GEO. H. SIPP, City Clerk.

A Citizens' Fire Brigade.

At Wakefield, Mass., a fire brigade has been formed among the citizens for the mutual protection of property, the inspiring principle of the association being that five minutes' work at the commencement of a fire is better than an hour's work after the conflagration is in progress. Each member of the brigade is provided with a small hand pump, and proceeds to the fire on the first sounding of the alarm. Great rivalry exists among the members of the company to arrive first at the scene of action, and to stimulate this praiseworthy emulation, a prize is awarded to him who succeeds in playing "first water" on the flame.

The association has already done some very good service, and quite a number of fires have been put out before either of the two hand engines of the town have arrived at the scene. If more of our country villages could boast of such protective associations, we should see fewer accounts in the papers of houses and barns destroyed, and the reduction in the insurance rates would very soon pay the cost of all the apparatus and the expenses attending the organization.

Liippincott's Magazine.

There is a lavish amount of entertaining reading in Liippincott's Magazine for June. In "Vagaries of Western Architecture," Frederic G. Mather takes up the history of a representative Western city, "Joinwater," which is apparently a pseudonym for Cleveland, and traces its growth and social changes during the ten decades of its existence, as exemplified in the successive styles of building adopted by its citizens, from the log hut of the first settlers to the "Newport Villa" of the present day. The illustrations, including a fine frontispiece, exhibit the development from one style to another through successive modifications at a glance, and help to render the article a real contribution to that social history of our country which is now attracting wide attention.

"The London Season" is capably described by Norman Pearson. "Poor Jack: His Joys and His Sorrows," by Franklin North, carries us to the other end of the social scale, and depicts the condition and peculiarities of the sailor under its pathetic as well as humorous aspects. Kate Hillard gives an amusing description of "A Roman Pension," with its queer arrangement of rooms and its cosmopolitan inmates. "A Night with Remeny!" by L. J. S., will be found especially delightful by all who have ever listened to the playing of the great Hungarian violinist. "Animals Extinct Within Human Memory," by C. F. Holder, is an interesting paper of a popular scientific character, and Mrs. Margaret J. Preston's account of the American sculptor Ezekiel, whose portrait bust of Liszt is now on exhibition in New York, is timely and appreciative.

St. Nicholas for June is crowded with pictures, and appropriately ushers in the summer with an interesting article, by I. N. Ford, on the Tribune "Fresh-air Fund," through which so many thousands of poor city children have been enabled to taste the pleasures of a two weeks' vacation in the country. The latter also contributes three drawings for a poem on the same subject, by Margaret Johnson, called "A Beautiful Charity."

The Frontispiece is a charming picture by Miss L. B. Humphrey, illustrating Miss Mary J. Jacques's verses, "Grandmother's Garden"; and there is a Decoration Day poem by Celia Thaxter, Harry M. Kelfer's popular "Drummer-Boy" sketches are revived in this number with an entertaining paper entitled, "First Days in Cam." Frank R. Stocton writes an exciting boy story, "On the Refuge Sands," with a shipwreck and a rescue; while the girls will be interested in "The Baptist Sisters," by Sarah J. Prichard, which tells of a blue boat, a tornado, and how some money was found in a well.

Young natural historians will read with profit Ernest Ingersoll's "A Good Model," and the silk-culturists will turn eagerly to learn about the working of the "Boys' Silk-Culture Association of America," in the "Work and Play" department.

Among the rest of the contents are contributions and drawings by Maurice Thompson, Malcolm Douglas, J. G. Francis, R. B. Birch, and many others.

Several of the pictorial features of the June Century are of uncommon interest, like the frontispiece portrait of Tennyson after Woolner's bust, and the other full-page pictures in the profusely illustrated paper by Edmund W. Gosse on "Living English Sculptors," also Sever's sketch of Keats in his last illness, accompanied by a sonnet by Miss Edith M. Thomas, and a portrait of the artist-friend Severn. Of descriptive interest, beside, are the sixteen or seventeen cuts which reinforce H. H.'s concluding paper in her history of the ruin of the Franciscan Missions in California, and the illustrations with George W. Cable's account of the commercial growth of New Orleans since 1814, under the title, "The Great South Gate."

Henry James Jr., in a critical essay on "The Correspondence of Carlyle and Emerson," evolves out of their letters two well rounded and charmingly characterized philosophers.

Poems are contributed to the number by John Vance Cheney, Edith M. Thomas, Frances Hodgson Burnett, H. C. Bunner, and Caroline

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

THE EAST.

WILLIAM E. SAWYER, an electrical inventor of a universal repellent, has just died in New York. He was under sentence of four years' imprisonment for having shot Dr. Theophilus Steele, about three years ago, but had not been sent to the penitentiary pending an appeal for pardon based upon the value to the country of his inventive talents. There are 80,880 Odd Fellows in Pennsylvania.

A New York man has brought his fourth suit in six months to recover damages for the alienation of his wife's affections, a different man appearing as defendant in each action. The claims for damages vary from $5,000 to $30,000.

By the death of the venerable Bishop Jesse T. Peck, which occurred in Syracuse, N. Y., the other day, the Methodist Episcopal church loses one of its foremost leaders and most beloved members. Bishop Peck was born in Middlefield, N. Y., in 1821, and was licensed as a local preacher in 1841. He became a Bishop in 1872. His wife, Mrs. Peck, flour mill, Stauntonville, Ct., and three tenement houses were burned. Loss, $50,000; insured for $40,000. The Parrott Varnish Company's factory, at Bridgeport, Ct., was damaged by fire to the amount of $50,000.

The steamer Granite State, plying between New York and Hartford, was burned to the water's edge at Goodspeed's Landing, on the Connecticut river, the flames spreading with such rapidity as to overtake at least four persons, who were burned to death. One lady jumped into the river and was drowned. The loss on the steamer is $55,000; on the cargo probably as much more. Seventeen gamblers and lottery men pleaded guilty at New York, and were sentenced to from ten to thirty days in the penitentiary, with fines ranging from $750 to $100. Mrs. Lydia Pinkham, one of the largest advertisers in the United States, has just died at Lynn, Mass., aged 64 years. Her yearly profits from her patent medicine business are said to have amounted to $300,000.

THE WEST.

A CYCLONE which wrought great devastation swept over sections of Wisconsin and Illinois on the evening of May 18. The greatest damage was inflicted upon the city of Racine, Wis. The storm struck the northwestern portion of the town, destroying about one hundred and fifty houses and fifty barns, killing twenty people or more and causing serious injury to about one hundred persons, many of whom will not recover. A correspondent, describing the onset of the terrible visitant, says: "The day was ushered in bright and cool, with a fresh wind blowing from the southwest. During the afternoon the temperature was about 80 degrees, and about 6 o'clock, when heavy masses of clouds, which gathered in the west, portended a storm, the air was oppressively warm. The cyclone was announced by a breaking of the clouds, which took on a whirling motion, and struck the earth with a noise which might be compared with the roar and rumbling of a thousand railroad trains thundering over a bridge. The path of the storm, is a little over half a mile long, and perhaps a quarter of a mile wide. In this territory here and there a building is left standing. All brick and frame alike, collapsed, and their sites are marked only by heaps of formless debris. Many occupants of the houses escaped by seeking the cellars and other places of comparative safety, but the cyclone came with such lightning quickness that many were killed before reaching the cellars. In only a few cases were houses moved from their foundations. Those in the center of the storm center simply exploded and fell in ruins where they had stood. Some nearer the circumference were turned around, and some light articles, such as wagons, were swept into the lake. The cyclone as it moved from the city out upon the waters of Lake Michigan presented a grand spectacle, such as is seen but once in a lifetime. The whirling columns of air seemed monster wreaths of smoke, as they whirled over the watery expanse. All the physicians of the city responded nobly to the calls for assistance, and did what they could to alleviate the sufferings of the wounded, who were at once conveyed to St. Luke's and St. Mary's hospitals. The dead were taken, some to the houses of friends and some to the Court House."

The attempt to remove the headquarters of the International Young Men's Christian Association from New York to the West was defeated in the annual convention of the association at Milwaukee. Jere Dunn, who killed Elliott, the bruiser, some weeks ago, has been acquitted by a Chicago jury.

THE SOUTH.

A TERRIFIC hail-storm passed over the eastern section of Maryland, and played havoc in the extensive peach orchards in that locality. In some parts the hail covered the ground an inch deep, and stripped thousands of peach trees of their fruit-blossoms. One of the large growers lost 10,000 baskets of peaches by the storm. Many of the smaller trees were torn up by the storm.

The Wilmington (Del.) City Council brought the Western Union Telegraph Company to terms by directing the City Auditor to remove the poles from the streets unless the tax of $1 per pole was paid. A verdict of not guilty was returned by the jury in the case of Congressman Phil B. Thompson, Jr., who killed Walter H. Davis at Harrodsburg, Ky., because of his alleged criminal intimacy with Mrs. Thompson. The crowd in the court room yelled itself hoarse in approval of the verdict.

A JUDICIAL execution, the surroundings of which were of more than the usual horror, occurred at Pittsboro, Miss. Henry Fleming, who was convicted of the murder of a man named Gardner, attempted to anticipate his fate, and while on the scaffold cut his own throat with a penknife, inflicting a terrible wound. The wretched man was attended by a physician, and as soon as his wound had been dressed was lawfully strangled. I. N. Dehart's planing mill and residence, Mrs. Cronin's grocery, and J. K. Smalley's carriage shop, Nashville, Tenn., were reduced to ashes. Loss, $30,000.

THREE murderers were sentenced at Orangeburg, S. C., on June 22. Richard Jeffcoat for the murder of Louis Bumph, Wm. Trezevant for the murder of Frank Mitchell, and Horace Hall for the murder of Daniel Glover. Two judicial executions occurred in Georgia on Friday, May 18. Henry Knight was hanged at Lexington for the murder of Edward Hunter, and Joseph Cohen at Waycross for the murder of his wife. Twenty-four persons were poisoned at a church festival in Chattanooga, Tenn., none fatally.

POLITICAL.

WASHINGTON Telegram: A gentleman who recently talked with Senator John Sherman regarding the political situation in Ohio says he positively declines to be the Republican standard-bearer this fall. Mr. Sherman has faith in his ability to carry the State for Governor, but concedes that there is danger that the Legislature will be Democratic in which event, if he should be elected Governor, the Democrats would secure both Ohio Senators and the organization of the United States Senate.

In an interview the other day Congressman Henderson, of the Third Iowa district, expressed the opinion that the Republican State Convention, which meets June 27, would renominate most of the retiring officers, and would not make any declaration in favor of coercive legislation. He believes that Iowa, which sent a solid Blaine delegation to the last National Convention, will send an unpledged representation to that of 1884.

The Kentucky Democratic Convention, in session at Louisville, nominated ex-Congressman Proctor Knott for Governor. The plan form, after endorsing the principles enunciated by the National Convention of 1876, and which were reaffirmed in 1880, pledges liberality toward the public schools, and recommends the calling of a convention to amend the State constitution so that it shall be more in accord with the spirit of the times.

The Prohibitory Liquor amendment to the Pennsylvania constitution was defeated in the State Senate, by a vote of 21 yeas to 18 nays—less than a constitutional majority.

THE Garfield Monument Committee of the Army of the Cumberland have selected J. Q. A. Ward, of New York city, as the artist to design and complete the monument at a cost not to exceed $50,000.

In the synod of the Reformed Presbyterian Church at Philadelphia, the report on the signs of the times stated that Nihilism in Russia, Socialism in Germany, Communism in France, and Fenianism in Ireland were matters of regret, and that the United States was in a good political condition, even considering that Utah Territory and the Omaha Community were within its borders. Cuban newspapers complain of the quality of American food imported, and ask the Government to enforce the regulations.

FOREIGN.

A PROFOUND sensation has been caused in Ireland by the message from the Vatican containing words of disapproval of the prominent action of some of the Irish prelates and priests in reference to the National movement, and in a pointed manner regarding their assistance to the Parnell testimonial fund. Condemnation of the action of the authorities at Rome is general, and there is boldness and significance in the declaration of the pro-Catholic organ, the Freeman's Journal, in saying that the Pope's circular is "The most important document since Adrian's famous Bull. The Vatican is grossly misinformed. If it censures the illustrious and beloved Archbishop of Cashel, it must also censure nine other distinguished prelates and the entire priesthood of Ireland. All must obey the Pope's command, but the regeneration of Ireland will yet be effected by the union of priests and people. The explosion of a dynamite bomb during the progress of a public fête in a village near Lisbon, Portugal, killed four persons and injured several others. The North German Gazette continues its attacks upon the character of the American hog, which is unfeelingly represented as an incorrigible disseminator of trichinias. Fitzharris, the Dublin car-driver, was convicted as accessory after the fact to the Phoenix Park murders, and sentenced to life penal servitude.

It is alleged by the London Times that an attempt was recently made to destroy an emigrant steamship plying between Liverpool and New York, a box having been given in charge of the ship's steward by some unknown man, under circumstances that aroused suspicion. Investigation proving that it contained an infernal machine. The story is not well authenticated, and steamboatmen on both sides of the Atlantic denounce it as a senseless canard. A treaty of peace between Chili and Peru has been signed, the latter conceding Tacna and Arica to the conquering power for a term of years.

JAMES MULLETT, Edward O'Brien, Edward McCaffrey, Daniel Delaney and Wm. Moroney, who pleaded guilty to the charge of conspiracy to murder, were sentenced at Dublin, on May 17, to ten years' penal servitude each. Thomas Doyle, confessedly guilty of a similar offense, was sentenced to five years beyond the seas. Matthias Brady, accused of threatening the life of the foreman of the jury which convicted his brother Joe, pleaded guilty, but the crown and the intimidated juror assented to his discharge. This ended the labors of the special panel summoned to try the assassins of Lord Cavendish and Under Secretary Burke, and the jurors were all thereupon discharged. King Cetewayo's peep into civilized methods as prisoner and guest of her Britannic Majesty has not proved of much benefit to him in his efforts to re-establish his power in Zululand. His brother, Ohama, and another insurrectionary chief named Utebeu united their forces to defeat the army of Cetewayo, whom they defeated with great loss in a pitched battle, recently. Advice from Asia report another encounter between the troops of the Amer of Afghanistan and the Shinwaris, in which the Amer was defeated. Seven hundred Shinwaris were killed and their heads sent to the Amer of Kabul. A SETTLEMENT of the Mexican debt to English bondholders is announced. New 6 per cent bonds are to be issued for half the old 3 per cent debt, and the English agree to make a new loan of $20,000,000 at 9 per cent, guaranteed by a percentage of the customs duties. Daniel Curley, another of the Phoenix Park assassins, was hanged at Dublin, May 18. In a letter to his wife he said he would let his secrets die with him, and that he would die in peace, forgiving his enemies. An officer of the Russian army, who had been arrested on the charge of being a member of a military revolutionary club, made disclosures upon his examination indicating that the organization was an extensive one, although it has no connection with the Nihilists. The police of St. Petersburg claim to have unearthed a plot to assassinate the Czar on the day of his coronation.

ADDITIONAL NEWS.

THREE months ago Pierce Lanier, Sr., was murdered in Livingston parish, La. His two sons, Guion and Pierce, suspected the brothers James and William Curley as the assassins, and in a short time slew the former. William Curley and his brother-in-law Robert Morrison, lay in ambush for the Laniers, and in a fight which resulted the two brothers and William Curley were killed.

The priests in Canada are violently denouncing the attempt that is being made to affiliate all the Irish societies in the Dominion with the new League formed at Philadelphia. They threaten the terrors of church discipline to their congregations, and urge that as Canadians and loyal British subjects the Irish people there should not join a questionable organization. The people resent the dictation, and it now looks as though a bitter struggle between clergy and people is unavoidable.

WALTER EVANS, of Louisville, Ky., has been appointed by President Arthur as Commissioner of Internal Revenue, vice Green B. Rahm, resigned. Mr. Evans is a lawyer by profession, served in the Federal army during the rebellion, has been a member of both branches of the Kentucky Legislature, and received the Republican nomination for Governor of the State four years ago. He was one of the 306 Stalwarts who stood by Grant in the Chicago Convention.

Justin McCarthy now favors the formation of an organization to assist in furthering the Parnell testimonial. The Town Council of Dungarvan disapproved of the Vatican pronouncement, alleging that it would separate priests and people and aid the schemes of secret societies. The Spanish Government has agreed to pay the indemnity for damage done to property in Cuba in which American citizens were interested, and an appropriation of $520,000 will be inserted in the Cuban budget, that being the unpaid balance of the award made by the Washington Commission. The Marquis of Landsdowne will succeed the Marquis of Lorne as Governor General of Canada, and will leave England for the Dominion in October next. Archbishop Croke declares that his interview with the Pope has not altered his opinions or position on the Irish question. William Chambers, the noted encyclopedia publisher and author, died Edinburgh, aged 81. King Cetawayo has encountered a second disastrous defeat in Zululand.

At Denver, Col., the trial of William H. Bush, ex-Senator Tabor's partner in the Windsor Hotel, and until recently manager of the Tabor Opera-House, on the charge of having embezzled $2,000 from the opera-house while manager, resulted in a verdict of acquittal after five minutes' absence of the jury. The suit was brought by Mr. Tabor as the result of a quarrel between himself and Bush, growing out of the refusal of Mrs. Bush to associate with the new Mrs. Tabor, and has excited in Denver a great deal of feeling against Mr. Tabor, it being the general impression that the prosecution was malicious and groundless. So high has the feeling run that the Denver club, the most prominent organization of the kind in the city, has expelled Mr. Tabor from its membership, adopting at the same time a resolution to the effect that the expulsion is due to the fact that he married a woman with whom members of their families could not associate, and that the object of the club was thereby set aside. Whitewood river, running through Deadwood City, overflowed its banks. That portion of the town up the gulch was badly wrecked by the rushing waters. Several bridges were washed away, and serious damage to other property. Four lives were lost. Crook City suffered severely. The property loss is estimated at $50,000. The explosion of a boiler in the Wolverine paper-mill at Detroit, wrecked the building. One new one—and killed the engineer and fireman. The damage to the mill will amount to $60,000.

ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

The Annual Reunion at Washington.

Gen. John M. Newton Elected President for the Ensuing Year.

About 500 members of the Society of the Army of the Potomac attended the fifteenth annual reunion of that body in Washington. The parade was a splendid feature of the exercises. The veterans, about 300 of them escorted by the United States troops and the District militia, paraded some of the principal streets, and passing by the Executive Mansion were reviewed by President Arthur. The veterans were also given a reception by the President, who was introduced to them in the blue-room.

At the business meeting of the society quite a spirited contest arose over the election of a President for the ensuing year. Gen. Mann, of North Carolina, nominated Gen. John M. Newton, and Maj. Stone nominated Gen. Grant. The eligibility of the latter for the position was at once questioned, he being only an honorary member of the society. Gen. Newton was elected, receiving 155 votes to 147 for Gen. Grant. Brooklyn, N. Y., was selected by a rising vote, as the next place of meeting.

The exercises in the evening at the National Theater consisted of a poem by George Alfred Townsend, and an oration by the Hon. Martin Magnus. Every available seat in the theater was occupied. Mr. Townsend's poem was greeted with much applause, especially those portions dwelling Lincoln, the martyred Commander-in-Chief of the armies, the vast audience listening repeatedly cheering and waving their hats. Maj. Magnus, the orator, was enthusiastically cheered throughout his effort.

At the conclusion of Magnus' oration, which was cheered at every point, Gen. Sherman was called for. He came forward and made one of his characteristic speeches. He addressed the gathering as "friends and comrades in a common cause," and made his first joke by stating that a neighbor on the platform had told him they did not want to hear from bunnymen to-night. He then, in a quiet way, twitted the Potomac fellows for taking too much credit to themselves for the suppression of the rebellion. He thought the great West contributed a little bit toward winning Jeff. Davis and his followers. "We of the West," said he, "have a fancy that the Mississippi is considerable of a stream. We believe that its arms, the Ohio and Missouri, embrace a large scope of country. We know that it is densely populated. We know that it is peopled by intelligent, industrious and sober classes. They think themselves of some importance. When they were cut off from the Gulf of Mexico and the ocean, I assure you that the opening of that river to New Orleans, by the joint efforts of the army and navy of the United States, substantially achieved the success of the cause for which we fought."

Gen. Fitz John Porter's old corps—the Fifth—adopted a resolution urging his restoration to the army.

The second day of the reunion was devoted to an excursion to Mount Vernon during the day, and a banquet in the evening.

GEORGE ALFRED TOWNSEND'S POEMS.
The poem of George Alfred Townsend was a tribute to Abraham Lincoln, Commander-in-Chief of all the armies. It was a piece of smoothly-flowing verse, and is undoubtedly one of the best productions of the poet-journalist. It is as follows:

Civil soldiers, reassembled by the river of your name,
Ye who saved the virgin city bathed in Washington's clear name!
Which of all your past commanders doth this day your memory haunt?

Scott, McDowell, Burnside, Hooker, Meade, McClellan, Halleck, Grant?

There is one too little mentioned when your proud reunions come,
And the thoughtful love of country dies upon the sounding drum;

Let me call him in your muster! Let me wake him in your grief!
Captain by the constitution, Abram Lincoln was your chief.

Ever nearest to his person, ye were his defense and shield;
He alone of your commanders died upon the battle-field.

All your Generals were his children, learning on him childish-wiles,
And they all were filled with mourners round the mighty tomb he filled.

Tender as the harp of David his soft answers now become,
When amid the cares of kingdoms rose and fell some Absalom;

And his humor glides his memory like a light within a fink,
Or the sunken sun that lingers on the lofty monument.

Like the slave that saw the sunrise with his face toward the West,
As it flashed, while yet 'twas hidden, on a slender steely crest.

So while Victory turned her from him, ere the dawn in evening came,
On his pen Emancipation glittered like an altar flame.

Feeling for the doomed deserter, feeling for the drafted sire,
For the empty Northern hearthstone and the Southern home afire.

Mercy kept him grim as Moloch, all the future babes to free,
And eternal peace to garner for the millions yet to be.

Not a soldier of the classics, he could see through learned pretense,
Master of the greatest science, military common sense;

As he watched your marches, comrades, hither, thither, wayward years,
On his map the roads you followed, you can trace them by his tears.

In the rear the people clamored, in the front the Generals missed;
In his inner councils harbored critic and antagonist.

But he ruled them by an instinct like the Queen's among the bees,
With a health of soul that honeyed Publicans and Pharisees.

Faint of faith, we looked behind us for a man of higher tone,
While the voice that drowned the trumpets was the echo of our own;

Ever thus, my old companions! Genius has us by the hand,
Walking on the tempest with us, every crisis to command.

Like the bugle blown at evening by some homesick son of art,
Lincoln's words, unearthly quiver, in the universal heart,

Not an echo left of malice, scarce of triumph in the strain,
As when summer thunder murmurs in pathetic showers of rain.

Years forever consecrated, here he lived where duties be,
Never crying on the climate or the toll's monotony.

Here his darling boy he buried, and the night in vigil wept,
Like his Lord within the garden, when the tired disciples slept.

How his call for men went ringing round the world, a mighty bell!
And the races of creation came the proud revolt to quell!

Standing in the last reaction on the rock of human rights,
Worn and mottled grew his features in the flash of battle lights.

Once, like Moses from the mountain, looked he on the realm he won.
When the slaves in burning Richmond knelt and thought him Washington.

Then an envious traitor snatched him from the theater of things,
To become a saint of Nature in the Pantheon of Kings.

Faded are the golden chevrons, vanished is the pride of war;

Mild in heaven his moral glory lingers like the morning star,
And the freeman's zone of cotton his white spirit seems to be,
And the insect, in the harvest, beat his army's reveille.

All around him spoiled or greedy, women vain and honor spent,
Still his faith in human nature lived without discouragement.

For his country, which could raise him barefoot, to the monarch's height,
Could he mock her, or his Mother, though her name she could not write?

Deep the wells of humble childhood, cool the springs beside the hut—
Millions more as poor as Lincoln see the door he has not shut.

Not till wealth has made its canker every poor white cabin through,
Shall the great Republic wither or the infidel subdue.

Stand around your great Commander! Lay aside your little fears!
Every Lincoln carries Freedom's coat along a hundred years.

And when the next call for soldiers rolls along this soil, fight, ye Yankees!
Look to see a mightier column rise and march, prevail and melt.

THE people of a city were commanded by the oracle to assemble on a plain outside of the city, and hence first saw the sun rise should be made King. A slave turned his back to the sun and looked up the shaft of a high temple where the sun's earliest rays flamed, and he cried: "I see it." He had been told to do so by a wise citizen, who stayed at home. This citizen, revealed by the slave, they made King, and he was the wisest that ever reigned there.

ON THE TRAIL.

Reports From the Great Ranges of the West Show the Cattle Business to be in a Thrifty Condition.

The Chicago Drovers' Journal has received reports in detail from the ranching regions of Colorado, Kansas, Texas, Nebraska, Idaho, Wyoming, Indian Territory, Montana and Nevada. These reports show the range-cattle business to be in a very thrifty condition.

The percentage of loss in all States and Territories ranges from 1 to 30 percent, or general average 3 1/2 percent. The greatest loss was reported by Idaho, Indian Territory and Kansas. Kansas is the only State that reports an increase in shipments of beves this season, but the general average is reported the same as in 1882.

The average condition of cattle on the range is reported by Kansas, Texas and Indian Territory to be worse when compared with the corresponding period of last year, but all other sections report an average or better condition of stock than last spring. Shipments of beves will commence about the same time on an average as in ordinary years.

The shipping season in the Southwest, however, will be about a month later than last year. There is reported an average increase of about 25 per cent. in the calf crop as compared with last year. Prices for cattle on the range are reported from $2 to $10 per head higher than one year ago, and the average advance amounts to $5.80 a head.

The most gratifying feature of the report is the average increase in the amount of improved bulls in the range. There are 10 per cent more improved bulls in use than last spring. The Short-horn predominates, but there has been a much larger demand for Herefords than last year, and many speak in favor of Polled-Angus.

From the reports received there is a growing tendency to put up hay for winter use. Fencing is being done very extensively in the Southwest, but is not regarded with so much favor in the Northwest, where the lands are mainly public and liable to be invaded by the squatter. The losses during the winter have fallen chiefly upon old cows and heifers calving and young stock. The stock for the range is reported entirely free from disease, save a few cases of black-leg, which is incident to overfattening of calves.

OUR MENAGERIE.

A GEORGIA dog got shut up in a church, but was equal to the occasion. He pulled the bell, rope till the frightened sexton rushed to see what the matter was.

Boston Herald: A lady had a pet dog and cat that were very fond of each other and never quarreled. When the dog wished to go into the kitchen, he would stand by the door, and puss would jump up, catch one paw over the arch and press the other on the thumb piece, and as the door swung open she would drop down on the dog's back and ride in triumph.

A HARTFORD (Ct.) paper contributes the following to our menagerie: Mr. C. Dunham has been troubled with rats for some time. Mr. Dunham thought he would see if he could get his cat to kill a rat. He caught one and shut it in a barrel with a cat. The second day after he looked in, and the rat was sitting on one side of the barrel and the cat on the other. The next day, in the afternoon, the cat was sitting very contentedly with the rat perched upon her back, apparently enjoying himself.

A cat belonging to a family in Roseville N. J., crept upon the cross timber above one of the trucks of a car attached to Conductor Chittenden's train on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad, at the Roseville station, and when the train stopped at the Broad street station was the object of much curiosity. At Hoboken the trainmen drove off the venturesome feline. When the train started back for Newark at 8:30 p. m., the cat was found snugly ensconced on the same cross-beam, and she remained there until Roseville was reached, when she jumped off and made a bee-line for home.

The Providence Journal tells the following crow story: "A few days since a man living in a town just over the Connecticut line went hunting for crows. He discovered a nest in a tall tree, and climbing up found therein eggs, which he secured, putting some in his pockets, but one he placed in his mouth, descending the tree very carefully lest he break his fragile store. He slipped, his jaws came together and crushed the egg in his mouth, and oh! horrible, it contained a very young crow. Report doth not say whether the man ate the crow or not, but it is safe to bet he does not hanker after it."

THE CYCLONE.

Its Terrible Work of Devastation in Illinois and Wisconsin.

Immense Destruction of Life and Property.

The cyclone which recently swept over portions of Illinois and Wisconsin was one of the most extensive and damaging visitations of the kind ever experienced in the Northwest. Its trail of desolation and death is visible from Montgomery county, in Missouri, to Racine, in Wisconsin, a distance of over 100 miles. The storm seems to have consisted of a series of funnel-shaped clouds, that burst out here and there, darting to the earth, pulverizing farm-houses, sweeping away trees, fences and every object that interposed, and then sailing up into the heavens, only to pounce down again at some other point and resume their horrible work of destruction. Thus this frightful phalanx of funnels pursued their course, bobbing up and then down again, for a course of 300 miles until the waters of Lake Michigan arrested them in their wild career. The loss of life inflicted by the awful visitation numbers at least seventy, while hundreds of unfortunates have been more or less severely injured, many of them, it is feared, beyond the hope of recovery.

The vagaries and eccentricities of the cyclone defy enumeration. Preserving one general course from northwest to southeast, it wobbled and twisted in every conceivable way. It was no respecter of persons or property. Everything in its path was hurled violently to the earth or carried away. Massive oak and stalwart hickory trees were as pipe-stems before the terrible blast; and as for telegraph poles and fence-rails, the windy monster played with them as if they had been lucifer matches. Not satisfied with raining homes, it scattered their contents upon every hand. In one instance a tea-pot was landed in the boughs of a tree, where it was caught and held. At another place, pieces of a lady's necktie were found in a hedge fence, under careened stoves, and in various other of the way places. All of the wearing apparel of one family was torn to shreds, so that it could not be worn. One man's vest was blown several miles away, and a roll of money was blown out of one of the pockets and torn into small bits. In one case a farm was swept clean of cornstalks, which were imbedded in a hedge on the opposite side of the field. The cyclone took off the porch and chimney of a man's house, nothing else being injured. A piano was lifted up, carried half a mile, and dumped into the cellar of a house that had been blown away. Many miraculous escapes are reported. In Sangamon county, Ill., a farm laborer was prostrated on the ground by the wind just as a house passed over him, sailing in the air like a balloon. Had he been standing up he would have been killed. In the same vicinity a whole family was buried beneath the ruins of their dwelling, and all escaped injury. A man was blown out of his house and landed in his orchard, several rods away. The house was wrecked. One man's house sailed away in the air, and at last accounts he had not heard of it, although he had searched far and wide for his property. Peter Shaver, of Brown county, Ill., opened his door to see the makeup of the storm, when the house was taken and shaken to atoms. He found himself in the top of a cotton-wood tree, and his wife and babies were all scattered about and insensible. Luckily they all came to, scratched and bruised, but with no bones broken.

Those who describe this terrible storming, tell of a sudden hush, of the descent of a black cloud with a heat fiery and white; of a glare of lightning and a roar of unchained elements. The rumble of the approaching storm was like the thunder of innumerable wheels. The next instant it was over, leaving in its track ruined homesteads and green fields, blasted as if by fire. One man describes it as consisting of three clouds of smoke and fire, rushing along through the air with the smaller end of the funnel near the earth. As the clouds drew nearer they seemed to unite. Then there was a deafening roar, resembling the passage of a hundred railroad trains, only shriller, then there was a crash, and in another moment it was over. The demon of the air had sped on his course to repeat the performance somewhere else. Along the main path of the cyclone the clouds assumed the appearance of a revolving sheet of fire. The spectacle was grand and yet horrible. At times it seemed that immense balls of fire were sent up, and these would burst, filling the heavens with flame. At such times there was a crackling sound like the burning of an immense forest.

The storm seems to have had its birth west of the Mississippi and just north of the Missouri river. It first made itself felt in Montgomery county, Mo., where it blew down a good many houses, killed four or five people, and maimed a dozen or so more. It thence crossed the Mississippi river into Madison county, Ill., passing four miles south of Alton. Houses, trees, fences and everything in its path were razed to the ground or carried into the air. Eleven people were killed and upward of twenty wounded in Madison county. In Jersey county a number of dwellings were demolished, three people killed and several severely injured. In Montgomery county a great many buildings were borne down by the fierce blast, and several fatalities occurred. At Woodboro a church and a school-house were blown down. At a farm-house near there, sawlogs two feet in diameter were picked up and carried away like feathers. In Macoupin county the cyclone tore several farm-houses to pieces. George Baker's house, near Brushy Mound, was blown to atoms, and his wife and three children killed. They were blown into a tree and found dead. Two other children were badly injured. Eleven persons were in one house that was demolished, and, strange to say, only one was killed. Green county suffered severely. Farm houses, barns, fences and fruit trees were leveled to the ground. Three people were killed and about a dozen badly hurt. A number of farm-houses were wholly or partially wrecked in Christian county, and several persons injured, though no fatalities are reported. It was in Morgan county, however, that the hurricane was more severely felt, both in regard to loss of life and damage to property, than at any other point in Illinois. Two funnel-shaped cyclones passed almost simultaneously within a few miles of Jacksonville, one north and one south of the town, and both traveled from a southwesterly to a northeasterly direction. One of the funnels struck the village of Litterburg, containing about 300 inhabitants, and wrecked nearly every building in the town. Seven people were killed and about thirty injured, some of them so badly that they will hardly recover. A good many farm-houses in the vicinity were wrecked and several persons wounded. The other funnel swept over a section known as Greasy Prairie, and did nearly as much damage as the first. Fourteen farm-houses were demolished, six people killed and a large number injured. In Mason county several farm-houses were blown down, two persons killed and others injured. Hall fell in great chunks that killed live stock. The hurricane was very damaging in Brown county. Dwellings and barns without number went down, and many people were injured, a few of whom will probably not recover. De Witt county also suffered severely. About fifty farm-houses were wrecked in the county, five people were killed and about twenty injured, some of them very severely. Macon county was likewise a severe sufferer by the terrible visitation. Farm-houses, barns, fences and trees were swept away like feathers. Four people were killed and more than a dozen crippled.

In Logan county several farm dwellings and out-houses were torn to pieces, three people killed and quite a number injured. In Menard county about a dozen dwellings were wrecked and a child was killed. In Sangamon county a great number of houses were blown down, three lives were lost, and several persons received injuries more or less severe. In Spillville and Champaign counties the tornado did considerable damage to property, but no lives were lost. In Livingston county one woman was killed, four or five persons were injured, and much damage to property was inflicted. The cyclone seems to have passed here in its terrible work, and is not heard of again until McHenry and Boone counties, in the extreme northern part of Illinois, are reached. Here it bobbed down to the earth again, and resumed its fantastic tricks with increased fury. In Boone county several houses were swept down, two men were killed, and considerable live stock was lost. In McHenry county the damage was still greater. Between thirty and forty farm-houses were blown down, five people were killed and a great many wounded, and the damage to farm property was immense, fences, orchards and live stock forming the principal losses. This completes the work of destruction by the funnel-shaped demon in Illinois. From McHenry county it jumped over the State line, and is next heard of at Bloomfield, Wis., where it blew down several houses and killed one man. Thence it passed between Geneva Junction and Geneva Lake, doing little damage, however. Its next work was in the vicinity of Union Grove, where it demolished churches, school-houses, dwellings and barns, killed four persons and wounded seven or eight. In this region at least four separate and entirely distinct funnels were seen within a radius of three or four miles. They seemed to unite, and thus strengthened, the storm demon shaped its course for the ill-fated city of Racine, where it resumed its terrible work of death and devastation. The first reports of the tornado's work at Racine exaggerated the casualties, but the damage to property was greater than the first accounts indicated. Only eight people were killed outright, but the injured number ninety-nine. Many of these are horribly maimed and some of them will never recover, while others will be crippled for life. About thirty of the injured were sent to the hospital for treatment. The others were cared for in private houses. About 250 people were made homeless by the cyclone at Racine. Prompt action was taken by the local authorities to relieve the sufferings of the homeless. From Racine the demon of destruction passed into Lake Michigan, where it became dissipated and lost its power for further harm before reaching the eastern shore.

REVENUE COLLECTORS.

Reduction of the Internal Revenue Districts—Thirty-six Heads to Come Off.

(Washington Telegram.)

Secretary Folger is meditating upon the proposed reduction of the internal revenue districts. He will have the unpleasant duty of decapitating the Collectors done by July 1. At any rate, he hopes so. He grows more sanguinary the more he thinks about it. He thought first of leaving an even 100, then he fixed upon ninety-three, but now he has in contemplation a basket of thirty-six heads, which will leave but ninety-seven. The saving to the Government, even under this process of decimation, will be comparatively small. It will be about one-tenth of 1 per cent. upon the amount of revenue collected last year, or say, at a liberal estimate, $150,000. As an economic move therefore, it would scarcely have been suggested. An official of the department said to-day that the saving would not amount to much, in fact, but the reduction had to be made in obedience to a clamor. Whenever a $2,500 collector is discharged, a $1,000 deputy would have to be appointed. In addition to this saving there would be a few hundred dollars difference in the rent paid. It would be difficult to make a saving of $3,000 for each district abolished. Several Congressmen are already in the city to see about it. Each has his particular Collectors whom he thinks should be retained. The Secretary holds, however, that no favors can be shown, that the reduction must be made entirely upon a business basis.

Homestead Entries.

(Washington Telegram.)

In a recent opinion the Commissioner of the General Land Office holds that making proof upon pre-emption and homestead entries witnesses must be persons entirely disinterested in the claimant's claim. The fact that the knowledge of the facts in the proof during the entire period of the alleged residence and cultivation. The fact that a homestead or pre-emption claimant cannot furnish the necessary proof by his neighbors, but has to depend upon his attorney and backer to make the same, casts suspicion upon the transactions, and tends to show collusion in the making of such proof. This opinion was called forth by a letter from W. W. Burke, of Huron, Dakota, calling attention to the fact that in many instances homesteaders and pre-emptors in making proof have, for witnesses their attorneys, or parties from whom they are borrowing money with which to perfect their claims, people who do not reside near the land covered by the entry, but generally reside in towns.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

There are forty-nine female physicians in Brooklyn, N. Y., of whom fifteen are homeopaths.

In Hudson, Columbia county, N. Y., is the largest apple orchard in the world—30,000 trees on 300 acres.

The dressy young man to be in tone now, must have a narrow stripe of braid down the side of his pantalons.

It is estimated that the pawnbrokers of New York city, collectively, have fully $20,000,000 of pledges in their possession.

A YANKEE has stormed a prairie dog town in the West, and captured the animals for their skins, which, made into gloves, rival the finest kid.

Of thirty-nine female students of medicine attending the lectures of the Paris Faculty last year, eleven were English, five American and one Indian.

Eight Massachusetts railways having in the last year carried 41,430,335 passengers and killed only eight, it is argued that it is safer to ride than stay off the cars.

EXTRADITION.

The Correspondence Now Going On as to Extraditable Offenses.

The British Government Will Not Ask the Surrender of Walsh and Sheridan.

(Washington Telegram to Chicago Tribune.)

It is probable that the State Department is conducting very secret negotiations for a new extradition treaty with Great Britain, and that the President may send to the Senate next December the draft of such a treaty. Correspondence to that end has been had at intervals since the Fenian troubles in Canada, and correspondence, recently by Irish troubles, has doubtless been renewed. It is communication on this subject, and not as to the extradition of particular persons, that probably have been received at the State Department, and the official denials have gone to the reports that there were communications as to these persons, but not as to the negotiations as to extradition. The present extradition treaty with Great Britain is the Ashburton treaty, negotiated forty years ago. The list of extraditable crimes which it contains is very short. The Ashburton treaty provides only for the extradition of persons accused of murder, assault with intent to commit murder, piracy, arson, robbery, forgery, and the utterance of forged paper. (Washington telegram to the Chicago Inter Ocean.)

There is reason to believe that, after all that has been said on the subject, the officials at the State Department do not expect Great Britain will ask the extradition of Walsh and Sheridan. It is understood that the Gladstone Government has had its attention called to the situation, and commends its delicacy. With such a vast Irish-American population in the United States, it is shown how impossible it would be to conduct extradition proceedings without great excitement. Such a commotion would be likely to ensue at any time when a race question might be raised, but especially so when the crime alleged was regarded to a greater or less extent as a political nature by a large number of people who sympathize with the cause in politics. It is understood that these considerations have been brought to the notice of the British authorities, and it is said they appreciate the inadvisability, on their own account, to agitate the Irish element in the United States more than necessary. All the money used for the embarrassment of the British authorities is believed to come from this country, and there is no desire to stimulate interest in Irish affairs.

Gen. Duncan S. Walker, of counsel for Sheridan and Walsh, returned this morning from Lowell, where he has been conferring with Gov. Butler. He says that no demand has yet been made for the extradition of his clients. He adds that they will not be surrendered if their extradition is demanded.

THE WHIPPING POST.

How Justice Is Dealt Out in Delaware.

Five Men Under the Lash in Newcastle.

A recent dispatch from Newcastle says: The Sheriff at this place was busy yesterday. Seven culprits, two white and five colored, were lashed at the public whipping-post, and one of them compelled to do penance for an hour with his head and arms thrust through the apertures of a public pillory. The whipping post and pillory, a two-story structure, stands in the center of the jail yard. Just before the whipping began, the Sheriff opened the main gate of the yard, which leads to the street. Immediately a human flood rushed in—white and black, young and old, male and female. The prisoners were let out, one at a time, and handcuffed to the main post in a prayerful attitude. The Sheriff then began his work. If the prisoner is a hardened criminal, the lashes are well laid on, but there are cases where the prisoner manages to get a little sympathy, and consequently the lashes are light. The first prisoner, whipped, was a young white man named Leslie Marr, aged 30. He was sentenced to receive ten lashes for stealing pistols. Leslie did not bear up well under the punishment. The chances are that he will steal no more in Delaware. Next came Frank Mullen, white, 45 years old, charged with larceny. He got ten lashes. He squirmed and writhed in agony as the lashes were slowly but earnestly administered. He went to his cell with a sore back and a contrite heart. Thomas Mason, a darky, about 50, was then marched out. He was convicted of horse-stealing, and sentenced to twenty lashes and an hour's pillory practice. He was not placed in the pillory, owing to the awkward, unnatural position of his head, and the necessarily bent position of the body. The old man presented a pitiful appearance. Isaac Taylor, black, 20 years of age, received a sentence of twenty lashes for stealing meat. He stood without flinching as the cat in the Sheriff's hands descended upon his bare back. At first a white stripe would appear, but before long the darky's hide gave way to the torture. Nathaniel Ringle and George Robinson, darkies, 18 or 20 years old, were then brought out. The former received ten lashes, and the latter five, for stealing chickens. They begged piteously for mercy. While the darkies were being whipped, William Brown was suffering from a terrible back-ache, he having been given an hour in the pillory. He received stolen goods.

THE ENGLISH CONSCIENCE.

A Remarkable London "Times" Editorial Addressed to Americans.

The London Times recently printed a lengthy editorial on the Irish question, addressed to Americans, the following extract of which is sent across the Atlantic by cable:

"The speech of Gen. Grant at the recent annual banquet of the New York Chamber of Commerce is a fair sample of the opinion of the American people, which is at present aroused over the doings of the dynamite party. It is possible that if O'Donovan-Rossa keeps temporarily quiet, the Americans will gain the skill of the true facts of the Irish question. In all candor and kindness, we ask the American people to rid their minds of prejudices and recognize that denunciations by Irishmen of England are not now justified, but refer to bygone history. We do not ask the people of the United States to put down organized ruffianism which pretends to impunity and encouragement under their flag. If they do not bestir themselves for their own character and comfort they are little likely to do so to oblige England, but they should recognize facts. The whole of England is convinced that the Government has dealt generously with Ireland, but must resist the demands of the secessionists. Americans do not in their hearts believe that all Englishmen are hypocrites and tyrants, and should consider the effects of reckless language and cease saying what they do not think."

MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE.

AFTER two or three days spent in the effort to get a quorum, the Legislature succeeded on the 15th, and began business. The trouble has been that the session has been drawn out so long that the members are slipping off home as fast as they can get away. At one time there were sixty-three out of the total 132 members absent. The Senate, by its Insurance Committee, has been making investigations, and finds, contrary to the generally accepted belief, that the State does no insurance. It really carries $341,800 worth scattered on the various departments of the various institutions. However, there is none on the Capitol and six other important institutions. The Governor is trying to educate the prosecuting officers throughout the State up to a practice of making out requisition papers in daily approved form, so that they will be recognized by the Governors of other States. The work has heretofore been done so slipshod that the requisitions frequently failed. The House Committee on Judiciary has reported adversely on the two bills for abolishing the Superior Court of Detroit. The House has, in committee of the whole, agreed to the bill calculated to prevent practice of medicine by others than college graduates. The discussion was peculiarly animated. The House has killed the Senate bill appropriating $101,000 for the Industrial School for Girls. Devlin's Compulsory Education bill has been made a special order for Thursday, and is attracting a deal of attention in the State and at the capital. The Senate did a large amount of business of minor import.

The Senate, on the 16th inst., passed House bills to amend sections of act 9 of 1882, relative to the levy and collection of taxes, and for the organization of telephone and messenger companies. The House passed bills to promote public health; to amend the compiled laws relative to title to real estate by descent; to provide for the incorporation of manufacturers' mutual insurance companies, and the bill to secure to women citizens the right to vote at school, town, city and other municipal elections, besides a score of unimportant bills. The House tabled the Senate concurrent resolution for final adjournment on June 2.

The Senate on the 17th inst. passed the Senate bill making an appropriation for the current expenses of the House of Correction; also, House bills to amend an act relating to public instruction; appropriation for the current expenses of the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb; to amend an act entitled masters, apprentices and servants; to amend an act relative to the erection and maintenance of chutes for the passage of fish through the dams across the streams of the State; for the better support of teachers' institutes; also the Senate bill appropriating $101,000 for an industrial school for girls. Both houses have agreed upon June 9 as the date for final adjournment. The policy of adopting compulsory education was very generally discussed in the House. The House will sit up, and after a desperate struggle of two hours the committee decided to agree to the bill, which provides for enforcing school attendance at least four months per year, and also is aimed to prevent the employment of children in mills, factories, etc. The House was not exactly satisfied with the reports and demands made by the Aldrian Industrial Home for Girls, and when the second attempt was made to pass the Senate bill appropriating $101,000 therefor it only got through by a bare majority, with not a vote to spare.

The Senate, on May 18, passed the following House bills: To define the duties of Justices of the Peace; fixing salaries of Wayne County Auditors; amending section 10 of act 81 of 1873, relative to the State Board of Health; to amend the law of 1879 to regulate the height of bridges over railway tracks, and the Senate bill to provide a new charter for the city of Detroit. The House, after a long debate, placed on the order of the third reading Senate bill 158, to amend the act of 1873 relative to the incorporation, running, management, duties and liabilities of all railroads in the State. The Governor has vetoed the Belknap bill concerning co-operative, benevolent and beneficiary associations.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the State Board of Health, Lansing, by observers of diseases in different parts of the State, show the principal diseases which caused most sickness in Michigan during the week ending May 12, 1883, as follows: Number of observers heard from, 58.

Diseases in Order of Greatest Area of Prevalence.	Number of observers heard from.	Per cent. of total.	Per cent. of total.
1 Intermittent fever.....	74	68
2 Neuralgia.....	72	63
3 Bronchitis.....	69	70

For the week ending May 12, 1883, the reports indicate that diphtheria, neuralgia, influenza, remittent fever and intermittent fever increased, and that diarrhoea and rheumatism decreased in area of prevalence.

At the State Capitol the prevailing winds, during the week ending May 12, were west, and compared with the preceding week, the temperature was higher, the absolute humidity and the day and night ozone more, and the relative humidity less.

Including reports by regular observers and by others, diphtheria was reported present during the week ending May 12, and since, at eleven places, scarlet fever at sixteen places and measles at thirty-one places.

THE STATE CAPITAL.

A Short Week—Two More Appropriation Bills Passed—Minority Representation—The Case Liquor Bills Squelched—Relative to Adjournment—Ingham Court Bill Approved—More Mention—The Local Option Bill.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

LANSING, May 13, 1883.

Michigan Legislature has so faithfully carried out the precept "make haste slowly" this week, that it seems almost unnecessary to give a report of the little business done. Returning from the Sunday adjournment on Monday evening, neither house had a quorum, so business did not begin until Monday afternoon in the House and Tuesday morning in the Senate. Then both houses adjourned on Tuesday evening to Thursday morning, for the legislative excursion to Orchard Lake. Good work was then done on Thursday and Friday, but this morning the House found itself three or four members short of a quorum, and after a vain attempt to secure a quorum by a call of the House, they gave up in disgust and adjourned. The Senate worked until nearly noon and then adjourned to Monday evening, which means Tuesday before any work will be done. Thus we are not able report a very prolific legislative week.

MORE APPROPRIATION BILLS. Two appropriation bills per week seem to be about the average of late, and the average has been kept up this week. On the 7th the House passed the bill previously passed by the Senate appropriating $12,100 to be used as follows: For painting and penciling the front exterior wall of the female department of the Michigan Asylum at Kalamazoo, $3,100; for erecting an infirmary in connection with the female department, $9,000. This is to be raised in the tax of 1883.

MINORITY REPRESENTATION. The Barnard Minority Representation bill, around which has clustered so much interest, and which has called so many able men of the State to Lansing, passed the House some weeks ago and came up in the Senate on a special order on the 10th, and after a half day spent in discussing it in committee of the whole it was put on its immediate passage and received a vote of 17, nays 12. Senator Romeyn then raised the point that it required a vote of two-thirds of the Senators elect to pass it, and pending a very long discussion on the proposition, and before the President had made his ruling on the question, Senator Shaw changed his vote from "yea" to "nay," leaving the vote 16, nays 13. It was then declared lost, was reconsidered and tabled to await the return of one or two absent Senators who are known to be friendly to the bill, when it is hoped to pass it unless the President rules that the two-thirds vote is necessary. As it is of so much importance, and may pass, we give it entire, as follows:

A BILL to secure to the minority of stockholders in corporations the power of electing a representative membership in boards of directors. SECTION 1. The People of the State of Michigan enact, That in all elections for directors of any corporation in this State other than municipal, every stockholder shall have the right to vote, in person or by proxy, the number of shares of stock owned by him for as many persons as there are directors to be elected; or to cumulate said shares and give one candidate as many votes as will equal the number of directors multiplied by the number of shares of his stock; or to distribute them on the same principle among as many candidates as he shall think fit. Such corporation shall elect its officers annually, and the entire number of its directors shall be balloted for at one and the same time, and not separately, and such directors shall not be elected in any other manner; and if upon the first ballot the entire number of directors are not elected, such ballot shall be void, and the stockholders shall continue to ballot until the entire number of directors shall be elected at one and the same ballot.

DISPOSAL OF CASE'S BILLS. The two famous Case Liquor bills, so famous as to be called "Case's twins," are now both as dead as they can well be. The first, modifying the liquor laws so as to allow saloons to be kept open on all legal holidays, and afflicting lighter penalties for a violation of the laws, came up on the 10th on third reading, where the temperance element in the House had allowed it to go so as to beat it in such a way as to get a record, and it was lost by the following emphatic vote:

Yea—Messrs. Bixby, Bolger, Brant, Case, Devlin, Ellis, Grant, Gregory, Hanked, King, Meyer, Morcum, Noeker, Parker, Parks, Ripelle, Robinson, Rummel, Snyder and Williams—30.

Nays—Messrs. Adams, Bennett, Bentley, Bonnell, Brown, Black, Camby, Colwell, Coats, Darragh, Davenport, Dickson, Diller, Dunstan, Farmer, Fletcher, Fyfe, Gavellin, Goodman, Harkness, Hayes, Himebaugh, Howard, Howe, Howell, Hull, Keith, Kelsey, Knight, La Du, North, Pengra, Perham, Pierce, Pitts, Rose, Shepard, Stone, Van Deusen, Van Kleek, Van Loo, Vincent, Vinton, White, Wixson, Woodruff, Wyllis and the Speaker—48.

ABSENT—Messrs. Alvord, Barnard, Bettinger, Bishop, Blacker, Capenter, Clark, Coleman, Cook, Dodge, French, Glenshaw, Gray, Hopkins, Johnson, Leitch, Martin, Palmer, Phinney, Potter, Rann y, Reed, Sellers, Thompson, Tinsman, Trath, Warren, Wheeler, Willett, Witte, Wright and Youngs—32.

The second of the famous bills, to equalize the tax on malt and spirituous liquors at $100 per annum and otherwise change the law in favor of the liquor dealers, came up in the House in committee of the whole on the next day, and after Case and his friends had fought hard for nearly a day to save the bill, the committee struck out all after the enacting clause of the bill and the House concurred in its action in striking out by the following vote:

Yea—Messrs. Adams, Bennett, Bentley, Bonnell, Camby, Colwell, Darragh, Davenport, Dickson, Diller, Farmer, French, Fyfe, Gavellin, Goodman, Hanked, Harkness, Hayes, Howard, Howe, Howell, Keith, Kelsey, Knight, La Du, Martin, Pengra, Perham, Pierce, Sellers, Shepard, Van Kleek, Van Loo, Vincent, Vinton, Warren, White, Wixson, Woodruff, Wyllis, Young and the Speaker—42.

Nays—Messrs. Bettinger, Bixby, Bolger, Brant, Black, Case, Clark, Cook, Coats, Devlin, Dodge, Dunstan, Fletcher, Grant, Gregory, Himebaugh, Hopkins, Johnson, Leitch, Meyer, Morcum, Noeker, North, Parker, Parks, Phinney, Banner, Ripelle, Rose, Rummel, Snyder, Stone, Tinsman, Thompson, Wright—38.

REASON TO ADJOURNMENT. Senator Romeyn, on the 11th, offered the following preamble and concurrent resolution:

WHEREAS, Of 319 bills and joint resolutions during this legislative session introduced in the Senate, but about 300 have up to the present time been disposed of, and of 655 in like manner introduced in the House but about 230 have been disposed of, about 280 being still in the hands of the standing committees of the latter body; and

WHEREAS, Inconsiderate and hasty legislation is an evil of far-reaching and public consequences to the people and their general interests; therefore Resolved, By the Senate (the House concurring), that when the two houses adjourn on the 30th of May inst. such adjournment be to Wednesday, Nov. 7, 1883, at 12 o'clock meridian. After this has been amended so as to entirely change its import substitute was offered by Senator Koon, providing that no business shall be transacted after May 30, except to close up that on hand, and that the final adjournment should be on June 2, and it was adopted—yeas 22, nays 2. It is not, however, expected that the House will adopt the resolution, as it is not thought the work can be decently completed before June 15.

SATURDAY, MAY 26, 1883.

DECORATION DAY.

The observance of Decoration Day will be general throughout the country this year, and great preparations have been made everywhere to do fitting honor to the memory of the "brave boys in blue" who died for the Union. The people of this nation can certainly offer tributes of affectionate remembrance to those who died for the "Star Spangled Banner" in battle, hospital, and prison. To do this decently and properly a day has been set aside, and it speaks well for the future of this country that the hearts of the people turn toward the green mounds that lie scattered over this country on Decoration Day, full of love and reverence for the sleeping soldiers. It has generally fallen to the lot of the "old boys," in this locality, to see that the day was properly observed here, but we are pleased to note the change that has taken place. Our people this year are united in a desire to do homage to those dead heroes who once lived in our midst, and who gave their lives in defence of the old flag.

Decoration Day next Wednesday, promises to be a day long to be remembered by our citizens. The various committees are hard at work on the duties assigned to them. The Committee of Arrangements report that they have been successful in making all the preliminary arrangements for the exercises at the grove, near the cemetery, and that a stand and seats are to be erected for the accommodation of the speakers and the people present.

The Committee on Decoration have added forty-eight young ladies to their committee. The young ladies, whose name we give below, will, in groups of four, decorate the twelve soldier's grave at the cemetery: Lucy Aling, Saddle Howard, Kitty Vaupell, Jennie Kaners, Martha Zeeb, Emma Zeeb, Ida Brewer, Francis Brower, Cornelia Cappon, Kate Slooter, Maggie Pauels, Fannie Boyd, Lillie Jones, Maggie Boone, Kitty Doesburg, Rika Meengs, Laura Meengs, Christina Herold, Katy Herold, Johanna Schravensande, Josephine Kiekintveld, Maggie Pfantstiel, Mary Steffens, Ella Hunt, Dina Nibbelink, Cora Fisher, Minnie Cappon, Martha Nyland, Cornelia Van der Veen, Jennie Verbeek, Mary Van Putten, Rika Verbeek, Dina Reidsma, Nellie De Koning, Dollie Charter, Jennie Kremers, Martha Blom, Christina Wyndhof, Mary Wyndhof, Lizzie De Koning, Hannah Sprietsema, Minnie Kremers, Lena Jonkman, Lizzie Borgman, Minnie Mohr, Rika te Rolier, Christina Ogge, Mina McDonald, Bella McDonald.

The instrumental music for the day will be furnished by Dr. Gee's Musical Class, while the vocal music will be under the direction of Dr. B. J. De Vries, with the following vocalists: Miss Mary Allcott, Miss Helena Pfantstiel, Soprano; Miss Christina Pfantstiel, Miss Rika Boone, Alto; Mr. D. Gilmore, Mr. John Nykerk, Bass.

The Committee on Decoration request us to state, that all persons who have flowers to contribute, or who desire to assist them in the performance of their duties, will please report at Lyceum Hall next Tuesday morning.

It is to be hoped that our merchants and our business men will close their place of business, at least a portion of the day, giving those in their employ a chance to participate in the exercises.

Mrs. Young was born in Nauvoo, Ill., in 1844. At the age of 19 she married Mr. Dee, a mormon. Two sons were born to them. After two years of married life Mrs. Dee secured a divorce from her husband. On April 7, 1868, she married Brigham Young. A few years afterwards she renounced mormonism and took to the stage, delivering lectures in nearly every city in the United States.

JOTTINGS.

SNOW fell last Monday morning.

MR. DAN RILEY, of Grand Rapids, was in the city last Tuesday.

REVIVAL meetings have been held in the Methodist Church during this week.

DUST, lots of dust this week. How we sigh for that system of Water Works we have not got.

THE Board of Review, of this city, were in session this week from Monday morning until Thursday night.

AN editor's capacity nowadays is largely measured by the number of frauds, dead-beats and rowdies he can get mad at him.

LAST Wednesday evening Dr. Gee's Musical Class were out on our streets, and favored our citizens with some of their music.

In a report of the Auditor-General to the House, showing the total indebtedness of each county to the State, it appears that Ottawa County owes $48,192.44.

THE steamer Macatawa will commence making regular trips between this city and Macatawa Park on next Monday. We will endeavor to give the time of arrival and departure in our next issue.

THE tug York State, which was rebuilt last winter at Schol's shipyard, returned from Grand Haven, where she had been for her engine and boiler, last week. She is now known by the name "City of Holland."

EDITOR FRED WADK, of the Fremont Indicator, called on us last Monday. Wadk was apparently enjoying the best of health, and we should judge, from what we saw, that he was getting ready for something besides a pugilistic encounter.

FROM a telegram received last Thursday, we learn that the steamer S. B. Barker arrived at Ashland last Wednesday all safe and sound. The trip from this city was a long and dangerous one, at this time of the year, and we are pleased to learn of the safe arrival at her destination.

LAST Sunday night Mr. J. W. Snedaker, one of Allegan's most prominent citizens, was found dead in his barn, where he had gone to do the milking. The cause of his death is supposed to have been heart disease. His wife, Mary Hopkins, is the daughter of Capt. Wm. L. Hopkins, of this place.

MR. and Mrs. Pieter F. Pfanstiehl's Golden Wedding cards are out. The fifth day of June is the day. A reception will be given at the residence of Dr. F. J. Schouten in the evening. It is a very pleasant sight to see two in one household who have lived together for fifty years. The wedding cards were procured at the News office and are very neat.

ON Saturday last a twelve year old son of Mr. P. Van Dommelen, while carelessly handling a revolver, shot himself through the hand. Dr. Wm. Van Putten was called and extracted the ball and reports the wound as doing nicely. Parents, if you allow your children to have such dangerous playthings, we will sometime be called upon to chronicle a funeral, or a serious shooting affray.

A RADICAL change has been made in the dray lines of this city. Mr. Ed. J. Harrington has purchased the drays of Mr. John Serier and of Mr. W. C. Nibbelick and will, hereafter, run the drays of this city in a systematic and business like manner. This is undoubtedly good news to our business men, who may now expect to obtain a dray at any time, and to have their business promptly attended to. We wish Ed. success in his new enterprise.

DURING the recent storm our harbor sustained damages which ought to require the immediate attention of those who have charge of it. It is becoming to be a notorious fact that our harbor is being neglected by some one, and it seems to us that it stands our citizens in hand to look to this matter, and, as far as lies in their power, to remedy it. On last Saturday fifty feet of the north pier was carried away by the storm. We understand that a meeting of the harbor board has been called, and we hope that some action may be taken that will ultimately prove beneficial to our harbor.

In talking with one of our real estate dealers last Wednesday, we were surprised to learn the extent of the real estate transfers that have been made in our city this spring. The encouraging feature of it is, that the property will all be utilized and something permanent and active will take the place of the former dull and sluggish market. Good prices have thus far been obtained, and the general impression exists that property will rise in value during the coming summer. The latest transactions that we have to record is of the property on Eighth street opposite Kulte's meat market. Mr. R. N. DeMerrell, who has bought 26 feet and will erect a building for his marble works, and Mr. A. M. Burgess who has bought the property now occupied by him as a photograph gallery, and will enlarge his present building, making it one of the finest galleries in this part of the country.

FISHING in Macatawa Bay is improving.

LAST Monday morning a large and beautiful ring encircled the sun.

If no evil fortune befall, there will be a large cherry crop. The trees are masses of bloom.

THE brick yard of Messrs. Oosting and Smith, at Hamilton, will begin running next Monday.

DR. WM. VAN PUTTEN, attended a meeting of the State Medical Society at Kalamazoo this week.

MR. A. M. KANTERS and family left this city last week for Buffalo, N. Y., where they will reside this summer.

A MARKET day will be held at Overisel on Thursday, June 7. This will be the first "market" ever held at Overisel.

UNLESS the weather changes shortly, this bids fair to be the shortest summer in the longest memory of the oldest inhabitant.

OUR readers will please not forget that Jan Albers, our jeweler, is selling out his stock at below cost. Some good bargains can be secured. Give him a call.

SOME of the citizens of the township of Fillmore, have sent a petition to the Chicago and West Michigan R'y, asking them to stop running their trains on Sunday.

THE Williams Brothers, of the City Hotel, have the exclusive agency for the celebrated "Sealskin" cigar. The "Sealskin" is a fine cigar and we can cheerfully recommend it to the smoking public.

WORD has been received from L. Van Putten, son of our banker J. Van Putten, and who is at present residing in San Francisco, Cal., that he has had a stroke of paralysis, but is now rapidly recovering.

LAST Tuesday, a gentleman who is decorating the residence of Mr. I. Cappon, fell from a step ladder and struck his head on the stair case in the main hall, cutting a severe gash in his head. Dr. Wm. Van Putten attended.

LIST of letters remaining in the Post-Office at Holland, Mich., May 24, 1883. Miss Maggie Brown, Miss Rosa Drinkwater, Z. C. Hicks, B. Howes, Tromem Moro, John Smith, Willie Witherell. WM. VERBEK, P. M.

THE Board of Health, at a meeting held this week, resolved to have several hundred copies of the health regulations printed and circulated. The health officers and marshal will then see that the provisions of the same are strictly enforced.

EIGHTEEN young people have been forward for prayers in the revival meetings in the M. E. Church this week. The interest is so great that the meetings will probably be continued all next week. Mrs. Jordan is evidently well qualified for revival work.

THROUGH the kindness of Supervisor Schaddelee we are enabled to give our readers the following facts taken from the assessment roll and from his reports: The total assessed valuation of this city is $831,000, of which $510,000 is on real estate, 300,000 is on personal property. There has been 91 births and 31 deaths during the year. The list of dogs foots up to 80.

WE learn that Dr. Gee's Music Class will appear on Decoration Day in something new in the way of uniformity of dress. The "boys" are trying hard to put themselves in first-class condition for this summer, having within the last few weeks, expended over two hundred dollars for new instruments, music, and outfit, and in view of their furnishing the music on Decoration Day free of charge, they ask our citizens to patronize them in an excursion to Macatawa Park on board of the new boat, on the evening of Decoration Day. Nothing would seem more appropriate than for every one, who feels an interest in maintaining a good band in this city, to help give this excursion an encouraging patronage. The boat will leave the dock at 7:30 p. m., returning at 9:30. An open air concert at the park is one of the features of the evening.

WE hear of cyclones, blizzards, and heavy winds all around us. The last and most serious of these occurred at Racine, Wis., on last Friday night. Over two hundred buildings were blown down, twenty-five persons killed, and nearly fifty persons wounded. Thus far this locality has escaped any serious accidents, but early last Saturday morning our citizens were terrible agitated over what was, at first, supposed to be a genuine cyclone. The wind commenced to blow from the southeast at about 12:30 and increased in fury until about 1:30 o'clock a. m., when it seemed to pass over and quiet was once more restored. The damage done was but slight. The store front of the building of Wm. Ten Hagen was blown down and the large chimney of the Third Reformed Church was blown over on to the building, knocking the plaster off from the walls on the inside. Aside from this, the damage done was of small account, the City Hotel receiving a small share.

SEVERAL frosts lately, peaches all right.

MR. G. VYN, of Zealand, expects to visit the "Old Country" shortly.

LAST week Miss Maggie Plugger left for Chicago, on a visit to her sister, Mrs. E. C. Oggel.

DR. D. M. GER, of this city, visits Fenn ville every Thursday in the interest of his profession, dentistry.

AUGUST GIESCHKE, Editor of the Michigan Staats Zeitung and Sonntagsblatt, of Grand Rapids, called on us yesterday.

DR. MCK BERT reports Geo. Ohlmans, of Zealand, the young man who broke his leg at the Zealand market, as rapidly recovering.

THE schooner Wells Burt, of Chicago, went to the bottom of Lake Michigan eleven miles out from Chicago during the recent storm. There were ten men and a boy on board and all perished.

THE attention of the reader is called to the new advertisement of Messrs. Kremer & Hange, proprietors of the Central Drug Store. This firm is rapidly "getting to the froth," in their line of trade, and we advise our readers to give them a call.

A MEETING of the Fire Department will be held at the rooms of Eagle Fire Engine Co., No. 1, on Monday evening next. All firemen are kindly requested to be present. By order of JOHN HUMMEL, Chief.

AFTER the dust and heat of the Decoration Day march, don't fail to enjoy the quiet ride on Macatawa Bay, and the music in the park given by the band, and thus show that a musical organization is appreciated and will be supported in this city.

WE clip the following item from the National City (Cal) Record, which refers to Dr. T. E. Annis, who recently left this city for the Golden State: "We are pleased to be able to announce that Dr. T. E. Annis, late of Michigan, has purchased the 20 acre lot and fruit ranch of Thomas Walker, lying south of Mr. Aylworth, and that he proposes to make improvements at once upon the same.

In our last issue we stated that it was rumored that a daughter of John Boerman, of Fremont, had received so severe a whipping from her father that she died. We are pleased to say that the child did not die, but received a severe whipping as the following item, taken from the Fremont Indicator, will show: "A case of brutality is reported in the west side of town wherein an unnatural father beat his little eight-year-old girl in an extremely cruel manner. The neighbors threaten to make it uncomfortable for him in that section in case the thing is repeated."

THREE fires occurred in Muskegon during Thursday afternoon and evening. The first at one o'clock burning Holbrook's coal yard buildings and a large quantity of coal, also four cars standing on the Chicago & West Mich. R'y track. At six o'clock a mill in the east part of town known as the "slab" mill was totally consumed. At 8:30 p. m. the large mill on the north side of Muskegon lake, owned by A. H. Petrie, was discovered to be on fire, and before the fire department arrived it was burned to the ground; also the entire stock of lumber and lumber docks. Mr. Petrie at the time, was in Chicago negotiating for the sale of the lumber. The origin of the fires is not yet definitely known but supposed to have caught from sparks from the mill. The schooner Geo. Boyce lying at Petries dock loaded with lumber for Chicago, was also burned. She was valued at $20,000. This vessel was formerly known as the Milan, and was, a few years ago, re-built at Anderson's ship yard in this city.

AMONG the crafts that are missing, and for whose safety almost every hope has been abandoned, is the Antares, a small two-masted schooner, which is old and almost unable to withstand an ordinary squall, much less a terrific gale such as has been raging on the Upper Lakes. She should have arrived here last Saturday, but no tidings of her have been received. The Antares is owned by her Captain, Tom Woltman. Her crew consisted of five persons. They were: Capt. Woltman, his three sons, John, aged 24, Jacob, aged 26, and Wallace aged 15, and a young Swede named Charles Anderson. The remaining members of Capt. Woltman's family, who are at his home on Division street, consist of his wife and two grown daughters. They are in a perfect agony of suspense as to the fate of the father and sons. John Woltman was engaged to be married to Miss Selma Sandman, a companion of his from childhood. The vessel had been insured a short time before starting out on her last trip, but for what amount the people at home can not say. The vessel was engaged in the slab trade. The captain would buy his cargo at certain points in Michigan and sell it in Chicago. The last word the family received from the people on board the vessel was from Muskegon. The letter was received last Wednesday. Mrs. Woltman and her daughters have almost abandoned all hope of ever seeing husband, father, and brothers again.—Chicago Tribune. LATER:—The schooner Antares arrived in Chicago Thursday all safe and sound, having been on this shore during the storm.

VOICES OF THE PAST.

BY MRS. A. R. FERRIS.

There's a whispered song in the evening air.
There's a mystic touch of a spirit hand.
There's a half-felt fragrance floating there
That seems to come from a far-off land;
There's a glad, bright vision greets my eye,
But it quickly melts in the shadowy haze,
I grasp at the dream as it hurries by—
'Tis only a glimpse of other days.

Perchance 'twas a letter the postman brought
From a precious friend whom I used to know
That woke the memories of the long ago
And carried me back to the long ago;
But somehow I sit in the gloaming here
When the crowded day is gone at last,
And list the voices that come to cheer
My weary soul from out of the past.

O, friendships rare of the other days,
O, living loves of the buried past,
Through changing scenes and changing ways
To my shining past I look and grieve
And a precious thought to my soul is given.
As I wander here on this bleak earth shore,
We shall know no other dear friends, in heaven,
And the parting tear we shall shed no more.

THE KING OF HEARTS.

BY GEORGIANA FEATHERSTONHAUGH.

Old Peg fixed her black, beady eyes intently upon the back of Julia, which she shuffled rapidly and dexterously between her long, bony fingers, glancing occasionally as she did so at the bright eyes almost hidden beneath the drooping brim of a summer hat as they gazed expectantly down upon her. The old woman shook her head and muttered a few words in a low, guttural tone as she laid the cards one by one carefully upon the table and eyed the girl.

"The king of hearts," she said, half aloud, "you will have over your hand handsome, and, though he is rich, he will have gained his wealth through unfair means."

She saw the shade steal over the girl's face as she turned away, and she grasped her arm.

"But look ye, child," she continued, detaining her, while the light in her black eyes grew more intense, "your victory and good luck will charm him, and, though in a distant city there awaits you another man good and true, though older by a score of years, and who counts his wealth by the many thousands, your heart will go out to the pale, handsome boy who will make you a proposal of marriage."

The girl shuddered and looked startled as she wrenched her arm away from the fingers that clutched her sleeve and ran passionately out of the hut, throwing down a piece of silver in her mad haste.

"How does that old hag know that I have spent my vacation away from home in order to escape old Stephen White, and now who is this King of Hearts?"

"Where are you going, my pretty maid?"

Polly glanced up suddenly, as she recognized the voice of her Cousin Jule. "Been to have your fortune told, hey, Polly?" she asked, linking her arm within that of her cousin.

Polly blushed, and tried not to look guilty.

"That is about one of the first things people do on coming to Seabreeze. And what did old Peg say? She told me once that I would live until I was 99. Pleasant prospect."

But Polly turned the subject quickly, for, if the truth must be said, Polly was rather given to superstition and was rather inclined to believe in fortune telling.

"That is for being in a chronic state of poverty, Jule. I have but this one muslin dress, and look at that ugly rent. I am surprised that it was not my white mull—the only dress I have wherewith to captivate all Seabreeze. Mon Dieu, what a cruel provision of Providence to distribute so unequally among us poor mortals."

"But, Polly, you must remember that Seabreeze Cottage is not a fashionable place, like the hotels, and then you know that your bathing suit here is the most important, and you are quite perfect in that."

They had reached the long pier, and were standing looking out upon the vast expanse of blue waters, dotted with white sails.

"I suppose it is very lively up at the hotels, and there are a great many people," Polly said, turning her eyes in the direction of the hotel piazza, a good distance back from the beach.

"Yes," Jule answered, "there are plenty of women and children and oldish kind of men who seldom go into the surf, but generally play the role of spectators. I suppose they are afraid of—and the girl touched her bright hair significantly. "But the younger men do not come down from the city until the end of the week, if they come at all, and then the girls at the hotel pounce down upon them before one can say Jack Robinson."

"I should think it would be a haven for the lesser lights of society, for they could at least have the satisfaction of becoming favorites once a year," the other returned abstractedly.

"No, indeed, it is the very time they stay away out of revenge, I suppose. They go fishing, or out West to visit some friend's ranch and get a breath of Colorado or Dakota air."

"Well, I would do the same if I only received a gracious smile when no one better could be found. But what is that setting yonder upon that bowlder? It certainly resembles a stern lord of creation. Is it one of your oldish non-bathers, or is it one of the rarer kind? Let me see if I can analyze him at this distance. He wears glasses, for I can see the gold rims gleaming in the sun. He has a blonde mustache and carries a cane or umbrella, and he is smoking a cigar. He is undoubtedly one of the rarer kind, and would probably say to himself, 'Who the deuce are you? Should we venture nearer? But come, let us take a closer observation, you know, under the guise of a stroll, of course."

Jule hesitated. "He might consider us rude and be far-seeing enough to discover our ruse."

"Don't be prudish, please; you need not look at him. You can direct your attention to the boats with the flapping sails, while I do the looking, for I am quite anxious to see one of your seabreeze tourists." And, being possessed of a stronger will than her companion, they were soon walking in that direction.

"Yes, it is one of the rarer kind," Polly said, lowering her voice; to her cousin who, was, gazing at the white sails with an air of deep attention.

Suddenly Polly uttered a shrill scream, which sounded up and down the beach, at the same time losing her hold upon her cousin's silk parasol, which the frolicsome wind caught. It careened madly for a moment along the edge of the water, then took a sudden leap and bobbed and danced out upon a high wave.

Jule looked startled, while the occupant of the bowlder came hastily forward. "That horrible goat, do—do please drive it away, it is looking straight at me," Polly cried, "and my parasol, it will be ruined," clasping her hands despairingly.

Paul Oldthorp stroked his mustache, as he, with one dexterous stride placed himself between Polly and the innocent nannie, who had moved to a fresh nibbling place, every now and then shaking its long beard and giving vent to a plaintive baa. Should he first drive away the harmless beast, or should he rescue the parasol, which resembled an immense crimson peony cast upon the water, he vaguely wondered? But he was equal to both emergencies, for, taking off his straw hat, he waved it frantically at the grazing goat, at the same time uttering a loud shoo, shoo, scat, hist, causing it to abandon its browsing field in fright, then, springing to the edge of the water, rescued the floating treasure, just as it was brought to the shore upon an incoming wave.

Polly took the streaming parasol, and regarded it mournfully. "It was her principal background to set off her white mull dress, and now it was quite spoiled. "Perhaps if you hang it on this tree in the sun it will dry faster," Oldthorp suggested, adjusting it firmly to a swaying bough, where it swung to and fro, while Polly rubbed off the wet sand with her handkerchief.

"I suppose the mariners will think it is a beacon light," she said, laughing. "I am afraid you will consider me a woful coward," with a deprecating glance at the distant goat, then burst into a merry laugh, into which both her cousin and Oldthorp joined.

"I do not imagine the goat would have done you any possible harm," he said, looking into Polly's flushed, smiling face.

"But Polly has always lived in the city, and she is apt to be a little timid," Jule said, in a half apologetic way.

"Ah! I see," he replied, again stroking his mustache. "You would not have made a very brave helpmate for Nosh in his journey up to Ararat, I am afraid."

Polly looked up quickly. "You are making fun of me now; but if I had been chosen for Noah's companion, I should have insisted upon sitting on the roof of the ark with an umbrella," and she reached out her hand to her own to see if it showed signs of dryness.

"A red silk one, no doubt," Oldthorp replied, with a smile, unfastening the swinging one and placing it in the girl's hand.

The while, the "King of Hearts" and the words of the old sibyl kept ringing in Polly's ears. They were walking in the direction of Seabreeze Cottage, after having parted from their companion. The day was fast closing in, and the sun was setting like a ball of fire in the west.

"I wonder who he is," Polly said reflectively. "Did you ever see him before, Jule?"

Jule shrugged her shoulders. "Never," she responded. "Perhaps he is one of the party of poker players staying at the hotel. Tom says there is such a party."

"Well, it was quite a little adventure at any rate; but I do hope we will not meet him again."

It was a lovely morning; the air was hazy and soft, and the breakers were falling gently as they sang a monotonous song upon the shore. Polly was sauntering slowly toward the beach, with her bathing suit tucked snugly under her arm. All Seabreeze seemed to be taking advantage of the fine day, judging from the number of bathers disporting themselves in the water. Many strollers and loungers were scattered, singly and in groups, upon the shore, watching the sport with no little merriment, their bright dresses and gay parasols lending a cheerfulness to the scene.

It had been nearly a week since Polly had again ventured in the direction in which she found herself walking today. Not since the encounter with the stranger who had occupied the bowlder. But she rather avoided the place, and the hotel people, fearing that Jule's random words of their chance acquaintance being a poker-player might be verified she had come that way thinking that he had already become weary of the monotony of Seabreeze, and had sought a more congenial resort. Polly's eyes were bent upon the ground, as she tripped lightly along; but, by some undefinable impulse, she suddenly raised them, and there, sitting upon the bowlder in the same spot she saw the object of her passing thoughts. She felt her face grow red. Should she bow, or should she only pass on? she wondered; he may have forgotten the circumstance altogether; and then as matters stood how could she possibly recognize him? She gave a hurried glance at the figure and then looked in an opposite direction. But Oldthorp left his seat and sauntered toward her, making it impossible for Polly to do otherwise than look at the tall form standing only a few feet away. She raised her eyes and met his gaze with a faint smile.

"Like many others, I see you are a lover of the surf, Miss Fletcher," he said, stepping to her side, "though I cannot recollect seeing you for the past few days."

Polly looked up in surprise. Had he actually watched for her among all these people?

"I am not a regular bather," she replied, at the same time remembering that she had scarcely missed a day since her stay in Seabreeze. Yet how could she say "I have been avoiding you?"

"Ah," he said, "I have the advantage of you for I have not missed a single day of this delightful weather."

Polly laughed. "You have the advantage of me in more than one way," glancing up into her face.

"How?" he asked. "You already know my name, while I have not the slightest idea of yours, or by what means you ascertained mine."

"I hope you will pardon the oversight," he said, handing her a small card which he had taken from his pocket, quite regardless of the last part of her remark.

"Paul Oldthorp," was the name engraved upon its face.

Polly felt ill at ease as she walked along the beach toward the bathing-house. Why did the people stare at her and her companion, and seem to regard them with so much curiosity? Who was this Paul Oldthorp, she uneasily wondered, while two vivid red spots burnt upon her cheeks? How angry Uncle Felix would be if he should accidentally hear of it, but she would not tell him, and when she left Seabreeze all would be forgotten, for her uncle took but little interest in the people at the hotel.

"Paul Oldthorp, that is his name, Jule," said Polly, when she returned home quite breathlessly. "There is his card and he is coming this evening. I was obliged to be polite. I could not help it," seeing the astonishment depicted upon her cousin's face. "He invited himself in a very diplomatic way or rather led me on to extend the invitation; but perhaps after one visit we can manage to prevail upon him to take long walks, and give us lessons in botany, and by that means we can keep him out of Uncle Felix's way."

As the evening began to steal over the quiet cottage, Polly donned her white mull dress, for in spite of her and her cousin's forebodings as to the identity of their new-found acquaintance Polly felt a keen desire to bring to the surface her every charm, and she wondered why she experienced a feeling of happiness, such as she had never felt when in the presence of old Stephen White, who was a model of goodness and propriety, and whose attentions to her were so distasteful, and yet her acquaintance with Paul Oldthorp had been one of such short duration, and he—Polly covered her face with her hands and tried not to think of him.

If he was what Jule had almost asserted he was, what a terrible state of affairs, to be sure. "He has wealth, though gained through unfair means," were the words that came back to her. She heard the gate click, and she knew that he had come. There was a sort of a caress in Oldthorp's touch as he gently pressed Polly's small hand for an instant, and it brought the color to her cheek.

Jule fluttered uneasily about the room, hardly allowing her eyes to rest upon the face of their guest, fearing that in his countenance she might discover proofs of her suspicion.

It was difficult to tell how or where the hours had flown. They had taken no heed of the time, only their own enjoyment, and when the great clock in the hall chimed out the hour of ten, they were all surprised.

The evening had seemed very short to Polly as she stood saying a few parting words at the gate. She remained long after Oldthorp's form had vanished amid the shadows of the overhanging trees.

"What does it say, Jule?" Polly asked, holding up a card, when she entered the house. "I found it lying outside of the gate."

Jule took it and read: "Ned, come down and see the fun; stakes running high. P. O."

Polly looked quite miserable. "Could we have better proof? Just think of it, Jule—a gambler!"

The days came and went. Polly never ventured near the small bathing-house, and the pier was quite forsaken by her presence, and she made various threats of returning home and bask in the smiles of old Stephen White. She had no alternative—that, or always teaching the young ideas how to shoot. They had taken a long walk one day, and were sitting upon a fallen tree, surrounded by green, feathery ferns, while they listened to the laving water rise and fall, with a swishing sound, upon the beach in the distance. They had not uttered a word for at least five minutes, when Jule looked up and suddenly exclaimed, "Oh, Polly, there is Paul Oldthorp walking along the beach! I am going to hide; come along," tugging at her cousin's sleeve, who sat perfectly still and did not appear inclined to follow, and in a moment Jule had vanished into a clump of bushes. She had only time to gather her skirts about her when she heard Oldthorp's voice.

"You seem to have taken possession of Fernwood," he said, seating himself upon the other end of the tree. "Are you alone?"

"No," Polly replied, hesitatingly. "That is, not now."

Oldthorp gazed at her curiously. "You seem to have overcome your dread of goats and—wild cats, too, I suppose. You looked very desolate sitting here alone as I came up."

"You are very good to say so, I am sure," Polly answered. "I was just thinking of starting for home when you appeared," and she made a movement as if to put her words into effect.

"Oh! not just yet," he said, laying a delectable hand upon her arm. "I am going away for good pretty soon, and perhaps I may not have another opportunity of saying what I have been wishing to say to you for many days. Why have you been avoiding me so persistently?" he asked suddenly.

Polly's face grew red and trembled slightly. "I have not been avoiding you," guiltily. "Seabreeze is a lovely place to spend a few idle weeks and one is apt to regret leaving it," she tried to say in a matter-of-fact voice.

"That is not what I regret," he replied hurriedly. "It is leaving you, Polly, don't you know; cannot you feel that I love you, and have ever since the day I rescued your umbrella, and I want you to be my wife; promise me before I go." He had taken her hand, and was searching her face with passionate eyes.

But she drew it away gently. "Please don't," she laughed, "it is very ridiculous. Mr. Oldthorp, they say that every one at the seaside has a passion to you; but please do not think of me, I cannot possibly marry you." She tried to make her voice sound light and careless, as if she believed all she was saying.

"Then you do not care for me," he replied.

"I will not say that, for I do care for you a great deal; but I cannot marry you, indeed I cannot."

"Why?" he asked.

"Because," Oldthorp laughed. "Because is not a reason."

"It is all I can give, though you may think it is very weak."

"Won't you try to think of it before you leave Seabreeze," he asked pleadingly, following her as she arose to go. Was it necessary for her to think of it? Had she not done so already? The walk home was a long, quiet one. Polly tried hard to urge on the conversation, but Oldthorp maintained a moody silence.

A week later Polly found herself gazing out of the narrow car window, and watching Seabreeze being left far behind her. She was going home to old Stephen White's effusive attentions, and the noisy throng of school children. "If there isn't Dwite Paul, the gambler and his party, who have been staying at the Palace," exclaimed a voice directly behind Polly; "the man with the glasses over yonder, and those immense diamonds."

Polly looked, too, her heart giving sundry loud thumps, but, contrary to her expectations, she did not recognize in the man with the glasses and blonde mustache or the rest of the party any familiar face, or one that resembled Paul Oldthorp.

The door at the end of the car opened, and Oldthorp himself entered. Immediately his eye fell upon her, and he came toward her.

"Are you leaving Seabreeze?" he asked, his countenance quickly lighting. "There seems to be a sudden exodus."

Polly's lips trembled, and her eyes filled with tears. How she had misjudged him after all, and now how could she make amends?

"Polly!" Oldthorp exclaimed, seeing her tears, "you are unhappy. Can I help you?"

"I was in the wrong," Polly managed to gasp; "but can you forgive me without an explanation?"

Oldthorp looked puzzled. "If you will promise what I asked you a week ago, I agree to remain in the dark," he replied, laughing.

It was many months afterward before Polly explained to Oldthorp what her fears had been, and of her visit to the hut of Old Peg.

The First Elephant in America.

A correspondent of the Boston Journal writes: "The first elephant on exhibition in New England, and said to have been the first in the United States, was killed at Alfred, Maine, in the year 1817, about one mile west from the village, in a piece of woods near the Round pond, so called, on the old post road leading to Dover, N. H. A man by the name of Davis had an altercation with the manager, the day previous, while on exhibition at Alfred, and sought revenge by shooting the elephant. The affair caused a great sensation at the time throughout New England. The locality is known and pointed out to this day as the spot where the elephant was killed."

What He Meant.

In a suit before a Detroit Justice the defendant desired to prove that his financial standing was solid, and when his witness had taken the stand and testified that the defendant enjoyed the reputation of promptly paying his debts, the opposing counsel asked:

"Mr. Blank, you say you consider Mr. White perfectly good?"

"Yes, sir."

"Yes, sir."

"Mr. Blank, loan me the sum named," said the defendant, as he reached out his hand.

"What I meant to say was that I'd lend you $25 on a first mortgage on about $2,000 worth of real estate! Make out your papers!"

A KISSER FROM KISSTHLE.

The Venerable Commander-in-Chief and the Pretty Actress.

(From the San Francisco Post.)

The return of Miss Alice Harrison to the city recalls an incident of her career when a member of the famous California Company of four or five years ago, which may still provoke a smile from those who witnessed the occurrence in question. About the time of Miss H.'s farewell benefit at that theater Gen. Sherman was visiting the city, and, with his staff, occupied a box at said performance. Now, whatever difference of opinion may exist as to the military renown of the General or our armies, there is no dispute as to his being the champion kisser of the continent. In fact, the hero of Atlanta may be said to possess a mania for labial salutations of a fatherly sort, and is known to frequently indulge in the proud boast that he has kissed 90 per cent. of all the pretty girls in the United States. His chief of staff once computed the General's monthly kissing average, large all the year round, dry and wet seasons included, at about 1,806, or, say, in round numbers, about 22,000 kisses per each kissing fiscal year. If the General had only added babies to the list of his subjects, he would have kissed his way into the White House years ago; but his reluctance to waste valuable time and raw material in the pursuit of his hobby induces him, with the true instincts of a veteran professor of osculation, to select only the prettiest of the fair sex for that honor.

At the benefit referred to, no sooner did Miss Harrison appear on the stage than the old warhorse snuffed the battle from afar and began to grow restless and uneasy. The staff winked at each other, and soon their chief suggested the propriety of going behind the scenes to compliment the beneficiary.

"We must now ask our readers to accompany us to the little Danish settlement of Eerieyland, on the borders of the Baltic, in the year 1831. A village festival is being held, and as usual the distinguished visitors gathered to salute the girl who has taken the annual prize for cooking and virtue. There is a young American officer amid the number, who, instead of printing the customary chaste salute upon the cheek of the village celebrity, folds her in his sky-blue arms and settles down on her frontpiece like a hydraulic pump on an assessment list. The minutes fly by, and, just as the spectators are about drawing their stop-watches on the last quarter, the young officer comes to the surface again. As he recovers his exhausted wind, the weather-beaten Captain of a wrecking crew approaches and says:

"Young man, I'll give you your own price to ship with me as a diver."

"And why?"

"Because you can hold your breath longer than any man in the business."

We merely relate this little incident to emphasize our story. The kisser was young Tecumseh. But to resume. As soon as the staff were behind the scenes, Gen. Sherman pitched in with the remark that he hadn't kissed anything since breakfast. He was standing in the middle of the stage, with his back to the curtain, and absorbed in bestowing a paternal kiss upon Alice and feeling like a just-admitted angel sliding down a buttered rainbow, when that impish young lady saw that the prompter was about to ring up the "drop." Quickly placing her hands over the General's ears, so he could not hear the bell, she backed him against the curtain. As every one knows, this is wound around a huge wooden roller on the inside of the canvas. The General's coat-tails were caught by this as the curtain went up, and, before the prompter could reverse the motion, the astounded man was suspended about ten feet from the stage, like a sheet from a clothes-line.

The audience went off into hysterics of merriment, while the members of the staff lay down on the floor of their box and absolutely howled, for they only knew that those convulsively-clutched legs and venerable gaiters belonged to the Commander-in-Chief of all our armies. But the first thing we know the General's coat-tails will give way, so we will ring down the curtain.

Artemus Ward.

Artemus Ward is a worthy companion of Irving, Holmes and Lowell, and nobly excels Mark Twain and Bret Harte, in that his wit is never impure, never immoral, never irreverent. His lecture on "The Mormons," the London Times, quoted by Mr. Hays, describes as "utterly free from offense, although the opportunities for offense are obviously numerous." The lecturer and contributor to Punch says of himself: "I never stain my pages even with mild profanity. In the first place it is wicked, and, in the next, it is not funny." Strange that so many would-be wits lack wit to discern this truism! Another sentence of Artemus Ward is in itself an answer to a dozen Ingersoll lectures.

"Are you a preacher?" says the royal Duke, slightly sarcastical.

"No, sir. But I believe in meetin'-houses. Show me a place where there isn't any meetin'-houses, and preachers is never seen, and I'll show you a place where old hats are stuffed into broken winders, where the children are dirty and ragged, where gates have no hinges, where the wimin are alshophed, and where maps of the devil's wild land air painted upon men's shirt-buzzards with tobacco juice! That's what I'll show you. Let us consider what the preachers do for us before we abode em."

Artemus Ward's private life was spotless, and his personality most engaging. The writer resides near the birthplace at Waterford, Me., of the boy, Charles Farrar Brown. I find that the testimony of men who were his schoolmates accords with that published by intimate associates of his manhood, to-wit, that with all his inborn love of merriment and adventure, he was exceptionally pure-minded, considerate and unselfish. He sought not to wield his wit at cost of another's pain. He was a devoted son. He would talk to his friends of his mother as other young men talk of a sweetheart. Mrs. Brown yet lives at Waterford, and welcomes every visitor who comes to honor the memory of her son. Artemus Ward's career was pathetically brief. Printer's boy in a dozen New England villages and cities, editor in Toledo and in Cleveland, lecturer and traveler over the land, at the age of 29 he was the most popular humorous speaker in America. He crossed the Atlantic, and his success in London seemed boundless. But meantime he was rapidly wasting with consumption, and his face turned with his heart homeward, and northward. But as he was about embarking at Southampton he died—March 6, 1867—having not completed his 31st year.—Rev. T. C. Jerome, in Chicago Advance.

Tunneling the Channel.

A century ago four passengers journeying from London to Paris by the lumbering coach and the tedious sloop were discussing the different modes by which the English Channel might be crossed more expeditiously. Their names were Montgolfier, the balloonist; Argand, the lamp manufacturer; Revilleon, the great Parisian manufacturer of paper, and Sir John Sinclair, the statistician, and their conversation is described in the latter's published correspondence. A bridge of boats was the suggestion of one, the balloon was the proposal of another. Sinclair then burst in with the remark: "What do you think of a tunnel?" At this idea the four voyagers were highly amused and at once proceeded to discuss its practicability. The result of the discussion was that, although the irksomeness of the journey was relieved by Sinclair's idea and the criticisms which it provoked, the feasibility of constructing so large a tunnel was negative.

SAVE THE INNOCENTS.

In measles, scarlatina, and other diseases of childhood, when the disease abates and disappears the child may be left with dropsical effusions, with ulcers in the ears, and, where diphtheria has extended to the mouth and lips, at the corners of the mouth. Without the blood-purifying effects of Hood's Sarsaparilla recovery is very slow, as such ulcers are very obstinate. With it the very best success has been obtained.

After diphtheria—Seven children of JAMES H. BURGESS, Middleboro, Mass., had diphtheria the same spring. All survived, but complained of pains, bodily distress and cramps. Five bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla cured the whole seven.

For five years after he had scarlet fever the little son of JAMES V. A. PROUDFOOT, Chicago, suffered from a foul-smelling sore about his ear. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured him.

After vaccination—Two children of Mrs. C. L. THOMPSON, West Warren, Mass., broke out with running sores, after vaccination, so dreadful the mother thought she would lose both. They were entirely cured of these sores by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

A Splendid Remedy for Lung Diseases.

Dr. Robert Newton, late President of the Eclectic College of the City of New York, and formerly of Cincinnati, Ohio, used Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam very extensively in his practice, as many of his patients, now living, and restored to health by the use of this invaluable medicine, can amply testify. He always said that so good a remedy ought not to be considered merely as a patent medicine, but that it ought to be prescribed freely by every physician as a sovereign remedy in all cases of Lung Disease. It is a sure cure for Consumption, and has no equal for all pectoral complaints.

Kellinger's Liniment.

An Open Secret.

The fact is well understood that the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT is by far the best external known for man or beast. The reason why becomes an "open secret" when we explain that "Mustang" penetrates skin, flesh and muscle to the very bone, removing all disease and soreness. No other liniment does this, hence none other is so largely used or does such worlds of good.

The Wonderful Efficacy of DR. SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS

Has been so frequently and satisfactorily proven that it seems almost superfluous to say anything more in their favor. The immense and constantly increasing demand for them, both in this and foreign countries, is the best evidence of their value. Their sale to-day in the United States is far greater than any other cathartic medicine. This demand is not spasmodic, it is regular and steady. It is not of to-day or yesterday, it is an increase that has been steadily growing for the last thirty-five years. What are the reasons for this great and growing demand?

Dr. Schenck's Mandrake Pills contain no mercury, and yet they act with wonderful effect upon the liver. They cleanse the stomach and bowels of all irritating matter, which, if allowed to remain, poisons the blood, and brings on Malaria, Chills and Fever, and many other diseases. They give health and strength to the digestive organs. They create appetite and give vigor to the whole system. They are in fact the medicine of all others which should be taken in times like the present, when malarial and other epidemics are raging, as they prepare the system to resist attacks of disease of every character.

Dr. Schenck's Mandrake Pills are sold by all druggists at 25c. per box, or sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price.

Dr. Schenck's Book on Consumption, Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia, in English or German, is sent free to all. Address Dr. J. H. SCHENCK & SON, Philadelphia, Pa.

A Texas Camp Meeting.

Paul Denton's description of water has been so widely quoted, and recited from platforms all over the land, that it is familiar to nearly every body but the circumstances under which it was delivered are not so familiar, and we reprint from an old Canada Temperance Advocate, of July 2, 1860, a graphic account of Temperance in an early day in Texas:

During the last week in September, 1836, the first successful camp meeting was held in eastern Texas. I employ the epithet "successful," because several previous failures had apparently rendered efforts of the kind perfectly hopeless. Indeed, the region in question at this period was most uncongenial to religious and moral enterprise. The count bordering on the Sabine had been occupied rather than settled by a class of adventurers almost as wild as the savages they had scarcely expelled, and the beasts of prey which still disputed their domain of primeval forest. Professional gamblers, refugees from every land, forgers of false coin, thieves, robbers, and murderers, interspersed among the race of uneducated hunters and herdsmen, made up the strange social miscellany, without courts or prisons, or churches or schools, or even the shadow of civil authority or subordination—a sort of pandemonium, where passion was enthroned, with a bowie-knife for its sceptre. Let no one accuse me of exaggeration, for the sake of dramatic effect; I am speaking now of Shelby county, where ten years later, 50 persons were poisoned to death at a marriage supper.

It will be obvious that in such a community very few would be disposed to patronize camp meetings; and accordingly, a dozen different trials, at various times, had never collected a hundred hearers on any occasion. But even these were not allowed to worship in peace; uniformly, the first day or night a band of armed desperadoes, headed by the notorious Walt Foeman, the executioner of the Shelby lynchings, broke in the altar, scattered the preachers to a gratuitous robe of tar and feathers. Hence the prudent evangelists soon learned to shun the left bank of the Sabine, as if it was infested with a cohort of demons, and two whole years elapsed before any new attempt was made to raise the cross in so perilous a field.

The Day Approaches

THAT THE PEOPLE ARE ALL WAITING FOR SELLS BROTHERS' ENORMOUS RAILROAD SHOWS COMING IN A VERY FEW DAYS.

The big consolidation, which the Sells Brothers have effected of their various amusement enterprises, and which requires many colossal tents in which to exhibit its numberless great features and novel attractions, comes to Grand Rapids Saturday, June 2, Allexan June 5.

Its straightforward and emphatic style of advertising, the splendid reputation which precedes it, and the high character of the credentials it offers, have operated to run its stock way above par in the public estimation, and everybody seems to believe its promises and is bound to see its wonders. By massing their entire zoological collections the management have secured a menagerie beyond all precedent in its magnitude and its numbers of living specimens of strange and rare wild animals and curious birds; yet not content with this achievement, they have added largely to their catalogue during the winter just past, including quite a number of animals that are new to America. The pair of Royal Hippopotami, which excited such interest last season, and which were believed then to be full-grown, have increased many pounds in weight, and inches in stature and dimensions, and the management are strong in the belief that they will become happy parents ere the season is over. Should such be the case, it will be the only instance of a hippopotamus being born in America, and will constitute the old ones and their offspring the zoological wonders of the day and age. The snow-white Buffalo, captured in Dakota last February, the Auroids, a recent importation from Lithuania, the Crested-Camels, the White Zebras, the five-ton Double-horned White Senegambian Rhinoceros, the Woolly Elephants from the Malay Archipelago, the Abyssinian Vlacke Vark, and the Malacca Babiroussa, are features which can be seen in no other collections.

In the magnificent parade, which takes place on the morning of the day of exhibition, will be introduced the beautiful new national tableau of "Columbia Surrounded by her Court of Beauty," in which will be presented the four handsomest women in America.

Baldness may be avoided by the use of Hall's Hair Renewer, which prevents the falling out of the hair, and stimulates it to renewed growth and luxuriance. It also restores faded or gray hair to its original dark color, and radically cures nearly every disease of the scalp.

GEN. JOHN C. LEE tells of a captain who seems to be a sort of regimental Mark Tapley—always saying something cherry when everybody was down in the mouth. One night when the men came into camp wet, miserable and starving—not a cracker left—the captain hustled about cheerfully and got a bright fire going, and rubbing his hands in the j-dlest manner over the fire, said: "Well, boys, if I had some milk I'd have some mush and milk, if I had some meal."

Marvellous Cure of Stone in the Bladder—Large Stones Removed by Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

From the Fitchfield (Mass.) Eagle.

Stone in the Bladder is a very dangerous ailment; but many most remarkable cures have of late been wrought by "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy"—the invention of Dr. Kennedy of Rondout, N. Y.

Another striking case is now added to the list. Mr. Peter Lawler, of Dalton, Mass., states in a letter to Dr. Kennedy that he had been troubled with bladder complaint for 14 years, and had consulted at different times seven physicians; but nothing beyond temporary allayment of the pain had been worked. Towards the end of last January Mr. Lawler called on Dr. Kennedy. Sounding him the doctor "struck stone." He decided that Mr. Lawler should first try the "Favorite Remedy," so as, if possible, to avoid an operation. And here is the remarkable result: "Dear Doctor Kennedy—The day after I came home I passed two gravel stones, and am doing nicely now. If you would like to see the stones I will send them to you." This letter bears date "Dalton, Mass., Feb. 6th," and is signed "Peter Lawler." The stones, which are so large as to warrant for "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" the claim that it is the most successful specific for Stone yet discovered, are now in Dr. Kennedy's possession. Incidentally Mr. Lawler also states that the "Favorite Remedy" at the same time cured him of a stubborn case of Rheumatism; and it is a fact that in all afflictions arising out of disorder of the liver or urinary organs it is a searching remedy and works marvellous benefits. It is in itself almost a medicine chest. Order it of your druggist. Price $1.00 a bottle.

A MAN

WHO IS UNACQUAINTED WITH THE GEOGRAPHY OF THIS COUNTRY, WILL SEE BY EXAMINING THIS MAP, THAT THE

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC R'y,

Being the Great Central Line, affords to travelers, by reason of its unrivaled geographical position, the shortest and best route between the East, Northeast and Southeast, and the West, Northwest and Southwest.

It is literally and strictly true, that its connections are all of the principal lines of road between the Atlantic and the Pacific.

By its main line and branches it reaches Chicago, Joliet, Peoria, Ottawa, La Salle, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Keokuk, Knoxville, Fairfield, Des Moines, West Liberty, Iowa City, Atlantic, Avoca, Audubon, Marian, Guthrie Center and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; and Leavenworth and Atchison in Kansas, and the hundreds of cities, villages and towns intermediate. The

"GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE,"

As it is familiarly called, offers to travelers all the advantages and comforts incident to a smooth track, safe bridges, Union Depots at all connecting points, Fast Express Trains, composed of COMMODIOUS, WELL VENTILATED, WELL HEATED, FINELY UPHOLSTERED and ELEGANT DAY COACHES; a line of the MOST MAGNIFICENT HORTON RECLINING CHAIR CARS ever built; PULLMAN'S latest designed and handsomest PALACE SLEEPING CARS, and DINING CARS that are acknowledged by press and people to be the FINEST RUN UPON ANY ROAD IN THE COUNTRY, and in which superior meals are served to travelers at the low rate of SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS EACH.

THREE TRAINS each way between CHICAGO and the MISSOURI RIVER.

TWO TRAINS each way between CHICAGO and MINNEAPOLIS and ST. PAUL, via the famous

ALBERT LEA ROUTE.

A New and Direct Line, via Seneca and Kankakee, has recently been opened, between Newport News, Richmond, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and La Fayette, and Council Bluffs, St. Paul, Minneapolis and intermediate points.

All Through Passengers carried on Fast Express Trains.

MANHOOD

How Lost, How Restored!

Just published, new edition of Dr. CULVERWELL'S UNBURNED ESSAY on the radical cure of Spermatorrhoea or Seminal Weakness. Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence, or sexual extravagance, etc.

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, post paid, on receipt of six cents or two postage stamps. Address
