The Hope College Sigma Xi Club, a member of the honorary Scientific Research Society, student has sponsored two public lectures by Dr. Terry Myers, a nationally recognized geneticist, on Thursday, Nov. 5, on the Hope Campus.

At 11 a.m., Dr. Myers will deliver a talk on "Ciliated Applications of Modern Genetics" in Peake Science Center, room 104. This will be followed by an evening lecture in Winants Auditorium of Graves Hall at 8 p.m. on "The Ethical Dilemma Surrounding Human Birth Defects."

Dr. Myers is a 1967 national leader for the Sigma Xi Scientific Research Society. Born in Tennessee, he studied biochemistry at Michigan State, molecular genetics at the University of Florida State (Ph.D. 1969), and medicine at the University of Virginia (M.D. 1973) with a residency in pediatrics at Creighton University. He is currently professor of pediatrics, obstetrics, and gynecology at East Tennessee State. His research interest in clinical genetics and DNA has resulted in numerous professional publications.

The Sigma Xi has been conducting a national lecture program for over 50 years in which outstanding researchers have presented talks in chapters and clubs and with the public. For more information about the lectures by Dr. Myers contact the Hope College Sigma Xi President, Dr. Richard Brockmeyer at 794-7314.

Chemistry Club To Present "Magic Show"

By John Higuchi
anchor Staff Writer

Science Day attracted hundreds of high school students around the midterm perimeter to join Hope College in its activities. Whether it was biology, psychology, physics or chemistry that interested the high school students, the prospects were impressed by the research facilities that Hope College had to offer.

They were exposed to a wide variety of opportunities ranging from the study of nuclear Magnetic Resonance Spectrophotometer to the study of human genetic toxicology. One of the highlights of the day was the annual Chemistry Magic Show. More than a dozen students participated in generating some smoke, some heat and some laughs from the visitors.

"Things went pretty well," said Jill McCandless, a Hope chemistry major. However, my reaction took a long time before it went from brown to blue to silver, so I kept telling them stories to keep them entertained...They had a great time.

The success of the magic show for the high school students has brought the need to give the show for Hope students. On Friday, Nov. 6, the first ever National Chemistry Day will be sponsored on the Hope College campus. In the local student affiliate group of the American Chemical Society, the Hope Chemistry Club has decided for this occasion the Club has decided to repeat the Chemical Magic Show for the campus community.

"It's high-time that we do something fun for our own students," said Professor Williams, who is the Chemistry Club advisor. It will occur at 3:30 p.m. in Peake Science, room 50. If the demand is sufficient, it will be repeated at 4:30 p.m.

The Chemistry Club hopes to see a wide variety of students there. It is not limited to just science students - bring a history major or your friends for a magical time. "It is bound to be a magical time...you will come and enjoy the good times with your peers," said like Mike Dilemna Surrounding Human Genetics, and eating cider around the midwest perimeter to escape.

The Sigma Xi Sorority held a Halloween party for underprivileged children, something which they hope will become one of their annual events.

The Sigmas were host to approximately 20 children from Lincoln Elementary School. The costume-clad youngsters, ranging in years from kindergarten through second grade, spent the afternoon at the Sigma House playing games, having a special pumpkin and eating cider and donuts.

In past years, the Sigmas, along with their brother fraternity, have thrown a Christmas party for some of the underprivileged children of Holland, complete with food, games, and a visit from Santa and Mrs. Claus. The continued success of the Christmas parties prompted the idea of having the Halloween party, which, too, turned out to be very successful. Besides throwing a Halloween party for 65 children, the Sigmas had an eventful semester on campus. They entertained Sigma alumni at a Homecoming Luncheon at the Alumni Inn, as well as participating in the Homecoming Parade and winning first place in the float competition (with special thanks to the inactive Frater brothers for their help and support).

The Sigmas have also participated in various social activities with fraternities and were servers at the Nightmare breakfast. Future plans include the All-College Sing on Nov. 13, a formal at Anway Grand Plaza on the 14th and the annual Christmas party in December.

Presentation In Grand Rapids

"The Social and Spiritual Implications of AIDS", a panel presentation, will be offered on Thursday, Nov. 5, at 7 p.m. at the Fountain Street Church in Grand Rapids.

Local clergy and agencies will discuss concerns with persons with AIDS and how they can reach the family, friends and community to help support. The cost is $5 and pre-registration is required. Those interested should call Planned Parenthood at 774-7005.

More College Campuses Adding Condom Vending Machines

By Mike O'Keefe
College Press Service

This is the fall a seemingly endless string of campuses has added condom vending machines. The student newspaper, The State News, is one of the major proponents.

Students at Eastern Michigan University began a campaign recently to get condom vending machines in their halls. Dozens of other schools are busily debating the propriety of making the devices available.

Phi Beta Kappa. William Kent, says students does not see Hope College acquiring such machines ever, especially not in the near future.

"If people must engage in sexual activity, we would emphasize the use of condoms throughout the year. However, if they are not available, the students who attend Hope are young adults. If they desire to use birth control of any kind, they can obtain it from a number of pharmacies in town easier than they can get a flu vaccination," said Kent. "It is said that it takes a life or death situation (AIDS) to encourage the use of condoms, and other sexually transmitted diseases are not reason enough to abstain," said Kent.

He also said that part of the reason Hope would not allow such machines was due to its religious affiliation.

Hope does provide free counseling to students who are interested in birth control devices, but do not provide actual birth control devices.

Nurse Sharon Blankens of the Health Clinic said, "The single largest reason we do not provide birth control devices is because the parents would never allow it.

We have caught a lot of flack from parents in the past for merely trying to educate students on practicing safe sex, so they would certainly never allow us to do something like condoms in the health clinic, let alone the dormitories.

Sponsors of condom vending machines give students anonymous, convenient 24-hour access to condoms, an important value because sexual encounters are often unplanned and spontaneous.

"We're an educational institution," explained Jane Harris of Belville Community College, "and we serve a lot of things and one of those is sexually transmitted diseases.

Hope has hired a new part-time health educator, Linda Dahanian, to coordinate programs on AIDS, sexuality, and human relations. Also, an AIDS awareness video has been purchased and will be shown to all first-year students before the end of the year.

University of New Mexico health center Director Dr. Olga Eaton believes "condoms are a very good way of preventing the spread of sexually transmitted disease. For the University of New Mexico is toying with the idea of installing the machines.

Still, "vending machines are not the only answer," said Betty Newcomb of the University of California-Irvine AIDS Education Committee. Some critics, in fact, say the condoms are not even a good answer.

Two months ago, researchers at the University of Massachusetts Medical School in Worcester expressed doubts condoms are fail-safe protection, if only because they can become exposed to heat or break.

Still others worry the condom vending machines effectively signal students that sexual promiscuity is permissible or advisable in dorms.

Conservative groups in particular argue colleges should be telling students monogamy and sexual abstinence are the most effective ways to avoid AIDS.

"We tell students abstinence is a choice, but not all college students will choose abstinence," said Dr. Linda Pneuman, a physician at the Colorado health center. "We give them other options. Monogamy is another. We'd like to see condom availability any day, any time, day or night, on campus to give students another option."

School officials around the country say it's too early to determine if condom dispensers have checked the rate of AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases. But according to Tom Roberts of the University of California-Santa Barbara AIDS Task Force, "If just one person doesn't get AIDS as a result of those dispensers, they will have done the job."

It appears now that Hope will not jump on the bandwagon of colleges and universities across the country providing condoms for students in vending machines.

Perhaps someday the seriousness of AIDS will force the college to do so. But, the possibility seems a long way off.

Tanis New Holland Mayor!

By Brian Brennan
anchor Editor

In a startling upset last night, 1987 Hope College graduate Phil Tanis defeated incumbent William Sikkel during the city's election for mayor.

An unofficial count of the ballots showed Tanis ahead by 16 votes, with 2,639 cast in his favor compared to 2,623 for Sikkel.

According to reports, 32 percent of the registered voters turned out for the Tuesday election. Polls were open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

A four-year member of the Holland City Council, Tanis was perceived by many as having little chance of winning the mayoral race. However, Tanis continued to campaign aggressively right up until the election.

Tanis celebrated his 23rd birthday last Friday and is believed to be the city's youngest mayor ever. Sikkel, a 66-year-old former realtor was seeking his third two-year term.

Tanis was active in many student organizations at Hope, including editor of the Hope College anchor, a disc jockey at WTHS, and a member of the Model United Nations. He was accepted into Phi Beta Kappa, the national honor fraternity for college students.

In other elections, J. Cotter Tharin, a geology professor at Hope College, retained his seat as councilman-at-large. He was running unopposed.

Duane Terpstra, assistant director of Public Safety at Hope, was defeated by Clark Weersing in the campaign for a 4th ward council seat. Weersing received 576 votes to Terpstra's 457.

Winning the other council seats were Luciano Hernandez, Jr. in the 2nd Ward and Neal Bergheof in the 6th Ward.

Peace Corp Program To "Forgive" Up To 70% Of Student Loans

The new Student Loan Forgiveness provision approved by Congress late last year will allow Peace Corps volunteers to be "forgiven" during an evening film presentation scheduled for Monday, Nov. 9, 1987 at 7:30 p.m. in Cook Auditorium on Hope's campus.

According to Peace Corps Representative Laurie Stroud, college graduates who join the Peace Corps during their academic year can cancel up to 70 percent of their National Direct Student Loans.

The Higher Education Act, which was approved a year ago, provides authority for the cancellation of National Direct Student Loans owed by Peace Corps volunteers.

15 percent of a volunteer's student loan would be "forgiven" for both the first and second year of service in the Peace Corps, Stroud said. An additional 20 percent of the loan would be cancelled for each of the third and fourth years of extended service.

The forgiveness provision applies only to National Direct Student Loans made after July 1, 1987. Other terms and conditions also apply and will be explained by Peace Corps representatives during their presentation.

All Hope College students, faculty members, and area residents are encouraged to attend this free event.

"The Student Loan Forgiveness provision is exciting because it corresponds with a record number of Peace Corps openings anticipated in the next 13 months," Stroud said. "Individuals graduating with degrees in the areas of science, math, education, home economics, French, and other disciplines, are in great demand overseas," she said. "Liberal Arts majors sought, particularly if they have leadership and community service experience. Individuals with backgrounds in agriculture, forestry, gardening, or skilled trades - regardless of their discipline - should consider applying.

Interviews for overseas job assignments will take place on Nov. 18, 1987 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Career Planning and Placement Office located in DeWitt Center. Seniors graduating this winter or spring should call 394-7800 to schedule an appointment.

The Hope College Chapel Choir and Symphonette will be joined by members of the choir of the Third Reformed Church of Holland in presenting King David, a Symphonic Psalm in three parts, by Sweelinck on Sunday, Nov. 8, at 8 p.m. in Dimnent Memorial Chapel.

Honegger wrote a group of “Six” in France, achieved world-wide acclaim in 1921 with his “dramatic oratorio” King David for mixed voices, brass, woodwinds and percussion.

Originally written as incidental music to a play by Rene Morax, Honegger later revised the work for concert hall, rewriting the oratorio for full orchestra, and making use of spoken narration rather than recitative with keyboard accompaniment. As an oratorio, King David was first performed in Germany in Winter 1923.

Rollo Myers in “Choral Music” describes King David “as an oratorio in 27 episodes, some of them extremely brief, which explode one after another, projecting a vivid, almost cinematographic image on the mind. The writing is forceful and concise, crude in dances and frequently polytonal.”

Laura Sutton Floyd will sing the sopranos role. Ms. Floyd is an instructor in voice at Hope College and maintains a private vocal studio.

Special credit for the performances should be given stage manager, Marci Peplinski, who have the undeniable job of coordinating 24 cast members.

The set design was by Professor Richard Smith who created the forest effect using transparent plates painted with forest detail which could be moved right or left for different arrangements.

Costume desing was by Lois Cardier who did her usual top-notch job. Light and Sound design were done by newcomer, Perry Landles. The musical director was Stuart Sharp, whose three man band of Kirk Speaks, Robert Ritsema, and Robert Holland did an excellent job of setting the mood.

To actors deserve special mention, David Ropa as the feminine courtier Le Beau, and Christine Siegel as the old vicar Mr. Mar-Text. Although their parts were small, they stole the show everytime they were on stage.

“La Ronde” Up Next

“Ass You Like It” Ends Two Weeks Of Shows

By Scott Mancinelli anchor Entertainment Editor

The Hope College theatre’s production of William Shakespeare’s comedy “As You Like It” came to the end of its two week run last Saturday night.

The play was an experiment in “organic” acting and directing by the director and Hope professor Lawrence Broglie. Broglie’s style is to help the actors and actresses discover and explore their characters within themselves, and then bring it to the surface where it becomes fully developed.

His style is a marked contrast to many other directing techniques that usually rely on blunting the actors and actresses where the director, making them do it until it’s right.

Broglie’s direction may seem a bit abrupt to some, but it does cause the desired effect of bringing out the best in his cast which resulted in a fine production of “As You Like It.”

A brief synopsis of the play:

Duke Frederick (Scott Buhamaster) has taken the throne form his brother Duke Senor (Chip Dufour) and exiled him to the forest of Arden. Rosalind (Trina Light), Duke Senor’s daughter meets Orlando (Barry Weller) after a wrestling match in which Orlando has bested Frederick’s champion Charle (Geof Penrose). Rosalind and Orlando fall in love with immediately. Afterwards, Frederick banishes Rosalind as well.

She decides to flee to the forest of Arden disguised as a man. Rosalind calls herself Ganymede and leaves for Arden accompanied by her cousin Celia (Sarah Boonstra), Frederick’s daughter and the court jester Touchstone (Steve Ralffe). Meanwhile, Orlando, who wants to escape from his older brother Olivier (Pete Schultz) who wants to kill him, flees to the forest as well, accompanied by the old and humorous family relative Adam (James Lawrence).

Ganymede and Orlando meet in the forest and Orlando explains he is heartbroken at the loss of Rosalind. Ganymede says "he” will cure Orlando of his broken heart if he will do as he does. Orlando agrees to the plan.

At this point, Ms. Floyd is seen to get bogged down in a bit in subplots and other intricacies that lost the audience totally if not for the synopsis printed in the program.

The second act picked up remarkably and all the subplots started to come together.

Orlando saves his brother’s life on stage. He and Olivier meet and fall in love at first sight. The jester Touchstone falls in love with them both and wows a young country girl named Audrey (Jennifer Martin). Ganymede, under pressure from Orlando, and the peasant girl name Phebe (Stephanie Brooks) who loves Ganymede, and Selvius (Chay (Chay) who loves Phebe, vows to them that they all will be married tomorrow.

On the morrow four weddings take place. Ganymede reveals himself to be Rosalind and she and Orlando are married. Celia and Oliver, Phebe and Silvius, and Touchstone and Audrey get married also.

The theme of the play, romantic love with its obvious and happy culmination in marriage, has now been revealed.

To the delight of the wedding party, a messenger announces that Duke Frederick has abdicated and joined the church, leaving his crown to his brother Duke Senor. All except Jacques begin to celebrate. Jacques (Professor George Ralph) is a melancholy, traveler-philosopher who has accompanied Duke Senor in the forest.

He finds more interest in discovering the cause of Duke Frederick’s change than with the celebration. The play concludes with the joyous wedding dance, focusing on the four happy couples.

Chamber Music Concert In Test Chamber

By Eric Shotwell
anchor News Editor

The audience had quite an unusual treat in store for them on Monday night, when members of the Hope College Delta Omicron here at Hope, this was the first time anything like this has been done at Hope, students. The idea was something of a conglomeration between Adam Begley, vice-president of Bruischat Environmental and Delta Omicron. "Actually, I was speaking with Dr. Stephen Hemenway one night, and he asked what my wife did. When I told him she worked for Stuart Sharp of the Music Department, he joked that we should combine our careers," said Begley.

And combine they did, in a very unique way. The chamber concert was almost informal in style, and had only about twenty people in the audience, and took place entirely within an environmental test chamber. Although the acoustics were very different, the concert was nonetheless entertaining. Carl Aronson began the recital, playing "Two Trumpet Voluntaries." He was followed by the trio of Chris Stone, Kelly Strattil, and Kim Krapp, and then by a vocal ensemble comprised of Brenda Synder, Angela Carey, Mary Smith, Jonathan Tagg, and Knightsen Smit. The last two pieces performed were by the trio of Carrie Terpsa, Phillip Gersh, and Lori Canfield, on violins and cello, respectively.

Though the concert was relatively short, it was still quite interesting. The members of Delta Omicron that performed said that they enjoyed the experience, and Adam Begley praised them for their performance. According to Mr. Begley, the environmental chamber they performed in will next be used at a demonstration for Toro snow throwers, when the temperature will be lowered to -65 degrees Fahrenheit, and a snowstorm will be created for test purposes.
Outfield Concert May Be One Of Their Last Ones; Spinks Quits

By Eric Shotwell
anchor News Editor

On Thursday night, Oct. 16, the band The Outfield performed at DeVos Hall in Grand Rapids. The three-man band is made up of Tony Lewis, vocals; John Spinks, electric guitar; and Alan ‘Plug’ Jackman, on drums. This is the last leg of their “Bangin’ Across America” tour, after the release of their second album “Bangin.”

The band’s debut album, “Play Me,” reached the charts in 1985, and contained such hits as “I’m Not the One,” “Take the Night,” “Stay With Me,” and “Do That Again.”

The band’s new album already has two songs on the charts: “Since You’ve Been Gone,” and “No Surrender.” Even with only two albums out, it is already apparent that the band is making a name for itself.

The show opened at 7:30 p.m., with the band “Jimmy Davis and Junction.” Davis has a song on the charts also, entitled “Kick the Wall,” which was featured on MTV as a “hip clip of the week.” The remainder of the songs are all worthy of airplay, particularly one upbeat song called “A Little Bit,” and a ballad, “Just Having Touched.”

Many of the concertgoers actually felt that Jimmy Davis put on a better performance than the Outfield did.

Davis and most of his band members are from Memphis, Tennessee. Also joining the band is a bass guitarist who played for Joe Walsh on his latest album, and John Scott, who plays keyboards and writes most of the songs. The band has a rock-country sound to it, and even has recorded a Tom T. Hall song, “Shoe Shine Man.”

By the time the Outfield came on stage, the crowd was loosening up a bit, despite a half-hour intermission for a change of equipment. Tony Lewis, the lead vocalist for the Outfield, commented on how reserved the crowd at DeVos seemed, but added that they began with “Main Attraction,” “Say It Isn’t So,” and “Talk To Me,” most of the people were on their feet and dancing.

The Outfield went through nearly all of their songs on their two albums, and seemed to be thoroughly enjoying their visit to Grand Rapids. For their finale, they played “Mystery Man,” “No Surrender,” and a brand new song entitled “Big Music.”

Unlike some of their previous concerts, this time they had headset microphones and cordless guitars, allowing them greater freedom of movement. This, accompanied by the fact that the Outfield sounds as good in concert as they do on their albums, made for an excellent concert. Having a great opening band like Jummy Davis and Junction made it much more memorable.

However, it’s possible that this may be the last we’ll see of the band; rumors have been circulating lately that John Spinks threw a tantrum onstage at a recent concert, breaking guitars and screaming obscenities at the crowd. According to one source, Spinks was heard to say, “I’m sick of it. I’m quitting the &$# band.”

Freeze Frame:

Would you approve of a condom dispensing machine on campus?

We live in a society that emphasizes enjoyment of nearly everything we do. One exception, however, appears to be pregnancy. While problems and inconvenience are popularly identified with pregnancy, one rarely hears of the joys and satisfactions that can be found as well. For expectant mothers, one delight is to discover how their child is developing within their body. Some are surprised to learn that long before they can detect the new life stirring within them, the child is already completely formed: all organ systems are functioning; and is actively engaged in the exercise of his or her muscles, joints and limbs, necessary for their growth and development.

By 25 days the heart begins beating. By 30 days the child has an unmistakable human brain, eyes, ears, mouth, kidneys, liver and umbilical cord pumping its own blood. By 45 days brain waves can be detected and the child’s skeleton is complete, in cartilage not bone, and buds of milk teeth appear. By 63 days he will grasp an object placed in his palm and can make a fist.

The baby moves with an ease grace in his buoyant world, and his position in the womb is dependent on what is most comforting for him. He is sensitive to touch and cold and sound and light. He drinks his amniotic fluid, more if it is sweetened and less if it is a sour taste. He gets hicups and kicks his thumb. He wakes and sleeps, gets bored sometimes and can be taught to be able to something new. Even the child’s personality is well under way and will be carried into infancy and childhood.

Though we understand the problems involved with some pregnancies, we at BIRTHRIGHT OF HOLLAND also know of the warmth, satisfaction, and personal joy the experience can be as well. If you’re worried about pregnancy, give us a call. We listen, We help, We Care About You.

Foreign Students Give Views On America

Editor's note: The following was provided by the Mortar Board. They recently contacted some international students and posed some questions to them. Their responses are below.

Joanne Troost from Apeldoorn, Netherlands

What kind of problems (if any) do you see within the American Culture?

I consider the main problems to be America's mentality. Superficiality, conservatism and taboos make it difficult for people to cope with their personal and cultural problems. These aspects make the nation less accepting and free, as it supposedly is.

What do you like about American Culture?

I like the American way of using time. You spend a lot of time with the family. In Japan there are a lot of social problems with the family. For example, children rarely see their father because he works from early morning until late at night. I like to see Americans enjoy their free time after dinner with family or sometimes friends, for example "parties". I understand that Americans distinguish their private time from working time. I like this idea very much!

Carmen Novau from Barcelona, Spain

What kind of problems (if any) do you see within American Culture?

I think it is a materialistic society. "You are what you have", is very important in order to be accepted in this society.

What do you like about American Culture?

I like the great intellectual life, the great artists and the great scientists.

Arwa Haider from Riffa, Bahrain

What kind of problems (if any) do you see within the American Culture?

I don't like the practical life that most Americans live.

What do you like about American Culture?

I like the good organizing and the clearness and openness of the people.

Eva Gyongyosy from Budapest, Hungary

What kind of problems (if any) do you see within American Culture?

I can't speak about problems, but I can tell you what I don't like here. The American way of life is too quick for me. Everybody is always busy and in a hurry. I think this is because everybody wants to earn more money. In America, it is true "time is money".

How are the actions of the U.S. government viewed in Bahrain?

We think that the U.S. government is a good friend of the American Government.

What do you like about American Culture?

I like the good organizing and the clearness and openness of the people.

How are the actions of the U.S. government viewed in Hungary?

TV, radio and newspapers in Hungary often deal with the actions of the U.S. because of its significant role. The most frequent subject is disarmament and the negotiations between the U.S. and the Soviet Union. The current opinion is that the U.S. is to blame because they haven't agreed on a solution yet.

A large part of the group's first week in Tokyo was spent on formulating travel plans for the two-week, all-expenses-paid, honorarium degree which was bestowed on Dr. VanWylen by the Robert A. Noyes Fund. There were, however, other notable activities. There, we were treated to a picture of America seen through Japanese eyes, specifically, as seen through the eyes of a music teacher and her daughter, Eiko.

Our visit to the music teacher's class turned out to be an embarrassment. After we had filed into her classroom, and had been greeted by students, we discovered that the eclectic tree centered around "Star Spangled Banner," accompanied by a stereo system also centered around "Star Spangled Banner." That wasn't too awful, but what followed was. On the back bulletin board there was a happy little sign that read, "Put on your best helmets, play 'Massas in the Cold, Cold Ground.'" The class proceeded to form into groups, and turned in different directions in sync with the teacher's orders. Sync with the teacher's orders was no better. A lilliputian conductor donned an Indian headdress and proceeded to lead the class as they played something stereotypically Indian sounding on small keyboards, with a kid in the back whacking away at the drums. Tubes were connected to the keyboards; sound was produced by blowing into the tubes while playing the keyboard. No Indians in this treated to a musical remembrance of slavery and the Indian wars. The instrument so solemnly presented by Japanese kids who did not understand the implications behind the music they were playing?

A less unsettling event was the trip we took to the Kabuki theater on Thursday, May 22, with a Nob play in the middle.

"The Kabuki was O.K., the Noh was amazing. The reason I liked the Noh better is that Noh is more rhythmic than Kabuki. Noh's rhythm is driven by the drum which is an instrument something like a Japanese banjo. Between the drone of the drum and the movement of the dancers, the whole performance (which is timed by audience members) come to the emotional peaks of the performance), one has a genuine religious experience on one's hands.

This "religious experience" which the rhythmic pattern of nob beats creates is felt full body and can be interpreted as being fulfilled by the implosion of the priest's voices, and the drums and bells which are struck at various points in the service.

On Saturday, May 22, I joined most of the others in our group as we took the train to Harumi Niiho's i.a. current student, to look at a small paddleboat near Takasaki, a town about 75 miles north of Tokyo.

To say we were treated sumptuously by her parents would be an understatement. What a week! We went to a restaurant on Sunday night and were greeted by her mother who had prepared a large meal for us.

Although Harumi had said we would be sleeping on her floor, her position in the stock market does the opposite. As the market does the opposite. As spending, interest rates, trade weather vanes stock brokers use and beyond. No, I don't have foolproof way to tell.

I just sold all my stock. OK, you can come out now; it's over. The decline in the stock market has bottomed out. I expect stock prices to start rising right about now and I plan on going right through Christmas and beyond. No, I don't have inside information, but I have a foolproof way to tell. I just sold all my stock.

I am what is known on the Street as a leading indicator. With lega, one of those economic weather vanes stock brokers use to predict market trends, I'm right up there with consumer spending, interest rates, trade balances and the expression on Henry Kaufman's face. Whatever I do with my stocks, the market does the opposite. As soon as I liquidated my holdings this week the word went out to stock brokers across the nation: "It's OK to buy again; the lox has been sold out."

I don't know how I got so notorious. I only got into the market the way the gourd tied to a tree. The monkey goes along and slips his hand into the gourd and tries to grab the nut. With his flip clenched around the nut, however, he can't get his hand out. But he's too greedy to let go of the nut, so he sits there, holding on tightly to the nut, hoping something good will happen, until they come and collect him. I occurred to me my position in the stock market was much like that of the monkey, that I was sitting there with my hand clenched around my lost paper profits, hoping something good would happen.

That's when I got out.

I called my broker and, in a calm voice, said: "Sell! Sell! For stockbrokers only!"

"You realize that you're selling at the very bottom of the market, don't you?" he said.

"Not until I sell, it isn't the bottom. If I keep my stocks it'll go down some more. Sell!"

"I'm holding it a little while longer? It's going up any day now.

"I don't care," I told him. "It's ruining my life. I can't sleep. I can't eat, the other day I found myself staring out of my office window at the ground."

"I hadn't realized you were taking it this hard," he said.

"But why? You haven't got that much invested."

"So OK, it was a basement window, the principle is the same. The other day when that Miami investor shot those two students, then himself, the only thing that occurred to me was that he probably killed himself out of shyness. He didn't want the embarrassment of being voted a medal by his fellow investors. Is that sick or what? I'm losing it, I tell you."

"OK, I'll sell the stock," my broker said. And he did.

I should have gotten out last summer, of course; I should have read the signs. Donald Trump says he got out, so does Carl Icahn and T. Boone Pickens. Frank Sinatra says he got out. Apparently I and a couple of close friends were the only ones who stayed in. No wonder the stock market did the opposite. No wonder the market does the opposite. As spending, interest rates, trade weather vanes stock brokers use and beyond. No, I don't have foolproof way to tell.

November is the month for "Date Nights" during which some of the dorms plan activities for their residents. These activities range from formal dances to hay rides.

Durfee Hall chose the latter. On Nov. 6, the dorm will have a hayride at Peasins Farm. Afterwards there will be a barn dance where cider and donuts will be served. Tickets cost one dollar per person.

Dykstra Hall chose another popular option, a dance. The theme will be 50's, titled, "A Blast From the Past," held Nov. 6 in the Maas Center. A complete dinner will be served and the head resident said, "We always decorate extensively."

Van Vieck and Lichte have made similar plans — a scavenger hunt and a class dance. "I think students will enjoy it," Dr. Vieck said. He also has plans to have a movie in the dorm hall, Lichte's will be held Nov. 7. Van Vieck is planning its activity for second semester.

Kollen Hall is planning a semi-formal on Nov. 20 called "Hit That Perfect Beat." A semi-formal is traditional for Kollen and participation is always very high. This year it will be held at Calypso's at the Holland Holiday Inn and will cost $2 a couple.

Philosophy Department Awarded $1,000 Grant

The Matchette Foundation of San Antonio, Tex. has awarded the Hope College philosophy department a $1,000 Grant for the purchase of philosophy books to comprise the "Franklin J. Matchette Collection."

David Jensen, the college's library director, said the collection will be on exhibit in the new Van Wylen Library during the second semester. A metal nameplate will be struck, designating the collection after the exhibit concludes.

The Matchette Foundation provides national support for philosophy departments at liberal arts schools. The Hope philosophy department has historically been a frequent recipient of Matchette Foundation grants. In 1985, the department was awarded a grant to sponsor a three-day conference celebrating the centenary of the birth of philosopher and theologian Paul Tillich.

Dutchmen Clinch Share Of Football Crown

By Ben Hanneman
anchor Sports Editor

The Hope College football team staged an impressive 48-14 victory over the visiting Bulldogs Saturday to remain undefeated in the MIAA and to take sole possession of first place.

Coach Smith was rather optimistic about the contest, adding that Hope and Adrian have always met for big games. “I'm just happy we beat Adrian,” said Smith last week against Adrian. “As insurance for what would prove to be a tough Bulldog attack in the second half the Dutchmen proved that they are better than their pre-MIAA record would indicate as they scored three more times and put their lead out of reach.

Offensively, Hope gained 515 yards on the day, 180 of which came on only three of the plays that went for touchdowns. The Bulldogs could only manage 127 yards in total offense, as the Dutchmen defense, led by Jeff Dawson and Kurt Friedriechsen, sacked Crosswhaite eight times for minus 87 yards.

The game also marked the return of quarterback Keith Stewart who was previously believed to be gone for the season. Stewart was perfect in his only play of the afternoon as he found Vanderbilt for a 62 yard scoring pass with 13:06 left.

The Dutchmen will return to the comforts of home Saturday for their final game of the season. They will face the Olivet Comets with hopes of winning yet another MIAA gridiron championship.

Dang May Start Cracking Open The Record Books

By Brian Breen
anchor Sports Editor

For the second year in a row Hope has clinched at least a share of the MIAA football title. One aspect that has definitely helped them in their title hunt has been the kicking game. And it looks like the kicking will remain strong for Hope teams in the immediate future as well.

Duy Dang, a freshman placekicker from Tecumseh currently has kicked eight field goals out of 10 attempts. He leads the MIAA in field goals for all games (league and non-conference) and is closing in on the Hope regular season record of 10, set by Doug Cooper last year. Dang is also second in the MIAA in extra points with 23 of 25 clearing the uprights.

Dang would have to kick two field goals this Saturday against Olivet to tie the record with Cooper. He kicked two field goals last week against Adrian. “I'm just happy we beat Adrian,” said Dang. “Personally, I'd like to have a shot at the record.” Dang may also have a chance to tie the MIAA season record of 6 set by Cooper

Last season Cooper's toe efforts landed him a spot on the all-MIAA football squad. “I think it's great. The record doesn't mean much to me,” said Cooper, who now works as an account representative for Ford Motor Credit in Baltimore, Maryland. “I'd be happy for him. I hope he sets the record.”

More realistically, however, is the fact Dang needs only five more field goals in the next three games to set the all-time career record. Cooper tied the record last year at 12 with Greg Duryee, who set the original Hope record in 1980. Dang may also have a chance to set the MIAA career record for field goals.

Dang is also kicking at a record setting percentage rate. The all-time Hope record was set Keith Nelson from 1978-81. Nelson booted 10 of 13 field goals for a 77 percent career mark. Dang is currently at an 80 percent tally.

Dang said he had a bad start early this year getting used to college life and competition with three other kickers. “It was frustrating. My kicking was bad,” Dang explained. “(But) I'm glad Coach Smith is playing me now. He's always like to play freshman.”

Cooper echoed Dang's feelings about playing freshman. “Even if you're a little better, Coach Smith will go with the junior or senior. It's really a credit for Dang coming in as a freshman,” Cooper said.

Another freshman has filled Cooper's shoes this season at the punting position. Chris Howe from Mason has replaced Junior Chris Cassell with the punting chores and currently is second in the league (all games) with a 36.0 average. His longest this year was a 54-yard.

Henry Loudermilk set the Hope season record for best punting average at 30.7 yards in 1978. He also holds the career record at 38.8 yards per kick.

Hope Stays Undefeated In The MIAA

The Hope College women's cross country team, which will be bidding for its third consecutive MIAA championship this Saturday, Nov. 7, is ranked 12th in the nation among NCAA Division III teams.

The weekly poll is conducted by the College Cross Country Coaches Association. It marks the first time this season that Hope has been ranked nationally.

The Flying Dutch are the only team in the Great Lakes region to be ranked.

The Flying Dutch, who are coached by Bill Vanderbilt, were undefeated in MIAA dual meets (4-0) this fall and finished 5-1 overall, bowing only to defending national champion St. Thomas College of Minnesota. Hope also won three invitational championships. The MIAA championship meet for men and women will be run at Albion College this Saturday.

On Nov. 14, the Hope women will be bidding for their third straight trip to the NCAA national championship meet when they compete in the Great Lakes Regional at Wooster, Ohio.

If the Flying Dutch quality they won't have to travel far as Hope College will host the national meet on Saturday, Nov. 21.

The best of the season.

Vanderbilt Named Player Of The Week

Senior tight end Bill Vanderbilt of Hamilton has been named the MIAA's offensive player of the week by Commissioner Al Deal. Vanderbilt caught four passes for 153 yards and a pair of touchdowns (68 and 82 yards) as the Flying Dutchmen defeated Adrian 48-14.

The 6-4, 215-pound Vanderbilt, an all-MIAA first team choice as a junior, has 104 career pass receptions. Vanderbilt is also one of the trio-captains on the Hope basketball team.

The defensive player of the week was senior defensive end Charlie Wasczenski of Albion College. He was credited with nine tackles, four of them solos, in the Briton's 32-6 victory over Kalamazoo. The 6-1, 200-pound Wasczenski had one tackle for a loss, a quarterback sack, and deflected one opponent pass.

Other defensive nominees were Hope's Don Dahlquist of Cadillac who was credited with six tackles, a blocked punt, deflected pass, and a quarterback sack in the win over Adrian.
struck him while getting his shoes shined. He overheard two bootblacks discussing their investments and how well they were doing. Kennedy later said that if the market was being fueled by the enthusiasm of bootblacks and others of equal sophistication, he knew it was time to leave it.

Similarly, I should have known that I shouldn’t be in the market when I realized that it was attracting people like me. No more. I leave the market poorer in worldly goods, richer in experience — but I leave.

Goodbye.

Let the rally begin.

A scene from the recently ended show “As You Like It.”
Hello, I'm S.I. Nasty. Sam Ira Nasty to friends, and we're old friends. I'm doing the column this issue. Monnett was sitting at the keyboard beginning to write something moralistic so I brained him with Webster's 150,000 word monster. I thought it was time for us to talk face to face since I hear such good things from Hope.

Before we get going let me ask a few questions to bring myself up to date. Have you ridiculed anyone lately? Torn out a heart or two? Maybe ganged up on the short kid with funny glasses? Nailed that jock who was caught taking his mother to the movies? Come on, you can tell me all the sordid details. I know you're not alone. Monnett thinks he's a horrible monster waiting to be released. He's right of course, but I get out so easily sometimes. He'll be cruising along, and then I'll slip out and shatter someone's opinion on clothing or friends or habits or music tastes or politics or...anything.

Monnett's sardonic mind is ripe for my picking. It's so easy for me to get ahead of that sentry at his mouth. When Monnett gets confident he stops relying on the sentry, and then I get to crush another person under the bootheel of my superiority. I admit that Monnett despises me, but he's everywhere.

Recently Monnett was reading an article on insulting people in that horribly uplifting magazine Campus Life. It brought up the neat idea about what would happen if every time we insulted someone they bled. The halls of the dorms would be blood red. During certain times of the year you would need life jackets. Wouldn't that be wowie? (Go ahead, insult me for "wowie." You know you want to.)

Disagree? Go walk down the halls between classes. It's pourous. "That's got a brick." "Rich used the salad fork for his meat. What a brick." "Mike brick yourself!" (Replace 'brick' with your favorite color.) "Tell that to a professor who spends hours planning ways to fail us."

I got to be going. Monnett is starting to pray for help against me. It's the only way he ever gets the best of me. Anyway, keep up the good work. Make sure you make someone cry today. I'm sure that together we can stamp out any weaknesses in our fellow man.

Editorial
Pariatels Policy Has A Chance To See "Real" Change

Once again, the subject of a modification in the Parietals policy is in the works, and this time there may be a chance for a change. Despite many conflicting views on the policies of visitation at Hope, there seems to be a general consensus that a change is needed somewhere.

But before any changes can come about, the student body has to show the administration that it is serious about the issue. In the past, there have been attempts to convince the powers that be that a change is needed, but support from outspoken students has been sparse at best.

A survey conducted by Student Congress last year is a prime example of this: It showed the administration that the students felt there was some need for change, but once the survey was conducted, it was more or less dropped. Once in a while, parietals becomes a hot topic for debate. But when met with opposition, the subject is dropped until the next time it is brought up, usually several months later.

The newest of the "old" proposals is due for release some time before the end of the semester, when it will go to Student Congress' Residential Life Committee and then hopefully on to the Campus Life Board for review and approval. It's not yet known what approach this proposal will take, but due to the failures in the past, student support is going to be crucial.

People get the impression that Hope College is a liberal arts college full of conservatives, because many students are afraid to voice their opinions on issues such as the modification of parietals. Every year, it seems there is an editorial in the anchor about student apathy, and this year is really no exception.

Hope has always been a school that prides itself on its ability to change with the times, but this has only happened when the student body has become involved.

Perhaps it's time again for the students and the administration to work together, to at least recognize that a change doesn't have to be radical. But the college has to be responsive to the needs and wants of the entire student body, and the only way that can happen is if people get involved and voice their opinions.
Organizations Could Use More Money

Money. It’s a constant subject on the minds of most people. For example, pick up any newspaper and you’ll find information on the recent fall of the stock market. And taxes are a normal platform in most government elections, no matter if it’s at the local, state, or national level.

From The Editor’s Desk
Brian Breen

Even to a college student, like myself, it seems money plays an increasingly bigger role each year. BPW bills, phone bills, cable tv bills, tuition bills, motorcycle payments, rent, etc. The list just keeps growing...

Financial problems plague most American families, but perhaps this is one of the more fitting happenings to a college student—surely they have other things to worry about. Financial problems plague most American families, but perhaps this is one of the more fitting happenings to a college student—surely they have other things to worry about.

The anchor, too, has its share of financial headaches. Tonight I will be going to an appropriations hearing for the newspaper at 7 p.m. The reason behind the hearing is a familiar one—we need more money.

Somewhere when I figured out the budget last spring I guess I underestimated it. Wrong. It doesn’t really surprise me, though, I wasn’t even appointed editor yet and there I was figuring out a budget in excess of $20,000. I can’t even make my credit card payments on time.

Anyways, due to increased printing costs and an enlarged newspaper, our paper will come up about $5,000 short at the end of this year. Figure in some miscellaneous expenses and we’ll probably need around $6,500.

It’s a familiar problem among many student organizations at Hope. John Miller, general manager of WTHS, recently had a hearing, too. Although he didn’t specifically ask for more money, some re-arranging of his accounts was desired.

There’s an easy way to end the hassles with budgets that student organizations face each year. It’s kind of a radical idea, but I think it would work.

Why not just increase (with certain justification) everyone’s budget across the board? Give them the money they need to do some really great and needed stuff. I’m sure the Black Coalition would love to bring in a well-known speaker, but good speakers are not cheap.

WTHS could use an Associated Press wire, but it wasn’t approved for their budget. So they’re stuck using state newspapers as their sources for news.

The anchor has money budgeted for a computer system, but we’re still looking into desktop publishing systems. They run about $10,000 but a lot of colleges are using them. I’d hate to spend $3,000 on a conventional system that may be outdated in a year.

What I’m talking about is raising the student activity fee. Currently it’s $19 per semester. It funds all of the student activities, including S.A.C., all the medias, Barbell Club, Sailing Club, Women’s issues Organization, and many other organizations.

A doubling of the activity fee to $38 a semester or $76 per year, would greatly increase the capabilities of each and every organization. Of course, certain expectations would have to be worked out.

Think about it. What is $78 when you’re paying over $10,000 to go to school. It’s not a small change, true, but the student body could really benefit in the long run. It would be neat to have updated news every hour on WTHS, or photographs in The Inklings, or Gloria Steinheim speaking on equal rights for women. (Wouldn’t that be something? At Hope College? No Way! Really?)

Hope has recently been upgraded to the status of a national liberal arts college. That’s why Calvin was mentioned ahead of Hope in a recent U.S. News and World Report story on college rankings. Instead of being at the top of a less prestigious category, we’re now at the bottom of a higher one. Maybe, then, it’s time to start thinking about upgrading the level of student organizations.

It’s just a thought. With a new director of Student Activities, this would be the perfect time to do some soul searching along those lines. Anyways, you can write me at the anchor office and tell me what you think if you’d like. Our address is DeWitt Center, Hope College, Holland, MI 49423.

But, please whatever you do don’t call me at home. I don’t think the phone bill is paid yet.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Hope Dining Hall via

Thank you Phelps

Dear Phelps Dining Hall via the anchor:

I have been selected to write to you by my colleagues in the pizza business. We wanted to thank you for your decrease in food quality the last few weeks. It has caused an incredible upsurge in pizza orders and has increased my profits alone by a total of 50 percent. We must especially thank you for running out of many of your more popular food items at 6 p.m. This is when the athletes come in with big appetites and end up ordering an incredible amount of pizza. I have also noticed that we have sold a very large number of pizzas over fall break, so we thank you for continuing the same food policy, regardless of how many students are on campus. We are a little bit disappointed in your performance over Parent’s Weekend. It seems the food quality was increased (exponentially, some say) and our sales went way down. Please try to avoid this in the future.

We'd like to continue working with you, so both will profit. If the kids don't eat, you make money. When they finally break down from starvation, they order pizza, so we make money. Let's keep up the good work.

You’ve thought about it.

You’ve tried to imagine what it would be like.

You know it would be exciting. And a challenge. And quite possibly the most rewarding experience of your life...

Three Americans overseas in Asia, Africa and South America speak frankly on what Peace Corps life is like for them.

It isn’t easy and it isn’t for everyone—they’ll tell you that up front. But if you’ve ever considered going overseas in the Peace Corps, then now is your chance to see and hear for yourself what could be "the toughest job you’ll ever love."

Note: Former Peace Corps volunteers will be on hand to answer questions following the 25 minute film. And it’s free!

"The Toughest Job You’ll Ever Love"
Ginsburg Worse
Candidate Than Bork

By Chris Shaffer
anchor columnist

Less than a week after Robert Bork's rejection by the Senate, President Reagan has chosen another nominee for the open Supreme Court seat. One that the liberals will like even less than his first choice.

One with the same conservative outlook and belief in judicial restraint. His name is Judge Douglas Ginsburg, and he hasn't been around long enough for the Senate Judicial Committee to form an opinion yet. But the press fell in love with him at first sight. Though he hasn't been caught fooling around with secretaries or shredders.

He has made some investments in a cable tv company, though. Not a big deal, except he also worked on a case for the U.S. Justice Department to establish the full First Amendment rights of cable tv companies. No one is saying that he broke the law, but some are whispering that his timing (if not his ethics) leave something to be desired.

Whether Ginsburg makes it or not to the Supreme Court is irrelevant to the White House. They want a conservative (whose father was a conservative and his father before him... ad nauseous.) And the “in” thing for conservative Supreme-Court-Justices-Wanna-Be’s is judicial restraint. Restrain what? Certainly not from laughing at Reagan when his bowels act up.

Restrain from issuing decisions that would in effect make a law. There are examples of this horrible process, Wade vs. Roe is one, where the courts take away the Constitutionally granted right of a State to control the actions of its citizens. This is the sort of trend that Reagan has decided needs to be stopped. The only things that should be legal are things that the legislators have written down as being lawful (and vice versa).

That's fine and good, but who is to draw the line? A liberal might say it's not in the Constitution where a State can take away a woman's right to the privacy of her body and an abortion. A conservative would say that the States do have a right to outlaw private consensual homosexual contact (sodomy).

Is it really appropriate to go solely by the "original intent" of the men who put together the Constitution in this day and age? Wouldn't George Washington and Thomas Jefferson - both slave owners - widen their eyes at the Emancipation Proclamation, which was written not by Congress but by a President unsupported by the Constitution? Do the proponents of "Judicial Restraint" not believe at times it is necessary to act first, then legislate?

Ginsburg and Bork are both hailed as great legal theorists. Unfortunately, we have not yet found a way to keep law purely theoretical. It must be applied to real situations on a day to day basis. Not poked and tweaked like a gumby doll. It's too fragile for that.

It also has to be applied with love, because justice without love is tyranny - think about it. For all their brains, Bork, Ginsburg, and all the rest, care more for the law, than the people it affects.
