LOCAL ITEMS.

THERE was a new dude in town yesterday.

A violent thunder shower passed this locality last Tuesday night.

THE street sprinkler put in an appearance this week and rendered good service.

H. KOENIGSBURG desires to sell or rent his property on Eighth street. See special notice.

THE Macatawa Grove hotel and the new skating rink at the park will be formally opened week after next.

A PICKPOCKET relieved one of our rural citizens of his pocket book containing $12 in money last Wednesday.

HENRY KAMPERMAN, of the Phoenix planing mill, "monkeyed with a buzz saw" last Saturday morning, and lost a piece of his thumb.

THE frame of the addition to the Park hotel at Macatawa park has been raised. It is expected that the addition will be completed about July 1st.

It is reported that a Muskegon steamer is to make semi-weekly excursions from the sawdust city to Macatawa Park this season. We hope the rumor is true.

IF notice had been received of the death of Hon. John Roost by the State Senate a few hours sooner the Lieutenant Governor and a Committee of the Senate would have been here to attend the funeral.

LAST Tuesday morning a fire broke out in an unoccupied house on the hill in the eastern part of the city. The building belonged to J. Riemersma and was a total loss. No insurance. "Fire bugs" again.

YESTERDAY morning Mr. B. Wynhoff on arising, found that some person had gained an entrance to his home and carried off his pants and vest, a silver watch and about $11 in cash. There is no clew that will lead to the arrest of the burglars.

THE managers of the Star skating rink desire us to announce that there will be skating hereafter at the rink only on Tuesday and Friday afternoons and evenings and Saturday forenoon and evening. Saturday forenoon being especially for school children.

PROF. ALBA HEYWOOD, the character impersonator, generally remains two or three nights in each town he visits and as a rule the size of his audience increases each evening. Every student and admirer of elocution and character impersonation should see him next Tuesday and Wednesday evenings.

COLE's shows have come and gone. There was a large crowd in the city and the show was fairly well attended. A few drunken men were gathered in by Marshal Vaupell and his assistants, and were caused to contribute to the public funds Thursday morning. But for these drunken men the day would have passed off very quiet and without any disturbance.

ONE worthy feature of the Heywood entertainments is the fact that nothing objectionable is ever introduced. Mr. Heywood makes special effort to observe this rule, and Mr. Hobert A. Davis, the flute soloist, promises us a perfect cyclone of flute variations accompanied by Mr. Frank Ulrich, piano soloist. Flute and piano duets will be a feature in music never before heard in this city.

FRIEDRICH BROO, music house of Grand Rapids, will place a fine, baby grand Fischer piano in Lyceum Opera House, for the Heywood entertainments next week, to be used in playing the accompaniments to Mr. Davis' flute and piccolo solos. Some fine music may be expected. The opening night of these entertainments is Tuesday, June 9th. Twenty-five cents secures a reserved seat at Breyman's on Monday, where photographs of Mr. Heywood can be seen.

A popular lecture by H. M. Joy, D. D., will be delivered in the Methodist Church of this city on Friday evening, June 12. The subject will be "The Hebrew Law Giver." This lecture has been delivered in many towns and cities of this state and never fails to call forth the warmest commendation. It delights young and old. It was delivered three times in Kalamazoo, having been repeated at the published request of a number of the prominent citizens of that place. The lecture will be given here for the benefit of the Church parsonage fund and an admission fee of 25 cents will be charged. Children under fifteen years 10 cents.

A heavy rain storm prevailed on Thursday last.

THE excursion to the park that we announced last week came off last evening.

WANTED:—Small house or rooms for light housekeeping for small family. Address this office.

REV. B. SMITS, of Stone Hidge, N. Y., has received a call to the Reformed Church of Constantine, Mich.

It is expected that on next Monday a large party of residents from this locality will leave for a trip to Minnesota.

DON'T forget to go to the Methodist Church next Friday evening and hear Dr. Joy's lecture on "Moses the Hebrew Law Giver."

MARRIED:—By Rev. T. T. George, on Wednesday, June 3, 1885, Edward J. Kellogg, of Jamestown, Mich., to Miss Anna B. Kline, of Milford, Ind.

THE executive committee of the South Ottawa and West Allegan Agricultural Society have sold all the fifty year tickets. The work of improving the grounds will commence immediately.

THE prices at the Heywood entertainments will be 15 cents. Children 10 cents, reserved seats 25 cents at Breyman's, two days in advance. The record of this company is that their entertainments always give excellent satisfaction.

THE wagon manufacturer, J. Flieman, has just received a large stock of all kinds of buggies which he will dispose of cheap for cash. Mr. Flieman does an extensive business in this line, and those desiring a good buggy for little money should give him a call.

WE are informed that the Park Association are to build additional bath houses at the Park and will furnish them with towels and other necessary articles so that all guests who desire can bathe in the surf of Lake Michigan. This is a good step in the right direction.

THE Chicago and West Mich. R'y intend, so we understand, to run a regular morning train out of Grand Rapids at 9:15 every Sunday morning. This will give us eastern mail and the morning papers on Sunday. The Toledo accommodation, it is also reported, will run to Grand Rapids every Sunday afternoon from this place and possibly to Muskegon on the usual time.

THE Grand Rapids Herald is the name of Lloyd Brezee's new paper. Mr. Brezee has moved the material of the late Detroit Times to Grand Rapids and has commenced the publication of the Herald, a weekly paper which promises to become very popular in the state. The columns of the first issue, which reached us last Saturday, were full of good matter. Social, local and general news was written up in an attractive style which cannot help but take with all readers.

NEXT week we have an entertainment at Lyceum opera house, two evenings, and they promise to be very enjoyable. It is to be the Heywood Combination with Prof. Alba Heywood as character impersonator. The entertainments will consist in part of piano, violin, flute and piccolo solos, duets, etc. We have recommendations from reliable sources which indicate that Prof. Heywood will equal any character impersonator we have ever had here, not excepting Miss Meade or Helen Potter. The price of admission will be low, which will undoubtedly give these entertainments a good patronage.

LAST Saturday morning at about half past eleven o'clock the daughter of Abram Elferdink who we reported in our last issue as being missing, was found crouched in an old grain box in a barn on the Wilterdink farm some three miles east of the city. She had been, when found, some seventy-three hours without food and was determined to die in the box. She was much exhausted and was taken out of the barn and carried to the home of a relative who lived near by, where she now is.

The young lady we understand will be taken to the Asylum at Kalamazoo and receive treatment, under which it is hoped that she will recover her mental powers. Grave rumors are afloat as to the cause of the young woman's affliction which, if true, should call for an immediate investigation on the part of her relatives, so that punishment might be meted out to those who richly deserve all that the law could give and possibly more.

EARLY last Sunday morning, May 31st it was announced from house to house that ex-Senator John Roost, one of Holland's most honored and respected citizens, had departed this life. His death at this time was a surprise to many in this locality, who, knowing that he had been ailing for some time, did not suppose that death would so soon overtake him. Although Mr. Roost had suffered from ill health for the past year, and at times suffered intensely, he bore all with patience and with fortitude, complaining to no one, but bearing his burden alone with quiet resignation. He retained consciousness to the last, conversing with his youngest son but a short time before his spirit took its flight. The funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon in the Third Church, Rev. Coolbaugh, of Grace Episcopal Church, of which Mr. Roost was a member, and Rev. J. Van der Meulen, of the Reformed Church of Muskegon, officiated. The church was filled with relatives and friends of the deceased. The pall bearers were ex-Mayors I. Cappon, E. J. Harrington, J. Van Landegend, K. Schaddelee, E. Van der Veen and W. H. Beach. The Mayor and Common Council and city officials attended the funeral in a body. The remains were followed to their last resting place by a long line of parriages and citizens on foot. During the funeral services the following message of condolence to the bereaved family was received from the State Senate:

"I am instructed by the Senate to extend sympathy for the loss you and the State sustains in the death of ex-Senator John Roost. L. M. Miller, Secretary."

This message was accompanied by the following: "We, the undersigned, members of the Senate of 1883, desire to express our personal respects for the deceased and heartfelt sympathies for your loss. Signed, A. Butters, Chas. Austin, M. Shoemaker, C. J. Monroe, J. Manwaring, John Huston, J. W. Belknap.

Letters of condolence were also received from Congressman C. C. Comstock, F. W. Cook, of Muskegon, and others.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

John Roost was born in Harderwijk, in the Province of Gelderland, Netherlands, on October 9, 1823. His father was a shoemaker and was fairly well-to-do, sending his son Jan to school until he was twelve years old. He early formed a taste for reading. This early schooling and his constant reading were the only factors in his education. He learned the trade of a wheelwright which he followed until he came to this country in 1847. For six years he followed his trade in this country at Grand Rapids and Grandville. At the latter place he had a wagon and blacksmith shop. In 1854 he came to Holland and engaged in the same business. In May, 1856, he was married at Grandville, to Aleida F. Hartgering, who still survives him, with six children, John A., Henrietta, Everdienna, Johanna, Mina and Derk. In 1859 Mr. Roost became prominently identified in opening our harbor. He labored incessantly and successfully in negotiating a loan for that purpose. He secured from the state one thousand acres of land in Blendon and Olive for its improvement. In 1858 he was elected as supervisor of Holland township and re-elected in 1859 and '60. Mr. Roost started De Gronewet in 1860 and supported and urged the nomination and election of Lincoln as President. He was elected as county treasurer in 1861. He was appointed postmaster in 1861, resigning in favor of W. Verbeek, and in 1862 was appointed U. S. enrolling officer and assistant assessor. He was engaged in mercantile pursuits for a period of years and in 1870 was chosen as a member of the State Legislature, and in 1882 was elected as State Senator. In 1881 Mr. Roost served this city as mayor. Since 1883 Mr. Roost has not taken an active part in any business enterprise. He was a kind and true friend, and an indulgent and kind husband and father. His death is regretted by all.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Last Saturday, Memorial Day, was ushered in by a copious shower of rain and through the forenoon came fitful seasons of rain which threatened to continue all day. At half past twelve o'clock the sky broke and the sun peeped from behind the clouds for a brief period only, but long enough to allow those in charge of the ceremonies to form the procession in the following order: Huff's martial band, A. C. Van Raalte Post, No. 262, G. A. R., and other veterans of the war. These old soldiers carried a banner inscribed with, "A. C. Van Raalte, our Chaplain." After the veterans came one hundred boys ranging in age from eight to twelve years carrying a banner "To Our Fallen Heroes." The decorating committee came next and consisted of some fifty of as handsome young ladies as there are in the state of Michigan, bearing flowers and garlands for the "sleeping soldiers." Following came fully six hundred school children from our public schools, and the school in District No. 1, Township of Holland. Carriages containing the orator and chaplain, mayor and common council, city press and private citizens followed and brought up the rear of the long procession. The march to the cemetery was completed in about thirty minutes and during this time a storm threatened to disturb the ceremonies. But nothing daunted the exercises were commenced and carried out according to the program published in our last issue. The address by Milo D. Campbell was a very fine production and at the request of many of our readers we publish it. The singing was under the direction of Mr. D. Gilmore, whose reputation was fully sustained. The most pleasing part of the exercises was the decorating of the graves. The ladies, dressed in white and black alternately, placed the wreaths and garlands reverently upon the graves, and the spirit which Lincoln carried and outpoured in his short speech at Gettysburg hovered over and about the solemn but beautiful occasion. Memorial Day has become one of the most revered of our national holidays, and its perpetuity rests on the impressions made on the youths of to day, whose patriotic spirits must respond to the ceremonies dedicated to the fallen soldier on occasions like those of our Memorial Day.

MILLO D. CAMPBELL'S ADDRESS.

Mr. President, Citizen Soldiers, and Fellow Citizens:

There is an old legend which tells of a Welch harper who was summoned by a French king to appear at his court and exhibit his skill. As the rude country Briton arrived at the palace he was conducted through long lines of royal personages and was there bidden to await his turn. Before him, as he entered, there went a group of French minstrels who filled the air with such bewitching and entrancing music as he had never heard before. For a few moments, the old Briton listened, smitten and humbled, and then, glancing about him at the splendors by which he was surrounded, and then down at his worn and shabby instrument which had been his companion so long, he gathered up his rudely strung lyre and turned to go away. Come, said he, laying his hands upon the harp, there are cottages where we may still be welcome, but little have we to offer to princes and palaces such as these.

And I confess, that when I stand before you here to-day, in the presence of those who might better entertain you, and especially in the presence of you, whose lives have once been upon the altar of your country, whose deeds shall eternally be more eloquent than words, I feel like the lowly Briton who longed for the humble cottages of his native hills.

In what I shall say to you at this time but little will be said of the origin and early history of our government. I shall not weary you with the present, nor divine much of the future, but will endeavor to speak a few memorial words in harmony with the occasion.

We have assembled here to-day to do one of the greatest acts of the greatest nation on earth. No smoke of the battle shall rise from the scene to be carried away upon the passing breeze. No monument of granite or marble shall mark its occurrence, for that, too, would crumble with time, but the tribute of reverence we shall pay our dead but living benefactors will be treasured beyond the confines of earth's rusting elements. We have come here to-day but for a common purpose. Our differences, our peculiar views, our preferences, prejudices and enmities, if such we have, are beneath the occasion. The day is as high above party politics and partisan harangues as would be the funeral of a loved one.

As we look out upon the American Republic we see her almost an infant in years, but aged with experience. The traveler in this country is not conducted through ancient abbeys, olden temples, or ruined cities of bygone centuries. But while she has no wrinkles of age in her countenance, nor gray hairs in her locks, yet we find her all covered over with scars where she has been bruised and wounded. Scars that she received when she broke loose from her mother's greedy England's arms; scars that she received when she was chastising old England for meddling with our revenge; scars she has received in defending herself upon Southern borders, on Northern frontiers and in Western thickets; but deeper scars she received when she clambered up over the ragged edged rocks and through the branches of a fireside rebellion, a household war. And to-day we find our Goddess of Liberty, with her face turned, looking back over her pathway of difficulties. In her arm are a million bouquets and wreaths of flowers. They are the richest, sweetest, and most fragrant that grow in her gardens and valleys. She inquires not for the palace of the living. She seeks not to adorn the homes of affluence and wealth, but with a sorrowing memory she finds the last resting places of her sleeping defenders and there reverently bows to drop her beautiful tributes and offerings upon the silent coverings of a half million of brave men. I am told that in yonder enclosure are buried many brave men, who but a few short years ago were the gallant heroes who were fighting to defend our stars and stripes in sacrifice and blood. Men who were then the husbands, brothers, sons, and fathers of you who are before

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

THE EAST.

MEDICAL experts from New York have discovered that the plague at Plymouth, Pa., was caused by the discharges of a patient stricken with typhoid fever during the winter being carried from a vault by a rain and thaw into a ravine, through which the river flowed, and thence into the reservoir supplying the town, with the result of communicating the disease to between 600 and 700 people. The Baltimore and Ohio Road is asking the Philadelphia Council for a right of way for an elevated road down Barker street to Sixteenth, with a passenger station close to that of the Pennsylvania Road at Broad street. The Baltimore Company proposes to purchase the property on both sides of the right of way.

GEN. GRANT's physicians report his disease in an almost stationary condition, while his general health is excellent. His walks about the house and in the street cause no fatigue, and his daily ride in the park is a great pleasure. Hotel proprietors at several mountain resorts have extended invitations to the General to visit them.

ADAM P. HARLEY, a citizen of Erie, who when lying at the point of death from consumption proclaimed himself as cured by faith, died while offering prayer for other ailing persons. Thomas Warner, an extensive lumber dealer of Cohocton, N. Y., has made an assignment, giving preferences of $300,000. He was supposed to be worth $500,000 or more. Banks at Bath, N. Y., are said to be heavy losers. F. A. Palmer, formerly Auditor of Newark, N. J., died in the penitentiary from apoplexy.

BELL Telephone stock declined 12 per cent in Boston on a bill being introduced in the Massachusetts Legislature limiting the charge for telephones to $3 per month. The Governor of Massachusetts has signed a law requiring telephone companies to furnish telephones to anybody who will pay for them. Heretofore opposition telegraph companies have not been allowed to use the telephone or have messages sent by telephone to their offices. The wife of John L. Sullivan, the pugilist, was refused a divorce at Boston, the Judge declaring that she had failed to prove her charges of cruelty and habitual drunkenness. Thomas Brown, President of an oil company at Erie, has failed, with liabilities of nearly $500,000. George Axel, of Deposit, N. Y., while drunk in a saloon, shot and killed two men. The fur store of Albert Herzigan, New York, was burned out, the damage amounting to $75,000.

THE WEST.

CYCLONES did serious damage at Nortonville, Goffs, and Frankfort, Kan., wrecking several structures and injuring many persons, a few fatally. By the bursting of a water-spout at Indianola, Neb., nine persons were drowned.

THE Indian news from New Mexico and Arizona at this writing wears an ugly look. A Tucson (Ariz.) dispatch reports:

A band of Indians attacked Phillips' ranch, about three miles from Fort Bayard, and killed old Mr. Phillips, his son Gen. Phillips, his wife and two children, aged 3 and 5 years, and hanged the oldest girl on a meat-hook, which entered the back portion of her head, in which position she was found by a party of rescuing citizens. She died within a few hours. Those killed by the Apaches number now thirty-six men, women, and children.

The following is sent from Silver City, N. M.: The Apaches are still making bloody trails through this section. It is now thought that three or four different bands are committing depredations and murders in as many sections of territory. The hostiles are thought to number about 300. Four chiefs are with them—Gerontimo, Nana, Naetcha, and Chiknahua. This morning the five bodies of a Mexican family, consisting of a man, his wife, and three children, were found five miles from here. One other person is known to have been killed in the same vicinity. Numerous ranches on Bear Creek were sacked, the horses stolen, and the cattle killed. The Indians approached within four miles of Fort Bayard. Three troops of cavalry are now in pursuit. It is reported that a band of Indians are doubling back on an old trail in the direction of Bear Creek. This band numbers seventy-five to eighty. Another band on the Gila River drove off 130 head of horses. Two couriers are missing. Three more prospectors have been killed on the south fork of the White-water. Joseph Huntington, killed on Magallon Creek, made a brave fight, killing two Indians, one a chief. The fight was witnessed by Bunting's partner, who was just coming into camp. He succeeded in killing two Indians before retreating. News has just been received of additional killings in the Black Range. Families from all the surrounding country are in town.

Touching the cause of the present outbreak, the following is telegraphed from Washington: From correspondence transmitted by the War Department to the Indian Bureau, it appears that the Apache Indian outbreak was caused by whiskey. The Indians manufactured large quantities of "tiswin" and became intoxicated. Knowing that punishment would follow the infraction of the rules they abandoned the reservation and went on the war-path.

CROP prospects in the Northwest are improving. In Indiana and Wisconsin everything looks promising, though corn is somewhat backward. Reports received in San Francisco place the shortage of this year's wheat crop on the Pacific coast at 26,500,000 bushels, as compared with 1884. Gen. Terry ordered the release of Gabriel Dumont, the Canadian rebel, who had been held a prisoner at Fort Assinaboine, Montana, as the existing boundary laws confer no right to detain him. In anger, John Motter, a wealthy farmer of Findlay, Ohio, struck his 12-year-old son a heavy blow, breaking his neck and causing instant death. Louis Reanne, a French Canadian coming from the West, became a raving maniac on the Wabash train. After the train had left Peoria he drove all passengers from the chair-car which he occupied, and kept everybody, including police officers called in at the several stations, at bay, until the train arrived in Chicago. The first shot he fired at the depot killed Police Officer Barrett, and it took a long time to disarm and secure him. Lieut. Laughlin was badly wounded while struggling to secure the maniac, who himself received three shots in the back which may prove fatal.

"No INDIAN raid for the last ten years equaled the present outbreak for cruelty," says a dispatch from New Mexico. "All along the Gila River out from Silver City to a distance of seventy miles the bleaching remains of whole families have been found, which tell the tale of how outrageously the Apaches have broken Gen. Crook's poor peace policy. Men, women, and children have been butchered unmercifully. A gentleman from Silver City tells a heart-rending tale of Apache inhumanity. He was one of a party of thirty-four citizens who went out the other day to protect their families, who were surrounded by Apaches on Bear Creek and along the Gila. Before making twelve miles they had buried ten persons, two of whom were women. All the bodies were backed into unrecognizable shapes. The women had been outraged and their bodies pinned to the earth by wedges driven through them into the ground. One of the women had an iron rod completely driven up her body. The men suffered like fates, their bodies being mutilated terribly. This gentleman confirms the reported murder of Col. Phillips and family. The daughter was hung up alive by a meat-hook stuck in the back of her head. Mrs. Phillips' eyes are gouged out, her ears and breasts cut off, and her body otherwise brutally mangled. The bodies are heart-rending and sickening sights." A Santa Fe dispatch says that the total number of murders known to have been committed by the Indians reaches seventy-five.

THE SOUTH.

THE vicinity of Waco, Texas, has been overflowed by rains and swept by a tornado. Eleven persons are known to have perished, and five others are reported drowned. The losses in McLennon County are estimated at $250,000. The Brazos River rose two feet above high-water mark. Nearly two thousand citizens fled from East-Waco during the storm. Relief measures are being taken by the City Council.

LOCUSTS and cotton worms have made their appearance in northeastern parishes of Louisiana. John Terry (colored) was hanged at Barnwell, S. C., for the murder of Rev. John G. Sessions, a white Baptist minister. His last words were: "This ends my career in the first trouble I have ever been in, and I warn all men of my color, especially the young, to let whisky and bad white men alone." Archie Gibson, a negro, was hanged at Richmond, Fort Bend County, Texas, for the murder of his wife. About three thousand persons witnessed the execution. Nearly six hundred indictments found against liquor dealers at Wheeling, W. Va., were stolen from the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court.

THE rain-storm that recently deluged a large section of Texas was one of the most terrific on record. At Waco, eleven and a quarter inches of water fell in five hours. In an incredibly brief space of time the Brazos River became a wild, raging flood, in many places five miles wide. Some idea of the wholesale destruction may be had when it is remembered that the Brazos is the richest and most populous farming country in Texas. There is a very heavy population of negroes, who all live in the bottoms, and the rapidity of the rise did not permit them to save anything but their lives. A vast destitution must be the result. The damage to the growing crops on the Brazos, to say nothing of the shrinkage in real values, is beyond calculation, perhaps reaching to beyond $20,000,000.

WASHINGTON.

THE regular weekly Cabinet session at Washington was devoted to the consideration of a proposition looking to a continuance of the World's Fair at New Orleans. It is understood that a majority of the Cabinet was of the opinion that the President had no legal power to authorize an extension of the original period fixed for the Exposition.

SECRETARY LAMAR is the first of the Cabinet to succumb to the prolonged strain and labor which all from the President down have endured since March 4. The other night he was suddenly taken ill and a physician was sent for at once. The trouble proved to be a chill, with strong malarial symptoms.

THE Postmaster General has forbidden the delivery of money-orders and registered letters to the following-named persons, upon Inspectors' reports showing that they were engaged in conducting fraudulent schemes by means of the mails: Dr. H. B. Butte, alias Dr. Ward & Co., of Louisiana, Mo., and George Mayo, of Chicago, publisher of the Post and Courier and the Illinois Agriculturist. The Secretary of the Treasury has issued a circular directing customs officers to collect the alien immigrant tax of 50 cents each from foreigners coming to this country as tourists, or travelers in transit to other countries, as well as from those coming to this country to reside. There was a full attendance of the Cabinet at the meeting Thursday, says a Washington telegram. The question of authorizing a continuance of the World's Exposition at New Orleans was again considered. The result is shown in a telegram sent by the President to Senator Gibson, of which the following is a copy: "The question of reopening the Exposition has been considered by the Cabinet, and they are unanimously of opinion that there is no warrant of law for it, and that it would be inexpedient on other grounds."

CAPT. BELKNAP reports to the Secretary of the Navy that on her fourth trial trip the Dolphin complied with the requirements of the contract.

POLITICAL.

THE appointment of J. L. Meade to be Postmaster of Hazlehurst, Miss., has been revoked by the President. Meade is the man who presided at a meeting held in Copiah County, Mississippi, immediately following the killing of Matthews, at which meeting the murder was approved in formal resolutions, and notice served upon the members of Matthews' family that they must leave the county. It is understood this is in conformity with the determination of the administration not to allow itself to become involved in any of the political quarrels which have occurred in the South. Owen A. Wells has been appointed Collector of Internal Revenue for the Third District of Wisconsin, and John B. Malony for the First District of Michigan. The President also appointed the following Postmasters: J. E. Eichholtz, Sunbury, Pa.; Jacob Odell, at Youngstown, N. Y.; George W. Evans, Ocean Grove, N. J.; Henry B. Benner, Gettysburg, Pa.; Maurice Litch, Mahanoy City, Pa.; Martin A. Rutter, Meyersdale, Pa.; Samuel A. Ashe, Raleigh, N. C.; Mrs. Olivia A. Hastings, Port Gibson, Miss.; Samuel W. Hobbs, Storm Lake, Iowa; William H. Stearns, Adrian, Mich.; G. W. Cooper, Columbus, Ind.; J. E. Pennell, Lebanon, Ind.; J. F. Heran, Terre Haute, Ind.; W. Groesbeck, Independence, Mo.; G. B. Falconer, Minneapolis, Kan.; C. H. Sproule, Elko, Nev.; John A. B. Varner, Lexington, Va.; William Henry Rittenour, Harrisonburg, Va.; Daniel V. O'Leary, Albany, N. Y.; Josephus P. DeJarnette, Chester, Kan.; Adelbert B. Crampton, Delphi, Ind.; Curtis Reed, Menasha, Wis.; Robert E. Austin, Tama City, Iowa; George S. Witters, Ida Grove, Iowa; Chas. G. Kress, Lewistown, Pa.; Andrew Bardsley, at Sparta, Ill.; Enoch A. McLead, at Palmyra, Mo.; Sanford L. Sturtevant, at Fullerton, Neb.; Clement Philbrick, at Halstead, Neb.; L. D. Mitchell, Jamestown, Ind.; C. Kehrer, Leavenworth, Ind.; Franklin Colt, North Liberty, Ind.; Frank Scheper, Oldenburg, Ind.; Elizabeth E. Buckles, Primrose, Iowa; N. McElrath, Chesterville, Ill.; Donald Densen, Hammond, Wis.; J. Mierewa, Marion, Wis.; John Wetherhalt, Latona, Ill.; J. H. Coppock, Goldsmith, Ind.; F. Webster, Morris, Ind.; G. F. Faber, Chaska, Minn.; J. P. Wall, Cadott, Wis.

The following appointments are also announced: To be Registers of Land Offices, Robert C. McFarland at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, and Mark W. Sheafe at Watertown, D. T. To be Receiver of Public Money, Downer T. Bramble at Watertown, D. T.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND has appointed Charles Denby, of Indiana, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to China; Wendell A. Anderson, of Wisconsin, was appointed Consul General at Montreal; James W. Whelpley has been appointed Assistant Treasurer of the United States.

GENERAL.

GABRIEL DUMONT, Riel's First Lieutenant, was captured on United States territory, twenty miles from Fort Assinaboine. Gen. Terry telegraphs that he will be held until further orders. Dr. Jukes, medical officer of the mounted police at Regina, says a Winnipeg dispatch, considers Riel perfectly sane. Riel's family at St. Vital are stricken with grief and the rebel's old mother is broken-hearted. They expect that Riel will be hanged unless Archbishop Tache saves him. The failures are announced of Thos. Warner, a lumberman of Coshooton, N. Y., who was rated at $500,000, and Ashenbush, Roush & Co., millers at Manchester, Ohio, with liabilities of $65,000. The steamship City of Rome, which arrived at New York the other day, reports that she collided with a French fishing bark, the John George, and sunk her. Twenty-two of the crew of twenty-four were lost.

TELEGRAMS from Santiago de Cuba report that the filibustering expedition which recently landed in that province, numbering eighty men, has fled to the mountains, and that complete tranquility prevails.

THERE were 161 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreet's during the week, against 184 in the preceding week, and 148, 160, and 104 in the corresponding weeks of 1884, 1883, and 1882, respectively. About 80 per cent. were those of small traders whose capital was under $5,000. In the principal trades they were as follows: Grocers, 22; general stores, 20; manufacturers, 12; liquors, 11; books, stationery, etc., 10; hotels and restaurants, 10; hardware, 8; shoes, 7; clothing, 6; furniture, 5; lumber and materials, 5; produce and provisions, 5; tobacco and cigars, 5; bakers and confectioners, 4; harness, 4; jewelry, 4; millinery, 4; carriages, 3; fancy goods, 3; millers, 3; hats, 3; banks, 3. Bradstreet's Journal in its weekly commercial summary says the general trade situation has not been improved during the week. Decoration-Day observances were very general the country over. In New York a touching scene was witnessed when Gen. Grant saluted from a window of his residence, passing bodies of veterans, which were afterward formally reviewed in grand procession by President Cleveland. Gov. Hill, of New York, reviewed a large procession in Brooklyn. In Washington there were appropriate ceremonies. At Bloomington, Ill., Senator John A. Logan delivered an address, and at Hagerstown, Md., Gen. George B. McClellan spoke. In Chicago the day was appropriately celebrated, and a statue of Gen. Mulligan was unveiled. A programme for the abolition of slavery has been adopted by the new ministry of Brazil. A new fund is to be created by a tax of 5 per cent. on all public revenues, and slave-owners will be paid half the value of their property, the remainder to be discharged by service of five years. The Presbyterian General Assembly at its meeting in Cincinnati declared that the only proper ground for divorce was adultery or willful desertion. Winnipeg advisers report that "Gen. Strange's column encountered Big Bear and his band about twenty miles northeast of Fort Pitt, and that after three hours' fighting Strange had to retreat, finding it impossible to dislodge the Indians, who from a well-intrenched and well-chosen position poured a hot fire upon the troops. The dispatches make no mention of the killed, but say a number were badly wounded."

FOREIGN.

ADVICES from St. Petersburg state that the following is the exact state of the Afghan frontier negotiations at the present time: The Ameer surrenders Penjdeh for Zulfiar. The question is unsettled as to whether the Zulfiar Pass shall form a part of the boundary or remain wholly in Afghanistan. Russia insists that Meruchak belongs to Penjdeh. England rejects, and makes the retention of Meruchak a sine qua non. This difference of opinion is now the main difficulty. All the articles of the treaty of peace between France and China have been agreed to, and the signatures have been affixed.

THE war cloud between Russia and England has at last blown over, and the sun of peace is shining again. Russia has accepted England's counter proposals. The main features of the delimitation of the frontier have been settled by leaving Maruchak and Tulikur in the hands of the Afghans, which will bring the frontier a little north of the line claimed by Russia. The Boundary Commission can now go ahead, settle the details, and stick up the posts. All that remains for the commission to do is a trifling matter of civil engineering. Sixty cases of cholera have occurred in the province of Valencia, and several in the city of that name in Spain. A commission has been appointed by the Government to investigate Dr. Ferran's system of inoculation with cholera microbes. The effort made in Ireland to raise a fund for James Stephens, who was recently expelled from France, has thus far resulted in subscriptions of £700.

ADDITIONAL NEWS.

SECRETARY MANNING's report for May is rendered in both the new and old forms. The decrease in the public debt for the month is stated at $3,350,833 by the new system, or $4,435,484 by the old system. The Treasury officials are satisfied that the silver policy of the administration has done away with a cause for anxiety as to the ability of the Treasury to meet all demands until Congress reassembles. The small loss of gold during the month renders it certain that the Treasury will not be compelled to borrow gold of the banks or to resort to any other of the many expedients which were thought of.

VICTOR HUGO's funeral in Paris was most imposing. Hundreds of thousands of people were abroad at daybreak, crowding the streets and boulevards through which the great procession was to move. In the morning large bodies of cavalry occupied the streets leading to the Champs Elysees, and minute-guns were fired from Fort Valerien and the Hotel des Invalides. The funeral procession started at noon and was conducted without interference from the riotous element, but few arrests being made. Beneath the Arc de Triomphe orations were delivered by M. Leroyer, President of the Senate; M. Goblet, President of the Chamber of Deputies; and MM. Floquet and Augier. It is estimated that the pageant attracted fully a million spectators. To emphasize the secularization of the Pantheon, a luncheon was spread in that hitherto sacred edifice for Victor Hugo's family.

A MARVELOUS religious revival is in progress at Atlanta, Ga. The cash subscriptions for a building for the Young Men's Christian Association have already reached $55,000, and leading citizens are daily confessing a change of heart at the Methodist meetings. A terrible duel was fought near Americus, Ga., between two negroes, Jeff Johnson and Henry Brown, who had grown jealous over the favors of the same woman. They met by agreement after dark, fought with clasp-knives, and backed one another until, weak from loss of blood, both fell and expired.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND appointed Geo. W. Julian, of Indiana, to be Surveyor General of New Mexico. He has also made the following appointments: To be Collectors of Internal Revenue, Robert M. Henderson, for the Fourth District of Texas; Robert Barnett, for the Fourth District of California; Robert A. Howard, of Arkansas, to be Assistant Attorney General; Albert N. Hathaway, of Connecticut, to be Consul of the United States at Nice, France; Isaac H. Maynard, of New York, to be Second Comptroller of the Treasury, vice W. W. Upton, of Oregon, resigned by request.

THE ELEMENTS.

A Large Area of Texas Visited by a Rain-Storm of Unusual Destructiveness.

Many People Drowned, and Immense Damage Done to Crops and Other Property.

(Waco (Tex.) special.)

The violence of the late storms here are overshadowed by the rain and tornado of last night. The rainfall did not cease until this morning. All streams in and close to the suburbs of the city, the banks of which were dotted with hundreds of residences, overflowed and transformed their surroundings into a vast sea. The scenes of terror and confusion were heartrending. People fled for their lives from their homes in the midst of the raging storm.

Thomas Denninghoff, his wife, and three small children, remained in their house, which was washed away, and all were drowned.

Howard Lewis, his wife, his sister, and three small children lost their lives in a similar manner.

Eleven persons are known to have perished and five others are unaccounted for, and reported to be drowned.

The damage to property by the tornado was immense.

The total damage in the city is estimated at $50,000. The Brazos River rose two feet above high-water mark. The finest cotton plantations in Texas are located along its banks, and were submerged. The losses in McLennon County will aggregate fully a quarter of a million dollars. The grain crop is destroyed—beaten to the earth by the wind and terrific rain.

East Waco has been inundated since Sunday, and the scenes there last night and to-day were indescribable. Seeing that the waters of the Brazos River threatened them with watery graves, the population—about two thousand persons—fled from their homes in the midst of the storm, aided in escaping by the light of the vivid lightning and hundreds of lanterns. No lives are reported lost in that portion of the city.

Relief measures have been organized for the suffering hundreds that are destitute and homeless.

There were no trains on any of the roads to-day. Scores of bridges were swept away and the road-beds badly damaged by washouts. The highest point reached by the Brazos River was thirty-two inches above the high-water mark of the great overflow of last year. The approaches to the suspension bridge on the east side of the river were demolished. The estimates of the damage to property in and about Waco, do not include the damage to crops and farm property, which cannot now be estimated, but good judges place the damage to the growing crops at $500,000. The storm was so terrific for three hours that it may be properly called a tornado, accompanied by rain. Ruin fell in blinding sheets, and was blown against the large buildings, producing a sound like the distant roar of Niagara. Everybody in the city was up all night. Many colored people thought a second deluge was upon them, and prepared themselves to go by vigorously praying.

At Iredell and Morgan, in Bosque County, a number of residences were wrecked, but no fatalities are reported.

Advices from Austin report that the Colorado River has overflowed immense tracts of bottom lands planted in cotton and corn. The damage to these crops will be immense. Six small bridges on the International and Great Northern Railroad were swept away. All railroad embankments for nearly a hundred miles have been badly washed, rendering travel dangerous.

Weatherford, Midlothian, Dublin, Martin, and other points in the State report an immense rain-fall, accompanied by heavy wind, vivid lightning, and deafening thunder. All tell the same story of swollen streams, submerged farms and fields, and general havoc to the growing grain. Farmers are greatly dejected over the outlook. The rains cover a very large wheat area. Crops were doing finely before the rains, but the rust will now certainly set in on the wheat, and the weeds will grow so rapidly that the field of wheat will be reduced one-half.

THE CYCLONE SEASON.

A Kansas Town Visited by a Funnel-Shaped Cloud, and the Citizens Save Themselves by Crawling Under Their Cyclone Holes.

Particulars of the cyclone at Goffs, Kan., have reached here. The appearance of the storm, which approached from the southwest, was grand and awful, and the frightful roar of the whirling, lightning-edged clouds was louder than the combined noise of a hundred guns. The path of the storm through the town did not exceed twenty or thirty rods in width, but within that space everything destructible is a wreck. Two persons were fatally and several seriously injured. One man was lifted up by the whirling wind, carried a distance of thirty yards, and deposited in a door-yard. Flying timbers had broken both his legs, and when found he was insensible.

The appearance of the town after the storm had passed was desolate and forlorn beyond description. The panic-stricken citizens, many of whom had received slight injuries, emerged from cellars and "cyclone holes," into which they had plunged, and set about rescuing the wounded, and recovering property, which littered the ground in every direction.

Some strange phenomena were witnessed in connection with the storm. The curb of H. G. Pickett's well was broken off close to the ground and the well itself stuffed full of chickens. A thick mist lay on an awful rate of speed seemed to precede the cyclone, while during its prevalence wind, rain, hail, thunder, and lightning blended into one awful and never-to-be-forgotten scene.

The Plymouth Plague.

A Wilkesbarre (Pa.) dispatch says: Two deaths occurred at Plymouth to-day, and four of the occupants of the hospital are in a critical condition.

The disease has been most prevalent among the Hungarians and the Poles. A complaint was this afternoon laid before the District Attorney, to be brought to the notice of the Grand Jury now in session here, as to the careless and dilatory manner of the Borough Council of Plymouth regarding the enforcement of sanitary rules.

Ventura.

The late rain makes the crops look more encouraging to farmers. They are complaining however of cutworms in their corn fields, many having had to plant over again.... Everybody and everybody's girl went to the show at Holland Wednesday. We hope that Ventura will be as well represented at the fair this fall.... The Salvation Army has been holding forth again for the past two weeks at the Wesleyan Church. Many have been lead to look to the welfare of their souls. One evening I overheard the minister of the First Wesleyan Church of Ventura telling a young lady that she could not be a Christian and wear those plumes upon her hat and that she must take them off. She quietly told him that she would if he would take off his necktie and collar. He said he would consequently they appeared in their respective places Sunday minus the sinful articles, the lady having covered the void left by the feathers with an elegant bow of ribbon.... Madam Grundy says there will be a wedding in this place in the near future. ZEKE.

AN EVENING WITH THE SALVATIONISTS.—I had heard and read so much about the Salvation Army and hearing that a couple of the members were holding meetings at Ventura, I naturally had some curiosity, I won't disguise my motive, to go and see and hear how they conducted their exercises. I don't know how they opened the meeting for on account of my age and infirmity I was a little late. When I arrived they were singing a hymn to tune of "Grandfather's Clock." This was followed by reading from Scripture by one of the Salvationists. Then singing by all, air "We won't go home till morning," followed by prayer by Bros. Mowray and Reed and the Salvationists. The principal part of the petitions being "Oh Lord take all pride from our hearts and flowers and feathers from our bonnets." Then the Salvationists arose and sang another lively hymn accompanied by tambourine. Then the leader said "Now let us have a real hallelujah, free and easy, free for all to speak, now who will be first." Bro. Mowray of course wanted to be first, so he began by giving us quite an harangue on secret societies as being entirely anti-Christ. Also some scathing remarks upon the vanity of wearing flowers, jewelry, sweeping trains, etc., or the "devil's trash" as he fondly termed them. He closed by hurling a missile at popular churches. Then sister Dora arose and while weeping profusely told the audience that "Some say it ain't no sin to dance and that's what I was lead to believe and I went to a dance last Friday night, but bless God he has forgiven me for that." This was followed by responses and groans. The Salvationists then sang a hymn to tune of "Little brown jug," accompanied by tambourines, to recompense Dora, as much as possible, for the loss of the next dance. Then Bro. S. took the floor saying, "I have always been opposed to music in church, that's the reason that I did not testify last night, but for not speaking last night I went away a condemned man, and I resolved not to let another such opportunity go by. I have been thinking that as God made man and man made music, it must be all right and I learn that there will be music in Heaven." He told how much support he gave to the cause of Christ and what a good christian he was. He was followed by Brother Jeremiah who said "that he was very thankful to be able to meet with these dear sisters once more, he had been fearful that he could not do so all day as he had been quite indisposed, (amen from Bro. B. and laughter from the boys.) I began to tire of these kind of testimonials so I will be more merciful to the reader than they were to me, and will not bring any more of them before you. Near the close of the meeting they called upon me for remarks but I told them no I was too great a sinner, my greatest sin being a lack of charity for the idiosyncrasies of others. It was late when I got home and I was tired and sleepy so I quickly retired, was soon in the "land of nod" and dreaming that the old gentlemen that keeps the post office at Ventura, I never could think of his name, appeared at my bedside trying to sing to the tune of Mollie Darling."

We'll roll the old chariot along
But we won't lag on behind
If the advent is in the way we'll stop and take him in.
But we won't lag on behind.
If Mowray is in the way, we'll roll it over him
But we won't lag on behind.

WORTHY Of Confidence.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla is a medicine that, during nearly 40 years, in all parts of the world, has proved its efficacy as the best blood alterative known to medical science.

SARSAPARILLA (extracted from the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla) is its base, and its powers are enhanced by the extracts of Yellow Dock and Stillingia, the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other potent ingredients. IS your blood vitiated by derangements of the digestive and assimilatory functions? Is it tainted by Scrofula? or does it contain the poison of Mercury or Contagious Disease?

THE States, who know the composition of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, say that nothing else so good for the purification of the blood is within the range of pharmacy.

ONLY possible for a person who has corrupted blood to attain sound health and prevent transmission of the destructive taint to posterity.

THOROUGHLY effective renovation of the system must include not only the removal of corruption from the blood, but its enrichment and the strengthening of the vital organs.

RELIABLE witnesses, all over the world, testify that this work is better accomplished by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA than by any other remedy.

BLOOD that is corrupted through disease is made pure, and blood weakened through diminution of the red corpuscles is made strong, by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA.

PURIFYING up the system require time in serious cases, but benefit will be derived from the use of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA more speedily than from anything else.

MEDICINE for which like effects are falsely claimed, is abundant in the market, under many names, but the only preparation that has stood the test of time, and proved worthy of the world's confidence, is me to-day. I know they are tied to you in memory as they are not to us. The cords of love, unseen to the world, cords though lengthened by dividing years are not alone set vibrating by these Memorial Days.

The old muskets hanging over the fire-place, the rusted sword and scabbard standing in the corner, the coat of blue, the picture taken in military costume and sent home, the old canteen or worn bible carried through those anxious years, those letters to loved ones—Ah, how at morning and noon and night their presence, like fingers of bygone days, play over the harp-strings of love and memory until their sad, sweet music has shut out all the world beside.

But not alone should these soldiers' relatives and broken families do homage to our fallen heroes. Far more proper would it seem for these home circles to furnish the richest floral offerings whose flower beds have not been tramped upon by war, and the fragrance of whose memory does not arise from the crushed forget-me-nots of husbands, fathers, and sons.

Twenty years ago last Saturday, upon the walls of the capitol of our nation was suspended a banner. Upon it in great letters was inscribed this motto: "The only national debt that we can never pay is the debt we owe to the victorious Union soldiers." Upon that day, between the rising and setting of the sun, 200,000 victors of the Rebellion marched by that banner and through the streets of the city of Washington. The banners they bore were tattered and torn but they were glorified with victory. While their ears heard the shouts of welcome and they saw the arms of a glorious people extended to them, yet within every breast was a different thought. It was the thought of his home where loved ones were waiting for him. To me it has been beautifully said that "home is only where some one is waiting to greet us." There are men before me here who were then thinking of their own home circle, counting the days when its peace and quiet could again be enjoyed. Men who were thinking of the extended arms at the gate of the old homestead.

Yes, fellow citizens, the home is the unit of the family and of the Union, and for a little time I desire to liken our nation to the homes and call it the house in which we live.

After its foundations have been laid and its walls erected, when it has been made to shelter us from the storm, to protect us from the heat of summer and the cold of winter, may we not well stop a few moments each year to count its cost and enquire about its builders and finishers. I need not tell you the grand outside symmetry of this National Home, nor of its inside furnishings and adornments, for these are oft repeated stories. Every man walks upon its carpets and is protected in his rights by the strong walls of justice, equality and law. Every man is allowed the freedom of its halls, its corridors and its parlors. The poorest, the richest, and the weakest, are accorded equal privileges. The front doors and the back doors are open with a welcome to the downtrodden and the oppressed of the world. Yes, it is so free that the poorest boy, born in poverty and want, may climb from the basement of life up the winding stairways of our Republic until he reaches that one high seat of honor overlooking the nations of earth. And do we owe anything for the building and protection of such a home as this? The gray-haired man is seen by the dusty wayside planting a maple sprig. We stop to ask him why he should plant, and leaning upon his spade he tells us, "For those who are to come after me." Years pass on and thousands of weary travelers stop to rest under its spreading branches.

The pioneer fathers came in here thirty, forty, and fifty years ago. With strong arms they hewed away the forests and sowed the sunshine over the fields until they have become the smiling hostesses of your homes to-day. Many, if not most of those early pioneers, have gone, but you hold them in reverence for what they have wrought. But we ask, to whom do we owe this debt of gratitude for this social temple? How well might a part of the answer come from the veterans who are present with us. But if we were to ask them in memories vivid with war, but with silent lips as to their own sacrifice and heroism, they would point us to yonder sodded mounds and tell us to read their story.

I cannot rectify to you the personal history of the many brave boys whose remains lie there. If they were here they could tell you of Bull's Run, the first great battle of the war, and of Appomattox Court House, the last one. They could tell you of that day at Antietam, of its corn field and patch of woods, in which they fought from early morn until night had thrown its mantle over 12,000 dead and wounded upon the field. They could tell you of the battle of Gettysburg, how that quiet green valley of the Keystone state was made gory with their blood and that of their 200 Michigan comrades whose remains lie there still. They could tell you how they clambered up the sides of Mission Ridge, when salvos of artillery and whirled winds of minie bullets were carrying away their comrades upon the right and upon the left. They could tell you how Michigan colors were among if not the first to reach the summit. Yes, you might sit and listen of 400 battles where they gallantly defended the stars and stripes. They could tell you of Chattanooga, Chickamauga, and Fair Oaks; of Five Forks, Fredericksburg and Knoxville. They could tell you of Lookout Mountain, Murfreesboro, Pea Ridge and Petersburg; of Shiloh, Spotsylvania, Stone Mountain, Vicksburg and the Wilderness. Tell you how they saw the old flag riddled with bullets and how they saw it glorified again and again by being planted upon the enemy's ramparts. They could tell you how they faced frowning batteries that were vomiting fire and death into their ranks. Tell you how

Cannon to right of them,
Cannon to left of them,
Cannon in front of them,
Volleyed and thundered.
There not to make reply,
There not to reason why,
There but to do and die.

Ah, but these are not all. Stop a moment, and upon the wings of thought fly away with me. If you will, over a thousand fields of the South. Here, upon the slope of a hill, where the climbing meadows have overtaken the retreating woodland, we laid a weary comrade to rest. Down there upon a grassy slope we consigned another to the virgins of a babbling brook that night and day went rippling hard by. Over yonder at the foot of that spreading tree, in whose branches the birds gathered for their morning and evening songs, we covered over another of our boys. And thus to-day is Southern soil made rich by Northern bones and sinew. Some of them went down in the smoke of battle and others from lingering sickness. The father and husband reads in the morning his letter from home where he would so much love to be. At night his lifeless form lies upon the field where he fell and angels must answer the letter. The boy of sixteen is sick in the hospital. Fever and pain torture him, and Oh! how he longs for but the stroke of his mother's hand over that fevered brow and those aching temples, but the mornings and evenings bring not mother nor home, and one evening, just as the sun is throwing his good night kisses over the eastern hill tops, we stoop to hear the last whisperings of "mother and home," and the remains of our boy, our blossoming man, are turned under the furrow of war in that Southern clime. Another loved one went out from among you. He left a home as dear as yours or mine. About the hearthstone gathered his little ones, and as they climbed upon his knee after the day's work was ended, and the loving wife added her comfort and cheer, he called it Heaven. But he loved his country, too. The day's battle was a hard one. The enemy outnumbered them and a prison wall surrounded him. The hours, days, and weeks pass so slowly by. The mid-heaven sun pours his hot and burning rays upon him. Half fed, famished and starving, the ruddy cheek becomes pale and wan. How his weary, emaciated form drags about within that dirty death pen, with only heaven's canopy for a covering. When he has become too weary or weak to walk and he has lain down for his last night's rest upon earth. While he is dreaming of his far-away home, his wife and his little ones, his heaven here below, then do guardian angels steal down and bear his loyal spirit to its eternal home. What little there is left of the material father, husband, soldier, is covered with a little dust in the corner of the prison yard. How many times have these men whom we call veterans gone out to perform these sad rites and the tears that fell from their eyes, were the only ones that ever moistened those now deserted graves. These pictures that I have so poorly made are but the rude copies of 15,000 real ones that hang in the homes of our own state.

No, no, fellow citizens, we cannot scatter flowers upon all of their resting places to-day, for we could not find them if we would, but we will drop garlands and wreaths to their sweet and hallowed memory, and I know that when we have done that, their rich perfume and beauty will be lifted away upon the wings of our devotion and gratitude to the home of their loyal spirits.

And fellow citizens, how grandly well it is for us to stop occasionally, at least upon these anniversary days, and consider some of the costs of this National Home. It is well for these men who have been through the smoke of battle. It is well for you who have given your husbands, fathers, brothers, and sons, as a part of its cost. It is well for you who are passing down the farther hillside of life and remember those anxious years of her peril. It is well for us who less distinctly recall those days. But above all it is well for the liberty loving influence it will have upon the boys and girls who now live and shall live after the last veteran has ceased to tell his story. These days are watch fires upon the altar of Freedom. They cause us to love better and appreciate more this glorious temple.

The old Romans used to place statues of their dead heroes in the porches and passage ways of their dwellings, so that as they went in and came out, when they sat down and when they rose up, those marble forms would speak to them in silence of the names and heroic deeds of those whom they would ever have in remembrance. But no marble statues will ever be necessary in the homes of the soldier. No! nor in the homes of those who saw their dear ones go out at the beat of the drum in defense of the old flag, and

Where the pillows for years,
Have been wet with tears
For the boys who never returned.

But under the stars and stripes the soldier must not be forgotten in this generation. These Memorial Days are the statues in the passage ways our children are following.

The late war has shown us one happy truth, and that is that America is the home of a common patriotism. Beside the boy born of a long line of American ancestors, stood shoulder to shoulder with him in that terrible struggle the man who but a few short years or months before was the subject of some European power, and it seems to me that laurels could not be more worthily worn than by those men, who volunteered to defend a land other than their native hills. We shall never forget them. They have given us such an earnest testimonial of their loyalty, and have declared their intentions to citizenship with such sacrifice that we can never doubt their devotion to our nation and her institutions.

Time does not permit me to draw lesson for the future, but let us remember that the freedom of this national home is only for things that are pure, and that it has cost too much to be desecrated by ruthless hands. Let us keep its walls that have been washed from the stains of slavery with loyal blood, pure and clean from national sin. Let us remember that the safety and perpetuity of our government rests upon the home circle, the school and the Church. Forget not to teach the youth by precepts at home and by an observance of these Memorial Days that the soldier is held in reverence. Foster and maintain your schools and churches; and I assure you that in time of peril, from every hillside and valley in this broad land will spring an army more sacrificing, gallant and brave than can be found in the nations of this world.

THE CHILDREN.

(Written by Charles Dickens and found in his desk at his death.)

When the lessons and tasks are all ended,
And the school for the day is dismissed,
And the little ones gather around me
To bid me "good night" and be kissed;
Oh, the little white arms that encircle
My neck in a tender embrace!
Oh, the smile that is as soft as heaven,
Shedding sunshine and love on my face!

And when they are gone I sit dreaming
Of my childhood, too lovely to last;
Of love that my heart will remember
When it wakes to the pulse of the past,
Ere the world and its wickedness made me
A partner of sorrow and sin,
When the glory of God was about me,
And the glory of gladness within.

Oh, my heart grows weak as a woman's,
And the fountains of feelings will flow,
When I think of the paths steep and stony
When the feet of the dear ones must go,
Of the mountains of sin banguing o'er them,
Of the trumpet of fate blowing wild;
Oh, there's nothing on earth half so holy
As the innocent heart of a child.

There are idols of hearts and of households,
They are angels of God in disguise,
His sun light still beams in their tresses,
His glory still beams in their eyes;
Oh, those traunts from earth and from heaven,
They have made me more manly and mild,
And I know now Jesus could liken
The kingdom of God to a child.

Seek not a life for the dear ones
All radiant as others have done,
But that life may have just as much shadow
To temper the glare of the sun;
I would pray God to guard them from evil,
But my prayer would bound back to myself;
Ah! a seraph may pray for a sinner
But a sinner must pray for himself.

The twig is so easily bended,
I have banished the rule and the rod;
I have taught them the goodness of knowledge,
They have taught me the goodness of God.
My heart is a dungeon of darkness,
Where I shut them from breaking a rule;
My frown is sufficient correction,
My love is the law of the school.

I shall leave the old house in the autumn
To traverse its threshold no more—
Ah! how I shall sigh for the dear ones
That meet me each morn at the door.
I shall miss the good nights and the kisses,
And the rush of their innocent glee,
The group on the green and the flowers
That are brought every morn to me.

I shall miss them at morn and at eve,
Their sobs in the school and the street,
I shall miss the low hum of their voices,
And the tramp of their delicate feet.
When the lessons and tasks are all ended,
And death says the school is dismissed,
May the little ones gather around me,
To bid me "good-night" and be kissed.

MY FIRST LOVE STORY.

BY MRS. E. T. CORBETT.

"How does it sound, Susan? Is it interesting? and do you think it is natural?"

I asked these questions anxiously, as I laid down my manuscript, and Susan hesitated as she answered: "Well, if you want to know my candid opinion, Miss Margie, it's just this. You see, you're not in love and never have been in love, so how can you write about what you don't understand? To my mind, that's not possible, and that's why your love stories don't succeed."

Susan's words carried an unpleasant conviction with them. I was not quite 22, and I had already won a fair reputation as a writer of short stories, except on one theme. I had never, try as I might, written a successful love story.

The one I had just read to Susan was my latest effort, and, as usual, I felt that it was a failure. But I only replied somewhat petulantly:

"Well, Susan, I cannot fall in love as a mere matter of business, you know; so I don't see what is to be done."

"Dear, dear. It's too bad," sighed Susan; but I would not continue the conversation. I thrust the unlucky MS. into my desk and decided to spend the rest of the morning in the woods by way of restoring my downcast spirits.

Susan was an important person to me, as she was at once my maid, confidant, and friend. She was also an excellent critic, and I had often found her judgment invaluable. That morning, however, I felt vexed with her and with all the world, so when I returned from my ramble I was not at all pleased to find that a new boarder had arrived and was seated on the piazza, as if he was waiting to greet me. This was Lyman Ashford, a young lawyer, and a great favorite with my sister and her husband, at whose house he was a constant visitor.

Although we had been much together during the past year, and although I knew him to be as clever as he was handsome, he had never interested me in the least. Now, when he came to meet me with such smiling confidence, as if he had a claim on my time not to be gainsaid, I felt that my manner was far from gracious. I mentioned very briefly the reasons which had drawn me to a place where I could be undisturbed, upon which Mr. Ashford said quickly: "You have stated my case, too, Miss Carleton. I am busily engaged on a compilation, which, though it needs no originality, calls for much hard work. So I came here to finish it." Then he bowed and left me, much to my relief, and I saw no more of him for some days.

Meanwhile I was working hard at my new story, but making very little progress.

I wrote and rewrote, tore up my sheets and began again, but I felt at heart that I was not succeeding and began to be melancholy and morose. One evening Susan was evidently in a very excited mood. Instead of listening to my complaints with her usual patience, she exclaimed eagerly: "Oh, Miss Margie, I've got an idea. If you had a real lover to study—one who was dreadfully in love, you know—wouldn't that help you? Couldn't you put down what he said and thought?"

"Why, yes, of course I could, but where could such a lover be found? And do you suppose, you foolish thing, that he would lay bare his heart for my inspection?" I asked, laughing in spite of myself.

Susan looked mysterious. "But, Miss Margie, I've seen the lover already, and I've heard him, too; so there's one difficulty out of the way."

Oh! he talks just like a book, I can tell you!"

"Why, Susan, this is astonishing!" I cried; "and, pray, who is this wonderful lover?"

"It's Mr. Ashford. He and I have had a great many talks, and he's in love with a young lady who doesn't care for him, though he loves her to distraction, he says."

"Mr. Ashford!" I repeated, amazed. "Well, he must be a strange man to talk so freely of his love affairs to you."

"And why not to me, Miss Margie?" said Susan, looking hurt. "I'm sure I wouldn't betray the young man's secret for the world, and he said it did him good to talk to me."

"I don't doubt that, my dear Susan. You are one of the best comforters," I answered soothingly; "but then you know men are not generally so communicative about such affairs."

"Well, Mr. Ashford is, any way, and I'm glad of it, because now I can tell you all about his feelings," persisted Susan.

"But I don't think I ought to listen, Susan indeed, I'm sure I ought not, since it is not meant for me to hear," I said, and from this resolution all Susan's persuasions failed to move me.

The next day, however, she began triumphantly: "Well, then, Miss Margie, it's all settled, and I hope you won't think I've been too meddling; but I wanted to help you along. I've spoken to Mr. Ashford about your story, and he says that if you'll allow him to give you a 'sitting' (that's what he called it) every day, he will be most happy to pose as a hopeless lover! Those are his very words, miss, and I do think it's very kind of him."

"Oh, Susan!" I exclaimed, in alarm, "what have you been saying to Mr. Ashford? I am afraid you have been terribly indiscreet!"

"Not a bit, Miss Margie, not a bit! I've only interested him in your story. Now you just give him half an hour or so every morning, and see what a help it will be."

It is needless to repeat all the conversation between Susan and myself on this subject. Let it suffice that I was won over at last, and a daily interview was agreed upon, wherein Mr. Ashford was to enact the part of a despairing lover, and I was at liberty to sketch for him.

"Our first 'sitting,' as we agreed to call our meetings, would have been embarrassing as well as awkward, but I must own that Mr. Ashford behaved splendidly. He thanked me for my kindness in allowing him to be of some service to me, and then, after a while, he began to speak in the most charming way about the young lady with whom he was in love, and whom, for convenience sake, he called Daisy, although he said that was not her true name."

I began to change my opinion of Mr. Ashford from that day. He was certainly a very interesting man, and I wondered why that stupid Daisy could not see it.

Soon I found that these "sittings" grew more and more interesting as the days went on, until I could hardly think of anything else, much to my own surprise. And what a difference between the language of genuine feeling and the poor counterfeit orator which I had labored so long and so vainly? By this time, too, we had somewhat changed the manner of our interviews. At first I had taken copious notes, but latterly Mr. Ashford had persuaded me to leave the notes until I was alone, and to devote the time spent with him to conversation as being more suggestive. Besides I was now, also by his advice, playing the part of the obdurate Daisy and receiving his entreaties and his avowals with studied coldness and indifference. At first I objected, seriously to this role as placing me in a very unpleasant position, but Mr. Ashford insisted that it was the only way in which I could thoroughly understand his feelings or make my heroine perfectly true to nature, and so I yielded. He made it a rule after that to call me Daisy, and he soon suggested that I should call him Lyman, but that seemed unnecessary and I never tried it; at least, not in his presence.

I would not have minded his calling me Daisy, for he had such a lovely way of saying it, if I had not begun to dislike the girl so intensely. I was always wondering how he happened to fall in love with her, and why he was so constant to such a blind, ungrateful creature. Often, when he would say that his only hope of future happiness lay in winning her heart, I would turn away my head to hide the tears in my eyes, tears of pity for him and anger against her, poor fool.

It may seem strange, but it is nevertheless true that I found it quite impossible to work at my story any more. Notwithstanding the many advantages I now enjoyed, I found myself more at a loss than ever. My heroine, whom I had modeled after Daisy, displeased me—my hero, who was of course Mr. Ashford, was entirely too good for her—so how could I marry them at the end? I did think of introducing another character—a girl to whom his heart should turn, because of her sweet, unselfish sympathy with all his sorrows, but—well, I put the whole thing aside, to be finished in the winter.

One morning Mr. Ashford made his appearance with a very melancholy air.

"My work is completed," he said; "My vacation is over, and I must go back to the city. I cannot tell you how sorry I am, for how much I shall miss these 'sittings.' And, by the way, is not the story nearly finished? I was hoping you would read it to me before I left."

"Oh, no! not now—it is not ready yet," I exclaimed; "I have not written much lately"—and there I stopped, confused by my own admission. But he went on quietly: "You are quite right. Put your work aside for a time, and you will take it up with new vigor. And now, my kind friend, will you let me occupy this last hour of the many we have spent together with my own affairs? I have written to Daisy—for the last time, if she still refuses me—and on her decision my whole future now rests. If she is at last won to say yes, you know how happy I shall be. If, not, I cannot stay in the city where I must meet her continually. I shall accept my uncle's offer, give up my profession, and go to Germany with him, probably for the rest of my life."

He paused, looking at me, expectantly, but I was silent. Of course I suppose it was sympathy, but it seemed to me as if I could never be so utterly wretched in all my life as I was at that moment. Finally, realizing that something must be said, I contrived to get off two or three sentences, with "best wishes," and "deep interest in his welfare," and the like, but it was very hard work.

However, he seemed quite satisfied, for he thanked me, and then he added: "I shall not hear from Daisy before Friday, but whatever the result may be I must come back to tell you. So please meet me here on Saturday afternoon, and then, if I am happy, I shall claim your congratulations, and if I am to be an exile, I shall at least have the consolation of hearing a friendly good-bye. Au revoir, kindest of friends."

He was gone, but I burst into tears! For a long time I remained sitting in the little arbor where he had left me, trying to compose myself sufficiently to return to the house.

Then I went up to my room, and telling Susan that I had a violent headache and could not be disturbed, I shut myself up and began to think.

My meditation during that day and the next made one point perfectly clear to me; I did not want Mr. Ashford to marry Daisy. But then, on the other hand, I did not want him to go to Germany. I began to feel a positive hatred for that girl, and to wish that I could warn Mr. Ashford against her, for I was quite sure she could never make him happy.

In this way the hours dragged on. Saturday afternoon came at last, and found me in the arbor waiting for him with almost uncontrollable anxiety.

He made his appearance punctually, and as I watched him coming along the path that led to the arbor I forgot in one moment all the rules of conduct I had laid down for myself—all the elaborate speeches I had prepared, and springing up I held out my hand with a breathless:

"Well?"

"No, it isn't well. Daisy has not accepted me," he said, as he took my hand. "Now, the only thing I can do is to go away as soon as possible. Don't you think so?"

I did not intend to say it. I shall always insist that nothing was farther from my intentions that moment, but I suddenly burst out with: "No, don't, don't go."

He was still holding my hand, and when I said these words he put his other arm very gently around me and whispered: "If you want me I will stay."

I am going to omit the greater part of our conversation that afternoon in the arbor, as it was strictly personal and private. But I ought to say that Lyman confessed to me that he had been guilty of a great deception. There was no such person as Daisy, and it was I, myself, with whom he had been in love all the time. Of course I forgive him, although I don't think it was quite fair, and to inveigle Susan, too!

But as we talked over our "sittings" I exclaimed ruefully: "And so my love story has not been written after all?"

Lyman smiled as he answered tenderly: "Your love story has just begun, dear Margie, and I hope it will never come to an end."

And I don't believe it will.—Inter-Ocean.

Women Who Kept a Secret.

The success with which Miss Murfee (Charles Egbert Craddock) has hidden her identity under a masculine name has started a string of stories on the subject. "Some years ago," said the magazine man of a group of press men, "there was among our contributors a young fellow who signed the name Birch Arnold. He was bright and ambitious and I wrote him a good many letters of advice and encouragement. This ran on for more than a year and to drop a note to 'My Dear Arnold' became a sort of every-day affair. At last my young friend wrote that he would call on me, and on the day named a young lady came in and demurely placed on my desk a card marked 'Birch Arnold.' Remembering how I had been 'dear-siring' her for a year I laughed outright, and it was soon apparent that she had enjoyed the correspondence the more because she had demonstrated that a woman could keep a secret. She still writes verses and stories."

The Morals of France.

The morals of a people must be deplorable when the national welfare is thought to demand that sin be sheltered and the home built on bribery; yet this seems to be the condition of France. The birth rate of the country has dropped in five years from 32.9 a thousand to 25.5, in good measure, it is thought, because of the growing practice of abandoning illegitimate children; and it is seriously proposed to reform the evil by promising secrecy to any mother who will send her child to a fondling hospital, and by offering prizes and exemption from taxation to families of more than two children.—Globe-Democrat.

The Bay View Quarries, Cape Ann.

The friends had been recommended to one of the workmen of the Cape Ann Company, who was kind enough to explain to them what was going on. The quarries, he told them, were at a little distance from the village, and the stone was sent down to the shore and the cutting and polishing shops in cars drawn by steam upon the company's railroad, the only railroad where steam is used in the Cape quarries. The visitors might have gone up on the train to see the quarrying. But being pressed for time, they chose rather to watch the different processes used in working the stone, from its entrance into the shops in a rough block, till it attains the astonishingly fine polish which the workmen are able to give it.

The work was done near the water's edge in long wooden sheds, some of them open on one side, some of them with doors and windows of cotton cloth. It was cold business, the workmen said, but there were stoves in some of the shops, and the men were not too cold to keep up an industrious chipping and hammering, nor to good-naturedly explain to the visitors some of the mysteries of their trade. They showed them how to chisel the line, how to point the stone down, and what were the differences between peen-hammers and bush-hammers. They took the bush-hammers out of their chests that the ladies might see the varieties with five, six, eight, and ten edges, which gave the granite the slightly lined or ridged appearance which they have often noticed. The point and chisel work interested them, chiefly in regard to its effects upon the workmen.

"You must be always getting the stone into your eyes," cried Bessy.

"Yes, ma'am," said the workman, composedly, "but we don't mind that as much as the splinters of steel. All our points are of English steel, you see, and that's very bad when it gets into the eyes. But then plenty of the men have a great knack at getting it out; they are as good as any eye-doctor."

Do you use a camel's-hair pencil?" asked Anastasia.

"No; we take a broom splint sometimes, or a penknife, or a pin—not the point, but the head. A pin isn't so good, though."

As they talked, Nancy was watching the white figures in the dusty sunlight, their heads bent over their hammers, making pictures which Francois Millet, who knew what a working-man's life was, would have been glad to paint.

"My trade isn't an easy one," said she, "but I think theirs is harder. I wish I were that sort of workman. I mean I wish my work were as good and as direct as theirs. It makes my heart beat and my breath come quick to be in a place like this. I know that if I were to paint something here I should have a better chance for success in the midst of the steadiness and resolution and cheerful industry about me."

"You wouldn't," said the skeptical Bessy. "You'd have a headache."

"Indeed I should not, for I have tried it," said her friend. "The most inspiring neighbors I ever had while I was at work were my classmates in Paris, the next most inspiring were some ironworkers in Cambridgeport. I like to feel that I too have part and lot in the stir and rush of our hard-working republic. We are no nation of shopkeepers, we Americans, but I think, a nation of workmen, making all sorts of new things for an old tired world."

After a vain attempt to see the steam-cutter they entered the polishing-shops. Granite is polished first with sand, then with emery, then with putty powder and felt. Some blocks are polished by a great machine called a Jenny Lind, others by sinister-looking arrangements called pendulums, which are supported from above and run backward and forward over the granite—a sight which terrified our two friends. The finest work is done by hand. The pride of the shop at present appeared to be centered in a great crown, which with a cross was to form part of some monument, and whose ornament would admit of none but hand-work.

The granite took a beautiful polish, and in its finished state it became easy to see the differences in color and density which are significant to experts. All the Rockport granite which our friends had seen was gray or grayish-green. It differs in color from that of the Quincy quarries, which is gray too, but the travellers thought, of a lighter gray, and it differs from it in quality as well. There are different qualities of Cape granite too. The Maine granite, it appeared, is red.—Ellen Day Hale, in Harper's Magazine.

In the Legislature.

"Mr. Speaker, I arise to place in nomination a man, sir, what we all know sir, to be a man what ain't got no peer, nowhar. We all know that he is more than a qualified, sir, for the position for I served with him durin' the wah, sir, he not only represent the great Democratic partee, but, sir, the entire State. During the dark an' bloody days when the pale face of hunger put its bloody hand to the heart of the nation, he was found to be as true as steel, an' grabbed the gory wolf by the la' pels of his shirt and shook him until he loudly begged for mercy."—Arkansas Traveler.

The manner of saying or of doing anything goes a great way in the value of the thing itself. It was well said of him that called a good office that was done harshly, and with an ill-will, a stony piece of bread; it is necessary for him that is hungry to receive it, but it almost chokes a man in the going down.

It is no advantage to have a lively mind if we are not just. The perfection of the pendulum is not to go fast, but to be regular.

PITH AND POINT.

An extra dry remark: Mumm's the word at a banquet.

An old saw reset: An egg in the cup is worth two in the nest.

Said Brongham, when he was a struggling lawyer: "Circumstances alter cases; but I wish I could get hold of some cases that would alter my circumstances."

HE MIGHT.

When Adam walked the Garden round,
And woman was not known,
His Maker said: "It is not good
For man to be alone."

But if the Lord had known what woes
That man through Eve should find,
Perhaps on a sabbath second thought
He might have changed his mind.
—Merchant Traveler.

YOUNG Mr. Jay and his inamorata were out strolling the other night, and as they turned from a side street into one of the principal avenues, Mr. Jay exclaimed: "Oh, I saw the moon over my right shoulder. That is awfully good luck!" Miss Gush turned her head in the same direction and saw the moon; then she shivered and cried: "Oh, dear! How unfortunate it is that I am left handed!"

"O, Mr. SMITH," said a young lady at a church fair, "I want your help for a moment." "Certainly," replied Mr. Smith; "what can I do for you?" "I have just sold a tidy for $15 that cost 15 cents, and I want you to tell me what percentage that is." "A transaction of that kind, my dear Miss B., said Mr. Smith, who is a lawyer, "gets out of percentage and into larceny."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

OSCUATION.

Into the glowing grate he gazed
In silent meditation,
Until her eyes the maiden raised
And said, "What's oscuati on?"
The love slowly kept his head,
And with some rep- action
He kissed her on the lips and said,
"Sweet love, that's oscuati on!"
Then while her heart went pit-a-pat,
Till she could almost hear it,
She said, "I thought it must be that,
Or something pretty near it."
—Boston Courier.

"SEE what it is to be poor!" he exclaimed, as he stood shivering in a doorway. "Hungry?" queried the other. "Well, I'm always hungry, for that matter; but just now a man whom I fell against on the corner got mad about it and offered to lick me for two cents." "And you hadn't the money?" "Couldn't possibly raise a red cent, and I told him so, and he had to go away disappointed. The rich either ought to come down on their prices, or the poor have some new way of making money. A licking would have warmed me up for a whole week."—Detroit Free Press.

BARNACLE was 42 years of age yesterday. His wife presented him with a handsome pair of carpet slippers; cost 50 cents. Barnacle was grateful, but thoughtful. At last he exclaimed: "Times have changed!" "Why dear?" asked Mrs. B. "Well, before we were married you gave me slippers worked in floss and silk, embroidered, monogrammed, scalloped in morocco, and patent leather with wool soles, at a cost of several dollars—ah, times change!" "Well, John, replied Mrs. B., after a thoughtful pause, "I had the slippers charged to you. I thought you wouldn't want to pay for a costly pair."—Providence News.

"Why, how do you do, Mr. Smith?" said a bunko man, stepping up to a well-dressed gentleman, and extending his hand with hearty greeting. "That d'ye say?" "Ain't this Mr. John Smith from Cypress Creek?" "Are ye the devil's own blockhead?" "O, I beg pardon. I see I'm mistaken. Good-day, Mr.—? Mr.—?" "McFaddin, at yar service, sir; Patrick McFaddin; a decent Irish name that I'm not ashamed av. If ye find an Irishman by the name av John Smith, would ye do me the kindness to send him to me? I'll be afther wantin' to wipe me boots wid him. Smith—to the devil wid the upstart. He's never put a fut on the ould sod."—Exchange.

SHE NEVER SMILES.

She never smiles, from morn till night,
Her face is void of cheerful light;
No laugh rings out from mouth of hers,
No matter what queer thing occurs.
In vain do friends attempt to grin;
From her firm mouth a smile or grin;
'They get up every plan to wake her,
But all their efforts fail to shake her.
She moves in a mysterious way,
Ignoring callers, day by day;
With firm resolve and so em face,
With quiet air and queenly grace,
Following up each firm endeavor,
Seldom conversing—seldom never.
Her mien she crunches all alone,
As silently as brick or stone.
What, think you, makes this maiden fair
Move with a sad and solemn air?
Why does she never smile again,
On aught in range of mortal ken?
Ask of her dent at, he can tell,
He understands her reason well—
He knows what all her griefs are about—
All her front teeth have been pulled out!
—Chicago Sun.

He Remembered the Encore.

A mother took her 3-year old son to an afternoon concert, and when the first encore was given he was frightened, and asked his mother why they did so. She said, playfully: "Perhaps they are glad she is done singing," and thought no more about it.

He seemed to be satisfied, and sat the rest of the time reasonably well. The next morning, after his father had asked the blessing the little boy clapped his hands in a very vigorous manner, and when asked why he did so, said: "I'm dad he's done; I want some fis."

Bad Grammar on the Stage.

"I must be gittin' along." "She learned me this last week." "I fear neither you nor he." "I never doubted but what you would." "I ran across him." "My ambition is well founded." These half dozen specimens of the language in current use at our theaters are elected at random from some twenty-five noted down during the week.—San Francisco Argonaut.

MEDICAL ETHICS.

Doctors Object to Pay for Advertising, but Are Always Ready for Free Puffs.

A Chicago medical society recently amputated a member. It was a very good member they cut off, and was not diseased at all. In fact, the member that was cut off was the only sound, healthy member that the medical society could boast of. But, dropping all nonsense, a medical association expelled one of its members. They expelled him, not because he had prescribed arsenic instead of quinine, or because he had committed some of his homicides while in an intoxicated condition. Nobody ever heard of a medical society amputating a member for any such triviality as that.

Now for what does the reader suppose those sawbones cut off the offending member? For nothing in the world except that he had put his business card in a newspaper and paid for it. It is contrary to medical ethics for a Chicago doctor to advertise in a newspaper. Why there should be any more objection to a doctor putting his card in a newspaper than there is in tacking his professional shingle on his office door, is more than we can comprehend without some operation having been previously performed on our journalistic brain. We utterly fail to discover why it is more unprofessional in a doctor to advertise in a newspaper than it is for a lawyer or a banker to do so.

This is a peculiarly singular feature of medical ethics, when it is taken into consideration that otherwise there is no profession fonder of newspaper notoriety. If a son of Aesculapius does some fine work in repairing a rickety liver, or putting in order some other part of the human anatomy that has become unhinged, we have never perceived any wild, frenzied opposition on the part of the doctor to having the fact mentioned in flattering terms in the local paper. There is nothing in that that interferes with the therapeutic, surgical, sanitary, analeptic, prophylactic, or any other kind of medical ethics.

Again, it will be remembered that every once in a while the doctors hold a kind of ecumenical council. We have never observed any attempt to prevent the press from publishing the sickening details. Usually one of the doctors is delivered of a long, salutiferous, balsamic kind of a pastoral address, full of Latin names and less intelligible English, about materia medica, or dietetics, or pharmacology, after which his one object in life seems to be to inflict it, as a kind of mental porous plaster, on the reading public, through the medium of the local press. There seems to be nothing in medical ethics against running an entire issue of a newspaper with that kind of a free cyclopaean advertisement of personal and professional egotism; yet when any other doctor puts in a two-inch ad. that he is authorized by law to take human life, the entire medical profession sits up on its hind legs and howls about ethics, which goes to show that the medical profession is as badly afflicted with humbuggery as is theology.—Texas Sittings.

The Bread of Persia.

"Persian bread," writes our correspondent now in Afghanistan, "is a very peculiar production; it is made in large flaps, in some cases about a yard long. If ever the Persians reach the advanced state of morning newspapers they might have them printed on their bread, so that they could read the news while they eat, and swallow everything literally. On seeing these large flaps I have often thought that they must resemble the blacksmith's leather apron, which was the old standard of Persia; if the bread is not made after that model they have managed to produce an article very like it, not only in size but in color and toughness at the same time. We have had now nearly two months' experience of this material, and it was a delight on coming here to get at our breakfast the first morning bread that was made on a somewhat later model than an old leather apron. The chances of finding a change in this detail of our daily life on reaching the Indian camp had often been discussed on the way, when we were hard at work trying to masticate pieces of the leather kind. One of our party said he knew Major Kind, the commissariat officer of the other camp, and that he was not a man likely to come away without the means of baking good bread, but we had been so long used to that Persian kind that these assurances did not inspire much hope. There had been doubts, but these were dispelled at our first breakfast. Butter actually appeared on the table with the bread. I fear for the moment we either forgot or thought lightly of the splendid pillars in the breakfast prepared for us by the Governor of Khorassan's cook at Meshed, or the many delicacies Ali Mardan treated us with at Sarakhs. One man while munching a great mouthful of bread and butter—the amount in his mouth slightly interfered with his articulation—but we made out that he meant to say it was almost as good as arriving at Dover. Of course he meant to add that it was after having been a long time in the East away from England, but at that instant he had not a moment to spare, and left the sentence in its incomplete form as here recorded."—London Daily News.

THERE is said to be one lawyer in heaven. How he got there is not positively known, but it is conjectured that he passed himself off for an editor and slipped in unsuspected. When his dodge was discovered they searched the realms of felicity in all their length and breadth for another lawyer to draw up the papers for his ejection, but they couldn't find one, and of course he held the fort.

The Preventive of a Terrible Disease.

No disorders, excepting the most deadly forms of lung disease, involve such a tremendous destruction of organic tissue as those which fasten upon the kidneys. Such maladies, when they become chronic—and none are so liable to assume that phase—completely wreck the system. To prevent this terrible disease, recourse should be had, upon the first manifestation of trouble, to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which experience has proved to be highly effective as a means of imparting tone and regularity to the organs of urination, as well as to the liver, stomach, and bowels. Another beneficial result of this medicine, naturally consequent upon its diuretic action, is the elimination from the blood of impurities which beget rheumatism, neuralgia, gout, dropsy, and other maladies. By increasing the activity of the kidneys, it augments the depurative efficiency of these organs, which are most important outlets for the escape of such impurities.

The Orange Groves of St. Michael's.

Out in the Atlantic, over 1,200 miles from Land's End and about 600 miles due west from Lisbon, lies the beautiful island of St. Michael's, the largest of the nine islands forming the archipelago of the Azores. It is beautiful in its variety of mountain, lake, and valley scenery, in the rich verdure of its cultivated lands, its equable, mild climate, and its wonderful thermal spring. The principal commerce of St. Michael's is the orange crop. The mode of picking and packing remains unaltered since early days. The city, Ponta Delgada, the capital of the island, is set in the midst of orange gardens, and the air in the early mornings or late in the evenings comes laden to you with the fragrance of orange blossoms.

Either in the town or suburbs you see the gates of many orange gardens invitingly open, and you will be politely invited to walk in and help yourself to flowers and fruit. If you are a stranger the "cabeca" or head man of the garden will bring you a bunch of lovely camellias and a branch on which hang clusters of ripe oranges, and invite you to be seated on a garden bench, for though it is the month of February you can enjoy sitting out of doors. There you can watch the juvenile toilers sorting the fruit and dried leaves of the Indian corn. The picker can eat as many oranges as he pleases, and take away every evening a bag or basket full of fruit that has fallen from the trees, which he sells at thirty or forty for a penny.—Leisure Hours.

The Grade of Crimes.

An exchange thus classifies crimes of peculation:
Taking $1,000,000 is called a case of genius.
Taking $100,000 is called a case of shortage.
Taking $50,000 is called a case of litigation.
Taking $25,000 is called a case of insolvency.
Taking $10,000 is called a case of irregularity.
Taking $5,000 is called a case of defalcation.
Taking $1,000 is called a case of corruption.
Taking $500 is called a case of embezzlement.
Taking $100 is called a case of dishonesty.
Taking $50 is called a case of thievery.
Taking $25 is called a case of total depravity.
Taking one ham is called a case of war on society.

"Eternal Vigilance Is the Price of Safety."

In an exchange we read that it is entirely a gratifying thing to lazy, irresponsible people to find that health, and the best conditions for living useful and reasonably happy lives, are within their own power, and that they are responsible for their fulfillment. It is so much easier to keep on in the old way, to pile up refuse, to let the drainage go, to build a house like a soap box, and transfer the consequences to the shoulders of Providence or the Almighty. But it is too late to do this now. Providence has been made responsible for the results of our shortcomings long enough; science has discovered that they are within our control, and that it is our business first to discover what the laws are that govern health and disease, and then adapt ourselves and our circumstances to the obligation they impose.—Dr. Foote's Health Monthly.

A Wonderful Freak of Nature

is sometimes exhibited in our public exhibitions. When we gaze upon some of the peculiar freaks of nature occasionally indulged in, our minds revert back to the creation of man, "who is so fearfully and wonderfully made." The mysteries of his nature have been unraveled by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, and through his knowledge of those mysteries he has been able to prepare his "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a specific for all blood taints, poisons and humors, such as scrofula, pimples, blotches, eruptions, swellings, tumors, ulcers and kindred affections. By druggists.

$500 Not Called For.

It seems strange that it is necessary to persuade men that you can cure their diseases by offering a premium to the man who fails to receive benefit. And yet Dr. Sage undoubtedly cured thousands of cases of obstinate catarrh with his "catarrh Remedy," who would never have applied to him, if it had not been for his offer of the above sum for an incurable case. Who is the next bidder for cure or cash?

Marriage and Health.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 5th, 1888. Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham: "As is frequently the case with mothers who have reared large families, I have been a great sufferer for years from complaints incident to married life. I have tried the skill of a number of physicians, and the virtue of many medicines without relief, and as an experiment I concluded to try yours. I can assure you that the benefits I have derived from it came not because of any faith I had in it, for I had but slight hope of any permanent good. I am not a seeker after notoriety, but I want to tell you that I have been wonderfully benefited by your medicine. I am now using my fourth bottle, and it would take but little argument to persuade me that my health is fully restored. I should like to widely circulate the fact of its wonderful curative powers." ## SELF-PRESERVATION THE FIRST LAW OF NATURE.

In these degenerate days when ennui or a morbid craving for excitement alternately depresses or enlivens the animal pulse of unfortunate humanity, a word, a blow, a pistol shot, too often ends the chapter of life and darkens with gloom and sorrowing regret a murderer's future. Truly "self-preservation is the first law of nature," but this in its fullest and grandest sense should include a preservation of one's equanimity of temper, a preservation of a happy consciousness of living and doing right, a preservation of that disposition which shows a regard for the lives and feelings of others, all of which makes life endurable to our associates and enjoyable to ourselves. Again, a knowledge of that which promotes and that which impairs the harmonious action of natural bodily functions is essential to the best preservation of all there is in life worth living. To this end a judicious selection of remedial agents should unerringly be made when the wheels of perfect health begin to run slow, when the stomach grows weak, when the liver feels sore, when the kidneys give pain, when natural functions cause distress, and gloomy forebodings become constant companions. The wisest selection of a medicine for counteracting such evidences of ill health and restoring robust strength to all parts of the body is DR. GUYBOTT'S YELLOW DOCK AND SASSAPARILLA. Remember this, and do not let your druggists sell you in its place anything of a different name, for the writer, who was himself an invalid for years, knows this remedy to excel as a health restorative all other preparations.

Narrow Escape.

ROCHESTER, June 1, 1882. "Ten Years ago I was attacked with the most intense and deadly pains in my back and kidneys."

"Extending to the end of my toes and to my brain!"
"Which made me delirious!"
"From agony!!!!"
"It took three men to hold me on my bed at times!"
"The Doctors tried in vain to relieve me, but to no purpose."
"Morphine and other opiates!"
"Had no effect!"
"After two months I was given up to die!!!!"
"When my wife heard a neighbor tell what Hop Bitters had done for her, she at once got and gave me some. The first dose eased my brain and seemed to go hunting through my system for the pain."

"The second dose eased me so much that I slept two hours, something I had not done for two months. Before I had used five bottles I was well and at work as hard as any man could, for over three weeks; but I worked too hard for my strength, and taking a hard cold, I was taken with the most acute and painful rheumatism all through my system that ever was known."

"I called the doctors again, and after several weeks they left me a cripple on crutches for life," he said. "I took a friend and told him my case, and he said Hop Bitters had cured him and would cure me. I looked at him, but he was so earnest I was induced to use them again."

"In less than four weeks I threw away my crutches and went to work lightly and kept on using the bitters for five weeks, until I became as well as any man living, and have been so for six years since."

"It has also cured my wife, who had been sick for years; and has kept her and my children well and healthy with from two to three bottles per year. There is no need to be sick at all if these bitters are used."
J. J. BERE, Ex-Supervisor.

"That poor invalid wife, Sister, Mother, 'Or daughter!!!!'
"Can be made the picture of health!"
"With a few bottles of Hop Bitters!"
"Will you let them suffer!!!!"

Prosecute the Swindlers!!!

If when you call for Hop Bitters (see green cluster of Hops on the white label) the druggist hands you any stuff called C. D. Warner's German Hop Bitters or with other "Hop" name, refuse it and shun that druggist as you would a viper; and if he has taken your money for the stuff, indict him for the fraud and sue him for damages for the swindle, and we will reward you liberally for the conviction.

GOLDEN SEAL BITTERS.

Dyspepsia is the prevailing malady of civilized life. A weak, dyspeptic stomach acts very actively or not at all on many kinds of food, and the result is a dyspepsia which is to be miserable, hopeless, depressed, confused in mind, forgetful, irascible, drowsy, weak, listless, and nervous. It destroys the Teeth, Complexion, Strength, Peace of Mind, and Bodily Power. It produces Headache, Pain in Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of Stomach, Acid Taste in Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of Heart, Inflammation of Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms. Dyspepsia invariably yields to the vegetable remedies in GOLDEN SEAL BITTERS, the great purifier of the blood and restorer of health. In these complaints there is no cure. We warrant GOLDEN SEAL BITTERS C. O. Holland City, Mich. Sold by all druggists. Take no others. If your druggist does not keep it, we will send one bottle and prepay express for $1. or six bottles for $5.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, CITY OF HOLLAND,
June 2, 1885.

Gentlemen of the Common Council:
I deem it my duty to announce to you in this formal manner, the death of ex-Mayor John Roost. After a lingering sickness, dating its first cause back to the time when he represented us as a member of the State Senate, he departed this life on Sunday morning last, aged 61 years and 7 months.

The many relations in which he has stood to this people, is a part of its local history. While in no way instrumental in leading the masses of his countrymen to this Western world, still after their arrival and locating in these regions, his influence and leadership have been manifest to such an extent that we owe it to his memory, and to ourselves, that the event of his death be entered upon the records of your proceedings.

I trust that in addition to the mark of respect already paid by you, in attending, as a body, his funeral, you will give further expression to such sentiments, as will perpetuate his memory in our local annals. Signed, ROKUS KANTERS, Mayor.

The following resolutions were adopted in response to the message of the mayor:

Resolved, by the Common Council of the city of Holland, that in answer to the message of the mayor, this evening presented, we feel it incumbent upon us to echo the sentiments therein expressed.

That in the death of Hon. John Roost, we recognize the loss of a common friend, and of a man peculiarly endowed with the elements fitting him for a leader.

That in the various positions of honor and of trust, which he has filled while among us, he was always guided by what to him seemed to be for the best interests of the masses, and that during his entire public career, covering a period of thirty years, he has been true to the confidence thus placed in him.

That especially during the early years of the settlement of the Holland Colony in general, and of this place in particular, his public spirit and devotion in promoting their material growth and prosperity, are entitled to a fitting recognition at our hands.

That as a friend of the poor and down-trodden his efforts were constantly bent towards their relief and comfort; and to alleviate in others the burdens of life was to him a constant source of enjoyment.

Resolved, That in this hour of their bereavement, we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the mourning friends and relatives of our departed fellow citizen, and that we transmit to them a copy of these resolutions.

By order of the Common Council.
GEORGE H. SIPP, City Clerk.

An Answer Wanted.

Can any one bring us a case of Kidney or Liver Complaint that Electric Bitters will not speedily cure? We say they can not, as thousands of cases already permanently cured and who are daily recommending Electric Bitters, will prove. Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Weak Back, or any urinary complaint quickly cured. They purify the blood, regulate the bowels, and act directly on the diseased parts. Every bottle guaranteed. For sale at 50c. a bottle by H. Walsh.

In pictorial and literary features the June Century is not behind recent issues in timeliness and general interest. A finer portrait than that of Sir John Herschel (the frontispiece, engraved by T. Johnson) has rarely been printed in The Century. Two other, full-page portraits, of William, the father, and Caroline, the sister of Sir John accompany Professor Edwin S. Holden's authoritative paper on "The Three Herschels." Amusement and information are mingled in Eugene V. Smalley's second paper, "In and Out of the New Orleans Exposition," and the illustrations, by Kemble, are full of character and humor. Bishop Dudley, of Kentucky, contributes his answer to the question, "How Shall we Help the Negro?" and John E. P. Daingerfield describes his experience in the engine-house when he was held as a hostage by "John Brown at Harper's Ferry."

In the May Century McClellan's Peninsular Campaign was treated broadly by the leading commanders on both sides. In the June number special events like the disaster to the Confederates at Beaver Dam Creek and the terrible battle the next day at Gaines's Mill are particularly described by General D. H. Hill; and by General Fitz John Porter, who gained great credit for his manner of fighting two-thirds of the Confederate army with a little more than half the number, at Gaines's Mill. The maps in these papers are probably the most complete and satisfactory battle-maps ever published in this country, and striking pictures and portraits accompany in profusion. General Imboden contributes a striking anecdotal paper on "Stonewall Jackson in the Shenandoah," describing the famous Valley campaign, which had an important bearing on the withdrawal of McClellan to the James River.

The liver, the stomach, the bowels, the kidneys, are rendered disease proof by this great invigorant. We warrant a cure. For sale by H. Walsh. 18-4
