Pull teams begin intensive training

Campus ministries teams with Jubilee to rejuvenate community

Creek's Ice Cream Island event in Grand Haven. Admission is free.

The 107th Annual Pull is scheduled for Oct. 2 at 3 p.m., and training is in full swing on campus. The even-year and odd-year teams each consist of 36 members apiece, 18 male pullers and 18 female pullers.

Over its history, the Pull has lasted an average of three hours, with the longest Pull running nearly four in 1977. In 1978, judges established a 3-hour time limit, which still stands today. The shortest Pull, held in 1956, was a mere 2 minutes and 30 seconds.

The tradition is the oldest event in any college history. The first known mention of the Pull comes from the November 1898 edition of the Anchor, where a small box reads “Come out and see the tug-of-war between the Sophomores and the A’s and Freshmen.”

This small announcement escalated to today’s Pull tradition, even-year versus odd-year, where the juniors coach the freshmen and the seniors coach the sophomores.

“Even year rocks,” said Haleigh Lauten to perform.

The 107 pull team prepares for practice each day by carrying their rope to the practice pits.

The '07 pull team prepares for practice each day by carrying their rope to the practice pits.

Catharine Brown, who teaches in the Film and Video Studies program at the University of Michigan, will be commenting on another ruling that opposed segregation, "Mender v. Wallace," presented by Cheryl Brown and ended legal segregation of Mexican Americans in Californian public schools.

Other speakers include Christian Dark, professor at Howard University of Law, Steven Spencer, associate professor of political philosophy at the University of Waterloo, and Orlando Taylor, vice-provost for research at Howard University. Hope faculty who will be presenting during the Symposium include Chris Bailey, professor of biology, and Johnson. More information can be found on KnowHope.

PULL from 1

said Ashley Joseph ('08). “There are only four years when the Pull was not held. Due to the war, the event was cancelled in 1918, 1943, and 1945. It was also cancelled in 1957 due to a flu epidemic. Sophomores have won the competition 58 times; the freshmen trail at 29. The Pullers were unaccounted for, available for comment, claiming they did not want to give away strategies. The Pull is won in the same fashion as any tug of war game: the team with the most rope at the end is the winner. However, determining the winner is not always the easy. It is possible for both teams to gain rope during the competition, because the rope stretches. In this case, the winner is determined by which side gained more rope. There are also 4 years where the event ended in a tie: 1916, 1926, 1952, and 1977. The 1926 team settled the matter in a game of baseball, where the sophomores triumphed, and the rest were left unresolved. It is also possible for the rope to break, as it did in 1974. In this case, a new rope must be found and the event is rescheduled.

Trio of musicians jazz up Hope’s campus

Critically acclaimed MSU jazz professors to perform for the campus community

Andrea Vandenburgh Staff Reporter

At 7 p.m. on Saturday, in Wichers Auditorium, the Music Department presents the jazz musicians Fred Hersch, Gene Bertoncini and Tom Knific, three professors from Western Michigan University, in a special jazz performance.

Pianist Fred Hersch is an innovative force in the jazz community, having received two Grammy nominations for Best Jazz Instrumental Performance. He has recorded 20 albums as either a soloist or a bandleader, co-led 20 more with him as a sideman or featured soloist on some 80 further recordings. A native of Cincinnati, Hersch has been playing the piano since he was 4 years old. After studying at Boston’s New England Conservatory, he headed to New York City, where he quickly became most one of the most in-demand pianists in town.

Hersch has also acted as a passionate spokesman and fundraiser for AIDS services and education agencies, a cause to which he is especially devoted given his own 17-year struggle with HIV. In fact, Hersch feels that his health has put a premium on the time he has to grow as an artist. He takes no prescriptions.

Guitarist Gene Bertoncini is recognized worldwide for his eclectic performances. He has firmly established himself as one of the most eloquent and versatile masters of the guitar. With elegance and ease, he bridges the jazz, classical, pop, and bossa nova styles, integrating his own spontaneous and tasteful improvisations along the way. He performed regularly on the Merv Griffin and Johnny Carson shows and has been one of the most prolific and popular studio musicians in New York City. Bertoncini has twice been named jazz guitarist of the year in Brazil and by JAZZIZ magazine.

Bassist Tom Knific is also recognized internationally, although much of his best work has been done here in Michigan classrooms. He has appeared at chamber music festivals throughout North America and Europe.

Knific is professor of double bass and director of the Jazz Studies Program at Western Michigan University, which has produced more Down Beat Magazine Student Music Award winners than any other school for most of the last decade. Knific has also taught at the Interlochen Arts Academy, Michigan State University, and the Cleveland Institute of Music, and has presented more than 100 master classes worldwide.

The public is invited to the concert and admission is free.

Independent musician Elodie Lauten performs for Hope

Post-minimalist composer and songwriter will also work with music students while on campus

Jordan Wolfson Arts Editor

Independent composer and producer Elodie Lauten will be performing for the Hope College community at 7 p.m. on Friday in Wichers Auditorium.

Born in Paris in 1950, Lauten studied piano at the Paris Conservatory at age 7. At 12, she wrote her first composition. She later applied and was accepted to the prestigious Institut d'Études Politiques at age 18, because her uncle wanted her to get a practical education. After her graduation, she received an opportunity at the Musée d’art Moderne to compose and perform music for a play by Dashiell Hawat. It was a rousing success, and after this she decided to devote her life to music.

Lauten traveled to New York, where she became friends with the poet Allen Ginsberg, who would charge the course of her musical career simply by inviting her to a Farfisa organ. This led her to experiment with how music could be expressed electronically. In 1986 Lauten received a Master of Arts in Electronic Composition from New York University.

"A seminal figure ... one of the leading post minimal composers," said The Anchor.

Lauten’s works include chamber music, songs, dance music, multimedia opera, soundtracks and music for the Trine, a lyre which Lauten designed herself, which produces microtonal music. Over the past 30 years, Lauten has released 18 albums under 10 labels. She is well-known for her work in post-minimalism. Her most recent work, entitled “Waking in New York City, a portrait of Allen Ginsberg,” reveals the late poet’s work in a new light.

“Elodie Lauten’s work extracts order from chaos,” said The New York Times. While Lauten is here at Hope, she will be working with students in the music department as well as lecturing and presenting in other music classes. This performance will include the world premiere of several of her works, including a contrafacts solo titled "The Four Pillars of Common Sense," and a trio for violin, cello, and piano entitled "T.E.V.B."

Wichers Auditorium is located in Nykerk Hall on Hope’s campus. The public is invited to this concert, and admission is free.
A WORLD OF BELIEFS: RELIGION ON CAMPUS AND BEYOND OUR NATION

Challenging the acceptance of religions on campus from a Christian perspective

Acceptance through comprehension and understanding

Christianity is the world's largest religion and represents the majority of students on campus' affiliation. The world's second largest religion, Islam, was founded by the prophet Mohammed in seventh century Arabia. He is believed to have received the Quran from God. Islamic law regards itself as the religion that everybody is supposed to adopt. Practicing Muslims pray in mosques, led by an imam. There are approximately 6 million Muslims in the United States and over 1.3 billion worldwide. The Quran emphasizes the unity of one God and Islam is believed to solidify the final revelation of God to humanity, channelled through Mohammed.

The renowned Five Pillars of Islam focus on faith, prayer five times per day, alms giving or zakat, pilgrimage or hajj and fasting during the period of Ramadan. No Muslims are obligated to follow a certain style of dress. However, some Muslim women don a veil which covers everything but the eyes. Others wear no veil at all. The world's third largest religion is Hinduism and represents India's religious and cultural system. There are approximately 900 million Hindus in the world and 1.285 million practicing Hindus in the United States. Referred to as the Sanatan Dharma or "eternal religion," Hinduism honors a broad spectrum of philosophies and supports four dominant denominations which are essentially independent religions.

Hindus are mono-theistic, supporting the belief of an all-powerful God, however, also suggesting that the divine beings exist in unseen realms. Communion with these gods can be gained through worship and rituals. Hindus also support the law of karma, where each person creates his own destiny by his thought, word, and deed. Until all karmas are resolved, the soul will reincarnate. Hinduism decrees that all life is sacred and that no particular religion can provide the only way to salvation.

Many Hindu women wear long, wrapping silk gowns called sari. Adornment, worn on the forehead is known as a bindi. Some men, especially from the northern region of India, choose to wear turbans. As the fourth-largest religion, Buddhism was initiated by Gautama Siddhartha around 553 B.C.E. in India. Known as "the Buddha" it is said that he received enlightenment through meditation. Approximately 360 million people practice Buddhism around the world. Buddhists are nontheistic, meaning they do not believe in an omnipotent or personal God. A collection of Buddha's teachings called the Tripitaka as well as Sutras are studied as sacred texts. Buddhists also believe in laws of karma and seek enlightenment from the cycle of rebirth, which is attributed to personal desire and attachment to oneself. Buddhist monks often are clothed in saffron robes and typically shave their heads.

Sikhism is the fifth largest religion in the world and the majority of 23 million believers live in India. In Punjabi, the word Sikh is translated as "disciple." Sikhism was founded by Guru Nanak Dev who was born in 1469 and raised in a Hindu family in India. To begin his first sermon, Dev said, "There is no Hindu, there is no Muslim," to the outrage of local religions. Followers of Sikhism worship in temples and honor sacred texts completed by Guru Gobind Singh, the ninth teacher following Dev.

As Election Day draws closer, presidential candidates John Kerry and George W. Bush are touring the country, campaigning not only for the four years ahead, in an effort to rally voters.

"We’ve lost millions of jobs. Bush is the first president in 72 years to have lost jobs," said Kerry in a Sept. 15 interview with nationally syndicated radio host Don Imus.

In regards to the economy, Kerry told Imus, "We’ve lost millions of jobs. Bush is the first president in 72 years to have lost jobs."

The John Kerry and John Edwards campaign website, www.johnkerry.com, said, "John Kerry and John Edwards plan to help strengthen the economy so that taxpayers can cut taxes for businesses that create jobs here in America instead of moving them overseas. Ninety-eight percent of all American businesses will get a tax cut under the Kerry-Edwards plan. Kerry will end corporate welfare as we know it, roll back the Bush tax cuts for the wealthiest Americans, and impose a real cap to keep spending in check."

Terrorism and homeland security are the focal points of this election. Kerry told Imus, "I’ll do a better job of making America safe. George Bush has talked a game, but he hasn’t done it."

According to Kerry’s website at www.johnkerry.com, points of the Kerry-Edwards homeland security plan include:

—Tapping the ability to gather, analyze and share information so we can track down and stop terrorists before they cause harm; taking strong measures to harden likely targets—including nuclear plants, trains, and subways—against possible attack; ... and making our airports, seaports, and borders more secure without intruding upon personal liberties."

Addressing the issue of health care, Kerry told Imus, "Bush hasn't done anything about health care in four years. Five million Americans have lost their health care."

The campaign website says the Kerry-Edwards plan for health care will "cut family premiums by up to $1,000... give every American access to the range of high-quality, affordable plans available to members of Congress and extend coverage to 95 percent of Americans, including every American child... fight to erase the health disparities that persist along racial and economic lines... and reduce prescription drug prices by allowing the re-importation of safe prescription drugs from Canada, overhauling the Medicare prescription drug plan, ensuring low-cost drugs, and ending artifi-

Students clarify mistaken political affiliation in Anchor

To the Editor:

In regards to your front-page picture depicting protesters of George W. Bush on Monday, September 13, we would like to point out that neither Glenn Lester nor Jordan Vande Bunte is a Hope Democrat. Yet your caption describes them as such. It seems to be a gross oversight on your part to generalize that anyone opposed to Bush is a Democrat.

We are, in fact, merely concerned citizens.

Food Waste Awareness Week encourages reflection

To the Editor:

I hope so. And I’m hoping that this week’s event in Philips will remind you to do so. Food Waste Awareness Week is a student-initiated effort with a few underlying goals. First, we hope to reduce the amount of food that gets thrown away. As a general rule, students make too many of them. In January 2004 informal survey, students told us that they consistently took too much food for a variety of reasons including: “Because it’s there,” “Because I see something, grab it, and then see something I want more,” and “Because I don’t know what I’m going to like.”

We hope that a little bit of foresight can reduce that excess. Our second and perhaps more pervasive goal is an increased awareness of the community at large. As students, we are served in the dining halls on meal plans, it’s easy to forget that the world extends beyond us. I know, because I lived it. When I first began eating in the dining halls last fall, I did what most people do: I saw food, took it, ate what I wanted, and set the rest on the conveyor belt to disappear behind a wall, never to be seen again. It took the knowledge of the Community Kitchen right next to campus to show me that a conveyor belt isn’t really the end of the line.

The Community Kitchen is a jointaty of Western Theological Seminary and Community Action House where volunteers serve approximately 100 meals each day. Local donors, including area businesses, supply food for this purpose. The managers and director of Philips Dining Hall, as one of many strategies for waste reduction, partner with the Community Kitchen as one of those donors. If, after their efforts to minimize waste, there is a surplus of a food item that will be safe the following day, it is donated to the Community Kitchen where it helps feed a portion of the 11,000 people living in Ottawa County.

In other words, you will actually consume can directly aid in meeting the needs of people who live just down the street.

As recipients of bountiful resources and in brothers and sisters to members of our community we must take personal responsibility to help. We can no longer conceptualize poverty as a problem half a world away when people are receiving needed free meals a mere two hundred yards from our dining hall. Know that your decisions affect the world in a significant way. If you open your eyes in the dining hall, you may be surprised at what you see outside it.

Now go ahead. Eat up.

New student Orientation not necessarily for everyone

To the Editor:

I did not orientate. Perhaps I should repeat that. I didn’t orientate. My first weekend at Hope started on Saturday, when I arrived and moved my possessions in: on Sunday, I attended my church’s festival and spent some quality time with my soon-to-be-empty-nester parents: on Monday evening, I came back, and the next day I went to class. It was perfectly lovely.

Now, I want to make something perfectly clear before I continue. This is not a letter disparaging Orientation. I greatly respect the amazing effort put forth by the students to coordinate this massive event. No, I am writing this because the response I got, which was shocking to say the least. One afternoon on Saturday, the RA’s & RD in my building acted as if I had missed my train. I could go to DeWitt and catch up with them if I wanted to, they said. They couldn’t seem to comprehend I had not gone to Orientation on purpose. Soon, walking around campus became like being in an interrogation room. People knew (and some I didn’t) had to know why I was leisurely dining on campus and not with my group. Weary of the endless questioning, my family resorted to excuses: I had to work (which was true) and I wanted to go to my church’s festival (also true).

Well, for all you who asked, here’s the whole truth:

I was not interested. I needed no more meaningful friends had I orientedate. I am happy, and I did it my way.

To: Martin Luther King Jr. Day could be just what Hope needs

While reading the Saturday Holland Sentinel this past weekend, the Life & Style section caught my eye.

What I found interesting was that the section’s first page, consisting of two stories and a column, was completely devoted to religion. Reading further, I took particular interest in an article discussing the rise of customized communion and the divisions that are now surfacing due to some of the changes being made by individual churches.

As a Roman Catholic growing up with a Jewish father, I’ve learned a little bit about what it’s like to try to combine two different faiths into one, harmonious relationship.

I have attended Catholic Mass, synagogue services, Bar Mitzvahs, Baptisms and other Catholic and Jewish events for as long as I can remember. I celebrate both Catholic and Jewish holidays, not necessarily because I believe everything about both of them, but I take part in them because they are important to my family and an important part of our holidays.

But it’s not always easy. Just like with any other difference of opinion, there have been many misunderstandings within my family regarding my parents’ facts, from their marriage to the religion of their children.

Likewise, when I came to Hope. I experienced another “difference of opinion.” This time it was between myself and other (non-Catholic) Christians. I found myself avoiding chapel services and not wanting to participate in my religion classes because everything was so different from anything I had ever learned about my faith.

Many students didn’t always take too kindly to the idea of being Catholic either. They often seemed to be an “us” and “them” mentality when it came to discussing Catholic belief and I felt as if I had to somehow act worthy as a Christian. I particularly liked a statement made in Tom Schaefer’s column the other day. It said: “Faith is not argumentative or confrontational…You don’t have to prove your spiritual worth to God or your co-worker or professor.” Just because you’re different from someone doesn’t make you any better or any worse than that person.

This is a lot more difficult of a concept than one may think.

Since my freshman year I have never been to the Gatherv and I’ve only been to chapel about a handful of times per year. While I have found that this is not the path for me. I know that for many others, it has brought them closer to God and strengthened their faith immensely. Our beliefs and way we come to having these beliefs may be different, but in the end we’re all human beings just trying to have a little faith, one day at a time.

Imperialism

When I think about empires, I think of the Aztecs, the Romans and that saying, "The sun never sets on the British Empire."

The British were history’s last great conquerors. One by one, though, their territories gained independence, and imperialism retreated to the pages of history. Right? Maybe not.

Today, the giant yellow arches of McDonald’s litter skylines around the world. The world’s major economic powers have set the rules of the global marketplace. Institutions controlled by the powerful, such as the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, dictate policy to weaker nations; they impose economic and political conditions for granting much-needed loans. The differences between national economies are blurring, and power, in the form of money, is being consolidated in the hands of an elite few.

Could all of this be imperialism, of an economic nature? What about the ideas that are required to adopt certain economic policies, in accordance with globalization and free-market economics, in order to receive loans. These policies call for the privatization and selling of government-owned business and the dropping of trade barriers such as tariffs and quotas) and are erasing the borderlines on world maps — without the consent of the people affected.

These international economic institutions are run on nondenominational ways. The voting power of member nations is directly related to their level of monetary contribution. This leads to policy dictation by rich countries, including the United States, which holds 18 percent of the vote.

Another clue pointing toward the imperialist nature of structural adjustment is its ineffectiveness at accomplishing its supposed goal: ridding the world of poverty. These policies have been applied across Latin American and other areas of the world with little success. They treat only the symptoms of the multidimensional disease that is poverty and do little to get at the root of the problem.

If these programs were to be measured on a yardstick of effectiveness, it would be determined that the time, energy and money spent on dictating and enforcing the prescribed economic change is being wasted. On the other hand, when measured by their effectiveness at extending the sphere of influence of the powerful and increasing its level of dependency of the weak, they pass with flying colors.

What yardstick should we be using? Does the world need to be "colonized" by capital to grow economically? These are fundamental questions to consider...

Grounded: Dutchmen can’t tackle Tigers

Balanced rushing attack stuns Dutch

Hope traveled to Greensville, Ind., last Saturday and found DePauw University to be some rather nasty hosts as the Tigers dispatched of the Dutchmen 35-14. Joe Schonard (*06) managed to go 14 of 35 passing, for 253 yards with two touchdowns and two interceptions, to DePauw’s Curran Clark.

Hope (1-1) was unable to halt the DePauw rushing attack as the Tigers (2-3) gouged up 388 yards rushing on the day as the Tigers’ Ross Westhoff ran for 158 yards and Jeremiah Marks rushed for 144 yards and a touchdown.

The Tigers struck first with just 53 seconds left in the first quarter as Westhoff hooked up with Jamar Schrock (*05) for a 21-yard touchdown pass to make the score 7-0. The Dutchmen wasted no time answering as Schonard found Jake Sheck (*06) from 34 yards out with 1:35 remaining in the first half to knot the score at 7-7.

No more than 2 minutes later in the 11:07 mark in the second quarter, Shephard and Westhoff hooked up again for a 9-yard touchdown catch to go back up 14-7. Hope answered the challenge and drove all the way to the Tigers’ 2-yard line, but was stopped on four straight plays. On the next possession, DePauw drove deep into the end zone, ending on a 3-yard run by Jason Murphy for a 21-advantage at the half.

The second half started promisingly as the Dutchmen recovered a DePauw fumble at the Tigers’ 32-yard line, but turned the ball over on downs on back-to-back possessions.

DePauw would tack on another touchdown with 6:27 remaining in the third quarter as Westhoff connected with Burt Claxton for a 2-yard touchdown pass and a 28-7 DePauw advantage. The Dutchmen would answer on the following possession with a 6-play, 77-yard drive that finished with Schwander finding Dustin Smith (*08) from 7 yards out to bring the lead down to 28-14 to finish the third quarter.

DePauw would find the end zone one final time, with 12:25 remaining in the contest, when Marks scored from 5 yards out for the 35-14 advantage to cap a six-play, 64-yard drive that lasted 2:35.

The Dutchmen would threaten later in the fourth, but a Curran Clark interception ruined a nine-play, 57-yard drive that would have put the Dutchmen within two touchdowns.

After forcing a DePauw punt, Schwander picked again by Clark on the first play from scrimmage to seal the Dutchmen’s fate.

Schwander led all rushers with 68 yards on 12 carries, and Paul Burgess (*06) added 13 carries for 38 yards.

Joe Verschuuren (*05) had seven catches for 110 yards, Schrock chipped in with three catches for 39 yards.

Verschuuren also had a fumble recovery.

Mitch Cummings (*05) had 12 tackles on the day and a sack to lead the defense for Hope.

Joe Diekakers (*06), Bryan Turner (*08), and Nick Oosteen (*07) all had nine tackles each, Paul tackles for the Flying Dutchmen on the defensive side of the ball.

DePauw had 22 first downs to Hope’s 18, and were 10 on third-down conversions, while the Dutchmen were 2 of 11 on third downs.

Wiehoff also managed to go 13 for 17 passing for 310 yards and three touchdowns.

Hope managed to rack up 378 total yards of offense, but DePauw out gained them with 498 total yards of offense.

The Dutchmen managed to control the clock as well with 39:26 of possession to the Flying Dutchmen’s 20:34.

The Dutchmen would look to go 2-1 on the year this season when it will host Wheaton College, Ill., at 1 p.m.

The Thunder will enter this Saturday’s contest with a 2-4 record after defeating Greenville 65-6 and downing Gustavus Aldapheus 42-21 in their season opener.

Hope cheerleading is gearing up for another great year. The team began practicing the first week of August and kicked off the season with a trip to Universal Cheerleading Summer Camp at the University of Wisconsin in Madison.

Hope did its best ever at camp this year, winning two out of three competitions. "We took first place in Sideline and Fight Song and second in Cheer Competition, said Wes Wooley, head coach. "Since camp right away.'

"The cheerleaders do more than just sports, Wooley pointed out that another goal for this season was to get the fans more involved in the sport and to build the team and pass some experience on.

"The cheerleaders keep the crowd on their feet," Wooley said. "It’s hard sometimes, but it’s worth it. The friendships I’ve made.

"We host a big cheer clinic in February," said Steve."I’ve always looked for athletes for the team. We want to be the best cheer squad in the MIAA.

"The team is also looking forward to Homecoming, when alumni cheerleaders come back and get to cheer for the first half of the Homecoming football game. "We are looking forward to several important events this year.

"In the morning the alumni will meet with the present cheerleaders to share their experiences as a Hope cheerleader.

"They always like to reminisce and when they get on the field," Wooley said. "It’s amazing how quickly the stunts come back to them.

"They remember all the pyramids they used to build and all the old cheers."
