Students feel they're worth more

by Kristin Patz

In a recent survey of Hope College students by the anchor, students were asked whether or not they had jobs, and if their pay scales were adequate.

Of those interviewed, 68 percent said they worked on campus, 28 percent worked off campus, and 4 percent said they had a job off the Hope campus.

The two main reasons students said they chose to work off campus are because they either had the job before coming to Hope, or they wanted to earn more money than they would on campus.

On campus jobs appear to be more preferable, however, for the majority of students surveyed. This is often due to the fact that many students have no transportation. Speaking of the benefits of on-campus work, one student said, "It's so convenient. You never have a lot of your way to get to work."

For others, the fact that both jobs are limited for on-campus and off-campus jobs, and they are often more flexible than many off-campus jobs. Others surveyed mentioned that there is less pressure to perform a task particularly well, in an on-campus job. "After all," said one student, "it's not like it's a real job or anything."

The average hours worked per week, among those surveyed, are between six and thirteen, and the average hourly rate is still around minimum. Seventy two percent of those surveyed make less than $4.00 an hour. In fact, the majority of jobs on campus that could be considered "unskilled labor" may be seen off campus.

Some jobs, however, do pay more, due to their higher demand on-campus. Tutors in the Academic Support Center, for example, are paid more than a dollar more than the minimum. Others, such as the heads of student organizations, make up to half as much as $4.00 an hour. This does not mean that if we see a liquor violation taking place in front of us off-campus we won't take action. To put the parties into focus, Gutknecht said, "It's so convenient. You never have a lot of your way to get to work."

Drunk driving is an exception to the general policy of bringing in Student Development at Public Safety's discretion. Gutknecht said, "If they're drunk driving they automatically spend time in jail and will have to go to court."

Public Safety officers are all licensed police officers for anywhere in the county by the state of Michigan. It is only common courtesy, though, for the officers to limit their involvement to the Hope community.

As deputized officers, Public Safety officers are licensed to carry weapons, as well as perform any other police procedure as mandated by the state, but as employees of Hope College the officers must follow an additional set of restrictions.

The major restriction being against the carrying of firearms.

Part-time jobholders stay in school

(CPS) -- College students who hold down part-time jobs are less likely to drop out of school, the U.S. Department of Education has found.

"Work may motivate students to study harder, and the socialization associated with working may be beneficial for college persistence," study author Dennis Carroll wrote in a summary of the report's findings.

The new report was part of an ongoing department study -- called "High School and Beyond!" -- of 30,000 students who were high school sophomores in 1980, and follows them through their educational careers.

Some 85 percent of the students who worked part-time during their first year in college returned for a second year, compared to 83 percent of the students who did not hold a job during their freshman years.

They worked long hours, too. One in 12 students worked jobs requiring more than 41 hours per week, while only 25 percent of the students who worked had jobs that consumed less than 20 hours per week.

First-year students earned an average of $4.44 per hour during the summer and $5.57 during the academic year. Fourth-year students earned an average of $4.86 during the summer and $5.57 during the academic year.

Visitation Days start Oct. 14

HOLLAND--The Hope College admissions office will sponsor its first visitation day of the school year for prospective college students, Friday, Oct. 14.

The visitation day allows high school seniors and their parents an opportunity to see Hope College first-hand by touring the campus, visiting classes and meeting with students. There will also be a series of seminars on pre-professional programs and a workshop on financial aid for parents.

Registration will begin at 9 a.m. in the Maas Center at 11th Street and Columbia Ave., Holland. The formal program will end at 3:30 p.m.

Participation is free. Students and parents wishing to eat lunch on campus may purchase tickets at the time of registration.

Future visitation days will be held Nov. 4, Nov. 18, Dec. 2, Jan. 27, Feb. 17, March 3, and March 31. There will also be a special day for high school juniors on Friday, April 30, 1989.

95 Hope students were present at the George Bush campaign rally last week. According to Shawn Neville, leader of the Hope Republicans, Bush said "I'd like to thank my friends...at Hope College for their support and presence."

Boston U. imposes new rules

BOSTON -- Boston University rejected student protests and passed strict new rules Sept. 15 prohibiting students from having overnight guests of the opposite sex in their dorm rooms.

"All of life after 11 p.m. has been banned at BU," senior Jmai Sonbonmatsu told a crowd of 2,900 students that had converged to protest the visitation rules the day before they were approved.

BU's strict new rules may be the closest a college has returned to the "in loco parentis" relationship schools maintained with their students up until the 1960s. Under the doctrine literally meaning administrators acted "in place of parents" - campuses set curfews for students, suspended students for behaving in ways they didn't like and forbade students of the opposite sex to visit with each other behind closed doors.

Though the rules collapsed under student protests for greater autonomy, new drinking laws and increasing numbers of student lawsuits blaming colleges for sexual assaults and other crimes have moved many campuses to tighten control over potentially litigious student behavior during the past few years.

St. Joseph's College in Maine, the State University of New York at Binghamton and North Carolina State University, among others, also have restricted or banned overnight visits to dorms by members of the opposite sex in recent years.

Virtually every campus in the United States, moreover, has stiffened its student drinking rules since 1986, when the federal government threatened to cut off funding to any state that still allowed 18 year olds to drink alcohol.

BU officials said they were just trying to help students study. The new rules, said BU spokesman Kevin Carleton, address "concerns stated by students, staff and parents that residences too often have failed to provide the kind of environment where an individual can quietly study and have his or her privacy respected."

Sonbonmatsu, on the other hand, charged, "The administration is stunting our growth and development by denying us the right of make decisions."

Under the new guidelines, some of which go into effect in late fall and others during the spring, guests must display identification cards and leave the dormitory by 11 p.m. on weekdays and 1 a.m. on weekends.

Students older than 21 can bring a six-pack of beer or a liter of other kinds of alcoholic beverages into the dorms, but no more than that.

Carleton said student protests of the rule did not faze BU officials. "I don't think any demonstration would have an effect," he said. "What can have an effect is a reasonable discussion."

Nykerk has long history

by Julie Thornes
anchor Assistant News Editor

In the early 1930's, J.B. Nykerk expressed concern that there was no female counterpart for the Pull. He believed that the women were at a disadvantage due to the lack of opportunity to compete with each other.

The Pull, at that time, had been a tradition since 1898, and though moral girls were involved, it was primarily a man's competition.

E'quality called for a women's competition, powder puff football was the result. A team of freshmen women played against a team of sophomore women while morale guys cheered.

At first, some doubted the contest's ability to win popularity with the students. However, once it was performed, all doubts dissipated. Not only did the students love it, but when the competition ended all the participants swarmed into the center of the floor hugging, laughing, and congratulating each other. Dr. Nykerk's dream had come true.

The freshmen won the first Nykerk Cup. History shows that out of 53 contests, the sophomores have won 31 and the freshmen 21. The purpose of Nykerk is not winning, but rather what Dr. J.B. Nykerk had been striving for: A friendly competition in which everyone wins.

Nykerk is scheduled this year for October 23rd at the Holland Civic Center.

anchor changes staff

by Eric Shotwell
anchor Editor

The anchor has made some changes in its editorial staff, in order to become more efficient and improve upon the quality of its writing.
Changes include the recent appointment of Sarah Thompson as Production Manager, the promotion of Carol Ormsby to Feature Editor, and the promotion of Jim Monnett to Entertainment Editor.
Thompson, a freshman from Livonia, will be assuming many of the duties of former anchor Managing Editor Kathy Kar, who took a leave of absence early this semester. Ormsby and Monnett, however, held other positions on the anchor staff, prior to their respective promotion. Monnett, who wrote a column last year entitled "Still Life," and whose column this year is called "A Slip of the Mind," will continue to make his views known, while assuming the additional duties of Entertainment Editor. Ormsby, who was the former Entertainment Editor, will be in charge of the newly reinstated "Feature" section of the anchor.
In addition, the anchor is looking for additional volunteers, particularly those with English or Communications majors and an interest in journalism, for proofreading and editing, and also needs writers interested in politics, sports, or national news.
Interested students should stop by the anchor office, call x7877, or send a letter through campus mail requesting more information. Please address all inquiries to: Eric Shotwell, Editor, anchor office, DeWitt Center.

Work-study annual limit a problem for college students

As evidenced by the survey conducted recently by an anchor staff member, the results of which appear in this issue, students see their wages as something less than equitable for the work they do in their on-campus jobs.

Perhaps this will change for the better, with the bill that was newly passed in the Senate, boosting the minimum wage to around five dollars over a two to three year period. Even so, this change in the minimum wage could have a profound effect on some Hope students.

Those involved in the work-study program, for example, could find that they are unable to acquire the same amount of financial aid as they have in years past. This is due to the fact that there is a strict limit imposed on the amount of money one may earn for tuition through work-study.

This limit, usually $1000, would be met much sooner if the minimum wage were to increase, causing Hope employers to look for more students to fill their gaps. This, in turn, would cause the amount of money credited to students to increase as well.

Obviously, for Hope College, this situation is less than ideal. Granted, it will be easier for students to find jobs on campus, but what will it do to the college's budget for student wages?

Perhaps the solution is to redesign the work-study program, to adjust for the difference in wages and hours worked. Perhaps, from the college's point of view, more scholarships and grants will have to be awarded, in order to give the same percentage of financial aid to needy students.

Either way, we feel that since the national news media is avoiding the subject, Hope College needs to make some sort of a statement to the campus as a whole, to let us know what the end result is going to be for Hope students. While it is a possibility that the minimum wage increase will have no effect on Hope students, it could, conversely, have a drastic effect on whether or not students can still afford Hope.

Off the Cuff

Eric Shotwell

There's more to a job than wages

You might notice that a dominant theme in this week's issue is the minimum wage for Hope students who work on campus. I guess I might as well jump on the bandwagon and throw my opinion in, too.

There has been an ongoing debate for the past couple of years as to whether or not the leader of student organizations should be paid. The feeling is that a volunteer position should be exactly that: volunteer.

Part of the beauty of the system is that every year, Hope acquires new Student Organization leaders. Although most of them know there's no such thing as a minimum wage for a Hope College Student Organization leader, they may not understand all the time and effort that is involved. They are offered the job, and they accept.

Notice I didn't use the word "hire." Student Organization leaders are never actually "hired." They are elected, selected, some even hand-picked for the jobs. A few of the Organization leaders, like John Miller of WTHS, are so good at what they do that it appears they were bred for it. But they are never, ever "hired."

So what keeps all these positions filled? Well, the main thing is obviously not money. Some of the heads of student organizations do earn some money for what they do, but it's cleverly called a "stipend." I believe that's Latin for "very small wage."

Rather, the important thing to these people is most likely the sense of achievement they get from a job well done. The money they may earn from it helps, but it's not usually their primary goal.

That's not being sarcastic; that's the truth. I, for one, get a great feeling every time I see the anchor being read by someone. I know others feel the same way about what they do, including the Executive Committee of WTHS, the Executive Board of Student Congress, the Editors of the Inklings, and many others.

So what's my point, you're asking? Well, my point is that, despite what may be said about the minimum wage being low, sometimes the feeling you get is worth more than any meager $3.35 an hour. Granted, I wouldn't want to give up the teeny-weeny "stipend" I get unless I had to, but given a choice between the money and the feeling good about what I do, I'd definitely take the feeling of accomplishment.

Everyone working at their on-campus job is doing something that's important to the function of Hope.

In closing, maybe the college needs to take a long, hard look at how well some of the students are being paid. We all can't live on our sense of accomplishment alone. Money may not be everything, but it pays the bills.

It was the best of times and the worst of times...no, wait...wrong story.

Let me think. It was a dark and stormy night, and not a creature was stirring. Not even a mouse. I had had a tough week of watching my fish buy the farm and push up daisies on it. You might think the jobs were rolling in. You'd be wrong. There weren't a lot of clients breaking down the door to my hole in the wall. It was even less than what I was used to.

My name's Friday. I'm a cop...no, sorry. Wrong story back to flipping burgers at the local Mickey D's.

My name's Stapler. Mike Stapler. I'm a private eye, a...a...a former cop. I was our birthday suits. Police officers have an image to uphold. It was even less than what I was used to.

Mike Stapler?" she asked in a sultry voice that dripped suggestions of all the things I enjoy covering with peanut butter.

"Sure am, lady. Please sit and tell me your story."

"It's not really a story as much as a short soap opera."

"Kind of like a long mini series?" "Exactly." I knew suddenly what kind of trouble she was in. I knew because I had been there before. It was time to take on the mob, my old police force, my former girlfriend, my high school football team, my former girlfriend's pitbull, and of course Darth Vader representing either the forces of evil, or the recruiting practises of a major university.

"My name's Katrina Spitz," she said sitting in my green director's chair and crossing those X-rated legs before my sexist eyes. "I'll start at the beginning because Julie Andrews thinks it's best. Anyway, my father was a pompous Olympic swimmer named Mark, before he retired and became a kindly, old scientist who had invented a chemical that could change the world, bring nations and television networks to their knees while keeping ratings up, depression down, Delta airplanes up, interest rates down, and even bring John Wayne back to life while all of the time it would be destroying cliches and bad writing throughout the free world as well as the expensive world."

"Does it have any affect on run-on sentences?" I asked suddenly, worried for the health of my future children's mother.

"No, but it's been stolen by renegade Toons from the set of 'Roger Rabbit: The Revenge.'"

"And you want me to get it back?"

"No," she said dashing my dreams on the rocks of reality, "I just wanted to meet you before all of your cliches are destroyed and you are left like an old banana peel that will never have Ethel Merman step on it at the end of a movie."

She walked out the door and turned back in the hall.

"Don't worry, Mike, I'll be back someday. After all, bad writing, cliches and the inanities of your pulp writer will never die, no matter how much little children pray that they do."

"What about our mandatory sex scenes?"

"I asked as my world crumbled around me."

"Save it for the sequel."

As the light of my life left, I knew it was time to say goodnight, Gracie.

It was a dark and stormy night, It was the best of times and the worst of times, no, wait...wrong story. You might think the jobs were rolling in. You'd be wrong. There weren't a lot of clients breaking down the door to my hole in the wall. It was even less than what I was used to.
Theatre department announces productions of each production.

The ticket office opens two weeks prior to each production. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Monday thru Saturday with extended hours on performance nights.

Money-saving season coupons are now available by mail. A season coupon entitles the bearer to four admissions — one to each production, four to a single production or any other combination. Adult coupons are $15 and senior citizen coupons are $12. These represent a 25 percent savings over standard ticket prices. Tickets may be ordered by writing the Hope College Theatre, DeWitt Center, 12th Street at Columbia Avenue, Holland, MI 49423. After October 7, phone the ticket office at (616) 394-7800.

The Audience Participation Program will follow the first Saturday evening performance

Grandchildren admitted free of charge to G.R. Symphony concert

(11) -- Senior citizens will be able to bring a grandchild to the First Hope College Great Performance series concert featuring the Grand Rapids Symphony free of charge on Thursday, Oct. 6. Senior citizens who have either a season ticket or a single admission ticket for the concert may obtain a free ticket for a grandchild over 12 years of age, according to Yoli Broglio, series coordinator.

The casual classics concert, conducted by Catherine Comet will provide insightful commentary as each work is performed. The varied program includes works by Albert, Mozart, St. Seans, and Brahms.

"The inherent educational value of this unique concert form lends itself to audiences of all ages, including young people, and is an invaluable opportunity to introduce teens and preteens to classical music," said Broglio.

Featured soloist will be soprano Glenda Kirkland and violinist Frank Powdermaker, new concertmaster of the orchestra.

This is the first of seven concerts sponsored by the Great Performance Series. Concert tickets and group discounts are available by calling 394-6996 or by visiting the DeWitt Center ticket office. Order forms are also available at Evergreen Commons. This special offer is limited and early response is recommended.

Catherine Comet to direct G.R. Symphony at Hope College

HOLLAND—The Grand Rapids Symphony and the direction of Catherine Comet, will be featured in a casual classics concert as the first event of the 1988-89 Hope College Great Performance Series on Thursday, Oct. 6 at 8 p.m. in Memorial Chapel, corner of 12 Street and College Avenue in Holland.

The concert will be the first of seven events in this year's Great Performance Series.

The concert at Hope College will be the premier appearance of the 1988-89 season for the Grand Rapids Symphony. It will also mark the first performance for the symphony's new concert master, Frank Powdermaker, who will be the featured solo violinist.

The featured guest soloist will be soprano Glenda Kirkland who is an associate professor of voice at Eastern Michigan University.

Miss Kirkland has performed with the Detroit Symphony and has appeared in productions of the Michigan Opera Theatre. Miss Comet, who was the first woman to be named music director of a fully professional, regional symphony orchestra, said the Great Performance Series concert will be similar to the symphony's casual classics series in that it will allow her and the musicians discuss with the audience the music being performed.

"Casual classics in the perfect opportunity for families to enjoy an informative and relaxed classical concert," she said.

This past summer Miss Comet was awarded a Seaver-National Endowment for the Arts Award. Only three conductors from a field of 90 nominees received the honor which is to be used by the recipient to further his/her career. The others were from the Cleveland, Ohin and New Mexico regions.

The program will begin with Albert's Flower of the Mountain for soprano and orchestra, followed by Mozart's Concerto No. 3 in G major for violin and orchestra. It will be followed by Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso in A Minor for violin and orchestra, Op. 28 by Saint-Saens. The program will conclude with Brahms' Violin Concerto on a Theme of Hayden, Op. 56A.

The concert is supported in part by a grant from the Michigan Council for the Arts.

Tickets may be purchased in advance at the DeWitt Center ticket office, corner of 12th Street and Columbia Avenue, Monday through Friday, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Single admission tickets are $9 for adults, $8 for senior citizens and $4 for students.

Senior coupons for the entire series are also available. These cost $80 for a family membership, $35 for adults, $30 for seniors and $15 for students. Additional series concerts are $20 for adults, $18 for seniors and $16 for students. Great Performance Series coordinator Yoli Broglio also suggested group discounts are available.

Tickets may be reserved by calling 394-6996. Tickets will be held at the door on the night of the concert until 15 minutes before the start of the performances.
Football looks for win

("PK") - "It's time to find out if we are going to be contenders or pretenders," observes Hope College football coach Ray Smith as his Flying Dutchmen enter the fifth week of play still seeking their first victory of the season.

Hope was viewed as the team to beat in several pre-season polls of MIAA teams, but the Flying Dutchmen have struggled in their first three games.

"We still have more questions than answers and for both the coach and team that's unsettling," said Smith.

Smith admits the big question mark remains at quarterback. The season started with senior Keith Stewart calling the signal. Smith switched to senior Mark Hahn after an opening game loss to DePauw. And he is now contemplating giving sophomore Eric Elliott more playing time if the Hope offense doesn't come alive under Hahn.

"We need to get the quarterback issue behind us," said Smith. "My uncertainty with that position is not good for the team or coaching staff."

The only Hope lineup changes early in the week were on defense where Stewart was slated to start at a defensive end and senior Dave Klaus of Palm (Deckerville HS) was tabbed to start at linebacker. Klaus is coming off a hand injury that curtailed his playing time in the first three games.

Against DePauw, Stewart, an East Grand Rapids High School product, played on both offense (quarterback) and defense (backfield) and he handled the punting chores.

"Keith is probably the best all around athlete on our team and is capable of making an important contribution in a number of ways," said Smith. Senior tailback Joe Cossey of Fennville has been Hope's most consistent player through three games. He is tops among MIAA running backs in rushing yardage with a league-leading 53 carries for 227 yards. However, he is still seeking his first rushing touchdown. Cossey has also caught 11 passes for 96 yards to rank second in the MIAA in all-purpose running at 113.3 yards per game.

Hope's football team's offense stayed with a ground attack due to the rainy conditions during last week's 6-3 loss to Wabash (Ind).
Movie goes mafia in

'Married to the Mob'

by Diane Tague
anchor Staff Writer

Another mafia movie? This time director Jonathan Demme (Something Wild) presents us with a romantic comedy about a woman who can not seem to escape the mafia world.

In "Married to the Mob"
Michelle Pfeiffer plays Angela DeMarco, the wife of mafia
hitman Frank “The Cucumber” DeMarco. Although Angela appears to have it all - a nice house with plenty of appliances and furniture, fashionable clothes, and a cute son - she expresses her frustration and unhappiness with the facade of dishonest mafia living.

"Everything we wear, everything we eat, everything we own fell off a truck," she says.

With this in mind, it is easy for the audience to see why Angela is not too unhappy when her husband is murdered by mob king pin Tony “the Tige” Russo.
After his death, Angela picks up and moves from her plush suburban home into a tiny, dumpy apartment on the worst side of town.

What Angela does not bargain for is FBI agent Mike Smith (Matthew Modine) stalking her out, hoping to link her to the mob and supply evidence against it.
Smith poses undercover as a plumber who lives above Angela.
The two meet on the elevator and the good chemistry between the two is evident. Smith is floored when lonely Angela asks him off on a date. By playing off each others personalities, shy agent
Smith and zany, outgoing Angela, the two make a wonderful and delightful combination to watch.

Unfortunately, the big mistake in this somewhat funny film was not developing this relationship.
Instead, more time was devoted to trying to develop and pull together a loose, disjointed and basically pointless plotline focusing on mobsters running all around town merely because they are bored.

Even with the upbeat soundtrack and outrageous costuming (leather outfits with tacky gold jewelry), the film just did not "click." Demme needed a stronger, more specific plot and more originality to separate this mafia picture from the dozens of others released before this one.
Congress approves appointments

HOPE—At last Thursday’s meeting, Student Congress set a one hour maximum time limit on their weekly meetings, appointed several members to committees, and appropriated money for this year’s Nykerk competition.

Although no longer a member of Student Congress, Senior Kori Levos was appointed to chair the Campus Life Committee. Also, Kathy Tan and Charlene Fisher were appointed to the Women’s Studies Committee and Kris Romence and Matt Knittel were appointed to the Intramurals Committee. The Congress then voted unanimously to approve all appointments.

It was reported, however, that a student representative is needed on the BOT Committee of Business and Finance, a volunteer is needed to help decide on a speaker for the Woodrow Wilson Fellowship, and that someone is still needed to serve on the judicial board.

As Nykerk 1988 was not budgeted last year, Congress granted, by a vote of 18-6, the appeal for $2,260 for necessary fees.

In new business, Congress member Julie VanEenenaan suggested that there be a shuttle service to Meijers and the Westshore Mall. VanEenenaan will be checking with the Student Activities Committee to see if this idea is viable.

Also, Congress Comptroller Bruce Brown reported complaints about excluding health food from campus vending machines. Congress representative Mary Geil will investigate this concern.

Finally, freshman Charlene Fisher was selected as the Student Congress secretary.

The next meeting will take place October 6, 1988 in the Otte Room at 9 p.m.
