Knight Fellowship sponsors Fall Break conference

by Scott Kaumenen

The first annual Knight Fellowship Conference on Faith and Learning featured keynote speaker Dr. Stanley Hauerwas, professor of theology and law at Duke University, and six presentations by Hope College Knight Fellows.

Held Oct. 8 over fall break at the Marigold Lodge on Lake Macatawa, the conference, funded through a three-year challenge grant from the Knight Foundation, brought administrators, faculty and a few students together for a discussion of the role of Christianity in education.

Hauerwas' speech, entitled "Telling the Old, Old Story: Christian Education in a Liberal Society," examined the role of Christianity in the age of enlightenment education, which has as its goal, objectivity or pluralism. Hauerwas called this a "capitalist notion" to "create tasteful consumers. Any idea that one can be neutral is an illusion."

He challenged the idea that by teaching objectivity one was presenting "options" from which the students were free to choose. "Today's education is not objective," said Hauerwas. "It has been shaped by the Enlightenment idea itself and ideology, according to Hauerwas.

As a part of this Enlightenment view, educators have come to view religion as part of the private sphere. "Most modern thought eliminates purpose," said Hauerwas. "Modern theology says 'just confirm, no one can be damned. You just have to find it.'"

The attempts of Christians to enter education from the perspective of objectivity reflect a foolish idea that the entire of Christians have become the eyes of the world. Christians must not fall prey to this, according to Hauerwas. "The only way we educate is through witness. If the Gospels are a truth that could be known in general, there would be no need for witness. But you don't know Christianity until one person tells another. It is not a case of A recognizing that they are a sinner... They must be shown through the church."

As witnesses, Christians cannot avoid coming into conflict with the government that it is subject to Christ. "Christians cannot accept ultimate pluralism as correct even if acknowledging plurality as fact," said Hauerwas.

According to Hauerwas, in a setting such as Hope, "academic freedoms" often becomes a "formula for cowardice." Christians must never cease to remind the government that it is subject to Christ. "Christianity cannot accept ultimate pluralism as correct even if acknowledging plurality as fact."

Center will house English, Languages departments

Foundation may construct new building

by Kris Olenik
assistant news editor

Hope College has applied for a grant from the Olin Foundation for a building to house the departments of English and Modern and Classical Languages.

The Olin Foundation is a private firm from New York and Minneapolis and is sole purpose is to fund buildings for institutions of higher learning. Olin completely takes care of costs including architects, construction, equipment, furniture, and grounds. However, of the hundreds of proposals they receive, Olin only accepts and funds two or three buildings per year. As a result, the level of competition is high and Hope would be extremely fortunate to receive the grant, according the Dean of Arts and Humanities, Dr. Bobby Fong.

Fong who played a major role in shaping the proposal into final form said, "We think we have submitted a good proposal, but we don't know how many other schools have also submitted good proposals." With the magnitude of the grant, receiving it would be a "tremendous gift for which we would be very grateful" said Fong. Approximated cost of building should the Olin foundation select it would be $4.3 million.

Work on the proposal began about a year-and-a-half ago. Important contacts and work on the business end were handled by president Jacobsen and Robert DeYoung. The proposal itself received extensive input from the two department heads, Dr. Judy Motiff and Dr. William Reynolds.

Reynolds gave most of the credit to Motiff for working out the specifics and writing for the proposal. The need for the building, its purpose and the specifics had to be worked out precisely and succinctly since Olin only accepts proposals that are five pages or less.

The need for the facility is great for both the English and language departments. Short term advantages would be a greater amount of space available, for offices especially. Lubbers, where the English department is currently housed, and Graves, which holds Modern and Classical Languages, are getting cramped. Some English professors are having to double up in office space. Also the new facilities would be modern and built to suit present educational standards.

Motiff said, "The facilities here are relatively outdated. We do have a state of the art (language) lab, but it's not large enough."

The types of classrooms specified in the proposal would accommodate a larger number of students and make it easier to use television, videos, slides, and computers in the classroom. This is important for both departments.

The English department would be able teach composition classes in a computer classroom. Many other colleges and universities, including Calvin, are making use of computer-assisted classes already. Hope needs to keep up with these educational advances. Also, with the additional space and facilities the English Department has been working on an idea that would offer an intensive program in English and or an enrichment program for overseas students during the summer. Reynolds also stated, "The building would serve not just the needs of the English and Language Depart-"ments, but would serve larger campus needs as well."

Hope attrition rates average

by Carrie Maples
campus editor

A certain number of college students either change colleges or withdraw completely each year. When a student withdraws from Hope College they are asked to fill out a form citing reasons for leaving. These reasons and figures are then compiled into the Annual Attrition Report by the Registrar's Office.

One of the most popular reasons for leaving Hope for another institution is preference for a larger school.

The Report also indicates the number of students who withdraw but intend to return to Hope at some point. Over the years this figure tends to remain between 20 and 30 students.

Various personal reasons for leaving are taken into account when students fill out the withdrawal form. One of the most popular personal reasons for leaving Hope for another institution is preference for a larger school. Very few students cite poor grades as a reason for leaving and the majority are in good academic standing.

Each semester the Registrar's Office also compiles the Enrollment Report. The Report counts all full time and part time students by sex and class. The total number of credit hours students are taking is given. For example, this fall 39,950 credit hours are being taken.

The number of students who transfer into Hope each semester is included in this report. It is divided by sex and the trend is for there to be more women transfers than men. But this trend reflects the breakdown of the entire Hope student population. The current female-male ratio is 1.3 to 1.

Cosmo fraternity honors 100 years of history

(HOPE) — Homecoming activities at Hope College on had a special significance for the members of the Cosmopolitan Fraternity, which is celebrating its 100th anniversary this year.

The Cosmopolitan Fraternity, established in 1890, has the distinction of being the oldest fraternity founded on the Hope campus. Although the 156-year-old Fraternal Society came to Hope in 1864, it was established elsewhere—At Union College in Schenectady, N.Y.

The Cosmopolitan Society was established as an alternative to the other social organizations at Hope in 1890, and during its early years was not a Greek fraternity but a 'literary society,' as were the other such organizations on campus. A sense of the society's focus can be found in the 1895 'Hope College Annual,' which states that its aim was 'to fit its members especially for public speaking.'

The fraternity's direction had shifted since 1965, and social activities play a larger role. The current Cosmopolitan constitution instructs that 'The object of Phi Kappa Alpha shall be the development of its members socially, intellectually, and morally, and to the betterment of society through its actions.'

Activities conducted by the fraternity reflect the change. A sampling from the past three decades includes housepainting for local families in 1967, a 'Hot Lips of Hope' kissing booth for the American Cancer Society in 1978, and a fundraising dance for victims of cerebral palsy in 1985.

Despite the changes, however, through the years the regard the Cosmos have for their fraternity had remained constant. The memories, friendships and traditions are as valuable to current students as they remain for the organization's alumni.

"I knew a lot of Cosmos (before joining) and I saw how they treated each other, and it was obvious to me that it was a brotherhood—something more than the regular friendships that I had run into," said Eric Emig ('91) currently the fraternity's president. "It's one of the best things that I've ever done for myself."

"It was a pleasant experience and some of the finest men I ever knew I knew in Cosmos," said the Rev. Joshua Hogenboom, a 1925 Hope graduate from Lakeland, Fl. "To this day there are fellows that I still keep in touch with after all these years."

...Two years ago a close friend told me that he didn't believe he could have friends that lived far away. Proximity doesn't make a deep friendship. It's the willingness and desire to be a part of someone else's life. From my ten good friends in the class of '89, I'm still close with four of them. These people write or call and talk as though they care what I think. Those friends that faded would write the form letter, regurgitating what they do. Their heart was missing. Letters should be talking only slower.

...But how do you judge a long distance relationship? Arthur Shopenhauer (1788-1860) said, ' If you want to discover your true opinion of anybody, observe the impression made on you by the first sight of a letter from him (or her).'

Have you seen the new 'Ferris Bueller' TV show? I did Mathew Broderick and Jennifer Grey are sorely missed. The guy playing Ferris is a complete lozg. Broderick had style; this guy has capped teeth. Finally, I laughed twice. Once at Ferris' wardrobe and then again at the end over the stupidity of it all.

Hope aims for multi-cultural expansion in the next decade

by Jill Sander

Hope aims for multi-cultural expansion in the next decade. President Jacobson announced his aim to expand the minority and international population of Hope students to about 10 percent by the mid-nineties. This goal is part of a broader effort undertaken in recent years to create a more culturally diverse environment at Hope.

At present there are 192 minority students at Hope. This includes 81 international students and about 30 African American students. Ten percent would require about 280 minority students.

Jacobson believes it is exceedingly important that today’s students learn skills in cross-cultural communication and growing cultural diversity within the U.S. In order to make Hope a more multi-cultural school, in Jacobson’s plan, the Admissions Office must strive to present the strong liberal arts program that Hope has to offer, in which students have the opportunity to encounter students and staff of all cultural backgrounds. For international students, Hope offers not only academic training but the chance for cross-cultural exchange and the opportunity to become more fluent in the English language.

Jacobson feels that the academic and social life of Hope will be greatly enriched by a more diverse ethnic population. Also, greater knowledge and appreciation of cultural differences is an important step toward racial harmony.

Alfredo Gonzales, the assistant provost, believes that one of the main purposes of cultural diversity on Hope’s campus is to prepare the ants to become better world citizens and more effective contributors to society. Understanding other cultures may make the student more able to respect another one’s values and live at peace with each other, he hopes.

In a society of racial discord where fear and ignorance separate us from one another, Gonzales hopes to “dispel fears, break down walls.”

Intercultural understanding, as viewed by Gonzales, is a two-way effort in which both contribute and everyone wins. In a community with a great ethnic diversity, both majority and minority students have the opportunity to learn about other cultures and become better equipped in cross-cultural communication skills that will be valuable in the future.

Gonzales suggests several ways in which Hope can attempt to increase minority population. First, the admissions office should make a special effort to find and recruit minority and international students. Second, the Student Development Office should make students and staff more aware of multicultural issues by implementing programs and discussion groups for such purposes. Third, the college curriculum must reflect concern for multicultural issues through study of a greater variety of racial and ethnic groups, teaching of international issues, hiring more minority faculty, etc.

Gonzales, who comes from a preferential background, was born in Texas and raised in Mexico. German reunification completes year-long process

by Rychard Bouwens
staff writer

The German Democratic Republic, more commonly known as East Germany, united with the Federal Republic of Germany, West Germany, on October 3 after a year of precipitate change and hasty compromise.

The East German parliament dissolved itself on October 2 and the representatives of four World War II allies met in Berlin for the official cessation of their Allied ties of World War II. The Germans have selected Berlin as their provisional capital and the new written constitution fills 243 pages, meticulously encompassing even the details of daily living.

The reunification of both Germans ended a 45 year split between them. A year ago, on October 18, East Germany undertook a "bloodless" revolution. Last November, the Berlin wall opened, and on July 1, the Germans formed an economic union, consolidating the East Germany Mark with the West German Mark. Finally, on September 12, the four World War II Allies agreed to relinquish their ties and allow Germany to reunite.

The newly formed government took on 144 representatives from East Germany. Political analysts believe the influx of East German representatives schooled in heavy bureaucracy and anti-NATO propaganda will tilt the new Germany farther left.

A great deal of enthusiasm surrounds the reunification. People applauded the new opportunities for East Germans to experience freedom and explore an economic livelihood that a socialistic economy never offered. Inevitably, there are those who scorn the reunification. Disliking capitalist materialism, they would prefer working out of a love for humanit.

Claudia Kueza, who is an exchange student at Hope College from Mainz, West Germany, says, "I don't think it's perfect at all. What I don't like about it is that the politicians say they can afford it and that there is no problem at all."

The reconstruction of the East German country will cost, as many analysts believe, around 500 billion. The country will need new roads, communication networks, and a salvaging of an industry-polluted environment. The new country will need to expend at least 86 billion a year to fund this renovation, spending around 4 percent of its GNP, overnight, the standard of living will fall. Many Germans, however, are willing to make such a sacrifice, and label those who complain about the draining economic effects as "selfish."

At first, the task of finding employment will affect many East Germans. Experts estimate that some four million East Germans will find themselves unemployed.

In addition, Germans will need to conquer the problem of a growing class distinction arising between the two groups of Germans. While many West Germans have basked in a relative affluence, their brothers in the East have enjoyed few of the same luxuries. Westeners who had originally lashed the opening of the Berlin Wall have already cursed the slow East German cars, clogging the Autobahn. Dr. Selig, a history professor at Hope, says the problem will be short-lived however: "In five years, there will be a general leveling of the standard of living."

As for those who fear Germany's becoming a military threat, Helmut Kohl, Germany's chancellor, has said he will cut the merged armed forces form the present 590,000 to 370,000 to reduce the anxieties. In addition, Kohl plans to help Poland with its economy, partially to thwart the emigration of Polish refugees. Kohl has also promised to reward Hungary for opening its borders to the East Germans fleeing west.

Three new ways to survive college.

With Apple's introduction of three new Macintosh computers, meeting the challenges of college life just got a whole lot easier. Because now, everybody can afford a Macintosh.

The Macintosh Classic is our most affordable model yet, it comes with everything you need - including a hard disk drive. The Macintosh Classic combines color capabilities with affordability. And the Macintosh Classic is perfect for students who need a computer with extra power and expandability.

No matter which Macintosh you choose, you'll have a computer that lightens your work load without giving you another tough subject to learn. Every Macintosh computer is easy to set up and even easier to master. And when you've learned one program, you're well on your way to learning them all. That's because the Macintosh programs all work in the same, consistent manner. You can even share information with someone who uses a different type of computer - thanks to Apple's versatile SuperDrive, which reads from and writes to Macintosh, MS-DOS, OS 2, and Apple II floppy disks.

See the new Macintosh computers for yourself, and find out how surviving college just got a whole lot easier.

Letters to the Editor

Survivors not the only ones who need to be aware of rape

Dear Editor:

This letter is in response to your two articles and one editorial contained in the October 3 issue charging the Student Congress negative with sexual discrimination in appointing Scott Gilmore to congress. According to your editorial, you feel this charge is substantiated by both logic and statements that we, members of the Cabinet, have made.

We, the Student Congress Cabinet, felt the need to respond to the anchor's charge because it is simply not the case. First, we fail to see the logic at the fact that the individual we chose is male and the other three candidates are female necessitates sexual discrimination. Secondly, we stated that the issue of gender was discussed, as were a variety of other (and more important) issues. It is our right and our duty to discuss any aspect of a candidate that could possibly have an effect on how well that person could fulfill the role of representative. We tried to make it as explicit and clear as possible. However, that we appointed Scott Gilmore to the position because we felt he could make the greatest contribution to Student Congress, regardless of any one of the candidate's gender. This action has nothing to do with sexism, but rather has everything to do with the students, is the ultimate aim of the Student Congress negative.

We would like to take this opportunity to reinforce the fact that Student Congress is elected by the student body, is comprised of students, and works for the students. As students, we are all on the same side as we all share the ultimate aim of furthering us as students. We need each other. The anchor has acknowledged Student Congress's existence on two occasions this year. Of the four articles you have written, three were regarding these allegations, and all four seem to have been written with the primary intent of giving Student Congress negative publicity. We appreciate the anchor's efforts if your intent is to hold us, as elected officials, accountable to the student body. However, that just does not appear to be the case. Why wouldn't you want to try to tackle your 2-a-quarterback we do not understand.

Joe O'Grady

Cabinet fails to see case for sex discrimination

Dear Editors:

The anchor's letter, "Survivors not the only ones who need to be aware of rape," is quite interesting. The anchor attempts to defend the actions of the Student Congress, specifically the appointment of Scott Gilmore to Congress. The anchor argues that the decision was made based on the candidate's ability to make a greater contribution to Student Congress, regardless of gender.

However, the anchor's response fails to address the root issue of sexual discrimination. The anchor's letter acknowledges that the issue of gender was discussed during the selection process, but does not provide any evidence to support the claim that the decision was made objectively. The anchor's letter also fails to address the broader context of sexual discrimination in student government, which is a significant concern on many college campuses.

It is important for students to be aware of the impact of gender on decision-making processes. The anchor's letter denies the existence of sexual discrimination, but does not provide any evidence to support this claim. In contrast, the anchor's letter fails to address the broader context of sexual discrimination in student government, which is a significant concern on many college campuses.

Sincerely,

Michelle A. McIntosh

P.S. This is one survivor's outcry. I am a woman! I am not to be used! I am not for your pleasure! I do not deserve to be taken advantage of! I am a woman! I will survive!
With three weeks yet remaining in the fall off-year election campaigns, I would like to request your permission to strangle all four major Michigan candidates, Senatorial and Gubernatorial, Republican and Democrat. I've followed these campaigns for too long now and I have political opinions of all, personal opinions of two, and city opinions which I will share here.

Citizen opinions? It's the objective.

Decisions are not made because they are in the best interest of the country but because they are in the best interest of the politician. And therein is the difference between a politician and a statesman.

G. W. Shattuck, a very sickly Michigan student, wrote a very sickly article which says that I know there are significant differences in the philosophies of these candidates. I know there are two I voted for and two I won't. But that does not prevent me from becoming ill each time I see yet another cheap, shabby, 3:30-second spot on television from any of them. Allow me to illustrate:

Bill Schuette, Republican candidate for Senator, attempts to connect Democratic incumbent Carl Levin to the savings and loan fiasco, specifically Levin's fellow Michigan Democrat Don Riegle. One of the illustrious Schuette found less-than-flattering footage of Levin on the USS Wisconsin, which Levin had voted against. Levin pointed to a Shattuck vote against the F-16 fighter, "the centerpiece of the American fighting force in the Gulf."

Look at any Congressman's voting record and chances are, you'll find at least one vote against the weapon.

Democratic Governor Jim Blanchard has run a negative campaign from the start. It continued to sink to its lowest when it arranged for some Democrats from Engler's hometown to speak little to the issues at hand in the campaign. Not everyone in California voted for Reagan. Should that be the deciding factor in determining whether or not to vote for him?

As for State Senate Majority Leader John Engler, he still should not be forgiven for his nauseating theme song, "Just Think What John Engler Can Do." Fortunately it has disappeared from his latest commercials.

Recently, Blanchard has turned to citing past Engler votes, usually with some relation to appropriations for education, environment, clean-up or business. However, as one who has become quite cynical of politicians in general, campaigns in particular, I cannot but at least recognize that votes often come with strings attached or were a result of the lesser of two evils. A two-second statement that an official voted this way on a bill, which would have done such-and-such, hardly does justice, in many cases, to the complexities if the bill.

Meanwhile, he has adapted to using the "he's running a negative campaign" approach. Sorry, Mr. Engler, but while it is true, people aren't going to vote for you out of sympathy. "Avoid John" is a dirty campaign, I think I'll vote for John."

Get back to telling us where you stand and where you are planning to focus on a major campaign. Let's have a real debate. Then we will check with other, more objective sources to see where you have been, if you can convince us that you are worth checking out.

The campaigns are yet another example of the lack of statesmanship in this country. The recent budget fiasco, the continuing deficit, the ever-swelling savings and loan scandal, are all examples of politics dictating policy. Decisions are not made because they are in the best interest of the country, but because they are in the best interest of the politician.

"Look at any Congressman's voting record and chances are, you'll find at least one vote against a weapon."

A politician holds his finger to the wind, while a statesperson does what he thinks right—right to take the absolute sense, not in the 'what is the 'right' vote to ensure my re-election' sense. This is but one reason why we have the type of campaigns we have.

Another, unfortunately, is: they work. Due to the lack of involvement, the lack of political sophistication of the electorate as a whole, campaigns emphasize style over substance (even if the style is to decry style over substance), quick-hitting 10-to-30-second spots, and true-but-less-than-honest attacks.

But before you go saying "yeah, those morons who let themselves be swayed by such tactics that cause such hideous campaigns. "What is your source of information in deciding who to vote for this fall? Anything besides the commercials? Have you done any research at the library on their past records? Have you talked to people on both sides (as well as those who may try to convince you that they are completely objective) who actually know the candidates' positions?

A lack of statesmen isn't our only problem. So, too, is a lack of citizens.

KATY STRYKER

Examining the same problem

Paritials is one example of a direct barrier between students and independence. This rule is proof that the administration has little trust in the student body. If Hope College is, in fact, a Christian school, I doubt that these would be anything to question on the conduct of students.

The same applies to the alcohol problem on campus. The decision on whether or not to drink should be made by the student, not the administration. As long as everything is within the law, there should be no objections.

I realize that both of these regulations probably deter a few students from acting in "sinful" ways. But the majority of those who are inclined to drink and are under the influence of the opposite sex are going to do so anyway.

And those few students who have been saved from harm by these restrictions have been deprived of something very valuable. The right to look out for themselves and make their own decisions. This lesson is one that will be learned the hard way in the real world, if students aren't given the chance during their college years.

A decision that is made for us, adds little value to our self-esteem. However, one that we are able to make on our own, one that we may or may not learn the hard way is one that we can call our own. A decision made in this way lends a valuable contribution to our self-confidence and sense of accomplishment.

Any school that teaches the philosophies of Socrates, Aristotle, and Plato yet makes uncontestable decisions and obstructs students right to make their own decisions is actually teaching a much different lesson. A lesson that is never spoken but heard all too clearly.

Both the women’s and men’s Cross Country varsity teams placed in the top ten against several nationally ranked teams at the Les Duke Cross Country Invitational at Gannell College, Iowa.

The meet, held on Sept. 22, gave the teams a chance to try out the course which will be used for the 1990 NCAA Division III National Cross Country championships.

The runners found a challenging, hilly course on the sunny, but windy day.

The first race, the women’s open SK, featured 77 runners. Representing the Hope cross team were Cheryl Becker ('92), Sarah Arnsman ('91) and Dori Reusink ('94). Becker crossed the finish line in 35th place, followed by Arnsman (44th) and Reusink (72nd).

The second race was a men’s open SK run. A good-sized field of 141 men participated, out of which Hope runner Cody Inglis ('93) finished 28th with a time of 28:09. He was closely followed by John Nowak ('94) and Scott Pat-tom ('94) who finished 41st and 47th respectively.

Steve Johnson ('94) contributed an improving effort with a 66th place finish. Dai Wesman ('93) and Jason Elmore ('90) finished seventh and six places apart with Wesman in 75th and Elmore in 81st place. Rounding out Hope’s field were Greg Brown ('94) 116th, Derek Dykstra ('94) 121st, Darren Sipma ('91) 125th and Omar Postigo-Martel ('94) 139th.

The women’s varsity race set an surprising upset as number four ranked St. Thomas upset number three North Central by a generous. The Hope men’s team finished in 5th place, and, like the women’s team, placed behind only nationally ranked teams.

Individually, Bob Cisler of North Central College finished just three seconds ahead of three other runners. Cisler’s time was 25:16. Chad Guerreiro of St. Thomas, Gary Wasserman of Nebraska Wesleyan and Tony Every of Cornell finished 2nd, 3rd and 4th respectively.

For the Hope women’s team, Jilanne Bannick ('91) led the way with a 15th place finish in a time of 19:40. She was closely followed by Theresa Foster ('94) who finished 18th seven seconds later.

Alicia Mendenhall ('94) finished third for Hope with a time of 20:23 and 42nd place. Rounding out the Hope women’s field were Cara Luchies ('94) 49th, 20:37; Sonja Langgios ('94) 73rd, 21:27; Sheila Brink ('91) 78th, 21:36; and Kristen Kingma ('92) 101st, 22:50.

Dutch drop close game

Despite a last quarter effort by Hope, Olivet held on to rain on Hope’s Homecoming. At the Holland Municipal Stadium, the Flying Dutchmen brought the game to the wire before they lost 20-14.

The key drive of the game started when Hope’s defense held the Comet’s and turned the ball over with under six minutes to play.

Three key things happened to bring Hope to within a pass of a win. First, the scoreboard went off, and the officials put six minutes back on the board. This gave Hope as much as 30 seconds more in which to play.

The second was the pass plays totalling 63 yards from Stefan Swartzmiller ('92) to Jeff Schorhaar ('91). This lined up a 10 yard touchdown run by Chris Howe ('91).

The third key play was when Hope’s defense forced Olivet to turn the ball over after being down third and 17 and fourth and 7. This gave Hope possession at their own 42 yard line.

With 2:39 left to play and down by six, it looked as if Hope would take the victory from Olivet. Quick passes from Swartzmiller to Kelly Powers('91) and Schor-

In Chicago now there is a hit play of an episode of the Brady Bunch. With different actors and actresses as our favorite family, the show takes on one episode of the Brady Bunch with different actors and actresses as our favorite family. "With half the zeal I served from Wolsey's final speech in 'Henry VIII,'" said Bromwell. "I did not want to shed a tear in all my misery. Had I served my God with half the zeal I served my king, he would not have made me happy."

Has anyone else noticed that the food in Phelps is better this year? Only occasionally am I still blessed with the infamous "Phelps Brick" in my stomach.

I sometimes wonder if my friends were not better off before we owned a TV and VCR. In our first year here we made two guys' room into the Freshmen Lounge. There were about ten to twelve of us in a co-ed group who would meet daily to talk, laugh, and be rude. Now we rent a movie, sit in the living room and not talk.

Sometimes I come across a quote that captures my entire school year. This one is from Clarence Day who lived at the turn of the century. "If your parents didn't have any children, there's a good chance that you won't have any. It takes a special mind for that kind of luck. I wish I could have met him.

Other times a cartoon captures my life. Snoopy runs across the top of his dog house. He dives in. He falls toward the ground. The cord on his ankle snaps out. He Bounces into the air and plummets back down. Up and down again. He hangs upside down and looks at us. "Joe Bungi," he says.

Hope College hosted the 13th annual Run-Bike-Swim-Walk Saturday, which featured the walking event for the first time. Competitors and friends of all ages came out to participate in the event.

The second-place finisher was Chris Cook, who was running the 20-29 year-old age group along with Kent. The third-place finisher was Michael Craner, who took first place in the 15-19 year-old age group.

The 10K runners took off at the same time as the 5K runners and the first few runners came in as the last of the five-kilometer runners had finished. Lou Hoekstra finished first in the 10K. Hoekstra has been running for 20 years.

"This fall is my 20th anniversary. I've been running since I was a freshman in high school," Hoekstra said.

Hoekstra ran cross country and track for Hope, graduated in 1978, and currently resides in Kalamazoo.

"I just came out to participate in the homecoming festivities," he said.

The four events, the turn out for the running was the greatest but Hoekstra reacted as if the race was small.

"I kind of suspected first place because this race hasn't drawn a lot," he said. "I half prepared myself mentally to run alone.

Participants could enter single events or compete in the triathlon. John Calcutt finished the 10K first for the triathletes with a time of 35:27. He finished second in the biking event with a time of 25:18 and second in swimming at 12:49:19.

This combined effort put him in first place overall in the 40-49-year-old age group. Greg Smith placed second and Pete Perron placed third in that group.

Immediately behind Calcutt was Bruce Los, who finished the run in 36:43. Los took first in all three events for the 30-39-year-old group. He finished the biking event in 25:24 and the swimming portion in 10:43:56.

"I was all by myself in the pool," said Los. "It hurt me a little bit, but I took it out too hard. It was a great day for it -- a little cool on the bike, but a nice day for it.

In second place for the 30-39-year-old age group was Jacob Nyenhuis, who finished second in the running and third in the biking. The 15-19 year-old age group was won by Bruce Los, who finished the run in 36:43. Los took first in all three events for the 30-39-year-old group. I'd never have believed that one little computer could make such an incredible difference in my academic and working life.

I became a Macintosh convert in business school. "At our computer lab I'd always find lines of people waiting to use the Macintosh computers, while other computers just sat there. So I had a choice: wait for a Macintosh, or come back at 6 A.M. to grab one before they'd all be taken.

"After business school, I took a job at a large bank and used my Macintosh for producing everything from spreadsheets to a company newsletter. "Today I use Macintosh to help me run my own management consulting firm. When I give a presentation, I can see in peoples' faces that they're really impressed. And that makes me feel great.

"Sometimes I take Friday off, put my Macintosh and skis in the car, and head for the mountains. I ski days and work nights. It's perfect.

"You know, I can't say where I'll be in five, ten, or fifteen years, but I can say that my Macintosh will be there with me."
