Holland Told to Appeal

Equalization Plan
Adopted by Board

GRAND HAVEN — Ottawa County Commissioners Friday adopted the 1975 equalization report without change and in effect told the City of Holland to take its complaint to the State Tax Tribunal.

The seven to three vote, with commissioners Donald Stoltz and James Dressel of Holland and John Langeland of Coopersville dissenting, came after commissioners rejected an amendment to set aside the industrial appraisals and allow the state tax commission to study the matter.

Holland city had objected to a 12 per cent increase in commercial valuations and a 22 per cent jump in industrial values as levied by the county's equalization department. The city had objected to methods used by the county in determining the property values.

Holland city assessor Robert Nienhuis read a lengthy prepared speech in which he objected to methods used by the county in reaching its factors on commercial and industrial property. He claimed there were no industrial sales to set values.

He claimed Holland was not treated fairly in its requests for state tax appraisals for industrial and commercial properties and took issue with properties used by the county in its survey for valuations.

Roger MacLeod, chairman of the Holland Board of Review, charged there may be a "personality conflict" between the county equalization department and the city assessor's office and that the factor levied against Holland was not based on the facts as submitted to the equalization department during eight or ten meetings with Holland representatives.

Commission Chairman William Kennedy said MacLeod made "some serious charges" and assumed MacLeod was ready to stand behind them. MacLeod said he was prepared.

County Equalization director Fritz Guldswog denied a personality conflict and said he thought "highly" of Nienhuis and his staff.

Guldswog said in several cases of sale prices of commercial properties in Holland, the figure had to be disregarded because remodeling had taken place and the property value increased.

He said Holland had increased valuations of commercial properties only one per cent over the past three years and industrial properties one half of one per cent in three years which he claimed was not equitable to the rest of the county.

Guldswog cautioned that any change in the equalization procedure in the county, such as setting aside the factors for industrial properties, could result in a factor for the entire county to make up for the low rate in Holland.

Holland City Manager William L. Bopf said Holland voiced its objection to the appraisal methods of the Equalization Department at the beginning of the process.

He said Holland had taken all the appropriate steps in order to give the county the time to get the business done before the equalization report was submitted to the state and added that he believed the information submitted by Holland shows some serious faults in the method of setting assessments and appraisals.

County Studies
Again Publishing
Of Proceedings

GRAND HAVEN — Ottawa County Commissioners, under state direction to publish monthly a list of bills paid by the county and proceedings of the board, discussed costs involved and coverage in daily newspapers in the county.

Commissioners had proposed publishing the board proceedings in the two daily papers in the county and the list of bills in a weekly paper but asked the prosecutor for an opinion on whether the proceedings and bills could be published in separate papers.

The prosecutor said no. Furthermore he indicated the intent of the state statute was to assure publication in a daily paper of midwest circulation in the county.

But commissioner William Kieft, in his report, said advertising rates for The Holland Evening Sentinel were higher than The Grand Haven Tribune and could cost the county as much as $200 a month more to publish the proceedings and bills in the Holland paper, which had the greatest circulation of the two papers.

The matter was referred back to Kieft's committee for report in May.

3 Women Held
In House Thefts

Three women were held by police Saturday on disorderly trespassing charges and for investigation in connection with three larcenies from homes in the past few days.

Officers said the three were taken into custody Friday at 1:35 p.m. after police received a call from a man who reported three women trying to enter his house.

Police said names of the women and other information were not immediately available because of an alleged language problem. Officers said the trio may be gypsies.

Officers said the complainants reported a woman engaged them in conversation at their homes while another woman entered the house through another door.

White was released on $500 bond.

Ottawa County deputies said White was taken into custody at 5:28 p.m. Sunday in a car at Lakewood Blvd. and US-31 after a quantity of money was reported missing from the safe at the service station. Some money was recovered with the arrest of White, deputies said.

Windows in Cars,
Stores Broken
In Zeeland City

ZEELAND — More than 30 windows in cars and stores were reported broken in the city during the weekend and police suspect persons in passing cars were responsible.

Windows in City Hall, the library, Trend Clocks, a school bus, a parked truck and several cars were reported broken.

Zeeland police chief Lawrence Veldheer said metal pellets or ball bearings and some type of heavy material were believed used in the destruction which was reported since Saturday night.

Veldheer said more reports were expected today.

The window breakage was the latest development in Zeeland where motorists have been jamming Main St. downtown on Sunday evenings the past month. Officers cited five persons Sunday for disorderly conduct but did not block traffic in Main St. as they did last week.

Lt. Burton (Bud) Borr, in charge of traffic plans for the festival, said 16th St. would become one of the main arteries into the city for festival traffic and additional signs will be placed along the route directing motorists into the downtown district.

Borr said for the festival College, Central and River Aves. will be used for the downtown access routes. Columbia Ave. and Fairbanks Ave. will be avoided because of the parade forming conflicts along those streets.

For Law Enforcement Building

County Chairman
Vows Public Vote

GRAND HAVEN — Ottawa County Board of Commission chairman William Kennedy of Allendale Friday vowed to launch a petition drive to bring to a public vote uses of revenue sharing funds to construct a law enforcement building.

Kennedy told commissioners at their meeting he was ready to "force the board to hold an election on uses of revenue sharing funds" unless the board acted on the proposal.

Commissioners had listed the law enforcement building fourth in a list of six priorities in the use of $1,363,000 in revenue sharing funds expected by January 1, 1977.

Commissioners decided an addition to the Holland branch building, a county drain program and a new county building for the Hudsonville area were more important than the law enforcement building. Commissioners authorized the improvement committee to interview architects and make recommendation for an architect to the board.

The law enforcement building was one of proposals contained in a $15,000 study of jail rehabilitation programs part of which commissioners already have implemented. It could be located on county-owned land at M-45 and 92nd Ave.

Sheriff Bernard Grysen made a plea to commissioners for action on the law enforcement building saying his department needed additional personnel and facilities to meet a 92 per cent increase in complaints.

Grysen said the jail rehabilitation programs, which involves a variety of social work with jail prisoners, hinges on completion of proposals contained in the study and he charged that commissioners, by stalling on the law enforcement building, were endangering the entire rehabilitation program.

"It is not the fault of the jail rehabilitation program or the sheriff that the programs cannot continue," Grysen said. "We don't have the facilities to continue."

The study proposed converting some calls for use by rehabilitative programs and conversion of the sheriff's living quarters for use by other programs. The law enforcement aspect would be moved to another building to provide more room in the jail building for the programs.

The proposed law enforcement building carried a $1.1 million price tag.

Kennedy reminded commissioners that a federal grant had been accepted for jail rehabilitation programs.

Grysen charged his department was being short changed in new facilities and pointed to a 12 by 55 foot trailer at Holland which has housed the department operations for several years.

He claimed his department was promised room in the basement of the District Court building when it was under construction in Holland. It was opened in 1972.

Grysen said no front line patrol personnel have been added to his department since 1971 and that he had to cut a hole in a door in the record room of the sheriff's headquarters so another filing cabinet could be fitted into the room.

He objected to a plan proposed by commissioner Eunice Bareham for additions to the Holland branch building and a new county branch building in the Hudsonville area with space for the sheriff's department. Grysen said his department no longer can be decentralized.

Commissioners finally decided to refer the law enforcement matter to the improvement committee. In the meantime they approved a proposal from a Zeeland area farmer to lease 57 acres of land at M-45 and 92nd Ave., at $3 per acre for cattle grazing.

Tentative Budget Given
Approval

GRAND HAVEN — Ottawa County Commissioners Friday, in the third day of the April session, approved a tentative budget of $6,164,949 for fiscal 1976 as the request to be submitted to the county tax allocation board for county tax revenues.

Commissioners said it would be up to the allocation board to set the millage rate and determine the amount of revenue available to the county from taxes received. The real budget work would begin later in the summer.

Finance committee chairman James K. Dressel said the committee cut from the $6.6 million requests submitted by department heads some new services and new employees and trimmed social welfare programs and equipment purchases.

In other action, commissioners approved a contract with Georgetown township for an emergency rescue vehicle and necessary manpower. The four-year contract calls for township and federal government matching funding.

The sheriff's department is to provide the trained manpower for the program and be responsible for the operation.

A similar proposal has been made for Holland - Park townships.

The hiring of a law student to assist the prosecutor in federal employment funds was approved by commissioners.

Four full-time positions under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) were approved for the North Ottawa Council on Aging, Child and Family Services and the Friend of the Court.

Also approved were 45 seasonal jobs funded under CETA programs. Included was one position each for Park township, Zeeland city, Holland Chamber of Commerce and the Holland Public Schools; two each for the Holland Migrant Day Care Center, Holland Community pool and Child and Family Services and nine for the City of Holland.

A requested position for the Holland Youth For Christ was referred to the county prosecutor for recommendation in light of a controversy over use of federally funded jobs in religious institutions.

It was announced that commissioner chairman William Kennedy and the chairman of the Mason County board of commissioners would exchange jobs May 19 as part of the law day observance of Michigan Week.

Allegan County deputies said the two were trout fishing in the Gun Creek area northeast of Plainwell and were crossing a field to another fishing site when Termeer reached for the low hanging wire. Deputies said the power line was about 5 1/2 feet above the ground.

Deputies said they received the call at 6:22 p.m. Monday.

A GOOD MONTH — Stating that April is a "good month" for their family of 14175 Brook Lane since two Vietnamese children arrived in April a year apart for adoption, Ruth Dreyer holds the latest edition, 16-month-old Marc Steyens. James Dreyer

Contented Children Picked Up at Detroit Metro Airport Saturday

2 Vietnamese Orphans at Home Here... At Last

By Ann Hungerford

The Patrick Andersons just couldn't get the crib ready. They were too frightened a mistake had been made.

The crib the Jim Dreyers had purchased as part of a too-good-to-turn-down deal is now in use. They had expected to refinish and sell it.

For both local families the cribs now hold the precious new additions to their families, Vietnamese orphans recently airlifted into the United States.

"I just can't put into words what this baby means to us," Mrs. Anderson said looking fondly at her six-month-old daughter, Tasha Hien Nguyen Anderson.

Her voice broke occasionally when she spoke about the child she described as "really an answer to our prayer."

Mrs. Dreyer, mother of another Vietnamese orphan adopted a year ago, echoed Mrs. Anderson's thrill with the new addition to her own family.

Two packages of baby announcements were on the dining room table awaiting the time she would have to fill them out. "We may need to buy another package," she said.

But little Marc Steven Dreyer, 16-months old, will need a great deal of tender care to fulfill the prophecy on the cards: "the future All-American."

Marc is suffering from severe malnutrition and is yet unable to support any weight on his thin legs. Doctors have reassured the family that proper diet and exercise will correct the problem.

"Marc eats like a horse, he is literally starved," Mrs. Dreyer says. "He eats anything

I put in his mouth. We are concentrating on junior foods and table foods until we see the doctor tomorrow."

Tasha too suffers from malnutrition but not as severely as Marc. She had solid food for the first time and "had trouble getting it to the back of her mouth," Mrs. Anderson said. Tasha was scheduled to see a doctor this afternoon for a general checkup. Marc will go Wednesday. Both children also suffer from ear infections.

The two new mothers scoff at the recent reports out of Vietnam in which citizens strongly question the appropriateness of Vietnamese children being sent to foreign lands for adoption.

Mrs. Anderson terms the sentiment as Communist propaganda: "From the looks of my baby, I can't imagine what would happen if she weren't adopted."

Mrs. Dreyer too questions the validity of such statements when she looks at her own child. Both children were in Vietnamese Hospitals for a while and still suffered from malnutrition before being released to the Holt Agency.

The Andersons had been on a waiting list for two years and had originally had a GI baby in mind since "they are discriminated against. Then we decided to accept any child no matter what the nationality. We did specify a girl."

"We were really excited and got all the clothes ready when we got the first call saying we had a child in the United States, but we just couldn't get the crib ready because we were afraid of a mistake," Mrs. Anderson said.

Mrs. Dreyer notes that Marc has a distinct like for males since his attendant from the

The Dreyers packed up all members of their family and invited their social worker, Marcia Schofield of Grand Haven, to travel to Detroit with the family to pick up the new baby. "Mrs. Schofield has been involved with many foreign adoptions but had never seen a child come in so we invited her," Mrs. Dreyer said.

Tasha, who also arrived on the same Saturday flight at Metro airport, came with a huge bag of clothing and toys from her foster parents in Washington with whom she stayed for about a week. The Andersons plan to keep in touch with "Jenny's" (the name arbitrarily assigned to her) foster parents.

Mrs. Dreyer notes that Marc has a distinct like for males since his attendant from the Washington flight was a man who gave him roast beef, gravy and vegetables. "The man had a mustache and Marc developed a real liking to Tasha's father, who also has a mustache."

Children in each family are ecstatic about the new arrivals and both mothers report jealousy is non-existent. Mrs. Dreyer was busy ushering neighborhood children in and out of the home for first hand looks prompted by excited siblings.

Despite their busy careers, (Dreyer is operations officer at People's State Bank and Anderson is opening a new Mr. Steak in Ann Arbor), the fathers in the families share the enthusiasm and excitement.

If the babies are half as contented with their new families as their families are with them, they're going to like it here.

WEEK OF PANDEMONIUM — Routine is finally settling in for the Patrick Anderson family, 1652 South Shore Dr., following a "week of pandemonium" preparing for the arrival of six-month-old Tasha Hien Nguyen Anderson, a Vietnamese orphan. Pictured are Tait, 8, (kneeling), Rex, 12, Anderson, Sarah, 4, and Darby Anderson holding her new daughter. Both Holland families still have a massive amount of paperwork to complete including visas.

THREE-DIMENSIONAL — Al Schrotenboer examines a hanging arrangement along the aisle he's dubbed "Tomato Boulevard." The rows of plants remind one of the old lanes of boulevard lights. Greenhouse Offers Innovative Setting

By Jackie Melvin

The Hillside Greenhouse offers not only plants and posies, but personality as well.

Al and Sarah Schrotenboer own and operate the greenhouse on Myrtle Avenue, and have developed what they feel is an answer to rising costs and limited room.

Like the rest of us, Al says, "People should stop talking about licking inflation and do more about it." His is a unique case in that he practices what he preaches, through a method he calls "three-dimensional arrangement."

Rather than construct a second building, or add to their present one, the Schrotenboers have given their greenhouse the "layered look" by arranging plants on tiers, and in multi-level hanging formations.

Tomatoes, which like heat and sun, are placed on the uppermost level, along what Al calls "Tomato Boulevard." Elsewhere in the shop, pots of fuchsia hang on a top row, keeping the sun from the tuberous begonias beneath, which prefer shade.

Al, who has a flair for quips, reminds us that this is the "space age." He doesn't mean outer space, but "space for commodities." He's convinced that "businessmen must consider area per square foot."

The greenhouse soon will sport a new sign declaring "We sell every bloomin' thing," and that's not far from the truth. Houseplants, such as coleus, German ivy, cactus, and baby's tears, sit next to geraniums with up to 5-inch blossoms. Al also has a hanging monstrosity which he calls his "Phyllis Diller" plant (actually a bromeliad).

The Hillside Greenhouse celebrates its fifth anniversary this year, and Al attributes the success of the business to his "chief worker," Sarah. He insists "she deserves most of the credit, although she doesn't like me to say so."

Dorn-Prins Vows Are Solemnized Friday Evening

Immanuel Baptist Church provided the setting for the marriage of Miss Vicki Lynn Prins and Robert Paul Dorn on Friday. Officiating at the evening ceremony was the Rev. Robert Terpstra with Miss Karen Wrennell as organist and Mrs. Tom Pelon, soloist.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Prins, 295 Maerose Ave., and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Dorn, 523 Butternut Dr.

The bride chose a floor-length gown of nylon organza featuring an empire waist, high neckline with rushing V-shaped bodice and bishop sleeves. Chantilly lace accented the bodice, cuffs and A-line skirt and edged her cathedral-length train. A camelot headpiece held the cathedral-length veil also edged with chantilly. She carried a colonial bouquet of yellow sweetheart roses, white carnations and baby's breath.

Mrs. Julie Van Nuil was her sister's matron of honor and Miss Debb Nies was bridesmaid. They wore identical floor-length nylon gowns featuring sheer nylon floral print pinafore over taffeta. Yellow satin ribbons accented the empire waists and yellow picture hats completed the ensemble. They each carried a basket of orange and yellow pompon mums accented with mint green.

The groom was attended by his brothers, Mike Dorn as best man and Mark Dorn as groomsman. Ushers were Tom Dorn, another brother of the groom, and Ron Prins, brother of the bride.

The reception was held at the Beachwood Inn with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lubben as master and mistress of ceremonies. Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Meyer, Miss Jill Bosch and Rick Brower opened the gifts and Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Visser served punch. Lynn Lubben and Scott Dorn attended the guest book and Doug Lubben played a cornet solo.

Following a wedding trip up north into Canada the couple will reside at 523 Butternut Dr. The groom is employed by West Shore Tile and Carpet.

FOUR-LEGGED WEED CONTROL

Not so many years ago, the standard response to weeds and pests was to attack them with some deadly chemical. In recent times, scientists concerned with such matters have increasingly turned to the ecologically sounder means of using natural methods of control.

Usually this involves finding some natural "enemy" of the undesirable plant or animal and introducing it into the environment. In other cases, more subtle means are employed; for example, sterilizing male insects to interrupt the reproductive cycle in an infested area.

An interesting case history of progression in efforts to control a pest is found in Florida, where the ubiquitous water hyacinth clogs inland waterways. Over the past quarter century, the Army Corps of Engineers has tried various methods; it has sprayed rivers with chemicals and launched mechanical harvesters (which worked pretty well, but were prohibitively expensive.)

In keeping with the times, an Asian weed-eating fish called the white amur was brought in to do its stuff about three years ago—and then rejected for fear these creatures might upset the ecological balance of lakes and rivers. The giant manatee seemed promising for awhile, but many of these slow-moving mammals fell victim to power boats.

This brings us to the latest chapter. Enter the water buffalo, familiar to Americans as part of the local color in Southeast Asia travel films. Several will soon be put to the test along river banks and lakeshores. If their taste for water hyacinths matches their capacity (200 to 300 pounds of weeds daily), herds of them may at last bring these weeds under control. And who knows, there may be water buffalo steaks and roasts as an unexpected bonus.

"God's Presence with Man"

Psalm 13: 1-12, 23-24
By C. P. Dame

Most of us don't know ourselves thoroughly, nor our neighbors and those who are close to us, at times, puzzle us. There is one, God, who knows us, you and me, completely, wholly, from the beginning of our lives up to this minute. This knowledge gives gloom to some, gladness to others. What does it give to you?

I. God knows every one. David who wrote Psalm 139, this is what most scholars think, considered God his Friend, Creator and Lord. In a beautiful manner he tells about his omniscience. The word "Thou" appears frequently in the Psalm, referring to his God, who searches a person noting even the smallest details of life, as sitting down and standing up. God even knows a person's thoughts though he be far off. And he compassed a path for a person — one version uses the word "searchest." This showed concern. Before a person speaks, God knows what he is going to say. God's amazing knowledge made the Psalmist wonder. Modern man wonders at his achievements but overlooks God's greatness — often does not even think of him.

II. You and I can't hide from God no matter how hard we try. Though a man ascend to the highest heaven or descend to the deepest abysses he can't escape. Darkness often hides wrongdoers but not from God for the light and the darkness are alike to him. The omnipresence of God is another proof of his greatness. In this age when covering up wickedness and lawlessness is much practiced this characteristic of God deserves to be taught and proclaimed.

III. A spiritual check-up is highly important. Many take physical examinations. Our spiritual nature ought to have a turn for close scrutiny. The Psalmist gives us a fine example. "Search me," so he asks. In the verses previous he mentions those who hate God. Those people made him look at himself.

He did not say, "I am O.K." God would see faults he overlooked. "Try me" is another request. If God did this it would give him strength. He wanted to get rid of any evil that troubled him. The plea, "lead me" shows the need of guidance by an omniscient and omnipresent God who knows the way through life to the eternal home. Because God sent Jesus to us we know God better for Jesus showed concern and love to the least, last, lost and loneliest.

Last Zeeland Library Review Slated Tuesday

ZEELAND — Zeeland Public Library will offer its final book review of the Season Tuesday, May 6, at 2 p.m. when Mrs. Gordon (Isla) Van Eenennaam will review "A Curious Life for a Lady" by Pat Barr.

This entertaining and informative biography traces the career of one of the Victorian Era's most extraordinary characters. Raised sedately in an English parsonage, and a spinster until middle age, Isabella Bird began her travels at the age of 40, when on her doctor's advice she wearily took a steamer to Australia in search of health and happiness.

This became the first of many adventures, and she spent most of the next 30 years in the more obscure parts of Asia, visiting Japan and Korea shortly after they had been opened to

Mrs. Gordon Van Eenennaam

Westerners, living among the Tibetans, exploring China and Malaya, Persia and Kurdistan, where few Westerners — let alone a woman writer — had ever been.

Isabella Bird wrote prolifically; her books remain classics as to style, form, and purpose. The author draws on them extensively to let Isabella describe her adventures in her own words. The result is a biography which combines a genuinely thrilling tale of exploration with the charm and fascination of Miss Bird herself.

Mrs. Van Eenennaam is a favorite reviewer in this area. She has worked as a teacher, as dean and housemother at Hope College and she has served in many community organizations.

Refreshments and a social hour will follow the book review, and anyone interested is welcome to attend.

St. Augustine Prep Spend Ecology Day Reforesting Area

Students of St. Augustine Prep had their annual ecology day, under the direction of Brother Frederick Kaiser, April 21. An area at the northeast corner of the property, about a half-mile from the lake was reforested. The students spent the entire afternoon planting 3,200 red pine seedlings.

Ted Piwowar, of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service, gave a brief instructional session on procedure and supervised the planting of the initial trees. As part of the original agreement with the I-196 highway construction firm, and the Lake-town Township Zoning Board, the seminary had planned to reforest the area after completion of sand removal operations.

For the past month students have been busy brushing the area with pine boughs, branches from trees, as well as sections of trees that were removed from the area, to provide windbreaks for the seedlings. The original ground cover in the area was spread to reduce wind blowing.

A severe shortage of red pine seedlings at the State Nursery, due to disease and wet conditions last year, necessitated the purchase of the trees from a private nursery in New-ago, through the Alle-Van Soil and Water Conservation district in Fennville.

NOW April Business Meet Is Held

The Holland Area Chapter of the National Organization for Women held a brief business meeting followed by a rap session Monday evening in the Red Cross office.

Linda Visscher, chapter president, commented on the recent presentation of chapter concerns for compliance with affirmative action goals in the Holland Public Schools before the Board of Education. The chapter supports board action expressing an aim toward placing qualified women and other minorities in supervisory and administrative positions.

Ms. Visscher also read a response from David Vanderwel, of Hope College, answering some questions about the recent visit of Karen De Crow, president of the NOW National Board, to the local campus.

The Bartlett amendment to Senate Bill 66 was rejected in voting in the U.S. Senate April 10, and a communication from the National Legislative Task Force Coordinator indicated that NOW efforts at the local levels were a major force in bringing about defeat of the amendment.

Chris Lohman, Ms. Visscher, and Lin Klunge were designated to attend the Michigan State NOW Conference in late April on policy and legislative strategies. The conference is being held in East Lansing.

The picture has been loaned to the Ouderkerks for the Home Tour by Mrs. Margaret DePree.

The living room done in soft gold tones houses some unusual antiques given to Mrs. Ouderkerk by her mother-in-law. Next to the fireplace is a reproduced spinning wheel made by the Amish, and a wooden fireplace chair 85 to 90 years old, originally designed so that people could sit very close to the fire and get warm or dry off.

NEW PALS — Kevin Ruiter, 8, and Duane Neff, of 126 Cypress, are participants in a new program, PALS, a big and little brother project in Ottawa County in which boys from fatherless homes are matched with local volunteers on a year round basis. John Rolph of Hope College, coordinator of the program, has scheduled a meeting Thursday at 7 p.m. at the Child and Family Services office for prospective volunteers.

Duane's New PAL Enjoys Friendship

By Ann Hungerford

"Kevin Ruiter, a sandy haired lad with a grin that would send Norman Rockwell scampering for his palette, has a new PAL."

He's a real friend, doesn't even get angry when Kevin plays little tricks, like dousing him with a hose during a car washing session.

It's made a big difference in Kevin's life. He's had to answer for his sometimes poor grades which are steadily improving. His new friend, or big brother as Duane Neff refers to himself, is keeping track of Kevin's progress in school. Neff cares and Kevin senses it.

"He keeps asking about my school work," Kevin says with a bit of pride and frustration. He knows Duane expects solid efforts from him.

A January recruit in the Ottawa County PALS program, Neff of 126 Cypress, takes his new role as a big brother seriously. And it's a welcome trait to Kevin's mother.

"College students often just don't have the time necessary for a young boy. Mr. Neff has been a real Godsend for Kevin. I just can't tell you how much it means to us," Mrs. Ruiter said.

"The PALS program requires year around participation," PALS program coordinator John Rolph, emphasized. This stipulation virtually eliminates most college men from participation.

Youngsters participating in the PALS program are referred to Rolph by schools, social services and mothers who call in. Regulated by the State Department of Social Services, the program must work exclusively with children on ADC.

Rolph estimates that approximately 30 boys are on the waiting list with many more currently needing the assistance of a man.

Neff, a Boy Scout leader also, has taken eight-year-old Kevin on scout trips as regulations allow including an excursion to Henry Ford Museum.

Kevin's only complaint: "I wish I could see him more often."

Neff plans to beef up the once a week schedule during the summer to allow for fishing and camping trips. "I know a good trout stream in Kalkaska," Neff says, "where we can fish all night if we want."

Kevin is tantalized. "In a camper?"

"Out of the back of my car," Neff says but Kevin's enthusiasm is peaked.

Big and little brothers are matched as closely as possible according to interests.

Rolph has one unusual and rare problem: a volunteer big brother without a little brother.

Frank Palmer, 81, 345 College Ave., has volunteered his services as a big brother but Rolph has as yet been unable to match him with a boy in the neighborhood. Palmer no longer drives.

Palmer, who admits to a lifelong interest in children, is ready when the right boy is found.

Usually big brothers are men 18 or older, married or unmarried who come from all walks of life. The program requests that the big brother spend at least one session a week with the boys.

PALS is a division of Child and Family Services of Michigan, which is funded by the United Way.

Rolph is planning a meeting of prospective volunteers Thursday at 7 p.m. at the office of Child and Family Services, 680 Washington. Persons desiring additional information may call John Rolph at Hope College.
