Sigmas Expand Traditions

The Sigma Sigma Sorority held a Halloween party for underprivileged children, something which they hope will become one of their annual events.

The Sigmas were host to approximately 20 children from Lincoln Elementary School. The costume-clad youngsters, ranging in years from kindergarten to second grade, spent the afternoon at the Sigma House playing games, making crafts, and eating snacks. They were especially excited for the special pumpkin and eating cider.

Sigma XI Sponsors Two Public Lectures

The Hope College Sigma Xi Club, a member of the honorary Scientific Research Society, will sponsor two public lectures by Dr. Terry Myers, a nationally recognized nuclear geneticist, on Thursday, Nov. 5, on the Hope Campus.

At 11 a.m., Dr. Myers will deliver a talk on "Criminal Applications of Modern Genetics" in Peale Science Hallroom 50. This will be followed by an evening lecture in Winants Auditorium of Graves Hall at 8 p.m. on "The Ethical Dilemma Surrounding Human Birth Defects."

Myers is a 1987 national lecturer for the Sigma Xi Scientific Research Society. Born in Tennessee, he studied biochemistry at Michigan State, molecular genetics at the Florida State (Ph.D. 1969), and medicine at the University of Virginia. In 1973, he received a residency in pediatrics at Creighton University. He is currently president of the local student chapters, obestics, and gynecology at East Tennessee State. His research interest in clinical genetics and DNA have resulted in numerous professional publications.

The Hope College Critical Issues Symposium this year will focus on "Contemporary Issues of Medicine" and Dr. Myers' lectures will provide significant insight and background for this discussion. The public is invited to attend these free lectures.

The Sigmas have had an eventful semester as they have had the 36 students, of the 36 students, who were interviewed. Dr. Myers, who is the contact for Sigma Xi President, Dr. Richard Brockmeyer at 394-7514.

Chemistry Club To Present "Magic Show"

By John Higuchi
anchor Staff Writer

Science Day attracted hundreds of high school students around the midwest perimeter to join Hope College in its activities. Whether it was biology, psychology, physics or chemistry that interested the high school students, the prospects were impressed by the research facilities that Hope College had to offer.

They were exposed to a wide variety of opportunities ranging from the study of a nuclear Magnetic Resonance Spectrometerometer to the study of human genetic toxicology. One of the highlights of the day was the annual Chemical Magic Show. More than a dozen students participated, including generating some smoke, some heat and some laughs from the visiters.

"Things went pretty well," said Jill McCandless, a Hope college student, however, my reaction took a long time before it went from brown to blue to silver, so I had to tell them stories to keep them entertained...They had a great time.

The success of the magic show for the high school students has brought the need to give the show for Hope students. On Friday, Nov. 6, the first ever National Chemistry Day will be generated on the Hope College Campus. For the local student affiliate group of the American Chemical Society, the Hope Chem Club has decided to repeat the Chemical Magic Show for the campus community.

"It's high-time that we do something for our own students," said Professor Williams, who is the Chemistry Club advisor. It will occur at 3:30 p.m. in Peale Science, room 50. If the demand is sufficient, it will be repeated at 4:30 p.m.

The Chemistry Club hopes to see a wide variety of students there. It is not limited to just science students - bring a history major, or your friends for a magical time. "It is hoped that you will come and enjoy the good times with your peers," said Mike Roth, who is the coordinator of the demonstrations.

Racial Tensions Flare In New York

DREYMEN, N.Y. (CPS) - In what apparently is the first mid-level campus racial tensions this school year, harassment pushed 36 Central American Students to transfer from Tompkins-Cortland Community College last month.

A group of students turned against seemingly all the Hispanic classmates after the Central Americans, on the campus, as part of a foreign student scholarship program. By Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., were accused of sexually assaulting two white females.

Several students allegedly threw rocks and racial slurs at the Central Americans after a Guatemalan student was charged with rape and burglary, and a Hispanic student was charged with sexual abuse and burglary.

The Central American students were identified as if they were all charged with the same rape, as President Edward Martin told of four subsequent attacks on the other Hispanic students.

The students were condemned before they were tried.

While the attacks were sparked by sexual assaults, Martin told them they were motivated by a day-to-day racism that exists in this country and is hard to escape.

The 36 students were enrolled at Tompkins-Cortland as part of the federally funded Central American Scholarship Program. Dr. Terry Myers is an alum of the program in 1986 with funding from the Agency for International Development, and administers it at 14 other community colleges across the country, Georgetown University.

The students, moved at their own request, will be placed in community colleges in California and New Mexico.

At other schools, Central Americans are housed with American host families. At Tompkins-Cortland, however, many of the students lived in an apartment building near the campus.

Martin now thinks them there was a mistake because they isolated them from the rest of the student body, and left them to get something or another in an inappropriate party atmosphere.

After one of those parties Sept. 12, 2 women who live in the building pressed charges against Marcos Moran of Guatemala, who, they said, entered their apartment and assaulted one of them as they slept, said, "They were, Cordova of Honduras was accused of choking the second woman in the room. Both men pleaded not guilty to the charges.

A judge released the two men on their own recognize after they turned in their reports. They have been arrested to Georgetown pending grand jury deliberations in New York.

During the 1986-87 school year, various kinds of confrontations occurred at a startling array of campuses. Involving the Citadel, Tulus, Columbia, the Universities of Pennsylvania, Michigan, Massachusetts and California at Los Angeles, among many others.

Some of the campuses are still searching for solutions. In early September, the University of Massachusetts disciplined many of the white students involved in an October, involving the student classmate. On Oct. 7, a grand jury indicted white Citadel students for having a black caste last fall.

Although Tompkins-Cortland has not suffered any such dramatic incidents, discrimination did exist, the Central Americans say.

"Things really went bad after the arrests, but before there were signs of discrimination," said Gregory Choc, a computer science student from Belize. "They used this incident to say things they wanted to say." Choc said, "as a Hispanic, as someone who has suffered at the hands of racists, I am deeply disturbed by this."

But, he added, most Tompkins-Cortland students welcomed the Central Americans. Only a small number harbored ill will against the students from abroad, he said, "as a minority group, I want to take advantages of this as an educational opportunity," said the student. The school will offer date-rape, alcohol and drug, and racial relations workshops as a result of the incident, he said. "I think we can learn something from this� Disciplinary actions have not been taken against those students who participated in racial attacks, he said, because the Central Americans refused to name their attackers. If the school will force them to attend classes, he said, "I think those students will face a disciplinary board.

More College Campuses Adding Condom Vending Machines

By Mike O'Keefe
College Press Service

This is the fall a seemingly endless string of campuses has added condom vending machines to their halls. Students can now buy birth control devices from vending machines. Once confined to rural gas stations and sleazy bars, condom vending machines can be found at the Universities of Minnesota, California at Santa Cruz, Bellevue Community College in Seattle, Cincinnati, Nebraska, Michigan Technological University and Florida.

According to the Detroit Free Press, Michigan State University is currently considering condom vending machines. The student newspaper, The State News, is one of the major proponents.

Students at Eastern Michigan University began a campaign recently to get condom vending machines in the hall. Dens of other schools are busily debating the propriety of making the devices available.

Philip Beal, who works with Students does not see Hope College acquiring such machines ever, especially not in the near future. "If people must engage in sexual activity, we would emphasize the use of condoms because of the problem with AIDS, but we will not make them available to the student body. The students who attend Hope are young adults. If they desire to use birth control of any kind, they can obtain it from a number of pharmacies in town easier than they can get a flu shot," said Beal.

He also said that part of the reason Hope would not allow such machines was due to its religious affiliation.

Hope does provide free counseling to students who are interested in birth control devices, but do not provide actual birth control devices.

Nurse Sharon Blankens of the Health Clinic said, "The single largest reason we do not provide birth control devices is because the parents would never allow it. We have caught a lot of flack from parents in the past for merely trying to educate students on practicing safe sex, so they would certainly never allow to do something like condoms in the health clinic, let alone the dormitories."

Sponsors of condom vending machines say the vending machines give students anonymous, convenient 24-hour access to condoms, an important value because sexual encounters are often unplanned and anonymous.

"We're an educational institution," explained Jane Harris of Bellevue Community College, "and we have said to the parents about a lot of things, and one of those things is sexually transmitted diseases."

Hope has hired a new part-time health educator, Linda Dahlman, to coordinate programs on AIDS, sexuality, and human relations. Also, an AIDS awareness video has been purchased and will be shown to every dormitory before the end of the year.

University of New Mexico health center Director Dr. Olga Eaton believes "condoms are a very good way of preventing the spread of sexually transmitted diseases." Still, "Condom vending machines are not the only answer," said Betty Newcomb of the University of California-Irvine AIDS Education Committee. Some critics, in fact, say the condoms are not even a good answer.

Two months ago, researchers at the University of Massachusetts Medical School in Worcester expressed doubts condoms are fail-safe protection, if only because they may become exposed to heat or become law.

Still others worry the condom vending machines effectively signal students that sexual promiscuity is permissible or advisable in dorms.

Conservative groups in particular argue colleges should be telling students monogamy and sexual abstinence are the most effective ways to avoid AIDS.

We tell students abstinence is a choice, but not all college students will choose abstinence," said Dr. Linda Pneuman, a physician at the Colorado state health center. "We give them other options. Monogamy is another. We'd like to see them available at any time, day or night, on campus to give students another option."

School officials around the country say it's too early to determine if condom dispensers have checked the rate of AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases. But according to Tom Roberts of the University of California-Santa Barbara AIDS Task Force, "If just one person doesn't get AIDS as a result of those dispensers, they will have done the job."

It appears now that Hope will not jump on the bandwagon of colleges and universities across the country providing condoms for students in vending machines.

Perhaps someday the seriousness of AIDS will force the students to use machines. Still, "Condom vending machines are not the only answer," said Betty Newcomb of the University of California-Irvine AIDS Education Committee. Some critics, in fact, say the condoms are not even a good answer.

The new Student Loan Forgiveness provision approved by Congress means that Peace Corps volunteers will be excused during an evening film presentation scheduled for Monday, Nov. 9, 1987, at 7:30 p.m. in Cook Auditorium on Hope's campus.

According to Peace Corps Representative Laurie Stroud, college graduates who join the Peace Corps are not allowed to receive their loans until they have served their two years of service. Therefore, Peace Corps loans must be paid off before the students can receive their degrees.

Peace Corp Program To "Forgive" Up To 70% Of Student Loans

The new Student Loan Forgiveness provision approved by Congress means that Peace Corps volunteers will be excused from paying off their loans for up to 70% of their student loans.

Forgiveness provision applies only to National Direct Student Loans made after July 1, 1987. Other terms and conditions also apply and will be explained by Peace Corps representatives during their presentation. All Hope College students, faculty members, and area residents are encouraged to attend this free event.

The forgiveness provision is exciting because it corresponds with a record number of Peace Corps openings anticipated in the next 12 months, Stroud said.

"Individuals graduating with degrees in the areas of science, math, education, home economics, French, and other disciplines, are in great demand overseas," she said. "Liberal Arts majors are also sought, particularly if they have leadership and community service experience. Individuals with backgrounds in agriculture, forestry, gardening, or skilled trades — regardless of their major — should consider applying.

Interviews for overseas job assignments will take place on Nov. 18, 1987, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Career Planning and Placement Office located in the DeWitt Center. Senior graduating this winter or spring should call 394-7800 to schedule an appointment.

Tanis New Holland Mayor!

By Brian Brennan
Anchor Editor

In a startling upset last night, 1987 Hope College graduate Tanis Newsi defeated incumbent William Sikkel during the city's election for mayor.

An unofficial count of the ballots showed Tanis ahead by 16 votes, with 2,659 cast in her favor compared to 2,643 for Sikkel.

According to reports, 92 percent of the registered voters turned out for the Tuesday election. Polls were open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

A four-year member of the Holland City Council, Tanis was perceived by many as having little chance of winning the mayoral race. However, Tanis continued to campaign aggressively right up until the election.

Tanis celebrated her 23rd birthday last Friday and is believed to be the city's youngest mayor ever. Sikkel, a 66-year-old former realtor was seeking his third two-year term.

Tanis was active in many student organizations at Hope, including editor of the Hope College anchor, a disc jockey at WTHS, and a member of the Model United Nations. He was accepted into Phi Beta Kappa, the national honor fraternity for college students.

In other elections, J. Cotter Tharin, a geology professor at Hope College, retained his seat as councilman-at-large. He was running unopposed.

Duan Terpsstra, assistant director of Public Safety at Hope, was defeated by Clark Weersing in the campaign for a 4th ward council seat. Weersing received 576 votes to Terpsstra's 457.

Winning the other council seats were Luciano Hernandez, Jr. in the 2nd Ward and Neal Berghoefer in the 6th Ward.
“La Ronde” Up Next
“As You Like It” Ends Two Weeks Of Shows

By Scott Mancinelli anchor Entertainment Editor

The Hope College theatre's production of William Shakespeare's comedy "As You Like It" came to the end of its two week run last Saturday night.

The play was an experiment in "organic" acting and directing by the director and Hope professor Lawrence Broglio. Broglio's style is to help the actors and actresses discover and explore their characters within themselves. He said he'd bring it to the surface where it becomes fully developed.

His style is a marked contrast to many other directing techniques that usually rely on blantly showing the actors and actresses what to do, making them do it until it's right.

Broglio's direction may seem a bit abrupt to some, but it does cause the desired effect of bringing out the best in his cast which resulted in a fine production of "As You Like It."

A brief synopsis of the play:

Duke Frederick (Scott Buhrmaster) has taken the throne form his brother Duke Senor (Chip Duford) and exiled him to the forest of Arden. Rosalind (Trina Light), Duke Senor's daughter meets Orlando (Barry Weller) after a wrestling match in which Orlando has bested Frederick's champion Charles (Geoff Penrose). Rosalind and Orlando fall in love with immediately. Afterwards Frederick banishes Rosalind as well.

She decides to flee to the forest of Arden disguised as a man. Rosalind calls herself Ganymede and leaves for Arden accompanied by her cousin Celia (Sarah Boonsstra), Frederick's daughter and the court jester Touchstone (Steve Wallen).

Meanwhile, Orlando, who want to escape from his older brother Oliver (Pete Schultz) who wants to kill him, flees to the forest well, accompanied by the old and humorous family relative Adam (James Lawrence).

Ganymede and Orlando meet in the forest and Orlando explains he is heartbroken at the loss of Rosalind. Ganymede says "he" will cure Orlando of his broken heart if he will do as he says. Orlando agrees to the plan.

At this point, Ms. Floyd was to get bogged down a bit in subplots and other intricacies that lost the audience totally if not for the synopsis printed in the program.

The second act picked up remarkably and all the subplots started to come together.

Orlando saves his brother's life and the plot moves and Orlando and hisÇell and Oliver meet and fall in love at first sight. The jester Touchstone tells them to wed and a young country girl named Audrey (Jennifer Martin) becomes the girl of Ganymede, under pressure from Orlando and his friend Palm Leaf (Stephanie Brooks) who loves Ganymede, and Selivus (Chef "Red") who loves Ganymede, vows to them that they all will be married tomorrow.

On the morrow four weddings take place. Ganymede reveals himself to be Rosalind and she and Orlando are married. Celia and Oliver, Phebe and Silvius, and Touchstone and Audrey get married also.

The theme of the play, dramatic love with its obvious and happy culmination in marriage, has now been revealed.

To the delight of the wedding party, a messenger announces that Duke Frederick has abdicated and joined the church, leaving his crown to his brother Duke Senor. All except Jacques begin to celebrate. Jacques (Professor George Ralph) is a melancholy, traveler-philosopher who has accompanied Duke Senor in the forest.

He finds more interest in discovering the cause of Duke Frederick's change than with the celebration. The play concludes with a joyous wedding dance, focusing on the four happy couples.

“La Ronde” was performed in German in 1928 rather than recitative with humorous family relative Adam (Geoff Penrose). Rosalind (Trina Light), Duke Senor's daughter meets Orlando (Barry Weller) after a wrestling match in which Orlando has bested Frederick's champion Charles (Geoff Penrose). Rosalind and Orlando fall in love with immediately. Afterwards Frederick banishes Rosalind as well.

The centrale role will be sung by Cornell Bassmer O’Heran. Ms. O’Heran is a graduate of Western Michigan University where she was a student of Joyce Zastrow and Martin Prattick. In 1984 she was the winner of the Bach Festival in Kalamazoo. At Western Michigan University she sang roles in "Coronation of Poppea," "Così Van Tuttì," and "Rinaldo and the Night Visitors."

She performed her first professional opera in March with the Saginaw Symphony singing the role of Agrippina in "Amahl and the Night Visitors."

Laura Sutton Floyd will sing the role of Donabella. Floyd is an instructor in voice at Hope College, where she was a voice student of Rinaldi of the Cleveland Institute of Music. Dance Co. At Hope Nov. 5-6

The Hope College Great Performance Series will present the Glenn Lund Dance company of New York City on Thursday and Friday, Nov. 5-6 in the main theatre of the college’s DeWitt Center, corner of 12th Street and Columbia Avenue. Curtain each night will be 8 p.m.

The Glenn Lund Dance company was enthusiastically received by audiences when they presented a concert as part of the 1984-85 Hope College Great Performance Series. All seats will be reserved. Tickets are $7 for adults and $3 for students. They may be obtained at the DeWitt Center Box Office Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. or may be reserved by calling 392-1211.

The Glenn Lund Dance company was founded by artistic directors Laura Glenn and Gary Lund in 1983 and has performed throughout the United States and Europe, including appearances at major festivals in the Netherlands, London, New York, and at the Festival International de la Danse in Paris. The company has been part of the National Performance Network, and maintains an active repertory of over 15 original works, and has been seen in New York at the Joyce Theater, Dance Theater Workshop, and Waverly Manhattan Theater. They have also performed for the Lincoln Center Out of Doors, Celebrate Brooklyn and on the Staten Island Ferry and at the World Trade Center.

They are a member company of the touring rosters of the New England Foundation for the Arts and the New Hampshire State Council on the Arts. They have just completed their eighth season as the resident company of the White Mountain Summer Dance Festival.

Laura Glenn and Gary Lund began in 1978 with a duet program called Two’s Company, and created Glenn Lund Dance in 1983. Together they have performed in 24 states, have made four tours of Europe, and have taught in Brazil.

Laura Glenn, from New York and a Juilliard graduate, toured as a featured soloist with the Jose Limon company for 11 years, was a founder-member of Daniel Lewis Dance, and created Stages, her own solo program. She has taught Limon’s work for companies in the U.S., Europe, and Israel. Currently on the faculty of the Juilliard School, she has taught internationally and at schools across the U.S.

Gary Lund, from Minneapolis, is a Julliard graduate, toured as a featured soloist with the Nancy Hauser Dance Company. He also collaborated and toured in a duet program called Short Subjects with Ric Rease. Formerly on the faculty of the Nancy Hauser Dance School, he has taught throughout the U.S., most recently at the University of Southern Florida, as well as in Paris and London. He has been creating works since 1975. His video project of Flight 342 was selected for inclusion in the 1986 US-Cuba Video Exchange, and was a finalist in the Tokyo Video Festival.

Future Great Performance Series events will include: pianist Jamie Bolpata on Nov. 17, the Grand Rapids Symphony Orchestra and Symphonic Choir in a performance of Haydn’s “The Seasons” on Feb. 4, flutist Gary Schocker on Feb. 25, and a classical trio on April 7.

Chamber Music Concert In Test Chamber

By Eric Shotwell
Anchor News Editor

The audience had quite an unusual treat in store for them on Monday night, when members of the Hope College Campus Chapter of Delta Omicron performed in a chamber concert. The concert took place in an environmental test chamber at Bruischat Environmental, Inc., a local manufacturer of environment-controlling systems for test chambers.

According to Brenda Snyder, president of Delta Omicron here at Hope, this was the first time anything like this has been done by Hope students. The idea was something of a conglomeration between Adam Begley, vice-president of Bruischat Environmental and Delta Omicron. “Actually, I was speaking with Dr. Stephen Henemeyer one night, and he asked what my wife did. When I told him she worked for Stuart Sharp of the Music Department, he asked if we should combine our careers,” said Begley.

And combine they did, in a very unique way. The chamber concert was almost informal in style, and had only about twenty people in the audience, and took place entirely within an environmental test chamber. Although the acoustics were very different, the concert was nonetheless entertaining. Carl Aronson began the recital, playing “Two Trumpet Voluntaries.” He was followed by the trio of Chris Stone, Kelly Stratl, and Kim Krapp, and then by a vocal ensemble comprised of Brenda Snyder, Angela Carey, Mary Smith, Jonathan Tagg, and Kenneth Nitt. The last two pieces performed were duets by the trio of Carrie Terpstra, Phillip Gerrish, and Lori Canfield, on violin and cello, respectively.

Though the concert was relatively short, it was still quite interesting. The members of Delta Omicron that performed said that they enjoyed the experience, and Adam Begley praised them for their performance. According to Mr. Begley, the environmental chamber they performed in will next be used at a demonstration for Toro snow throwers, when the temperature will be lowered to 65 degrees Fahrenheit, and a snowstorm will be created for test purposes.

Outfield Concert May Be One Of Their Last Ones; Spinks Quits

By Eric Shotwell
anchor News Editor

On Thursday night, Oct. 16, the band The Outfield performed at DeVos Hall in Grand Rapids. The three-man band is made up of Tony Lewis, vocals; John Spinks, electric guitar; and Alan 'Plug' Jackman, on drums. This is the last leg of their "Bangin' Across America" tour, after the release of their second album "Bangin."
The band's debut album, "Play Deep," reached the charts in 1985, and contained such hits as "America" tour, after the release of their second album "Bangin."

The remainder of the songs are all worthy of airplay, particularly one upbeat song called "A Little Bit," and a ballad, "Just Having Touched." Many of the concertgoers actually felt that Jimmy Davis put on a better performance than the Outfield did.

Davis and most of his band members are from Memphis, Tennessee. Also joining the band is a bass guitarist who played for Joe Walsh on his latest album, John Scott, who plays keyboards and writes most of the songs. The band has a rock-country sound to it, and even has recorded a Tom T. Hall song, "Shoe Shine Man."

By the time the Outfield came on stage, the crowd was loosening up a bit, despite a half-hour intermission for a change of equipment. Tony Lewis, the lead vocalist for the Outfield, commented on how reserved the crowd at DeVos seemed, but they began with "Main Attraction," "Say It Isn't So," and "Talk To Me," most of the people were on their feet and dancing.

The Outfield went through nearly all of their songs on their two albums, and seemed to be thoroughly enjoying their visit to Grand Rapids. For their finale, they played "Mystery Man," "No Surrender," and a brand new song entitled "Big Music."

Unlike some of their previous concerts, this time they had headset microphones and cordless guitars, allowing them greater freedom of movement. This, accompanied by the fact that the Outfield sounds as good in concert as they do on their albums, made for an excellent concert. Having a great opening band like Jimmy Davis and Jackman made it much more memorable.

However, it's possible that this may be the last we'll see of the outfield; rumors have been circulating lately that John Spinks threw a tantrum onstage at a recent concert, breaking guitars and screaming obscenities at the crowd. According to one source, Spinks was heard to say, "I'm sick of it. I'm quitting the #1 band."

Freeze Frame: Would you approve of a condom dispensing machine on campus?

West Colley
Senior

"Hell yes, it would be a good idea. It would keep pregnancies down. A lot of people I know have gone over to the health clinic asking for them on Saturday night."

Tom Sorensen
Senior

"Yeah, I think we should do it like Oberlin College does it, in the candy machines. Candy bar, candy bar, condom, cookie. Better safe than fatherhood."

Sharon Todd
Sophomore

"No, because I think it would encourage pre-marital sex."

Julie Thoresen
Freshman

"Yes, I do. Selling condoms is not encouraging pre-marital sex. It is simply offering protection to those who choose to practice it."

Eric Shotwell
Junior

"Sure, I think it's important that students have that kind of convenience, especially with the problems of student pregnancies and also the fear of AIDS."

HOPE COLLEGE ESCORT SERVICE

Through the coordinated efforts of Public Safety and participating fraternities, an escort service is available.

Registered student escorts are on call to assist with a walking escort service anywhere on or near campus.

To use the service call X7770

Pregnancy can also be enjoyed...

We live in a society that emphasizes enjoyment of nearly everything we do. One exception, however, appears to be pregnancy. While problems and inconvenience are popularly identified with pregnancy, one rarely hears of the joys and satisfactions that can be found as well. For expectant mothers, one delight is to discover how their child is developing within their body. Some are surprised to learn that long before they can detect the new life stirring within them, the child is already completely formed; all organ systems are functioning, and is actively engaged in the exercise of his or her muscles, joints and limbs, necessary for their growth and development.

By 25 days the heart starts beating. By 30 days the child has an unmistakable human brain, eyes, ears, mouth, kidneys, liver and umbilical cord pumping its own blood. By 45 days brain waves can be detected and the child's skeleton is complete, in cartilage not bone, and buds of milk teeth appear. By 63 days he will grasp an object placed in his palm and can make a fist.

The baby moves with an easy grace in his buoyant world, and his position in the womb is dependent on what is most comfortable for him. He is responsive to touch and cold and sound and light. He drinks his amniotic fluid, more it is sweetened and less it is a sour taste. He gets hicups and squawks his thumb. He wakes and sleeps, gets bored sometimes and can be taught to be alerted for something new. Even the child's personality is well under way and will be carried into infancy and childhood.

Though we understand the problems involved with some pregnancies, we at BIRTHRIGHT OF HOLLAND also know of the warmth, satisfaction, and personal joy the experience can be as well. If you're worried about pregnancy, give us a call.... We Listen, We Help, We Care About You.

Free pregnancy testing and counseling, medical & financial assistance referrals, personal service.

Foreign Students Give Views On America

Editor's note: The following was provided by the Mortar Board. They recently contacted some international students and posed some questions to them. Their responses are below.

Joanne Troost from Apeldoorn, Netherlands

What kind of problems (if any) do you see within the American Culture?
I consider the main problems to be America's mentality. Superficiality, conservatism and taboos make it difficult for people to cope with their personal and cultural problems. These aspects make the nation less accepting and free, as it supposedly is.

How are the actions of the U.S. Government viewed in the Netherlands?
We Dutch are complainers. We complain as much about our government as about others. Although we are NATO members, we are not willing to agree with and certainly do not do everything the U.S. government says. Opinions seem mostly pro or con about the U.S. I especially think that since the Iran-Contra scandal, people generally do not respect the U.S. Government very much.

What do you like about American Culture?
Not much, I'm afraid. I do like modern American Art and the liberal arts education system. I really dislike the things that I see as typically American: disposable goods and the "American Dream".

Hatsugiku Kitahara from Tokyo, Japan

What kinds of problems (if any) do you see within American Culture?
Since your native language is English... your interest in foreign cultures tends to disappear. You tend to expect all foreigners to speak English because English is the international language. This is not true. My point is the idea of English as an international language and the lack of encouragement for foreign language education sometimes causes an American ethnocentric attitude.

How are the actions of the U.S. Government viewed in Japan?
Generally, Japan understands and takes the American side. We understand that some actions are not only for the benefit of the U.S. but also for other countries that are in trouble and need help. But, as for the matter of war, one has to be very careful. I remember the words "War for justice" stated by the President. It became a critical issue in Japan. We do, however, appreciate the policy of free trade (otherwise we would starve to death).

What do you like about American Culture?
I like the American way of using time. You spend a lot of time with the family. In Japan there are a lot of social problems with the family. For example, children rarely see their father because he works from early morning until late at night. I like to see Americans enjoy their free time after dinner with family or sometimes friends, for example "parties". I understand that Americans distinguish their private time form working time. I like this idea very much!

Carmen Novau from Barcelona, Spain

What kind of problems (if any) do you see within American Culture?
I think it is a materialistic society. "You are what you have" is very important in order to be accepted in this society.

How are the actions of the United States Government viewed in Spain?
We think that the U.S. Government carries a too expansionistic and offensive foreign policy, (even when taking into account the disarmament talks.)

What do you like about American Culture?
I like the clearness and openness of the American Culture is the culture of materialism. "Money makes the world go round!"

Arwa Haider from Rifta, Bahrain

What kind of problems (if any) do you see within the American Culture?
I don't like the practical life that most Americans live.

How are the actions of the U.S. Government viewed in Bahrain?
Bahrain's government is a good friend of the American Government.

What do you like about American Culture?
I like the good organizing and the clearness and openness of the people.

Eva Gyongyosy from Budapest, Hungary

How are the actions of the U.S. Government viewed in France?
I like it when people try to remember each other's names and that they say hello using the other person's name.

What do you like about American Culture?
I can't speak about problems, since your native language is English... your interest in foreign cultures tends to disappear. You tend to expect all foreigners to speak English because English is the international language. This is not true. My point is the idea of English as an international language and the lack of encouragement for foreign language education sometimes causes an American ethnocentric attitude.

What do you like about American Culture?
I like the great intellectual life, the great artists and the great scientists.

How are the actions of the U.S. government viewed in Hungary?
TV, radio and newspapers in Hungary often deal with the actions of the U.S. because of its significant role. The most frequent subject is disarmament and the negotiations between the U.S. and the Soviet Union. The current opinion is that the U.S. is to blame because they haven't agreed on a solution yet.

Eva Gyongyosy from Budapest, Hungary

What kind of problems (if any) do you see within American Culture?
I can't speak about problems, but I can tell you what I don't like here. The American way of life is too quick for me. Everybody is always busy and in a hurry. I think this is because everybody wants to earn more money. In America, it is true "time is money".

A large part of the group’s first week in Tokyo was spent on formal visits to various businesses, the hallmark of which was the honorific degree which was bestowed on Dr. Van Wylen by the University of Tokyo. They were, however, other notable activities. There, we were treated to a picture of America seen through the eyes of a music teacher and her students.

Our visit to the music teacher’s class turned out to be an embarrassment. After we had filed into her classroom, and had been greeted by students, we had noticed a music teacher conducting “Star Spangled Banner,” accompanied by the stereo system and the rest of the class.

That wasn’t too awful, but what followed was. On the back of the board there was a happy little sign which read: “I’ll play ‘Massas in the Cold, Cold Ground.’” The class proceeded to sing along, which turned in different directions in sync with the teacher’s orders.

On the ground under a tree, a little Illiputian conductor donned an Indian headdress and proceeded to lead the class as they played something stereotypically Indian. Suddenly, we found ourselves in a small, wooden train cars, with a kid in the back whacking away at the drums. They were connected to the keyboards; sound was produced by blowing into the tubes while playing the keybords.

I was madcap: we rushed to the teacher’s orders. It was a most enjoyable experience. As I stood by the teacher, I wondered how much the destruction of the Japanese language was due to the music. I don’t think that there might be a connection between the Japanese language and the music they were playing.

The next morning, they gave us a picture of Japan. As I stood by the teacher, I wondered how much the destruction of the Japanese language was due to the music. I don’t think that there might be a connection between the Japanese language and the music they were playing.

It was at the Kirin fair that I had a (probably inaccurate) thought about the music, which seems to be the high rate of Japanese alcoholism. As I stood by the teacher, I wondered how much the destruction of the Japanese language was due to the music. I don’t think that there might be a connection between the Japanese language and the music they were playing.

The Kabuki was O.K., the Noh was rather慰问事儿. The next day, we went to the Kirin fair and played on recorders, and I wondered how much the destruction of the Japanese language was due to the music. I don’t think that there might be a connection between the Japanese language and the music they were playing.

Both factories had festive activities going on around them. Outside the Kabuki factory there was a small exhibition of Indian cars, which was featured a foot on its outskirts.

Section Of Library Dedicated To A. J. Muste

Finally! You have been trying to land on a yellow pie all night along with as many as you could find. Your question reads: "Who is A. J. Muste?" Beads of sweat break out on your brow and out of the corner of your nervously twitching eye, you catch your history professor shooting daggers at you... and out of the corner of your eye, you see the second semester. A metal nameplate will be strung, designating the collection after the exhibit concludes.

The Matchette Foundation of San Antonio, Tex. has awarded the Hope College philosophy department a $1,000 grant for the purchase of philosophy books to comprise the "Franklin J. Matchette Collection."

David Jensen, the college's library director, said the collection will be on exhibit in the new Van Wyen Library during the second semester. A metal nameplate will be strung, designating the collection after the exhibit concludes.

Francis Fike And George Ralph To Present poetry reading Tonight

Poetry traditions of both the East and the West will be featured in a reading presented by Francis Fike and George Ralph of the Hope College faculty on Wednesday, Nov. 4 at 7:30 p.m. in the gallery of the DePree Art Center on the Hope campus.

Dormitories Plan Upcoming Date Nights And Formals

By Julie Thornes
anchor Staff Writer

November is the month for "Date Nights" during which some of the dorms plan activities for their residents. These activities range from formal dances to hay rides.

Durfee Hall chose the latter. On Nov. 6, the dorm will have a hayride at Peaslee's farm. Afterwards there will be a barn dance where cider and donuts will be served. Tickets cost one dollar per person.

Dykstra Hall chose another popular option, a dance. The theme will be '50's, titled, "A Blast From the Past," held Nov. 6 in the Maas Center. A complete dinner will be served and the head resident said, "We always decorate intensively."

Van Vleck and Lichty have made similar plans - a scavenger hunt date night at the mall. Lichty's will be held Nov. 7. Van Vleck is planning its activity for second semester.

Kollen Hall is planning a semi-formal on Nov. 20 called "Hit That Perfect Beat." A semi-formal is traditional for Kollen Department a $1,000 grant for the philosophy departments at liberal arts schools. The Hope philosophy department has historically been a frequent recipient of Matchette Foundation grants. In 1985, the department was awarded a grant to sponsor a three-day conference celebrating the centenary of the birth of philosopher and theologian Paul Tillich.

Dutchmen Clinch Share Of Football Crown

By Ben Hanneman

The Hope College football team staged an impressive 49-14 victory over the Kalamazoo Bulldogs Saturday to remain undefeated in the MIAA and to take sole possession of first place.

Coach Smith was rather optimistic about the contest, adding that Hope and Adrian had always met for big games. Saturday's win, he said, was the biggest of the year.

Dang May Start Cracking Open The Record Books

By Brian Breen
anchor Editor

For the second year in-a-row Hope has clinched at least a share of the MIAA football title. One aspect that has definitely helped them in their title hunt has been the kicking game. And it looks like the kicking will remain strong for Hope teams in the immediate future, too.

Duy Dang, a freshman placekicker from Tecumseh, currently has kicked eight field goals out of 10 attempts. He leads the MIAA in field goals for all games (league and nonconference) and is closing in on the Hope regular season record of 9 set by Doug Cooper last year. Dang is also second in the MIAA in extra points with 23 of 25.

Dang would have to kick two more field goals this Saturday against Olivet to tie the record with Cooper in 1986.

Last season Cooper's toe efforts landed him a spot on the all-MIAA football squad. "I think it's great. The record doesn't mean much to me," said Cooper, who now works as an account representative for Ford Motor Credit in Baltimore, Maryland. "I'd be happy for him. I hope he sets the record."

Mere realistically, however, is the fact Dang needs only five more field goals in the next three seasons to set the all-time career record. Cooper tied the record last year at 12 with Greg Bektes, who set the original Hope record in 1980. Dang may also have a chance to set the MIAA career record for field goals.

Dang is also kicking at a record setting percentage rate. The all-time Hope record was set by Keith Nelson from 1978-81. Nelson booted 10 of 13 field goals for a 77 percent career mark. Dang is currently at an 80 percent tally.

Dang said he had a bad start early this year getting used to college life and competition with three other kickers. "It was frustrating. My kicking was bad," Dang explained. "(But) I'm glad Coach Smith is playing me now. He doesn't always like to play freshman."

Cooper echoed Dang's feelings about playing freshman. "Even if you're a little better, Coach Smith will go with the junior or senior. It's really a credit for Dang coming in as a freshman," Cooper said.

Another freshman has filled Cooper's shoes this season at the punting position. Chris Howe from Mason has replaced Junior Chris Cassell with the punting chores and currently is second in the league (all games) with a 36.0 average. His longest this year was a 54-yard.

Henry Loudermilk set the Hope season record for best punting average at 36.7 yards in 1978. He also holds the career record at 38.9 yards per kick.

Hope Stays Undefeated In The MIAA

The Hope College women's cross country team, which will be bidding for its third consecutive MIAA championship this Saturday, Nov. 7, is ranked 12th in the nation among NCAA Division III teams.

The weekly poll is conducted by the College Cross Country Coaches Association. It marks the first time this season that Hope has been ranked nationally.

The Flying Dutch are the only team in the Great Lakes region to be ranked.

The Flying Dutch, who are coached by Bill Vanderbilt, were undefeated in MIAA dual meets (4-0) this fall and finished 5-1 overall, bowing only to defending national champion St. Thomas College of Minnesota. Hope also won three invitational championships. The MIAA championship meet for men and women will be run at Albion College this Saturday.

On Nov. 14, the Hope women will be bidding for their third straight trip to the NCAA national championship meet when they compete in the Great Lakes Regional at Wooster, Ohio.

If the Flying Dutch quality they won't have to travel far as Hope College will host the national meet on Saturday, Nov. 21.

The best of the season.

Vanderbilt Named Player Of The Week

Senior tight end Bill Vanderbilt of Hamilton has been named the MIAA's offensive player of the week by Commissioner Al Deal.

Vanderbilt caught four passes for 163 yards and a pair of touchdowns (63 and 68 yards) as the Flying Dutchmen defeated Adrian 48-14.

The 6-4, 215-pound Vanderbilt, an all-MIAA first team choice as a junior, has 104 career pass receptions. Vanderbilt is also one of the tri-captains on the Hope basketball team.

The defensive player of the week was senior defensive end Charlie Wascenski of Albion College. He was credited with nine tackles, four of them solo, in the Briton's 32-6 victory over Kalamazoo. The 6-1, 200-pound Wasczenski had one tackle for a loss, a quarterback sack, and deflected one opponent pass.

Other defensive nominees were Hope's Don Dahlquist of Cadillac who was credited with six tackles, a blocked punt, deflected pass, and a quarterback sack in the win over Adrian.

I'm glad Coach Smith is playing me now. He doesn't always like to play freshman.
struck him while getting his shoes shined. He overheard two bootblacks discussing their investments and how well they were doing. Kennedy later said that if the market was being fueled by the enthusiasm of bootblacks and others of equal sophistication, he knew it was time to leave it.

Similarly, I should have known that I shouldn’t be in the market when I realized that it was attracting people like me. No more. I leave the market poorer in worldly goods, richer in experience — but I leave.

Goodbye.

Let the rally begin.

Hello, I'm S.I. Nasty. Sam Ira Nasty to friends, and we're old friends. I'm doing the column for now. We're old friends. When I cut these people down good, you've made anyone cry lately? Wasn't it a short kid with funny glasses? Monnett was sitting at the keyboard beginning to write something moralistic so I thought it was time for us to talk face to face since I hear such good things from Hope.

Before we get going let me ask a few questions to bring myself up to date. Have you ridiculed anyone lately? Torn out a heart or two? Maybe ganged up on the short kid with funny glasses? Nailed that jock who was caught taking his mother to the movies? Come on, you can tell me all the sordid details. I know you're modest, but I want to know if you've made anyone cry lately? You say you have? Now don't go and start thinking that Hope is the only college where I'm at work. S.I. Nasty is everywhere. Give me enough time and I'll be completely filled with whispering, discreet pointing, gasping, and of course thousands of individual back-stabbings. What a day that'll be.

Think of it. Groveling in the corner will be anyone who shows a hint of nonconformity or weakness (they're the same thing, aren't they?). We'll catch them with their Wranglers, their Adidas, and their wretched 'Save the Whales' buttons. I don't mind being around people who care for whales as long as they keep it to themselves. How dare they force me to gaze upon their opinions? Whenever I get the opportunity to, I cut these people down good. I always get such a feeling of power from hurting someone.

For real thrills we can pretend to be someone's friend. When they make a fatal mistake like saying they don't like Pink Floyd, we can pounce and rip them apart. This will leave them emotionally shattered. They'll go home and cry since they lost your friendship. As if you really care about them.

Now for those of you who are shocked and appalled at what I'm saying, let me explain that you're not alone. Monnett thinks I am a horrible monster waiting to be released. He's right of course, but I get out so easily sometimes. He'll be cruising along, and then I'll slip out and shatter someone's opinion on clothing or friends or habits or haircolor or music tastes or politics or...anything.

Monnett's sardonic mind is ripe for my picking. It's so easy for me to get ahead of that sentry at his mouth. When Monnett gets confident he stops relying on the sentry and they forget to brush another person under the booth of my superiority. I admit that Monnett despises me, but heck, I'm everywhere.

Recently Monnett was reading an article on insulting people in that horribly uplifting magazine Campus Life. It brought up the neat idea about what would happen if every time we insulted someone they bled. The halls of the dorms would be blood red. During certain times of the year you would need life jackets. Wouldn't that be wowie? (Go ahead, insult me for "wowie." You know you want to.)

Disagree? Go walk down the halls between classes. It's power. Or "that's a brick." "Rich used the salad fork for his meat. What a brick." "Mike brick yourself!" (Replace 'brick' with your favorite color.) Expletive, or better yet, invent a new one so someone else can level and you over your vocabulary.

Beyond the cutting that we do to each other, imagine what would happen to a professor during a test. Each intentional trick question would have us slash the prof. By the end of the class, the prof would be vaporized. That would teach all those sadistic professors who spend hours planning ways to fail us.

I got to be going. Monnett is starting to pray for help against me. It's the only way he ever gets to each other, imagine what would happen to a professor during a test. Each intentional trick question would have us slash the prof. By the end of the class, the prof would be vaporized. That would teach all those sadistic professors who spend hours planning ways to fail us.

I got to be going. Monnett is starting to pray for help against me. It's the only way he ever gets to fail us. Anyway, keep up the good work. Make sure you make someone cry today. I'm sure that together we can stamp out any weaknesses in our fellow man.
Organizations Could Use More Money

Money. It's a constant subject on the minds of most people. For example, pick up any newspaper and you'll see an information on the recent fall of the stock market. And taxes are a normal platform in most government elections, no matter if it's at the local, state, or national level.

From The Editor's Desk
Brian Breen

Even to a college student, like myself, it seems money plays an increasingly bigger role each year. BPW bills, phone bills, cable TV bills, gas bills, tuition bills, motorcycle payments, rent, etc. The list just keeps growing...

Financial problems plague most Americans — maybe the very, very well-off. (For an interesting profile read about Tiger owner Tom Blahman in last Sunday's Detroit Free Press.)

The anchor, too, has its share of financial headaches. Tonight I will be going to an appropriations hearing for the newspaper at 7 p.m. The reason behind the hearing is a familiar one — we need more money.

Somehow when I figured out the budget last spring I guessed priced wrong. It doesn't really surprise me, though. I wasn't even appointed editor yet and there I was figuring out a budget in excess of $20,000. I can't even make my credit card payments on time.

Anyways, due to increased printing costs and an enlarged newspaper, we'll come up about $5,000 short at the end of this year. Figure in some miscellaneous expenses and we'll probably need around $6,500.

It's a familiar problem among many student organizations at Hope. John Miller, general manager of WTHS, recently had a hearing, too. Although he didn't specifically ask for more money, some re-arranging of his accounts was desired.

There's an easy way to end the hassles with budgets that student organizations face each year. It's kind of a radical idea, but I think it would work.

Why not just increase (with certain justification) everyone's budget across the book? Give them the money they need to do some really great and needed stuff. I'm sure the Black Coalition would love to bring in a well-known speaker, but good speakers are not cheap.

WTHS could use an Associated Press news wire, but it wasn't approved for their budget. So they're stuck using state newspapers as their sources for news.

The anchor has money budgeted for a computer system, but we're still looking into desktop publishing systems. They run about $10,000 but a lot of colleges are using them. I'd have to spend $3,000 on a conventional system that may be outdated in a year.

What I'm talking about is raising the student activity fee. Currently it's $19 per semester. It funds all of the student activities, including S.A.C., all the medias, Barbell Club, Sailing Club, Women's Issues Organization, and many other organizations.

A doubling of the activity fee to $38 a semester or $76 per year, would greatly increase the capabilities of each and every organization. Of course, certain expectations would have to be worked out.

Think about it. What is $78 when you're paying over $10,000 to go to school. It's not small change, true, but the student body could really benefit in the long run. It would be neat to have updated news every hour on WTHS, or photographs in The Inklings, or Gloria Steinheim speaking on equal rights for women. (Wouldn't that be something? At Hope College? No Way! Really?)

Hope has recently been upgraded to the status of a national liberal arts college. That's why Calvin was mentioned ahead of Hope in a recent U.S. News and World Report story on college rankings. Instead of being at the top of a less prestigious category, we're now at the bottom of a higher one. Maybe, then, it's time to start thinking about upgrading the level of student organizations.

It's just a thought. With a new director of Student Activities, this would be the perfect time to do some soul searching along those lines. Anyways, you can write me at the anchor office and tell me what you think if you'd like. Our address is DeWitt Center, Hope College, Holland, MI 49423.

But, please whatever you do don't call me at home. I don't think the phone bill is paid yet.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Phelps Dining Hall via the anchor:

I have been selected to write to you by my colleagues in the pizza business. We wanted to thank you for your decrease in food quality the last few weeks. It has caused an incredible upsurge in pizza orders and has increased my profits alone by a total of 50 percent.

We must especially thank you for running out of many of your most popular food items at 6 p.m. This is when the athletes come in with big appetites and end up ordering an incredible amount of pizza. I have also noticed that we have sold a very large number of pizzas over fall break, so we thank you for continuing the same food policy, regardless of how many students are on campus.

We are a little bit disappointed in your performance over Parent's Weekend. It seems the food quality was increased (exponentially, some say) and our sales went way down. Please try to avoid this in the future.

We'd like to continue working with you, so both will profit. If the kids don't eat, you make money. When they finally break down from starvation, they order pizza, so we make money. Let's keep up the good work.

You've thought about it. You've tried to imagine what it would be like.

You know it would be exciting. And a challenge. And quite possibly the most rewarding experience of your life...

Three Americans overseas in Asia, Africa and South America speak frankly on what Peace Corps life is like for them. It isn't easy and it isn't for everyone—they'll tell you that up front. But if you've ever considered going overseas in the Peace Corps, then now is your chance to see and hear for yourself what could be the toughest job you'll ever love.

Note: Former Peace Corps volunteers will be on hand to answer questions following the 25 minute film. And it's free!

The Movie
"The Toughest Job You'll Ever Love"
Ginsburg Worse Candidate Than Bork

By Chris Shaffer
anchor columnist

Less than a week after Robert Bork's rejection by the Senate, President Reagan has chosen another nominee for the open Supreme Court seat. One that the liberals will like even less than his first choice.

One with the same conservative outlook and belief in judicial restraint. His name is Judge Douglas Ginsburg, and he hasn't been around long enough for the Senate Judicial Committee to form an opinion yet. But the press fell in love with him at first sight. Though he hasn't been caught fooling around with secretaries or shredders. He has made some investments in a cable TV company, though. Not a big deal, except he also worked on a case for the U.S. Justice Department to establish the full First Amendment rights of cable TV companies. No one is saying that he broke the law, but some are whispering that his timing (if not his ethics) leave something to be desired.

Whether Ginsburg makes it or not to the Supreme Court is irrelevant to the White House. They want a conservative (whose father was a conservative and his father before him... ad nauseum.) And the "in" thing for conservative Supreme Court Justices-Wanna-Be's is judicial restraint. Restraint what? Certainly not from laughing at Reagan when his bowels act up.

Restrain from issuing decisions that would in effect make a law. There are examples of this horrible process, Wade vs. Roe is one, where the courts take away the Constitutionally granted right of a State to control the actions of its citizens. This is the sort of trend that Reagan has decided needs to be stopped. The only things that should be legal are things that the legislators have written down as being lawful (and vice versa).

That's fine and good, but who is to draw the line? A liberal might say it's not in the Constitution where a State can take away a woman's right to the privacy of her body and an abortion. A conservative would say that the States do have a right to outlaw private consensual homosexual contact (sodomy).

Is it really appropriate to go solely by the "original intent" of the men who put together the Constitution in this day and age? Wouldn't George Washington and Thomas Jefferson—both slave owners—widen their eyes at the Emancipation Proclamation, which was written not by Congress but by a President unsupported by the Constitution? Do the proponents of "Judicial Restraint" not believe at times it is necessary to act first, then legislate?

Ginsburg and Bork are both hailed as great legal theorists. Unfortunately, we have not yet found a way to keep law purely theoretical. It must be applied to real situations on a day to day basis. Not poked and tweaked like a gumby doll. It's too fragile for that.

It also has to be applied with love, because justice without love is tyranny—that think about it. For all their brains, Bork, Ginsburg, and all the rest, care more for the law, than the people it affects.
