horse pistol, a .36 caliber Colt Navy model revolver and a .44 caliber revolver manufactured by Starr Arms Co.

The collection is rounded out by a display of hat insignia pins, bayonets, belt buckles, and buttons. The museum case also contains actual Civil War momentos dug up at many actual battle locations in the South and East of Al McGeehan, the owner-collector. Mr. McGeehan, a teacher at E. E. Fell Junior High School, plans to leave the display "for viewing" during the entire month of April.

Attentive Crowd Cheers Chinese Artists' Team

A highly attentive and appreciative audience cheered the performance of the violin-piano team of M Si-Hon and his wife, Tung Kwong-Kwong, in a program of classical favorites of Mozart, Chopin, Raven and Beethoven Wednesday night in Civic Center.

The concert marked the final number of the 1969-70 series and also coincided with the membership campaign for 1970-71. New members for next season were guests of the Holland Community Concert Association at Wednesday's concert.

These Chinese artists who combined the subtlety of the Orient in their approach to classical music received a standing ovation at the conclusion of their concert and then obliged with two encores, two movements from Handel's D major Sonata and a composition by the violinist's brother.

The program opened with Mozart's Sonata in C major, composed about 1872, with Ma Si-Hon performing on a 1714 Stradivarius violin which he acquired in 1967. The two artists share equally in their performance, the piano and the violin having their own emphases in a sonata both simple and complicated.

Miss Tung appeared as solo performer in Chopin's Andante Spianato et Grande Polonaise Brillante, a nocturne-like piece of appealing simplicity with the Spianato which means "smooth" referring to the gently flowing left hand accompaniment.

Maurice Ravel's Tzigane, a concert rhapsody for violin and orchestra, opened with a long unaccompanied passage for the violin in the manner of a cadenza, followed by a lilting melody with broken chord accompaniment.

The Beethoven Sonata No. 9 in A major had a theme characteristic of Beethoven despite the emotion expressed in his other slow movements. The sonata was distinguished by its vivacity of pace which was buoyant and exhilarating.

Tell History Of Kanter's Buildings

A complete history of the family that built the two structures on East Eighth St., which are being razed to make way for a Burger King drive-in restaurant was told to The Sentinel by Stanley Curtis, 130 College Ave.

According to Mr. Curtis, the large building was built by the Kanter family, marine contractors from the Netherlands who specialized in harbor work. The ground floor of the building, which currently housed Holly's Antiques was the firm's house. The other building was a carriage house built by the Kanter family which was later converted into apartments.

The Kanter family did work on the Welland Canal near Port Colborne, Ont. and the Galveston, Texas ship canal, using a method of dyking which they brought with them to this country. This involved making mattresses of brush and sinking them with stones as a base for their structures. The method was also adopted by the U.S. Corps of Engineers for work along the Mississippi River.

There were four Kanter Sons who became local businessmen. Girard ran a hardware store where the Jack Knoll building is now located, with a man named Standard, Lane was chief of the Holland Fire Department in the era of the two-wheeled hose carts. Rokus had a grocery store on River Ave. and John ran a job-printing shop in the old Harrington building on East Eighth St.

A daughter, Miss Jennie Kanter was the city's first librarian, when the library was on the second floor of the No. 2 engine house. She was still serving when the library was moved into the City Hall.

A grandson, Lloyd Kanter is living in Waukesha, Wis., according to Curtis.

Students Get Banking Experience

The past month brought an enlightening experience to the students in rooms 10, 11 and 12 in Lakewood building. They spent the month learning about the American banking system and, during this time, they learned the value of budgeting their money and saving for unexpected happenings.

The process of loaning money as a banker appeared to be an extremely big risk and the biggest threat was determining whether the person who wanted a loan was going to return the money to the bank.

Each child was later given a make-believe checkbook as well as a savings passbook and stores were set up within the room with loans given from the banker. The buyers soon found that they had to transfer money from savings books to checkbooks to prevent checks from bouncing. Most of the store owners were able to pay their loans back within the time limit and were also able to hire more help.

The height of interest was the trip to the First Michigan Bank branch in Holland.

BUILDINGS TO BE RAZED—These buildings on East Eighth St., were being razed to make way for a Burger King drive-in restaurant, according to Hollis Northuis, former owner of one of the buildings. The large, gray building (bottom) was apparently built as apartments and the other building (top), which until recently housed Holly's Antiques, has reportedly seen several uses. Some of Holland's older citizens report that the structure was built after the 1871 fire by a man named Kanter and originally was a plumbing shop. Since then it has reportedly served as a tin shop, upholstery shop, mattress shop, the latter two operated by Gerrit and William Buis respectively, and the antique shop. According to one report, the porch of the antique shop was once at ground level because of a hill on Eighth St.

Sunday School Lesson

Sunday, April 12
The Early Church's Life and Witness
Acts 2:43-47; 4:13-22
By C. P. Dame

The church of today needs the spirit and the outreach of the early church in order to minister to this broken world. The early church believed in its mission and fearlessly proclaimed Jesus as Saviour and Lord.

I. The early church grew. Today some denominations are declining in membership. The early church believed firmly. They fellowshiped together because they had a common faith which bound them to each other. They shared and hence no one had any unmet need. They worshipped together daily in the temple. Some modern church members feel pleased with themselves when they attend church services now and then on Sunday mornings. In addition, these early Christians went from house to house breaking bread together.

Two words in the text note particularly — the words, gladness, and praising. The early Christians were cheerful and conspicuously happy so that they won the "favor with all the people." Is it any wonder that the church grew? People were saved and the warm-hearted church welcomed them.

II. The early church ministered. Peter and John, on the way to the temple to pray healed a lame man who created such an excitement that a crowd gathered. Peter took the opportunity to preach about Jesus. He told the people that they and their rulers had condemned Jesus who was innocent and freed a murderer. In addition he said that Jesus had risen from the dead and that he and others were witnesses. Peter also said that it was through the power of the crucified and risen Jesus that the lame man was healed. The fourth fact Peter stated was that Jesus was the Messiah who was foretold in the Old Testament. Peter's sermon won more converts.

The apostles were arrested and locked in jail. On the next day they were brought before the Council. Boldly Peter told these leaders that the lame man was healed by the name of Jesus and he made the assertion that Jesus is the only Saviour. The boldness of the apostles amazed the religious for they knew that they were untrained men. The healed man stood before all as a testimony to the power of Jesus.

III. Some must speak. The leaders after a consultation told the apostles to stop preaching. The apostles said that they had to obey God and preach Jesus which they had been commanded to do. After their release the apostles hurried to their friends and reported. A great prayer meeting followed. Is it any wonder that the church grew? What about the prayer meetings in your church?

Early Birds Hear Bopf At Breakfast

City Manager William L. Bopf reviewed government functions of the city of Holland, particularly with regard to finances, at the monthly Chamber of Commerce Early Bird breakfast Tuesday in Hotel Warm Friend, Friend.

"And the action starts here," he told the large group of businessmen and women after putting into perspective the growing needs of the city, the welfare of the community and the efforts good citizens put forth to keep Holland a good place.

After three months on the job as city manager, Bopf spoke of the city budget on which he has been working, the 12 departments answerable to the city manager who is answerable to City Council, and the work of the three boards, the Hospital Board, the Library Board and the Board of Public Works.

He said the city budget roughly runs $2.7 million and he was hopeful there would be no tax increase provided sewer bond obligations are absorbed by the Board of Public Works necessitating an increase in sewer service charges. He also spoke of the $4.2 million BPW budget of which $3.3 million is for electrical service.

While aiming for a positive approach because of Holland's many fine qualities, Bopf pointed to the needs of a total reappraisal of all property in Holland, a long-term storm sewer program of $2½ million, recreational development for an enlarged city, and meeting pollution abatement.

He said the last complete reappraisal was done 12 years ago except for some properties in the Allegan county portion of the city.

He said the new budget includes a $12,000 item for Higher Horizons, a program he feels is helpful since students are working with 300 children while another 300 are on the waiting list. This program has a total budget of $34,000 and he considered the city's share as preventive medicine.

He spoke of the need for new police headquarters and the hope that the county would provide an adjoining district court. As for storm sewers, deemed necessary in advance of permanent paving, the city budget earmarks $100,000 for the coming year.

Bopf also spoke of the new computer systems program to handle work for 11 departments in payroll, billing, records and FBI data, an operation which in the end is expected to reduce costs.

During the question period, Bopf spoke of an alternative for the scheduled program of the BPW in sewage treatment and said meetings are slated with the Water Resources Commission and the Michigan Department of Health in careful consideration of what could be approval for new systems. He said Holland industries have been cooperating in seeking solutions and pointed to the need of getting things done locally. "The federal government is not going to pick up the trash in our streets or clean our lakes," he said.

William P. De Long presided. Don Gebrad called attention to "Career Worlds '70" which will be staged in Holland Civic Center April 22 and 23.

Hutchinson Fears 1970 is Critical For Agriculture

FENVILLE — Describing 1970 as a critical year for agriculture, U.S. Rep. Edward Hutchinson, R-Mich., said today that the political influence of farmers has diminished and Congress may take "an easy way out," because it is an election year, on new legislation to supplant the Agriculture Act of 1965 which expires after the 1970 crops are in.

"Neither the House nor Senate committees on agriculture seem close to reporting out a new bill."

"The fact is, agricultural legislation is becoming increasingly difficult to get through Congress. Farmers comprise only 5 per cent of the population compared to 24 per cent 30 years ago and their political influence has diminished proportionately," the Fourth District representative declared in a news letter.

"This surely is a time when farmers and farm groups, acting through enlightened self-interest, must find as much common ground as possible. We can no longer afford the deep divisions that have so long characterized debates on farm programs. We cannot afford to be partisan and we cannot afford quarrels between the executive and legislative branches. What we want is a good bill."

"The task, complicated by the obvious fact that the end product must be palatable to an urban-oriented Congress, is not an easy one," he said.

Hutchinson said Congress could do nothing and let the 1965 act expire or continue or adopt alternative proposals offered by various groups.

Literary Club Closes Year At Dessert-Tea Program

The Woman's Literary Club closed its 1969-70 season Tuesday with a dessert tea honoring past presidents, followed by a program which featured an address on "The Remarkability of Women" by Marquis de la Passadiere, a theatrical producer of Paris.

The Marquis maintained a woman can do everything from the highly professional to the menial and sometimes even remain silent, but it is doubtful that a woman ever will become President of the United States since a candidate must be over 35.

In his light-hearted view laced with enchanting anecdotes, the Marquis explained that a woman has a greater talent for spending money than saving it, but that the most important thing to any woman is to be loved.

He contended women should look like women and wondered why anybody would want to imitate Twiggy "who looks like Sophia Loren after taxes!" He added equal rights for women would be a comedown — more rights, yes, but not the same ones.

"Women are the greatest creation on earth, and the fascination lies not in discovering qualities which are evident but in discovering thoughts," imperfections... their distrust of other women "nav, hate" and the curious combination of criticizing other women, yet always defending them.

As for the age range, the woman in infancy wants love and care, in childhood fun, in the twenties romance, in the thirties admiration, in the forties sympathy and in the fifties cash.

Commenting on the need for humor, Marquis de la Passadiere said without it a woman is bored, besides it is needed in order to adapt to all circumstances, particularly adjusting to men's idiosyncrasies.

Many men think they chose their wives, the speaker said, but this is not true since women usually choose the men and take care of them admirably, usually outliving them.

He said the logical conclusion of marriage is divorce, but he wondered if divorce would be quite so prevalent if it took place in the same setting as the marriage... in church with music, surrounded by friends... he figured the divorce rate would dip.

But he concluded that women are a tower of strength, that they have resources to face anything, that they manage their homes and families to whom does a child in despair go to but the mother? and that men should like them and love them.

"Will men one day understand the nature of women?" He said, "I hope not," adding that the mystery of women is the most prized possession.

Mrs. Robert De Nooyer, club president, presided and Mrs. G. S. MacKenzie introduced the speaker.

Copies of the annual reports were distributed.

All bicycles in the city of Holland must be registered in keeping with city ordinances, and licensing takes place every two years, according to Safety Officer Russ Hopkins.

ACHIEVEMENT AWARD — Rotarian Dick Zwiap (left) receives a significant achievement award for international service from P. Rotary Club Gets Award At Anniversary Meeting

Presentation of an international achievement award for its agricultural work at Katpadi, India, highlighted the 50th anniversary celebration of the Holland Rotary Club at a dinner Thursday night in Hope Reformed Church.

The award, presented by District Governor R. Graham Kevel to Rotary Member Dick Zwiap, was associated with a local project at Katpadi, India, headed by Rotarian J. J. De Valois, formerly an agricultural missionary there.

Thursday's celebration also marked the 65th anniversary of Rotary International and Herbert Hines, a local member who was associated with the staff of Rotary International for 15 years, arranged for the speaker, Dr. Cleo Dawson, a Rotary Institute speaker who delivered an updated version of her original talk, "How to Manage a Woman," which had appeared verbatim in the Reader's Digest some years ago.

Abounding in humor, Dr. Dawson maintained a pace of about 200 words a minute for an hour, holding her audience in rapt attention as she skipped from one subject to another, all of them deceptively light and simple, but underlined with sound psychology. Her stories knit together the great aims of Rotary of peace, love and service and "getting things done," adding that often the unselfish service of club activity abroad is better understood than many an effort of the church.

Through her fast-paced stories it was evident that Dr. Dawson had known privation, loneliness and often danger, and early had come to grips with reality in her search for the basic solution of the frustrations of human thinking. Hers is a simple reality amid confusion in the modern world, based on optimism, faith in God and a joy of living.

But these noble aims were cloaked in stories of how women always run in circles, never answer a real question, and are on earth mainly to keep their husbands happy and their households running. She once remarked to her mother that all nice men were married and her mother replied, "Of course they are. Wives made them that way."

She built quite a case that women are not supposed to be understood, that they go around in circles and never in a straight line like men, that they help cultivate the ego in men and make them feel important and relieve those pressures that make men die young, and overall remain so alluring "that men can't live without us."

She said the approach to each day should be "This is the day the Lord has made," so make the best of it ... don't get hung up on the depressing news on the war front or be carried away by cranberries, cyclamates or fallout. Above all, don't be dull. It's all right to experience rage and fear occasionally. Let the men run the world ... they always come home to the women, and encourage them in their ideas."

Harvey Buter, club vice-president, presided. T. Fred Coleman reviewed the 50-year history of the club which was granted a charter March 11, 1920, holding first meetings in the old Sentinel building, the Methodist Church and finally the hotel where all meetings are still held except for summer months.

Among the guests was William C. Vandenberg, a charter member, former state senator and lieutenant governor. Vandenberg said he withdrew from Rotary while in Lansing because he did not want to endanger the club's attendance record.

Residents that need someone for part time work are asked to contact CAH at 392-1734, Mrs. Armstrong or Mrs. Steve Van Grouw.

During May, students wanting part time work are to register at the CAH in person with forms available from their schools, the chamber of commerce or at the CAH. There will be orientation meetings for the youths. References will be requested.

The program will be manned at the CAH by volunteers.

Community Concert Drive Now in Progress

Holland Community Concert Association opened its 10th anniversary membership campaign at a dinner Monday night in the Woman's Literary Club. The campaign will run to 6 p.m. Saturday operating out of the Green Room at Civic Center.

Association President William Gargano introduced Mrs. Amy Wilcox of Ypsilanti, the New York concert representative, who is assisting in the local campaign to provide a series of five concerts for 1970-71.

Already contracted for in the 1970-71 series are the popular De Cormier Singers, originally the Harry Bellafonte Singers, and Longstreth and Escosa, duo harpists. The harpists have a running commentary on their instruments and after the concert invite people on stage, especially children, for further talks and demonstrations.

Mrs. Wilcox who is in her 20th year with Community Concerts said work in promoting concert series for any community is one of the most gratifying volunteer tasks that can be done since it brings beauty and joy to the home towns. Despite inflation, people are still interested in cultural advancement, but they must be called or approached individually. She spoke of reciprocal privileges in which members of Community Concert Associations may be admitted to concerts not only in their own localities but all over the country.

Mrs. Myron Van Ark, campaign chairman, explained the new family membership plan whereby the entire family is admitted for the equivalent of two adult and one student tickets.

Workers are urged to report to headquarters as quickly as possible. Mrs. Harold Vandebunte is campaign chairman in Civic Center. Hours Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday are 1 to 6 p.m., Friday 1 to 9 p.m. and Saturday 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Persons joining as new members may be guests of the association at its final concert of the 1969-70 series Wednesday at 8:15 p.m. in Civic Center featuring the husband-wife team, Ma Si-Hon and Tung Kwong-Kwong, violin and piano. CONGRESSMAN SPEAKS—Here is a small part of the 115 persons who listened to U.S. Rep. Guy Vander Jagt at a Chamber of Commerce "Breakfast With Guy" in Holiday Inn this morning. Vander Jagt reviewed the tremendous changes of the past decade and pointed to reform, restoration and renewal in seeking solutions. He was presented with a pair of tiny wooden shoes for his infant daughter Virginia Marie, now six months old. (Sentinel photo)

Vander Jagt Sees Hope for Nation

"We have lived through a most unbelievable decade," U.S. Rep. Guy Vander Jagt of Michigan's 9th district, told Chamber of Commerce members at breakfast today in Holiday Inn, advancing three R's for coping with today's world.

His three R's are Reform, Restoration and Renewal: Reform geared to President Nixon's 44 reform proposals, particularly Congressional reform its outmoded seniority rights; Restoration geared almost entirely to President Nixon's State of the Union address declaring war on pollution, and a Renewal of the faith and pride in America and all the things for which it stands today.

Vander Jagt's view of the "unbelievable decade" pointed to heart transplants, crime increase, student protest, LSD and marijuana, the move from beatniks to hippies to yuppies, putting a man on the moon, the transition from flower power to student power to black power, Vietnam and Cuba, marches and moratoriums.

"We were in a decade of shorter miniskirts, longer sideburns and higher taxes," he said, pointing to President Nixon's inaugural address asking people to lower their voices, listen to each other and go forward together.

On poverty, Vander Jagt said despite need and want, the American system has produced more goods and distributed them to more people than any other nation in the world. "Our people at poverty level still are living better than most people in two-thirds of the world," he said, but he added work must go forward to ease the burdens of these people.

As for student demonstration, he said the average citizen in America still has more freedom to do whatever is "his thing" than any other people in the world today.

Answering questions, he favored impeachment of Supreme Court Justice William Douglas on the basis that the Senate in voting down the Haynsworth appointment had imposed an entirely new standard of moral conduct.

As for a balanced budget, he said the country experienced a miracle last year in that it was the first year there were fewer federal employees at the end of the year than at the start. He explained the number had increased every year since 1776. He said the Nixon budget was a balanced budget but the nation was feeling the pangs of a $25 billion deficit two years ago.

On space, he said the program has been shifted from manned flights to unmanned flights, and shots in the future will deal mainly with unmanned flights, reflecting a big drop in costs since most previous costs had been geared to safety of the astronauts.

He also felt that volunteer armed forces, hopefully implemented after the Vietnam war, will reflect a tremendous saving.

Warren Willard presided and Don Stoltz introduced the speaker. Stoltz also presented Vander Jagt with a pair of small wooden shoes for his daughter, Virginia Marie, now six months old.

Mrs. Henry Hekman of the Holland League of Women Voters explained a petition drive in which Leagues all over the country are seeking a million signatures for a constitutional amendment granting full voting privileges to citizens in the District of Columbia. Since this is not a legal document, anybody over 16 may sign.

'Space of Time' Featured At Century Club Dinner

Century Club closed its 72nd year with a dinner meeting and election Monday evening at Point West.

Dr. Robert Brown, associate professor of psychology and director of counseling at Hope College used the topic "In the Space of Time" to tell of his hobby.

His six years of collecting various types of time pieces naturally led to the study of horology which is the science of measuring time or making time pieces. By repairing and restoring old clocks he has learned that the mechanical operation has changed very little.

Dr. Brown told of various ways time has been measured, mentioning the sun dial, water clocks, weight clocks, grandfather and grandmother clocks. He also told of clocks with springs and electronic types which provide greater accuracy. He defined a watch as a time piece that tells time by watching and a clock as a time piece that strikes.

His hobby, said the speaker, has increased his perception of human behavior as he notes a parallel between clocks and people. Clocks, like people, serve a function. As a hobby clocks provide an interest in something besides oneself. The poem "Clocks" by Carl Sandburg, which Dr. Brown used in closing, summarized his interesting information and philosophy.

Bernard Donnelly conducted the election of officers.

SPRING VACATION?—Some youngsters always have the problem of finding things to do during vacations from school. But, snow sculpturing during spring vacation? Holly Alderink, 11, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Alderink, 3427 142nd Ave., and her cousin Christy Meurer thought this would be fun since there is a lot of snow to work with. Tuesday and Wednesday they made two dogs and two rabbits in front of the Alderink home. Holly is shown here adding the final touches to one of the rabbits, while the two dog statues stand in the background. (Sentinel photo)
