Man assaults Hope student

No description yet available

A female Hope College sophomore student was attacked early Sunday morning while walking back to campus from an off-campus party she had been attending.

The Holland Police Department and Hope College Public Safety Department say the student was confronted by a man wielding a knife near 13th Street and Central Avenue sometime between 2 and 3 a.m. The Hope student said she attempted to run away from the man, but he pursued her and knocked her to the ground. Officers said the assailant threatened to sexually assault the student, but she fended off unconsciousness and the assailant fled. The student returned to campus and authorities were notified.

The student suffered an abrasion to the head from the fall and a laceration to an arm.

No description of the assailant is available at this time.

The investigation is being handled by the Holland Police Department with assistance from the Hope College Public Safety Department.

Mungall to lecture at IU

HOPE -- Dr. William Mungall, professor of chemistry at Hope College, will be among a group of science educators who will discuss trends in undergraduate chemical education on Friday, October 21 at Indiana University in Bloomington.

The forum on educating chemistry students will be part of a group of activities centering around the dedication of a new addition to the Indiana University chemistry building.

The five persons invited to participate in the forum have extensive experience and interest in the teaching of chemistry to undergraduates. Joining Dr. Mungall will be Dr. William Wylen, chairman of the chemistry department at Wellesley College, Wellesley, Mass.; Dr. Michael Doyle, professor of chemistry at Trinity University in San Antonio, Tex. and a former member of the Hope College chemistry faculty; Dr. John Kotz, Professor of chemistry at the State University of New York, Oneonta; and Dr. Steven Russo, associate coordinator of freshman chemistry at Indiana University. The moderator will be Dr. Dennis Peters, professor of chemistry at Indiana University.

Dr. Mungall has been a member of the Hope College faculty since 1971. He is active as both a teacher and a research mentor. He is chairman-elect of the west Michigan section of the American Chemical Society and is an active consultant for the chemistry industry.

Van Wylen essays published

GRAND RAPIDS -- The legacy of Dr. Gordon Van Wylen, the ninth president of Hope College from 1972 to 1987, will be remembered in a number of ways, but Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co. of Grand Rapids, Michigan has printed a distinctive commemoration of Van Wylen and his years of service to Hope and higher education.

"Vision for a Christian College," the 18th book in Eerdmans' Historical Series of the Reformed Church in America, has recently been published and contains 19 essays written by Van Wylen.

Once speeches and reports given by the former Hope president, the essays were edited for the book's publication by Dr. Harry Boonstra, the editor of "Vision for a Christian College" and an adjunct associate professor of English at Hope.

"A substantial part of (Van Wylen's) writing went beyond the routine presidential memo and thank you letter," Boonstra says in the book's preface. "A significant segment contained his vision for Hope College and for Christian education generally."

Lonise Bias to speak October 26

Lonise P. Bias, who will be visiting Hope on October 26, is the mother of the late Len Bias, the University of Maryland basketball player who died on June 19, 1986, just two days after being drafted by the Boston Celtics.

Mrs. Bias takes this personal loss as a mission to help others avoid her son's tragic end. She tours the country addressing issues on drugs, alcohol, family, hope, and love.

Mrs. Bias is not a woman filled with grief nor does she look for pity. She is a vivacious and dedicated woman full of energy. While traveling across the United States as a lecturer and consultant, Mrs. Bias challenges youth and adults to wage a war against substance abuse. She addresses the issue of peer pressure in an attempt to instill hope in the lives of youth and steer them away from substance abuse. She speaks directly to parents and adults reminding them that they are the real role models in today's society.

Mrs. Bias' message is positive. Motivation, inner strength, love and happiness are key words and vital to her as she relays her message to the public. Mrs. Bias is a dynamic and effective speaker. Her ability to impact an audience is undeniable.

Prior to taking on her mission, Mrs. Bias was employed by the largest banking institution in Washington, D.C., The National Bank of Washington. She was educated in the public school system of Washington, D.C. after which she concentrated studies in the area of religion at the Bible Institute in Washington, D.C. She is married and has three children.

For those interested, Lonise Bias will be delivering her address "A Message of Hope," on October 26, at 8 p.m. in Dimnent Memorial Chapel.

Truman scholarship applications available

Each state is guaranteed a scholarship for one student. The final selection is made in approximately late March or early April.

Hope has never had a Truman scholar but has had five students reach the interview level, and one student achieve the position of alternate.

In order to apply, students must submit a letter to Dr. James M. Zoetewey, Truman Scholarship Faculty Representative, Lubbers 206 by October 2. The letter must include a statement of career plans, a list of public service activities or other leadership positions, a current transcript, and a 600 word essay discussing a public policy issue of their choice.

Philadelphia is an experience

by Julie Thorns anchor News Editor

For twenty years, the Philadelphia Center has provided experiences for college students from GLCA schools in the way of internships and independent living skills.

Focusing on internships, the Center allows each student the opportunity to work full-time in his or her career choice. The student is able to learn skills of the trade, sample the environment and then explore his or her feelings and reactions to whether or not this is the right career choice.

Two classes are taken during the semester with the Center. One is an elective which meets one night a week. The other, meeting one day a week, is a city seminar with a liberal arts focus which uses resources such as museums and theaters within the city itself.

The combined internship and courses provide the student with sixteen credits transferable back to Hope.

Room and board varies because it is the students' responsibility to find housing. Upon arrival, students are set up in a hotel where roommates are met. The first week is then spent in search of housing. Students spread out all over the city, finding apartments or rooms to rent.

The second week centers on finding an internship.

Students attend workshops on how to develop a resume and handle a job interview.

The interviews that follow are competitive. Acceptance is not guaranteed; therefore, students may go through five interviews before actually being placed.

The Philadelphia Center provides not only valuable hands on experience in a career, but also a chance to explore life in a major city, thus benefitting from it's many cultural resources. For these reasons the Philadelphia experience is an opportunity of which any student should try to take advantage.

Kresge Foundation awards Hope $350,000 grant

HOPE — Hope College has been awarded a $350,000 challenge grant by The Kresge Foundation of Troy, Michigan toward the renovation of two existing campus buildings.

The $4.5 million project, which is currently underway, consists of converting the college's former library, Van Zoeren Hall, into a classroom building for several academic departments, renovating the nearby VanderWerf Hall and constructing a connecting link between the buildings.

The Kresge Foundation, an independent foundation, was created in 1942 by Sebastian S. Kresge. It is not affiliated with any corporation or organization. Grants are made to institutions operating in the areas of health care, education and the arts, humanities, social service, science and the environment, and public affairs.

"The Kresge Foundation has been a generous supporter of Hope College for nearly thirty years," said Hope College President John H. Jacobson. "We are grateful to the Foundation's trustees for their confidence in us."

Since 1960, The Kresge Foundation has awarded Hope College nearly $2.1 million in grants for construction projects.

This grant is contingent upon Hope College completing the fund raising for the project. Hope officials said they are within $1.5 million of raising the necessary funds.

The Van Zoeren and VanderWerf buildings are located west of the new Van Wylen Library. At the project conclusion, all three buildings will be connected to unify this major portion of the campus.

Academic departments that will be located in the newly renovated Van Zoeren Hall will include economics and business administration, education, sociology and social work. Space will also be provided for the college's academic support center.

Work in VanderWerf Hall will provide improved and new space for the computer science, mathematics and physics departments.

There will be major changes in the exterior facades of Van Zoeren and VanderWerf, each built in the early 1960s, to unify them with the Van Wylen Library.

The buildings will be air conditioned to allow year-round use. The project is scheduled for completion in January, 1990.

Baylor "Pie Man" caught

Sting operation catches cream pie crook

(CPS) — Baylor University police have gotten their revenge on a man who made extra money helping students "cream" professors.

In a "sting" operation, two undercover Baylor officers arrested "The Pie Man" who, through advertising in the student newspaper, chided on campus sidewalks, charged his customers $5 to hit professors in the face with cream pies.

He charged $30 to pie students.

Without identifying themselves, Baylor police hired The Pie Man "hit" Marketing Prof. Dr. James Hunt, and then arrested the man — whose name has not been released — as he lagged into Hunt's classroom September 30 wearing "a nylon pantyhose over his head with the legs hanging down" and firing a cream pie.

Officer M.E. Stewart reported.

Stewart said The Pie Man was "very quick, I think it even surprised the professor, who was asleep." He was able to dodge most of the pie," Hunt told the Baylor Lariat, the student paper. "Most of the pie hit the blackboard."

"Credit goes to Baylor (police) for making a very good sting operation," added Charles Capone, an economics professor pelted by the masked entrepreneur September 12 class in microeconomic theory.

The Capone incident convinced the Rev. Bradley Baylor's dean of Student Disciplinary Affairs, to call in the police. People, he explained, cannot burst into a classroom and totally disrupt an organized class.

Racism drives blacks from white campuses

(CPS) -- Many black students drop out of predominantly white colleges because racial discrimination leave them feeling lonely and isolated, Oberlin University researchers say.

"Selective, predominantly white institutions are very rarified environments," said Patrick Penn, dean of Oberlin's student support services. "A September 20 conference of the National Council of Educational Opportunity Associations in Washington, D.C., "They are basically white systems, and white systems are discriminatory to non-members." "

Although Oberlin's overall graduation rate is 70 percent, 20 points above the national average, only about 55 percent of the black students who enter the school earn their degrees. Inadequate financial aid packages, insensitive, sometimes hostile white student populations and poor academic support programs cause many blacks to leave white colleges before receiving their degree, Penn reported. His findings come at a time when efforts to expand opportunities for minorities are losing momentum, according to "One Third Of A Nation," a report issued in May by the American Council on Education and the Education Commission of the States. In response to the study and to the escalating racial tensions on scores of campuses during the last two academic years, many schools have increased efforts to recruit more black students for this fall. Some reports indicate the efforts are working. Minority admission at the University of Colorado reports a 34 percent increase in minority enrollment. But the number of black students at the University of North Dakota dropped by almost half this fall. "Metropolitan State College in Denver has not increased its 15.3 percent minority enrollment for four years, despite attempts to do so. The University of Illinois has been more successful in raising minority enrollment, but the percentage of black and other minorities is attending the school is still much smaller than the state's percentage of minorities. And keeping black students on predominantly white campuses, Penn contended, is the real trick. "Black students at Oberlin told Penn, whose study is called "Black Student Persistence to Graduation at Oberlin College," they felt their white classmates focused too much on their color and regard black programs as "separatist" activities that encourage isolation, Penn said. "Penn concluded that improved "retention can be gained only through programs affecting students after they are enrolled at Oberlin," such as academic support. "Black students often cite financial problems for leaving school, but the effects of financial aid packaging on retention are inconclusive, Penn said. "Grants, scholarships and work-study jobs have been reported to be positively related to retention, whereas large loans reportedly contribute to attrition. However, these relationships are weak," the report said. The researchers recommended changing financial aid packaging, developing programs to increase sensitivity about racial prejudice and promulgating student support services as ways to keep black students on mostly white campuses.

Join Our Family

There are a lot of cliches about people who work together being a family. At Saint Mary's it's more than a cliche. It's a reality that reflects the caring for we do our patients and the caring about within our staff.

We offer our nurses flexible scheduling, a comprehensive wage and benefit package, including up to $1,000 per year in nursing education assistance, and the opportunity to work in a number of specialty areas such as our diabetes unit, new critical care complex, Level II nursery, and neurotrauma unit.

Make your own sandwich at Izzy's Deli

If you've ever been taken to lunch by a professor, you've probably been to Izzy's.

Izzy's Downtown Deli, at 2 W. 9th Street, seems to be the perfect place for a professor to take his or her advisee, since it's close, moderately priced, and has good food. If you go by there at lunch you'll probably see a prof or two having a sandwich, salad, or a cup of Izzy's soup.

The sandwiches are the real attraction at Izzy's. You can choose from one of the sandwiches listed, or you can decide to make your own, from an assortment of different items. The pastrami and corned beef are exactly like those found in New York delis, and turkey, ham, and other meats are also available.

Add to that your choice of cheese and condiments, then pick a bread, from white to pumpernickel, including croissants and bagels. The combinations are endless. Other items are also on the menu, including a fairly extensive salad bar.

The soup is very good, and varies from day to day, while Izzy's desserts are even better. All in all, the food is well-prepared, although we found the hamburger to be a bit on the greasy side.

Also, service was a bit slow, and Izzy's hours are severely limited. They are only open for the lunch crowd and the early part of the dinner hour. While it may be hard for busy students to find time enough to stop by Izzy's Downtown Deli, it makes for a good change of pace close by campus.

Editor's note: the anchor rates businesses and restaurants in Beyond Hope on a scale of 1 to 5 "anchors," from poor to excellent. The opinions stated are not necessarily those of the entire staff. Beyond Hope reviews one restaurant or other place of business every other week, and welcomes responses or suggestions from both students and faculty.
In light of the anchor's recent struggle alongside WTHS to purchase the use of the Associated Press newswire, we at the anchor would like to express our feelings about the budgeting process of Student Congress and our advertising situation.

To begin, we feel that our advertising sales, which amount to about half of our newspaper's budget, should be credited to our organization. Although technically the money we earn, up to nine thousand dollars, covers that segment of our budget, surplus funds go back to Student Congress, to finance the deficit that all the student organizations have incurred over the past several years. For example, if the anchor makes ten thousand dollars instead of the budgeted figure of nine thousand, Student Congress gets that surplus money to help support their deficit - one that all the organizations are responsible for, not just the anchor.

We feel we work hard for our advertising dollars, since Congress says that we have to have an income. We also feel that much of the anchor's advertising is of service to the college community, such as the coupons we offer for local merchants.

However, advertising in the anchor does sacrifice room we could be using for more student journalism, and we often receive complaints about the amount of advertising present in the anchor.

Therefore, we feel that the surplus funds we do manage to acquire should be able to be used by the anchor to provide more services to the college community. We feel the associated press newswire, as an example, would be of value to Hope College students, to provide them with more state and national news, to expand the paper and provide better news coverage.

It is not as if Student Congress has to spend any more money to allow us to provide this service. Rather, all they have to do is grant us a higher target income to give us a slightly higher budget, so that we may utilize the AP news service. Without it, we are unable to legally provide national news of any scope to the college, since writing news summaries from papers such as the Chicago Tribune or Detroit News is an illegal action.

We at the anchor don't feel that this is too much to ask, for the benefit of everyone who reads the college newspaper. Not only do we feel that we should be free to delegate funds we acquire to services we wish to provide to the college, but we also feel that this particular cause, of providing national news in our publication, is of special importance to everyone at Hope College.

Dear Editor,

I am concerned when students feel on-campus employment opportunities are "not like a real job or anything." I am equally disturbed of us as employers place "less pressure to perform a task particularly well in an on campus job."

Kristen Patz's survey "Students Feel They're Worth More"

Students. You need to know your work contributions are essential to Hope's operation. In the Admissions Office we hire over 30 students each semester. Without their help giving tours, making and answering phone calls, and stuffing mailings, we would struggle to fulfill our role of enrolling a qualified freshmen class. I'll bet many other offices on campus would say the same. On-campus jobs are real jobs, important ones, too!

Perhaps those of you who feel on-campus employment is not a "real" job are really saying, "Sure it's work, but it is less significant because it has little to do with my career aspirations." Nothing could be further from the truth! Regardless of the tasks involved, all work is preparation for career and life. Doing your tasks well, no matter how menial they seem, reflects on your attitudes, values, work ethic, motivation and personality - all important traits to prospective employers. Since employers will be hiring you directly from Hope, I suggest students develop a strong arsenal of references during their on-campus employment years.

If students feel "less pressure to do a job well", we as employers are cheating them. We all know teaching is not confined to the classroom. It is our responsibility to expect students to take pride in their work and help them grow toward the professional standards that will be expected of them after Hope.

As always, I am happy to respond to a few quotes that might not represent the general student consensus. Still, I felt Hope students might be interested in one administrator's perspective.

You continue to impress me, Hope students, with your talents, personalities and motivation. Keep up the good work!

In front of my desk I have a Fred Basset cartoon taped up that captures the meaning of my least favorite word in the English language: opportunity.

In the first frame Fred's owner is standing up to his ankles in the surf. He is calling Fred. Fred is running toward him with his ears up, smiling and excited. In the second frame Fred's owner is grinning at the splash where Fred has disappeared under the water. In the last frame Fred is dog paddling with his ears floating, looking up at his grinning owner. Fred says, "You're standing on a rock, aren't you?"

More than once I've heard the knock of opportunity. Like Fred, I've bounded toward it with my ears flapping as a smile with excitement. Like Fred I go for an unexpected swim. Unlike Fred I usually don't take it so well. Fred's "You're standing on a rock, aren't you?" is the response of someone who knows he has been sucker punched once again and is not surprised. Fred takes it with the grim acceptance that he should have known better.

I know better so I don't run as fast anymore. I used to run when opportunity knocked. I'd throw open the door and realize that I'd opened the wrong door. While opportunity knocks, I'll be staring at the inside of the closet I've opened with the stack of moving bowling balls. I get flattened just as Fred gets wet.

And even people who wonder how pessimists are made.

People at Hope like to talk about all the opportunities that are here at Hope. You can be on Student Congress, be in Nykerk, be in honor societies, be Greek, write for the anchor or Opus or for the Inktings, or you can even go to Jacksonville Hole, Wyoming with the Ski Club. That's a lot of opportunities after the fact than I've missed.

All of it can expand your horizons and make you a better person. But it takes time. Since we're not a big football school and have to take classes, we can't juggle too many of these opportunities at the same time. Those we're skipping are of course the infamous missed opportunities of song and stage. "Missed Opportunity," should be the caption under my picture in the Mileston. I hear of more opportunities after the fact than before. For example, two different pros I have are big on pointing out authors and books to look into in my free time.

What free time? After studying for exams the last thing I want to sit down with is a book of poetry by Robert Penn Warren or a sociological treatise on the Jonestown suicides. I'm not knocking Warner or Jonestown or poetry and treatises in general, but my mind just isn't up to it. Instead I watch ESPN Sportscenter or maybe read a comic book and feel guilty for not feeling guilty about another missed opportunity.

I say that I feel guilty for not feeling guilty because I associate the word "opportunity" with guilt. I hate guilt, therefore I hate opportunity. Since I miss all opportunities all the time I could be spending all of my time feeling guilty for what I've missed.

An opportunity by American Heritage's definition is a "favorable set of circumstances." So a missed opportunity is a favorable set of circumstances that I've let slip away never to be present again. In other words I've blown a chance to improve myself or get ahead once more. I don't need all that guilt.

I hear people talking about their favorite book, a poem, a song, or a treatise in general, but my mind doesn't like it. It took me about 30 seconds of mental processing time to even get my thoughts turned away from myself and to my brother.

So, Trent would be marching. All of a sudden the thought came to me that I didn't know what the show was, the music or the marching -- was like. I didn't even know how good the band was this year, or if Trent had a solo. No, I would have heard if he had a solo. Or would I? I wasn't sure anymore.

My little brother was growing up even though I wasn't there. He was going to school, making friends, going out, living his life on his terms without me. And doing fine.

When I was in high school, Trent came to every one of my band concerts and musicals. He helped move me into Dykstra my freshman year. And sophomore year I found my GPA tumbled, my phone line would probably be busy.

Younger siblings must have the biggest bum deal. Once their earliest playmates leave (siblings who glorified in physically proving their sovereignty), they are left to basically fend for themselves.

I had trouble discerning which marching musician was my brother. At a birthday party that night, I knew only three of his friends. I was busy all day Saturday and didn't help him wash the car for homecoming. I missed a lot.

But the next night I was again the big sister. Trent came in my room, made space on my bed, and poured out the biggest worries of his just-eighteen-year-old heart: girls.

I didn't have much to say, but he kept talking. I didn't know what advice to give, but he still needed to talk to me. I was again part of his life. How should I be so lucky?

Yeah, I do. In a place like Hope College, people tend to be self-centered a little bit. It would help people to become a little more aware.

Yes, because people at our school are cut off from what's going on in the world. We're in our own little world, and students do read the anchor more than other newspapers.

Babette’s Feast
a filmgoer’s treat

by Diane Tague

Many movies attempt to leave you feeling content and satisfied with the simple little gifts life has to offer in the Babette’s Feast’, written by Isak Dinesen, (author of Out of Africa) does this successfully. Without being trite or mundane, “Babette’s Feast” tells the story of the two sisters who reside in a very small and quiet village in Denmark. Daughters of a minister, their socialization consists of regular worship services and meals with the church elders. Yet, the women are very happy with the lives they have chosen. The movie is filmed in three chronological segments. As young, beautiful women, they are sought after by every young man in the village. Although one falls in love with a soldier, and the other with an opera singer, both choose not to marry themselves. Babette gives into love and leave the village. I got the feeling the sisters would not want to spend their lives in the peaceful, isolated village serving, reading, playing piano, singing, and teaching the villagers. Their lives sound boring, but the sisters seem to experience a mysterious, seemingly mundane lifestyle. Thirty-five years later, the second segment of the film gives us a new character, Babette. Babette is a French cook who has been killed in the French Civil War and who needs a place to stay. Generally, the sisters agreed and let her in.

Babette brings renewed life into the village. Unlike other villagers, she challenges the grocer and the fish merchant to sell her the best products and although she is determined, she never offends anyone. If anything, the villagers admire her outward strength and confidence.

Fourteen years later brought us the final segment of the film. By far, this was the richest, most beautiful and entertaining segment. Babette won 10,000 francs in the French lottery. Thinking she would leave them, the sisters agreed to have Babette cook an authentic French meal. All the church elders and even the soldier, the other sister’s long lost love, were invited. It is not even fair to call this a meal. Babette transformed simple treasures of life such as meat, fruit, flour, and into art. She sculpted the feast as an artist molds the most delicate material into sculpture.

At first, the elders were revolted by the meal because of the alcohol and agreed not “to actually taste the food” or discuss the meal. Humor is brought into the film as the elders painfully resist commenting on how delicious the feast is. The soldier was the only person who dared to appreciate the meal. He complimented her on the exquisiteness of the meal, how delicious and perfect everything was. But it took a second glass of alcohol to make the elders finally break down and admit how much they enjoyed the meal. As one guest put it, “The dinner was like a love affair between the bodily appetite and the spiritual appetite.” When the dessert came out, I felt let down because the feast was no longer “Babette’s Feast.” Babette had spent her entire life successfully prepared the simple food, she succeeded in transforming spirit into the elders. Sensing the nervousness of the soldier, the meal was like “righteousness and bliss together.” Babette had realized that bliss was not evil, but good and right.

The movie was filmed with the same style grace and charm as Dinesen’s Out of Africa”. Dinesen had transformed a momentous beautiful story into a masterpiece which leaves the viewer truly appreciating the simpler thing: that life has to offer.

New dance prof Saurer brings L.A. style jazz to Hope

"One, two, higher!...one, two, higher!” orders Sue Saurer as her jazz students repeatedly run and leap across the wide floor in the Dow dance studio. Her students catch her excitement as she switches the music to begin their routine.

Saurer began teaching at Western Michigan University. In comparison, Saurer said, “the classes are smaller at Hope, allowing more focus in the individual. She stressed that the facilities are the same even though one would expect less from a smaller school. She also stated “the kids are more dedicated here” which is understandable due to the strength of the dance department.

Saurer received a Bachelor of Fine Arts at Western and studied at studios in California for two years.

Besides her position at Hope, she is also teaching part-time at the “Moving Company” in Grand Rapids.

To Hope’s studio she brings what she describes as an “L.A. style” which varies from a funky to a lyrical type of jazz. She said that her style of jazz focused on isolations, traveling across the floor and has a ballet base as opposed to a modern base, which is most commonly found at Hope.

“I would like to see the jazz program expand a little more. Jazz is often put on the back burner,” said Saurer. “I hope to see more people involved and want to expose them to a variety of styles which I incorporate in my class.

Saurer is well-liked by her students and for obvious reasons. Her enthusiasm for teaching combined with the new ideas she gives her students makes the “new Jazz II Beginning an appreciated addition to Hope’s dance department.

DeBruyn named to NASD board

HOPE – Maxine DeBruyn, associate professor of dance and chairperson of the department, has been named to the board of directors of the National Association of Schools of Dance (NASD), headquartered in Reston, Va.

DeBruyn is one of eight directors for the association which has a membership of 41 colleges, universities, and professional company schools. In 1985, NASD granted Hope’s dance department full accreditation.

NASD was established in 1981 to develop a closer relationship among schools and programs of dance for the purpose of examining and improving practices and professional standards in dance education and training. It is recognized by the U.S. Department of Education as the accrediting agency responsible for institutions and units within institutions offering educational programs in dance and dance-related disciplines.

DeBruyn is a Hope faculty member since 1965 and the originator of the college’s dance program, has been extremely active in her profession. Kletz gives its all for students

by Sally Davis

"We are always open to helpful suggestions from the students," Lucy Jongekrijg, the manager of the Kletz told me recently. She and I got together after my first column appeared (September 28) to discuss some of the areas I hoped to see modified or expanded in the future.

Our conversation was not for an article, but the outcome highlighted some of the students' main concerns. Ms. Jongekrijg's main concern is that so many of the Kletz events go unnoticed by students because they did not know about them.

"We advertise all of our events on table tents in Phelps, flyers in the Kletz and with signs on campus, we need help finding ways to reach everyone." As the manager, Ms. Jongekrijg wants to serve us all the best they can. But they need our feedback.

The Kletz exists for the Hope College community and wants to serve us all the best they can. But they need our feedback.

 PREGNANT?...SCARED?

 Today's teenagers and single young women are often caught in the middle of a social climate which pressures them to experiment with sex, but abandons those who become pregnant. They are told that their pregnancy is a "dead end trip" that should be avoided by abortion. This is not true, however, as many young mothers have enlisted the courage and support they need to carry their child to birth, care for the baby afterwards, or give him/her to other loving parents through adoption. The experience is one of loving sacrifice and deep personal growth.

 If you think you might be pregnant, we offer you a free and confidential pregnancy test. We offer also our friendship and understanding.

 Let us help you...give us a call...We care!

Hope's and MSU's football teams are linked by fate

BILL MEENGS

I'm back in the crease, after a two week hiatus. The first week was because the computer decided to eat everything I had written for that issue, and, of course, last week we were on break. This column will be just a few of my comments on things that have happened while I was out of the crease.

Major news is that, going into the Kalamazoo game, the Hope football team has yet to win a game. My theory about it, both are 0-4-1 going into the Kalamazoo game, is that Hope is somehow fused through fate with Michigan State. Think that by the way, can I have your pass reception from senior quarterback Mark Hahn; and Duy Dang rounded out Hope's scoring with a 32 yd. field goal. Appropriately, the theme of Homecoming this year was "the great comeback." Hope's first victory of the year seems well-suited to this title.

Hope's record now stands at 1-1 in the MIAA, and 1-4-1 overall. Hope is tied for second in the MIAA at 1-1; Albion is first at 2-0. Hope's next action is Oct. 22 at Alma; they then return home for and Oct.29 meeting with Adrian.

Hope wraps up their season on Nov. 5 against Olivet.

Football gets first win

Hope's football got their first win of the year last weekend when they beat Kalamazoo 17-3. It was perfect timing for the victory as it was homecoming for the team. Roughly 4300 fans, including many alumni, were on hand to watch the Dutch grab their first victory at the homecoming game.

Scoring for the Dutch were freshman Mark Van Wieren on a 5 yd. run; sophomore Jeff Schorfaar on a 43 yd. pass reception from senior quarterback Mark Hahn; and Duy Dang rounded out Hope's scoring with a 32 yd. field goal.

Women's CC tenth in nation

HOPE - The Hope College women's cross country team is ranked tenth in the nation among NCAA Division III colleges according to the season's first poll by the College Cross Country Coaches Association.

The Flying Dutch this fall, under first-year coach Mark Northuis, are bidding for their fourth consecutive Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association (MIAA) championship and NCAA Division III Great Lakes Regional crown. A year ago the Hope women finished ninth at the Division III national meet.

Hope is undefeated in dual meet competition this fall (5-0). The Flying Dutch won the Great Lakes Colleges Association Invitational and finished second to Alma of the MIAA at both the Hope Invitational and Tri-State invitational.

Hope will be competing in the Michigan Intercollegiate Championships at Grand Valley State University on Saturday.

Here's a list. Pick one.

1. I had a hard day.
2. I "aced" my first exam.
3. My roommate's a slob.
4. I had a great day.
5. I need a special gift
6. I'm dying for a hot fudge sundae.

Golf team crowned MIAA champs

by Bill Meengs
anchor Sports Editor

The Hope College golf team was crowned champion of the MIAA for the third consecutive year. Hope, which was under first-year coach Jed Mulder, won four of the seven MIAA tournaments and finished 73 strokes ahead of their nearest competitor, Calvin. Kalamazoo College senior Kevin VandenBerg was league medalist for the second year in-a-row, averaging 77 strikes per 18-hole round. Hope teammates Steve Knott, a senior from Niles, MI, and Magnus Lundblad, a sophomore from West Bloomfield, MI, were second and third in the league respectively. Knott by Berke Breathed had an average of 77.6 strokes per 18-hole round, and Lundblad checked in with an average of 78.3 strokes for 18 holes. Their scores rank amoung the top ten ever for Hope golfers under the current MIAA tournament format. Hope's all-time record is 76.9 strokes per round. It was set in 1984 by Paul DeDoer. Knott's average is fourth best ever, while Lundblad's is sixth best all time.

Hope will now wait until spring to see if they can qualify for the NCAA Division III national tournament for the third straight year. Hope has finished 17th for two consecutive years.

Steve Knott, senior, 2nd place, 77.6 avg.
Magnus Lundblad, soph., 3rd place, 78.3 avg.
Rolfe Timmerman, senior, 6th place, 80.7 avg.
Dave Tull, junior, 7th place, 80.9 avg.
Guy Samples, soph., 9th place, 81.4 avg.

Also competing in MIAA tournaments were Jason LePage, a freshmen from Grand Blanc; Scott Lone, a freshman from Lake Orion; and Andy Mogg, a freshman from Hastings.

Congratulations to all the Hope Golfers for another fantastic season, despite the fact that the new coach, Jed Mulder, was relatively inexperienced at the college coaching level.
