The new order requiring all steamers on the lakes to display two lights—one well forward and the other fifteen feet higher at the stern—is creating a good deal of commotion. Most steamers have no place where they can display this light at the stern, and the mast-head light must come down directly over the pilot house. The object of the rule is to show vessels which way the one they are approaching is steering by the relative position of the two lights.

Tuesday evening Miss Cornelia Van der Veen and Miss Tillie Van Schelven jointly celebrated the anniversary of their birthday, by entertaining about twenty of their friends with progressive pedro at the home of the latter, after which refreshments were served, and a royal good time was spent. Even our local reporter was most kindly remembered by a collection of their delicacies, and he wishes the young ladies many happy returns of the day.

One of the saddest events of the week was the sudden and unexpected death of Robt. S. Ayers, of whom we made mention last week as visiting his cousin, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Castle. Mr. Ayers seemed to be in the best of health and had so expressed himself to his friends. Saturday evening, however, he complained of a slight pain across his chest, which grew worse, and on Sunday morning a physician was summoned. Upon examination it was found that he was afflicted with peritonitis, which dreaded disease ended his career on Tuesday night, at the age of twenty-seven. His beloved wife was at his side, having accompanied him on this trip west. Great preparations had been made by them to be in Detroit, Friday, to celebrate the second anniversary of their wedding. Mr. Ayers' mother arrived Thursday noon and when the sad news was announced to her of the death of her only son, she was heart broken. After a short service at the house, conducted by Rev. Dr. J. W. Beardslee, the remains were shipped in a metallic casket to Bridgton, N. J., where on Saturday a host of friends will pay their last tribute. Mr. Ayers was a traveling salesman for S. L. Allen & Co., of Philadelphia, in whose employ he had been for eleven years, and on account of his sociability, his cheerful and generous disposition he made friends whenever he went. Among his most intimate friends here were Mr. and Mrs. H. and A. De Kruit of Zeeland, and Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Benjamin of this city.

The city librarian made his annual report at Tuesday's meeting of the common council. The report is as encouraging as it is brief, in that it shows that while the number of volumes in the library is only 1,119, the whole number of books drawn is 4,982. Our city library has every claim for favorable consideration at the hands of the council and the public, for the good it accomplishes.

Died at his residence in Spoonville, Monday, Mr. John Spoon, aged 72 years. The deceased was an old resident of that place, having come from Seneca Co. N. Y., in 1856, and settled at Spoonville, where he has resided constantly, having been engaged extensively in lumbering and stock raising. He left a wife and three children. It is said that the family will move to Grand Rapids and make that city their home.

The contract for the new boiler room and office at the Walsh-De Roo flouring mills has been let to Messrs. J. Huntley and P. Oosting. Work will be commenced at once. It will not interfere, however, with the regular running of the mill, for the present. The product of this establishment is in too constant and increasing demand to allow of a long lay-off. The merits of their leading brands are especially made mention of in another column.

The building boom is still on. Last week Dr. H. Kremers bought the vacant twenty-foot frontage on Eighth street, adjoining the store of E. Herold. The latter will remove his present frame building and the two parties named will jointly erect a two-story brick block on the premises, to be completed before fall. In connection herewith we are requested to give notice that owing to this proposed removal, Messrs. E. Herold & Co. will dispose of their stock of boots and shoes at largely reduced rates.

During the thunder storm, Wednesday evening it was thought by the members of the family of Jan Kuypers, two miles south west of Graafschap, that the barn had been struck. One of the sons rushed out to see, and while on the way the barn was actually struck, or again struck, setting fire to the straw. As it happened, two pairs of water-stood on the barn floor and with these the son succeeded in extinguishing the flames. Eight horses stood in a row in the stalls and one of them was stunned, and not expected to recover. The horse was insured in the Ottawa and Allegan Mutual, and secretary Marslie went down Friday to adjust the loss. John O'Connell, a farmer residing on the Lake Shore, north of Pigeon, also had a horse killed by lightning in the pasture, Wednesday evening. A colt was struck too, but it recovered.

The subscription list for the Y. M. C. A. building now has upon it the names and subscriptions of the following public spirited citizens. A few hundred dollars more is necessary in order to secure the erection of the building. The names of additional subscribers will be given next week: I. Cappon, $200; C. J. De Roo, $75; J. C. Post, $100; Geo. P. Hummer, $50; G. J. Kollen, $50; W. H. Beach, $25; G. T. The contest for the location of the M. E. camping grounds, of which mention was made by us last week, has been decided in favor of Macatawa Park. The First Ref. church of this city has been made the recipient of a fund of about $2,500, designated as a "Life Membership Parsonage Fund." It was collected by the Woman's Executive Committee on Domestic Missions of the Reformed Church, for the purpose of assisting some congregation or other in securing a parsonage. Rev. R. Joldersma, as western mission agent, recommended the First church here as worthy of the favorable consideration of the committee.

Van Kersen; Rec. sec., Benj. Hofman; Treasurer, Sheldon Van den Berg. The reports for the past year show that the association is in excellent condition, having at present 104 members, 81 active and 23 associates, making this the largest college Y. M. C. A. in the State. With it are connected four Sunday schools, having an average attendance of 154 scholars, and 14 teachers. The year has been one of marked success.

Bishop Gillespie, of the state board of correction and charities, has made an official visit to the Ottawa County "Infirmary", and gives the following as his observations:

The new building is erected on a fairly good plan. There is an opportunity by a fire escape for the sexes to get together, which may be easily remedied. The bedrooms are of good size, and most of them will be heated. Ventilation has not been sufficiently provided for. The water supply is not sufficient: the putting down a cistern, which has been talked of, should be done. Situated as the poor house is, a mile and a half from Eastmanville, and where there is no fire engine, every means should be provided in case of a fire, such as a force pump and hose, barrels of water kept in parts of the building, a Babcock extinguisher. It should be regretted that it is thought necessary to use the third story for inmates. It would be well to have more fruit on the farm. The privies are too distant from the buildings for the winter use, especially for women. Mere suggestions are made, as the house comes much nearer than common to what a poor house should be.

The above is no doubt a fair review of our county infirmary. And since it is the province of the board of correction and charities to make suggestions, they may perhaps be willing also to receive one. Therefore we venture to suggest to the kindhearted bishop the propriety of hereafter dropping the term "poor house." It is a term that has so little in it that is soothing. The inscription on the Ottawa county institution is "Infirmary."

The Difference.

The characteristic features which distinguish a protective tariff, as the Republican party wants it, and a tariff for revenue only, as the Democratic party wants it, have never been more clearly and briefly defined than in the recent tariff debate in the House, by Congressman Dalzell of Pennsylvania. We quote a few extracts:

The purpose of a tariff for revenue, is revenue. Such a tariff is a tax and is paid by the consumer, while a protective tariff is not a tax and may be paid wholly by another than the consumer. And as a revenue tariff is essentially a tax for revenue, it must follow that the most perfect revenue tariff is one which will realize the most revenue.

The legitimate articles of the duty to be imposed by a revenue tariff are those things that we must have—necessaries—that we do not produce at home or can not in quantities reasonably sufficient to supply our wants, since these furnish the most certain and reliable subjects of importation. Such articles are tea, coffee, sugar, drugs, and the like. Hence the purpose of a revenue tariff is to increase imports. But home productions decrease, as imports increase, and it is therefore plain as the noonday that the free-trader's dream will have been realized and his millenium will have come with the destruction of our industries and the loss of our independence.

Foreign products as against home products become the creatures of governmental regard, since from them come the sources of supply for their Treasury. A revenue tariff says welcome to the products of the Coolie labor of India and the pauper toil of China; welcome to the manufactures made by the starvation wages of Wales and Belgium; welcome, the products of men of all races and climes, kindreds and tongues, toiling as slaves and living like beasts to a competition with freemen in an American environment, with American wants, privileges, habits, and American manhood.

There is no man who does not know that a revenue tariff would strike down American manufactures, in which millions of money are invested and hundreds of thousands of men employed; would shut furnace doors, and make their smokeless stacks the sad monuments of industrial ruin; would still the music of the loom and spindle, bankrupt American capital, and put out the fire upon the hearthstone of American labor. It would crowd our farms with superfluous laborers, take from the farmer his home market, and multiply his products without multiplying the mouths to feed.

Over and above and beyond all, it would strip us of our independence and make us the hewers of wood and drawers of water for all the world beside. I appeal to history. I might summon as witness many men and appeal to the records of many years.

A single man and a single year will suffice to tell the story. In 1857 we had had a revenue tariff for eleven years. James Buchanan, from his chair in the White House, thus pictures its effects:

The earth has yielded her fruits abundantly and has bountifully rewarded the toil of the American. Our great staples have commanded high prices, and within a brief period our manufacturing, mineral, and mechanical occupations have largely partaken of the general prosperity. We have possessed all the elements of material wealth in rich abundance, and yet notwithstanding all these advantages our country in its monetary interests is at the present moment in a deplorable condition. In the midst of a surpassing plenty in all the productions and in all the elements of national wealth we find our manufactures suspended, our public works retarded, our private enterprises of different kinds abandoned, and thousands of our laborers thrown out of employment, and reduced to poverty.

And four years after this declaration the crisis came, when in the hour of its supreme need, with the hand of treason upon its throat the nation found its Treasury empty, its obligations scorned in the money markets of the world, and its credit gone.

Between the Republican tariff bill of 1861, passed to reorganize a Treasury bankrupted by the free-trade system of the Democratic party, and the McKinley bill of 1890, passed to relieve the surplus in a Treasury filled by the protective system of the Republican party, what a change, my countrymen!

What now, let me ask, is the protective policy? It is that policy which admits free of duty those things which we either do not produce at home, or do not or can not produce in quantities reasonably adequate to supply our wants; and which imposes duties upon those foreign products that come into competition with our own, so as not only to raise revenue but also protect American labor and American capital and add to our industries, to the end that we may develop to the utmost the riches with which a good Providence has blessed us.

The protective system recognizes the fact that the conditions of American life differ in toto from the conditions that prevail anywhere else. It recognizes the fact that wages are higher here than elsewhere. It recognizes the fact that Americans in the mass, whether on the farm or in the shop, want to live better, dress better, and do better than the masses elsewhere. It counts the schoolhouse and school books, an organ, some pictures, and other books as amongst the necessities of American life. It recognizes the fact that alone of all men on God's footstool the American has inherited, as the price of blood, the right to call himself the equal of a king; and it recognizes, therefore, that there is an American manhood and an American womanhood, thank God, worthy of protection, cultivation, and preservation.

The protective system is not claimed to be a remedy for all wrongs. It will not rid us of those evils which inhere in human nature and are incident to man in society. And when its opponents seek to lay those evils at its door they simply uncover their weakness to us. Men who couple the protective system, for instance, with monopoly, make us suspect that they are simply repeating some schoolboy oration. Trusts and monopolies and all that sort of thing are the nightmares that seem to haunt some people whenever a protective tariff is named. There are no substantial monopolies in this country outside of the patent laws, railroads, and telegraphs, and none for which the tariff is responsible. The law of competition, as sure and merciless as the law of gravitation, can not be controlled in a country with boundaries such as ours.

The greatest trust that this country ever knew dealt in an unprotected article, (petroleum) whose quality it improved and whose price it reduced to the consumer, but as it was wrong in principle it went down, only the other day, under the weight of the Sherman law against trusts, passed by the Republican Fifty-first Congress. Between tariff and trusts there is no relation of cause and effect. Trusts flourish in free-trade England; combinations flourish in free-trade England; human nature is the same in free-trade England as in protected America.

A few days ago the pro tempore leader of the House on that side, with a disingenuousness unworthy of him, inveighed against the protective system because certain coalminers in Alabama, certain iron-workers in Pennsylvania, had struck for higher wages. He knows that the tariff had no connection with these strikes. He knows that in all climes, at all times, since man first looked into the eye of his fellow, capital and labor have been engaged in contests which a Christian civilization has lessened in number and reduced in bitterness, but has not yet learned to prevent. He knows that not long since the streets of free-trade London resounded to the tramp of marching thousands, strikers, not for an advance, but against a reduction of wages. He knows that to-day four hundred thousand mine-workers in free-trade England, out on a strike, have laid their paralyzing hand on England's trade.

If it is true, as claimed by the Democratic party, that the unprecedented majority in the House of Representatives was a rebuke and condemnation, at the late election, of the McKinley protective tariff law; and if that same House, thus elected, fails to repeal that law or fail to attempt to repeal it, will the next popular judgment of the American people not be that the Democratic party either lacked the courage of its convictions or that by the practical and beneficial operations of the McKinley law upon the prosperity of the country those convictions were erroneous? Judging from the drift of public opinion the country at present is only too anxious to apologize for the unmatured judgment it pronounced a year ago last November.

THE FINEST MUSICIANS ARE THE MOST ENTHUSIASTIC OVER THE A. B. CHASE PIANOS!

The world renowned violinist, Edouard Remenyi, writes to the A. B. Chase Co. the following enthusiastic tribute of appreciation of their wonderful pianos:

JACKSON, Mich., January 20th, '92.
A. B. Chase Co., Piano Manufacturers,
Norwalk, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I gave last night a concert in the presence of 1,500 people (my absence) and was especially pleased not only by the elegance and finish, magnificent workmanship, but above all by the superb tone and action of your Grand Upright.

I was delighted hearing by accompaniments to my beloved violin on such a fine piano. After my third or fourth piece I inquired after the maker's name, and to be sure it was an A. B. Chase. It does you great honor, and I am highly pleased to write to you these few lines of artistic appreciation. I wish I had every night such an instrument at my disposal; and by the by, it reminds me, I will send you my route, and if you can do something for me, my violin and I, we both would be yours, very obliged and devoted fiddler and I.
ED. REMENYI.

This wonderful piano is exhibited at the music store of H. Meyer & Son, River street, and is kept continually in stock. During the past season they have placed several of them in the best families of this city.

Trout Fishing

SEASON OPENS MAY 1ST.

The new Extension of the Chicago & West Michigan R'y from Traverse City to Elk Rapids, is twenty miles long and penetrates a region in which are numerous trout streams, that have heretofore been too remote.

The line passes through Mitchells, Acme, Williamsburg and Angella's at or near to any of which there are good streams that have never been fished to any extent.

If you would rather go farther off you will find a steamboat running regularly from Elk Rapids through Elk Lake, Round Lake, Troch River, past the mouth of Rapid River and up the entire length of Torch Lake.

Into all these waters empty trout streams that and now for the first time made convenient.

ASTORS IN MOURNING.

THE HEAD OF THEIR FAMILY HAS PASSED AWAY.

Disastrous Fire in the Athenaeum Building in Chicago—The Paris Anarchist, Ravachol, Sentenced to Imprisonment for Life—St. Louis Ahead.

The Lawmakers.

In the House, on the 26th, Mr. Blount of Georgia asked unanimous consent that the House go into committee of the whole for the consideration of the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill. The House then went into committee of the whole (Mr. Oates, of Alabama, in the chair), on the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill. It appropriated $1,849,225, being $72,000 less than the current law, and $53,541 less than the estimates. The reduction on missions was $35,000; on consuls, $37,000. In the bureau of American republics, $10,000. After a long discussion, the committee then rose and the House agreed to the request of the Senate for a conference on the amendments made by the Senate to the Chinese exclusion bill passed by the House. Messrs. Geary, Chapman and Hitt were appointed conferees. In the Senate the silver question consumed all the time.

WILLIAM ASTOR DEAD.

The Head of the Noted Family Passes Away at Paris.

Cablegrams received from London and Paris announce the death at the Hotel de Liverpool, in Paris, of William Astor, head of the Astor family and third richest man in the United States. The cause of Mr. Astor's death was given as heart failure, and his friends here at once connected it with the shame and humiliation growing out of the scandal affecting the good name of his daughter, Mrs. J. Coleman Drayton. Mr. Astor, accompanied by his wife, went abroad two months ago and spent most of his time in London and in the south of Europe. When the Drayton-Borrow scandal became public Mr. Astor and his wife joined their daughter in London and took her to Paris, where they sought to protect her name from the taint that had fallen upon it. The contemptible conduct of the parties involved rendered this impossible, and both Mr. and Mrs. Astor felt the ignominy of their daughter's position very keenly. Mr. Astor was known to be a very sensitive man, and worry over the affair is regarded as being, in a measure, responsible for his death. It is a curious coincidence that William Astor's brother, John Jacob, died of heart failure at his home two years ago. It is said the original John Jacob Astor was similarly troubled. With continual investing and continual speculating the estimates of the Astor household have grown steadily until now it is no uncommon thing to hear it asserted that the combined wealth of the family amounts to $400,000,000. John Jacob Astor's individual share was often put at $250,000,000, and even $300,000,000, and only last November such a well-informed writer as Thomas G. Shearman estimated it at $150,000,000.

FRUIT FROM WASHINGTON.

Preparing to Bring It Into Competition with the California Article.

Hitherto almost the only fruit sent from the Pacific coast to the East has been that grown in California, but the Northern Pacific Railroad is now preparing a freight schedule for fruit by which the Washington product will go into the markets at St. Paul and Chicago, and perhaps as far East as New York. The beginning will be a reduction of one-third in the rate to Montana and similar cuts will be made as the business develops eastward. The express companies are also arranging to handle small lots of fruit and give special rates. Eastern Washington is now chiefly devoted to wheat raising, and contains much land which, though arid, is very fertile when irrigated. Apples, pears, peaches, plums and grapes do well, and melons are particularly successful. Were the freight rates favorable the supply of these fruits for the Eastern market would be almost unlimited. In Western Washington apples, pears, cherries and prunes are found profitable, and a prune orchard eight years old will net the owner from $400 to $600 an acre annually.

SCORE ONE FOR ST. LOUIS.

The Postoffice Department to Introduce Pneumatic Tubes There.

Col. Smith A. Whitfield, First Assistant Postmaster General, who has been in St. Louis for the past few days on business connected with the Postoffice Department, has completed his visit and started on his return to Washington. Col. Whitfield says that in St. Louis the first practical pneumatic service for carrying mail matter will be introduced. "The department has had the idea of the pneumatic service for a long time," he said, "but this is the first instance where it will be worked out."

Fire in the Athenaeum.

Firemen with terror, nearly four hundred men and women made a wild rush down the iron and marble stairways of the Athenaeum Building at Chicago, Tuesday evening. Many in the flying crowd fought fiercely to gain the street, and that scores of people were not crushed beneath the feet of the frightened mob seemed almost incredible. No one was seriously hurt. The fire in progress damaged the upper floors of the building about $75,000, burned over $8,000 worth of oil paintings, and caused other losses reaching $35,000.

Ravachol Not to Die.

The trial of the Paris anarchist Ravachol was begun and completed, Tuesday, in the Seine Assize Court. There was great excitement, and the jury men and all connected with the court showed signs of nervousness and apprehension. A large force of police guarded Ravachol and his fellow prisoners. Ravachol was found guilty, and, contrary to expectation, did not receive the death sentence, but is sentenced to imprisonment for life. Paris is in a veritable reign of terror, because of the dynamite explosion in M. Verry's cafe.

Horses and Cattle Burned.

A fire started in one of the out-buildings of the Cheshire Improvement Company established in Parkville, L. L., the other morning, and spread rapidly to the three big barns of the concern, in which were stabled 250 or more head of cattle and horses. The barns burned like tinder, and some 150 of the cattle and horses perished.

Cincinnati in Danger of a Flood.

The Ohio River is rising again at Cincinnati at the rate of one and one-half inches per hour, with the stage of water within nine inches of the danger line.

PANIC IN A CONGREGATION.

Fort Wayne Worshipers Flee for Life from a Cry of Fire.

At the St. Mary's Catholic Church, Fort Wayne, Ind., Sunday morning, while the big edifice was filled almost to suffocation by a congregation attendant upon the ceremony of the first communion being conferred upon a large number of children, a panic occurred. The altar and the interior of the cathedral were profusely decorated with artificial flowers. Just as Father Oachterling, the officiating priest, was about to close the ceremonies, a gust of wind disarranged a bunch of paper roses, which blew against a lighted taper, and in an instant the whole front of the church was in flames. Children screamed, women fainted, and the entire congregation, panic-stricken, made a wild rush for the doors. Many were trampled under foot, and a number were more or less seriously injured. The priests and cooler heads among the men exerted every effort to calm the frightened congregation, and at last succeeded. The decorations were torn from their places as quickly as possible, but not before the priest and a number of his assistants were quite severely burned about the hands and arms. Considering the great number of women and small children present, it is considered almost miraculous that no serious casualty occurred.

DEADLY LIGHTNING STROKE.

One Man Killed, Seven Knocked Senseless, and a Boy Goes Crazy.

A flash of lightning descended a telephone pole in New Orleans Thursday morning and instantly killed Jeannot Bernadot, aged 18 years, knocked down and rendered insensible Emilie Dennis, Charles Benoit, Tom Baker John Dorsey and three more men who were standing within six feet of the pole, and instantly killed a horse and mule. The party of young men, some of whom are employed in the stables at the fair grounds, were standing under a shed near the main stable. The lightning struck the telephone wire running over the shed and down the pole. The electric fluid struck Bernadot under the right ear and descended through his body to the ground. For several minutes the others remained unconscious. The first to recover was Benoit, who was horrified to see his companions lying around him as if dead. All the others gradually recovered, except Emilie Dennis, a colored boy, who was insane. He, however, slowly improved, and at last accounts was doing well.

TEXAS STRUCK BY A CYCLONE.

Loss of Life and Destruction of Property—A Family's Miraculous Escape.

A cyclone struck the neighborhood of Gladwater, Texas. Fortunately, the country over which it swept is sparsely settled, and the loss of life is small. Forest trees were blown down by thousands. J. M. Munger's dwelling, a strong six-room house, was moved four feet and the corner jammed into the earth. Then the whole structure was carried fifty yards and dropped on several beehives. Not one plank remained in its place. In this house seven people were at breakfast. All of them remained in the building during its trip, and not one was killed. The wind struck six miles away at West Mountains, killing an old negro, and blowing down many houses. At Bonham it destroyed the exposition building and demolished a few houses.

APPEALS TO "UNCLE SAM."

A South Sea Potentate Who Fears He Will Lose His Kingdom.

King Tebeurouma, of the Big Makin and Little Makin Islands of the Gilbert group in the Pacific Ocean, sailed last week from San Francisco on the steamer Montevideo for his island home at Butaritari. The King's mission was to cultivate more friendly relations with the United States, and he appointed Colonel C. E. Dalley as his commissioner to represent him in this country. Colonel Dalley says that the King has written a letter to President Harrison stating that he fears some European government will seize the islands, and requesting that the United States establish a protectorate over his kingdom. Colonel Dalley is given full power to make negotiations with this Government, and will forward the King's letter to Washington.

Gigantic Tobacco Fraud Again.

The full extent of the tobacco frauds committed by the San Francisco ring against the Government by undervaluation was learned Friday. In the last six months 600 barrels of Sumatra tobacco, valued at over a quarter of a million dollars and dutiable at $2 per pound, have been entered at the port of San Francisco by the payment of 35 cents per pound duty. This is a loss of revenue to the Government of nearly $100,000. This enormous quantity of tobacco was distributed to various cities in the country, and the Government is just beginning to find it out.

Convention Hall Ready.

The Minneapolis convention hall has been turned over to the committee by Delaney & Cook, the contractors, who have completed their work. The hall was completed eighteen days from the day of commencement and the workmen were obliged to lay off two days for lack of lumber. The Executive Committee has decided to close up the hall from now until the convention concert.

Rumored Cabinet Changes.

A special from Washington says the statement was made there on good authority that President Harrison has decided upon several changes in his Cabinet, which it is expected will take place May 1. The new slate moves Attorney General Miller to the Supreme Court, puts Secretary Noble into the Department of Justice, and nominates M. M. Estee, of California, to succeed Noble.

Groom Is 74 Years Old and Bride 73.

At Washington, Pa., it became known that Samuel Ross, aged 74, and Mrs. Richardson, aged 73, were quietly married. Mrs. Richardson's first husband died a year ago, leaving her considerable property. About two weeks afterward Mrs. Ross died. It is said that the present contracting parties were partial to each other in the days of their youth, but parental interference prevented the marriage.

Was Pushed Under the Wheels.

Willie Harding, aged 15, was cut to pieces at St. Joseph, Mo., by a moving freight train. At the inquest two of the boy's companions testified that he had been pushed under the wheels by John Hill, another boy.

Cracking a Whip Killed Him.

At Leon, W. Va., while some young boys were seeing who could make the most noise cracking whips, William Connolly, aged 14, with a large whip outdid the others, but fell dead in his tracks from overexertion.

Captured by Dahomeans.

It is reported in Paris that Porto Novo has been captured by the Dahomeans. The rumor is not official, but has caused great public anxiety.

SHE'S A SOUND SLEEPER.

THE MICHIGAN GIRL STILL IN MORPHEUS' ARMS.

Infection by Varioloid Feared at Detroit—Frightful Tragedy in an Ohio Town—Anarchists Instill Terror at Paris and Rome—Cattle Burned.

Varioloid in an Immigrant Family.

There is some little excitement at Detroit, Mich., over the discovery of a case of varioloid in the family of Yusef Rhoda, a German who arrived in this country fifteen days ago on the steamer Welmar. Although the child is not in a dangerous condition herself, the case is one of grave importance from the fact that varioloid is as contagious as smallpox, and that hundreds of people have been exposed to the disease. The entire family has been quarantined, and the health authorities hope thus to at least restrict the spread of the disease, though all those who are known to have been exposed have been vaccinated.

TERRORIZED BY REDS.

Authorities at Rome Fear an Anarchist Uprising.

Rome advice says that the authorities on Monday began the work of barricading the residences of the officials and also the banks. This is done in view of disturbances which occurred Sunday, and of the apprehension of more serious disturbances to follow. The working classes are greatly stirred up by the prospect of a renewal of the flour tax, this being used as an argument to animate them against the government. The extreme socialists are very active and besides appealing to the prejudice against the moneyed and upper classes they have enlisted the sympathy and co-operation of the irredentist agitators. Threats are freely uttered against the Austrians, and there is reason to fear that in the event of a riot the Austrian embassy will be assailed. For this reason the lower windows of the embassy were walled up strongly enough to prevent any assailants from entering or shooting into the building. The members and servants of the embassy are armed, and every preparation has been made to give a deadly reception to a mob. Feeling against the Austrians is running very high, partly because of the close friendship shown between the Vatican and the Austrian court. King Humbert has given particular instructions to protect the embassy from violence, and the troops of the garrison are kept ready to go to the rescue at the first sign of danger.

THREE LIVES WIPED OUT.

An Ohio Man Shoots His Wife and a Boarder and Kills Himself.

At Dennison, Ohio, George Moore shot his wife, killing her instantly, shot Edward McClelland, a saloon-keeper, badly wounding him, and then fatally shot himself. Moore was employed by the Pan-handle Railway Company, and worked at night. McClelland is a saloon-keeper and boarded at Moore's house. Moore and his wife had had a great deal of trouble lately, growing out of the suspicion on Moore's part that she was too intimate with McClelland. When Moore returned from his work Monday morning he found his wife sitting at work at her sewing machine. Without saying a word he drew a revolver and shot her through the head, killing her instantly. He then ran into an adjoining room where McClelland was sleeping and fired two shots at him, one striking him in the forehead. Moore then ran from the house to the residence of his mother-in-law, near by, and shot himself through the head.

SLEPT 308 DAYS.

The Strange Case of Miss May White, of Ingham, Mich.

Miss May White, the 23-year-old daughter of Palmer White, of Ingham, Mich., has been sleeping since Sunday, June 21, 1891, just 308 days. At one time she weighed but fifty pounds. Before she was stricken down she weighed 121 pounds. The cause of her malady is a fall received while attending a business college in Ypsilanti in 1890. Her hip was injured and an abscess formed. She recovered from this and prepared to return to school again, when what is scientifically called hysteroplepsy seized her, and on some days she has as many as fifty convulsions. The sleepy feeling then came over her, and she remained in that condition for twenty-six hours before she could be awakened at all. From a few moments at a time at first her waking hours have at last been lengthened to from six to sometimes ten hours per day. Last Saturday she sat up to the dinner table for the first time in almost two years. The doctor says he will yet make her a well girl.

The bomb contained at least twelve pounds of dynamite and completely wrecked the establishment. Ten persons were seriously injured and M. Verry was mortally wounded.

Detectives Missed Their Mark.

Detectives shooting at a fleeing man in Toledo, Ohio, excited a throng. They missed him, and he seemed likely to escape, when a Boody House porter ran out and knocked him down. He was locked up, and proved to be Henry Rudolph, son of a well-known grocer. He is charged with stealing several hundred $5 gold pieces used by the Libbey Glass Works in coloring fancy ware.

Stole 2,000,000 Marks.

A dispatch from Frankfurt, Germany, says that Herr Jaeger, chief cashier of the Rothschilds, has absconded after embezzling nearly 2,000,000 marks. Lord Rothschild, in this city, says the house has no advice on the subject.

VICTIMS OF DROUGHT.

Appeal for Help from 5,000 Starving Settlers in Texas.

San Antonio (Texas) dispatch: For three years the counties of Starr, Hidalgo, Fortcas, Zapata, Mexico, and Duval, have been subjected to a drought of such severity as to render the production of the necessities of life impossible. The season for planting has passed, and, early crops having been killed by frost, there is no hope for relief unless summer rains should secure a light fall crop. The losses on cattle, the principal industry of this section, are estimated at $0 per cent, and in Neeces County alone 60,000 head have died. The famine district contains a population estimated at 20,000 people, and probably one-fourth of this number require assistance. The people have issued an appeal to the public for help.

A DANGEROUS FOLDING BED.

Two Girls Caught in One and Extricated in the Nick of Time.

At Pittsburg, Elva and Kate Cronenworth, aged respectively 15 and 16 years, spent the night with their married sister, Mrs. Hatt, of Glenwood. They went to sleep in a patent folding bed. In the night the top fell down with such force as to lock and imprison the struggling girls. They tried their utmost to release themselves and finally grew so weak that the younger became unconscious and the other nearly so. The noise of the closing bed aroused Mr. Hatt, who, thinking burglars were in the house, began a search. Going to the girls' room and receiving no reply, he discovered their condition just in time to save their lives.

CRUSHED BY FALLING WALLS.

Three Men Killed and Two Mortally Injured at Jonesboro, Tenn.

While seven men were building a vault in the Court-house at Jonesboro, Tenn., the walls gave way from insufficiency of mortar and a failure to properly tie to the main building. Five men fell forty feet and were buried under bricks. Bruce Estridge, Frank May, and Joseph Wilson were taken out dead, Wade Snodgrass and Eli Moore were fatally hurt.

Chippewas Will Be Paid Their Indemnity.

Ex-Congressman Dummell, of Minnesota, headed a delegation of Chippewa Indians, who had a conference with Secretary Noble in regard to the payment of the $100,000 appropriated by the last Congress as indemnity for the losses sustained by the overthrow of the Government works at the headwaters at Leech Lake, Minnesota, about nine years ago. The Secretary promised that when a new agent was appointed he would direct that the Indians receive their money without delay.

More Money for the Pope.

In the month of March the collection of St. Peter's Pence for the Vatican was notably increased, the amount having been upward of $80,000, while the average monthly collections heretofore have not exceeded $60,000. Before the public declaration by the Vatican of its policy favorable to the French republic, France usually headed the list in the amount collected, but since that time it has sunk to the eighth place, the United States standing second.

Charley Reed Is Dead.

Charles H. Reed, the counsel of Gulteau, the presidential assassin, died at his home in Baltimore. His family used every means to keep his death a secret, and it only came to light through the undertakers' certificate in the health department. The cause of death was progressive paralysis, which gradually changed the once strong man to an imbecile before death relieved him.

Baker Executed at New Orleans.

Philip Baker, the murderer of Mrs. Laura Nelson, the wife of Neil Nelson, living in Carrollton, in the upper part of New Orleans, expiated his crime upon the gallows in the parish prison. He died without the quiver of a muscle, walking to the scaffold with a firm tread, and maintained his innocence to the last. Every effort was made to save Baker.

Open to County Taxation.

The Supreme Court of the State of Georgia has affirmed the constitutionality of the law passed by the Legislature making the property of railroads amenable to county taxation. The fight to secure county taxation has been a long one. This means the addition of $500,000 to the revenues of the counties of the State.

THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

WORK OF OUR NATIONAL LAWMAKERS.

Proceedings of the Senate and House of Representatives—Important Measures Discussed and Acted Upon—Gist of the Business.

The National Solons.

On the 26th, after the usual morning business, Mr. Sherman notified the Senate that further examination of the Chinese immigration question had convinced the Committee on Foreign Relations that the existing Chinese exclusion legislation would not expire till 1894, and that there was therefore no pressure for immediate action on the question. He would, however, call it up to the convenience of Senators who desired to speak upon the subject. Thereupon the silver resolution offered by Mr. Morgan was taken up, and consumed the rest of the session. In the House the Noyes-Rockwell election case was the sole subject of consideration. The discussion, though good from a legal and technical standpoint, was utterly devoid of interest from a sensational one. Pending further discussion the House adjourned.

In the Senate, the bills were passed as follows: House bill to create a third division of the district of Kansas for judicial purposes, Senate bill for the appointment of consuls to the Congo Free State. To amend the laws relating to purchase of and contract for supplies. Providing for sundry lighthouses and other aids to navigation. This bill appropriates $804,300 for a large number of lighthouses and other aids to navigation, mostly in the great lakes; to establish a military post near Helena, Mont. (appropriation $300,000). The House bill to prohibit absolutely the coming of Chinese persons into United States was taken up for consideration, but not disposed of. The Noyes-Rockwell contested election case again consumed all the time of the House.

In the Senate, the 22d, the following bills were passed: House bill to amend act of Jan. 19, 1888, providing for the discharge of the duties of the President in case of his death, etc., by providing that the Secretary of Agriculture shall come in after the Secretary of the Interior. Senate joint resolution extending an invitation to the King and Queen of Spain and the descendants of Columbus to participate in the World's Columbian Exposition. Joint resolution requesting the loan from Spain of certain articles (Columbian relics) for the World's Columbian Exposition. Extending an invitation to the President of the American republics and the Governors of the American colonies to participate in the World's Columbian Exposition. After some discussion a bill was passed authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to increase to $12 a month the pension of every pensioner who is now on the rolls at $8 a month and who is wholly disabled for manual labor, and is in such destitute circumstances that $8 a month is insufficient to provide him with the necessities of life. The Chinese exclusion bill was then taken up. In the House, the Noyes-Rockwell contested election case was decided in favor of Rockwell, the sitting member. The 25th, the Chinese exclusion bill was the sole subject of discussion, and the present law was re-enacted, with the time for its continuance set at ten years. Numerous protests from the States of Missouri, Texas, Virginia, Michigan, Arkansas, Wisconsin, and Dakota, principally from Seventh Day Baptists and Adventists, were presented asking Congress not to commit itself to any religious creed by urging the Columbian World's Exposition to be closed on Sunday. There were also two remonstrances from Massachusetts against the passage of the Chinese exclusion bill. Personal matters again had full sway in the House, and the day was practically wasted.

SATURDAY, APRIL 30, 1892.

A new future for Hope College

The Council of Hope College met in annual session Wednesday. The meetings extended over two days, and were largely attended. Much of the business transacted was of more than usual importance for the future of the institution.

The committee on the new library building, through Prof. G. J. Kollen, its active chairman, made a report of what had been accomplished by them since their appointment a year ago, in the matter of securing funds for a new library building. The report is of a most gratifying and encouraging nature, and shows that through the personal efforts of Prof. Kollen, the sum of $23,650 has been pledged for the purpose named. In order to erect a building such as is contemplated by the committee $30,000 will be required. Such a building will include a library proper, or so called stack room, chapel on ground floor, and lecture rooms. The stack room will be absolutely fire proof and located in the rear.

The committee have been directed to complete the plans for the building, lay out the grounds, receive bids and make a report to the council in June, so that work can be commenced at once. The site to be selected will likely be on the College Campus, opposite Eleventh street, facing Centennial Park.

Another very gratifying feature in connection with the above library building is the prospect of a large addition to the library itself, through a donation from Mr. N. F. Graves, of Syracuse, N. Y., a retired lawyer and banker of that city. This munificent gift, which is in addition to one of $10,000 for the proposed building, is his own private library, and contains not less than 10,000 carefully selected volumes, elegantly bound. The collection is said to be one of the finest private libraries in western New York, and is valued at $20,000.

A communication was received from Rev. Charles Scott, D. D., in which he resigned his position as president of the institution.

It was known to the friends of the Doctor that this matter has been under advisement for over a year. The increasing labors connected with the position and the condition of his health, in view of his advancing years and especially since his severe illness a few years ago, undoubtedly prompted him to take this step.

The resignation however covers only the presidency and will leave the Doctor in charge of his professorial chair and a member of the Faculty. It will take effect at the close of the fiscal year.

The matter of filling the vacancy has been placed in the hands of a committee, consisting of Rev. Dr. G. Mandeville of New York, Rev. Jas. F. Zwemer of Orange City, Ia., Rev. W. Moerdyk of Muskegon, and Mr. A. Visscher of this city, with directions to report upon the selection of a successor at the June session of the Council.

The Commencement exercises of the Western Theological Seminary, Wednesday evening, in the First Ref. church, were sadly being interfered with by the elements. At the opening hour a severe thunder storm burst out, accompanied by heavy rains, which continued during the greater part of the evening. Nevertheless, considering all this, the audience was a fair one. Around the pulpit platform a beautiful collection of flowers had been tastefully arranged, and the music was rendered by a quartette consisting of Prof. J. B. Nykerk, Ph. Soulen, Miss Trude Alcott and Mrs. Prof. J. H. Gillespie. The address of the evening, by Rev. M. Kolyn of Kalamazoo, on the subject of "The Powers of the World to Come," was pronounced a masterly production by all those that had braved the storm to take it in.

The prospects for the future of the Seminary have also brightened considerably of late. Funds for the permanent endowment of a second professor are coming in nicely, and moneys are being also subscribed for an appropriate building, with suitable lecture rooms, on the vacant lots south of Hope College campus, on Thirteenth street.

The annual catalogue of the college for the year 1891-'92 has been issued.

It is a neat pamphlet of 48 pages. Its contents however contain nothing striking. There are no changes in the faculty, except the return of Prof. J. B. Nykerk, after one year's absence at the Northwestern Academy, Iowa. The attendance of students is—college 53, grammar school 131, summer normal 96; total 280.

The revision of the constitution of the college, with reference to the manner of electing or appointing the membership of its council, was brought up and discussed at the Friday morning session, and re-referred to the committee, for report in June.

Rev. Jas. F. Zwemer, endowment agent, reported $75,000 pledged of the proposed $100,000, of which amount one-half will go to the permanent endowment fund of Hope College, and two-fifths to the Theological seminary. He will continue the work during the summer.

Wednesday morning Dr. Mandeville, Secretary of the Board of Education of the Ref. Church, gave the students a very pleasant chapel talk. The smile which continually lights up the Doctor's face, wins the favor of the boys.

Among the members of council from abroad we noticed Revs. T. W. Jones, of Chicago, and D. Brock, of Detroit, former pastors of churches in this city. Also Revs. G. H. Mandeville of New York; Jas. F. Zwemer, Orange City, Io.; B. Van Ess, Roseland, Ill.; Samuel Streng, Kalamazoo; W. Moerdyk, of Muskegon.

The council adjourned Friday noon, and among the last business transacted was the adoption of a resolution expressing the hope that the General Synod of the Reformed church in America would hold its session for 1893 in this city.

We conclude our college notes with the following circular issued in behalf of the next Summer Normal:

To teachers and those who propose to be teachers:

REV. CHARLES SCOTT, D. D., President, Holland, Mich., March 1, 1892.

Special Meeting.

The board of supervisors of Ottawa county met in special session, Wednesday, Cha's H. Clark of Robinson was re-elected chairman and the following standing committees were appointed for the fiscal year:

Finance—Goodrich, Pruin, Harrington, Bosch, Thurston.
Claims and Accounts—Norrington, Lynn, Van Loo, Waite, Sleutel.
Equalization—Van Schelven, Molloy, Shears, Begeman, Stuvelling.
Poor—Kerkhof, Sa, Lockhart.
R-J taxes, etc.—Shears, Van Loo, Thurston.

Insane—Lynn, Kerkhof, Kirby.
County Buildings—Pruin, Sleutel, Norrington, Van Schelven, Waite.
Printing and stationery—Bosch, Saul, Harrington.
Roads and Drains—Lockhart, Goodrich, Begeman.

The main object of the meeting, as stated in the call, was to discuss for mutual information the many perplexing features of the new tax-law, such as the pro rata valuation between the mortgagee and the fee-holder, the making out of road warrants in townships, the partition of the mortgage interest in cases where several tracts located in different towns are covered by the same mortgage, etc., etc. During the discussion, which was kept up for several hours, there was no reserve among the members to occasionally express their views on the merits of the law, the consensus of the opinions expressed being that in its practical operations it was a most illogical and unjust piece of legislation, exempting from taxation that class of citizens, who, of all classes and conditions, can best afford to contribute.

The membership of the committee on public buildings was increased this year from three members to five, with a view of giving due consideration to the latest report of the county jail inspectors, in which it is claimed that in several respects the present jail is insufficient.

In the present board there are only three changes from last year, the Mayors of Grand Haven and Holland and the supervisor of Zeeland; and these gentlemen can hardly be called new members, for they have all served on previous boards.

Board of Review.

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Review of the City of Holland will meet at the Common Council room, in said city, on Monday, the 16th day of May 1892, and continue in session for four successive days, for the purpose of reviewing the annual assessment roll.

My lot is entirely cut off from the street entrance by the ditch which is in front of the whole length of the lot. When River street was graded, this part of the street was left undone, to be finished the following year.

And your petitioners will ever pray. Referred to com. on streets and bridges.

REPORTS OF STANDING COMMITTEES.

The committee on streets and bridges, to whom was referred the petition of the Cappon & B. Leach Leather Co., for a culvert across Ninth street, reported that upon investigation they find the old wooden culvert in a very bad condition, ready to fall in with earth and rubbish and no good passage for water through said street; also, that Ninth street, between Pine and Maple, is in such condition as to render it practically unfit for use of any kind. Therefore, the committee recommend that the prayer of the petitioners, and further recommended as it is not customary or practicable to construct substantial culverts without otherwise improving the street, that your honorable body order Ninth street, between Pine and Maple bridge, to be improved, according to such plans and profile as may be hereafter determined upon.

On motion of Ald. Schoon the report was adopted and recommendations ordered carried out, by vote, as follows: Yeas: Lohr, Ter Vree, Schoon, De Spelder, Dalmann, Den Uyl, Habermann and Schmidt—8; nays—4.

COMMUNICATIONS FROM CITY OFFICERS.

The chief engineer of the fire department reported for the year as provided by ordinance. On hand—1 hand engine, in good repair; 1 hand engine, unfit for use; 1 H. and L. truck, fully equipped and in good repair; 2 hose carts, in good repair and 1 hose cart, used for relief; 320 feet of hose, in good condition and 250 feet unfit for use.

The fire alarm needs repairing—the bell on River street are so slack, that they need ringing. In stormy weather they come in contact with telephone lines, which causes a continual ringing of bells at the water-works, so that the engineer has to switch them off, and hence cannot be used in case of fire, and recommends that the lines be fixed and three new alarm boxes added to the system.

The building up of the Fourth ward, and the distance from engine house No. 1 to said ward, make it necessary to erect a building to be used as an engine house, and to organize a new hose company. It is suggested that on the passage of the next appropriation bill for the city of Holland, money be appropriated for that purpose.

Number of files during the year was 8. Losses by fire, $2,127.11. Insurance, $9,111. Reported accepted and that part relative to fire alarm referred to com. on fire department.

The city librarian submitted his annual report as provided by ordinance:

Number of books in the city library 1,119.

Catalogue value of same $1,939.

Number of persons drawing books 325.

Number of books drawn 4,382.

Amount collected for fines $14.00; sale of catalogues $1.63; total $15.63, as per receipt of the city treasurer.—Filed.

To the Hon. Mayor and Common Council of the City of Holland.

GENTLEMEN: I hereby tender my resignation as a member of the Board of Water Commissioners of the city of Holland, to take immediate effect.

Dated Holland, Mich., April 23, 1892.

NOTICES AND INTRODUCTION OF BILLS.

JUST BE GLAD.

BY JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

O heart of mine, we shouldn't

Worry so!

What we missed of calm we couldn't

Have you know!

What we've met of stormy pain,

And of sorrow's driving rain,

We can better meet again,

If it blow.

We have erred in that dark hour,

We have known,

When the tears fell with the shower,

All alone—

Were not shine and shower bleat

As the gracious Master meant?

Let us temper our content

With His own.

For, we know, not every morrow

Can be sad;

So, forgetting all the sorrow

We have had,

Let us fold away our fears,

And put by our foolish tears,

And through all the coming years

Just be glad.

The Diamond Scarf-Pin.

That scarf-pin? No, I don't think you have ever seen that before. It's not often that I show any of the things in this box. They're trinkets that I picked up in different parts of the world; and every one of them has a story of some sort connected with it—a tragic story, in most cases, more's the pity. So that there's a sort of sanctity about them, a kind of feeling that they shouldn't be handled and gloated over by every casual stranger who comes into my diggings. Now, this string of sham pearls, for instance, that used to belong to poor little Flo Martin—Bob Martin's child. You never saw her, but you remember the father, don't you? Well, he was murdered, as you know, shot by Indians, traveling out West, and the child—she was about eight, and the sweetest little angel you ever saw—was killed at the same time. I happened to be with the party, and helped to bury the two of them; and the poor wife gave me that little necklace of the child's when I was leaving them. Then that ring, that was Denny's once—Denny of the Tenth, the poor chap who went, I won't say to the bad, because none of us ever knew what did become of him. But he came to me one day, said he was absolutely broke for the moment, and asked me to lend him a fiver on that ring. It was worth $75 at least, and of course I let him have the money. I've never seen him since; but there he was, waiting for him, whenever he came to me back and ask for it. As to that scarf-pin, there's a longer story about that—a bad, bad business it was, too; and even after all these years I don't much like talking about it. But I'll tell you, as you seem interested in it.

I bought that pin in a little second-hand jeweler's shop in Adelaide street, Melbourne, Australia. I was on the point of starting for home; and I was lounging around, trying to fill in the time before I went on board. It was, in '71, just after the Pataroff murder business. You remember of hearing of that, of course? A Russian count, who came out about some mining speculations, found in his bed one morning, stabbed through the heart; and everybody put it down to the nihilists. I was attracted to this little shop window by a placard offering a reward for the capture of Pataroff's murderer, and just under the placard there was a tray of scarf-pins, rubbishy things, most of them, and hardly worth noticing. But this one caught my eye directly. You'll see it's rather quaint, if you look at it. A Maltese cross of small diamonds, with the bar at the end of each arm made of coral. You don't much like the effect? No; nor did I when I saw it. But it struck me at once as a curious freak on the part of any jeweler to mix diamonds and coral in that way, so I went in and asked the price of it. The shopman mentioned a sum much smaller than I had expected, and I bought the pin there and then. I asked him, just out of curiosity, when it had come into his possession.

"Well, sir," he said, "I don't rightly know myself, because I didn't buy it of the man that brought it in. The boss did that himself. But I know the man must have been badly broke. He said he must get rid of it, no matter how cheap."

"Did he look as though he was very hard up?" I asked.

"No, sir; not at all. He was dressed quite respectably; no more seedy-looking nor hard-up than yourself, sir, asking your pardon."

"There was nothing at all out of the common about him, then?"

"Now, that's just what it is, sir. There was. He was a fine, well-to-do looking young fellow, tall, and with a brownish beard and mustache. But there was a sort of frightened look in his face, as if it might be some one was after him. I believe he'd given the boss that pin, free gratis for nothing, so he could 'a' just got rid of it. And he went out of that door kinder gasping and panting, as though he had a weight took off his mind with the pin that he was leaving behind him."

"And you couldn't say where the pin was made, I suppose?"

"No, sir. We couldn't, nohow. Only I can tell you this. No jeweler made that pin, just to put in his window and sell it. That pin was made to order, wherever it was made and whoever ordered it."

"Well," I said, "it seems a queer business altogether; but I'll take the pin, anyhow. It's rather a curiosity; and if it has been stolen and the owner ever comes across me, he shall have it and welcome. Good-morning, and thanks for telling me about it."

"Good-morning, sir, and thank you, sir."

And, an hour later, I was on board the tender, scanning out the Meesenger's Liner, the Circassienne, with the pin stored away among my other small treasures in my dressing bag.

There always seems to me to be a certain very satisfactory feeling in being able to start off on a long voyage quite alone. You get on board and see your modest amount of luggage stowed away. Then you go below and find your berth, make friends with your steward, and choose a seat at table. And afterward you return on deck to watch your fellow-passengers struggling, pushing, hurrying hither and thither, hampered by luggage, wives, children, nurses and all the multitudinous accessories of a family exodus. On this occasion I carried out my little programme quite satisfactorily. I found my state-room excellently situated, my berth in the most comfortable position, and my steward—well, Gustav, as you will see later on! But he was the very best steward I ever traveled with, and I have known many. With his help I secured a capital place at the long dinner table, and also a promise that he would get the two seats on either side of mine kept vacant as long as possible, so that I could give them to any friends that I might pick up.

Having seen everything thus settled for a propitious voyage I went on deck. We had dropped our moorings, and were just moving ahead; so that the ship had been cleared of all the shore-going people. But the saloon deck on which I found myself, was still crowded, especially about the port gangway, where the usual line of white handkerchiefs stretched itself along the rail, waving "good-by" to the departing tender. I crossed to the other side of the deck, and began to inspect the rather less dense crowd of passengers I found there. They were not an interesting lot; and I was almost in despair of finding any one upon whom to bestow my two spare seats at table, when my eye fell upon a young couple—evidently husband and wife—standing a little apart from the rest. The man was tall and broadly built; clean shaven, save for a little brown mustache, and with that uniform paleness of complexion that tells of a life spent in office work or some sedentary occupation. His wife was— I should have said—a good deal younger than her husband; small, rather delicate in appearance, and distinctly pretty. There, I thought, are my friends for the voyage.

Even as I watched them, the man came across and asked me some trivial question as to the possibility of getting at some of their heavier baggage in the hold, and, in half an hour, we found ourselves on the best of terms, and my two seats were accepted with alacrity.

"Mrs. Charteris and I were wondering—let me introduce my wife, Mr. Stone—were wondering what sort of neighbors we should have, but we shall be delighted to give up our old places and take the two you so kindly offer us."

"You are a good sailor, I hope, Mrs. Charteris?" I asked, as the Circassienne just began to feel open water.

"Well, I hardly like to say yet," she answered. "It's my first trip. In fact"—with the least little blush—"we have only been married a few weeks, and are going to settle in London, where Herbert was working as a journalist before he came out here."

"Your husband is evidently ambitious," I said; and wants to compete with the very highest in his profession."

"No; curious enough, it's just the other way with him. He has no ambition at all. He wants to get back to London and lose himself among the crowd of other small men. You needn't frown, Herbert; you are a small man as yet, whereas in Australia, where the competition is not so keen, he might have made a name for himself in no time."

"You don't quite understand my hopes or my intentions yet, child," said Charteris. He always called her "child;" "you will some day."

At dinner that first evening, and in the saloon afterward, I found the Charterises most delightful company. And later on, we two men adjourned to the smoking-room, and had an hour's chat.

Next day I did not see them. There was a fresh breeze, with a bit of a sea, and beside, it is not etiquette to "show" on board ship on the first day out.

The day following, however, was just perfect; calm as a mill pond, and just enough wind right in our teeth to keep us cool under the awning.

I thought me of my scarf-pin while dressing, and I put it on, with a plain black scarf, which, I thought, showed up the diamonds well.

Taking a stroll on deck before breakfast I came upon Charteris. He stood with his back to me, looking out over the water, and I tapped him on the shoulder, as I said "good-morning." He turned and faced me for a moment, then gave a sudden start, and grew deadly pale. I thought he was going to faint.

"Good God! man!" he gasped; "that cross! Where, how, did you get that cross? You're not, you can't be one of those!"—He stopped, checking himself as though he had said too much, and stood, his eyes fixed on mine, his face full of terrified expectancy.

"My dear Charteris," I replied, "I haven't the least idea what you are alluding to. I bought that pin in Adelaide two days ago, of a second-hand jeweler; then as a sudden thought struck me, 'it isn't yours, is it?'"

"N—no, not mine. I—I never set eyes on it before; b—but don't you know it's—it's desperately unlucky to wear coral and diamonds together? Don't—for God's sake, don't wear it, Stone. Take it off—now—now—this instant, before it brings you any harm."

"Really, Charteris, if you are superstitious, I'm not. I despise all those old fancies; and, after all, it's I who am wearing the pin, not you."

A look of hopeless disappointment came over his face as he replied: "Well, please yourself, of course. Only, if evil comes of this—and mark me, it will, it must—you'll remember what I said, and be sorry."

I couldn't help watching Charteris that day at breakfast. And he, I noticed, kept glancing round at me, every now and then, with a queer, furtive expression that puzzled and annoyed me. And, throughout the whole of the voyage, it was just the same with him. All his spirit seemed to have gone. He had become nervous and dispirited; quite silent, unless one spoke to him, and even then his answers were rambling and disjointed. In a word, he was never the same man after that morning when he first saw the scarf-pin. And I could see that the poor little wife understood it all as little as I did.

But I had not yet heard the last of my pin, even for that morning. Gustav, my paragon of a steward, had just taken away a plate from before me, and was putting down another, when as he bent close to my ear, I thought I heard him whisper, not in his usual obsequious tones, but in a hoarse, threatening voice, "Take off that cross now. We've all seen you."

I turned hastily, but he was gone. Then I looked at Charteris, who, however, had evidently heard nothing. So, the plot thickens, I thought; this begins to be interesting. And, as soon as I could escape from the table, I went to my cabin, and changed the pin for another.

To say that I was puzzled would be far too mild an expression. I was utterly nonplussed. Here were two men, both complete strangers to each other and to me, who had not only recognized my scarf-pin but to whom, in addition, it bore some special meaning, and for one, at least, a meaning of fear and ill-omen. Then, if I had heard Gustav rightly, there were others on board who had seen and recognized me by means of the scarf-pin, and who now ordered me to remove it, further identification being needless. Who could they be? And when, if at all, would they make themselves known to me?

For the answer to this question I had to wait, and you can imagine how miserable the waiting must have been—for a whole week. And then there came only half a revelation. I was leaning over the rail of the saloon deck, forward, gazing down upon the thickly-crowded and confining space of the deck below, which was appropriated to the steerage passengers. Suddenly I heard a low "Hist!" beneath me, and a scrap of paper, rolled into a ball, fell at my feet. Picking it up and opening it, I read:

"Not down here. He must be in the cabin. Keep your eyes open."

And in the lower left-hand corner of the paper I saw, pricked out with a pin, the form of a Maltese cross, the pin-holes corresponding in number with the stones and corals in my mysterious scarf-pin.

Of course it was hopeless to think of looking for the sender of this strange missive, nor did I make any attempt to do so. I felt, however, that I should receive more of these communications, and, as you will see, I was right.

The saloon-deck of the Circassienne was separated from the "intermediate" deck only by a rope stretched across, and while the intermediate passengers were careful, as a rule, not to trespass beyond this barrier, we of the saloon often walked and talked with them on their side of the rope, where the deck, being almost clear of incumbrances, really made a finer promenade than our own.

Sauntering up and down on this part of the deck one evening about 10 o'clock, I was accosted by a man whom I had observed with some curiosity more than once. He was dressed as a clergyman of the Church of England, and was tall and slight, with a thin, ascetic face; but there was a certain sharp fox-like look about his eyes that produced in me an instant aversion to him. This man now came up to me, and bending down, said, in a sharp whisper:

"He's not traveling intermediate; look out for him among your lot."

And then, half drawing off one of his gloves, he pointed to his hand, on which I could see, by the light from the smoke-room door standing open behind us, a diamond ring—its stones set in the form of a diminutive Maltese cross.

Before I could answer he was gone.

An examination of the way-bill, which I made immediately after this interview, did not help me much. The Rev. Erasmus Leigh, bound from Sydney to Cheltenham, via Marseilles and London, might be anybody. And the mystery was as far from solution as ever.

The rest of the voyage was uneventful; if, indeed, any period of time could be called uneventful which was passed in continual suspense, in waiting for some impending event, which seemed to hang like Damocles' sword above my head, and still delaying its fall.

We were but one day out from Marseilles, and all had gone well so far, when, in dressing for dinner, I happened to notice that the diamond scarf-pin was missing from my bag.

I at once rang for Gustav, and asked him whether he knew anything of it. To my surprise he looked carefully up and down the passage, without speaking, then entered my cabin, and shut and bolted the door.

"Listen," he said—and there was an insolent familiarity in his voice—"You don't want that pin no longer and you might make mischief if you had it. When I've done this day's work, you'll find the pin; anyways, you shall have it back before you leave the ship."

"But why not now?" I asked, mystified beyond measure, beginning to be a little frightened.

"Cos you might show with it again, as you did that first morning. Praps he might see it. Why, you ain't safe to trust with a business of this kind. Who gave you your mark? Gorkoff?"

"Yes; your badge—your pin. Who admitted you?"

"Good gracious, man!" I cried in amazement. "What on earth do you mean? No one 'admitted' me, as you call it. No one gave me that pin. I bought it myself in a shop."

"Who-e-w!" He gave vent to a long, low whistle of surprise. "Then you haven't—it—it must be his—"

And with one bound he was out of my cabin, and flying down the passage.

Well, this heat all that had gone before! I was more mystified than ever; but, through all my whirling thoughts, one fact began to make itself clear to me. I must do something, and at once! I had waited too long, far too long, already. Gustav's allusions to "admission," to "badges," his mention of "this day's work" and a "business of this kind"—they could but point to some conspiracy, perhaps some crime. Yes, the very instant dinner was over, I would go and lay the whole business before the captain.

When I got to the saloon, I noticed that a strange steward stood behind my chair, also that Mrs. Charteris was at table, but not her husband. After dinner had gone on for a few minutes:

"Mr. Stone," she said, "would it trouble you to go to our cabin and tell my husband that we have begun dinner? I can't think why he hasn't come in. I know he heard the bell, because I was with him when it rang."

The small state-cabin which the Charterises occupied was at the extreme end of a long passage, on the starboard side of the ship, while mine was on the port side. Hence it took me a minute or two to find the right cabin—No. 47. Then I knocked. "Dinner's waiting, Charteris, and your wife's sent me to tell you."

What with the creaking of the bulkheads and the clatter of the knives and forks in the saloon I could not quite make out whether he answered or not. So I waited a moment, standing myself by the hand-rail running along the partition, for the ship was rolling a bit. Suddenly something dark showed on the floor just in front of No. 47, and a moment later, I was staring, horror-stricken, paralyzed, at a thin red stream of blood trickling slowly beneath the door. The Circassienne rolled slightly, as I said, and with a kind of fascination I watched the crimson mark crossing the oil-cloth of the floor, backing and filling with each motion of the vessel, but always creeping on, on, on—to where I stood. In another instant I should be standing in it, but to save my life I could not have stirred then.

A stifled shriek behind me seemed to break the spell, and I turned to see poor Mrs. Charteris at my side, pointing with one finger at the horrible thing at my feet. Then, gradually, the long passage began to fill, as a crowd poured in from the saloon, and a babble of voices arose—terrified questions and confused replies. And then, poor little woman, she fainted right off. Thank God, she did not see what we saw when, after some delay, we got the door open—Charteris, half lying, half sitting on a sofa, his eyes staring, his face drawn and deadly pale under the white glare of the electric light, and a long, slender knife buried in his breast. Fastened by a pin—my scarf-pin—to the paneling of the cabin, was a paper with the words:

"In recompense for a duty shirked, a trust betrayed, a cause abandoned."

And the hateful little Maltese cross was pricked out in the corner of the paper.

You can see through the mystery of my scarf-pin now, can't you? I saw it all, from the moment we looked into that cabin. Or nearly all—for a letter which poor Charteris had left, written to his wife, helped us to fill in the blank in his story. I never saw that letter; but Mrs. Charteris told me what was in it. And I never thought that a woman could have told the story as she did, quite calmly and quietly, with only just the least little choking sob in her voice now and then as she went on.

Charteris, it appeared, had been taken with a lot of mad fancies when he was traveling in Europe, and had joined one of those nihilist associations, which had for its badge the diamond and coral Maltese cross. Going out to settle in Australia, he soon forgot his rash undertaking, and was aroused from the perfect happiness of his recent marriage by a commission ordering him to murder the Russian count, Pataroff, whom, for political reasons, it had been determined to remove. Charteris was, of course, horrified. He at once got rid of his badge—which came so strangely into my hands—disguised himself as well as he could by shaving off his beard, and sailed with his wife for London, where he hoped to hide himself, knowing that certain death would be the punishment for his refusal to obey orders. But all his efforts were fruitless. On board the Circassienne there sailed with him three—or goodness knows how many more—spies of the association, bent upon tracking him down. Thanks to my diamond pin, they all took me for one of themselves; and thanks to it, also, I was able to point out Gustav as the most likely perpetrator of the murder, to which he afterward confessed, as well as to the Pataroff business over in Adelaide, and for which, a few weeks later, he paid the full penalty of the law.

As for the Rev. Erasmus Leigh, and the other conspirators among the steerage passengers, there was not enough against either of them to go upon the prosecution, and they both escaped.

Oh! yes, Mrs. Charteris is alive now. I see her occasionally. She's a widow still, poor little woman! And I think will always remain one.—P. Y. BLACK in the Cincinnati Commercial.

Wealth in Walnut Trees.

Seventy-five years ago Thomas L. Walker, then a mere boy, planted four walnuts by the roadside opposite his father's house in the Eleventh civil district, near Cedar Bluff, and some ten miles west of Knoxville. He died ten years ago, yet he lived to see four walnut trees grow to a measure of four feet in diameter, worth, if cut and properly seasoned, at least $400 each. Had he planted 300 walnuts on an adjoining acre of ground, his heirs, when he died, would have been $120,000 better off. To-day they would be $200,000 better off. Had he planted ten acres they would be worth at least $2,000,000. Had he planted 100 acres, and all the trees had reached an average size of three feet in diameter, and the land is fertile and impregnated with lime, his heirs, and there are only three living, would be worth altogether $200,000,000. If, like old Johnny Applesseed, who planted thousands of apple trees in the Northwest, he had planted all the worn-out fields in Tennessee in walnuts it would be the richest State in the Union by far.—[Knoxville (Tenn.) Journal.]

FRANTIC APPEAL OF RUSTLERS.

They Denounce the Cattlemen and Ask Protection from the President.

President Harrison received the following telegram from a committee of the rustlers of Wyoming engaged in the recent troubles in that State, which gives their side of the case:

BUFFALO, Wyo., via Douglas, Wyo., To Benjamin Harrison, President of the United States, Washington, D. C.: We do solemnly affirm that, contrary to all law of God and man, an armed body of capitalists, with hired war men, have entered our country with the open and avowed intention of taking possession of and controlling the same in their own interests; that we believe their aim was to terrorize and depopulate the country to their own aggrandizement; that, regardless of reputation or calling, that they have been detected in the act of committing such murder and killing; that they have with firearms resisted arrest by the civil authorities and have defied the law; that when surrounded by the Sheriff's posse, their capture certain, they were arrested by the military, which military is now ordered to escort them in safety to the railroad.

The band comprises some of the wealthiest people of the State, and they openly aver that their wealth will buy them off and will buy the protection of the Government. Our people have been calm, patient and miraculously submissive to law and order all through their terrible ordeal. They ask not for vengeance, but justice. The executive department of the State has moved in such a manner as to indicate its sympathy with and protection of these influential rebels, which same they claim now. Our people have to judge and feel, which former has ever controlled them, yet to see the slayers of their innocent brothers go unpunished may drive them insane.

We in behalf of our fellow-citizens and as we love domestic peace and tranquility, and in the name of God and justice, most respectfully request that the President of the United States, the head of our great Government, pledge himself to his people that justice reign supreme; that to the high and mighty, as well as to the poor and obscure, punishment shall be meted out as deserved, according to the laws and statutes of the United States.

We pledge our honor that nothing has occurred to occasion alarm of bodily injury to the prisoners from the population, and that we believe such information is false and maliciously intended to injure our country and to defame their loyalty to the government, and we firmly believe there is none intended, when an assurance exists that justice will be done; and while in our judgment it were better to hold the prisoners for trial at the scene of the crimes, amply protected by troops assisting the sheriff, yet, if it is the will of the chief executive to remove them, we shall labor unceasingly at his direction to assure him that his people are worthy of his love and protection.

We most respectfully ask, will it be the pleasure of the President to receive a committee of our county and learn how grossly our people have been maltreated?

C. J. HARRISON, Chairman Board County Commissioners and Acting Mayor of Buffalo.

The President's Reply.

A special from Buffalo, Wyoming, says: A message in reply to the appeal from the people has been received from President Harrison. The message was circulated among the people and was well received. The people feel better, now that they know the President and public are aware that they wish an investigation and justice done to all parties. The President says:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 10, 1887. To C. J. Harrington and others, Buffalo, Wyoming:

The Governor of your State made a call upon me, in conformity with the Constitution of the United States, for aid in suppressing domestic violence and threatened bloodshed. I could not know anything of the situation except as related by him, and could not refuse the aid of troops to preserve the peace. The prisoners will, as soon as the State authorities are prepared to receive them, be turned over to the civil authorities, and our connection with the matter will end unless further called upon to aid the State authorities to preserve the peace.

I do not doubt that the executive and judicial authorities of your State will, without fear or favor, bring to trial and punishment those who have violated the law, by orderly methods. Nothing will be done by me to shield any guilty person. My counsel, as your fellow citizen, is to proceed in all things peacefully and upon lawful lines. I will, of course, see any one you send, but you will see that I can do nothing except to act with the State to prevent violence. Everything else rests with the State authorities.

BENJAMIN HARRISON.

An Armed Guard Established.

There are about one hundred and fifty armed men in town organized as home guards, the organization being established last Sunday night. The streets are patrolled by a strong guard at night, and all travelers to and from town are inspected. Rumors are current of other bands of invaders, coming from Montana and elsewhere to assist the stockmen. The outposts of the organization will seek to give timely warning of the approach of any such party. Fears are entertained by many that the attempts of the stockmen will be renewed. A few persons suspected of having been favorable to the stockmen are in fear of violence from the other party. The streets have been quiet but full of people, and business is at a standstill.

Sheriff Angus has turned the prisoners in jail over to Col. Van Horn. Violence is not apprehended at present, but if the rumored invasion should occur, or if some vicious rumors should gain credence, in the present state of excitement one cannot tell what might happen.

GETTING HIS MONEY'S WORTH.

Ben Wright Got a Ready Call to Repeat Das Order Quick.

Ben Wright, who died the other day, was the most companionable man I ever met. The oyster house which he opened, at the corner of Brattle and Court streets, for years was a Boston institution.

I remember going into Wright's one night a dozen years ago. Seated at the table next me were four newsboys, accompanied by two girls who sold papers. The waiter refused to serve them.

"What's the trouble, my little men?" said Ben Wright, who overheard the conversation.

"Why, this 'ere duffer says he won't give us dat what we wants."

"I want you want, boy?"

"I want a great big stew, with plenty of oysters and six spoons."

Wright said "all right," quietly gave the order and when it was ready served the boy with a big stew, a large plate of crackers and a platter of pickles. The six spoons were there.

The stew was passed around, the spokesman seeing that each had his or her share. In a few moments it had entirely disappeared. The leader of the party then walked up to the desk and said: "How much stuff, Ben? I tell you dat was cracker."

"Never mind the stuff, my boy; have the stew with me," said Wright, kindly.

"Don't want no stuff?"

"No, my boy."

WASHINGTON GOSSIP.

BRAINY MEN WHO ARE PHYSICAL WRECKS.

Four Pictures in Roth Wings of the Capitol—Mr. Reed's Notion About the Ceiling—A Senator Who Keeps His Hands in His Pockets.

Uncle Sam's Law-Makers.

In this country there is no more interesting hall than the Senate Chamber of the United States, says a Washington correspondent. Here we have before our eyes eighty of the most famous men of the land, and it would be surprising if a study of them, even of the most casual and superficial character, did not reveal to us many character studies and incidents of an interesting nature. Here daily meet more men whose names are a household word throughout the country than can be found in any other assemblage. Here take place almost every day a variety of trivial incidents of small importance, yet worthy of comment by those whose business it is to study the leading men of the country and the times.

I was much struck a few weeks ago by the appearance of old Senator Morrill, of Vermont, just before he was taken ill. He was walking about the chamber in his usual restless manner, with head bent low with age and his white hair speaking eloquently of the many years that he has passed in the public service. It was thirty-six years ago that this man first made his appearance in the Capitol, then in his prime, a young and ambitious member of the House of Representatives. It was he who gave his name to the first great tariff bill passed in the war era, for he was then the Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means, a post since filled by some of the most famous men of our history—Randall, Morrill, Mills, McKinley, Springer. Twenty-five years ago Mr. Morrill took his seat in the Senate, where he has been ever since, an honor to his State.

Throughout this quarter of a century he has been one of the few men who have represented the highest type of public service in this country—studious, conscientious, zealous. It is an odd fact that his anxiety to serve his constituents has increased with the weight of years, and but a short time ago we saw him making a speech in the Senate with an almost painful effort to reach the high standard of effectiveness which came easily to him in his prime. Sad, indeed, was it to see him endeavor to lift his feeble voice above the hum of the chamber, and to give to his most important sentences the emphasis which he knew was rare. His case was only one of many which we have of late had in the Senate—instances of men old and decrepit in years and in physical strength, yet vigorous in intellectual power. When Senator Morrill, though past 80, made his last great speech in the Senate his mind was apparently as strong, as alert, as full of analysis and the power of logic as ever. It was the voice, the step, the gesture, the articulation, which indicated decay.

Another striking example of this was afforded by the latest efforts of Mr. Everts. During the last few years of his service in the Senate no one could detect any flaw in his mental composition. He was seemingly the brilliant Everts of old, a marvel of generalization and reasoning. His great brain was moving on with all the vigor of youth, but the tongue was palsied, the lips were halt and weak, the gestures those of senility. His last speech in the Senate was like that of a man in the endowed with the highest mentality known to the finite mind. Why is it that among men who make their mark in life, their impress upon the thought of their times, solely through their intellectuality, it is the body and not the brain which first gives out? All their lives their physical selves have been carefully nurtured, subjected to little or no strain, permitted to act as mere tenders to the gray matter which adorns the top of the spinal column.

In the Senate we have a number of instances of the modern rule that it is the body which first gives way. Take for one sample Senator Turpie, of Indiana. Watch him in his seat or moving about on the floor, and he looks like a physical wreck—a man who is merely existing. His grizzled head is continually shaking as if he were palsied. Yet his mind is seemingly as powerful and perfect as it ever was. His distinguished colleague, Senator Voorhees, is another physical wreck. His limbs are thick and halt; his body full of infirmities. It is with difficulty that he moves about in the chamber. Yet when he rises to take the gray matter at the fountain head of his nervous organization sparkles, fulminates, illumines. He is still forceful, eloquent. It is the physical organization, which he is supposed to have taxed least of all, which has borne but a small share of the burdens of his career, that first refuses to perfectly perform its functions.

Though ten years the junior of that remarkable old man, Senator Palmer, Senator Platt is worthy of mention as one of the virile men of his age and times. You may have seen newspaper mention of the fact that by many of his colleagues Mr. Platt is considered available for the nomination for President. He doesn't think so himself, as I happen to know, but still the gossip concerning him goes on. Senator Platt is perhaps the most ungainly man we have in the Senate. He is awkwardness and clumsiness personified. The tallest man in the Senate, the leanest and leanest, he is also the most awkward. To add to the difficulty, he is as restless as a fish out of water. He is constantly walking about the chamber, uneasy and ill-content, as if time hung heavily on his hands, and in thus perambulating he does not appear to know what to do with his hands, and puts his feet down as if afraid all the while that he might step upon something which would explode or slip from under him. Yet, with all these peculiarities, he is one of the most lovable men in the Senate, one who has a kind word for and from all his associates.

One of the most solid-looking men of the Senate is Mr. Gray of Delaware. His case is an illustration of the old adage that a prophet is not without honor, etc. It happened that Mr. Gray is little known throughout the country, and I doubt if more than one-half the readers of this letter ever heard of him before, yet in the Senate he is looked up to as one of the strong men, one of the master minds of the body. A thinker, an orator, a patriot, a man of rare ability and common sense, the day will surely come in which he will be known by the nation at his true worth. One of Senator Gray's peculiarities is his fondness for running his hands down in the pockets of his trousers. In this he is like a boy who has for the first time in his career attained the dignity of pockets. When making a speech or engaged in conversation, he is constantly engaged in this habit, and it is not until he has thrust into the pockets of his trousers.

Another Senator who likes to keep his hands in his pockets is Mr. Barbour of Virginia. A week or so ago I saw Senator Barbour making a speech on a subject dear to his heart—the Virginia tax bill. In advocacy of his ideas he became insistent, earnest, even eloquent, but he could not muster up enough courage to disengage his hands, which he had thrust into the pockets of his short coat. As the spirit moved him to gesture, he did it in an original and inimitable manner, with his hand in his pockets. First his right hand would shoot up into the air for purposes of emphasis, and then his left would follow suit, each movement displaying to the curious observer large sections of his waistcoat and shirt.

EX-SPEAKER REED'S QUEER FAD.

One of the most remarkable faces in the Senate is that of Arthur Pue Gorman. It is a saying in the Senate Chamber that there are three Senator Gormans—the smiling Gorman, the serious Gorman, and the Gorman who smiles and frowns at the same time. The Maryland Senator is the only man I know who can smile on one side of his face with curling lip and twinkling eye, while on the other side he is as sober as a judge. I know he can do this, because I have seen him.

Over in the House end of the Capitol ex-Speaker Reed is still the most conspicuous figure. Mr. Reed has of late developed a new fad—one which causes no little amusement among the members who sit near him. It is his belief that drops of water are continually falling from the beautiful ceiling of the hall and alighting upon his bald head. Two or three times a day he throws back his head, rubs the bald spot with his handkerchief, and gazes threateningly at the ceiling. In vain do Mr. Reed's friends assure him that he is laboring under a hallucination and that no water falls on his devoted head. The ex-Speaker insists that there is a crack in the roof and that somewhere in the ceiling a pool of water has accumulated for the express purpose of moistening his pate with an occasional drop. An examination of the roof and ceiling is to be made in a few days in order to allay Mr. Reed's fears.

His Life Threatened.

The writing of threatening letters to Dr. Parkhurst seems to have become the main industry of that class of citizens whom he has driven out of other lines of business.—New York Telegram.

DR. SPURGEON died really very poor. His big heart always got the better of his prudence and he could not allow his money to collect while others were in want. And East London has been packed with those others the past score of years.—Boston Record.

A REMARKABLE LETTER.

A Prominent Professional Man's Extraordinary Statement.
[New York Sun.]

SIR—As my name and face have appeared in your paper and the public prints lately, and as many of my professional brethren are wondering at it, I feel it only just that I should make an explanation. The statement published over my name was made ten years ago, after long and mature investigation, and I have never changed my mind to the facts then stated. At that time I said, as a physician, that I believed Warner's Safe Cure was the best of all known preparations for the troubles it was advocated to cure, and I say so still. I know it is considered the proper thing for the medical profession to deprecate proprietary and other advertised articles; but why should they do so? As the late Dr. J. G. Holland, writing over his own name in Scribner's Monthly, said:

"It is a fact that many of the best proprietary medicines of the day are more successful than many physicians, and most of them were first discovered or used in actual medical practice; when, however, any person knowing their virtue and foreseeing their popularity, seizes and advertises them, in the opinion of the bigoted all virtue went out of them."

Dr. Holland was an educated physician, an unprejudiced observer, and he spoke from a broad and unusual experience. Proprietary medicines should not be decried. The evidences of their value are overwhelming. I have seen patients recover from gravel, inflammation of the bladder, and Bright's disease after using Warner's Safe Cure, even when all other treatment had failed.

I make this frank and outspoken statement in the interests of humanity, and because I know it to be true. I trust for the same reason you will give it to the public. Respectfully,

R. A. GUNN.

NEW YORK, March 1.

At Home Everywhere.
The puma possesses in a remarkable degree the power of adapting himself to varied surroundings. The animal endures severe cold during the winter in the Adirondack Mountains and other parts of the northern frontier of the United States, and tracks his prey in the snow. He is equally at home in the hot swamps and canebrakes along the river courses of the Southern States. In South America he inhabits the treeless, grass-covered pampas as well as the forests.

Wrapped in a Poisonous Veil.
In the midst that we see rising from the shores of sluggish streams, from low lands soaked by freshets or from marshy muddy flats on the outskirts of populous cities, lurk disease and death. Immeaded in this poisonous veil of mist are isolated business structures, manufacturing villages and humble tenements. For those who either from motives of business interests or dire necessity are daily constrained to breathe this envenomed atmosphere, there is an immunity save in an efficient medical safeguard. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters fully fills the need, protecting whole communities from the insidious attacks of malarial, a disease which in its more malignant forms is scarcely less to be dreaded than the individual than typhus. Every type of it is thoroughly eradicated by the Bitters. This powerful medicine also remedies dyspepsia, constipation, liver and kidney trouble, rheumatism and nervousness. It restores, too, of appetite, sleep and flesh.

A PUBLISHER announces a new work entitled, "He Always Pleased His Wife." It is a work of fiction.

MAN learns by experience, and the most valuable experience is the one which has ended in failure.

HAPPINESS grows at our own firesides, and is not to be picked in strangers' gardens.

It is not by his faults but by his excellences that we must measure a great man.

Willie Tillbrook
Son of
Mayor Tillbrook

of McKeesport, Pa., Cured of Scurf in the Neck

By Hood's Sarsaparilla
All parents whose children suffer from Scurf, Salt Rheum, or other diseases caused by impure blood, should read the following from Mrs. J. W. Tillbrook, wife of the Mayor of McKeesport, Penn.:
"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:
"My little boy Willie, now six years old, two years ago had a

Bunch Under One Ear
which the doctor said was Scurf. As it continued to grow, he finally lopped it, and it discharged for some time. We then began giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla, and he improved very rapidly until it healed up. Last winter it broke out again and was followed by

Erysipelas
We again gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla with most excellent results, and he has had no further trouble. His cure is due to the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla. He has never been very robust, but now seems healthy and daily growing stronger. The doctor seemed quite pleased at his appearance and said he feared at one time that we should lose him. I have also taken myself and am satisfied that I have been helped by it." Mrs. J. W. TILLBROOK, Fifth Avenue, McKeesport, Pa.

Tuesday afternoon the remains of Dr. Samuel Stobbelaar were brought to this village for burial. The deceased was born here in October, 1862. His father was at that time pastor of the Reformed church. Three years later the family moved to Cedar Grove, Wis. where the boy Samuel received his early education. From there they moved to Pella, Iowa, where he graduated from the public schools and entered the Central college of Iowa at that place. About five years later he began the study of medicine, entering the Ann Arbor medical department but graduated from a medical institute at Brooklyn, N. Y. in 1886. In the same year he married Miss Nancy Kolyn of this village and began the practice of medicine at Pella, Iowa.

From the beginning he was very successful and enjoyed the confidence of the community as a competent physician and skillful surgeon. But it soon became evident that his constitution was not adapted to cope successfully with the strain and exposure incident to the life of a physician. Soon the symptoms of that dread disease, consumption, became manifest and after suffering for several years and struggling against its inroads with an iron will, he finally succumbed on the evening of the 21st of April, dying at the age of 30 years and 7 months. The funeral services at Pella, were attended by a very large concourse of people. Rev. P. De Pree preaching the funeral sermon.

The remains were laid to rest here Tuesday afternoon, by the side of his father, after a brief service at the church conducted by Rev. J. Kremer. The widow and two children besides his aged mother, survive him.

George Baert and C. Dekker, of the Pennsylvania medical college, are home on vacation.

Rev. N. M. Steffens, D. D., of Holland, occupied the pulpit of the First Ref. church, Sunday.

The H. C. Ref. church on North street, dedicated their new organ Tuesday evening in a fitting manner. Rev. J. I. Fles of Muskegon, a former pastor, was present and delivered the address. A good musical programme was carried out, after which a collection was taken up to apply on the organ.

H. Wykhuyzen, our enterprising jeweler, has moved his entire stock to Holland. Here is a splendid opening now for a good jeweler.

Friday afternoon Jacob Schipper, while at work at the planing mill of De Pree & Elenhaas, got his hand into the machine he was operating, mangling it to such an extent that amputation was rendered necessary. The operation was performed by Dr. Baert of this place assisted by Dr. H. Kremer of Holland.

Port Sheldon.

Mr. Cook, at the bridge, has a curiosity in the shape of an old cat, that had a litter of 5 kittens last week. The boys got rid of 4 of them. The next day in cutting down a tree they found a nest of red squirrels about a day old. They brought them home and put them with the remaining kitten, and the old cat took to them right away. It is a curious thing to see them crawling over and sucking her. Should any one take one away she will take it by the back and carry it to its nest again. The cat is a noted ratter and has fetched scores of squirrels to the house, but does not hurt these little ones.

I see by the press all over the country that the people are awakening to the fact that this country is far behind other countries in regard to its public highways, and it is time that the farmers round these parts should also awaken up and devise some way to improve the Grand Haven road, so that it will be in a passable condition. We have our humane societies, and our societies for the prevention of cruelty to children, and other philanthropic societies. Why not have one for the help of the poor horses that have to haul heavy loads over our roads, day in and day out. The township of Olive went to the expense of placing new ties on what is commonly called Brewster hill. At the present time there is over one foot of sand on said ties. What is the overseer of a district for? Is it only to serve as a "figure head"? The law gives him power to call out his men at any time when the roads get impassable, whether he has his road warrant for the coming year or not, and half a day's labor with a scraper would make it so that a team could get up. The town line in the township of Holland is also impassable for a team with half a load on. Now Mr. Editor, if our newly elected commissioners would get together, and provide some remedy for such places, I think the poor horses like Balam's ass of old, would waken up and call them blessed.

The young and old folks of the Wesleyan Methodist church at Ventura held a social and donation party at the Rev. Mr. Wilder's, the pastor of the above church, in honor of Mrs. Wilder's birthday, when they received some very useful presents. There was a house full. The evening was spent in a social and religious way. Both Mr. and Mrs. Wilder are very much liked and respected by all, whether they are church members or not.

I see that the Ottawa County Times has already begun to follow in the footsteps of the Chicago Times, to insert in its columns slanderous items on the character of one who is universally respected by all who know him, ever since he has been appointed to the Ventura district, and if that correspondent wishes to make himself famous by writing for a paper, he had better pursue a different course.

"Jake" of the Lake Shore will see if he reads your enterprising paper of the last issue, where he put his foot in it, criticising the writer two weeks ago about the campgrounds. He will then see that the parties that were here have selected a site off Macatawa Park. PSEUDONYM.

Edward Ogden went to the Valley City on business, Monday. Wm. West at last concluded to become a sailor, and went out on the schooner Alert. He went as a mate, or at least he will cook the "mate." Fred Nichols and family are here on a two weeks visit. They start for the new State of Idaho, the first of May, where they expect to reside in the future.

ture, near Mr. Nichols' mother. He has three brothers there also.

Charley Ogden has charge of the water works at Ottawa Beach again this season. He came home the other day from Grand Rapids, where he has been for about 7 months.

The annual meeting of the Lake Shore cemetery association will be held at the M. E. church, near the cemetery, Saturday evening, April 30th, for the election of officers and the transaction of business.

N. Ogden has sold two ton of fence wire and ordered more this week.

Some of our neighbors are in trouble to locate pedro corners, on the Lake Shore. We can locate it for them. It is the corner of Hard Scrabble and Hungry street.

John Cochran will furnish the milk at Ottawa Beach as usual; also a portion of the beef, mutton, etc.
