The new craft which is to ply between Grand Haven and Lamont made its first trip Saturday. The craft is 62 feet long and is the largest on the river.

Mrs. Helen C. Kip has left for the east after spending a few days with Miss Elizabeth Cappon. Mrs. Kip has just returned from China where she has served the Reformed Mission for some years.

While attempting to stop a runaway team Alderman Richard Jelle-ma was thrown against a fence, receiving two broken ribs and internal injuries Saturday. From present reports he is doing nicely.

A curious feature affecting the present season for trout fishing has developed in consequence of the enactment of legislation changing the closing date from Aug. 15 to Sept.
15. The new law will go into effect 90 days after the adjournment of the state legislature which will take place June 2, 90 days from June 2 is Sept. 1, thus while under the existing trout law fishing will close Aug.
15, under the new law it will reopen
Sept. 1 and continue for 15 days.

The house of Mrs. Nellie Toren at 543 College Avenue was struck by lightning early Monday afternoon.
The bolt struck the chimney, destroying it entirely and at the same time doing other damage to the rear of the house. The members of the family were not at home at the time but were spending the day at Jenison park. Neighbors notified them of the damage which Mrs. Toren later reported very slight and covered by insurance.

The slight earthquake felt in this city last week was not the first ever experienced in Grand Haven. At the time of the Charleston earthquake in the eighties a distinct shock was felt in this city. Holland and other places along the shore of Lake Michigan, severe enough to rattle windows and glassware on shelves.
The great San Francisco quake did not extend to this section of the country. A few years ago the explosion of a powder mill directly across the lake near Kenosha, jarred this section as an earthquake would,
and for hours the tremor it caused was considered an earthquake. However we are undoubtedly outside the earthquake belt for the few shocks experienced here have been very slight and attended by no damage and were undoubtedly but the mere tremblings of more destructive quakes in other sections.—Grand Haven Tribune.

The Holland Independents will play the Mona Lakes on the 19th street diamond Saturday. Game called at 2 p. m. sharp.

The Holland Sugar Co. has increased its capital stock from $300,- 000 to $500,000. The company has leased 1,000 additional acres of land near here and elsewhere for the raising of the beets and the output of sugar will be correspondingly increased next winter.

Next Saturday teachers from all parts of the country are planning to come to Jenison park for a day's outing. The affair will be the annual picnic of the United Teachers' associations and an exceptionally large delegation is planning to be present this year. By a special arrangement with the proprietor of The Pines a special dinner will be served to the teachers and their friends for 15 cents

Chief of Police Kamferbeek, accompanied by Mrs. Kamferbeek left Tuesday for a week's trip to New York City. They will return by way of Washington. Patrolmen Kieft and Meeuwse are doing the day work and Patrolman Steketee and Deputy Sam Leonard are on the night schedule.

J. Julius Steffens, a member of the graduating class of Hope '04 is spending a few weeks at his home in Zeeland. He was here yesterday calling on friends in Holland. Mr.
Steffens is a professor in the English Department of the Missouri State University, and contemplates spending the summer taking an advanced course at Chicago University.

Local members of the Christian Reformed denomination will be interested in the announcement coming from Muskegon that the Fourth Christian Reformed church has at last succeeded in securing a pastor after having a vacant pulpit for nearly a year. Rev. John Dolphin of Englewood, N. J. has accepted the call which was extended to him some time ago.

Allegan millers are quoting wheat at $1.50 per bushel this week, an advance of five cents over last week, and Young & Stratton Bros. report having paid as high as $1.55 during the past week. Allegan millers have all shipped in more or less of the grain. The high figure at which wheat has been holding for months past, and likewise the fact that it is still climbing, with no limit in sight is astounding. With flour quoted at $6.80 and $7.60 per barrel and other necessities at relatively high figures, the cost of living in this country is assuming mighty ponderous proportions.—Allegan News.

By pledging ten cents per week for an indefinite period the families of the local Christian Reformed denomination hope to secure money for providing adequate facilities to care for the rapidly increasing number of children. Six years the school on Central avenue was erected but it was long ago found too small for the attendance which it drew. The question of providing new quarters is difficult to decide because the lot upon which the present school stands is too small to warrant the erection of an addition and the church cannot afford to purchase a larger site and erect a larger building. It may be decided finally to build a ward school in some other section of the city.

Wm. J. Damson, a Holland boy, has reached the Philippine islands on his tour around the world, upon which he started two years ago. In a letter written to his mother, Mr.
Damson states that he occupies the position of supervising teacher of the Cagayan province, embracing a territory of 300 square miles, which is covered once or twice a month by means of horses, rowboats, carts and caraboo outfits. In the district are 25 schools, having an enrollment of 2,000 children. Mr. Damson has already covered Japan, China, Australia and other oriental countries and from the Philippines he expects to go to India, where he has a sister engaged in missionary work. He works his way wherever he goes and in this way makes his expenses for the trip. He expects to make the circuit in four or five years.

Congressman Diekema will arbitrate a four inning preliminary game between the professional men and the factory foremen. The game will be played on the Jenison park grounds just before the big game.

The annual reunion of the Soldiers and Sailors association of Western Allegan and VanBuren counties will be held at Scott Lake, one mile east of Pullman, Saturday, June 12. Efforts are being made to secure Congressman Hamilton of Niles and Past Commander Van Raalte of Holland as speakers.

Each recurring Memorial day finds new voids in the ranks of civil war veterans. A recent summary declared that of the original roster of 680 volunteer generals who attained their rank during the Civil War, only 27 survive. Of these but two hailed from Michigan, Gen. Byron R. Pierce of Grand Rapids and Gen.
John Cook of Ramson, Hillsdale county.

The Ladies' Aid society of Hope church gave a very enjoyable social in the church parlors last Thursday evening. The members of the society brought their husbands and friends and there were nearly 100 people.
A feature of the social was the giving of a dollar by each of the members and an account of how it had been earned. Most of the ladies had earned the money by baking or sewing, some had performed harder and more strenuous labor to earn the sum and one lady earned her dollar in a manner unusual for a woman—by silence. About $60 was turned into the treasury, most of this sum being brought in by the ladies, while the remainder was contributed by the gentlemen present.

The members of the committee on streets and cross walks will find that there is something more than honor in their office when they tackle the large number of petitions and resolutions concerning the building of sidewalks, culverts, opening of streets, etc., that came up in the council meeting last night and were referred to them for investigation.
There were so many matters of this sort that the session last night was a long one and it was after ten o'clock before the meeting adjourned.

The unexpected happened when the petition of the Holland Merchants Association asking for improvement in the approaches to the Grand Haven bridge was filed. The report of the committee stated that there was no proper fund from which money could be drawn for this work. The recommendation of the committee on public lighting that 18 arc lights be installed in various parts of the city was adopted. Some of the aldermen voted "no" on this proposition because they believe that the board of public works has no money for doing this work. It will cost $1800 to put in this number of arcs and the expense of maintaining them will be $50 per year for each light.

On recommendation of the license committee three pool rooms, Cole's Cumming's and Kiekenveld's were given licenses for the ensuing year.
The committee made no recommendation concerning the bonds of C.
Blom Sr. and Oosterhous for wholesale liquor houses and the council voted unanimously that they be not approved.

The claim of Contractor Prange that 2300 bricks belonging to him were in the possession of the city was found to be correct and the contractor will get his bricks.

The board of public works recommended that proper steps be taken to get the side track to the pumping station and the council decided to to confer with the Railroad company and find out at what time an engineer could be sent here to look over the situation and to have the council and board of public works go over the ground with the engineer at that time. In regard to the water problem the council voted to secure the services of a water works expert and to delay action until the local situation was thoroughly investigated and a report made.

The gas company matter was referred to the original committee and the City attorney for a more complete report. Little or nothing new was brought up in the discussion.

Compulsory sewer connections were recommended by the board of health for those located near the Nineteenth street pumping station and the recommendation received favorable action. These connections must now be installed and if any property holder refuses the work will be done by the city and a special assessment levied against the property owners to remunerate the city for the work.

Fourteen ballots were taken to elect a health inspector without success. Albert Michmershuizen was ahead on most of the ballots, Sam Leonard second and Cornel Dornbos third, but the required 6 votes to elect could not be secured. Despairing of breaking the deadlock the council adjourned.

Is Holkeboer Green?

This is the month of mosquitos, flies, June bugs and other pests. The council goat has again awakened from his slumbers, broken the rope which tied him to the fifth ward chair, and started making his diet on newspapers and printing bids.
Alderman Holkeboer, exasperated to a high degree at losing three straight games of "tit tat toe" to a newspaper reporter while the council was deliberating on one of the most important matters that has come before it this year, set up a howl, claiming that the newspaper men were interfering with him in the performance of his duties to his constituents—said duties being the winning of games of "tit tat toe" or securing printing contracts for the Holkeboer Co.

He introduced a resolution asking that the reporters be compelled to leave their seats at the council table and take seats at the table in the rear of the mayor's chair and the aldermen humored him by passing it unanimously. Twenty days notice.

Perhaps there was something deeper than the loss of a "tit tat toe" game underlying the desire of the fifth ward alderman to get rid of the reporters. They are, to adopt the vernacular, "onto de guy." The alderman not content with securing permission from the council to make repairs on an Eighth street building contrary to the express provisions of a city ordinance, set about for higher things. "I want to have a finger in the printers pie, myself," he said to the council when the question of printing bids came up. Last night the committee for city printing recommended that the contract be given to the Holkeboer Printing Co.
The council adopted the report. The question is can an alderman get his finger in the printing pie without getting it smirched with printers' ink or something worse? The committee stated that the Holkeboer bid was the lowest. A tabulation made by the newspaper reporters, whom Holkeboer claims bother him, showed Garvelink Bros. bid to be far lower than that of the Holkeboer company for nearly every job. Why didn't the contract go to Garvelink Bros?

Alderman Holkeboer said to the reporters, "I am pretty green up here and you fellows get me rattled." Does his record show anything like the verdancy of the emerald? Later in the evening he objected when alderman Hyma offered to draw lots with alderman Lawrence to break the dead lock in the balloting for a health inspector. "That must not be; that's gambling," he said. Such an objection from the alderman who did the job on the River street building and got his "finger in the printers pie!"

AMAZONS OF MONTENEGRO.

This illustration shows Montenegrin men and women helping the horses draw a gun up the mountainside. The guns are placed in such a position that they command the Bay of Antivari and the roads from Spizza. Spizza is a thorn in the flesh of Montenegrins, for it commands Antivari, its only port. The field-guns used by the Montenegrins are chiefly of Russian supply, and each is drawn by from eight to ten horses of poor quality.

Accident in Creamery

About 7:30 o'clock last Thursday morning the engine in the creamery at Coopersville was completely wrecked, caused either by a defect in the fly wheel or the governor belt coming off. Two men, M. P. Mosher and the fireman, Frank Blonksine, who happened to be near the engine room doors, narrowly escaped instant death, as the pieces of the fourfoot, flywheel flew in every direction. Beyond the breaking of a door and frame, some pipes and a few window lights, no further damage was done.

The creamery will be seriously crippled for a few days, until a new engine can be put in working order. The reserve engine was immediately started up, and they were able to take care of all the milk without much inconvenience to the patrons.

Arthur Kendall, the engineer, stated that the engine had run all right during the night and had left it about an hour before in apparently good condition. He was immediately sent for, made a few necessary repairs, and in an hour's time the reserve engine was doing duty. Although of smaller horse power, it will enable them to keep running until a new engine is installed.

The Value of a Silo

Silage costs 75 cents to $2 a ton, according to the farmers' facilities for growing a large yield of corn and for handling it to advantage. Some men claim they can grow corn and put it into the silo for 50 cents per ton, but supposing it costs the highest estimate—$2 per ton—It is still the cheapest feed that dairymen can supply. It is not only a very valuable feed for the production of milk or for the increase in growth, but it is palatable—the animals like it. It is a laxative and this alone is a valuable feature.

You can almost pick out cattle at glance that have been fed on silage because they look so slick and healthy.

It is a great satisfaction to watch silage-fed cattle when the silo is opened at feeding time. "Hurry up there old man, you can't get the silage to us any too soon. We have been waiting for you and we want you to get a hustle on." Silage is good feed during the summer time probably almost as valuable during July and August as it is in winter, and the cattle seem to like it almost as well in summer—at least they will leave good pasture readily if they expect a feed of silage at the stable.

Water for the Bees

Give the bees plenty of water. They need a great deal and will fly a long distance to get it.

If there is no running stream or lake of pure water near it is well to place a pail of fresh water near to the apiary every day.

Bees use water to dilute the heavy, thick honey left over from winter to make it suitable for the young larvae and also to make the cell wax pliable.

Keeping Time in Holland

"Railroad time, as we generally understand the phrase in the United States, is a little ahead of 'town' time, but in The Hague," the quaint old capital of Holland, all private and unofficial clocks and watches are kept 20 minutes fast," said Ger-Walshall. "When it is noon in the railway station, postoffice and other government buildings of The Hague the timepieces in the shops and the watches of the sturdy burghers show 12:20 p. m. Just what reason there is for this I don't know, although I asked enlightenment in many quarters. It seems a custom that has been handed down for generations and the Dutch are too conservative to change the ways of their progenitors without some mighty inducement."—Baltimore American.

Food for Thought

As the readers of the Holland City News are aware from a communication which recently appeared in its columns, and organization has been formed in the State Prison at Jackson, Michigan, known as the League for Self Improvement. The members of this organization have sent out circulars to their friends, state officials, and ex state officials, and others asking for their co-operation. This first circular was strong in its appeal for sympathy, though rather vague in its aim and purpose. It intimated that there were weaknesses and faults in the present methods of dealing with the criminal classes, but did not point out a better way, and closed with the remark "Working together intelligently, you with the knowledge of the world at large, we with our experience with the world shut in, may we not find a better way?" One of such circulars was sent by Raymond Coates, a person well known in this community, who is serving a life sentence in connection with the murder of Enos Lawrence. Said circular was answered with a personal letter, asking for more definite information as to the aims and plans of the organization, assuring him of deep interest in the efforts for self-improvement. The following letter is received in reply, which will be interesting reading, especially since it comes from the prison and from a person known to many of the readers of the News.

Jackson, Michigan,
May 14th., 1909.

Mr. (Arend Vischer),
Holland, Mich.

Dear Sir:—Your esteemed favor of the 6th inst., was duly received, and before speaking of other subjects I wish to thank you for the kind and generous attitude evidenced therein, for our efforts are given renewed impetus by it. I will enclose more circulars which will, in part, answer your query as to what we hope to accomplish by our efforts; and in addition thereto will give you some of my own thoughts in connection with the subject. It is an obvious fact that no man can be truly and thoroughly reformed without his OWN co-operation; nor can his co-operation be gained except by evidence of kindly intention toward him; as for instance, "Earthly power doth then show like God's, when Mercy seasons Justice!" When, for any reason, a man falls, he should still be taught to feel that "Society" is his friend, not his enemy, and is endeavoring to make him better rather than to inflict pain, otherwise it brings about a Guerrilla warfare, and retaliation between society and the offender, and that to the detriment of all concerned.

When a man falls which is best for his morals, and the world at large, to put a pillow under him, or stone on top of him? The first ought to nourish and encourage the remaining spark of manhood in him; while the latter would just as surely rush out what little he might have, hereby making him worse than he was before, and thus defeating the primary object of the law. A drowning man needs a piece of cork, and not a millstone. We are human beings, with all the God-given emotions and sensibilities of yourself, and others. Can it be possible that an all wise and merciful God could say that because of one apparent evil act, we should forever hereafter be crushed down, disheartened and without even a hope for an opportunity to redeem ourselves? If so, it would not be in accordance with the teachings of the Great Redeemer of the world! It seems to me that if prisons are for legal vengeance, they are unchristian and better suited to the dark ages, than to our enlightened one. If they are not for legal vengeance, they are a failure, for my observation has been that many men are made worse by being sent to them.

Who is in a better position than we ourselves to know what would do us the most good, and thus society? It would not be a fair proposition for us to ask anything of the people, unless we give something in return, we will seek to improve and benefit each other here, pointing out the mistakes and failures in our lives, thus helping each to be benefited and made better by the experiences of the other. Some may again fall, and come far short of our hopes and wishes, but they will not all disappoint us, and if we can by united efforts, benefit even one-half, it seems to me that we will have proved worthy of the name of our league.

We believe there are many points in the law that might be altered to the end of mutual benefit. Space will not permit me to explain all that might be said in connection with our movement, but the primary object is that the people of the State may become better acquainted with the subject and unite with us in an effort to determine what is best for general good.

Will you meet us half way?

With kindest regards, I remain
Very truly yours,

Raymond Coates
No. 6387, M. S. P.

P. S. Please excuse the appearance of economy in paper, as we are limited in the amount allowed. R. O. Enclosed within said letter was the following circular:

The members of the League are very grateful for the generous response of the State Press, and for the many sweet-toned letters received. It will be readily understood that it is impossible for us to acknowledge them personally. The League for Self-Improvement
Michigan State Prison
Jackson, May 10, 1909.

Dear Sir:

We men of the League know we have done wrong—grievous wrong. We are conscious of broken laws and violated obligations. With the best grace we may, we accept the life we now live, not because we think it the wisest or best, but because it embodies all of wisdom and justice which our imperfect systems have evolved. But there are others beside ourselves, and there will be yet others in the years to come.

Not for ourselves alone, but for those who will be sent here tomorrow, next month, next year. There are thousands of men now in our prisons who once were bright-faced boys; there are thousands of bright-faced boys today who, in the strange workings of our imperfect lives, will some day fill the prisons of the future. In the eternal economy of the universe some way is provided whereby those boys may be saved from the misery, the degradation, the ruin, of the life we are enduring.

Change conditions! We are in earnest, and with all the strength of purpose we may retain in the environment amidst which we live, we think, and plan, and work, not for ourselves alone, for ourselves least of all, but for those dependent upon us, for those countless others who must be saved from what is now an inevitable future.

Working together intelligently, you with your knowledge of the world at large, we with our experience of the world shut in, may we not find the way?

Very respectfully,

The League for Self-Improvement
Sentiments like these, coming from within prison walls, give food for thought to seriously minded thinking men.

No Halt in the Advance

Beyond a momentary flurry in some of the shares, the death of H. H. Rogers did not register itself in the stock market.

This is a striking illustration of the basic solidity of the general business situation. Within the easy recollection of men still in early middle life the demise of a magnate like Rogers would have precipitated a drop in stocks along the whole active line. As a Standard Oil chieftain, as the master spirit of one railway, and as a director in several roads and industrial corporations, he was a powerful figure in the financial world.

And yet, though his death was so sudden that it took all his family and immediate friends by surprise, it excited no commotion in financial circles. The seismometer of the stock exchange scarcely contains a trace of a tremor at the news of his taking off. A few decades ago it was a rather common device for speculators to report the death of J. Gould, Wm. H. Vanderbilt or other magnates of the day, so as to profit by the drop in stocks which would come as a consequence. On these canards fortunes have been made and lost. Today these tricks would be vain. A rumor of the death of Pat ten, the wheat plunger, which was sprung on the Chicago Board of Trade a few weeks ago, made no material change in the quotation. The death of J. P. Morgan or Jas. J. Hill would cause only a momentary decline in the stocks with which they are identified. A quiver for a few hours is the only tribute which the ticker would pay to the taking off of Mr. Harriman, if, unhappily, he should leave us this morning.

Despite the concentration of the great activities under fewer and fewer heads, their fortunes are less dependent on the life of any individual chieftain than they were twenty or thirty years ago, or even than they were ten years ago. The shares of all the great corporations are far more widely diffused among the people than they ever were before, although the direction of these enterprises are in a smaller number of hands. But every one of the captains of industry has subordinates who have been trained in his school, and who, if he were removed from the scene, could take his place. Contrary to the popular notion, there never was a time when the country's activities were less dependent on the life of any individual than they are at this hour.

The Detroiters Dodge Grand Haven

There was weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth in Grand Haven Sunday when, after elaborate preparations had been made to receive the Detroit Board of Commerce which was expected to arrive on the City of Cleveland, it was found that the Detroiters had given the Havenites the slip. The big boat went on from Milwaukee to Ludington instead of crossing over to Grand Haven. Meanwhile the joke is on the county seat city. Perhaps the Detroiters thought a Sunday spent aboard ship was dull enough without making things duller by paying a visit to the windy little city.

Why not a League?

There are some five or six teams playing base ball in Holland this year and each team has its following of fans. Undoubtedly there but one or two nines that are qualified to represent Holland in games with outside teams of any importance. Two of our teams seem to have taken the lead in the matter of outside games this season, the Independents bringing fast teams here from Grand Rapids and Muskegon and defeating them and the Interurbans winning games from some crack semi-professional teams from Grand Rapids.

This is all very well and the fans are very proud of the victories of their ball teams but lately the feeling has been springing up among them that they would like to see something more than mere promiscuous games. They would like to see a percentage column, something that will give added interest to base ball games and leave a feeling with the supporters of each team at the end of the season that something has been accomplished. If some sort of an organization can be perfected either between local teams alone, or between local teams and good outside teams the fans will be more interested and each team will have an added incentive to win aside from the desire to land on top of the heap in a single game.

This talk has been accelerated by the movement now on foot to place a grand stand on the Nineteenth street grounds. Prominent men, such as George Lage, the Thirteenth street druggist, have been negotiating with the board of public works for some time for permission to build a grand stand on these grounds and it is very probable that their work will come to something. A large number of fans have promised to contribute sums of money and labor for the purpose of supplying a grand stand and all that seems to be necessary now is permission to go ahead with the work.

This improvement would give an impetus to base ball in Holland and when that impetus comes the fans want to see ball games that have more than passing interest.

There is nothing doing in the jungle, it seems, while Mr. Roosevelt is writing his first magazine article. "The monkey and the camel, too, the elephant and the kangaroo" are being given a much needed rest while Mr. Roosevelt himself, who never needs a rest, toils on.

Will Organize Ladies Chorus Monday Night.

Owing to the severe storm on Monday night no meeting was held at the McKinley club rooms, for the purpose of forming a Ladies' chorus. Everybody is requested to meet on Monday night, June 7. There will be no rehearsals during the summer months but the work of organizing and getting things in shape for the fall season is necessary and for that reason every one wishing to take up this chorus work and find herself installed as a member, will make it a point to be present at this meeting.

35 Years ago To-day.

At a special meeting of School Dist. No. 1, of the Township of Holland, held on Monday, the electors present located the site for their new school house on the quarterline of Sect 32, between Hidding and Van Dam. Messrs. J. Marsilje, W. Harrington and J. Visscher were appointed a building committee, with instructions to proceed at once with the erection of a suitable building. The intention is to build of brick.—Ed.—The Maple grove school is on this sight.

WHAT YOU SAW 30 YEARS AGO

It becomes our solemn duty to chronicle the death of Mr. M. Hoogesteger, editor and part owner of De Grondwet, on Saturday morning last. The last moments of his life afforded a tragic scene, as described in another article, referring to his death bed. He died at the age of 45 years leaving a wife and three children.

A severe thunderstorm visited this locality early on Saturday morning which left its impress on the minds of some observers of a strange coincidence, as well as by the damage of the lightning in the residence of Mr. Henry Baum and Mr. M. Katte. At the same moment that the streak of lightning lit up the western part of the city, that struck these two dwellings mentioned above Dr. McCulloch entered the door of the sick room of the late Mr. M. Hoogesteger, and saw by the glare of that intensely strong light his patient drawing his last breath, at the double consternation of his wife. The doctor says the scene was the most impressively pathetic and grand—almost tragic.

May Get Jail Sentences

The farcical case of E. J. Leindecker followed Tuesday and was quickly disposed of after the jury got hold of it. This man and his wife have evaded their just punishment many months, and would have stood off the court if it had been possible. Both Mrs. Leindecker, claims to own the Saugatuck property, and her husband, who is her bartender, are charged with two violations of the liquor law. They had their saloon open on Sunday, Dec. 8 and on July 4. Instead of pleading guilty and saving a lot of expense they decided to have a trial. An idea of the character of the proceeding from the Leindecker side can be obtained from a bit of the work of their attorney, P. L. Fouch. He attempted to prove to the jury that one witness, Edwin Wade was a liar by the fact that he had a scar on the side of his face, which bit of logic and deduction wrung a laugh and a tear from the sedate court and all the bailiffs. This man Wade is employed by the prosecutor to investigate conditions about the country and ferret out crime of all kinds, especially violations of the liquor law. He and others went to the Leindecker bar on the Sunday in question and bought liquor, and it is probable that no man has ever been denied drinks there at any time. They have been known to be rank violators and will doubtless be dealt with accordingly. The jury in the first case were out about 15 minutes and did not take even one ballot. There was not a man who thought the defendant anything but guilty, and as soon as they could choose a foreman they came in and announced their decision. On Wednesday morning Leindecker pleaded guilty to the second charge and Mrs. Leindecker acknowledged her guilt in both cases. They will appear tomorrow for sentence.—Allegan Gazette.

Jenison Park Opening.

Big crowds attended the opening of Jenison park Saturday, Sunday and Monday, but as was expected by the management the attendance Monday was larger than both of the preceding days. This was in spite of the showers which came intermittently during the day.

All of the attractions were on in full swing, the merry go rounders were merry, and the figure-eight-sliders slid. The other concessions were on in full force, good base ball games were booked for the amusement of the throngs and there were any number of picnickers present with lunch baskets. The big crowd dodged the raindrops and fished, boated, played and made merry all day long. Saturday and Monday evenings were spent in dancing, many people from Holland going to Jenison to enjoy the fine music of Heald's orchestra. All day the newly organized Jenison Park band dispensed excellent music.

On the whole in spite of the inclement weather the opening was well attended and successful from every standpoint. The indications now are that Jenison park will be more popular this year than ever before as nearly every date during the season of 1909 is booked for some big picnic or outing and on some dates there will be as many as five or six different clubs or societies picnicking at the park on the same day.

Debate at Hope

The first annual prize debate will be held this evening at Winant's Chapel. The college faculty has offered $50 to be divided equally between the two best debates in the contest. Very excellent judges in the persons of Prof. E. D. Dimment, Prin. A. J. Helmers and George P. Hummer, of Grand Rapids, have been chosen and the argument promises to be the best of this year's work.

The question is "Resolved, That the U. S. government should own all railroads doing an inter-state business, constitutionality conceded." The order and time of speakers is as follows:

Affirmative, Verne Oggel, 12 min.; negative, H. George Roost, 12 min.; aff., Jacob Heemstra, 12 min.; neg., Henry Rottschaefer, 12 min.; aff., Grant Hinkamp, 12 min.

Rebuttal: Neg., H. George Roost, 3 min.; aff., Verne Oggel, 3 min.; neg., H. Rottschaefer, 3 min.; aff., J. Heemstra, 3 min.; aff., Grant Hinkamp, 3 min.

This is not a team debate, but is a test of individual work. Each man will treat the subject as he chooses both in direct argument and rebuttal. There will be no admission charge and the public is urged to attend and hear this important question discussed. The debate will begin at 7:45 sharp.

Notes of Sport

Saturday afternoon the Independents went after the much touted Sackett Plaster Board company's team of Grand Rapids and gave them a proper beating. The game was ended with the score 6 to 1. Shaw, pitching for the locals allowed but four hits while Johnson who opposed him in the box was touched up for a total of 11.

The South end Juniors won from the Limbert Chair Factory team Monday by a 6 to 5 score. Prins and Wiern were in the points for the Juniors and Prins and Brondyke and Vick and Rowan for the Limberts.

The Holland Independents beat the crack Muskegon Lakesides here last Monday afternoon with Benny Batema doing the pitching for the locals. He allowed but three hits, while the locals succeeded in getting away with six safe ones off the delivery of Wilson, who pitched for the Muskegonites. A large crowd turned out to see the game, in spite of the threatening weather. The game was played in the left field as the heavy rain had left the diamond too soggy for use.

The Holland Interurbans took two easy victories Monday morning and afternoon from the All Stars of Grand Rapids. In the morning game the score was 11 to 2 and the afternoon game went to the Interurbans 2 to 1. Babe Waldring starred in the first game. In five times at bat he secured four hits—two of them home runs. He also did some starring in the afternoon opposing the famed Popma in the box. Popma was not in it with Babe who held the visitors safe at all times. The Interurbans are a bunch of clouters and if they keep on at the present rate there will be some fat batting averages before the season ends.

BY THE SEA.

One summer moonlight night I was by the waves. I would rather be near them on moonlight nights than at any other time, especially when broken clouds give the sky and the waters variety. I never go to the hotels. I get as far away from them as I can, stopping usually at some fisherman's cottage. On this occasion I had pitched a tent on the beach and inhabited it alone. I was lying under my canopy, the flaps thrown aside so that from my bed-blankets only—I could look out on the ocean. There was the sky, light clouds slowly drifting across the face of the moon, the line of the horizon dividing the lighter from the darker hemisphere. The ocean plane met the path of moonlight broadening toward me from afar, the waves lazily rolling in and bursting on the shore.

I have wondered since if the music of the waters put me to sleep and I awakened or whether I did not sleep. At any rate, my attention was arrested by something white, at least lighter than the sand, down near the verge. I watched it. There was an occasional fluttering about it, like a woman's skirts gently moved by a breeze. It appeared to be about the height of a human figure, though really in my perception of it there was no such thing as size, and was gently swaying like a very young tree shaken by the wind.

Presently I moved. Then I was conscious that it was coming toward me. I had a superstitious fear. I was simply curious. As the thing approached it came gradually out of nebula into the form of a woman. There was a certain trace of movement, a lightness which mingled with a slight rising and falling, was confusing. Had the figure appeared on the water surface I should have thought my eyes were transfiguring a sail that was rising and falling on the waves.

It was only when it came near that I distinguished the outline of a girl's figure—not a summer visitor, one of plainer mold, doubtless a fisher lassie. She stopped a few yards from me, turned and looked out on the ocean. Then, turning again without appearing to note or care who was in the tent, she asked:

"Is that a boat out there?"

"What are you doing out here at this time of night? Do you know what time it is?"

"No."

"I drew my watch from my vest pocket. I slept a my clothes. It's half past one."

"Is it?" She manifested no interest at the hour. She stood looking out at sea, apparently waiting for another sight at the boat.

"There it is. Harkens, how they bend to the work."

I raised myself on my elbows and strained my eyes to discern if I could see what the girl saw. Surely there was no boat out where she was looking. The dark face of the ocean was expressionless except where the moonlight trailed her feet.

"I see no boat," I said.

"It's in the trough of the sea now." "There is it a slight trough. Even if a boat were lost to sight between the waves it could reappear in a few moments."

She stood gazing out on the ocean. A cloud floated over the moon. She said with a sigh, a note of despair, rather, it seemed to me:

"Oh, how ack!"

The cloud as denser than any that had obscured the moon before. The last words I heard spoken by the girl were, "They coming," and she began to move toward the ocean, fading away in the shadow of the cloud. When it passed I looked for her, but she was nowhere to be seen. I lay thinking, wondering, for awhile, then, lulled by t waves, fell asleep.

When I awoke the sun was rising out of the ocean, while the waves were splashing languidly. The first thing I thought of was the girl of the night before I drifted between many opinions. Possibly I may have dreamed it all, or never before had I dreamed of one a stranger to me whose faded figure I could remember, while I remembered distinctly. Was a not some girl who had been demed by misfortune?

I went to breakfast at a fisherman's cabin. The fisherman was preparing to go to his boat while his wife waited me. I was full of my dream, or whatever it was, and related it.

The manopped his preparations and listened with a look of horror, making thgn of the cross, while his wife tult and covered her eyes with her hs.

I looked them wonderingly. It was plain t I had struck some blight in th lives. Should I probe it by quest or spare them? What had I to say forcing a recital that would give m infinite pain? If there was a connection between them and mparition it needed no strong imation to replace it.

Lying in tent during that day I wove the st I saw a ship out on the bar, the ves beating furiously against it. I shore was lined with people. Pretty a boat was lowered, and a crrom the wreck made an attempt their lives. It rose and fell on waves, its bow now pointing to sky, its stern now sliding down of sight. Then it hung for onstant on the seething line of foam was hurled bottom upward.

Perhaps it ained the girl's lover.—F. A. Mill.

During the ceremony and congratulations the bridal party stood beneath a canopy of ferns and geraniums in the parlor. The other rooms were decorated with flowers, the dining room, in which refreshments were served by Mrs. Stegenga's Sunday school class, being decorated with red and white carnations.

Keeping Time in Holland

"Railroad time, as we generally understand the phrase in the United States, is a little ahead of 'town' time, but in The Hague," the quaint old capital of Holland, all private and unofficial clocks and watches are kept 20 minutes fast," said Ger-Walthall. "When it is noon in the railway station, postoffice and other government buildings of The Hague the timepieces in the shops and the watches of the sturdy burghers show 12:20 p. m. Just what reason there is for this I don't know, although I asked enlightenment in many quarters. It seems a custom that has been handed down for generations and the Dutch are too conservative to change the ways of their progenitors without some mighty inducement." —Baltimore American.

ABOVE ALL ON EARTH IS MAN

Supreme Because of Gift of Half Ounce of Phosphorus in His Brain.

Man has no wings, and yet he can soar above the clouds; he is not swift of foot and yet he can outspeed the fleetest bound or horse; he has but feeble weapons in his organization, and yet he can slay or master all the great beasts; his eye is not so sharp as that of the eagle or the vulture, and yet he can see into the farthest depths of sidereal space; he has only very feeble occult powers of communication with his fellows, and yet he can talk around the world and send his voice across mountains and deserts; his hands are weak things beside a lion's paw or an elephant's trunk, and yet he can move mountains and stay rivers and set bounds to the wildest seas. His dog can out-smell him and outrun him, and yet his dog looks up to him as to a god. He has erring reason in place of unerring instinct, and yet he has changed the face of the planet.

Without the specialization of the lower animals—their wonderful adaptation to particular ends—their tools, their weapons, their strength, their speed, man yet makes them all his servants. His brain is more than a match for all the special advantages nature has given them. The one gift of reason makes him supreme in the world.—John Burrough, In Atlantic.

New Method of Keeping Potatoes.
A German publication, "The Practical Adviser in Fruit Raising and Gardening," states that a new method for keeping potatoes and preventing sprouting consists in placing them on a layer of coke. Dr. Schiller of Brunswick, who has published the method, is of the opinion that the improved ventilation by means of coke is not alone responsible for the result, but believes that it is due to the oxidation of the coke, which, however, is a very slow one. Coke always contains sulphur, and it is very possible that the minute quantities of oxides of carbon and sulphur, which result from the oxidation, mixing with the air and penetrating among the potatoes are sufficient to greatly retard sprouting. Potatoes so treated are said to keep in good condition until the following July.

The Revealing Vision.
Long ago in the days when our caged blackbirds never saw a king's soldier without whistling impudently "Come over the water to Charlie," a minister of Thrums was to be married, but something happened and he remained a bachelor. Then, when he was old, he passed in our square the lady who was to have been his wife, and her hair was white, but she, too, was still unmarried. The meeting had only one witness, a weaver, and he said, solemnly, afterwards: "They dinna speak, but they just gave one another a look and I saw the love-light in their een." No more is remembered of these two, no being now living ever saw them, but the poetry that was in the soul of a battered weaver makes them human to us forever.—J. M. Barrie.

Why Women Grow Prematurely Old.
Women, condemned to the steam-heated life of our American cities, fed on the too abundant meat diet, which is our bane, breathing and sleeping wrongly, suffering the lack of physical exercise, which oddly enough, is the result of our so-called "busy" lives, continue to age and to lose suppleness, grace, vigor and natural charm, writes Kate Masterson, in Collier's. All the wonder-working grease and bleaching acids in the world will not do more than achieve a surface smoothness.

Whither It Went.
Capt. Kidd explained.
"I didn't bury my treasure!" he cried. "I cremated it."
Considering he had money to burn, it is strange none thought of it before.

Caught a Baby Whale.
The smallest specimen of a baby whale ever caught by a British trawler was landed at Grimsby the other day by the King James. It was brought up in the trawl net in the North sea, and was so small—13 inches long and three pounds three ounces in weight—that the fishermen could not realize that it was a whale until an expert certified the fact.

The local officer for the board of fisheries secured this specimen, which could not have been calved more than three or four days, and immediately dispatched it to the laboratories of the fisheries department in London.—London Standard.

A Necessity.
He had just been accepted.
"And do you really think you can be happier with me than with anybody else in the world?" he asked.
"No," replied the girl, "but if these 600-button gowns are to be fashionable I must get a husband quick and get him in practice."

THE TRUE TEST

Tried in Holland, It Has Stood the Test.

The hardest test is the test of time, and Doan's Kidney Pills have stood it well in Holland. Kidney sufferers can hardly ask for stronger proof than the following:

J. W. Fiechman, 83 River street, Holland, Mich., says: "I suffered intensely from dull pains across the small of my back and in my limbs and the physicians said I had lumbago. The joints of my body were stiff and stooping or lifting was difficult. The doctors' medicine did not seem to help me and I was finally induced to try Doan's Kidney Pills. They affected a cure and since then I have recommended them at every opportunity."

Mr. Fiechman gave the above statement in December 1906 and on May 10 1909, he said: "The relief Doan's Kidney Pills brought has been permanent and my back now gives me no trouble. I have recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to my friends and in every case their use has been followed by great benefit."

Calixto Garcia, a Cuban general, famous in the war for independence. Senor Garcia took active part in different battles in Cuba. He was appointed by President Palma to be Cuban minister to Mexico which post he held until two years ago. He is a brother of Senor Justo Garcia Valez, secretary of state of Cuba.

ELEVATING THE QUARANTINE DOCTOR.

It is not easy sailing for tourists when their ship arrives at Port Said. The port physicians there take vessels and passengers in hand and hold them in quarantine until all aboard have received a clean bill of health and permission to clear Suez for the ride through the canal to Port Said. The port doctor is an unbending official and especially is this true when there is cholera in Europe. Physicians are hauled up the side of a liner and then all on board must pass his test for disease. Nobody escapes. If a contagious disease comes to light there is an exasperating wait in quarantine.

Memorial Exercises Marred by Rain

Once more the members of the local Grand Army Post were interrupted in the holding of their Memorial day exercises by showers but it was an interruption only for as soon as the rain which had been threatening began to descend spacious Carnegie gymnasium was thrown open to the throng and the program was carried out without any further break. By the time the exercises in the hall were completed carriages were ready to convey the veterans to Pilgrim Home cemetery where the usual exercises were held at the foot of the Soldiers Monument. On account of the rain the school children and ladies of the W. R. C. did not proceed from the Hall to the cemetery and the distribution of the flowers was left to a committee of the old soldiers.

The program in Carnegie hall was rendered especially impressive by the presenting of the handsome silk G. A. R. banner to the post by C. M. McLean. In giving the banner Mr. McLean touched the hearts of his hearers by saying that he gave the banner in honor of the memory of his father who died on a southern battlefield. Commander John Zwemer who received the banner in the name of the post made a short speech expressing the gratefulness to Mr. McLean of those for whom he spoke, for the gift which everyone felt expressed the highest appreciation of the services rendered by the old soldiers. Mr. McLean was unanimously elected an honorary member of the A. C. Van Raalte post. Congressman Diekema further expressed the thanks of the members of the post and of the people of Holland, saying that the post was richer in receiving this gift and Mr. McLean was richer in the giving.

Hon. George A. Farr of Grand Haven gave the address of the day. His presence was impressive and he held the closest attention of the audience, dwelling at length on the thought that even though the boys in blue had accomplished much and suffered much on the firing line, the real sufferers were the wives and mothers who remained at home in suspense, dreading lest each day's list of the killed and wounded would contain the name of a husband or son.

WHEN THE PHRENOLOGIST FELL.

His Knowledge of Horses Was Evidently a Weak Point.

Mayor Reyburn of Philadelphia told at a dinner a horse story. "A farmer visited a phrenologist," he said. "He had heard that the phrenologist thought of buying a horse. He had his head examined and his bumps revealed surprising things.

"Your tastes are the simple, homely and pure tastes of a farmer," said the phrenologist, "and a farmer I take you to be. Am I not right? Ah, I thought so. You are unready and faltering in speech; you find it difficult to express the simplest ideas. You are sadly deficient in judgment and have no knowledge of human nature. Your innocent and trustful disposition renders you an easy dupe to designing men, and your own perfect honesty prevents you from either suspecting or defrauding any one."

"The phrenologist the following week bought a horse from the farmer. The horse was knock-kneed, it was 25 years old, it had a bad temper, and it balked. Though the farmer had only paid $15 for the animal, he secured without difficulty $150 from the phrenologist for it.

"It's wonderful," said the farmer to himself, as he hastened toward the bank to deposit the money—it's just wonderful that a man should know so much about men and not know a thing about horses!"—Detroit Free Press.

ALWAYS SOURCE OF WEAKNESS.

Pretense Detracts from the Power to Accomplish.

There is nothing which will add so much to one's power as the consciousness of being absolutely sincere, genuine. If your life is a perpetual lie, if you are conscious that you are not what you pretend to be—that you are really a different person from what the world regards you—you are not strong.

There is a restraint, a perpetual fighting against the truth going on within you, a struggle which saps your energy and warps your conduct. If there is a mote at the bottom of your eye you cannot look the world squarely in the face.

Your vision is not clear. Everybody sees that you are not transparent. There is a cloudiness, a haze about your character, which raises the interrogation point where you go. Character alone is strength, deceit is weakness, sham and shoddy are powerless, and only the genuine and the true are worth while.—Exchange.

Blessings of Idleness.

Perpetual devotion to what a man calls his business is only to be sustained by perpetual neglect of many other things. And it is not by any means certain that a man's business is the most important thing he has to do. To an impartial estimate it will seem clear that many of the wisest, most beneficent parts that are to be played upon the theater of life are filled by gratuitous performers, and pass among the world at large as phases of idleness. For in that theater not only the working gentlemen, singing chambermaids and diligent fiddlers in the orchestra, but those who look on and clap their hands from the benches, do really play a part and fill important offices toward the general result.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

"The Devil and the Deep Sea."

Hazlitt's "English Proverbs" gives the proverb as "Betwixt the devil and the Deep sea," and quotes it from Clarke's "Proemologia," 1639, and adds this note of explanation: "On the horns of a dilemma. In Cornwall they say 'deep' sea, which may be right." Reddall's "Fact, Fancy and Fable" gives the following explanation of the proverb: "This expression is used by Col. Monroe in his 'Expedition with Mackay's Regiment,' printed in London in 1837. The regiment was with the army of Gustavus Adolphus and was engaged in a battle with the Austrians. The Swedish gunners did not elevate their guns sufficiently, and their shot fell among this Scottish regiment, so that 'we were between the devil and the deep sea.'"

A Long Sentence.

The prize for the longest sentence ever written may fairly be awarded to the elder Dumas, who probably holds a further record for fertility of production. In the seventh of the 29 volumes which compose the "Impressions de Voyage," there is a sentence describing Benvenuto Cellini, which fills three pages, or 108 lines, averaging 45 letters apiece. The sentence is broken by 68 commas and 60 semicolons; but as it contains 195 verbs and 122 proper names, the reader is somewhat bewildered before the end is reached.

Wise Men.

Although a wise man is exacting toward himself he does not demand anything of others. He is content with his lot and never complains of heaven. He never blames others for his fate—therefore, when he finds himself in a low state, he submits to fate. An ordinary mortal, seeking earthly bliss, falls into dangers.

When the arrow does not hit the target he who shoots it blames only himself and no one else. Even so does the wise man act.—Confucius.

WITH THE ELEPHANT FLEET.

Indian Coasting Steamers That Transport Largest of All Animals.

Its elephant fleet is one of the strangest and most deadly departments maintained by the British government in India. It is a large fleet of coasting steamers specially built for the transport of elephants.

India's population is one-fifth that of the entire globe. All these people use elephants. They use them for draught work and for tiger-hunting, and in the arenas of the native states they even pit them against one another and against wild beasts. The elephant fleet transfers the animals from Dacca, the trapping and training headquarters, to the various districts whence comes the demand.

To get an elephant aboard ship is a difficult and dangerous task. The animal must wade through the surf to a stout raft, and this unknown surf, so white and tumultuous, often terrifies and maddens him. If in his fury he slaughters a mahout or two, he cannot be greatly blamed.

Once on the raft, his legs are tied to pegs, and the slow sail to the ship is uneventful. But now a great band must be arranged under the elephant's belly, and a crane must hoist him up some twenty or thirty feet to the deck. Here again the elephant cannot be set down as intractable if, losing his head in that unprecedented aerial journey, he murders some more mahouts.

Very prosperous, albeit stained a little with mahouts' blood, the elephant fleet for many years has piled up and down the Indian coast, embarking and disembarking its heavy unmanageable freight.

INGERSOLL'S TRIBUTE TO LOVE.

First Dress of Immortality; Fills the World with Melody.

Love is the only bow on life's dark cloud. It is the morning and evening star. It shines on the babe, and sheds its radiance on the quiet tomb. It is the mother of art; inspirer of poet, patriot and philosopher. It is the air and light of every heart; bulwark of every home; kinder of every fire on the hearth; it was the first dress of immortality. It fills the world with melody, for music is the voice of love. Love is the magician, the enchanter that changes worthless things to joy, and makes right royal queens and kings of common clay. It is the perfume of that wonderful flower, the heart, and without that sacred passion, that divine swoon, we are less than beasts; but with it—earth is heaven and we are gods.—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Whistling on Sabbath in Scotland.

Concerning the Scottish reprobation of whistling on the Sabbath, Dean Ramsay has a characteristic story. A famous Glasgow artist met an old Highland acquaintance unexpectedly. "Donald, what brought you here?" "Ou, weel, sir, it was a baad place you; they were baad folk—but they're a God fearin' set o' folk here." "Well, Donald, I'm glad to hear it." "Ou, ay, sir, deed are they; an' I'll gie ye an instance o't. Last Sabbath just as the kirk was skallin' there was a drover chieft frae Dumfries comin' along the road whistlin', an' lookin' as happy as if it was a middle o' the week. Weel, sir, oor laads is a God fearin' set o' laads, an' they were just coming 'oot o' the kirk 'od they yekit upon him an' a'most killed him!"

Why She Wasn't Disturbed.

His family is taking in the opera in New York and he had entertained at cards—American fashion—until the rumbling of the early cars put an end to the game. In fact, he just refreshed himself with a bath, and when he came down to breakfast his heart smote him.

"I hope the gentlemen didn't disturb you last night with their noise," he said to the maid, when she served his breakfast. "I'm sure they didn't mean to be quite so noisy."

"La, sir," was her reply, "I haven't slept in the 'ouse since missus went away. I slept at me sister's, sir."

The joke was too good to keep, and that's why the coal-trade learned of it the same day.—Cleveland Leader.

Getting Even with Papa.

Small Bobbie, in describing occurrences at kindergarten, was sometimes inclined to exaggeration. On such occasions a favorite remark of his father's was: "You would better reduce that statement to a minimum, Bobbie."

One evening when several aunts and uncles were present Bobbie's father was relating, with great fervor, his experiences on a recent fishing trip. After he had finished, Bobbie, assuming a very grave and important air, said: "Better reduce that to a min—min—peppermint, papa."

To Remove a Felon.

The following clipped from the London Lancet is a relief from bone felon: "As soon as the disease is felt put directly over the spot a fly blister about the size of your thumb nail, and let it remain for six hours, at the expiration of which time, directly under the surface of the blister, may be seen the felon, which can be instantly taken out with the point of a needle or a lancet."

Three Thousand Years.

"I think from the utensils about him that this mummy must have been an Egyptian plumber."

"It would be interesting to bring him to life."

"But too risky. Who's going to pay him for his time?"

REVEALED BY A COMPASS.

In 1865 or 1866 I was a civil engineer on the Union Pacific Railroad, then building. The western terminus was at Julesburg, a city that, like Jonah's gourd, sprang up in a night and like Sodom, disappeared as suddenly, though Julesburg's extinction was from the establishment of a new terminus farther on, at Laramie. My headquarters were in Julesburg, and a more thorough exponent of all that is vile in humanity never bloomed on the face of the earth. All night could be heard the sound of fiddles in the dance halls, "One more lady in this set," "Ken!" and other similar cries.

On the evening of my arrival, curious to get a glimpse of what was going on, I visited the different places of hilarity, finally bringing up in a heap of boards that had been nailed together for a gambling den. There were faro, keno, roulette and in one corner a table at which two men with heaps of money before them were throwing dice. I noticed that this table was not improvised, like the other furniture of the place. It was of polished black walnut and ornamented. One of the men throwing dice was a pock-marked, red-headed man with a sinister countenance, the other a fine type of the rugged, honest, fearless plainsman. I looked on the game for awhile and was astonished at the way the dice rolled for the plainsman's adversary. I had heard of loaded dice and the skill with which they could be thrown, but I had never dreamed of anything like this. It seemed that the red-headed man could do with them as he liked. Finally the plainsman intimated that all was not fair. The other, instead of resenting the imputation, called on me to throw for him for awhile. I did so and met with the same astonishing luck as himself.

Handing the dick back to him, I stood wondering how the trick was done, for I did not doubt that it was a trick. Of course the pockmarked man lost occasionally, but it was plain to me that such losses were intentional. At times his luck seemed to be very poor, while that of the plainsman was never very good or very bad. How the dice could be manipulated, as I was sure they were, I could not conceive, but while I was racking my brain to discover the plainsman had lost several thousand dollars, and the pile before him had been reduced to nearly nothing.

While in that country I carried no valuables. In my trousers pocket I had a silver watch worth perhaps $5. Having an appointment at 10 o'clock, I pulled out my watch as I thought, to note the time, but instead drew forth a pocket compass, an article I needed constantly. What was my astonishment to see the needle vibrate feverishly, and when it settled instead of pointing to what I had supposed was north, it pointed due east. The men at the table were so immersed in their game that I did not ask them where the north pole lay, but turned to a man behind me. He told me it was where I supposed it was.

Here was new food for thought. I looked at the table and saw that under its top there was an inclosed space about a foot square. I wondered why a place like that should be in a dice table. Then it occurred to me that there was something in it to influence the dice.

"Stranger," I said to the pockmarked man, "what's in the box under the table?"

He glanced at me without reply. The plainsman bent down, then, putting his hands to the table top, gave a lift. The top came off and exposed the interior of the box. There in plain view was a horseshoe magnet, or, rather, a telegraphic machine. The plainsman whipped out a revolver and covered his antagonist.

"Thank ye, stranger," he said to me. "Please look into it, while I see that you have fair play. Hands up, please!" to the pockmarked man.

The order was obeyed, and I made the examination. Inside the table, besides the magnet, was a battery connected by insulated wires running inside a leg of the table, with a button about midway down. On one face of the dice were metal disks to fall face on the table he would press the button with his knee, turn on a current, and the magnet drew them down.

The plainsman kept one eye on the man he covered, while with the other he reappropriated all the money he had lost. This was no disposition on the part of any one in that country at that time to punish such rascality and as soon as he had got his own he went out, asking me to go with him. When we were alone together he said:

"Young man, I've got a thousand dollars to give you for the secret you found out about what was inside that table."

I replied that I never gave nothing for something, but he was welcome to the secret, and I told him my compass had been influenced by the battery. He seemed very much interested and pleased, remarking that he must have "one o' them pizen p'intin' little things" himself, and offered me the thousand dollars for mine. I declined this new method of rewarding me for saving his money from the pockmarked man, who, by the bye, was connected with the gambling den, whereupon he said the least I could do was to "shake," which I did.
