10-23-1996

The Anchor, Volume 110.08: October 23, 1996

Hope College

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.hope.edu/anchor_1996

Part of the Library and Information Science Commons

Recommended Citation

http://digitalcommons.hope.edu/anchor_1996/20

This News Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Anchor: 1990-1999 at Digital Commons @ Hope College. It has been accepted for inclusion in Anchor: 1996 by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons @ Hope College. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@hope.edu.
Admissions recruitment video inflates diversity

JODI MCFARLAND
editor-in-chief

A recently completed Admissions video targeted for recruiting prospective students paints a more diverse picture of Hope College than the reality.

It would appear to the viewer that the level of diversity in the video "Hope for the Future" is at about 17 percent minority students. This is over three times the College's actual 5 percent of minority students.

"The challenge there is you've got to accurately represent the institution, so you want to have different ethnic groups represented," said Admissions Director Gary Camp. "But not to the degree that it misrepresents their presence on campus."

Two out of the three student profiles in the video are minority students. The video is a combination of scenes from a similar video made for Advancement and filming done over the summer.

The high number of minority students pictured in the video could be attributed to the fact that many of the filmed students work in the Admissions office, Camp said.

Such was the case in the Admissions video for Kalamazoo College, a fellow member of the Great Lakes College Association (GLCA). "The diversity appears higher, it really is because some of the students that were working in the office that year happened to be a heavier multicultural component than has the student body as a whole," said the college's Director of Admissions Joellen Silberman.

"I guess if you want to get on something, we've got a disproportionate number of minority kids in our office," said Garrett Knoth, Associate Director of Admissions at Hope.

One challenge in Admissions literature is making the College appealing enough to the more ADMISSIONS on 2

MILESTONE misses discount windfall

JODI MCFARLAND
editor-in-chief

Publisher screw-ups won't yield big discounts to Milestone yearbook buyers, but in Milestone, either.

Milestone's Miles to Milestone yearbook buyers got a sizable refund on the $2,000 after errors were discovered in photograph placement on two pages of the freshmen section and 8 senior pictures were misplaced. The company provided more MILESTONE on 2

AIM and Greeks party with mocktails

RACHEL LAMB  and CARRIE TENNANT
staff reporter and campusbeat editor

On Monday night, Alcohol Issues Matter (AIM) held its second annual "Mocktail Party" in Phelps to kick off National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week.

"We're not really mocking mixed drinks, just saying you don't need alcohol in them to have fun," said Jori Kumpf ('99), a member of AIM and a "bartender" at the party.

Kumpf added that AIM strives to show students that there are people on campus that care about making people aware of alternatives to partying.

"We promote responsible use of alcohol. We're not anti-drinking or anti-partying," said Kevin Bugarin ('99).

AIM's Mocktail Party wasn't the only alcohol-free even to hit campus in the past week.

The Greeks also sponsored a Mocktail party in the Kletz last Wednesday as part of their Greek Week activities.

Each Greek organization entered their own drink "recipe" for the event. Independents, faculty, and staff tasted and judged the recipes and mingled with Greeks over pizza and card games.

"I thought that it was a great way for Greeks to bond and a great way for independents to interact with Greeks," said Erin Foley ('99), member of the Alpha Gamma Phi sorority.

The purpose of the AIM Mocktail Party was to get people interested in AIM and the activities they will be sponsoring this week, including the Free Zone on Wednesday and a keynote speaker, Jeff Vining, at 9 p.m. in the Otte Room Thursday.

"I think it's a great idea to promote responsibility with alcohol. I hadn't heard about [National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week] before, but now I know," said Craig Kopas ('99), party attendee.

The Greek Week Mocktail event provided an informal atmosphere for socializing and study-breaking in a non-alcoholic setting.

"I came because I was hungry, it was free, and I wanted to hang out with the Greeks," said event attendee Karl Rasche ('00).

Other students at the AIM party sampling Mexican Sunsets, Bloody Marys, Pina Coladas, Shirley Temples, and Cardinal Punch seemed to miss the point of the Mocktail Party. Many still did not know it was National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week, or even what organization was sponsoring the party.

WITNESSES end on the Dutchmen page 8.

Intermission, page 2.

Beach sweepers in Environmental Issues love our earth. Campus, page 2.

Haworth Center could add to parking crush. InFocus, page 3.

JODI MCFARLAND
editor-in-chief

Candidates square off

U.S. and State Representative candidates debated campaign issues with students and community members Tuesday night.

CARRIE TENNANT
campusbeat editor

Candidates, students and community members questioned fin-hand the political stances of local, state and U.S. Congressional candidates last night at a debate on campus.

90th District House Candidates Becky Arenas (D) and Rep. Jessie Dalman (R) began the evening, followed by 2nd Congressional House Candidates Rep. Peter Hoekstra (R) and Dan Kruyswijk (D).

Around 60 people gathered in Peatle to watch the debate and ask questions.

"I just changed my voter registration to Holland, and I really don't know a lot about the candidates except from the newspaper," said Kelly Jensen ('97). "To here to ask my questions and get a little more information, especially about the non-incumbents."

Even students registered to vote in their hometowns expressed the importance of the debates.

"I'm not registered in Holland, but I think that whenever we get a chance to hear a legislator speak, we should take it," said Karen Suyden ('97). "We can educate other people, not only ourselves, on issues that are important to us."

The debate was sponsored by the League of Women Voters and the Hope Democrats and Republicans.
Kemp kids rally to support GOP bid

Jeoff and Jennifer Kemp rolled into town around 9 a.m. last Wednesday to voice their campaign swing to speak about 100 Hope students and community members.

The children of Republican VP nominee Jack Kemp spoke on such issues as the moral failure of the Clinton administration, saying that a Dole/Kemp administration would change these failures.

Jeff Kemp, a former NFL quarter-back, is currently the head of a family foundation that would change these failures.

Despite the early hour, the audience in Maas Auditorium was estimated to be around 100. Hope students were able to attend. It was challenging to get enough Hope students to either slip class or get up early and come.

Also present in Maas Auditorium was State Representative Jessie Davis (R) and U.S. Representa-tive Pete Hoekstra (R). Jeff and Jennifer Kemp continued Wednesday on to Berrien County.

Drug bust made at off-campus house

Last weekend a Grand Valley State University student was arrested for sale of marijuana in an off-campus house also occupied by Hope students.

The bust occurred at 110 E. 15th, known as the "Knack House," was hit during the early morning hours Sunday by the West Michigan Drug Enforcement Team (WMDET), a regional police organization that includes officers from several area police departments.

Members of the team brought drug-sniffing dogs to aid in the arrest.

No Hope students were arrested or implicated in the incident.

Video falsely portrays minority presence

A female non-minority staff member for the office also sat in on the filming of a classroom with a lower number of students, he said.

"I feel like we're not misrepresenting the institution," Knuth said.

"If we could have shot during the school year we would have had the lower number of students, he said.

"To me, I think the issue is, 'Is what you're showing doing this something that couldn't happen?'" he said. "It's not necessarily a problem."

"To me, I think the issue is, 'Is what you're showing doing this something that couldn't happen?'" he said. "It's not necessarily a problem."

"One of these is to be pro-active in recruitment. During the summer, Admissions counsellors called nearly every minority prospective student.

"A second challenge is, quite frankly, because we are so predominantly Caucasian, it's less easy for minorities to look at Hope. They aren't sure they fit in the social experience in easily," Camp said.

"We felt like we're not misrepresenting the institution," Knuth said.

"It would be nice if we put photos of different ethnic groups on every page, but that would be misrepresentation," said Albion College's Director of Admissions Evan Lipp, Beverly Morse, Direct-er of Kenyon College's Admis-sions, agreed.

"That's cognitive dissonance, when what you're showing does not match the reality," she said.

"It went great," said John Mezeske, one of the students involved.

"I wish more people would have been there," Mezeske said. "I wish we could clean more beaches, because I'm sure the other beaches are dirty too."
The Race for the Space

Haworth Center traffic could further strain the parking situation

DAVE CLAUSEN

DAVE CLAUSEN

In Focus editor

The additions of the Haworth Conference Center and Cook Residence Hall will improve the face of campus, but visitor and student vehicles that will come with the package may serve to aggravate an already troubled parking situation.

The $15 million Haworth Center, which will be utilized primarily for academic conferences, meetings, and dining services, will have two parking lots installed at each end of the complex. There will be a total of 20 to 35 new spaces created at the center, but these two lots will not be open for student use.

"We don't consider having a vehicle as a necessity to having an education," said William Anderson, Vice President for Business and Finance.

The spaces will primarily be used by visitors staying at the center overnight, while those who are there for a few days will have their cars parked in other lots by a valet service. The service, which is expected to be used infrequently, will park the vehicles in the lots farthest away from the main part of campus.

And Cook Residence Hall, with plans to house approximately 180 students, will have no planned parking facility to serve students.

In addition, the College has announced intentions to discontinue the leasing of Centennial Park Apartments due to its substandard condition compared with other Hope housing. Cook Residence Hall will compensate for the housing loss, but there will be no replacement made for the loss of the 23 Centennial parking spaces.

But College officials maintain that the change should not have an adverse effect on the parking situation, according to Bill Anderson, Vice President for Business and Finance.

"There shouldn't be any more students at the College than there were before," Anderson said.

"There just won't be a lot of parking right adjacent to the facility. There are currently 847 student parking permits sold on campus, while approximately 1,110 parking permits have been sold to students. Although this may serve as an indicator to the cause of parking trauma, Public Safety cited several reasons for this policy.

"We've checked parking lots in the early morning and found spaces open," said Duane Terpstra, Director of Public Safety.

Another reason for the disparity between spaces available and permits sold are that some students buy two tickets because they get a different car during the course of the year, or that a student may have a registered car that stays home for most of the year, having a minimal impact on the parking situation. Other off-campus students purchase permits that are used only during classes.

Traffic to the center will be consistent, as conferences will be held there during the school year and in the summer. They will usually take place on the weekends, when there are fewer cars on campus. Anderson said typical conferences will host 30 to 40 people. The center will include conference and meeting rooms, a banquet hall, a food service that serves both students and visitors and a 50-room year-round hotel.

"Parking is very expensive and to build a new lot would cost four hundred to five hundred thousand dollars," Anderson said. "It's intended for both the community of Holland, and we'll be bringing in groups from outside Holland," Anderson said.

Additional visitor traffic will occur as the new 200 seat dining facility in Haworth is opened to the Holland community and wedding receptions are held there for friends of Hope.

Citing the high costs involved in creating a new parking facility, Anderson said that there are no plans in the works to do so.

"Parking is very expensive and to build a new lot would cost four hundred to five hundred thousand dollars," Anderson said.

Anderson cited two ways that this money could be provided: raising tuition or increasing the cost of parking permits.

"Raising tuition, he said, would not be fair to students without vehicles. The cost of permits would reach into the hundreds, to justify the facility.

While the administration has received feedback calling for additional parking, Anderson said that this is a problem common on college campuses.

"There hasn't been a year gone by that hasn't called for new parking, but it's an ongoing problem that will always be with us because we are all used to parking in our own garages," Anderson said. "And all of a sudden there is a walk and we're not used to that."
False Hope

Attracting minority students to a predominantly white school is a tough job. Admissions counselors don’t want to bring in anyone for whom Hope is not a good match. And balancing on the fine line between appealing to minority prospective so they look at the College more seriously and misrepresenting reality isn’t easy. But when the Admissions filming crew added a black male to a class for filming, they crossed that line. Not only did they docket the classroom to up diversity, but the planted individual is not even a Hope College student. The shot stepped away from reality not once, by planting a student in a class where he was not enrolled, but twice, by planting a person who is not, and has never been, a Hope student. It crossed the line by showing the College in a desirable light, but with dishonesty lurking in the shadows. This time around. Admissions has missed their mark. And balancing on the fine line between appealing to minority prospective only underscores what no one will deny: a diverse student body eliminates the Greeks. Maybe students don’t care if their opinions will not be permitted in the Anchor uncensored. Maybe students don’t care if the administration doesn’t always pass things through committees following procedures they dictate to student organizations (The Klooz). Maybe. Maybe it’s that students feel things are okay. Maybe it’s that the students don’t care that there’s a hair in their food at Phelps. Maybe students don’t care if the administration gives you your rep is but want to voice your concerns, please e-mail us at STUDCong.

False Hope

Dear Editor,

Jessie Dalman, Holland’s State Representative who is running for re-election, is sponsoring a bill that would end no fault divorce. This means that any time a couple wants to get a divorce blame has to be attributed to one side. I’m sure the rationale is that by making divorce harder that couples won’t get a divorce. Do you really believe that?

I believe that if a couple is going to get a divorce a law that makes them assign blame is not going to stop them. It’s just going to make it a harder process. Isn’t divorce already hard enough? Already kids are torn between two parents who don’t get along after a divorce. An-signing blame in a divorce will just make it harder for kids involved. If domestic violence is involved the victim would know that they have to face their aggressor in court. It’s already hard enough for women in that situation to get up the cour-age to leave abusive husbands. They don’t need another obstacle before they can leave an abusive relationship.

Divorce is already ugly, hard families for things to go through. We don’t need to make it any harder than it already is. That’s why I will vote for Becky Arenas for State Representative.

Susan McAndrew (‘00)

Constitution can’t speak for disinterested students

Dear Editor,

How many people actually know what happened with the smoking ban in the Klooz last year? I was asking myself this question on Sunday night while being interviewed about the ban (for a media class project). I find it difficult to understand how someone can pay close to $19,000 a year to come to Hope, and then not care what happens on campus while they are there. Maybe it’s that students know that Hope has a good reputation. Maybe it’s that the students feel things are okay. Maybe it’s that the students don’t care that there’s a hair in their food at Phelps. Maybe students don’t care if the administration

Do you love to draw sports? Political cartoons? Random doodles? Would you like to cartoon for the Anchor? If so, please contact the Anchor office at x1871.
Parenting pros do the balancing act by toting tots to the office

KIM POWELL
spotlight editor

Every Monday and Thursday, Chemistry Professor JoAnne Stewart grubs her briefcase and a day’s supply of baby bottles and diapers.

Making her way to Peale Science Center, Stewart and her three-month-old daughter Katie prepare for another day of ups and downs.

Since classes started in August, Stewart has been bringing Katie into her office. Although Stewart is taking the semester off from teaching, she still comes into her office to keep up with research.

Not alone

Thanks to the scheduling flexibility, Hope provides for parents, Stewart and her husband, Chemistry Professor William Polik are two of several faculty members that balance family and work by toting a child into work along with graded term papers and exams.

Professor Steven Bouma-Prediger in the Religion Department, father of three, generally doesn’t plan to bring his children into work with him.

But just two weeks ago Bouma-Prediger’s seven-year-old daughter Anna went to class with him, because of a scheduling conflict with the child care provider.

“Some people do probably wonder” when they see you working with a child beside you, but sometimes you have to Bouma-Prediger said.

Professor Deb Swanson works part-time. Dad brings Emma and a student is waiting for a conference, she said.

Bouma-Prediger remembers the days when he’d have to leave faculty meetings with a screaming child in his arms.

“If she’s squealing and screaming, you have to leave,” he said.

Working parents try to take daily challenges in stride.

“Every day a half dozen things happen and you take a deep breath,” Stewart said.

“You have a life is a series of things half done — half done laundry, half done e-mail.”

— JoAnne Stewart

Chemistry Professor

Stewart said. “Your life is a series of things half done: half done laundry, half done e-mail. It’s all about juggling life, according to Bouma-Prediger. The balancing act.

Nancy Nicodemus remembers doing the balancing act, and how difficult it was to teach a full load of classes in a half day in order to spend time with her children.

Swanson said, balancing is tough in spite of a supportive husband and co-workers.

“A student comes in for a conference and they expect to see only you. The student is trying to talk and you’re bouncing and she’s crying and you hope they understand,” she said.

Bouma-Prediger praised the support he gets from fellow faculty members and even students.

When you’re toting a crying child generally you get knowing glances from faculty who have been there in the past,” he said.

Things are changing

When Nicodemus started teaching over 30 years ago, she was the only woman with young children on the faculty.

“Women who had decided to go into academia didn’t have a family because of the assumption,” she said.

Now more than ever before parents with young children make up the College’s faculty and staff.

Resulting in the reinstatement of Hope’s policy concerning maternity leave.

Currently, new Moms get two weeks off for childbirth and an additional four weeks for family time.

While that gives six weeks of paid time off, many moms and dads take an unpaid sabbatical or partial leave for the first several months to spend time with the newest family member.

Some colleges have a policy that you cannot bring your child to work with you. But, Hope isn’t an ivory tower that bans kids from campus.

Instead, the College tries to help parents by putting them in touch with child care agencies and allowing them flexibility to make the arrangements that work best with their own schedule and family.

Good days and bad days

Katie is a “good baby,” according to Stewart. She sits in her stroller or on mom’s lap, cooing and smiling the day away — on a good day that is.

Those bad days inevitably come when a pile of work is sitting on the desk waiting to be done. The baby is crying, and a student is waiting for a conference, she said.

Bouma-Prediger remembers the days when he’d have to leave faculty meetings with a screaming child in his arms.

“If she’s squealing and screaming, you have to leave,” he said.

Working parents try to take everyday challenges in stride.

“Every day a half dozen things happen and you take a deep breath,” Stewart said.

“Your life is a series of things half done: half done laundry, half done e-mail.”

It’s all about juggling life, according to Bouma-Prediger. The balancing act.

Nancy Nicodemus remembers doing the balancing act, and how difficult it was to teach a full load of classes in a half day in order to spend time with her children.

Swanson said, balancing is tough in spite of a supportive husband and co-workers.

“A student comes in for a conference and they expect to see only you. The student is trying to talk and you’re bouncing and she’s crying and you hope they understand,” she said.

Bouma-Prediger praised the support he gets from fellow faculty members and even students.

When you’re toting a crying child generally you get knowing glances from faculty who have been there in the past,” he said.

Things are changing

When Nicodemus started teaching over 30 years ago, she was the only woman with young children on the faculty.

“Women who had decided to go into academia didn’t have a family because of the assumption,” she said.

Now more than ever before parents with young children make up the College’s faculty and staff.

Resulting in the reinstatement of Hope’s policy concerning maternity leave.

Currently, new Moms get two weeks off for childbirth and an additional four weeks for family time.

While that gives six weeks of paid time off, many moms and dads take an unpaid sabbatical or partial leave for the first several months to spend time with the newest family member.

Some colleges have a policy that you cannot bring your child to work with you. But, Hope isn’t an ivory tower that bans kids from campus.

Instead, the College tries to help parents by putting them in touch with child care agencies and allowing them flexibility to make the arrangements that work best with their own schedule and family.

WHAT A BABE: Chemistry Professor JoAnne Stewart and three-month-old Katie talk research with Chemistry major Mike Struck. (’97).

Doing it all

Swanson says you can do it all, but something has to give.

“Instead of working 70 to 80 hours a week you work 40 to 50,” Polik said.

You have to coordinate with your spouse as to who is picking the baby up and you have to set priorities, he said.

Swanson looks to her daughter as the reason for working as a full-time professor and a full-time mom.

“I do partly for my daughter, I want her to see that you can be both a professor and a mom,” Swanson said.

The struggle is a daily one but the rewards of spending time with your child and continuing the career you love make it worth it, Stewart said, as she turned to look at Katie.

Urbana to open a world of opportunity

NOELLE WOOD
staff reporter

As Chaplain Dolores Nasrallah walked the University of Illinois Urbana campus at the 1987 Urbana, she contemplated God’s call on her life.

She turned to a complete stranger walking beside her and asked him if he thought the longing she felt to serve God was a divine appointment to enter the ministry.

According to Nasrallah, Urbana is a life-line opportunity to see what God is doing in the world.

“Don’t be afraid to go,” Nasrallah said. “Don’t be afraid to open yourself up and allow God to speak to you. Go to get the big picture of God’s heart for the world.

As more than 17,000 students gather at the University of Illinois from Dec. 27-31, Student Outreach Director, Lori Fair, hopes students will be receptive to God working in their life, regardless of career goals.

Urbana is not for those who are planning to devote their lives to missions. It is for anyone who would like the experience of being surrounded by others who share the same faith.

Jalie Grahmann (’97) who attended Urbana in 1993 remembers the camaraderie among students.

“It was so cool to bump into people and know that they’re Christians,” Grahmann said.

Hope’s goal is to send 100 students to the event. The goal may be reached since about 75 have already signed up.

Thanks to a sizeable corporate donation the cost to attend has been lowered from the original price of $340 to $150. Transportation will be provided from Hope, and food and lodging at the University are all included in the fee.

The convention tries to facilitate mingling among students from different schools by dividing students into prayer groups.

Also, seminars will be given by speakers from around the world, on missions work. And for students interested in furthering their education in ministry, there is an opportunity to investigate over 250 ministry agencies.

Although Hope has never sent a group of students to the convention the College’s connection to Urbana goes back to its beginning 50 years ago, when Hope’s famous missionary Samuel Zwemer spoke to students at the first Urbana.

Students interested in Urbana should contact the Keppel House at 7829 before Nov. 1.
The English Department's Big Three, Jack Ridl, Pinckney Benedict and Heather Sellers, hosted a gathering of students, faculty and staff on Monday to celebrate the publication and reading of 25 essays that have been published in the college's literary magazine, "The Anchor." Ridl warned students that his approach shifts from the entry level pointing to intermediate. "I become this beast that relieves the debt of your grandmother to someplace over here and pay more attention to your rhythm," he said. "And then there's that great moment of 'Ahh! Loving your grandmothers means attending to rhythms.'" Benedict told students that his classes focus on workshop classes and students who really discovered themselves in profound ways in his workshops. "The three of us are really different, which is one of the best things you've got going for you here at Hope," Heather Sellers said. "I have been inexperienced in certain situations, but the light technicians did a good job of cutting down on the shadow," said Seth Gardner ('00). Unfortenently trains did go by during Saturday night's performance, but they did not detract from the performance as the actors kept going over the noise outside. The poles were made of by the actors as they leaned on them and swung off them during the dancing. The front row of the audience sat on folding chairs at cabaret-style tables, adding to the early 1900's feel of the show. The performance was so close to the stage that it was possible to brush the actors as they went by. The intimate surroundings made it possible for a small band consisting of woodwinds, bass, drums, and piano to effectively convey different moods of the story. Whether they were energetic and colorful or placid and sexy, the band swung effortlessly through the musically dominated show. "Cole" continues Oct. 23 to 26 beginning at 8 p.m. in the Physical Plant. For a night of entertaining by talented singers and actors, you can't go wrong with "Cole."
ALL COLLEGE SING

October 26th
8pm
the Knickerbocker
Tickets $2 @ the S.U.D
$3 @ the door

NO GIMMICKS EXTRA INCOME NOW!

ENVELOPE STUFFING — $600 - $800 every week
Free Details: SASE to International Inc.
1375 Coney Island Ave.
Brooklyn, New York 11230

PHENOMENON

ShowTimes: Fri. & Sat. 7, 9:30, & 12
Sunday @ 3
Admission: $2

Fifth Annual Harvest Celebration

Thursday, October 24
11:00 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.
$3.75 per person

Includes:
Roast pork with apple glaze
BBQ chicken sandwiches
Fresh salads
Desserts
Apple cider
...and a whole lot more!

---

Have sunshiney day!

courtesy of the Anchor

---

IMYM: A smile is the trick to the trade...sometimes it's fun! O.K., tomorrow morning is the new beginning! —CFP

---

Confucius says:
Recycle the Ank. He knows all.
Dutchmen amidst ten game winning streak

GLYN WILLIAMS sports editor

This year’s Flying Dutchmen soccer team has been referred to as the best this school has seen in a long time as they have rolled over everyone that has gotten in their way.

The squad is on a record setting pace to become possibly the best team in Hope College history. They have already broken the record for most goals in a season with 83, and they are on their way to win the most games in a season.

Sean Toohy (’00) is just fourth goals and nine points shy of breaking the single-season record in both of those categories, as he now has 19 goals and 44 points. Josh Sheldon (’97) is currently tied for the record for most assists in an MIAA season with eight.

Last Saturday’s soccer game was no different than their previous games, as the Dutchmen (14-0-1) rolled over the visiting Adrian Bulldogs, 4-0. Despite many chances and even more shots on goal, Hope was ahead only 1-0 at halftime.

“I was frustrated because the guys were playing absolutely great, but just not getting the ball into the back of the net,” said Coach Steve Smith. “We struggled to put the ball in the net and we won 4-0. That’s okay, we can have that.”

Hope could have very easily scored twice as often as they did, considering their 30 shots on goal.

“Part of the problem is that we were trying for eight goals all at once,” Smith said. “We decided at halftime, ‘Hey, let’s try to get the second goal before we get the eighth, and they did.’”

Sheldon delivered Clayton Berguma (’00) a pass that he used perfectly to slam into the back of the net. That goal was his third in the last four games. (“Sheldon has been playing real well lately,” said forward Blaire Richards (’98). “He has been up and down the field playing offense and defense. He is a solid player.”

Hope is currently ranked third in the nation and first in the Great Lakes Region. The toughest teams Hope might be faced with at some point in the playoffs is 12th ranked Kenyon College (9-2-1) and number 18 Ohio Wesleyan (5-1-2).

Smith and his players are not concerned with those two teams as they are with Olivet, whom they face next Saturday.

Esteves takes new starting role in stride

DAVE GABRIELSE staff reporter

Dean Esteves (’99) came to Hope in the fall of last year in the hopes that he would soon be the starting quarterback. He felt that he had the ability to be at the helm of the team, and coming to Hope would provide him with the atmosphere to do so.

With Esteves taking the starting role since the Homecoming game on Oct. 12, it has caused many people to think that he and Justin Wormmeser (’99) don’t get along.

Esteves feels the season is progressing from week to week. Although he doesn’t like the aspects of being 2-4, the league play gives them a chance to start over.

“We have to feel confident that we can win, and go from there,” Esteves said.

The football team is beginning to get things together. Esteves feels the season is progressing from week to week. Although he doesn’t like the aspects of being 2-4, the league play gives them a chance to start over.

“We’re not even thinking about Kenyon right now,” Smith said. “The only game we are really worried about right now is Olivet and that’s the way we have to be as a team,” he said. “I mean, first of all, we haven’t even qualified for the national tournament yet, and second of all, if we start looking ahead right now we’ll probably drop to Olivet,” Smith said.

“Esteves just takes things in stride, and whatever happens is okay. I am never nervous when I play,” he said. “It is fun to play with these guys. I have played with them for what seems like forever,” Esteves said.

Esteves’ plans for after school are uncertain as of right now. He is thinking of a business major, but like many college students, he changes his mind every day.

The Traveling Dutchmen

Women’s Soccer- The Flying Dutch shut out Adrian College 9-0 last Saturday afternoon to improve their record to 7-2 in the MIAA and 8-6-1 overall, a remarkable turnaround from 0-4-1 earlier in the season. Tracy Phelps (’97) and Lauren O’Dowd (’97) scored two goals apiece, while five others scored one goal apiece.

Volleyball- Hope (1-5 overall) lost to rival Calvin College over the weekend 13-15, 15-10, 15-8, 15-12. The Flying Dutch and the Knights are currently tied atop the MIAA with 9-1 records. The home team is playing at Calvin College on Wednesday.

Football- The Flying Albiton on Saturday scored touchdowns came via the two of Brandon Graham (’98) and Dean Esteves (’99).

Cross Country- Both teams competed together in the Wisconsin-Parkside Invitational on Saturday. The men’s team finished 11th in a field of 30, while the women finished ninth amongst a field of 29.

The Anchor October 23, 1996

Troubled? Let the bicycle-therapists at highwheeler ease your pain!

Fall Tune-Up Special! Now $29.99 (Was $39.95)

highwheeler 380 Chicago Drive - right behind Russ’ Eastown 396-6084/ www.highwheeler.com e-mail: wheel@highwheeler.com

We struggled to get the ball in the net and still won 4-0. That’s okay, we can have that.

—Steve Smith

Men’s soccer coach

GRELRED LIGHTNIN’ Steve Coy (’98), races past a hapless Bulldog as John Conlon (’97) looks to see if help is needed. The Dutchmen (14-0-1) are ranked third in the nation.

ANCHOR PHOTO BY ZACH JOHNSON

Anchor photo by Zach Johnson

“Anchor” by Zach Johnson

The Traveling Dutchmen

Women’s Soccer- The Flying Dutch shut out Adrian College 9-0 last Saturday afternoon to improve their record to 7-2 in the MIAA and 8-6-1 overall, a remarkable turnaround from 0-4-1 earlier in the season. Tracy Phelps (’97) and Lauren O’Dowd (’97) scored two goals apiece, while five others scored one goal apiece.

Volleyball- Hope (1-5 overall) lost to rival Calvin College over the weekend 13-15, 15-10, 15-8, 15-12. The Flying Dutch and the Knights are currently tied atop the MIAA with 9-1 records. The home team is playing at Calvin College on Wednesday.

Football- The Flying Albiton on Saturday scored touchdowns came via the two of Brandon Graham (’98) and Dean Esteves (’99).

Cross Country- Both teams competed together in the Wisconsin-Parkside Invitational on Saturday. The men’s team finished 11th in a field of 30, while the women finished ninth amongst a field of 29.

The Anchor October 23, 1996

Troubled? Let the bicycle-therapists at highwheeler ease your pain!

Fall Tune-Up Special! Now $29.99 (Was $39.95)

highwheeler 380 Chicago Drive - right behind Russ’ Eastown 396-6084/ www.highwheeler.com e-mail: wheel@highwheeler.com

We struggled to get the ball in the net and still won 4-0. That’s okay, we can have that.

—Steve Smith

Men’s soccer coach