Struck by 2 Cars in Fog

Gary Man Killed In Freak Crash

SAUGATUCK — A Gary, Ind., man was fatally injured after he was struck by two cars in dense fog early today while attempting to move a boat and trailer from the Blue Star Highway at the 1-196 entrance north of Saugatuck.

Reported dead on arrival at Holland Hospital was W. D. Walters, 45.

Allegan County deputies said Walters, a brother and a friend, all from Gary, were in a vehicle southbound on Blue Star Highway pulling a boat and trailer when the trailer became unhooked and slid into the northbound traffic lane at 12:30 a.m. today.

They stored the vehicle in dense fog and Walters, his brother, Robert, 55, and Roosevelt Watkins, 43, attempted to move the trailer when a car operated by Florentino Ruiz, 29, of Holland, struck the boat and trailer and knocked Walters into the northbound traffic lane.

Deputies said Ruiz was unable to see the boat and trailer and the men because of the fog. Moments later a car northbound and driven by Marvin Speet, 54, of route 2, Hamilton, struck Walters' body. Deputies said Speet was unable to see the body because of the fog.

Deputies said neither Walters' brother nor Watkins was reported injured.

Karen Jongekrijg, a senior at Holland Christian High School, was awarded the first annual scholarship sponsored by the National Secretaries Association of the Holland-Zeeland area on May 22.

Miss Jongekrijg will be entering Ferris State College in September and plans to become a professional secretary. The $250 scholarship is the first of an annual award to be presented each spring by the NSA to a deserving future secretary belonging to the Future Secretaries Association.

Assisting her were Sue Doherty, president of NSA and marketing secretary at Hawthorn Inc., and Evelyn Hoeve, secretary of NSA, who is secretary to the president of Brooks Products.

Michigan's oldest continuous sports club has set plans to develop even further its facilities at the Holland Fish and Game Club.

An addition to the existing building located just off M-21 and Paw Paw Dr. will cost between $20,000 and $30,000 with the members of the club supplying the majority of the expense.

The addition measuring 60 by 135 will house a rifle range which will be used primarily for gun safety courses, however the Zeeland Police Department and other organizations are also interested in using the site for their rifle range activities.

All of the work for the project is being donated by several persons and businesses. J. B. Shinnville Associates donated the excavating portion of the project, while John, Vern and Dale Bronkema are donating the concrete work.

City Gets One of Three Invitations

City Plans Float For Rose Parade

Mayor Lou Hallacy announced today that the City of Holland has been invited to participate in the 1976 Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena, Calif.

In a letter to Hallacy, Ralph S. Helppinger, president of the Pasadena Tournament of Roses Association, said: "I am taking this opportunity to invite you to celebrate along with us as a participant in the Jan. 1, 1976, Rose Parade."

"I promise a most festive New Year's Day, one mixed with happiness, reflection, spirit and dedication — as the Tournament of Roses leads off the salute to our country's 200th birthday."

Hallacy said work can now begin on a float, following a bi-centennial theme. The 1976 Rose Parade with the theme "America, Let's Celebrate!" has been designated by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration as the opening event for the three-year celebration 1975-

Memorial Day Homage Is Paid

A weekend of near-perfect weather provided a fine setting Monday for a Memorial Day parade followed by a program in Pilgrim Home cemetery, highlighted by an oration on "A Worthy Memorial" by Circuit Judge James E. Townsend of Holland.

Judge Townsend traced the wars and conflicts in the 200 years of American history, and said it was inevitable that the meaning of Memorial Day would be expanded to include all who have died, whether in war or in peace.

"Lincoln met death, not on a battlefield, but in a theatre. Yet, surely he was a casualty of hate, passion and aggression, as were John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King."

"What of those persons who, in less startling or dramatic ways, have left a legacy of love, by living a life of selfless service to others? What of our Albert Schweitzers, Floyd Starks? What of Albertus Van Raalte, Martha Kollen, G. J. Diekema and Cornelius Vander Meulen? What of our own families and friends who are with us no more, but who touched and profoundly influenced our lives?"

Then he turned to the future, asking: "Will the United States of America leave the roll of living nations and become a Carthage buried under desert sands, or a Camelot alive only as a legend? Or will we have the strength of purpose and compassion necessary to reconcile our differences? Every age has its own 'times that try men's souls' whether in battle or in peace."

"I suggest that memorials most meaningful to those we honor today are lives of responsibility, loyalty, integrity, dedication, love and vision. We have need to recognize and declare our interdependence, one with another. 'No man is an island, complete unto himself,' and the fulfillment of our dreams and prayers for this great nation requires all of us, working together, to that end."

Dale Van Lente served as program chairman and the Rev. Thomas C. Vanden Heuvel was chaplain. Jack Knoll, World War I veteran, was honorary parade marshal and William Sikkil was marshal.

A BUSINESS VENTURE

Finalists were recently named in the Michigan Week competition to pick a product of the year. This ought to be a good time to learn something about the world of business. One doesn't come up with a new product without a considerable amount of investment, some hard work in promotion and selling, and finally a chance that this could be a total loss as well as a profitable venture.

Business requires people willing to take risks. This doesn't mean that the risks are made willy-nilly. Not at all. There is research into the possible market for the product, and whether the product can be produced at a profitable margin while still maintaining the market. And this is no small line in many instances.

Put this all together, and the realization that a new product that sells will mean greater employment, and you have the ingredients for the free enterprise system. We think it is time for young people as well as those more mature to know what business is all about.

We were happy to note that two of the finalists were from our own area, Herman Miller Inc. of Zeeland and Space Age Industries, Inc. of West Olive. A new product is a new venture, and we wish them well, which is simply saying that we wish the community well.

Congratulations to Herman Miller, Inc., which won the non-consumer award with its Chadwick modular seating system for office lounge furniture.

How The Bible Came To Be
Exodus 24:3-8; Jeremiah 36:1-4;
Revelation 1:10-11.

By C. P. Dame
King Henry VIII of England in a public statement forbade the rank and file of the nation to read the Bible. Today it has been translated in many languages and read by millions.

How did we get this valuable book? God gave it to us. This lesson tells one of the ways God used to make the Bible possible.

I. The Bible is the book of the covenant. The lesson records the calling by God of three men, two prophets, and one apostle, and the part they played in getting the Bible. Moses led Israel out of Egypt to Mt. Sinai where the Lord and the nation made a covenant together. God said Israel would be His people and He gave them, through Moses, laws to keep and the people promised to worship and serve Him only and wholly obey Him.

Moses spent forty days with God on the mountain. At his return to the people he told what God had ordered him to tell the people who accepted the agreement which they together ratified in a sacramental service. Moses built an altar, ordered young men to offer animal sacrifices which represented the nation. Moses then sprinkled blood, half of it on the people, the other half upon the altar, which indicated that the two parties bound themselves to the covenant. The blood pointed to the blood of Christ.

II. God uses His servants. Jeremiah had spoken several times to God's people urging them to repent. God told the prophet to put together all that He had spoken, in a book, so that the people might know what God demanded and turn from their evil ways and obtain forgiveness of their sins. God was concerned for their welfare. Jeremiah asked Baruch to write.

III. God's Spirit moved men to write. The apostle John was an exile on the island of Patmos. God told him to write in a book what he would be told and then send the message to the seven churches of Asia, the Roman province, now Turkey. This last book of the Bible, is a divine revelation given by God to His servants (1:1). The message which John wrote came from the glorified Christ to the persecuted church represented by the seven mentioned. This lesson teaches us that God called His special servants to write what He ordered them and they obeyed and that is the way our Bible came to be. The Bible is a divine revelation from God transmitted by men to mankind.

It is the fifth grant awarded Hope College by the Loutit Foundation. Grants of $25,000 were awarded in 1963, 1967 and 1970 and a $30,000 grant was made in 1973.

"The support which the Loutit Foundation has given to Hope College over the past years has been a very significant factor as we have proceeded with our campus development," President Van Wylen noted in a letter of thanks to John H. Uhl, secretary of the Loutit Foundation.

Loutit, serves the public welfare by providing financial impetus and stimulus to programs of other non-profit organizations. It is primarily concerned with programs and projects related to the welfare of Michigan residents.

Lubbers Hall is the college's former science building on 10th Street between Columbia and College avenues in Holland. It houses the Department of Communications, Economics and Business Administration, English, History, Political Science and Religion.

The Center, renovated at a cost of $360,000, contains 11 classrooms including two out-fitted for multi-media and video purposes, three secretarial areas and offices for 48 faculty members. The college's audio visual department is also headquartered there.

Hospital Group Briefed On Expansion Program

A review of several years of planning for updating Holland Hospital facilities provided the program for the annual luncheon meeting of the Holland Hospital Auxiliary Thursday noon in the Heritage Room.

Ed Grube of TriBrook Group Inc. of Chicago, hospital consultants, traced plans for the local hospital expansion against a background of increasingly stricter requirements of HEW and the State Health Department.

Originally, the local plan called for an expansion in two steps of approximately five years, but pressing needs to meet requirements in up-dating existing services has altered local studies into a single program designed to meet the needs to 1984.

With the aid of slides, Grube showed floor plans for the expansion calling for a "squared doughnut" design in which the present west wing will serve as the north wall of the quadrilateral. Nearly all departments are being expanded, and patient rooms in the 1927 building would be relocated.

Grube spoke of trends pointing to "vertical" treatment of patients rather than "horizontal" treatment, and sees considerably more outpatient treatment in the future. He said state and national requirements for air exchange make it mandatory that many areas be relocated.

Plans calling for the greater share of the expansion would take place in what is now parking area south of the west wing. Parking facilities would spill into areas outside of the hospital block. A new public entrance would be in a new area.

The hospital's license is in danger if facilities are not updated, Grube said. Some complications have arisen over state approval, but decisions are expected within coming weeks. Originally, costs for the two-stage expansion listed some $11 million, but with changing plans and inflation, the total will be larger.

Methods of financing are under study, but it appears the expansion will be financed by general obligation bonds, fund raising and revenue bonds. Holland Hospital is a nonprofit institution and has not received tax support from the city since 1959.

Pat Mass, retiring auxiliary president, introduced the new president, Mrs. Judson Bradford who had served as vice president for two years. Nancy Van Oosterhout was elected vice president and Eunice Bos, corresponding secretary, Mary Dood succeeds Mrs. William Bremer as recording secretary, since the Bremers are leaving Holland.

William LaBarge, hospital board president, thanked the auxiliary for its fine support and many contributions, stating "The board and the hospital would have a lot of trouble getting along without you."

Hospital Director Fred Burd spoke of early efforts of the auxiliary, developing from a small organization into a major project, and thanked the auxiliary for funding the first year of the salary for a director of volunteers. He acknowledged the fine contribution of Jan Mehling in organizing the work of the auxiliary and instituting training programs, particularly the new errand and escort service, which has proved particularly helpful to hospital staff people and patients. Mrs. Mehling is returning to her home town of Duluth.

Faces Shine As Students Are Taught

Special Education Ministry Classes Are Appreciated in Holland

By Jean Graves

It all begins at 6:45 every Thursday night. The lights of Third Reformed Church are turned on and cars begin arriving. As the people pile out noisy greetings are shouted back and forth. Hugs are exchanged, hands are shaken, and cheerful hellos echo through the church.

What is all the excitement about? Thursday means Special Education Ministry Classes and that means 80 enthusiastic people welcoming their friends.

The teachers are all volunteers who come from local high schools, area colleges and other interested adults. The requirements for teaching consist only of interest and love. The students are from local homes where there is a concern that these special children will also have a chance to learn of Jesus Christ.

The students are separated into two groups for their Bible lesson. They quickly spot their teacher and find a seat.

The younger children gather in the church auditorium and always start with some spirited singing. Their faces shine as they learn words and actions to a new song, and everyone wants to be "teacher's helper." Next comes the Bible story which is presented through puppets, film strips, flannel graph or play acting. The stories are real to these children. Their acting wouldn't win any awards but they take their roles seriously and they have a feeling for the problems and experiences of the people they portray.

Finally comes the special part of the evening for each student and teacher, their time alone to discuss the Bible Story in relation to their own lives, to fill out worksheets, color, or do most anything the child asks. This is a private and unique part of the evening when each child learns that he is important, that he is loved.

The adult class meets in the chapel and follows the same format as the younger children. Singing is an essential part of each ministry class because everyone can participate. The story is clearly presented and then they spend time on a one-to-one basis. It is here that the students interests and problems come out. The topics discussed are not always the ones the teacher has prepared for, but they are always opportunities to share God's love.

The evening ends with refreshments and fellowship for all the parents, teachers, and students. Every week new friends are made and old friendships are strengthened. These friends may have handicaps but that doesn't make them so different. They love to sing, they like attention, they enjoy a good story, they are open and honest, and they are eager to share of themselves.

The church has again been vacated by 8:30 p.m., but the people who leave have even more enthusiasm than those who came. They have felt God's love in a personal way and their good-byes are full of anticipation for the following Thursday.
