Romney Lauds Mill, Tulip Time

Gov. George Romney Wednesday praised the annual Tulip Time Festival as the type of activity needed to stimulate tourism in Michigan.

Romney, in remarks prepared for delivery at the festival, said it was Michigan's man-made attractions that bring in the tourist dollar and singled out Ottawa County as a leader in the field.

"Let's face it," the governor said. "Michigan doesn't have any geyser basins. Michigan has no Grand Canyon. Michigan has no snow-capped mountain ranges. Increasingly, the things Michigan has that no other state can match are our man-made attractions and our community festivals. There is only one Mackinac Bridge. There is only one Greenfield Village. And there is only one Tulip Time."

"This is the direction Michigan must move if we are to grow as a leading tourist state."

"And there's plenty of evidence that you in Ottawa County aren't standing still. Most impressive, of course, is the beautiful and exciting windmill which you've transplanted direct from The Netherlands. Again, this is something which is unique in North America. This is a man-made, community-based attraction which will bring tourists by the thousands into Western Michigan every year," the governor said.

Romney described the recent Operation Europe trip which saw him lead a delegation of 70 business and political leaders on a business-seeking trip through Europe.

"As a result of our recent Operation Europe, I am more deeply convinced than ever that there are growing opportunities ahead for trade and investment on a partnership basis with The Netherlands and other European nations."

"They will welcome American investment and we will welcome European investment—as equal partners, with neither trying to dominate the other or steal the other's markets," Romney said. The governor said the two successful ventures—Tulip Time (Continued on page 43.) and Operation Europe—"have something in common worth thinking about."

"Both of these ventures came into being because of an idea that a private citizen had an idea that could benefit a lot of other people. Both of them got off the ground because they captured the imagination of a lot of private individuals, who set out to turn the idea into reality."

"Eventually both of these ideas involved government support and some government funds. But the basic thrust and continuing impetus for the success of both Tulip Time and Operation Europe came from the private citizens acting voluntarily," Romney said.

He said the people who conceived the annual festival at Holland didn't "sit back and wait for state leadership and financing before they started Tulip Time. They went ahead and did it themselves."

"I deeply believe that this is the road to expanded opportunity for all Americans—through voluntary, local and state initiative in creative problem-solving. This is an approach that works. If America is to fulfill her bright potential, we must relearn the art and the necessity of self-help in meeting the challenges that face us," Romney said.

Private Firm Plans to Set Up Water Co.

GRAND HAVEN — Grand Haven township, plagued by water supply trouble for several years, will try to solve its problem in a unique way at the June 14 school election.

The township board, led by veteran supervisor Clarence Reenders, voted 4 to 1, Monday night to place the question before the voters June 14.

The board turned down an offer by Grand Haven city to run a 12-inch main into the township, where some residents are having water "pains" and several fair-sized industries are badly in need of big supplies of water.

Board members voted to give a 30-year franchise to Maynard Heyboer, Sr., and others who plan to set up a business known as the Grand Haven Township Water Co. Several meetings have been held to inform the public on three proposals: 1. to buy water from Grand Haven; 2. to set up a private company, such as Heyboer's, and 3. building the township's own water system.

The general feeling at all of the meetings was that the city's offer was too costly. Many industrialists said that the Grand Haven offer was the best as it is reliable and "ready to go" into action.

The source of the proposed company system will probably be wells dug in the township. If the plan is approved, the water may start pouring into the system a year from now.

Claim Rights Of Suspects Are Violated

GRAND HAVEN — Circuit Court Judge Raymond L. Smith today took under advisement a motion to suppress evidence against two Chicago men charged with breaking into a safe at a Holland church last Dec. 21.

A Circuit Court hearing was held Wednesday afternoon on the motion to suppress evidence obtained against William Maxson, 32, and Joseph Sansone, 27, charged with safe cracking at Faith Christian Reformed Church in Holland.

Judge Smith took the motion under advisement and will file a decision at a later date. Attorneys for the pair claimed evidence against the two was obtained in violation of their rights and constituted illegal search and seizure.

The two men were arrested in Otsego Dec. 21, while riding in a Holland cab enroute to Kalamazoo.

Maxson and Sansone had hired the cab in Holland. The owner of the cab became suspicious when he lost radio contact with the driver south of Holland and notified Holland police.

Otsego police, alerted by an area radio broadcast, spotted the cab and held the two passengers who were returned to Holland by Holland police.

Preliminary hearing for the two Chicago men was held in Holland Municipal Court Jan. 12. Municipal Judge John Galien bound the two over to Circuit Court and ordered bond set at $50,000 each.

Maxson and Sansone stood mute at their Circuit Court arraignment Jan. 13, and a not guilty plea was entered for them by the court. Bond was reduced to $10,000 each and was furnished.

Besides Faith Christian Reformed Church, seven other Holland churches were broken into early Dec. 21.

Utilities Discussed At Joint Meeting

Besides explaining future electrical needs, the BPW outlined water and sewer programs. The latter was in connection with the recently approved bond issue for $1.9 million to extend interceptor sewers to Holland Heights, the southeast area, and the South Shore Dr.-Lakeview school area. Specifications on the sewer program are about to be drawn up.

UNKNOWN MAN — Joe Steel's real identity and past life have remained a mystery ever since he came to the Ottawa County Infirmary in 1907. Today, as he celebrates his 102nd birthday the only fact officials know for sure is the date of his admittance to the institution. The matron of the infirmary selected May 15 as Joe's birthday.

Identity of Man, 102, Still Mystery

By John H. Hill
EASTMANVILLE — The official report lists his name as Joe Steel, his address as unknown and the date of his admittance to the Ottawa County Infirmary as Feb. 25, 1907.

For 58 years officials at the infirmary have looked for more information about the man, but have found nothing. No background, relatives or friends have been traced. The only thing they know for sure is the day that Steel entered the infirmary in 1907.

On Saturday there will be a party at the infirmary to celebrate "Little Joe's" 102nd birthday. The infirmary matron, Mrs. Tom Modderman, set May 15 as Joe's birthday four years ago so that he could receive birthday cards and gifts from the Salvation Army and other groups that give gifts at the infirmary.

Even the name and age are not positive. Steel gave his age as 44 when admitted. Officials have no way of knowing if this is correct.

On Feb. 25, 1907, the 5'4" 115-pound man was found wandering scantily-clad in sub-zero weather in a field near Lamont. He could give no account of himself, what he was doing or where he was going, and was admitted to the infirmary.

In those days methods of determining a man's identity were much cruder than they are today. No fingerprints were taken, and in an age before rapid communication word of the little man did not reach far beyond the Ottawa County area.

All that the old keeper of the infirmary could determine was that Steel had worked in a lumber camp near Lamont.

The present keeper, Tom Modderman, who took over 15 years ago, has pretty much given up hope of finding anyone who knew Steel.

Modderman, raised on a farm adjoining the infirmary, has known Steel for a long time. He frequently tried to get Joe to remember, but the past remains as blank as the stare from the little man's clear blue eyes.

In 1907 patients at the infirmary were listed under two main categories—lame or insane. Steel was termed insane, but the present keeper feels this is not the appropriate term. Today, Joe would be called feeble-minded or retarded.

The name Steel wherever it came from is very appropriate for "Little Joe." He was built like a scrap of steel when he came to the infirmary, and is still hardy at 102.

Joe can care for himself almost completely, and walks with only a slight stoop of the shoulders. Dr. John Wenger of Coopersville, the infirmary's physician for more than 38 years, reports that Steel hasn't had a serious illness as long as the doctor can remember.

Modderman thought that Joe may have been injured before he was admitted to the infirmary, but no evidence of this has been found.

Modderman said "Little Joe" has always been happy and easy-going.

"He'll talk to you if you want, but doesn't seem to mind if there's no one to talk with," Modderman said.

Joe was friendly with the ten Modderman children while they grew up on the nearby farm. He used to play ball with them, and also helped in threshing and filling their silos.

The Moddermans are now about the only visitors that Steel has.

Joe was always a cooperative and willing worker on the 250-acre farm maintained by the infirmary. He also worked in the infirmary laundry.

Today, Joe spends most of his time either outdoors or in the infirmary smokehouse. The smokehouse, a small shed with an old black iron stove, is a favorite hangout of all the patients. Steel shows particular interest when a new machine or tool is purchased for the farm. He also enjoys television.

For his birthday Mrs. Modderman plans to bake a cake, and put on 102 candles. The Ottawa County Board of Social Welfare which operates the infirmary will join the Moddermans and the 54 other patients in celebrating Joe's birthday.

At 102, Joe is seemingly as unconcerned as ever about the mystery of his life. While the mystery will probably remain unsolved one can only wonder if somewhere a son, grand-daughter or distant cousin lives on unaware of the existence of a long-lost relative.

Set Allegan School Vote

ALLEGAN — The annual school election will be held here on June 14. School board member Loring Edmunds, who is just completing his first 4-year term, has announced he will be a candidate for a second 4-year term.

Board member Carlos Myers, who will complete two years of 4-year term June 30, has notified Supt. L. E. White that he will be unable to finish out his term. Imogene Clegg has consented to run to represent the rural portion of the school district, in place of Myers.

Also on the ballot will be a request for permission to transfer a balance of $557.96 from the 1955 debt retirement fund to the general fund. This debt has been completely paid, it was explained, and this is a legal requirement that must be met before the funds can be used.

Nominating petitions for interested Board of Education candidates may be picked up at the office of Allegan School Superintendent, L. E. White in the Jr. High School building. Petitions must be signed by 50 registered and qualified electors and turned in to board secretary, Mrs. Louise Wilcox, by May 17.

Michigan Trade Group Met With Dutch Businessmen

(Charles Conrad was among the 70-man Michigan delegation which made a trade tour of six European countries late last month. This is another report on the trip. Editor's note.)

By Charles Conrad
A reception honoring the 70-man Michigan delegation was held at the Amsterdam Hilton Hotel. It was sponsored by the Central Chamber of Commerce and The Netherlands Chamber of Commerce in the U.S.

This informal gathering permitted us to meet the leaders of business, banking and government for Amsterdam and the Netherlands. After the reception a dinner meeting afforded the opportunity of good Dutch cooking.

We also were addressed by W. A. VandeGarde, Deputy Secretary General — Ministry of Economic Affairs. Next, Time-Life correspondents for the European Common Market areas gave us a briefing on each country. I thought all reports to be very accurate. Some of the reporter opinions of Charles De Gaulle were quite blunt.

Regarding the Netherlands, there is full employment for all who can work. Some people were a bit surprised that we have an unemployment problem in the U.S.A.

At this dinner Governor George Romney and I presented the letter of greetings from Holland, Michigan and Mayor Nelson Bosman.

Mr. G. Van Hall, was pleased to receive the letter. He promised to send a reply to Mayor Bosman.

Governor Romney also presented an Interlochen scholarship.

The next morning I toured Amsterdam by taxi. The driver could not speak English, but we got along O. K. There are many canals and lift bridges. I took some pictures of their War Memorial, the theatre and buildings. One important visit was missed; because of the early hour the Rijksmuseum of Art was not open. Rembrandt, Van Gogh and others have paintings on display here.

The typical Dutch architecture is very interesting. Orange tile roofs are on most buildings. Since clay is so plentiful, the tile-brick structure is most common.

I arrived back at the Hotel just in time to catch the bus to Keuken Hof Tulip Gardens. This is a fantastic display of hundreds of types. Acres of tulips were in bloom. The garden features ponds, walks, greenhouses full of color, and numerous statuettes of contemporary "modern" to realistic works of art. The gardens have a full size operating Windmill. It is similar in size and appearance to "De Zwaan" of Holland, Michigan. The day we arrived, a tulip festival was scheduled. A flight of nine bi-planes flew over.

As flowers must be trimmed from the plants by the thousands, the blooms have very little market value. Roadside stands sell long streamers of flowers and large garlands that can be draped over cars or around the neck.

Great care is exercised to keep bulbs classified by color and type. I was told that a dormant bulb can be sliced, and the sliced bulb viewed under a microscope reveals a flower as it will later be when in bloom. Also, bulbs must be dug and cured (dried) for marketing. Accelerated drying would permit a longer fall selling season for tulip bulbs.

My bus partner to and from the Tulip Farms was Stanley Kresge of the Kresge stores. He is a very interesting man, always smiling and pleasant. He told me the first Kresge to come to the U.S.A. from Switzerland was "Conrad" Kresge — I guess this only means it's easier for him to recall my last name. Incidentally Mr. Kresge is one of the largest importers of Netherlands Tulip Bulbs.

Enroute to and from the Tulip farm we drove on top of dikes. They are 30 or 40 feet high and about 150 feet wide. Often a canal is flowing on top of the dike. It carries water pumped from the lowland areas. They are all 15 feet below sea level.

A new dike system is building across the North Islands. In a few years most all of the Zuider Zee will be pumped dry. The rich bottom land looks much like the muckland farms near Hudsonville. The farm workers wear wooden shoes. These look most practical in that area of wet soil. Homes are neat. Short lace curtains hang in the windows.

It appears that roll curtains or draw drapes are not used. John Kirsch (World's largest curtain rod maker) of Sturgis, was on the tour with us.

Back at the Hotel (Amsterdam Hilton) our hotel doorman greeted us again. He wears a fancy red and gold coachman uniform. I gave him a Holland Tulip Time (1964) paper. He was very interested.

Summary of Michigan's Operation Europe — Netherlands Trip:

1. Learned of full employment results of European Common Market Free Trade Competition.
2. The Netherlands does not need more outside capital at this time.
3. They are more interested in joint venture business with Dutch majority control.
4. There is great interest in modern farming methods and labor saving devices — especially in the one hundred million dollar bulb industry.
5. I found out first-hand of the many commercial helps that the U. S. Department of Commerce provides.
6. Several members of the Michigan group established or followed up their specific business interests with Netherlands people.
7. Governor Romney did an excellent job of selling Michigan — its industry, port facilities, tourism, and geographic location for world trade — 80 per cent of ocean vessels can reach Michigan by the St. Lawrence Seaway.
8. As a result of the brief trip to the Netherlands, I now have a feeling of how the government and industrial people think of American business. I also know that doing business there is very much like here. Certain rules are different, and some customs are different.

Saturday, at 3:45 p.m., we departed Amsterdam by KLM Airlines for Bremen, Germany. We stayed there rather than Hanover, Germany, because of the crowded hotels. Hanover is the site of the world's largest trade fair.

Jim (Clip) Bagladi . . . first to bowl scratch

Jim (Clip) Bagladi Wins State Bowling Tourney

Jim (Clip) Bagladi showed the rest of Michigan's youthful bowlers how it's done Saturday as he rolled an amazing actual six-game score of 1,198 at the Grand Rapids Fanatorium.

This was the highest score rolled by any of the 222 youngsters participating in the Michigan Youth Bowling Association tournament finals.

But Clip is only 12 years old and this means he can't win a $500 college scholarship or a trip to the National Junior Championship Tournament in Washington, D.C., in July.

The scholarship and the trip to the nation's capital is reserved for graduating high school seniors. So Bagladi has something to look forward to in the future. He's now a sixth grader at Beechwood School.

Bagladi was the first to ever bowl scratch, (without a handicap) in the prep division of the state tourney. He had a 638 and 560 series. He will receive a trophy for his efforts as bowlers in the junior and prep divisions bowl for trophies only.

The 638 series was the highest series Bagladi has ever rolled. He had games of 205, 220 and 213.

Bagladi has been bowling for the past six years and his highest game was 248 bowled in February of this year. He has been bowling for the past six years. He carries a 171 season's average.

By Esther MacFarlane Snow

Life on a college campus today is an exciting adventure. Here one feels a restlessness, an eager searching for answers to life's most pressing problems.

We encounter learning at several levels and (in the case of many individuals) a realization that the learning process is never completed; that there is always something new to be added or more information to be acquired in familiar subjects.

There is continual change in methods, courses and aids to learning and opportunities are so numerous that the student must constantly make choices.

A modern, well-equipped laboratory is at the disposal of the language student at Hope College. He may listen to tape-recorded lessons, vocabularies, and exercises in pronunciation as well as suggestions and questions in advanced courses.

A German House and a French House, situated on the campus, serve as dormitories for young women who are interested in speaking the language. A native speaker lives in each house and aids greatly in the use of the language which is spoken by all residents at all times.

Thirty Hope students who are participating in the 1965 Vienna summer session will live with Austrian families and will learn to speak German with their hosts, who very probably understand and speak little English.

Lectures, religious services, concerts, art exhibits and drama productions are some of the offerings which help the student to develop into a "well-rounded" personality. Serious, interested young people find financial help available in many areas. Fellowships, scholarships, and seminars for both students and faculty are numerous.

The great need for international cooperation and understanding becomes more evident every day. Here the colleges are making great strides and the number of American students studying abroad is steadily increasing. In return, young people from many foreign countries now have the opportunity to enroll in American educational institutions. At present, there are approximately fifty foreign students on Hope's campus and twelve Hopeites are attending classes in other countries. Thirty-five Japanese students will attend classes at Hope this summer and will live with Holland families.

The establishment of learning centers for American students abroad is one of the important steps in promoting international understanding. Lasting friendships are being formed by young people who have lived for months in the home of a foreign family. American parents speak fondly of the addition to the family circle when they are given the privilege of entertaining a young man or woman from a foreign land in their home for a semester or two. American students who have lived with families abroad become deeply attached to their second home and correspond regularly with their foster families.

Frau Schmidt serves as one of the finest examples of a person who has given love and friendship to our own Hope students. Frau Schmidt is an Austrian "Hausfrau" who has been mother to Hope men students in Vienna for many successive years. Her fame and reputation as a wonderful person have been passed from one year's group to the next and her rooms are always in demand. She treats these boys as she would her own sons and they return the affection she showers upon them.

Parents of these fortunate young men who visit Vienna all arrive with a specific mission to be performed. They first call on Frau Schmidt, become acquainted with her and deliver messages and gifts to her from her "boys" in the United States.

It is a thrilling experience to learn to converse in another language and daily use of this language makes it part of one's culture. A new interest arises in that country, in its traditions, government, educational system and religion when the language barrier is down. The many questions asked of the students by their hosts give the American a chance to represent his country in its best light and to counteract the impressions left by thoughtless tourists and others who are not concerned about making friends for America.

We hear much today about a shrinking world which is already a reality in our lives, whether we approve or not. Our next task is to make this one world a place where all nations can live together amicably. Education is helping to tear down prejudices which have existed for centuries.

Only as we understand other cultures better, can we make a real contribution in this direction. For this, the colleges in America are sincerely striving. What greater service can college-trained men and women give to a confused world?

Anholt Posthouse Will Have Windmill Reception Center

The reception and information center, canteen and administration office of the Windmill Island Project will be housed in the posthouse now under construction just north of the parking area of the development.

The Anholt posthouse is a replica of one some 300-years-old restored about two years ago in Ruinen, The Netherlands. The Windmill Committee, which originally planned to build a structure to fit in with the atmosphere of the project, heard of the posthouse from Jan (Diek) Medendorp, the millwright who restored the mill De Zwaan.

Medendorp had been working on a restoration project in Ruinen when he first heard of the posthouse restoration.

Details were worked out for obtaining the plans from the city of Ruinen through its mayor or at a cost of what is equivalent to two or three hundred dollars, according to H. W. Kammeraad of Kammeraad and Strop who are serving as general contractors for the entire Windmill project.

The H-shaped structure, capable of holding 175 people at once, resembles the Dutch "posthuis" or inn used by travelers to sleep over night during their journeys. Kammeraad added the Bishop of Anholt used to stop at the original posthouse regularly when he made his rounds visiting people.

The building is composed of two sections adjoined by a room which will house the offices for the project. The first section, originally used by the people for sleeping quarters, will house the lobby, information desk, restrooms and lounge complete with a fireplace to be built shortly.

The first section, 63 by 30 feet, is a two story structure with the second story having locker rooms, lunch rooms and storage for employees only. The entire first section will be air conditioned.

It is also here that the Windmill booklets and other information will be distributed.

The canteen will occupy second section of the building, originally used to stable horses. It is 20 by 42 feet and has two brick walls. The remaining two walls have a wave, wood siding. The inside area is finished with exposed wood. Wood cedar shakes are used for roofing.

The entire building being built by Martin Dyke and Sons at a cost of $55,000 is typical of the rural, lowland, Dutch architecture seen in The Netherlands. The structure is built on a concrete slab and has no basement.

The front portion of the brick building features fancy brick work and weaving-pattern brick work at the top of the end walls as used by the Dutch to stand up against the weather. Spanish clay tile are used to roof this section and shutters on the front of the building border only the lower half of the windows.

The brick walls are carried through the inside of the first

Holland Studies Dutch Elm Serum

Holland has investigated using Bidrin, a new serum still in experimental stages, for fighting Dutch Elm disease, but will not use it until definite results have been proved, according to City Manager Herb Holt.

Park Superintendent Jacob De Graaf is a qualified applicator of the serum. He trained at a special one-day session put on by the Michigan Agricultural Department recently.

The city currently fights Dutch Elm disease by spraying with DDT early in May. The spray kills the insects known to carry the fungus from one tree to another. Any diseased elm trees are immediately eliminated to keep the disease from spreading.

The city of Monroe began using the serum on a regular basis this week. Bidrin, a highly toxic serum, is inserted just under the bark of elm trees, and is designed to kill the insects which carry the disease.

A Dedicated King
II Samuel 5: 1-7, 9-12
By C. P. Dame

Sometimes the man seeks the office and sometimes the office seeks the man. Our lesson tells how a nation sought a ruler and found a man who was dedicated. David failed at times but on the whole he had one passion—to serve God and his nation.

I. Experienced leadership counts. David, after the death of king Saul ruled Judah for seven years. During those years Ish-bosheth, the son of Saul, ruled Israel. Abner, the brilliant general of Saul was treacherously murdered. This weakened the rule of Ish-bosheth. After he was murdered the throne of Israel was vacant. The elders of the nation came to David, living in Hebron, and asked him to become king. They offered three good reasons. The first was his racial kinship: "Behold, we are thy bone and thy flesh." David was a son of Jesse, a great-grandson of the honorable Boaz. The second reason was his tested leadership: "Also in time past, when Saul was kind over us, thou wast he that leddest out and broughtest in Israel." The third reason was, he was God's choice. "Thou shalt feed my people Israel, and thou shalt be captain over Israel."

David and the elders made a covenant. In oriental countries kings ruled absolutely but not in Israel. When David was thirty years of age he began to reign and ruled forty years. The nation at that time was divided. David faced a big task but he achieved it.

II. Often the impossible becomes possible. David wanted Jerusalem to be his capital. Geographically it was ideally situated, on the border between Israel and Judah and it was considered impregnable. The Jebusites who lived there said that a few blind and lame people could hold the city. "Nevertheless David took the stronghold of Zion." What some said could not be done, he did.

Many people have done what was deemed impossible. Today the Church faces many strongholds. Some leaders do not know what to do. Many think that church mergers will solve the problem. They rely upon bigness and bureaucracy and efficiency. They forget the words, "Not by might, nor by power, but by My Spirit, says the Lord of hosts." These words deserve to be remembered in our times.

III. God's favor is always essential. David moved the capital to Jerusalem as he had planned. He was a wise leader and looked ahead. Today, both the church and the nation need men of leadership ability who have foresight. David had the assurance that God had called him to be the nation's ruler and that He would guide and direct him. David grew greater and greater and the nation became stronger and stronger. Some men keep on growing and others weaken. The person who commits himself to God and wants to do His will is bound to grow. Such a person keeps on seeking to find and do God's will. Without God's favor we can do but little.

Adult Comedy Attracts 150 Opening Night

"Bell, Book and Candle," the bewitching comedy by John van Druten, opened Thursday night in Holland High School Auditorium featuring five members of the Holland Community Theatre.

Under the direction of E. Dale Conklin, the play evolves around a romantic witch who goes soft on magic and loses her powers but learns to share human love.

Mrs. John Hempel plays the lead of Gillian Holroyd, the "love sick" witch, who entices publisher Shepherd Henderson, portrayed by Hollis Clark Jr., half on a romantic whim and half on an urge of revenge against a rival.

While the opening scene was slow, as written, the actors paced the show revealing the consequences of a magical romance. Mrs. Hempel and Clark skillfully manipulated the scenes in this blandly pleasing fantasy.

The audience was delighted by the exuberance of Mrs. Ernest F. Penna who portrays Gillian's impish aunt who was true "witch" through and through even when hindered by "promises."

Edward J. Duffy appears as Nicky Holroyd, Gillian's loving brother who heckles his sister in an attempt to "keep her from going straight." The plot is completed by Gordon Cunningham who portrays Sidney Redlitch, an author considered an expert on witches and magic. Redlitch is the innocent subversive in revealing Gillian's real character.

The audience applauded the set design as the curtain was drawn revealing the apartment of Miss Holroyd. The set epitomizes classic simplicity in design and presents a silhouette effect accented by subtle shades of lavender, blue, green and white.

The action is emphasized by the discrete lighting effects produced under the direction of Don Kardux. The same shades of lavender, green and blue with shades of shocking red and orange are appropriately used to coincide with the emotions of the actors and action of the scenes.

About 150 persons attended the opening performance. The play, which replaces originally scheduled "Third Best Sport," will be repeated tonight and Saturday at 8:15 p.m. in the Holland High School Auditorium.

Two 20-year old Holland drivers disregarded the warning issued by Laketown township Justice Robert L. Lemson regarding drag racing.

Jerry Komean, route 1, and Wesley Hoek, 1182 Graafschap

Rd., were caught dragging Thursday and appeared for sentencing Saturday night. Both received $25 fines and paid $5 costs, as well as giving up their operator's licenses and vehicle plates for 60 days, in lieu of a 60 day jail sentence.

Lemson recently sentenced two Grand Rapids college students to painting out several white lines marking drag strips in Laketown Township with black paint and toothbrushes, warning that future violators would receive stiffer punishment.

4,000 Visit Windmill Island During Weekend

More than 4,000 persons visited Windmill Island during the weekend and manager Jerry Fairbanks was pleased with the response which he said met expectations.

Windmill De Zwaan was not in working operation because of technical difficulties involving the brake, but Arie J. de Koning, technical expert for the Dutch Windmill Society, checked operations with Jan (Diek) Medendorp, who supervised the restoration, and it is expected that the windmill will be in operation for the opening of Holland's four-day Tulip Time festival Wednesday.

Fairbanks said Sunday's crowd was about twice the size of Saturday's resulting in a traffic tieup when the toll gate opened at 11:30 a.m. Four employees manned the toll house and it took a half hour before traffic moved smoothly.

Fairbanks said the greater share of visitors were from out of state and he estimated only about 10 per cent from the local area.

Complimentary comment referred generally to idea of a growing restoration project. There were many, many questions and a good many were referred to Medendorp in the mill and to gardener Jaap de Bleecourt who roamed through the tulip gardens.

There also were many questions about the province flags. Music was provided over the public address system.

"It was a good shakedown for the staff," Fairbanks said, "and we learned a lot which will serve us well during Tulip Time. We had just about all we could handle, but we know more now about movement of people, what the questions are, and what they want."

In general, it was a comfortable operation for a beginning weekend. Yes, the visitors bought lots of film in the post-house, and I'm sure there were enough refreshments for those who wanted them."

Throughout the day, visitors were shown how the drawbridge works.

Several persons left money for windmill flour with instructions to mail a bag home.

Klomp dancers performed four times on Saturday on the blacktop provided for that purpose at the south entrance to Windmill De Zwaan. "Visitors were delighted with the dancing and we're very grateful to the girls," Fairbanks said.

Meanwhile, warm weather the past week or 10 days speeded the progress of the tulips, and tulip lane was a busy place Sunday as cars roused the eight-mile tour throughout the city, hitting such high spots as Holland High School, city parks, and Hope College campus. Park Supt. Jacob De Graaf expects the tulips will be at their peak for the four days of the festival.

It called attention to his efforts in upgrading the teaching profession and improving curriculum.

Frissel said it has been a rewarding seven years, one in which he has worked with many people who had given unselfishly of their time and efforts in helping the schools. He spoke of the fine cooperation of the staff, administration and the people interested in good education, and commented how naive he felt when he started.

"There have been many changes in the last seven years and I'm sure these changes will continue for this public school system has a great potential for change in its facilities, its staff and its leadership. You may count on my full hearted support," he said.

Earlier Frissel had announced word of receiving $128,830 in state aid, representing one-sixth installment of the total.
