Take back the night march protests abuse

by Erika Brubaker

A crowd of about fifty people gathered at the gazebo at Centennial Park. Their purpose: to take back the night on Tuesday, Nov. 29. The group was comprised of an almost equal mix of Hope students and community members, mostly female, with about ten men.

The purpose of the march was to protest crimes against women and to support survivors of those crimes. The march was sponsored by the Center for Women in Transition, the National Organization for Women, Grand Valley State University, and the Women’s Issues Organization at Hope College.

Senator William Van Regenmorter of the 23rd Senate district spoke for about twenty minutes on the subject of domestic abuse and the things that he has done to help the victims of domestic violence.

Van Regenmorter distributed pamphlets on “Constitutional Rights and the Crime Victim’s Rights Act.” The Crime Victim’s Rights Act went into effect in 1985, and its purpose is to protect the victims of crimes. According to Van Regenmorter, “It has now become a model across the country.”

According to the act, the officer investigating a case must inform the victim of the crime of his or her rights as a victim. Initially, rape was considered a felony. However, in 1985, domestic assaults were considered misdemeanors. In 1988, assault was considered a “serious misdemeanor,” and was included along with such crimes as enticing a child to drink or drunk driving in seriousness of offense.

According to current statistics, one out of three women will become a victim of rape. A girl who is twelve this year has a four out of five chance that she will be raped.

“One of the rights that we try to emphasize is the confidentiality of the victim.” As of 1985, the victim’s name is not available on a police report. The Senator is hoping to pass a bill within the next two weeks that will “go further to keep records of the victim even more out of view.”

The Senator is currently working on Bills 144 and 145, 144 is a “base bill” that “deals with immediate arrest. It will directly affect domestic assault.” In some domestic assault cases, there are protective measures taken to keep the perpetrator away from home. This bill will allow:

• a judge to give protective orders
• the investigating officer to check up on the information
• the immediate arrest of the offender, instead of having to wait for what could be days until all evidence has been confirmed.

Sergeant DeVries of the Holland Police Department, of the community service unit, also spoke. His purpose is to keep the perpetrated aware of domestic dispute, works on juvenile cases (including child abuse and sexual abuse), and works with the schools, “teaching kids how to protect themselves.”

According to DeVries, the “spouse abuse law has been an excellent tool for us... we have the authority, information and belief and we can make the arrest right away... lately, every weekend we make an arrest for domestic violence.”

State Representative Jessie Dalman said that “I am standing here with you, symbolizing our need as women and children to be protected from violence.”

“Domestic violence is a sad issue and it’s sad that we have to be here tonight... I don’t know how you’re going to stop the problem except through demonstrations like this one and follow-up conversations.” —Jessie Dalman we want to talk about it but there are two other options. The informal procedure is to help the person confront the harasser while the formal procedure involves a panel of judges and could, at the worst, mean the expulsion of the harasser.”

While all contacts are strictly confidential, the name of the harasser would be turned in to a confidential master list.

According to Bocks, the fact that the name is turned in is enough for some victims because “It is a step further than talking without registering a formal complaint.”

The training for the counselors took place last week. Ready to hear complaints of sexual harassment are faculty members Wayne Boulton, Bob Elder, Dean Kepts and Pat Roedeling. Student counselors are Melissa Bach, Keith Reynolds, Ann Verhey and Yalonda Carter.

Brief counselors are Libby Bocks, Kathy Adamski, Fonda Green and Darel Schenardi. The advisory member to the counselors is Chaplain Gerry VanHeest.
NEWS

WTHS DJs fired for breaking rules

by Jill Flanagan
news editor

Two WTHS DJs have had their show cancelled for allegedly drinking before going on the air.

The original complaint against Dave Engbers ('93) and Dave Douma ('92) also included a charge of using profanity on the air. This charge was later dropped.

Station Manager Chris Allman ('92) said, "Everyone at TBS signs a Code of Conduct which outlines rules and punishments and agrees to abide by FCC, Hope and our rules. We received a complaint from the community which said they used language illegal by the FCC and I confronted them."

Said Allman, "I won't tolerate anything of that nature as manager."

At the same time, another charge was raised by an executive committee member who claimed to have smelled alcohol while the two DJs were on the air. According to Allman, no alcohol was present but the two had been drinking.

Following station rules, Program Manager Tim Groenens ('92) fired them. Said Groenens, "Bobo (Allman) knows what he's doing. I assume my general manager knows what he's doing so I fired them."

Engbers, "The next day [after our show] I was told our show was cancelled. They thought we were intoxicated on the air. I thought we were set up."

Engbers and Douma appealed the decision and a committee of two executive committee members and two random TBS members reinvestigated the decision.

According to Allman, they were found innocent on the second charge. The committee stated for, "We would like our fans support through this."

"All we really want is to get our show back." said Douma ('92)

DeGraff lecture series begins with look at America, Twain and Stowe

by Greg Brown
staff writer

Dr. Thomas Werge ('63), professor of English at Notre Dame presented "America as Mystical Body: Slavery and Twain" as the first address through the new DeGraff Lecture Series at Hope College. The Lecture Series was established by the family of Dr. Clarence DeGraff, in memory of his service to Hope College. DeGraff served in the English Department from 1928-1972. For 25 of his 44 years at Hope, he served as department chairperson, included a charge of using profanity on the air which said they used language illegal by the FCC.

"We wanted an opportunity for children to come together and celebrate Halloween in ways they maybe couldn't at home."

"The more educating you do, the more your program."

"I was absolutely overcome by the fact that about every other page had an image that was totally degrading. But I had never noticed it before I was absolutely thinking of viewing it."

"People need to confront others when they over hear derogatory things, anything that goes against the system, to deny the existence of a problem. If we deny, "we, that could happen to me" or "has happened to me."

"Response needs to be based on the fact that sexual harassment is associated with violent crime, according to Steiner. "It is a continuum and we need to confront all of these issues in the whole society," she said.

"Every fifteen seconds a woman is beaten by her spouse or partner. Twenty to thirty percent of students experience sexual harassment from faculty. Statistics like these are the facts that should be faced.

Lecturer gives practical advice about harassment

by Jill Flanagan
news editor

"Whether or not Anita Hill told the truth on Capitol Hill, in the eyes of most women what she described was sexual harassment."

Julie Steiner, Coordinator of the University of Michigan's Sexual Assault Prevention and Awareness Center, views this as an inconsistency. Said Steiner, "There are two conflicting things about this issue: people say they don't know what sexual harassment is but most have ideas. The key thing about it is it is not that mysterious."

Steiner believes that this understanding is fundamental to a solution but there are other things which also need to be looked into.

"What we don't have an understanding about is why it's bad, what the impact is in a college or university setting and how we should respond.

"The bigger answer is that we have to start talking about it so that we don't divide campaigns."

Steiner emphasized the need to start at everyday events in which women are 'objectified' and 'devalued.' When Steiner began her job, she was involved with a project to examine sexism in magazines.

"We need to create a climate where this type of behavior will not be tolerated."

Education is also key. Said Steiner, "The more educating you do, the more people are going to come forward to report sexual harassment."

Steiner was also pleased at the steps that Hope is taking to deal with sexual harassment (see adjoining article) which encourages the college to "build on your history of recognizing the value of people."
Motivational speaker to be on campus

by Steve Kaukonen
So-editor

Tim Hansel, nationally known motivational speaker and author of numerous articles and books, will be on Hope's campus to present four addresses.

Mary Haddon ('92) and Cheryl Becker ('92) have coordinated Hansel's visit with the help and support of the Chaplin's office and the Health Clinic.

"We have been fortunate to have heard "We would really like to encourage all the students to come," said Haddon. "Tim's messages are for everyone."

"Tim shares a lot of personal stories, humorous antidotes and accounts from other people's experiences," added Becker. "He speaks dynamically, and inspirationally."

Hansel founded and was president of "Wilderness of Loneliness," a year-round wilderness program designed to challenge people of all ages to go beyond their preconceived, self-imposed boundaries.

He is currently vice president of communication resources for "World Servants," a program that provides organizations with short term mission opportunities around the world.

A graduate of Stanford University, Hansel has taught at the high school, college and graduate levels on a variety of subjects. He has worked with members of the United Nations and has worked with the physically handicapped.

He has also worked with young people ranging from delinquents to All Americans. Hansel's teaching duties have taken him into the inner-city of New York and to seven different countries throughout the world.

In 1979, he wrote his first book, When I Relax I Feel Guilty, which won a national award in 1986.

He has also written What Kids Need Most in a Dad—a practical help to countless families, Holy Sweat, Eating Problems for Breakers—a creative, practical, and highly enjoyable book about how to solve problems of any size or shape, Real Heroes Eat Hamburgers—a devotional book for children, and Through the Wilderness of Loneliness. In addition, he has made two films: None Run Last and Holy Sweat: The Ten Keys to Peak Performances.

Hansel, who lives in chronic pain as a result of a 1974 climbing accident, manages to bring laughter, inspiration, and encouragement, to all who hear him. He has been called a gifted speaker with the ability to communicate with humor, power, sincerity, and enthusiasm. He will challenge you to live life to the fullest.

Tim Hansel  PR Photo
Editorial
Are student organizations too business oriented?

WTHS fired two students for allegedly drinking before going on the air. Originally there was a second charge concerning the use of language prohibited by the FCC. The DJs were found guilty of the first charge but the second charge was dropped.

According to the station General Manager, Chris "Bobo" Allman, the decision to fire the two students was a business decision. Arguably that's the question which has arisen with WTHS. It has become a business, and not a college radio station. Many DJs have been alienated from the station in the name of business.

Without diverging too much from the issue, one only has to point towards WTHS's newly implemented programmed shows; shows that, for the most part, force many DJs to play, not what they want, but rather programmed music.

As with most student organizations, WTHS needs to find the balance between being a business and being a place where students can gain experience in a less formal context. This balance of power may mean giving up the freedom of DJs to completely program their own shows but at the same time there must be room for some freedom of choice and expression.

Letters to the editors
Professor clarifies editorial claims

Dear Editors,

I would not think it inappropriate under normal circumstances, for a faculty person to write a letter to the editor for the Anchor. It is a student forum, and should remain one. However, your editorial of October 30 misrepresents the current discussion of Nykerk and the Pull, and I think that misrepresentation needs correction. The Campus Life Board cannot make decisions like "dictatorship," because of the nature of the Board. The Board has an equal number of faculty and student representatives, and the faculty members have been elected by the student body.

Furthermore, it is false that the Board has not sought student input. Last Spring, the Extra-Curricular Activities Committee (which has many student members) met with faculty representatives) spent considerable time talking to students - both those who want Nykerk and the Pull to stay the same and those who think that change would be an improvement. The ECAC recommended creating a committee to consider the specific issues involved, a committee which, if formed, will have the same Board members elected by the student body.

The opinions addressed in the editorial are solely those of the editorial board.

Sincerely,

Carol Simon.
Christmas changes
CARRIE MAPLES

This weekend at work I spent a lot of time pricing and putting out Christmas tree ornaments and holiday decorations. It may be hard to believe but we already have a lot of items for sale. The Christmas stuff (for lack of a better word) and we get more in all the time. Remember, there are only a couple of days left until Christmas!

One of the nice things about working in a store is the employee discount. I decided this weekend to put a nativity set on layaway. I can see you asking, "why?"

Well, the closer Christmas gets the more I realize that will be my last Christmas at home.

This will be the last year I go home for Christmas. The past three weeks of Christmas and am involved in all the family things like picking out and decorating a tree and baking Christmas cookies with my little sister. Every year I wrap presents for everyone else. I have a reputation for being a great wrapper so somehow became the family's designated wrapper. What are they going to do without me next year? Thinking about not being home next year makes me sad. I have to

I'm not saying it's bad, it's just not easy. With all the expectations, being a PK was a tough responsibility.

Ever since May of 1971, when my dad was ordained as the minister of Colon Baptist Church I have been under intense scrutiny from my parents, teachers, friends, and especially people from the church to continuously - 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, 52 weeks a year. 10 years ago, a decade, a score - look, act, think, and speak like a little angel.

The whole look. The look of a PK is a conservative one. No long hair or funky haircuts, but rather something nice and neat. Clothes are to be proper, conservative attire. No wild or risky outfits. Ties preferred. Definitely no earrings - or the Civil Rights laws of that time. I guess what else that had the appearance of being amateurish.

I was always expected to act like a perfect angel. And when I say perfect, I mean impeccable. During church services, I sat in the front pew with my siblings and my mother, and for one hour was expected to sit still and listen to my teacher. I knew the whole congregation could see every little motion I or my siblings made, and the smallest movement would be noticed by someone in the church.

I was always expected to attend every church function. This included Sunday school on Sunday morning, the morning service of church, Sunday evening service, Wednesday night service and every single other conceivable church function. (The worst part is that we would arrive at least an hour early, and not leave until everyone was gone, which usually meant an extra 45 minutes to an hour. For a kid, this was an eternity.)

Outside of church, the same level of behavior was expected. Not only from the people in the church, but from teachers and friends who knew I was a PK.

In class at school, I was closely watched as if I dared even blink an eye at the wrong time, the teacher was on my case. Even if I was doing something other kids did quite frequently without getting in trouble, I would be punished or reprimanded.

Remember one time I was on a field trip with my class, and my mother was acting as a chaperon. We were taking a train ride and the class was as rowdy as could be expected of a kindergarten class, but clutter. Our house is packed full of decorations and a big tree.

I don't want an empty apartment to come home to every night. I want a wreath on the door and Christmas towels in the kitchen. I guess what I want is a home.

Sometimes a full apartment, one with tons of clutter, will help re-establish the family I won't be seeing. I figure I have to start now if I am going to have enough stuff to achieve that.

Next year Jim and I will have to decide where to go for Christmas. We'll both have limited time and definitely limited funds. I don't like the idea of having to choose between going to see his parents or going to see mine. How do we say we'll spend this Christmas with his parents and then next Christmas with mine? We won't be set little Stevie Kaukonen, he was sitting across from my mother behaving like a little angel.

My mother noticed that the back of the seats could be turned into a serving tray and wanting to make her son knowledgeable of such a wonderful invention, showed him how to pull out his tray.

The moment I unlatched the tray like my mother told me to, and got reprimanded for it. And since that day I dare not touch those serving trays.

I was always to think like an angel. I never went to movies or dances. I was not allowed to listen to rock music. And anything else that had the appearance of being even slightly evil, was prohibited, even if the other kids were allowed to do it.

Instead the expectation was that anything I did or thought about was good and wholesome, and any slight deviance from that would not be tolerated.

So what should I or anyone do seeing that much of our families anyway.

This year we solved that problem by making arrangements to spend Christmas with our own families and then see each other after Christmas. It won't be that easy next year. But at least we get to see each other for a few days.

We've talked about just spending all the holidays staying home alone and not going any place, but somehow I don't think that would be a popular choice with either of our families. I guess we'll have to cross that bridge in a year or so.

Meanwhile, I am stocking up on ornaments, decorations and strands of lights. I can't wait until the after-Christmas sales because then I'll be able to get lots of things at half their pre-Christmas price. I may not be Dutch but I'm still broke.

I just have to remember that everything I buy this winter I have to move to Boston next summer and when faced with the expectations forced upon us by our cultures, many of which seem to be unfairly placed. Often there is not much you can do. Generally, Laura Meyer can't change her sex, and I can't change the fact that I'm a PK.

Everybody has some sort of expectations or stereotyping placed upon them by society and this goes beyond just the gender issue. I am expected to act like a PK. Laura Meyer is expected to act like a woman. And we both are treated as such.

People need to realize everyone - whether male or female, black, white, PK or not a PK - is their own individual with his or her own personality, and should not judge them on the basis of their sex, race, religion, or position in life.

Now this column is not meant to be a ventilation of my frustration of being a PK nor is it a spoof off Laura Meyers's column. Rather it was just to show that expectations are found in many areas other than gender issues, and people need to be aware of not stereotyping just being a PK, but any person, and in the process forcing undue expectations upon them for being who they are even in the case of PKs.

Racism

Continued from Pg. 4

all, one might think that by the time you've got college to you're a mature "grown person to take responsibil- ity for your own actions, and can disregard with the excuse that my own 10 year old cousins have grown, "they started it." Secondarily, unfortunately, you like most of white America so are proud of yourselves for the Civil Rights laws of that came out of the 60s, that you have convinced yourselves that since Jesse Jackson ran for president, not only once but twice, and that since there has been a black Miss America who hasn't been stripped (no pun intended) of her title; that all is well in the "land of equality." I hate to burst all your little bubbles, but "we didn't mean it" doesn't wash. If you didn't mean it, you wouldn't have said it. The simple fact that you took the offensive implies guilt, guys; come on, don't hide your racism. I personally would much rather know exactly who it is that Nykerk '91: Even year women take back Nykerk

Lynn Block, hugs Charlene Fisher after receiving the Nykerk Cup for the sophomore class.

Malanie Myers spoke as the '95 class orator.

Captain Crummond (Kim Lawrence) uses the "Indian sunburn treatment" on a waiter (Angie Heinz) as Rosemary Fenton (Kristen Jones) looks on in horror in the freshman play Bullshot Crummond.

Lenya Von Brunno (Stephanie) tortures Professor Fenton (Brenda Benedict) by feather.

The '95 Song Guys watch morale guys escort their song-mates to their places.
For their fanale, the sophomore class waved ribbons at the end of their rendition of "America."

"The Lion" (Julia Calabra) roars her hatred of humanity in the sophomore play Androcles the Lion.

Alison Clay, the sophomore orator, told the audience to make their own opportunities.

Members of the '94 Song wait and smile patiently before the Nykerk competition. They performed "Under the Sea."

Photos by Bret Bussey
The quest for the Holy Grail

by Karen Fitz LaBarge
staff writer

Imagine traveling far across the earth, across oceans and plains. Picture crossing mountains and streams. Imagine finally, after what seems like an eternity, arriving at the end of a long canyon, and seeing—carved out of the rock—the city of Petra. This ancient city, carved about the second century B.C., was used in the Indiana Jones movie series as the hiding place of the Holy Grail. Although students may not find the cup of Christ on the trip, they will see Petra and many other exotic places on the study tour to Israel, Egypt and Jordan. This May Term is called the “Three Faces of Faith” and is lead by professors Barry Bandstra, and Boyd Wilson. Although in the past, the trip was lead only by Bandstra, this year Wilson will be joining the trip with his expertise in Islam and other Middle Eastern religions.

Another aspect of this trip which differs from past years, is that students will be able to see three countries instead of only two. This course is offered every two years by the college, but because of the war in the Middle East last winter, the trip has not been offered since 1989.

Bandstra, coordinator of the trip recommends this May Trip emphatically. “If people are interested in Biblical studies, or, the history of the Middle East, this is the trip!” Not only do students get to see the movie location of the Holy Grail, (and also Madaba, Jerash and Amman, Israel is also part of the tour, including the West Bank, the Dome of the Rock, Old Jerusalem, and the Temple Mount. The group will visit Bethlehem, the city where Christ was said to be born, Herodion, and the Sea of Galilee. Jericho is also a part of the trip, as well as the Dead Sea and Petra in Jordan.

When they think they’ve seen it all...

One of the things I really appreciate is the opportunity to have fellowship with all the students on Hope’s campus.

—Gordon Borg

[Top of page]

In Eastern Europe, he has been to Poland, Czechoslovakia, and East Germany. Polakov “can compare everything but America is America—so unique. Holland is Holland.” As a native of Moscow, the small city- atmosphere of Holland is quite a change. “Hope is a nice place to study—it’s different. It’s not MIT. I can’t compare because I don’t have the knowledge of how they are, but it’s really different from Eastern Europe.”

Polakov spent half a day in New York City. “I have no opinion but that I like, like New York and Chicago. I like small cities, just to stop by for a while. I don’t want to be insulating, just to express my opinions.”

On Chicago, Polakov’s response was “Splendid.” He, like so many of the other Soviet students who are currently at Hope, “prefer(s) the ground to being in the Sears Tower.”

In the Soviet Union, Polakov has travelled around the Baltic Republics and the Black Sea. He’s been to the north as well. “Not like Siberia—that’s too far north, and uncivilized.”

He hopes to spend his Thanksgiving in Chicago. It would be abnormal. “I like the life. I don’t go to foresee because it usually doesn’t happen like that. For a non-American to live here is kind of a hard time because interrelations are so different and how people treat each other is so different from the European standards.

“People are more self-conscious here. What they think that the only way is to survive here. It’s not like that in Europe. Privacy in an American thing. Sometimes it’s hard. I like it because I like this concept of privacy.”

The social activities are “okay for Holland. I’m sure Holland can’t have things like it and it captures your abnormal. I like the social life. It gives you the opportunity to study.”

As far as religion goes, “I like it. I don’t go to foresee because it usually doesn’t happen like that. For a non-American to live here is kind of a hard time because interrelations are so different and how people treat each other is so different from the European standards.

When asked if he would ever consider living in the U.S., he said that he doesn’t “like to foresee because it usually doesn’t happen like that. For a non-American to live here is kind of a hard time because interrelations are so different and how people treat each other is so different from the European standards.

“People are more self-conscious here. What they think that the only way is to survive here. It’s not like that in Europe. Privacy in an American thing. Sometimes it’s hard. I like it because I like this concept of privacy.”

The social activities are “okay for Holland. I’m sure Holland can’t have things like it and it captures your abnormal. I like the social life. It gives you the opportunity to study.”

As far as religion goes, “I like it. I don’t go to foresee because it usually doesn’t happen like that. For a non-American to live here is kind of a hard time because interrelations are so different and how people treat each other is so different from the European standards.

“People are more self-conscious here. What they think that the only way is to survive here. It’s not like that in Europe. Privacy in an American thing. Sometimes it’s hard. I like it because I like this concept of privacy.”
Renown pianist to perform at Hope

Highlander — The 1991-92 Artist Piano Series at Hope College will open with Arthur Greene on Friday, Nov. 8, at 8 p.m. in Dimnent Memorial Chapel.

Greene is a newly appointed piano faculty member at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. His program will consist of works by Beethoven, Chopin and Scriabin.

Tickets will be available at the door, and cost $5 general admission, and $3 for senior citizens and students. Admission is free for those holding a current Hope identification.

Greene has performed throughout the United States, Europe, Japan, China and Korea, playing solo recitals in Carnegie Hall, Carnegie Recital Hall, the Kennedy Center, Hong Kong City Hall, Tokyo Bunka and other major halls. He has played concerts with the Philadelphia Orchestra, the National Symphony and the San Francisco Symphony.

He has performed the complete solo piano music of Brahms in six recitals at the Gardner Museum in Boston, and has made two recordings on the Nippon Columbia label. He also frequently performs with his wife, the violist Hong-Mei Xiao.

Greene has won first prizes in the Gina Bachauer, the William Kapell (Maryland), and the Helen Hart and the New York Young Artists in Recital competitions, and participated in the Affiliate Artist Xenos Piano Program and the U.S. Artist Ambassadors Program.

He has served on the juries of the Indiana University and the University of Iowa, and has given more than 100 master classes in Japan.

He was born in New York, and first studied piano with Dorothy Bastis, a student of Arthur Schnabel. He attended Yale University, graduating cum laude in 1976, and subsequently received an M.M. from Juillard and a D.M.A. from the State University of New York at Stony Brook, studying with Martin Canin.

Greene is a Steinway Artist, and is represented by Aaron Conrad Management.

The other pianists on the 1991-92 Artist Piano Series will be Russian-born Valery Birkinski, who will perform on Feb. 29, 1992.

There should have been only one

by Bret Bussey

staff writer

Highlander, starting Christopher Lambert and Sean Connery, finally was followed with a sequel. The just-released sequel, Highlander 2: The Quickening, was awaited with much anticipation in light of the first movie.

Impressively filling out of the last movie, Highlander 2 answered many questions left from the original. For those of you who are familiar with Highlander, you know that there were some unanswered questions from the last movie. For instance, where did these immortal creatures come from, and why did they have this "prize" to be the only immortal remaining? Why could there be only one? These questions and more are answered pleasantly and I awaited the awesome plot to follow.

It was impressive, although not pleasantly. The movie's plot ranged from interesting to campy. Time after time, it ceased the audience with a series of interesting events and then crashed an audience by pulling out some sort of foolish transaction or campy villain. Christopher Lambert and Sean Connery are thankfully not to blame for any of this, as their acting and swordplay were as exemplary as ever, and gave the film a class it really didn't deserve. The film's screenplay, editing, directing, and the over-budgeted special effects were to blame more than the acting.

Overall, this film is the yang-ing of films, with its even mixture of bad and good. It's nothing more than mediocre, and if you want to see it, you should wait for the video to go down to $0.99 at Meijers.

In the words of the people who have seen the movie with, Matt Roe, "(92), "There should have been only one!".

Valentine reads during Halloween

by Matt Bays

arts editor

"Today and angel: tomorrow worms, and the grave; and the days after only lines in chalk."

said poet Jean Valentine reading a poem to a suspicious gathering of goblins, gnomes, and pirates in the Deepre Art Center Gallery.

The reading was on Halloween, Valentine read from one of her published works, Home Deep Blue, and several poems yet to be published. A graduate of Radcliffe College, she has been the recipient of a Guggenheim Fellowship and awards from The National Endowment for the Arts, the Bunting Institute and the Rockefeller Foundation.

Jane Bach, who studied Valentine's poems

Berenger and Hoksins team up to uncover forgotten past

by Bret Bussey &

Mara Van Baren

A foggy New Year's Eve, a drive in the California mountains, and a devastating car crash set the stage for Shattered (R). Dan Merrick (Todd Berenger, Betrayed, Platoon) has to start life over again. He's a successful architect, with a beautiful, caring wife, Judith (Greta Scacchi, Private Innocent), who nurses him back to health. The problem is, he has no idea where it all came from, since he also has amnesia. He can function professionally, drive a car, act as a normal human being, but has no personal memories whatsoever, with the exception of mystifying flashbacks.

What starts out as a normal recovery turns into something else when Merrick finds that his wife had been having an affair before his accident. In fact, so bad he, even though he couldn't remember with whom. Merrick then begins a journey to find out what exactly he isn't being told about his past life, and to uncover the mystery behind his accident and his flashbacks.

This film is an excellent suspense thriller, and it rivals movies like Mazerudite with its plot twists.

WAS EPED YOUTH.
Sports Briefs

Women's Soccer

The Lady Dutch lost their season finale to Calvin on Saturday by a score of 2-1. Kelli Koos ('92) scored for Hope. The Dutch finished third in the MIAA with an 8-3-1 conference record. Hope had a 10-2-2 record overall.

Men's Soccer

The men's soccer team ended their season with a loss to Calvin as well. The 2-0 defeat dropped Hope's MIAA record to 7-4, earning them third place in the conference. Their overall record was 13-4.

Football team loses “Wooden Shoes” game

by Cal Hodgson

Hope's oldest football rivalry was continued Saturday against Kalamazoo. The Hope-Kalamazoo game has been called the "Wooden Shoe Game" since 1931, with the winning team's coach taking home a pair of hard carved Dutch wooden shoes.

It was also a big game for Hope seniors as they were playing the last home contest of their careers. With the last Kalamazoo win in Holland coming in 1967, the seniors looked to have plenty of family in front of their parents.

Kalamazoo's coach, the Dutch, has won by a score of 6-0. The Dutch also had success running the ball with Peter Dumas ('93) gaining 75 yards and Scott Frederick ('92) notching 72. Quarterback Stefan Swartzwald ('92) also ran for some key first downs.

However, Hope could not put points on the board of any of the four times they were inside the 20 yard line. The half ended with the score still 0-0 for Kalamazoo.

K-Zoo finished off their 70 yard drive with a 19 yard touchdown pass. Hope was able to swat away the extra point kick however, with a 18 yard touchdown pass. Hope's next drive was thwarted by a 10 yard sack as well, resulting in a lost fumble.

Hope seemed to be able to move the ball anywhere but into the end-zone, but eventually they ran out of chances and out of time. The last Dutch effort ended in an interception, dropping Hope's record to 2-2 in the MIAA and 5-3 overall. Hope's last game will be Saturday at Olivet.

Women's soccer captain leads the whole pack

by Cal Hodgson

Lynn Schopp ('92) would like to be soccer coach someday. That will require a lot of responsibility and leadership experience.

She's ready.

For the last three years, Schopp has been the captain of the Hope Women's soccer team, and for the last four she has been an R.A. on campus. She joined the soccer team in its inaugural season three years ago and has been first team All-MIAA for the last two years. This year will be no different.

Schopp was one of the top scorers for the Lady Dutch this season even though she plays a defensive position.

Hope finished its season Saturday with a 2-1 loss to Calvin, ending with a 10-3-2 overall and 8-5-1 MIAA record.

When asked about the close of her soccer career, Schopp said, "I hate to see it end. It's been fun and it's been worth it.

"This is the best year I've had," she added. "I improved a lot over the summer. This has been the team's best year too.

"I hate to see it end. It's been fun and it's been worth it.

"I think the last three years, Schopp has also worked in data entry for the Indiana Golf Association.

On the side, Schopp plays for Carmel's club soccer team which placed third in the state of Indiana last summer.

Schopp appreciates the opportunity to have a liberal arts education.

"I have loved Hope College," said Schopp. "My classes have broadened my horizons. I'm a different person since I've been here."

All of Schopp's leadership roles are not without their tough moments either. Being soccer captain for instance:

"Sometimes it's hard when I know what coaching is, and I can see his pain, but I also see how the team feels, and the two are very different. That's when it's difficult.

"Sometimes it's hard when I know what coaching is, and I can see his pain, but I also see how the team feels, and the two are very different. That's when it's difficult."
The Hope College men's basketball team will enter the 1991-92 season once again with loads of talent and high expectations. Last year, the Flying Dutchmen compiled an outstanding 24-2 record and won the MIAA title with a perfect 12-0 conference mark. However, Hope lost in the NCAA 1st round to Calvin.

Coach Glenn VanWieren, who is entering his 14th year as head basketball coach at Hope, said that "a couple of our goals this year are to win the league title again as well as making a better showing for ourselves in the NCAA tournament."

VanWieren sees Hope as being in strong company to win the league this year with Albion running a solid third. Hope will have to overcome the loss of point guard Eric Elliot ('91) if they are to reach these goals. Elliot was the league MVP last year as well as being named to several All-American teams. "We'll need several players to pick up their production and leadership if we are to overcome the loss of Elliot. All my players seem to have improved their games during the off-season and I'm very confident this team can be at least as good as last year's," says VanWieren. "Our schedule is more difficult this year, so our record might not be as good, but we will be better prepared for the NCAA tournament."

Hope College returns seven players who saw considerable action on last year's team. Wade Gugino ('92), a 6'7" center, leads the returnees. Gugino scored over 18 points a game last year, while also grabbing 9 rebounds per contest. He was named 1st team all-MIAA for the 2nd year in a row. Gugino will likely battle for minutes with his brother, Jeff, for the remainder of this season with Calvin's Steve Honder. He can also be expected to lead the team in dunks.

Colly Carlson ('92) returns as captain for the Dutch at a guard-forward position. He is probably the most-well rounded player in the MIAA, finishing in the top ten last year in both rebounding and assists while still finding time to score nearly 11 points a game. Carlson was 2nd team all-MIAA last year.

Jon Joffe ('92) and Tom Halbert ('92) split time last year at the other guard-forward position, with Joffe starting the majority of the games. Joffe's season is in doubt as of now because of a back injury, but he would be counted upon as one of Hope's primary perimeter threats. Halbert quickly became a fan favorite in his first year at Hope for his electric dunking skills. He is perhaps the most exciting player ever to wear the orange and blue. Both Joffe and Halbert averaged just over 5 points a game last year.

Doug Messecar ('93) and Bart VerHuist ('92) will likely both see considerable playing time at power forward. VerHuist, who was injured most of last year, started as a sophomore and averaged over 10 points a contest. Messecar, who started last year, is a tremendous athlete and defensive player. He averaged close to 7 points a game last year.

Jeff DeMasso ('93) and Eric Hass ('92) should battle for playing time at the point guard spot vacated by Elliot. DeMasso was one of the most improved players on the team last year, finishing third on the team in assists as Elliot's back-up.

Other returning lettermen include Steve Hendrickson ('93) and Kevin Westrae ('93). Entering their first year of varsity action are Troy Peuler ('94), J.J. Markert ('94), Matt Waiter ('94), and Steve Pietepoul ('94).

The Flying Dutchmen open play November 8 at the Dow Center against the Swedish national team. Game time is set for 8:00.

Flying Dutch take on Swedish b-ball team

HOLLAND—Hope College basketball fans will have an opportunity to get an early look at the season's prospects when the Flying Dutchmen host the Plannja Club of Sweden on Friday at 6 p.m. in the Dow Center.

Admission to the exhibition will be $4. Because of limited seating in the Dow Center, the public ticket sale will not be held until Thursday after season ticket holders have had an opportunity to acquire tickets.

The Plannja Club will be playing seven games between Nov. 4-12 in Michigan, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania. Other Michigan opponents include Wayne State, Ferris State and Grand Valley State. The team, coached by Charles Barton, has players ranging in age from 19 to 31.

The exhibition is in preparation for the season opener which will be a tournament Nov. 22-23 at Wheaton College in Illinois. The Flying Dutchmen are ranked fifth in the nation in a pre-season poll of NCAA Division III teams.

Glenn Van Wieren, the fourth winningest active NCAA Division III basketball coach, begins his 15th season at the helm of the Flying Dutchmen. The defending champions of the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association (MIAA), Hope had its best season in 1990-91 with a 24-2 record.

1991-92 Hope College Men's Basketball Schedule

NCAA Division III

Friday, Nov. 8 ........................................ SWEDISH NATIONAL TEAM
Friday-Saturday, Nov. 22-23 ........................................ at Wheaton College Tournament
Tuesday, Nov. 26 ........................................ at Central Michigan, 8 p.m.
Friday-Saturday, Nov. 29-30 ........................................ at Grand Rapids Baptist Tournament
Wednesday, Dec. 4 ........................................ NORTH PARK, ILL, 8 p.m.
Saturday, Dec. 7 ........................................ at Concordia, Mich., 7:30 p.m.
Friday-Saturday, Dec. 13-14 ........................................ RUSS DEVETTE HOLIDAY TOURNAMENT
Wednesday, Dec. 18 ........................................ CONCORDIA, ILL, 8 p.m.
Thursday, Jan. 2 ........................................ at Eckerd, Fla., 7:30 p.m.
Saturday, Jan. 4 ........................................ at David Lipscomb, Tenn., 8 p.m.
Wednesday, Jan. 8 ........................................ *ADRIAN, 8 p.m.
Saturday, Jan. 11 ........................................ *at Olivet, 3 p.m.
Wednesday, Jan. 15 ........................................ *at Calvin, 8 p.m.
Wednesday, Jan. 18 ........................................ *ALBION, 3 p.m.
Wednesday, Jan. 22 ........................................ *at Alma, 8 p.m.
Saturday, Jan. 29 ........................................ *KALAMAZOO, 8 p.m.
Wednesday, Feb. 1 ........................................ *at Adrian, 3 p.m.
Wednesday, Feb. 5 ........................................ *at Kalamazoo, 8 p.m.
Saturday, Feb. 8 ........................................ at Aquinas, 3 p.m.
Wednesday, Feb. 12 ........................................ *ALMA, 8 p.m.
Saturday, Feb. 15 ........................................ *CALVIN, 3 p.m.
Wednesday, Feb. 19 ........................................ *at Albion, 8 p.m.
Saturday, Feb. 22 ........................................ *OLIVET, 3 p.m.
Wednesday, Feb. 26 ........................................ MIAA Tournament First Round
Friday-Saturday, Feb. 28-29 ........................................ MIAA Tournament Finals
Tuesday, March 3 ........................................ NCAA Division III First Round Game
Thursday-Saturday, March 5 & 7 ........................................ NCAA Division III Sectional Tournament
Friday-Saturday, March 13-14 ........................................ NCAA Division III Regionals
Friday-Saturday, March 20-21 ........................................ NCAA Division III Nationals, Springfield, Ohio

*MIAA Game

Wheaton College Tournament - Hope, Indiana Wesleyan, St. Xavier, Ill., Wheaton, Ind.
Grand Rapids Baptist Tournament - Bethel, Ind., Goshen, Ind., Grand Rapids Baptist, Hope
Ruas DeVette Holiday Tournament - Aquinas, Grand Rapids Baptist, Hope, Manchester

All games broadcast by WHTC-AM (1450) and WJQ-FM (90.3)
+ Televised by WOTV, Grand Rapids

Homes games played at Holland Civic Center

Starting times are in the time zone of the home team.
Wanted: Staff Writers

If you are looking for an interesting job and if you would like to get some experience in the area of journalism, call us at The anchor office at X7877

No experience necessary

HUNGRY? THIRSTY?

Take a walk over to

THE NICKELODEON INC.

bites of yesterday — bites of today at 24 E. 8th St. between College and Central. ONLY 2 BLOCKS FROM CAMPUS!

We’re your closest stop for ice cream, popcorn, hot dogs, soups, and sandwiches!

TRY A NICKELODEON SPECIAL
(Coney Island Chili Dog w/popcorn)
AND A LARGE SOFT DRINK
FOR ONLY $1.50 WITH THIS COUPON!

Offer good through NOVEMBER 27.
Open 9-9 Monday through Friday and 9-5 on Saturday.

Complete Typing & Word Processing Service

Reports Resumes
Term Papers Letters
Word Processing

*Reliable Accurate, & Efficient work performed with laser printer.

For more information:
Call Wendy: 393-2087 in the evenings.
772-4745 daytime.

THE ALTERNATIVE
89.9-FM-WTHS

Asks the burning questions of Existence:

Why Do they call them buildings when they are already built?
If M&M’s melt in your mouth and not in your hand, what do they do under your arm?
If you were traveling in a car at the speed of light and you turned your headlights on, would they do anything?
We answer these questions and more daily on

THE ALTERNATIVE 89.9-FM-WTHS