OLD BERSHIRE MILLS.

DALTON, Mass., April 27, 1882.

Mr. Peter Lawler has been a resident of this town for the past seventeen years, and in our employ for fifteen, and in all these years he has been a good and respected citizen of the town and community. He has had some chronic disease to our knowledge for most of the time, but now claims to be, and is, in apparent good health.

CHAS. O. BROWNS, Pres't.

[The wonderful case referred to above is published in another column and will prove of great value to thousands of our readers.—Ed.]

Mortgage Sale.

DEFAULT having been made in the condition of payment of a mortgage from Lamert Terbeek and Anna Terbeek his wife, to John C.
Post, dated September Twenty-sixth, 1881, in Liber V of mortgages, on page 605, in the Register's office of Ottawa County, (and which mortgage was afterwards, and on November Fourth,
A. D. 1881, duly assigned by said John C. Post, by assignment in writing, to Jan Trimpes, and which assignment was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, of Ottawa County, in Liber 36 of mortgages, on page 41, on March Seventh, A. D. 1883); And, whereas, Three Hundred and Sixteen Dollars and Twenty-five cents, are now claimed to be due on said mortgage, and no proceedings at law or in equity having been instituted to recover any part of said sum due;
Therefore, notice is hereby given that said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale at public vendue of the mortgaged premises, or so much thereof as is necessary to pay the sum due on said mortgage, with interest and costs, on the

Automatic Four-Roller Mill.

We are indebted to the London Miller for the following description of a new roller mill, which is being manufactured by Mr. F. Nell, of London, and describes the latest example of a machine of this class: "The outside rolls are the slow, and the inside rolls the fast, both sets being operated by belts, which run over a tightening pulley. On each side there is a swing arm, worked by a lever and cam.
This lever has a double object: it throws out the two outer rolls and shuts of the feed simultaneously; and by reversing the lever it brings back the two rolls again and also the feed. At the bottom of the swing arms is placed a set screw, which prevents these arms being brought so close as to allow the rolls to touch, the set screw being adjustable at will. Underneath the driving pulleys will be observed another lever, which is only used, should the brasses at all wear, for the purpose of setting up the journals.

On either side of this lever is a quadrant which regulates the brushes under the rolls, used to keep the latter clean. While the lever acting upon the arms opens and shuts, there is still a further adjustment of the feed made by two quadrants on the hopper on each side of the lever, and which adjust the feed to whatever nicety is required. When the feed adjustment is once set it requires, it is stated, no further interference with from one week's end to the other, the lock nuts preventing any alteration in the position of the rolls. A box hopper is provided to prevent the products from the rolls coming in contact with the iron work of the machine. The rolls may be smooth or corrugated, as may be required for the purpose for which they are to be used, and when they are corrugated, scrapers are used instead of brushes for keeping them clean.

American Competition in the Australian Colonies.

The following is an extract from a letter newly received by one of the leading colonial houses in Birmingham from their Melbourne correspondents, which we copy from the Ironmonger (London):

"We call your attention once more," says the writer, "to the enormous increase in the number of articles we are buying from America. A few years since some half dozen articles were about all we ordered of American make; now, as you will see by the indents we send you, the items specially ordered of American make are to be counted by hundreds.
This increase is still maintained, and is, indeed, still growing. Your English manufacturers would do well to take a lesson from their American rivals. The American goods exactly suit the requirements of the market. The timber they have will always command a certain trade, but why should they excel English makers of shovels, axes, picks, and all classes of edge tools? It is annoying to those of us who have English sympathy to see so much trade go away from the old country. The general characteristics of American goods, as contrasted with home-made, are: quality more reliable, better finish, not an ounce of unnecessary material, better packing, and the articles themselves thoroughly adapted to the use to which they are to be put. Some of the things they make have been found unsuitable, and once ordered have never been repeated. Their cutlery will not bear comparison with the English make, and the same may be said of their plated ware.

THE IRISH CONVENTION.

The Irish Convention, to merge the Land into the National League, assembled in Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, on Wednesday, April 25. It was largely attended, and the personnel of the convention favorably impressed the on-lookers. An organization was effected by an election of the following officers: President, James A. Mooney, of Buffalo, President of the Irish Land League of the United States; Secretary, J. J. Hynes, of Buffalo, Secretary of the Irish Land League of the United States; Assistant Secretaries, William F. Sheehan, of Buffalo, and J. D. O'Connell, of Washington, President of the National League, and J. D. O'Connell, of Washington, President of the National League. It was highly eulogistic of Parnell and denunciatory of Gladstone, and was received with great applause. There were twenty-five female delegates in the meeting, and Mrs. Parnell occupied a position of honor on the stage. Secretary Hynes' report showed that in the last year $74,938 had been received; that $10,000 had been sent to Ireland for league and relief purposes, and that 550 branch leagues existed in the United States and Canada. After a somewhat lengthy debate, during which there was considerable confusion, a motion for the appointment of a member from each delegation as a committee to devise a plan for the merging of the Land League into the National League was adopted and the committee appointed. The attitude of the United States toward Great Britain was discussed, and Father McKenna, of New York State, offered a resolution denouncing the course of President Arthur as cowardly, declaring that should he be a candidate for reelection, he should receive no Irish votes. He was promptly ruled out of order. Father Conaty, of the committee appointed to report a plan for the merging of the convention, said the committee was in favor of allowing the convention to say whether or not it should carry on its organization in the present form by adopting the platform of the Irish National League. They, however, recommended the adoption of two resolutions, one indorsing the principles and objects of the Irish National League, and the second that the delegates attend the convention in a body to-morrow and assist in promoting the union of all Irish patriotic bodies. The report was formally received. Mr. O'Brien, of New York, moved that the convention step from its platform to that of the Irish National League, and that the officers be elected immediately, so that it might go into the convention an organized body. Mr. Brown offered a substitute to the effect that the chair appoint a committee of seven, with power to declare the Land League adjourned. There was long and spirited wrangling, and this substitute was carried. "Resolved, That when this convention adjourns it be to meet with the convention to-morrow, and that the Chairman appoint a committee of seven with power to declare the Land League adjourned sine die, provided the convention to-morrow complies with the report submitted and adopted here by this committee." The committee appointed to submit a plan of reorganization. Speeches were made by Brennan and Egan, the latter stating that while he was Treasurer of the League, $1,230,000 passed through his hands. O'Donovan Rossa was present in the hall, but merely as the representative of a paper with which he has a nominal connection. The convention adjourned at 2 o'clock a. m.

The delegates to the Irish National League Convention assembled in Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, to the number of 1,200, on the morning of April 26. They represented Irish societies of every description in all States and most of the Territories. Forty of them were women. In the temporary organization, James J. Dorney, of Chicago, was made Chairman. An animated debate arose upon the adoption of the report of the Committee on Rules, some of the delegates declaring that the rules submitted would suppress the liberty of debate. The rules were adopted. Congressman M. A. Foran, of Cleveland, Ohio, was made permanent President. O'Donovan-Rossa and other pronounced advocates of the dynamite theory were admitted to the convention without protest. A telegram from Charles S. Parnell to the President of the Irish-American Convention was read. Mr. Parnell advised the framing of a platform which would enable the Irish Land League and the constitutional agitators in Ireland to accept aid from America, at the same time avoiding anything which might furnish the British Government with a pretext for suppressing the national movement in Ireland. He expressed his confidence that if prudence, moderation and firmness ruled the convention the cause of Ireland would be advanced. After the announcement of the committees the convention adjourned for the day.

The convention concluded its labors on Friday, April 27, after having organized the Irish National League of America, with Alexander Sullivan, of Chicago, as President, and John J. Hynes, of Buffalo, as Secretary. A National Committee of one from each State and Territory was chosen, who selected an Executive Committee of seven, consisting of the Rev. Mr. McKenna, of Massachusetts; Dr. W. Wallace, of New York; James Reynolds, of Connecticut; M. V. Gannon, of Iowa; Judge J. G. Donnelly, of Wisconsin; John F. Armstrong, of Georgia; and United States Senator James Fair, of Nevada. The first hours of the day's session were occupied with speeches and the reading of letters of sympathy from various persons. The platform of the organization was then submitted to the convention by the Committee on Resolutions. The resolutions start with a fierce arraignment of English government in Ireland, and declare that there is no form of retaliation to which despair or madness may resort, for which English cruelty in Ireland is not exclusively responsible. Specifically, it is charged that English rule has annihilated liberty in Ireland; that landlordism has impoverished the people, while a selfish policy has not so much as permitted manufacturers to obtain a foothold in the island; that England has not maintained peace and order in Ireland, but for 700 years has kept the country involved in bloodshed and anarchy; that the pretense of Irish representation in Parliament is a mockery of the shallowest sort, and that, while measures proposed in Parliament by members from England or Scotland receive polite consideration, the fact that a bill is introduced by an Irish member suffers for its arrogant rejection. The resolutions then assert that the course of the English Government has deprived it of any right, if one ever existed, to rule Ireland; pledge material and moral support of the Irish in America in all efforts of their countrymen at home to recover the right of self-government; incidentally score for and praise Parnell; express sympathy for the farm laborers of Ireland, who are commended to the kindly consideration of farmers; counsel Irishmen to buy nothing in England that can be procured from the United States; express contempt for the Liberal Ministry of Great Britain; condemn the action of the English Government in sending impoverished Irish to these shores; thank American prelates for the aid they have secured for Irish emigrants; and indorse Egan's administration of the Land League finances. An attempt to discuss the resolutions resulted in an overwhelmingly defeated, though Congressman Finerty, of Chicago, entered a vigorous protest. At the closing, Mrs. Parnell, who was elected President of the Ladies' Land League, made a short address, and, amid great enthusiasm, placed a wreath of laurel on a picture of Gen. Washington. The song "God Save Ireland," was sung by delegates and audience, and the convention was declared adjourned sine die.

THE EAST.

FRANK LARKIN, the ball-player, went home drunk to Williamsburg, N. Y., shot his wife, probably fatally, fired at an officer and then cut his own throat. Larkin was for two years pitcher for the Chicago Baseball Club, and was regarded as the most expert tosser of the sphere on the diamond field until his impaired and ultimately destroyed his usefulness. The erection of a statue to the late Peter Cooper, in front of the Cooper Union, is being discussed by the New York Board of Aldermen. Two Italians fought a duel in Brooklyn, exchanging eight shots, without injury to either.

In the Tewksbury (Mass.) almshouse investigation a witness testified to tanning human skins—presumably taken from corpses from the almshouse—for various doctors, and exhibited a pair of uppers for slippers made from the skin of a woman.

The banking firm of George F. Work & Co., of Philadelphia, is accused of embezzling something like $1,000,000 from the People's Passenger Railway Company of that city. Two members of the firm have been arrested. Whitelaw Reid gave a dinner at his residence in New York to ex-President Hayes. Other prominent gentlemen were also present.

A shocking tragedy was enacted in New York. William Macduff, a financial broker, shot his wife dead while she was preparing breakfast, entered an adjoining room where his son was sleeping in a crib, and killed him, and then shot himself.

In accordance with the instructions of Gov. Butler, the Massachusetts Board of Health, Lunacy and Charities has assumed control of the Tewksbury Almshouse, appointing a temporary Superintendent. The combined antiracist interests of Pennsylvania have agreed to work three days during each of the first two weeks of May, and to carry on production upon full time during the remainder of the month. Five hundred more pauper Irish emigrants were landed from the steamer Catalonia at Boston, having been assisted thither by the British Government.

THE WEST.

A HEARTRENDING accident happened at Middletown, Ohio. The little daughter of John O'Connell fell into the canal. The father plunged in after it, but he was unable to swim. He was seized with cramps, and suddenly ceased to struggle, and went below the surface for so long a time that his wife, who had been watching his efforts, went to his assistance. She struggled with all the desperation of despair, but in vain. In two minutes after the father went into the water after the little girl, the father, mother and child sank beneath the water. The mother's cries had been heard by a number of men in the vicinity, none of whom arrived in time to rescue the drowning. Between Olivet and Bellevue, Mich., the breaking of the pipes connecting the engine with the air-brakes effected the stoppage of the passenger train on the Grand Trunk road, when a freight following dashed into its rear, telescoping two sleeping coaches, which were completely wrecked, and injuring thirteen persons, five mortally. Notwithstanding that the freight train was flagged, a heavy grade and bad curve precipitated the collision. Experiments with seed-corn in Wisconsin and Minnesota appear to establish the belief that the germinating quality of the grain was destroyed by the severe cold weather of last winter. There is, therefore, apprehension that the corn crop this year will be short.

AGENT MCGILLICUDDY writes from Pine Ridge Agency, Dakota: "Red Cloud wishes to inform the Great Father that his heart is good and his mind is tranquil, and also that he has discovered a gold mine on his reservation, and intends to go mining with his people when the weather becomes better. He does not wish to be disturbed in the possession of said mine for ten years." At Newago, Mich., fire destroyed Brooks' Hotel, the Exchange Hotel, two churches and fourteen other buildings. Loss about $60,000. Nine business places and the Oddfellows' lodge-room in Fairfield, Iowa, were consumed by fire, entailing a loss of $40,000, fully insured. Prof. A. F. Bandelier, reported killed by the Apaches, is safe at Fort Apache, A. T.

THE SOUTH.

PINK BLEEKER, residing at Temple's Mills, Fla., whipped his little nephew until the blood ran; then he tied him in the chimney, head downward, till his flesh began to sizzle, when he took him down and poured water over him. The Ministers' State Temperance Convention of Kentucky has declared in favor of prohibition of the manufacture and sale of spirituous liquors of all kinds.

A TRAIN on the Cincinnati Southern railroad had just left Harrodsburg, Ky., the other day, when one of the passengers made a fierce assault upon another and drew a pistol on him. The man who was getting the worst of it ran out of the car, and while standing on the rear platform was shot through the head by his assailant. It turned out that the murdered man was Walter Davis, a wealthy merchant of Harrodsburg, and his murderer Philip B. Thompson, Jr., Representative in Congress from the Eighth Kentucky district. The alleged cause of the tragedy was undue intimacy by Davis with Thompson's wife. The murdered man is said to be the seventh victim of Thompson's pistol, every one of the slain men, as in the present case, having been shot through the head.

A CYCLONE of tremendous power swept over a portion of Northwestern Texas killing a number of people and inflicting considerable damage to property. Its path was about 150 yards wide, and every movable thing within its course was ground to atoms. Hail and wind did considerable damage to crops and buildings throughout a considerable portion of Louisiana. A great hail-storm damaged buildings and broke windows at Hot Springs, Ark., and injured growing crops. A curious fact in connection with the cyclone at Wesson, Miss., is that of fifty Jewish persons taken out of the debris, none were seriously injured.

POLITICAL.

THE Massachusetts House rejected the constitutional amendment permitting the appointment of women as Justices of the Peace and Notaries Public. At the election for Governor in Georgia, H. D. McDaniel was chosen without opposition to fill the unexpired term of the late Alexander H. Stephens. The Iowa Democratic State Convention is called to meet at Des Moines on June 6. The bill to prohibit "treating" was defeated in the Pennsylvania Senate.

So FAR as Ben Perley Poore can judge the next Republican candidate for President will come out of this list: William B. Allison, of Iowa; Chester A. Arthur, of New York; James G. Blaine, of Maine; Roscoe Conkling, of New York; George F. Edmunds, of Vermont; Benjamin Harrison, of Indiana; Joseph R. Hawley, of Connecticut; Robert T. Lincoln, of Illinois; John A. Logan, of Illinois; John F. Miller, of California; John Sherman, of Ohio; Wm. T. Sherman, of Missouri; and Wm. Windom, of Minnesota. A staunch Cameronian named Keim, of Reading, Pa., has been appointed Chief Examiner of the Civil Service Commission. The secretaryship of the commission has been bestowed upon a young Illinoisan, W. Woods White, recently an insurance agent at Atlanta, Ga. Prohibition has been voted down by the Michigan Senate.

THE prohibitory amendment resolution failed to pass the Michigan House by not receiving a two-thirds vote.

A NATIONAL convention of colored men is to be held in Washington, Sept. 24, to discuss the best methods of securing to the race the full enjoyment of their social and political rights.

GEN. GREEN B. RAUM, for the past six years and nine months Commissioner of Internal Revenue, last week tendered his resignation of that office to the President, explaining that private interests required his attention. The President expressed surprise at the Commissioner's decision, and accepted the resignation with protestations of esteem for the retiring official.

WASHINGTON.

SECRETARY CHANDLER has issued instructions to Rear Admiral Baldwin commanding the United States naval forces on the European station, to proceed with his personal staff to Moscow to attend the forthcoming coronation of the Czar.

A statement prepared in the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shows that the aggregate receipts for March, 1883, were $1,435,121 greater than for March, 1882. The increase was distributed as follows: On spirits, $1,333,976; on beer, $42,125. There was a decrease as follows: On tobacco, $218,751; on banks and bankers, $53,187; and miscellaneous, $76,091. It has been decided by the Treasury Department that customs officers on the Rio Grande may arrest smugglers as well as seize smuggled goods. The Government, it is estimated, loses $500,000 annually by smuggling on the Southern border. While it is hardly probable that any international complication will arise out of the fact, yet the notification to our Government by the Mexican Minister that Gen. Crook cannot pursue the hostile Apaches into Mexico without the consent of the Mexican Senate opens the door for possible differences between the two nations.

GENERAL.

HENRY D. E. BOSNY was hanged at Elizabethtown, N. J., for the murder of his wife. He slept well the preceding night, and ate a hearty breakfast, after which he smoked a cigar, and then inspected the gallows. Taking hold of the rope, he said to the Sheriff: "I am afraid I will break that rope. You ought to have soap on it." Frasier Copeland, the murderer of William Hume, was hanged at Wallbala, S. C. The gallows was of the old style and located in the jail. He protested innocence, said he didn't fear death, and was prepared to die. Henry Revells was hanged at Lake Providence, East Carroll parish, La., for the brutal murder of Henry Hyams, Oct. 5, 1878. The execution was public, and a large crowd was present, but there was no disorder.

THE Central Labor Union of New York has indorsed the use of dynamite as a means of extorting reforms from governments. Yellow fever has broken out at Vera Cruz, Mexico. The black vomit has claimed victims already.

FOREIGN.

HERR JAUNER, manager of the Ring Theater at Vienna, convicted and sentenced for negligence that made the disaster of December, 1881, possible, has been pardoned by the Emperor, after serving out about half the term of imprisonment to which he was condemned. An inspired article in Paris papers says no matter what treaties the Malagasy Emvoys may make, France will permit nothing which may endanger her rights in Madagascar. In Parliament Premier Gladstone said it would be inimical to public interests to state whether the United States Government had been communicated with touching the dynamite outrages. A dispatch from Berlin suggests the probability that United States Minister Sargent will soon find it advisable to resign his post.

FOR the second time the jury which held in its hands the fate of Timothy Kelly one of the men accused of complicity in the Phoenix Park murders, has disagreed. The informer Carey swore as strongly against Kelly as he did in cases where capital convictions have already been had, but the defense put in a well-fitting alibi, and both juries refused to convict the prisoner. The case was temporarily postponed. The ship British Commerce, for Melbourne, was sunk in collision with the ship County of Aberdeen, from Calcutta, and twenty-five of her crew were drowned. Seven members of the German Ministry, including Bismarck, are at present incapacitated from work by illness. Helen Marcovitch, who attempted to kill King Milan, of Serbia, has been sentenced to death.

THE examination of the alleged dynamite conspirators of London, Birmingham and Glasgow was resumed in the Bow Street Police Court, London, on the 26th of April. A Police Inspector testified that early in the month Bernard Gallagher had offered himself as an informer, and related what Gallagher had told him regarding his connection with the conspirators, both in the United States and in Great Britain. The movements of himself and others of the party, Gallagher said, had been directed by his brother, Dr. Gallagher. The latter had a poor opinion of the dynamite schools at New York. Another witness testified regarding Whitehead's purchases of acids to use in the manufacture of nitro-glycerine at Birmingham.

A SPEECH by Gladstone in the Commons, on the Affirmation bill, is thought to be one of the best efforts of his life. Sixteen cabinet-makers were burned to death by fire in a workshop at Warsaw, Poland.

DEVINE, a Fenian informer, detailed at Dublin the plottings of that party against Judge Lawson, Juror Field and the police leaders, and stated that one of its members had been sentenced to death by the clique for not obeying orders in committing a murder. The evidence was presented at the trial of Debeney and Kingston for conspiracy to murder. Michael Fagan was convicted at Dublin of complicity in the Phoenix Park murders, and will hang May 23. He declared that he was a Fenian and would die one, but protested his innocence of the charge for which he was condemned. Frederick William, Crown Prince of Germany, was cordially welcomed at Vienna by the Austrian Emperor. The German Government, to be prepared for an emergency in transporting troops, has determined to lay an additional track on all railroads leading to Russia.

MR. PARNELL has expressed to an American newspaper correspondent his perfect satisfaction with the work of the Irish convention at Philadelphia. He believes that the desire of the people of Ireland for self-government is unconquerable, and that in opposing it Great Britain is committing a heinous political crime. Mr. Parnell further states his belief that nothing can be hoped for at the hands of Parliament. A riot between Greeks and Arabs at Port Said is reported. British troops and sailors protected the Greek church, while the Greek Consul took refuge on board a gunboat. A general massacre of Europeans is said to have been averted by the landing of the British forces. Earl Spencer, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, witnessed the embarkation of a large number of Irish emigrants at Belmullet, and by expressions of kindly interest created a favorable impression upon those who remained, as well as upon the emigrants. It is stated the British Government will make a request on the United States Government for the extradition of about a dozen Irish conspirators.

ADDITIONAL NEWS.

ALBERT H. BEALS and A. P. Frickett, a Boston spice firm, engaged passage on a sound steamer and occupied the same state-room. Frickett arose in the middle of the night and the noise he made in opening a window caused Beals to think an intruder was present, and he shot his partner dead. An explosion occurred at the Keystone Colliery, near Ashland, Pa., by which several miners were killed and many others severely injured. The disaster was caused by the collapse of a pillar, which precipitated an immense fall of coal and liberated a great volume of gas.

THE Scott Liquor law, just adopted in Ohio, has been decided unconstitutional by Justice May, of Steubenville. A saloonist selling without the written consent of the landlord was arrested. The defense was that the law was unconstitutional, because it impaired existing contracts. The Justice gave the opinion that the law was unconstitutional because the tax was unequal and it also impaired existing contracts. The jailer at Tucson, Arizona, was murdered by two inmates of the prison, who had by some means obtained pistols and a key that let them out of their cells into the corridor. John Walsh, the murderer of Thomas Galvin, was taken from the jail at Lordsburg, New Mexico, and lynched by the Vigilance Committee. The supposed Indians who have been stealing stock from the Crows near Bozeman, Montana, have been proven to be Deadwood "rustlers." At Jackson, Ohio, Anderson Lackey, a well-known old farmer, was murdered while sick in bed by two robbers.

EIGHT officers, including a Colonel, have been arrested at St. Petersburg on suspicion of being connected with the Nihilists. Sixteen officers were also arrested at Smolensk. It is stated a widespread military conspiracy has been discovered. Documents were found at Smolensk showing the coronation of the Czar would be undisturbed, but something very serious would happen immediately after. O'Donnell, in the English House of Commons, charged Clifford Doyd, an Irish police official, with altering affidavits, and had laid on the table evidence to support his accusations. The Government refused to answer the question whether they would retain him in office. The importation of American pork into Greece has been forbidden by the Government of that country.

MR. S. W. TALLMADGE, Secretary of the Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce, has received official reports concerning the condition and prospects of both winter and spring wheat in every wheat-growing State in the Union. From these reports he has made a table of the probable crop in each State. This table is not a matter of mere speculation, but is based on the reports of the Agricultural Departments, Secretaries of Agricultural Societies, Commissioners of Agriculture, and other officials whose business it is to obtain first information desired, especially in regard to winter wheat. Concerning spring wheat, the estimates are based on the reported acreage and on the supposition that there will be a good season. Of course, should the season not prove good, the yield will fall below the estimates reached. The following are the figures:

THE senior Senator from Colorado, Dr. Hill, has written a letter to Secretary Teller, with whom he has not been on friendly terms for some time. In this letter the Secretary is accused of discourtesy to the Senator in removing officials appointed upon the latter's recommendation. The Yellowstone Park lease is passed in review in a manner that is calculated to impugn either the wisdom or the integrity of the Secretary, and his distribution of the patronage of the Interior Department is criticised unfavorably.

MCGILL UNIVERSITY, of Montreal, has made the Marquis of Lorne a Doctor of Laws, in recognition of his literary accomplishments. During the month of April twenty-nine new national banks were organized.

TERRIFIC CYCLONE.

Appalling Havoc Wrought by a Southern Tornado.

Hundreds of People Killed and Maimed, and Towns Demolished.

A terrible wind-storm swept over sections of Mississippi and Georgia on Sunday, the 22d of April, killing and maiming hundreds of people and destroying a vast amount of property. The towns of Beauregard and Wesson, about forty miles below Jackson, suffered most severely. The place first named, containing about 600 inhabitants, was completely destroyed, twenty-six persons being killed and nearly two more injured. At Wesson twenty buildings were blown down and sixteen persons killed and eighty injured, some of whom will die. At Aberdeen fifteen people were killed and fifty wounded. Numerous other villages were more or less damaged, and in a number of instances loss of life is reported.

A dispatch from Jackson, Miss., says that for three days the wind had blown a gale, and lowering clouds indicated a coming storm. At Wesson the storm's approach was marked by deep rumbling sounds, rattling windows and quivering earth. Thunder roared, and the lightning flashed with dreadful force and dazzling vividness. Then, with the fury of ten thousand demons, the gale burst upon the town. Fences were torn to pieces and sent whirling through the air; trees that had stood the fiercest storms for ages were uprooted and hurled hundreds of yards. Houses were demolished, and the blue forest encircling the town was blown out of existence. As soon as the wind's violence had somewhat abated, and the citizens had begun to look about the signals of distress and death. Men ran from all directions toward West Wesson, though the rain was pouring down in drenching torrents. When Peach Orchard street had been reached, a scene terrible in the extreme, but simply indescribable, burst upon the view. There the houses of a large number of the operatives of the Mississippi Mills had stood, and there the greatest destruction had occurred. Dwellings on all sides had been torn to atoms, while under the debris the groans of the wounded and dying were heard, striking terror to the stoutest heart. A momentary hesitation only occurred, and then the work of removing the dead and extricating the wounded began. The maimed were removed to the nearest houses which had escaped the tornado. The dead were taken from the ruins and laid on the grass, while the rescuers turned hastily from them to answer a cry of distress. Several of the corpses lay out in the storm and rain for more than an hour, but as soon as the wounded and living were cared for they were taken up and reverently placed on stretchers in the churches. Sixteen persons were killed outright, and eighty wounded, at Wesson.

A correspondent gives the following graphic description of the scene at Beauregard: Many people in Beauregard saw the black wind coming, for its roaring and moaning had brought them to the doors of their houses and stores. These people described it as like a black smoke, filled with flame, rolling along the earth, while high above it were tossed trees and plants and bricks. The smoke seemed to do little harm, but in the vortex which was behind it everything went down. It was about a minute in reaching Beauregard and three seconds in passing over it, and when it went by, the town was no more, the houses and trees being beaten down and ground into dust and splinters. The route of the cyclone was followed by the cries of fear and the wails of anguish of those who were buried under the ruins of the buildings.

A deluge followed the blow. The rain came down in sheets, and the ditches and gutters became raging rivers. The Mayor states that when he came to himself he actually feared that he and his family would be drowned. The darkness of the night followed the darkness of the storm so closely that it was impossible to realize the terrible destruction, but the morning sun laid bare a scene of desolation, with every house, save three, swept away, and nothing but splinters left behind. Even beyond the town where stood a heavy pine forest the trees had been felled and carried away in the path of the cyclone. Martin Moody, a prominent merchant, was found close by a tree, his face buried in its hands, and fatally wounded, his wife near him, also badly injured. They were out walking when the storm came up, and sought refuge in a box-car in which seven negroes were playing cards. The car was lifted from the track and carried away a hundred yards, three of the negroes being instantly killed. Dr. Lampkin's residence was in the center of the town. When he emerged from the ruins of his house he found his wife painfully wounded, and her little boy seriously injured. They had been blown away a hundred yards. On the porch of the house were John S. Terrill, Dr. Jones, his wife and two children, and a little boy. All were dead. Only one child of the Jones family is alive. Mr. George Holloway and J. Westfield sought refuge in a deep gulley, but were struck by flying timbers and Westfield injured and Holloway killed. Mr. Will Parker, his wife and son were buried beneath the timbers of their house. Mr. Parker will lose an arm. The other two are dead. The cyclone went through Beauregard due north and south, nearly along the line of Main street, the chief business street, demolishing the most solid brick stores, and leaving only three houses standing in the upper portion of the town, and killing twenty-six and wounding 100 persons. The scene in the town is fearful. It looks as if a fire had swept over it. The houses are not blown upside down, but are flattened out and torn to splinters. Twenty-six persons were found dead in the ruins of the town, and over 100 were wounded, many of them beyond the hope of recovery.

The cyclone passed over that portion of Aberdeen known as Freedmen's town, inhabited almost exclusively by blacks. Fifteen lives were lost, and about fifty people wounded, mostly negroes. At Caledonia several houses were blown down, three persons killed and ten wounded. At Starkville, many houses were razed, five persons were killed and sixty maimed. Meridian, West Point and other towns suffered heavy losses in life and property. Through the rural districts the cyclone swept everything before it, leveling houses, fences and trees, and killing many people. A section of the tornado was also felt in Alabama and Georgia, though not so severely as in Mississippi. At Albany, Ga., a house was blown down, killing a man and his wife. Afloat on Flint river were six colored men, named Edward Jones, Pink Simmons, Chancey Griffith, Ned Lester, John Kimbrough and Peter Smith, who ran against the shore and in paddling in the darkness for land all were drowned. At Cruger's Postoffice, near by, six were killed and eighteen wounded. At Eastman and vicinity half a dozen were killed and some forty wounded. In and about Preston, four or five were killed and many injured. The track of the storm was about 90 yards in width; it did not blow more than fifteen minutes, and was followed by torrents of rain and hail. Some of the hail-stones were four or five inches in diameter, and weighed a pound.

JAMES MILLER, of California, recently killed a remarkable serpent. While going from Deer valley to his home on the Sweet-water, he trod on the tail of a snake. He was not trying to get upon a snake either. However, the reptile accepted the seeming challenge, and delivered a heavy blow on the leg of his enemy. The thickness of the trouble saved the friends of Miller from the trouble of attending a funeral. Miller then killed the snake, and upon examination found that it had two legs about six inches from the end of the tail. They were about two inches long. The feet were of oblong shape, each with six toes.

THE enormous transportation of manufactured tobacco was one of last Tuesday's memorable features in the United States. From Lynchburg alone thirty-six car loads were moved out in various directions; and a single firm sent off 130,000 pounds. In Richmond, between midnight and noon, the Internal Revenue Collector issued stamps for about two million pounds, and also for about a million cigars and four million cigarettes. The reduction in the tax, taking effect May 1, for which the dealers had been waiting, was the cause of this sudden activity in the South. In many parts of the country the cigarmakers have already succeeded in obtaining an advance in wages, enabling them to share with the manufacturers the advantages arising from a reduction in the Government's tax.

INTERESTED railroad companies and land speculators are flooding Michigan, as usual at this season of the year, with illustrated pamphlets and circulars, painting in glowing colors the advantages and beauties of Dakota, Manitoba, Texas and other regions as homes for immigrants. Intelligent farmers and mechanics hardly need to be cautioned to receive all such representations with distrust. The facts are notoriously colored or distorted, while many important considerations are wholly suppressed. A very few residents of Michigan, whose circumstances are exceptional, may better their condition by removing to the far west, but the majority of those who try it find the advantages less and the disadvantages immeasurably greater than represented.

A "DOG BILL" introduced in the house by Mr. Van Loo came up Wednesday and resulted in what was almost a case of hydrophobia. Blanche, Tray and Sweetheart had many friends, and when it was shown that under the operations of Mr. Van Loo's bill no dog's life would be safe, if he was found outside his owner's premises, the uproar became as marked as if the ship of state was about to strike a rock. Representatives Brant, Adams and Bennett were the principal orators, the latter going all over the dog question very thoroughly. Evidently the "Bullgine" that was doing so much damage in Branch county two years ago is now superseded in deadly danger by the "kussed kurr" that affrights the horses, kills the sheep, bites men's legs and scares old ladies. Mr. Black ably defended that noble animal, the dog; but Mr. Van Loo, who had once in his life seen 37 sheep slain by dogs, couldn't see why any sane man should defend dogs. The dog-gone bill took up about $350 worth of the state's time, and taken all in all it was probably about the most puerile legislative exhibition of the age. The bill was ultimately killed—talked to death.—Evening News.

Grand Haven Items.

JUDITH TATE has been very sick this week, but is reported to be improving now.

CAPT. HARRY SMITH has quit the light-house here and has bought the little schooner Norma, formerly of Benton Harbor. He intends to go in the coasting trade with her.

FOURTEEN liquor bonds have been approved by the Common Council, being one less than last year, the tax for which, will be quite an addition to the general fund of the city.

MAYOR Akeley is getting the grounds around his residence graded and sodded, which adds greatly to their looks and will make it one of the finest places in this part of the State.

VESSEL men are complaining about slack times. Several vessels are laying here now looking for loads, and freights are very low for this time of the year, averaging from 10 to 11 shillings per thousand, for Chicago.

A VAST amount of building is done this spring and new houses are springing up in all parts of the city, still there is an increased demand for houses and rooms to rent, and many families have to stay in boarding houses, being unable to obtain any suitable place.

THE Common Council at their last meeting gave orders to have all the sidewalks in the city repaired and put in good order at once. They also resolved to have Lake Avenue graveled from Second street to the Lake, which is certainly a move in the right direction, if only the funds hold out.

THE I. M. Weston, the new steamer built by D. Robertson for ex-sheriff Waters, of Muskegon, was successfully launched last Saturday afternoon and on Sunday was towed to Montague where she will receive her machinery. She is a splendid specimen of marine architecture, and is expected to be very fast. Mr. Waters intends to put her on a route between Frankfort and Northport to run in connection with the Barker and Sanford, which boats run between Pentwater and Frankfort.

Neighboring News.

SEVENTEEN Allegan drunks, who cannot pay their fines, will have an opportunity of working them out on the streets. Good scheme, but how about the fines of drunkard-makers?

OSTRINE, SMITH & Co., of Hamilton, have commenced to clear off their yard getting ready to make brick. They have employed a number of teams this week and mean business by the way they go to work.

A NEW-BORN babe was found in the river at Eastmanville last Tuesday morning. It appeared to have been in the water four or five days. There is no clue to the parents or any one connected with the affair. An inquest was held the same afternoon and evening and a verdict was rendered in accordance with the above named facts.

WHEN the Grand Haven Lumber Company built the largest shingle mill in the world at that place last fall, the experiment was tried to do away with belts and transmit the power by friction. The work has now been found too heavy, there being too much friction—the friction pulleys burning out after several different kinds had been tried. New belts have now been put in which gives the mill all the power it needs with no trouble.

A CHILD near Allegan was sick of a fever. Some neighbors told the parents to split a chicken in halves, and stick each foot of the child in one-half of the chicken, when the fever would be drawn from the child so quickly that the meat would become putrid at once. The parents did so, but finally sent for a doctor. Before he got there, however, they had used three chickens, and when he arrived they were about to decapitate the fourth. This is the Allegan Gazette's testimony to the superstition still prevailing about that village.

ABOUT one-half of the village of Newaygo was destroyed by fire Sunday forenoon. The fire originated by the careless use of kerosene in kindling a fire in a kitchen in a building owned by E. L. Gray, opposite the Brooks house. The fire spread rapidly and consumed the wooden row on the side of the street where it started, burning about 30 buildings, including the Congregational church, the Exchange hotel, and Jase house, besides several dwellings and offices. The Brooks house, a large three story building owned by A. Court-right and leased by Will Courtwright, was totally consumed with its contents. The steam fire engine owned by the Chicago & West Michigan Railway, located at Woodville, was promptly on hand and assisted in stopping the further spread of the flames. A steamer was sent from Grand Rapids, but arrived after the fire was under control. Three hotels, one church, and the Tribune office were among the buildings destroyed in the fire. The loss is about $30,000; insurance $10,000. The number of buildings burned was 30.

THE sale by the Goodrich Transportation Company of the steamers Michigan, Wisconsin, and City of Milwaukee, closes that company's operations between this point and Milwaukee, while it will still continue its line between here and Chicago. The company has for years afforded the people of the east shore the best of facilities for the transportation of freight and passengers at low rates, and deserves the good will of our people, who will continue to patronize liberally its Chicago line.—News-Journal.

THE number of type used in an ordinary country newspaper is about 600,000; that is the actual number of bits of metal arranged for each paper in preparing a newspaper of the size of the News for the press. We suppose few people think of the printing trade as one of the most exact and particular handicrafts; but it is. In making type, variations that might be allowed in the finest machinery would render type useless. It is very rarely that type furnished by two separate foundries can be used together without a great deal of trouble, even though they should try to make it after the standard. We read, once in a while of a wonderful piece of cabinet or mosaic work containing ten, twenty or fifty thousand pieces, the maker of which has spent months, or even years of labor in producing, and the people go to see it as a curiosity. But the most elaborate and carefully fitted piece of work of this kind ever made, does not compare for minuteness of detail and accurate fitting, with that which the printer does every day. The man who does the first is looked upon as the marvel of skill, but if one hundred of his pieces are put in wrong side up or turned around it is not noticed in the general effect; but if a printer, in fitting ten times as many pieces together in a single day, puts one the wrong way, everybody sees it and is amazed at the "stupid carelessness of those printers."

SCROFULA

and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Eruptions, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores. "Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me."

Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIEN, 148 Sullivan St., New York, June 24, 1882.

All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brien; also upon the Rev. E. P. Wilde of 75 East 64th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. BALL, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1882: "Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

JOTTINGS.

NEXT Wednesday is Market-day in this city.

WILD Geese were flying northward yesterday.

EDITOR HOLMES, of the Fenville Dispatch, called on us yesterday.

THE showers of the past week were very beneficial to the growing crops.

THE Williams Bros. are laying a new sidewalk in front of the City Hotel.

MR. HARRY HOVY, editor of the Reed City News, was in the city last Tuesday.

THE summer time card of the Chicago and West Mich. R'y will be issued about the 15th inst.

ALFORD FINCH caught a black bass one day this week, which weighed 5½ pounds. The largest caught this season.

THE lunch counter at the C. & W. M. depot is about to change hands. Mr. and Mrs. Dolph King take charge of it next week.

THE gay serenaders "went the rounds" last Tuesday evening and called at our humble home at about midnight. Their music was very sweet.

GENERAL Superintendent, C. Harris, of the Chicago and West Michigan Railway, has resigned. Who his successor is to be has not yet been announced.

THE Council of Hope College, at its recent session, named the main building situated on the College Campus, Van Vleck Hall, in honor of the first principal of the Holland Academy.

THE railroad company has presented their flagman at Eighth street crossing, in this city, with a house. It is located on the south-west corner of Eighth street and the railroad track.

LAST Monday Mr. M. Harrington shot a large horned owl, a rare species of the owl family. The bird has passed into the possession of Mr. W. Baumgartel who has placed it in the hands of a taxidermist for preservation.

WHAT a disappointed countenance the manager of Castello's circus will wear next Wednesday, after seeing the number of people in attendance at Market Day, and then viewing a large number of empty seats at his entertainment.

MR. H. R. MARTIN, of St. Joseph, has taken charge of one of the desks in car accountant Graves' office at the depot here. He comes highly recommended, having been many years in the employ of the St. Joseph paper manufacturing company of Hon. A. H. Morrison.

ON Thursday night the lightning struck a telegraph pole near the Zeland Depot and ran into and set fire to the telegraph office, damaging the instruments, table, and furniture. A family living near by, being aroused by the heavy report, saw the fire in time to extinguish it, and saved the building.

THE Park House at Macatawa Park has been greatly enlarged during the past winter, and has been plastered throughout, making a neat and very comfortable resort for pleasure seekers. We understand that the Hotel will be ready for occupancy in a few days. Mr. W. J. Scott will again have charge of the Hotel this season.

WE call the attention of our readers to the new advertisement, in this issue, of Messrs. R. Kanters & Sons who have some excellent bargains to offer. Messrs. Kanters & Sons buy goods in large lots, and can afford to sell them as reasonable as any dealer in these parts. Don't fail to call on the firm and see their large and complete stock of merchandise before going elsewhere.

IT is time our citizens were making some move toward preparing for the proper observance of Decoration Day. Our people should not "stand back" in showing their respect for their dead comrades and friends who so nobly defended this Union. Several years have elapsed since the day has been observed in this city, and a proper tribute should be paid to the memory of the departed heroes of the Rebellion on the 30th day of the present month. Citizens, awake, and to the front, it is time you were moving in this matter.

LAST Wednesday evening Miss Helen Potter gave one of her monologue entertainments to a rather small but very appreciative audience in Lyceum Hall. The weather was stormy and rather disagreeable, which undoubtedly kept many at home, but it is nevertheless a "solid truth" that our people fail to "come to the front" in patronizing an entertainment that contains intrinsic merit and worth. Helen Potter gave one of the best entertainments ever given in this city, and fully sustained the reputation enjoyed by her among the most refined and cultured circles of New York. We hope she may appear here again when she will undoubtedly have a much better reception.

COUNTY Treasurer Hyma was in the city last Tuesday.

DAN CASTELLO's Circus next Wednesday, the first of the season.

SENATOR John Root spent Sunday at home, returning Monday afternoon.

MR. G. VAN SCHUYLEN, Clerk of the House Committee on State Affairs, spent the week in this city.

THE Annual Regatta of the Northwestern Amateur Rowing Association will be held at Muskegon, July 21 and 22 next.

A NUMBER of our farmers have their corn planted. If the weather remains as cold as it is now, the corn will not grow very fast.

MARRIED:—By Rev. D. Brook, Mr. Abraham De Boe, of this city to Miss Lizzie Clydale, of Grand Rapids, on Saturday, April 28.

MISS MARY HEROLD, who has been spending the winter in St. Louis, Mo., has returned home and has resumed her position as bookkeeper in the dry goods store of D. Bertsch.

MESSRS. P. PRINS & Co., are selling an article which every good house-wife should have, it will help keep peace in the family. The article is called Excelsior Shirt Polish and costs but twenty-five cents a package. Try it.

LIST of letters remaining in the Post-Office at Holland, Mich., May 3rd, 1883. Mrs. Emoret Beuziger, Mrs. Nella S. Covey, Astors S. Hillreth, Edwin W. Shaw, Mrs. Sid Steweter, John Ver Sluis. WM. VERBEEK, P. M.

ANOTHER candidate for public favor is the Biographer published at No. 23 Park Row, New York. The Biographer is a journal wholly devoted to publishing short biographies of the leading men in the world's history. The subscription price is $3.50 per year.

OUR postmaster has given notice that hereafter the post office will be open on Sundays from 12 m. until 1 p. m., instead of between the hours of 5 and 6 p. m. as heretofore. The Chicago mail will close at 5:30 p. m. All letters dropped in the outside letter box will be regularly attended to.

WE invite the attention of our lady readers to the new advertisement of L. & S. Van den Berge, who have on hand a large and very complete stock of Millinery, Flowers, Ladies Dolmans, Infant's wear, etc. L. & S. Van den Berge enjoy the reputation of being the leading Milliners of the "colony," and we advise the ladies to call on them before making purchases elsewhere.

THE senior class of Hope College were examined last week and passed by the Council to the Degree of B. A. The following appointments were made by the faculty: Valedictory oration, Mr. Blekink; Latin salutatory, Mr. Dyk; Japanese oration, Mr. Matsda. English orations were awarded to the other members, viz.: Messrs. Hulst, Otte, Oltmans, Scholten, Stapelkamp. Mr. Abraham Stegeman, of the class of 1880, was appointed to deliver the master's oration.

THE Holland Butter Tub Factory, of Messrs. J. Van Putten & Co., have added another lathe to their machinery. This lathe will greatly increase the capacity of the factory so that they can now turn out in the neighborhood of 600 tubs per day. This institution is an important factor in the industries of our city and we are pleased to see them constantly enlarging and increasing their business. The excellent quality of the tubs manufactured, and their reputation for prompt and fair dealing with their customers, can not be gainsaid, and there is no reason why this firm should not be one of the foremost of manufacturing firms in Western Michigan.

LAST Monday afternoon the Steamer Macatawa, which was built by Messrs. Moore & Hopkins of Saugatuck to run between this city and Macatawa Park, came into this harbor for the first time with about 300 excursionists from Saugatuck and Douglas. The Douglas band accompanied the excursion. The boat and excursionists were greeted, on their arrival at Harrington's Dock, by about 100 of our citizens and Dr. D. M. Gee's Musical Class. After the usual courtesies were exchanged the Macatawa made a trip to the Park with Dr. Gee's Band and a few of our people aboard. Owing to the insufficient notice given of the excursion, only a few people accompanied the boat on this, her first trip to the Park. The Macatawa is a staunch and apparently very safe boat to be used for excursion purposes, and, although she was in an unfinished condition, created a very favorable impression among our people. The boat is expected to be finished and making regular trips in a few days. We wish Messrs. Moore & Hopkins success with the Macatawa, and we feel confident that they will be perfectly satisfied with the amount of business they will receive at this port this season.

MR. A. M. KANTERS has returned home from Buffalo, N. Y.

MRS. FANNIE COOK, of Hesperia, is visiting her sister, Mrs. G. S. Doesburg.

THE international exhibition at Amsterdam, Holland, opened last Tuesday.

PROSECUTING Attorney McBride and Sheriff Vaupeil were in town this week attending to criminal affairs.

SIX days of wrong doing can never be wiped out by one day's repentance and prayer. It takes longer to heal a wound than to make one.

OUR merchants are all looking happy over the abundant evidences of our city's prosperity, and the prospects of a good trade for the coming season.

MESSRS. Blom & Porter will open their saloon, in the building two doors north of M. D. Howard's office, on Tuesday next. Holland now has eight saloons.

MR. J. H. NIBBELINK, our ninth street livery stable keeper, made a trip to Indiana this week and returned with a carload of very nice horses. He now has some of the best roadsters in the city.

DIED:—May 2, 1883, after an illness of three days, Henrietta Kerkhof, nee Grootenhuis, aged twenty-three years, ten months and eleven days. She was buried with her infant child, which died May 1, on Thursday last.

THE number of strangers in the city this Spring is indeed large. Many we presume are sight-seeing, but the majority are newcomers who are permanently located here. To such we recommend the News as a means of procuring information about local affairs, and as a source through which they can advertise their "Wants," "Losts," "Founds," etc.

REGULAR trains on the Chicago and West Mich. R'y are now running to a point 12 miles north of White Cloud, and within 12 miles of Baldwin, in Lake County. The road is being pushed north, and in a short time will form a connection with the Flint and Pere Marquette road at Baldwin, which will give the people of Ludington and Manistee a shorter route by rail to Chicago, via Muskegon and Holland, than they now have.

LAST Thursday morning the steamer S. B. Barker, Messrs. Brower & Doesburg owners, left for Chequamegon Bay, where she will run as an extension of the Wisconsin Central R. R. from Ashland to Bayfield, and as an excursion steamer for the pleasure of guests stopping at Ashland. The S. B. Barker is one of the finest and best boats of her class, that "sails the lakes," and we are sorry to see her leave this port. Messrs. Brower & Doesburg have our best wishes for their success on their "new run."

THERE is an enterprise in our midst, about which the larger portion of our citizens know very little. Mr. J. J. O'Brien, who lives about three miles north of this city, manufactures a millberry preserve, during blackberry season, which he sells mostly to hotels in the leading cities of the West. Mr. O'Brien manufactured about 800 gallons of the preserves last year, and, if nothing happens, will manufacture in the neighborhood of 2,000 gallons this year. We have used a gallon of the preserves and pronounce them excellent.

THE American Bible Society, founded in 1816, are engaged in the 4th re-supply of the United States with the Holy Scriptures. The first was made in 1829—30, when the entire population was 12,866,000 and Missouri was the Western line of civilization. The second in 1856, population, 26,506,000. The third in 1886, the people numbering nearly 37,000,000. Of the work now in progress, the Bible Society Record, of April 19, says: "The number of colporteurs in the field is 366. The canvass has been begun in twenty-eight out of the forty-eight States and Territories. Number of families visited thus far 826,862. Of these 50,489 were found destitute of the Bible."

Hudsonville Items.

A SEVERE thunder storm visited this place Thursday night.

MR. S. M. WOLF has his store up and the roof nearly on.

MR. F. L. SOUTER is in town making his spring delivery of fruit and ornamental trees.

OUR Supervisor, George Weatherwax, is taking the valuation of property in this township.

MR. HOMER A. HUDSON, has been very sick with pneumonia, but is, at present writing, thought to be recovering.

OWN of our young ladies is very anxious to obtain a recipe for the preservation of "Greens" for winter use. Perhaps some of the readers of the News can accommodate her.

HUDSONVILLE LODGE, I. O. O. F., took part in the anniversary exercises at Grand Rapids, on the 25th ult. We understand the boys had a good time.

WE notice, as we pass a certain house in this place, that the young people have taken the advice of your correspondent, and "pulled down the blinds," a good plan.

WE understand that there is a good prospect that another of our widowers will soon resume the matrimonial yoke. It would seem that this disease was becoming contagious in this vicinity.

YE Grangers held a dance last evening in the horse barn and the house of L. E. Giddings. We don't envy them all the fun they had in passing back and forth through the rain. The proceeds of the dance are to be used toward the new hall. H.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs; none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured. "In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 63 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER." Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup. — A Mother's Tribute. "While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup. It seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours, MRS. EMMA GEDNEY." 120 West 128th St., New York, May 15, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE." Lake Crystal, Minn., March 15, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN." Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRADON." Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

THE CHILDREN WE KEEP.

The children kept coming, one by one. Till the boys were five and the girls were three. And the big brown house was alive with fun. From the basement, floor to the old roof tree. Like garden flowers the little ones grew. Nurtured and trained with the tenderest care; Warmed by love's sunshine, bathed in its dew. They bloomed into beauty like roses rare.

But one of the boys grew wary one day. And leaving his head on his mother's breast. He said, "I am afraid of the night." Let me tell you how it came. She cradled him close in her fond embrace. She hushed him to sleep with her sweetest song.

And rapturous love still lighted his face. When his spirit had joined the heavenly throng.

Then the eldest girl, with her thoughtful eyes. Who stood with her hand on her mother's knee. Stole softly away into paradise. Ere the river had reached her slender feet. While the father's eyes on the grave were bent. The mother looked upward beyond the skies. "Our treasures," she whispered, "were only lent; Our darlings were angels in earth's disguise."

The years flew by and the children began. With longing to think of the world outside. And as each, in its turn, became a man. The boys proudly went from the father's side. The girls were women now, and the old maid fair. That lovers were ready to woo and win. And with orange blossoms in braided hair. The old home was left, new home to begin.

So, one by one, the children have gone— The boys were five, and the girls were three; And the big brown house is all empty and lone. With but two old folks for its company. They talk to each other in the twilight. And say, "All the children we kept at last. Are the boy and the girl who in childhood died."

SELF-WILLED YOUNG PEOPLE.

BY MAY FORD LAUREL.

(NOTE BY THE AUTHOR.—The chief events mentioned in this sketch occurred some years before the late Civil War.)

Edward De Vere had just returned from college, where he had been renowned for his skill as a cricketer and oarsman, his propensity for outlavery of every kind, and his antipathy for mathematics and classical studies. He had been enthusiastically liked there; for, although undeniably "wild" (his "mates" had rather admitted this distinguishing characteristic) and exceedingly self-willed, he was a generous, candid and honorable young fellow.

His parents were dead; he had been an only child, and his uncle, Joseph Lorraine, had been appointed his guardian, and held in trust the young man's extensive property during his minority, for De Vere, though loth to acknowledge it, was still a minor, being but 20 years old.

De Vere, as I have stated, had just returned from college, and was staying at his uncle's country house in South Carolina, upon an estate rather sentimentally named "The Woodlands."

Mr. Lorraine saw, with only half-hidden pride, his nephew's reckless bearing, handsome face and tall, athletic form. Mr. Lorraine was a bachelor, and Edward his presumptive heir.

The good old gentleman had a cherished project concerning his nephew. His most intimate friend and crony was the father of a young lady—pretty, pleasing and in every way eligible; what could be more natural and proper than that his nephew and his friend's daughter should be united in the bonds of matrimony, after a decorous and elaborate courtship? And doubtless the young lady's influence would tend to make the young gentleman risk his neck less frequently on dangerously spirited hunters, and to give up other fascinating but imprudent sports to which he was addicted. But when Mr. Lorraine, upon the evening on which our sketch begins, proceeded to unfold his projects to his nephew, they were received with unqualified indignation, much to the chagrin of the innocent contriver.

Uncle and nephew were equally obstinate. The former persisted that his ward was a foolish and ungrateful boy, who didn't know what was good for him. The ungrateful boy was so disrespectful as to intimate that his own taste in these matters was superior to his uncle's; and so full of untimely levity as to suggest that, as the young lady (he had not even asked her name) was so perfect, it would be appropriate that his uncle should request her hand in marriage; he (Edward) would certainly not take advantage of this mistaken generosity, nor stand in his uncle's way with the young lady. Upon which his uncle made, or rather roared, the following remarks:

"You are a dunce, sir! You have inherited none of your mother's good sense, sir! Go and dress yourself, sir! in an evening suit, sir! and pay the young lady a visit with me, and you will at once regret the disrespectful remarks you have made concerning her!" And the uncle left the room by one door, the nephew by the other, the latter whistling, "We won't go home until morning," with more bravado than musical accuracy. Standing on the veranda steps, with an air of authority, he ordered a youth who was weeding the flower-beds in the garden to call Young Israel. "Young" Israel was thus denominated to distinguish him from his paternal relative, who had the same Christian name. He was an Ethiopian lad of the same age as De Vere, and had been waiting-boy to that young gentleman from a tender age. He soon came up the gravel walk and presented himself to his young master with the familiar inquiry:

"Call me, Mass Ned?"

Here let me state that, although christened Edward, Mr. De Vere was accustomed to being called Ned, or even Neddie.

"Israel," he said, "I want you to go on a 'coon-hunt."

"Coon-hunting is a night-sport, and the sun was at its setting while master and man held this conference.

"All right, sah," responded Israel, with a benign smile.

"Get ready, then," said Ned, and Israel, an accomplished 'coon-hunter, began to make his preparations.

De Vere rode his hunter to the outskirts of a wood that lay a couple of miles from his uncle's house, and then, sending the horse home by one of the ever-present negroes made his way into the thicket, accompanied by Israel, and by two massive, slabsided bull-dogs, answering to the names of Bullet and Ball. By the time the sun had faded, and the dusk had deepened into night, and many stars were out, Bullet and Ball struck the trail of a 'coon. It is an undignified sport, but a fascinating and exciting one, this 'coon-hunting. Down in the depths of a Carolina pine-forest, where the dense boughs form a roof overhead, the open spaces of which show patches of pale sky, set with stars, or admit the mellow moonlight that forms fantastic traceries around; the eager dogs, the blazing torches, the scrambling and dashing through briars, thickets and dense underbrush; the shouts and hallos, that cheer on the dogs, and send their ringing echoes through the wood, among the pines; the final 'treeing' of the luckless 'coon. All this is deeply stimulating and enjoyable to a young, light and adventurous heart, but, apart from the pleasure of the hunt, De Vere felt a deep satisfaction in having set aside his uncle's authoritative commands to visit the lady selected for his future partner in life. At the mere thought of that young person, De Vere's indignation knew no bounds. And on he trudged in the wake of Bullet and Ball, his trusty esquire behind him. The mischief was in the 'coon. It missed the dogs and hunters as warily and as persistently as if it had been a veritable "Friar Rush." Its maneuvers threw the pursuers off its track time after time.

"Dat 'coon is a comical creetur," sighed Israel, pathetically.

"You bet he is," was Ned's emphatic rejoinder.

But Bullet and Ball were slow and sure. There was no evading them. With patient sagacity, they tracked the wary animal over miles of wooded land, De Vere and Israel following. It was far into the night, and the hunters' energy was near flagging, when the joyful yelling of the dogs announced their victory. De Vere and Israel reached the spot from where the sound came and saw the defeated 'coon seated in the topmost branches of a slender gum-tree, the dogs keeping guard below. By the light of Israel's torch, Ned took sure and steady aim, the report of his rifle went ringing through the wood, and the victim of the chase fell dead at his feet.

"Sport enough for one night," said Ned, patting the shaggy heads of Bullet and Ball. "Home now, Israel!"

And Israel, picking up the defunct 'coon, led the way, as he thought, homeward. De Vere followed, his rifle on his shoulder, his head bent down in meditation. The cool dew, laden with the perfume of wild-grape blossoms, was falling round him; there was no moon shining, only myriads of pale stars. It was a night in early April. He was thinking of his uncle's inexplicable whim, of the girl who had been chosen for his bride. Did she know of the arrangement, he wondered? Was she winsome and pretty?

"Sure not to be," was his mental reply. "It's only your stiff-necked, hard-favored young women who get so completely on the right side of their elders and betters."

A startling collision with a rough-barked red oak broke the young man's reverie. He looked about him. "Israel," he said, quickly, "is this the same way we came?"

Israel had been stumbling along the road in a sort of semi-somnolence. "Lord only knows, Mass' Neddie," he murmured dubiously. "I tink it's de wrong way myself. Which way you tink ole massa's house, dey?"

"I'll be hanged if I know," said Ned, frankly.

Israel considered the matter.

"Seben star dey ober nigger-house; tree runner dey ober tater-field," he observed, intelligently.

Laying down the 'coon, he swiftly ascended a sapling pine to look for the constellation in question.

"Whar de seben star? De feller gone, Mass' Neddie!"

"Set," said Ned, laconically.

"Whar de tree runner? Dar he is! De only ting for do, sah, is to follow dat tree runner."

"I've given out," said Ned. "Light a fire, Israel. I'll spend the rest of the night here."

"Wid all dem fox aroun?" inquired the alarmed Israel.

"Perfectly harmless, Israel."

"And so much of 'wildcat here?"

Ned employed an unorthodox word in connection with the wildcats, and peremptorily ordered his right-hand man to build a fire. In a few moments a brilliant blaze was burning and crackling. Ned extended his length of limb on the smooth carpet of pine leaves, lit a cigar, and amiably observed that a man might find a worse place to spend the night in, which was, no doubt, quite true.

"Is that a light off in the distance?" asked De Vere, half raising himself to look.

"Jacky-lantern!" whispered Israel, under his breath, and Ned did not dispute the point. Silence for some moments. Then Israel said, in a cautious undertone:

"Mass Ned?"

"Well?" said that young gentleman.

"Mass Ned, dem dog is oncommon hongry. Don't you tink I'd better cook dat 'coon?"

"All right," said Ned, with his pleasant laugh.

And in this interesting task, in which he was frequently interrupted by the importunate Bullet and Ball, Israel forgot his fears of jack o' lantern. Ned dreamily watched the three at their feast, in which he declined joining, and, after the last faint wreath of smoke had curled up from his cigar, fell fast asleep; his slumbers all unbroken, except by a series of confused visions, in which he now beheld his uncle reproaching him with tears in his eyes for his undutiful conduct; now the young lady, recently offered to him, who took the semblance of a gaunt, angular and red-haired damsel, stood over him with a dagger in her hand, threatening to plunge it into his heart, unless he at once led her to the altar; now he gave chase to a 'coon that would not be captured; and now found himself flying before the hot pursuit of the indefatigable Bullet and Ball.

The next morning the sound of far-off singing woke De Vere from his sleep. Springing lightly up from the ground, he looked about him. The sun had risen, but the dew was still sparkling everywhere, on trees and ground, and on the leaves of blossoming jasmine, that hung from the saplings around. Close to the smoldering remains of the fire Israel, Bullet and Ball were curled up, fast asleep. Near to the bivouac ground lay a wood-path, fringed with tender, bright-green grass. And nearer and nearer came the singing—sweet, silvery singing. De Vere looked around in bewilderment. Then the boughs before him parted, and down the narrow path, a song on her lips, came so lovely a form that one might have taken it for that of a Flora, among the flowers of the wood. Her shoulders were half-covered by her golden curls, that fell below her slim and dainty waist. Her eyes were like wide-open violets, her face, a white rose, with a faint and lovely flush on it; flowers lay upon her breast, flowers round her wide, shepherdess hat. The long train of her soft, white dress was tucked over Flora's arm, leaving just visible two little feet, in pretty, dew-dew slippers. So diligent had she been that morning that she had already culled a great bunch of wild flowers—trailing sprays of gorgeous yellow jasmine, big blue wood-violets, sweet pink honey-suckle and knots of coral-colored woodbine. Bullet and Ball raised their heads, and growled out their disapprobation of the intrusion. Flora dropped her train, and glanced round at the tableau before her. The dying fire out in the green-wood; the grim dogs beside it, and the sleeping kith and kin; and standing by a pine sapling, his rifle beside him, the tall young man in his rough, dark blue suit and long hunting-boots; a soft felt hat pushed back from his broad fair forehead and short curly hair; a young man whose handsome face, bright blue eyes and debonaire glance made a favorable impression upon Flora.

"I beg your pardon," said Ned, accosting this classical divinity as she passed by; "but would you mind telling me where on earth I am?"

It occurred to Flora's mind that this young man had been upon a spree; so she regarded him severely as she answered: "You are in 'Laurel Grove,' Mr. Hall's plantation."

"Am I?" said Ned, opening his blue eyes. "Never heard of such a place in my life!" Then, upon glancing at his companion's face, he felt compelled to add: "I left home on a hunt last night; my game drew me miles away; I took exactly the wrong road in returning, and came out this way. Can you tell me the distance between here and Al-lenton village; I live near there?"

"Thirteen miles."

"W-h-e-w!"

It was with a prolonged and melancholy whistle that De Vere received this information.

"Come and take breakfast with us," said Flora, benevolently.

De Vere colored and looked down. After spending a night in greenwood, without the luxury of a morning toilet, should he enter the bosom of a refined and aristocratic family? For the family must needs be both of whom his companion was a member.

"I'm hardly prepared," he told her, with an expressive smile. He had an especial fondness for making a stylish appearance.

"You mean that your costume is inapropos?" said this young lady, straightforwardly. "No matter; there is only my father and aunt at home just now, so there is no one you would mind but myself, and I have seen you already, you know."

"Then I'll come," said Ned.

"That is right, but call your servant, Mr.—what shall I call you?"

"My name is Ned De Vere, and (with a return of his natural audacity), "if you were to call me that, I should be well pleased. But I should rather you left off the surname, you know."

"I would not be so impertinent if I were you," said Flora, severely.

"I won't," said Ned. "I stand rebuked, Miss—what shall I call you?"

"Miss May Hall. Call your servant, Mr. De Vere."

"Israel! Wake up, you rascal!"

Thus admonished Israel arose, looked around with an air of bewilderment and, scarcely knowing whether he was awake or dreaming, followed, at a respectful distance, his master and the young lady who was walking with him.

The dogs joined the party. Miss Hall bestowed a gracious caress upon Bullet, who seemed disposed to resent the familiarity.

"What were you hunting, Mr. De Vere?" inquired Miss May Hall.

Ned hung his head.

"Coons," he said in an undertone.

Miss Hall looked scornful.

"I admit that it's an inelegant sport," Miss Hall, said Ned, "or the name makes one think so. But what's in a name? It's an exciting sport, 'coon-hunting."

They passed from the wood into an open meadow, thence under an avenue of graceful, bending liveoaks. Before them, surrounded by darkly-green gardens, and rising majestic and tall, was a venerable country house of mossy stones, with a wide-columned veranda before it. Miss Hall consigned Israel and his canine companions to the hospitable care of a passing domestic, and Ned accompanied his pretty cicerone into the Hall mansion. There he made the acquaintance of "Papa," who was rather a severe-looking old gentleman, but warmly, courteous and cordial in his hospitality, and of "Aunt Eliza," who was, to all appearances, an elderly and amiable Cypher. At the breakfast-table, which displayed game, fish and delicacies of various sorts, Ned occupied himself chiefly in bestowing smiling and admiring glances, from behind the vases of garden flowers and pyramids of scarlet strawberries, upon his irresistible vis-à-vis, who blushed, smiled and glanced back again, charmingly. And in the face of what I have said concerning the frankness of his disposition, candor compels me to own that the glances mentioned were invariably given at times when the attention of Mr. and Miss Hall, Sr., were bestowed elsewhere. His host would fain have induced him to spend the day at "Laurel Grove," but Ned declined the invitation, promising, however, with cheerful alacrity to visit his new acquaintances again.

After breakfast, and a walk in the garden among the flowers, with Flora, Ned made his adieux, and returned to the "Woodlands." Walking into the house there with a knot of rose-buds upon the lapel of his long-suffering blue coat, he answered his uncle's inquiry with the superfluous statement that he had "spent the night out." He and Israel had reasoned together, and master and man decided that the demerit of their hunt should be permitted to lapse into oblivion.

Days and weeks passed on, and self-willed Ned, refusing to so much as hear of the young lady to whom his troth had been pledged by his uncle, had ridden often to Laurel Grove, where he and sweet May Hall had roamed in the woods, going flying down the river in a tiny skiff, rowed by Ned's own strong hands, or sat together in the old flower garden or veranda, in twilight, starlight or moonlight, unnoticed by Mr. Hall and Miss Eliza, who wished only that they should enjoy themselves as best they might. They talked chiefly of themselves with the pretty egotism of young lovers, experiencing their first love affinity. They were so young! He not twenty-one, and she "sweet sixteen." It seemed to her the most natural thing that this young man, this truest and noblest of knights, should be enthralled by her charms—for was she not a beauty? He told her so, and she believed him; and like the young lady renowned in nursery rhymes, who was so boastful of her charms as to style herself the "prettiest girl in the county," she had "looked in the glass and found it so." And De Vere, in his boyish happiness, had no fear that his ardent and romantic love should be unrequited, or nipped in the bud. So these young sweethearts had a very gay and untroubled courtship. It was with a less joyful heart that Ned contemplated the necessity of asking the consent of May's father, and of mentioning his affaire-de-cœur to his uncle. One evening, when Ned was at Laurel Grove, Mr. Lorraine called his nephew's man and inquired his whereabouts. "Mass Ned-die gone for to see his sweetheart, sir."

"His—what?"

"He sweetheart, sah; berry pretty young lady; look same like someting for eat. Yes sah, Mass Neddie gone courtin' to-night—dat's a fac', sah!"

This statement, accompanied by a series of smiles and bows, Israel had supposed, would be greatly to his master's glory. But he soon saw his mistake, for "Ole Massa," believing that he had discovered the secret of Ned's rejection of the alliance proposed to him, said, in a voice that made Israel shake in his shoes: "What young lady? Who is your master 'courtin', boy?"

"Courtin', sah?" echoed the prudent esquire, striving desperately to undo his error. "You misunderstood me. Mass' sportin', he is, sah, wid de brudder to de young lady I tole you about. Mass Neddie nebber did lub young ladies, sah."

"You are lying, sir! Take yourself away!" was the temperate reply which this politic speech elicited, and the dispondent Israel hastily withdrew.

"Uncle Jo," said his nephew the next morning, "I am sorry to displease you, sir, but I regret to say I am engaged to be married."

"You are a young reprobate, sir! Leave my presence! You're not your mother's son, sir! No, sir! Not if you swore to it, sir! Leave me!" And Ned, also indignant, did leave him.

Still more embarrassing was the other little ceremony that lay before the young lover. Punctiliously attired, and striving desperately to preserve a nonchalant exterior, he presented himself before Mr. Hall and requested his daughter's hand, modestly stating that he had won her heart already. Mr. Hall carefully arranged his spectacles so as to concentrate their magnifying powers upon Ned's face; then he replied with great sang-froid: "Young man, I have no objection to you personally; in fact, I have always thought you a very genteel young man. But my daughter's hand is promised already."

"Not by her own consent, I presume?" said Ned.

"Sir, her father's consent is the chief thing requisite. I trust that May Elizabeth is above sentimentalities."

At this trying moment, the young lady in question entered and stated that she was sufficiently sentimental to prefer Mr. De Vere to any other gentleman of her acquaintance.

"Go to your room, May Elizabeth; and remain there until I give you permission to leave it!"

Now any readers will agree with me that May should at once have betaken herself to her apartment; but, instead of this, she went instead to a little rustic bench, that stood under a rose-tree in the garden, and there transformed herself from a Flora to a Niobe. When De Vere, in passing (after notifying the scandalized father that he had no intention of resigning his suit), found his little sweetheart there, he, of course, set about comforting her. There, under the roses in the old garden, these wild, willful, undutiful sweethearts planned an elopement.

"I would never, never say yes, Ned, but I know that papa will be sure to love you in no time—how could he help it?" said romantic May.

So they eloped. The lady left the hall of her fathers in the dark, and was lifted into a pony phaeton, and driven dashing away by the knight on the road to Charleston. There they were united in matrimony in the parlor of one of De Vere's lady friends, a good-natured young matron, ready enough to oblige the young man, who was greatly favored by womankind.

The next morning all Laurel Grove was in an uproar. Mr. Hall was detained at home by a sprain received a day or two previous; but friends, neighbors and servants were galloping wildly about, making frantic efforts to arrest and bring back the rash couple. This state of affairs met the eyes of Joseph Lorraine, who had chanced to come to pay a visit to his friend, Mr. Hall.

"Joseph," said the distracted parent, "we are betrayed—we are ruined! How will you comfort your poor nephew? My daughter has eloped with a young jackanapes!"

"Ah, my friend; you don't say so? But young people are all—all alike these days—all alike!" sighed Joseph.

Just as he said these words, Mr. Hall, forgetful of his sprain, jumped from his chair, as if he had been shot. "There they are, by Jove! There they are! My daughter and that young villain!"

"Where? Where?" said Joseph, eagerly, going to the open window.

There was the pony phaeton. Ned drew up the reins, lifted out his bride, and offered her his arm. They came up the garden walk.

"Mereofill powers!" whispered Joseph. "William, it is my nephew!"

"Eh? What? Your nephew? I thought better of your nephew, Joseph. But heaven be praised that it has turned out no worse!"

The runaway couple entered; May looking down, blushing and tremulous; Ned stepping jauntily, and holding his head unnecessarily high.

"Mr. Hall," he said stiffly, "you are surprised to see me, no doubt. But your daughter wished to come to ask your pardon, as soon as possible, for becoming my wife, and, of course, required my escort—Why, Uncle Jo!"

May all elopements end as happily. The pair were rebuked, but not severely; then peace was made. Uncle Jo kissed his new niece, and Aunt Eliza bestowed a caress of the same nature upon Ned, while Mr. Hall began to chuckle over the success of his long-cherished scheme. A few days later a grand country wedding-feast was given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Edward De Vere. And, although they "married in haste" and have had ample leisure wherein to repent, they have never done so. I have their own words for it!—Chicago Ledger.

The Mother-in-Law.

"I have a joke about a mother-in-law," said a young man, poking his head into our office one day last week. "You have, eh?" we shouted, shrilly. We were mad, and didn't care for the instant who knew it. "You have, you son of a sea-cook; well, you can take your mother-in-law joke and piourette to Hades with it. When we were busted up in business, who set us up? Our mother-in-law. When our first baby was born, who was the kind angel who administered to mother and child? Our mother-in-law. When fortune frowned and things looked as though they were going to be knocked galley-west and six ways for Sunday, whose calm, good common-sense advice cheered and encouraged us to take hold anew of the plow-handle of life and push forward to do and conquer? Our mother-in-law. Take your joke and spring it on some unsophisticated, anti-fet editor, who gleams the drags of discarded wit and swallows in the old, played-out, hysterical wit of the coming almanacs. We will not go back on our friends."—Cheek.

The Ten Virgins.

A certain minister of the Kirk of Scotland, now deceased, had prepared with great care a series of discourses on the parable of the ten virgins, and had made use of them rather oftener than some of his brethren thought he should. On the evening of a communion Sabbath, when assisting a brother clergyman in the same presbytery, he delivered one of his series, which his friend had heard more than once. When the services were over and the two ministers were on their way home to the manse, the one said to the other: "Man, John, I really think you should gie up the virgins; ye're fairly makin' auld maids of them!"

THE reason why so few marriages are happy is because young ladies spend their time in making nets, not in making cages.—Swift.

A Formidable Pair of Weapons, With One of Which Hamilton Was Killed.

Some time ago I ran across perhaps killed a Frenchman near New Orleans; Capt. Sam Goode Hopkins killed a Spanish Count near New Madrid, Mo., Hugh Brent killed a man from Georgia on Diamond Island, below Henderson, Ky. They were used several times in Virginia, twice in South Carolina and more than once in Kentucky with deadly effect. Robert Triplett, of Owensboro, shot the old lawyer, Phil Thompson, of that city, through and through with one of them, but, strange to say, Thompson recovered and grew as fat as a bear. Henry Clay and Capt. Hopkins were fast friends, and the former was to have used the pistols in one of his duels, but they arrived a day too late.

Drowning a bear was the feat once accomplished by James Humphrey, of Johoes, N. Y. While rowing on Long Lake he saw a bear on a small island in the middle of the lake. He thus describes what followed: "I jumped shore and loaded up with a lot of stones. I had just got back to the boat when Fred shouted, 'Here he comes.'

The Level Crossing.

"Jane," I cried. "Jane, speak to me!" She turned her wandering gaze towards me, with eyes that seemed scarcely to recognize me.

"Have you seen my husband?" said she.

"Jane! little woman, don't you know me?" I gasped.

"And I thought, perhaps," she added, vacantly, "you might have met him. It's very cold here, and—and—"

And then she fainted in my arms.

The long, long brain fever that followed was a sort of death. There was a time when they told me she would never know me again, but, thank God, she did. She recovered at last. And since that night I have never tasted a drop of liquor, and, please God, I never will again. The baby, bless its dear little heart, wasn't harmed at all. It lay snug and warm on its mother's breast all the while.

GEO. H. SIPP, City Clerk.

Wit and Humor.

A motto for young lovers: So fa and no father.

According to Richard Grant White "hug" is a word that embraces a great deal.

A young lady, on being asked where her native place was, replied: I have none; I am the daughter of a Methodist Minister.

A middle-sized boy writing a composition, said: "We should endeavor to avoid extremes, especially those of wasps and bees."

Notwithstanding all the modern improvements of husbandry, the matrimonial harvest is still gathered with the cradle and thrashed by hand.

"My darling," said he, "what a delicious taste your lips have!" Then she sprang up and yelled: "goodness, John! have you been eating my lip-salve?"

The following is the way an editor would put it: Men may come and men may go, but Heaven defend us from the man who comes but never goes.

All flies are very wise. No one ever knows, as he sits in a doze, how much a fly knows that alights on his nose, till he levels the blows, when away the fly goes.

A hint is sometimes as good as a long speech. "Mr. Foote," said a gentleman to that celebrated wit at a dinner party, "your handkerchief is hanging out."

"Thank you," was the mild reply, "you undoubtedly know the company better than I do."

When an Austin schoolmaster entered his temple of learning one morning, he read on the blackboard the touching legend, "our teacher is a donkey." The pupils expected there would be a combined cyclone and earthquake, but the philosophic pedagogue contented himself with adding the word "driver" to the legend, and opened the school with prayer as usual.

The "constantly tired-out" feeling so often experienced is the result of impoverished blood, and consequent enfeebled vitality. Ayer's Sarsaparilla feeds and enriches the blood, increases the appetite, and promotes digestion of the food and the assimilation of its strengthening qualities. The system being thus invigorated, the feeling rapidly changes to a grateful sense of strength and energy.

Marvellous Cure of Stone in the Bladder—Large Stones Removed by Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

From the Pittsfield (Mass.) Eagle.

Stone in the Bladder is a very dangerous ailment; but many most remarkable cures have of late been wrought by "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy"—the invention of Dr. Kennedy of Rondout, N. Y. Another striking case is now added to the list. Mr. Peter Lawler, of Dalton, Mass., states in a letter to Dr. Kennedy that he had been troubled with bladder complaint for 14 years, and had consulted at different times seven physicians; but nothing beyond temporary allayment of the pain had been worked. Towards the end of last January Mr. Lawler called on Dr. Kennedy. Sounding him the doctor "struck stone." He decided that Mr. Lawler should first try the "Favorite Remedy," so as, if possible, to avoid an operation. And here is the remarkable result: "Dear Doctor Kennedy—The day after I came home I passed two gravel stones, and am doing nicely now. If you would like to see the stones I will send them to you." This letter bears date "Dalton, Mass., Feb. 6th," and is signed "Peter Lawler." The stones, which are so large as to warrant for "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" the claim that it is the most successful specific for Stone yet discovered, are now in Dr. Kennedy's possession. Incidentally Mr. Lawler also states that the "Favorite Remedy" at the same time cured him of a stubborn case of Rheumatism; and it is a fact that in all effusions arising out of disorder of the liver or urinary organs it is a searching remedy and works marvellous benefits. It is in itself almost a medicine chest. Order it of your druggist. Price $1.00 a bottle.

MANHOOD

How Lost, How Restored!

Just published, new edition of Dr. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical cure of Spermatorrhoea or 8-minal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence, or sexual extravagance, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.
