Scrubbers Wanted for Tulip Time

Wanted: Street scrubbers for opening Tulip Time ceremonies Wednesday, May 12.

Anybody who has a Dutch costume and who wants to scrub streets or anyone who wants to scrub but does not have a costume are asked to call Jim Vande Poel or Roger Stroh who are heading the group arranging the opening rite.

A limited number of costumes are available. Vande Poel and Stroh and a group of Jaycees are lining up scrubbers and other attractions for the folk parade which follows the annual scrubbing.

Tulip Time has available a number of yokes, pails and brooms. Wherever possible, people are asked to bring their own brooms. Most scrubbers, particularly the women, prefer lighter brooms.

Adults also are encouraged to bring along the children in costume to help scrub streets. All children must be accompanied by adults.

Gov. and Mrs. George Romney will be in Holland the first day of Tulip Time and will don Dutch costumes to join local burghers in the fun.

Canadian Students Speak At Kiwanis Club Meeting

Three Canadian students at Western Seminary who had emigrated from The Netherlands were guests at the regular meeting of the Kiwanis Club Monday night.

Rhine Vander Meulen, president, conducted the meeting and Dan Vander Werf Jr. was program chairman. Dr. Henry Ten Clay, dean of students at Western Seminary, presented the three senior students who spoke on various aspects of the "Effect of Dutch Immigration on Canada."

The trio pointed out the Dutch left The Netherlands for more material gains, to renew businesses and relieve population crowding. They pointed out since 1913, four million Dutch moved to Canada. They also said Canada appeals to the Dutch because Queen Juliana was there during World War II, Canadian soldiers liberated large parts of Holland and that Canada promised employment and housing.

UNCLE IS A SOFT TOUCH

Some months ago a Cairo mob burned the John F. Kennedy library, and in keeping with that spirit, President Gamal Abdel Nasser made a speech inviting the United States to "go drink sea water." Nasser was rather direct in telling us that he didn't really need our aid, and he wanted us to know that he didn't.

Since that time things have changed in Egypt. Now Egypt is asking the United States for more than $500 million in aid over the next three years, hoping to avert a severe strain on Egypt's economy. President Johnson has been given authority by Congress to use or halt the present aid program.

We hope he will make his position very clear to President Nasser. We are quite well aware that some speeches are made for home consumption, but we also know something of the attempts by Nasser to undermine American policy in Africa. And this ought to be a time to make our position plain.

Congress has been suspicious of aid bills, and these have had rough going in the last sessions.
The money we have spent on two dictators, Nasser and Sukarno, is well over a billion dollars.
In both instances we have been abused, with the latter taking over American assets in addition to the millions we have poured into his country.

At the present time many areas in the United States are suffering damage from floods and tornadoes. These people need millions of dollars to repair the damage. They could use some of the $500 million Nasser wants, and we are sure they have some notions about where this money can do the most good.

We are quite well aware of the necessity of loans and grants in our relationships with other countries. But we are just as well aware that these ought to be made with some understanding of our position. Nasser has no hesitancy in asking for help.
We ought to have none in asking for terms.

God Demands Obedience
I Samuel 13:5-14
By C. P. Dame

The word "obedience" needs to be restored again to its proper place in our society. When people obey God they will be more apt to obey those who are in authority and the laws of the community, nation and the home.

I. A frightened people has no resistance. Israel had asked for a king. One of the reasons why the nation wanted a king was to have a leader who would overcome the aggressive Philistines. All through the reign of Saul this warlike nation troubled Israel. These enemies said to it that there was no smith in Israel to make swords and spears. The Philistines had a vast army fully armed. When the Israelites heard that this army was on the march, they hid themselves in caves, in thickets, in rocks, in high places and in pits—they were smitten with fear. What was the trouble? They had no faith in God who had helped them in times past. If their leader, Saul, had been a man of faith, he would have reminded the frightened nation of how God had given them victories. Today the Church and the nation need leaders who have a strong faith in God.

II. Impatience weakens. Samuel the prophet had promised Saul, the king, that he would meet him in Gilgal. The king was told to wait seven days.
Saul waited seven days but Samuel failed to show up. Evidently the seventh day had not yet fully passed when Saul offered burnt offerings. He saw that the people were leaving him and so he acted. Impatience got the best of him. Today there are many impatient people about us. Girls of 12 can't wait for dating time, young people can't wait to marry until they are mature enough to assume responsibilities, and middle-aged can't wait for retirement.

Saul thought the outward observance of religious forms was important. How much better it would have been if he had waited and consulted the prophet or had asked the prophet God what to do. Wait on the Lord—this is a very good thing for hurried people to do.

III. Disobedience can be high-priced. "And Samuel said to Saul, Thou hast done foolishly." Many smart worldly people act foolishly because they disobey God's commandments which they think are outmoded.
Many do not recognize the authority of God. Samuel told Saul that his disobedience would cost him his kingdom.
Many people are ignoring God's commandments regarding religion, health, concerning morality, the home, and daily behavior and they suffer the consequences.
The reason is that self-will plays a big role in their lives.
Obedience to God pays.

the April 14 resolution against dog racing by a vote of 21-13.

balance is to be used only on capital improvements or neces-intend to take action in the near future on a county-wide

Netherlands Program Set In Chapel

Three-dimensional pictures on the Netherlands taken by Robert Brouwer of Grand Rapids and shown on a wide screen will feature a public gathering in Hope Memorial Chapel on Dime College campus Friday at 8:15 p.m.

The meeting, sponsored by the Netherlands Information Service in cooperation with the Dutch Immigrant Society of Grand Rapids, coincides with Queen Juliana's birthday anniversary. In the past, several functions have been held in Dutch centers on the Queen's birthday and this may become an annual custom in Holland.

A half-hour organ concert will start around 7:45 p.m. in the chapel with Dirk Bakhuizen, vice president of the Dutch immigration Society of Grand Rapids, as organist. He will play some 17th century Dutch folk music by the composer Sweetlink.

Brouwer's pictures, well known in this area, are wide angle triple slides shown on a wide screen with stereophonic sound, mostly classical music and some Dutch folk music.

The program is open to the public but because of limited seating capacity, the program is for adults only.

The program will open with an invocation by the Rev. Allen Cook, Hope College pastor. Willard C. Wichers of the Information Service will welcome the guests and will serve as master of ceremony.

Music will be provided by the newly organized Hope College motet choir of 16 voices, singing two Dutch folk songs and three English madrigals. The Dutch selections will be "Die Winter Is Vergeen" and "Ik Seg Adieu." The English madrigals are "Sing We and Chant It," "April Is My Mistress' Face" and "Now Is the Month of Maying."

New Budget To Be Bigger In Zeeland

ZEELAND — A proposed budget calling for expenditure of $287,800 for 1965-66 was completed Monday by Budget Officer Leon Van Harn and the city council.

The budget calls for an increase of $43,000 in expenditures for next year, but no increase in taxes will be necessary because of an estimated surplus of $45,611.66 from 1964.

The proposed budget will be available for public inspection at the city clerk's office in City Hall through next Monday.
Council will adopt a budget for the coming fiscal year after a public hearing at 7 p.m. Monday.

Van Harn said the surplus is due to large increases in revenue from the state and more tax revenues from recent annexations to the city.

The proposed budget calls for $119,238.34 to be raised through property taxes, and $102,950 to be received from returns of gas and weight taxes, sales taxes and other state funds.

Van Harn said that the tax rate would remain at 15 mills or $15 per thousand as it has for the past several years. The city's total assessed valuation for 1964 is $7,949,400.

Some of the major changes in this year's budget are $14,000 for building storm sewers, a small increase over last year; a small increase in the recreation budget to $9,040; $6,000 for work on City Hall; and $2,000 to be set aside for transfer to a future pension plan for city employees.

In addition, $3,000 has been asked for improvement on Huizena Park and $2,000 for improvements on Park Township Airport.

Special items in the proposed budget include $3,000 for revision of the city's charter and $3,000 for codifying city ordinances.

The only major decrease in the 1965-66 budget is in welfare payments. Zeeland's expenditure for this item will be $8,000 less than last year because Ottawa County is now paying for welfare costs on a county-wide basis.

Human Rights Unit Suggested For Local Area

Operations of the Michigan Civil Rights Commission and how cities like Holland and Zeeland fit into this framework were described at a community forum Thursday night in Holland High School auditorium. More than 100 persons attended.

Kenneth W. Robinson of Grand Rapids, a member of the state commission, in promoting "A Total Commitment to Advance Civil Rights," strongly suggested that the local community form its own human rights commission, become aware of problems that face many communities today, and be in a position to deal intelligently and fairly with problems when they do arise.

He explained that the Michigan Civil Rights Commission is the only constitutionally created commission in the country, and under the new state constitution passed in 1963 is charged with responsibilities in dealing with discrimination in the fields of housing, education, public accommodations and law enforcement.

"We are concerned that all citizens have rights, whether they make a complaint or whether a complaint is made against them, and we recognize obligations in getting the facts and studying them thoroughly before decisions are made. Most problems are resolved in confidential conferences and relatively few get to the stage of public hearings. We much prefer education to enforcement, but sometimes must resort to enforcement," he said.

Robinson said Michigan has a highly developed sense of civic responsibility, humanity and religion — a combination he termed the greatest asset of the Civil Rights commission. He praised people who have the courage of their convictions and said the passive resistance philosophy of Martin Luther King required much more courage than militant force.

"A social revolution is long overdue in America. Some say the civil rights cause is progressing too fast and going too far. Who are we to judge? There are many pressures, and the escalation of militancy is a great problem for the Negro leadership. The injustices done to Negroes over the many years defies imagination."

Thomas Johnson, director of the Grand Rapids office of the Michigan Civil Rights Commission, outlined functions of the office and the policies under which the office operates. In seeking equal opportunity for all, he said action on state levels cannot be a substitute for local responsibility and urged public awareness in eliminating discrimination in race, color, religion and national origin.

Arthur Johnson of Detroit, deputy director of the Michigan Civil Rights Commission, formerly with the NAACP, said the Holland meeting was not arranged for any particular problem, but that all people should be concerned with problems that affect other communities. The feeling that any city can avoid problems by not becoming directly involved no longer suffices, particularly in view of freedom of movement and travel, and the resultant problems when all are not treated fairly in public accommodations.

Johnson said the civil rights team has visited 25 cities in Michigan, many of them in suburban communities near Detroit where colored people have been accepted into white neighborhoods. "I hope your committee will give serious thoughts to the rights of all persons in the matter of housing, whether it be sale, renting or financing. Community action and public awareness are much more effective than legal action," he said.

The question period proved particularly interesting. To the question, "We don't have a problem now, but is one coming?" Robinson said he was unable to answer but advised organization of a local group to develop a program in which people would be sensitive to the existence of problems and know how to deal with them.

Another question mentioned Holland had no Negroes and a few Mexicans, and Johnson of Detroit pointed to the growth in population, the patterns of travel and shifts in population. "I've heard a great deal about your Tulip Time in recent weeks and I hope to bring my wife and children here for a visit," he said.

Asked whether there was any subtle or active resistance to civil rights in the Holland-Zeeland area, the men said they were not in possession of facts on any incidents. Johnson added, "The real test will not come until you are confronted with tests now facing other communities, and such tests will come in the future. You may find you are not so well prepared as you think you are."

On a question of enforcement, Robinson pointed to an attorney general's opinion that the Civil Rights Commission preempts the enforcement power of any local government. He explained that many Human Rights commissions were created by ordinance which encompassed its own enforcement. He pointed to a need of uniformity at an enforcement level, but not on an educational level since communities could better judge what would be effective in promoting civil rights.

Asked whether the commission preempts the "open occupancy" voted in Detroit, Johnson said generally the state supersedes local authority on discrimination affecting race, color, religion and national origin, but that the open occupancy issue is still in the courts.

One Negro woman in the audience said she lived in Holland and had applied 10 times for employment here, but found she had to travel 40 miles to obtain work.

A local manufacturer commented there were two sides to that coin since he often advertised for help in many area newspapers and always observed fair employment. The woman was advised to file specific complaint with the Grand Rapids office. Thursday's meeting was not one to solve specific problems.

Another question posed the situation of low turnover in a plant, amounting to 2 to 5 new employees annually selected from a list of a hundred applicants... asking whether there should be preferential hiring of Negroes. The answer was a definite "no" but Civil Rights leaders expressed the hope that the screening process did not preclude Negroes, and pointed to illustrations where a "positive approach" in screening had shown excellent results.

Mayor Nelson Bosman welcomed the speakers and audience and Mayor Frank Hoogland of Zeeland thanked the men at the conclusion of the two-hour meeting.

Among people in the audience were government officials, merchants, industrialists, professional men, personnel directors, real estate operators and clergy.

HOST DISTRICT MEET — Mrs. Joseph W. Lang (center) District IV director of the Federated Garden Club of Michigan, presided at the business sessions of the annual meeting held Thursday at Point West, Macatawa. Mrs. Fred Pickel (left) is second vice president of the state and Mrs. J.D. Jencks (right) was chairman for the annual meeting attended by 200 delegates from the garden clubs in District IV. Mrs. William C. Vandenberg Jr., president of the Holland Garden Club, gave an arranging lecture on "How to Succeed in Flower Show Business Without Really Trying." (Sentinel photo)

'How to Succeed' Theme Featured at Garden Club

Mrs. William C. Vandenberg Jr., demonstrated to the 200 Garden Club members of District IV who met at Point West on Thursday, how "more moxie than money" could be used in flower arrangement. Her lecture on "How to Succeed in Flower Show Business Without Really Trying" proved that a designer with an artistic flair could use as mundane an article as an iron muffin tin on an old lamp base—add a few flowers and candles — put it against a checkered green background topped with a white ruffle to create an outstanding "kitchen candelabrum."

The arranger's "Two for Tea" featured two black and white containers on different levels and just a suggestion of red against a gold background for a mood of elegance. "Travelogue of Flowers" suggested Scotland with its heather, a plaid background and the perfect final touch of a plaid scarf, draped around the brass container.

Mrs. Vandenberg told her audience that an arranger is constantly on the lookout for possibilities for arrangements and proved her point by using an old black scale on a piece of marble for one arrangement and a fish-shaped ceramic container for another. "Tulip Time-1965" was a weather-beaten pair of wooden shoes and tulips against an antiqued paneling.

Mrs. Joseph Lang, director of District IV, which includes 33 Garden Clubs in the state, presided over the morning business session. She extended greetings to guests of the Holland Garden Club and introduced members of the state board: Mrs. Fred Pickel, second vice president; Mrs. Carl Cook, corresponding secretary; Mrs. W. R. Stribley, Director District III, Kalamazoo; Mrs. Earl De Lano, chairman Blue Star Memorial Highway, Allegan; Mrs. John R. Ganges Garden club will meet with Mrs. Bertha Plummer Friday at 1 p.m. Mrs. J. Serene Chase will give the program entitled, "Garden Tricks Which Mean a Lot."

Mr. and Mrs. James Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Burd and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William Gilman and daughter, Marcia, Mr. and Mrs. Harlow Crooks of Grand Rapids were guests for Sunday evening

Jackson; Mrs. Robert Briggs, Conservation scholarship schools, Jackson; Mrs. Hector Chabut, garden therapy, Jackson; Mrs. C. G. Wirick, Indian scholarships, Kalamazoo; Mrs. Vandenberg, landscape design; Mrs. A. M. Moll, Loda Lake sanctuary, Grand Rapids and Mrs. Thomas Stafford, printing, Grand Rapids.

Presidents of the clubs reported on their various projects many of which included the landscaping of buildings in their communities. The Holland Garden Club project was the Nature Center, Rockford's was a rock garden for handicapped children.

The group divided into workshops for the remainder of the morning. Mrs. Earle Wright and Mrs. Frederick Meyer conducted the horticulture workshop, the group sharing experiences and book suggestions. Mrs. Chabut and Mrs. Leonard Dick summarized their garden therapy workshop by stressing the need to help senior citizens. Mrs. Edmund Jonoski was the chairman for the conservation workshop and she listed the problems each group has in common. Malcolm Gives Talk at Meet Of Rotarians

The modern theater is once more becoming "popular and profound," according to James Malcolm, director of dramatics at Hope College, who addressed Holland Rotary Club at the Hotel Warm Friend Thursday noon.

In his discussion of today's legitimate theater, Malcolm referred to the "theater of concern" as leading the return to play themes and situations that outline important social and human relations problems.

Malcolm traced the origin of the theater to Greece in the fifth century B. C. He said it was then both popular and profound — produced for audiences of average people, yet dealing with vital issues.

In the span of just 100 years, three of history's greatest playwrights appeared on the scene — Aeschylus, Euripides, and Sophocles," he said. In the succeeding years only two, Shakespeare and Moliere, have reached the same pinnacle and they, he pointed out, wrote plays that were accessible by the common man as well as the intellectual.

Views From The Campus

(Dr. Irwin J. Brink graduated from Hope College in 1952, and earned his Ph.D. degree in physical chemistry from the University of Illinois. He joined the Hope faculty in 1957, and is currently chairman of the Chemistry Department. Editor's note.)

By Dr. Irwin J. Brink

Most of us at some time or other have read or heard the term "liberal education." Hope College professes to be a Christian liberal arts college. This means, in theory at least, that those who engage in the educational enterprise within her walls are committed to liberal education which is somehow related to Christianity.

One doesn't have to spend much time in a liberal arts college before he recognizes that the agreement over what constitutes liberal education is less than unanimous. I would like to express a few thoughts on what I personally believe is one important ingredient in becoming liberally educated. That is the development of appreciation.

I hope the reader will forgive my indulging in recalling a personal experience to illustrate a point.

As a youth one of my favorite radio programs was the "Supper Time Frolic." It was a program in which all of the advertisers guaranteed complete satisfaction or a double refund on the unused portion. One of the featured performers was one "Blue Eyed Boy" who crooned sad ballads to the accompaniment of an electric guitar. I can remember sitting in tearful rapture on many an evening as the story of tragedy unfolded in doleful song, punctuated now and then by a mournful yodel.

At this stage in a boy's education the whole of music enjoyment was locked up within the limited boundaries of electric guitars and cowboy ballads. The music of the orchestral symphony, the string quartet, the operatic aria was alien, treated with youthful scorn and contempt.

Then came the gradual expanding of the horizons under the untiring tutelage of my high school music director. I learned that a philharmonic orchestra was not a group of harmonica players. It was the genius of this man that he succeeded somehow in helping his students open the door to a vast new world of music previously unknown to us.

I don't mean to unduly depreciate the work of the Blue Eyed Boy or his long-haired contemporaries. The point is that in this life there are many pearls of great price to be found mixed in with artificial ones. The process of education consists, in part, of exposing one's self to pearls and learning to recognize the difference between the more and less valuable ones.

The development of appreciation involves opening one's self to his environment. It requires the breaking of the hard shell of indifference that so easily envelops us. It involves the recognition that there exists beyond present ken possible experiences and thoughts of greater value if only one may be made aware of them.

The cultivation of an awareness of the order and beauty to be found in the complexity and sordidness of our world is an important goal of liberal education. Without this awareness, life takes on the all too familiar, gray, monotonous routine. The world that we so often see is a hostile place of hatred, noise, and tumult that threatens to overwhelm us. The beauty and order of life are not quite so obvious. They are not advertised in headlines and neon signs. An appreciation for them must be cultivated or else we miss them altogether.

Appreciation involves more than awareness, however. For to appreciate something is to be grateful for the object of appreciation and for the capacity to appreciate. It seems to me that the Christian world view is particularly significant at this point. For to discover harmony, order, beauty, and truth is to apprehend to a degree the revelation of the Creator in his handiwork. This is the ultimate in appreciation: to be aware of Divine Presence in all experiences of life and to be profoundly grateful for the privilege of having this awareness.

The task of the Christian liberal arts college is not easy and it becomes more difficult with each passing year. But its cause, that of assisting its students to become liberally educated within a framework of the Christian faith, is most worthy.

Questers Hold Regular Meet

The Christine Van Raalte chapter of the Questers met at the home of Mrs. Ivan Kouw Monday evening with 16 members present. Mrs. William De Vries, president, conducted the meeting.

Mrs. Glen Klopstein presented a paper on Flo Blue china which originated in England around 1825. It is made of clay and is a deep, dark blue color. The patterns are a non-descriptive design.

Flo Blue china appeared in full dinner sets, tea sets and toilet sets and was inexpensive. Names of the china were taken from villages in England and other countries.

At the turn of the century, premium pieces of the china were found in boxes of a warm breakfast cereal. Long on the merchant's shelves the sets are fast disappearing.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses and co-hostesses Mrs. Klopstein and Mrs. John Kleinhessel.

Pet Milk Item Wins Award In Allegan

ALLEGAN — A Pet Milk Company product, manufactured only in Wayland, has been named "Allegan County Product Of The Year" to be featured locally during Michigan Week festivities.

The product is an aerosol-dispensed chocolate flavored syrup and was introduced to the national market in 1964. It is credited with increasing employment in the Wayland area plant by adding 140 workers to the Pet Company payroll.

According to Wayland's Michigan Week chairman, Wallace Wakeman, this is the second time a Wayland product has won the county contest. The Kessler Company, a previous winner, with its "Bring Baby Home" infants wear, went on to win regional competition.

County winner in the agricultural division was the Hamilton Farm Bureau with its quality control egg program.

The Hamilton Farm Bureau uses all automatic packaging equipment, double checks eggs by mechanical means after they are candied by employees, and coats the eggs with a preservative oil before shipment, manager Andrew Lohman reported.

Final operation is stamping of cartons with the Michigan "Seal of Quality," used only by products meeting a rigid set of standards established by the Michigan Department of Agriculture.

Other entries in the county-wide contest were an 18-compartment sorting file manufactured by Angle Steel in Plainfield; an automatic alternator tester entered by Kal-Equip Corp. Otsego; and a set of stretch-wear for infants from their quality "Dimi" line.

Judges for the contest included R. E. Myers, Allegan city chairman for Michigan Week; Bret Person, Allegan, County Industrial Chairman; and Rex Ten Eyck, Plainwell Michigan Week Chairman.

Representatives of 12 Catholic congregations in the Holland Catholic Deaneary heard four leaders of the Diocesan Development Fund Campaign explain the goals of the 11th annual drive at a dinner meeting in St. Francis de Sales cafeteria Thursday evening.

The appeal, launched in 1955 by Bishop Allen J. Babcock, supports programs of priestly education, social welfare and services to the aging and migrants in 29 counties of Western Michigan.

Msgr. Julian A. Moleksi, pastor of St. Francis de Sales spoke to the group as clergy chairman for the drive. He said, "A particular need this year is the expansion of facilities at St. Joseph's Minor Seminary in Grand Rapids. Some of its buildings are now 45 years old and are inadequate to offer the type of library and classroom accommodations necessary for the education of young men to the priesthood."

Others speaking were E. Joseph Moore, Grand Rapids, lay chairman for the campaign; Albert F. Davis, Grand Rapids, who outlined duties of parish controllers; and Msgr. Joseph Walen, editor of The Western Michigan Catholic.

Msgr. Moleksi said 120 solicitors will contact parishioners of St. Francis de Sales beginning May 23. Other parishes in the diocese will start their appeal a week earlier.

Holland Furnace Plans for Future

Holland Furnace Co. president Howard Plaggemars Monday outlined the firm's future plans and a "get tough" policy with dealers to a group of local civic, business and banking leaders.

Plaggemars said the company is disposing of property, buildings, and other assets not required in the new financial re-organizational plan.

"We have a select group of 114 dealers throughout the country and we will not stand for any unethical practices. During the problems in recent years one thing never disputed was the top quality of the Holland furnace."

"The outstanding quality of our furnaces is why this company is going to stay in business. We have added an air conditioning line and will continue to broaden our product line," Plaggemars said.

Plaggemars reviewed the financial problems during the past years which brought the company to the edge of bankruptcy. He devoted the major portion of his 90 minute presentation to future plans and programs.

An initial step in the reorganization was the sale of the main Furnace Co. office to Holland-Succo Color Co. April 9, Plaggemars said need for a huge office no longer exists under the dealer plan.

The Furnace Co. has moved its present staff to the north wing of the first floor.

Other buildings that are no longer needed include the Hotel Warm Friend and company owned warehouses in various states.

Plaggemars said the firm is cutting operating and overhead expenses wherever possible to put the company on a sound, efficient and economic operating base.

He pointed out the firm had $30,000,000 in sales several years ago. "This year," he said, "we are aiming at $1,500,000 in sales."

"This is quite a drop but for a firm that was a few hours from bankruptcy recently it is a sound realistic projection. We have a top product but we have to do a massive selling job to our dealers and to the general public."

Plaggemars explained each of the "select" dealers have received a detailed letter spelling out the strict operating procedures of the present management.

"If unethical practices occur we will immediately drop the dealer," he said.

A few men will be added to the foundry force next week. The foundry is making parts for furnaces already on hand to balance the inventory.

"We are seeking additional work for the foundry aside from furnaces. We hope to do stamping and casting work for other firms," he said.

For many years Holland Furnace products were sold directly to consumers by factory retail branches.

All the paper work was done by a huge Holland office staff. The present plan calls for independent dealers to handle the retail sales of all products and services.

This cuts local office employment substantially and also eliminates costly warehousing across the country.

Plaggemars pointed out that during the last few years no one was certain from one day to the next what the company was going to do. This especially affected dealers. "They now know exactly where we stand and our plans for continued operations," he said.

Officers of the firm are Plaggemars, president, treasurer; Frank Lokker, vice president; Charles Trynin, secretary.

Members of the board are Plaggemars, Lokker, Trynin, Simon Stael, and Donald Wales.

Attending the meeting were Henry S. Maentz Jr., Clarence Jalving, Roger Rietberg, John Van Dyke Jr., Adrian Geenen, Jerome P. Hurtgen, L. C. Dalmann, Ross Giles, James Brown, Eugene Vande Vusse, Bill Lawson, W. A. Butler, A. R. Bransdorfer.

Company officials present were Plaggemars, Lokker, Henry Weyenberg, chief engineer; A. H. Loomis, administrative assistant; and Jerry Roper, local counsel.
