We were shown this week by Dr. J. A. Mabbs a twig of a peach tree from the orchard of his brother, near Fennville, fairly loaded down with peaches. The largest ones had already reached a growth of three-quarters of an inch. Every thing now indicates an unusual peach crop in that locality. Mr. Mabbs expects to harvest not less than 5,000 baskets.

The mayor, aldermen, and city officials, on Friday evening, invaded the home of city clerk Sipp, Twelfth street. It was thirty-five years that day that Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Sipp had plighted each other their vow. The party numbered about eighteen, and remained long enough to extend their personal congratulations and present the veteran city clerk with a gold-headed cane, and his estimable lady with a rocking chair.

From a Spring Lake dispatch to the G. R. Democrat we learn that on Wednesday Rip Noordhuis and Sam Kimball were convicted before Justice Kay of illegal fishing. Their fine and costs amounted to $80. It will be remembered that these are the men who were arrested on the night of May 13 by State Game Warden Hampton, and who resisted arrest until a pistol shot warned them that he meant business. This was the first attempt to stop the net fishing, which has long been carried on there to an outrageous extent. The fishermen joined together and made a most stubborn fight, using every means to defeat justice, and the first trial resulted in a disagreement. The people of Spring Lake and Grand Haven are jubilant over the result. The prosecution was conducted by Prosecuting Attorney Danhof and Mr. Hampton, in person. D. H. Huaton appeared for the defense.

It is estimated there are 400 acres in the township of Grand Haven, utilized in the growth of the strawberry.

The opening trips of the steamer Kalamazoo, thus far, have been very satisfactory. Notwithstanding the rough weather we have had during the week, her arrivals both here and in Chicago have been prompt and regular. Those who have taken passage on the Kalamazoo speak in commendable terms of the service and of the boat—all of which is a pleasure to note. We confidently hope that this will be reciprocated by our business men and citizens, and that at the close of navigation the season may prove to have been satisfactory all around. As finally determined the officers of the boat are as follows: Dennis Cummings, captain; Jos. Lewis, mate; Simon Bos, clerk; Wm. Wilson, chief engineer; Henry Paxon, second engineer. The time card appears in another column.

The Memorial exercises by the pupils of the grammar school department of the Public Schools, Friday evening, were largely attended, the spacious room being more than filled. Ecorted by the Holland Martial Band the members of the G. A. R. Post and veterans attended the exercises in a body and were well received. At the close of the program, which was rendered with great credit to those participating therein, Mr. D. B. K. Van Raalte in behalf of the Post responded in a few well directed remarks. The observance of Decoration Day, Saturday afternoon, was quite general, and brought forth a larger attendance from the rural districts than at any other previous year. The program as published was faithfully carried out. This being the first public demonstration which the Holland Republican Martial Band attended, their appearance and drill elicited favorable comments. A large crowd gathered in the beautiful grove on the College campus to listen to the address of Rev. W. H. Harvey, which to the great regret of his hearers was somewhat interrupted by the three o'clock train for Allegan. At the cemetery the exercises were closed by Mr. Van Loo of Zeeland, paying a tender tribute to the devotion and the love of country of the women of that trying period of our country's history. The number of veterans that attended was also unusually large. Each succeeding Memorial Day seems to develop an increased desire for its due observance by our citizens.

A suit was recently brought by a farmer in Manistee county against the owner of a gristmill for refusing to grind wheat at the rate of toll prescribed by law. The case was tried before a justice of the peace, who decided that the law cannot be applied to grist mills as they are now constructed employing the roller process. Some of the Manistee farmers now threaten to test the validity of the law in a higher court, claiming as their attorney says, that the amendment under which the suit was brought was passed in 1879, when the country was full of roller mills, and that it was certainly then intended to apply also to the present style of mills. The law allows as toll one-tenth of the grain, but some grist mills are in the habit of taking more. The point involved is therefore quite important, and the Supreme Court will be watched with interest.—Ex.

A discharge of mortgage was recently received by the First National Bank of Allegan, executed by Alpheus Felch, of Ann Arbor. The peculiar thing about it is that it is wholly written by Mr. Felch, and was in a clear, firm hand although he is well past eighty years of age. He is unique as a man, for he was in college with Longfellow, in the United States senate with Daniel Webster, was governor of this state in 1846, and yet remains in the enjoyment of hale old age and the respect if not reverence of the whole people of Michigan.—Allegan Gazette.

The Ludington Democrat gives the following as a practical joke perpetrated by some graceless scamp on one of the local clergymen of that city, a Sunday or two ago: The domine had secured a horse and carriage just after the dinner hour to go out into the country to attend a funeral, and having a due regard for the horse, he stopped at the watering trough at the corner of the street to let it drink. While the animal was quenching its thirst, some unknown party came up behind and planted a fish pole under the seat, letting a large section of the same project out behind. In this condition the domine drove up the avenue and out into the country to attend the funeral. He had nearly reached his destination, when he met one of his devout country followers, who at once took in the fish pole. The friend was dumfounded, and at once asked his pastor if he was going fishing. The pastor thought the remark a very singular one, but answered kindly, that he was going to officiate at a funeral a few miles further on, and asked his country friend why he asked such a question. The friend referred him to his fish pole sticking out of his carriage. At this the clergyman raised the curtain of his buggy, and to his horror and dismay, saw the fish pole for the first time. He was completely overcome, and explained that it was a mistake; but his devout follower yet has his serious doubts about that funeral.

"Can you take a piece of pure, white cloth and drag it through mud and filth and yet retain to that cloth its purity and whiteness? Can you turn your children loose upon the streets at night, and know that they are receiving impressions of vulgarity, and yet have them retain their purity of character? Were the above questions put to parents the answer would be, no, and the reply would be unanimous; and yet if a persons stands on some of the streets of Holland in the evening they will find themselves in the midst of a very pandemonium. Do you not believe this? Then all there is to say is, go out upon those streets almost every evening and prove for yourself the truth of this matter.

The following is from Col. Ingersoll: "Here is a small shop, that employs half a dozen men. After the day's work one of the six goes out courting some nice girl. The other five men don't do any such thing. They spend half their earnings evenings in dissipation. First young man bye and bye starts out for himself and gets a little business of his own. He then marries and is able to take his wife out riding. The five former companions, who see him indulging in luxury, retire to a saloon and pass resolutions, that there is eternal struggle between labor and capital."

THE BOOK TRUST KNOCKED OUT
A Card To The Public.

Some six months ago we began the publication of our reprint of the famous Encyclopaedia Britannica in 25 Volumes. The price of the English edition always has been and still is $8.00 per volume, and the Scribner edition $5.00 per volume in the cheapest binding.

That the public appreciate so great a bargain is shown by the fact that over half a million volumes of this reprint have been sold in less than six months. This elegant new edition we still offer at the same price, $1.50 per volume. This is the greatest bargain ever known in books.

Better still, we will deliver the set complete on small easy payments, to suit the convenience of customers.

Remember this is not an abridgement, but the great Edinburgh ninth edition, reproduced page for page, with important articles on American subjects rewritten to date by eminent American authors, and new maps, later and better than in any other edition.

We further announce that we have in preparation three volumes of "American Additions and Revisions," thoroughly supplementing the original work. With these supplemental volumes you will have at small cost an Encyclopaedia unapproachable in completeness; a thorough "digest" of the libraries of the world, and a complete record of current progress and events.

SPECIAL OFFER.—We claim that our reprint compares favorably with the high priced editions in every respect, and in respect to maps, and strength and beauty of bindings is superior to them. In order that this claim may be tested by a personal inspection we make the following proposition: We will furnish volume I. at 60 cts.—a fraction of actual cost—if sent by express. Add 40 cts. postage if wanted by mail. Amount paid for Volume I. will be credited on price of set when ordered.

Drs. Starkey Palen's TREATMENT BY INHALATION.
1529 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa.

The original and only genuine Compound Oxygen Treatment, that of Drs. Starkey & Palen, is a scientific adjustment of the elements of Oxygen and Nitrogen magnetized; and the compound is so condensed and made portable that it is sent all over the world.

It has been in use for more than twenty years; thousands of patients have been treated and one thousand physicians have used it, and recommended it—a very significant fact.

The great success of our treatment has given rise to a host of imitators, unscrupulous persons; some calling their preparations compound oxygen, often appropriating our testimonials and the names of our patients, to recommend worthless concoctions. But any substance made elsewhere or by others and called Compound Oxygen, is spurious.

"Compound Oxygen—Its Mode, Action and Result," is the title of a new book of 300 pages, published by Drs. Starkey & Palen, which gives to all inquirers full information as to this remarkable curative agent, and a record of surprising cures in a wide range of chronic cases—many of them after being abandoned to die by other physicians. Will be mailed free to any address on application.

Gen. Banks to Be Made Comfortable in His Last Days—A Newark Boy Who Read Too Many Novels—Farnell Accused of Misappropriating Funds.

MONEY FOR GENERAL BANKS.

Comrades: Contribute to the Peace of the Old Man's Last Days.

A movement is on foot in Boston to subscribe a sum sufficient to keep Gen. N. P. Banks from penury in his declining days. Like Agassiz and others whose lives have been crowded with public service, Gen. Banks has had no time to make money. Old age has come upon him and his wife with no provision but a small pension of $1,200 a year and an incumbered homestead. In the natural course of events he cannot last much longer and his friends say he may go at any time. They desire to make his remaining days comfortable and free from pecuniary anxieties. For this purpose a sum of $20,000 has been proposed and subscribed.

GREAT SCHEME.

To Run with the Racers.

The directors of the Overland Park Club of Denver have conceived a great scheme, of which official announcement has been made. Next season an electric railway will be built around the track on the inside. Upon it will be a moveable stand for the judges, which will whirl around the circle with the racers, and enable the judges to watch the race from start to finish. It is claimed that the necessary speed may easily be attained. The announcement was also made that some means of running the grand stand around the track was also being considered.

They Carry Winchester.

There is a family feud in Burr County, Nebraska, over the acretion land on the west bank of the Missouri River in the southeast corner of the county. The land being accreted since the Government survey there is no ownership to it other than the squatter's claim, and as a consequence the land is non-taxable. For years this accretion land has been a source of annoyance to the whole county. On one small tract of this land there are two or three parties who claim the ownership, one by right of purchase and another by right of possession, and within the last thirty or forty days several fights have occurred there. The authorities are informed that all the participants carry Winchester.

Wanted to Be a Casper.

Harry Jordan, of Newark, N. J., a fourteen-year-old boy, whose head has been turned by dime novels, shot John Lewis, aged twelve, inflicting a severe wound in the head. Lewis and two other boys were rowing on the Passaic near Newark, when Jordan, who was in another boat, met them and ordered them to throw up their hands, adding that he was a detective. The boys were too much astonished to comply and Jordan at once commenced shooting. He fired three times, the last shot taking effect.

Richard Trumbull's Case.

The cases of Richard L. Trumbull, Geo. A. Burr, and Capt. James of Arrell, charged with violation of the neutrality laws, have been set for trial at Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 16. The five officers of the Robert and Minnie, held as witnesses, are still in jail, and unless bail is given for them they will remain in prison until that time. The schooner Robert and Minnie will probably be released, a bond for $5,000 having been given as requested.

Crushed Under the Cars.

Martin Flinn, roadmaster of the El Paso division of the Santa Fe Road, suffered a horrible death at El Paso, Texas. He was sitting on the rear flat car on a rock train, and Conductor Tom Powell was standing near him. A sudden jerk of the train threw Flinn forward on the track. Six cars passed over him, mauling his body horribly. Powell was also thrown from the car, and though landing a safe distance from the track, was stunned and painfully bruised.

Born to Catch Seals.

A dispatch from Vancouver says that parties interested in the Behring Sea fisheries are known to be getting ready to sail under the German or Italian flags in the event of a close-time arrangement between Great Britain and the United States. The sealers had made ready for a grand harvest this season, and do not feel like being balked, whatever the two nations may agree upon.

Charges Against Farnell.

The Dublin National Press accuses Mr. Farnell of misappropriating certain funds, and says it will reiterate the charge in order to compel Mr. Farnell to take legal proceedings against the publishers.

Czarowitz Assailed and Enticed.

It is learned that the Japanese policeman who attacked and wounded the czarowitz while he was recently making a tour of Japan has been sentenced to penal servitude for life.

Removal of Forts Ordered.

The following recommendations of the Major General commanding have been approved by the Secretary of War: The garrisons of Fort Abraham Lincoln, North Dakota; Fort Lewis, Colorado; and Fort Shaw, Montana, will be withdrawn and the several posts named will be abandoned. The troops thus withdrawn will be assigned to other stations. The Commanding General, Department of the Missouri, is, however, authorized to retain the present garrison of Fort Lewis until the last of October next if he thinks it advisable.

FLOWERS FOR BOTH.

A UNIQUE MEMORIAL SERVICE IN BROOKLYN TABERNACLE.

Dr. Talmage Preaches a Sermon About the Soldiers of the Civil War, and Offers a Garland for the North and One for the South.

Dr. Talmage's sermon, last Sunday, was from the following text: Isaiah xliii, 6—"I will say to the North, Give up, and to the South, Keep not back."

Just what my text meant by the North and South I cannot say, but in the United States the two words are so point blank in their meaning that no one can doubt. They mean more than East and West, for although between those last two there have been rivalries and silver bills and World's Fair controversies, there have been between them no batteries unlimbered, no intrenchments dug, no long lines of sepulchral mounds thrown up. It has never been Massachusetts' nineteenth Regiment against Wisconsin Zouaves; it has never been Virginia artillery against Mississippi rifles.

East and West are distinct words, and sometimes may mean diversity of interest, but there is no blood on them. They can be pronounced without any intonation of wailing and death groan. But the North and the South are words that have been surcharged with tragedies. They are words which suggest that for forty years the clouds had been gathering for a four years' tempest which thirty years ago burst in a fury that shook this planet as it has never been shaken since it swung out at the first world building.

I thank God that the words have lost some of the intensity which they possessed three decades ago; that a vast multitude of Southern people have moved North and there have been intermarriages by the ten thousand, and Northern colonels have married the daughters of Southern captains, and Texas rangers have united for life with the daughters of New York abolitionists, and their children are half Northern and half Southern and altogether patriotic. But North and South are words that need to be brought into still closer harmonization.

I thought that now, when we are half way between presidential elections, and now just after a presidential journey, when our chief magistrate, who was chiefly elected by the North, has been cordially received at the South; and now, just after two Memorial Days, one of them a month ago, strewing flowers on Southern graves, and the other yesterday, strewing flowers on Northern graves, it might be appropriate and useful for me to preach a sermon which would twist two garlands, one for the Northern dead and the other for the Southern dead, and have the two interlocked in a chain of flowers that shall bind forever the two sections into one; and who knows but that this may be the day when the prophecy of the text made in regard to the ancients may be fulfilled in regard to this country, and the South give up its prejudices and the North keep not back its confidence. "I will say to the North, Give up, and to the South, Keep not back."

But before I put these garlands on the graves I mean to put them this morning a little while on the brows of the living men and women of the North and South who lost husbands and sons and brothers during the civil strife. There is nothing more soothing to a wound than a cool bandage, and these two garlands are cool from the night dew. What a morning that was on the banks of the Hudson and the Savannah when the son was to start for the war! What fatherly and motherly counsel! What tears! What heartbreaks! What charges to write home often! What little keepsakes put away in the knapsack!

The crowd around the depot or the steamboat landing shouted, but father mother and sister cried. And how lonely the house seemed after they went home, and what an awfully vacant chair there was at the Christmas and Thanksgiving table! And after the battle, what waiting for news! What suspense till the long lists of the killed and wounded were made out! All along the Potomac, and the Connecticut, and the St. Lawrence, and the Ohio, and the Oregon, and the James, and the Allegheny, and the Alabama, and the Mississippi, and the Sacramento, there were lamentation and mourning and great weeping. Rachel weeping for her children, and refusing to be comforted because they were not. The world has forgotten it, but father and mother have not forgotten it. They may be now in the eighties or the nineties, but it is a fresh wound, and will always remain a fresh wound.

Coming down the steep of years the hands that would have steadied those tottering steps have been twenty-eight years folded into the last sleep. The childlessness, the widowhood, the orphanage—who has a measuring line long enough to tell the height of it, the depth of it, the infinity of it? What a mountain, what an Alps, what a Himalaya of piled up agony of bereavement! In the simple statement that three hundred thousand men of the North were slain and five hundred thousand men of the South were slain, and hundreds of thousands long afterward, through the exhaustions there suffered, going down to death!

I detain from the top of the tomb these two garlands that I am twisting for a little while that I may with them soothe the brow of the living. Over the fallen the people said: "Poor fellow! What a pity that he should have been struck down!" We did not, however, often enough say: "Poor father! Poor mother! Poor wife! Poor child!" and so I say it now. Have you realized that by that wholesale massacre hundreds of thousands of young people at the North and the South have never had any chance? We who are fathers stand between our children and the world. We fight their battles, we plan for their welfare, we achieve their livelihood, we give them the advice of our superior years. Among the richest blessings of my life I thank God that my father lived to fight my battles until I was old enough to fight for myself.

Have you realized the fact that our civil war pitched out upon the farm-fields of the North and the plantations of the South a multitude that no man can number, children without fatherly help and protection? Under all the advantages which we had of fatherly guidance, what a struggle life has been to the most of us! But what of the children, two and five and ten years of age, who stood at their mother's lap with great, round, wondering eyes, hearing her read of those who perished in the Battle of the Wilderness, their father gone down amid the dead host? Come, young men and women, who by such disaster have had to make your own way in life, and I will put the garland on your young and unwrinkled brow. Yes; you have had your own Malvern Hill, and your own South Mountain, and your own Gettysburg all along these twenty years. Come! And if I cannot spare a whole garland for your brow I will twist in your locks at least two flowers, one crimson and one white, the crimson for the struggle of your life which has almost amounted to carnage, and the white for the victory you have gained.

Before I put the two garlands I am twisting upon the Northern and Southern tombs I detain the garlands a little while that I may put them upon the brow of the living soldiers and sailors of the North and South, who though in variance for a long while are now at peace and in hearty loyalty to the United States Government, and ready if need be to march shoulder to shoulder against any foreign foe. The twenty-six winters that have passed since the war, I think, have sufficiently cooled the hatreds that once burned northward and southward to allow the remark that they who fought in that conflict were honest on both sides. The chaplains of both armies were honest in their prayers. The faces that went into battle, whether they marched toward the Gulf of Mexico or marched toward the north star, were honest faces.

As chaplain of a Pennsylvania regiment and as a representative of the United States Christian Commission I was for a while at the front, and in those hospitals at Hagerstown and Williamsburg, and up and down the Potomac, where all the churches and farm houses were filled with wounded and dying Federal and Confederate, I forgot amid the horrors to ask on which side I could take them for their suffering bodies and the mightier aid I could pray for their souls. I passed the days and months amid scenes that in my memory seem like a ghostly dream rather than possible reality.

When a New Orleans boy, unable to answer my question as to where he was hurt, took out from the folds of the old garment that had not been torn off him in the battle a New Testament marked with his own life blood, and I saw the leaf turned down at the passage, "My peace I give unto you, not as the world giveth, give I unto you," it read just as though it had been a Northern New Testament. And when I sat down and took from a South Carolina dying in a barn at Boonesville his last message to his wife and mother and child, it sounded just like a message that a Northern man dying far from home would send to his wife and mother and child.

And when I picked up from the battle field of Antietam the fragment of a letter which I have somewhere yet, for the name and address were torn off, I saw it was the words of a wife to her husband, telling him how the little child prayed for their father every night that he might not get hurt in the battle, and might come home sound and come home well, but that if anything happened to them they might meet again in the world where there are no partings. It read just as a Northern wife would write to a husband away from home and in peril, conveying the messages of little children. Oh, yes; they were honest on both sides, and those who lived to get home and are living yet were just as honest, and ought they not for the suffering they endured have a coronal of some kind?

Yes, there was courage on both sides. They who were at the front know that. When the war opened the South called the Northern men "mudsills," and the North called the Southern men "braggarts" and "pompous nothings," but after a few battles nothing more was said about Northern "mudsills" and Southern "braggarts." It was an army of lions against an army of lions. It was a flock of eagles mid-sky with iron beak against another flock of eagles iron beaked. It was thunderbolt against thunderbolt. It was archangel of wrath against archangel of wrath. It was Hancock against Longstreet. It was Kilpatrick against Wade Hampton. It was Slocum against Hill. It was O. O. Howard against Hood. It was Sherman against Stonewall Jackson. It was Grant against Lee. And the men who were under them were just as gallant, and some of them are here, and I detain the two garlands that I have twisted for the departed, and in recognition of honesty and prowess put the coronals upon these living Federals and Confederates. North and South, we will make a great fuss about them when they are dead.

There will not be room on their tombstones to tell how much we appreciate them. We shall call out the military and explode three volleys over their graves, making all the cemetery ring under our command of "Fire!" We will have long obituaries in newspapers telling in what battles they fought, what sacrifices they endured, what flags they captured, in what prisons they suffered, but all that will come too late. One word in the living ear of praise for their honesty and courage will be worth to them more than a military funeral two miles long, or a pile of flowers half a mile high, and ten bands of music playing over the grave "Star Spangled Banner" or "Way Down South in Dixie."

Now, while they are in their declining years, and their right knees refuse to work because of the rheumatism they got sleeping on the wet ground on the banks of the Chickamauga, or their digestive organs are off on a furlough because of the six months of prison life, in which their rations were but small slices of nothing, and their ears have never been alert since the cannonade in which they heard so much that they have been able to hear but little since—in these cases I call upon the people of North and South to substitute a little antemortem praise for the good deal of post-mortem eulogium. These two garlands that I twisted for Northern and Southern graves shall not be put upon the grass of the tomb until they have first encircled the foreheads of the living. I will let the front of the wreath come down over the scar of a scalp wound made by the sword of a cavalier at Atlanta, and drop a little over the eye that lost its luster in the mine explosion at Petersburg. Huzza for the living! Calla lilies and camellias and amaranths and palm branches for the living!

But we must not detain the two garlands any longer from the pillows of those who, for a quarter of a century, have been prostrate in dreamless slumber, never oppressed by summer heats or chilled by winter's cold. Both garlands are fragrant. Both have in them the sunshine and the shower of this springtime. The colors of both were mixed by Him who mixed the blue of the sky, and the gold of the sunset, and the green of the grass, and the whiteness of the snow crystal. And I care not which you put over the Northern grave and which over the Southern grave. Does any one say: "What is the use? None of them will know it. Your Decoration Days both sides Mason and Dixon's line are a great waste of flowers." Ah! I see you have carried too far my idea that praise for the living is better than praise for the departed. Who says that the dead do not know of the flowers? I think they do. The dead are not dead. The body sleeps, but the soul lives and is unhidden.

These August throngs gathered this morning in these pews and aisles and corridors and galleries are insignificant compared with the mightier throngs of Heaven who mingle in this service which we render to God and our country while we twist the two garlands. Hail, spirits multitudinous! Hail, spirits blest! Hail, martyred ones come down from the King's palaces! How glad we are that you have come back again. Take this kiss of welcome and these garlands of reminiscence, ye who languished in the hospitals, or went down under the thunders and the lightnings of Fredericksburg and Cold Harbor and Murfreesboro and Corinth and Yorktown and above the clouds of Lookout Mountain.

Among the thousands of gatherings at the North and at the South for Decoration Days I am conscious that this service is unique, and that it is the only one in which there has been twisted two garlands, one for the grave of the Northern dead and the other for the grave of the Southern dead. O, Lord God of the American Union, is it time that we bury forever our old grudges? My! My! Can we not be at peace on earth when this moment in Heaven dwell, in perfect love, Ulysses S. Grant and Robert E. Lee, William T. Sherman and Stonewall Jackson, and tens of thousands of Northern and Southern men who, though they once looked askance at each other from the opposite banks of the Potomac and the Chickahominy and the James and the Tennessee, now are on the same side of the river, keeping jubilee with some of those old angels who near nineteen centuries ago came down one Christmas night to chant over Bethlehem, "Glory to God in the highest; on earth peace, good will to men?"

And now I hand over the two garlands, both of which are wet with many tears—tears of widowhood and orphanage and childlessness, tears of suffering and tears of gratitude, and as the ceremony must be performed in symbol, there not being enough flowers to cover all the graves, take the one garland to the tomb of some Northern soldier who may yesterday have been omitted in the distribution of the sacrament of flowers, and the other garland to the tomb of some Southern soldier who may a month ago have been omitted in the distribution of the sacrament of the flowers, and put both the wreaths gently down over the hearts that have ceased to beat. God bless the two garlands! God save the United States of America!

The Language of the Face.

The faculty of truth—that is, the love of it—is indicated by the muscle which surrounds the eye, causing folds and wrinkles. Justice is indicated by the muscle which causes perpendicular wrinkles between the eyebrows. Fullness and wrinkles under the eye, for which some persons are remarkable, indicate the love of mathematical accuracy; and curving upward from the lower angle of the eye and eyebrow indicate probity or personal truthfulness. There are three degrees of the faculty of justice. The first is a kind of exactness or strict accuracy in small money matters, which some people would call closeness, and is indicated by a singular perpendicular wrinkle or line between the eyebrows. The second is a disposition to require justice in others, and is indicated by two perpendicular lines, or wrinkles, one on each side of the center—a very common sign. The third degree is conscientiousness, or the disposition to apply the rule of justice to one's self, and is indicated by three or more wrinkles, or lines, especially noticeable, extending above the eyebrow when the muscle is in action. The love of command is indicated by one or more short, transverse wrinkles across the root of the nose, exactly between the eyes. It may be seen in great military commanders, in masters and teachers, and in those generally who are fond of exercising authority. In those who are wanting in the power to command, and have no desire for responsibility, this sign is absent. The faculty of command frequently acts with that part of justice which reprimands or requires others to do right, and both together produce that frowning and lowering brow which is so terrible to evil-doers or to those who love to be approved rather than condemned.—Phrenological Journal.

Winter Health Resorts.

The Sanitarium gives some common-sense advice to invalids with chronic pulmonary disease in search of a home for the winter. Cease troubling yourselves, it says, about the range of the thermometer, the height of the hills or mountains, or with the certificates of persons who wish to say a kind word for this or that hotel, or the kindly treatment received. Study the weather charts; and the place which has the largest proportion of clear days—places which will admit of outdoor exercise daily, are the best. Clothing will do the rest. Cold climate and clear weather, in clean places, free from dust, and sufficient woolen clothing, are only equalled—not surpassed—by the balmy air of a Southern resort, with only an equal proportion of clear days. Not the northern or the southern location, but the clear weather and clear atmosphere of a place, are the conditions most favorable to such invalids.

For this latitude, in conjunction with agreeable conditions, invalids will do well to consider the advantages of Newport. For persons who, in the opinion of their physicians, or from supersensitiveness to cold, require a warmer climate, the Bermudas offer unsurpassable attractions. Florida and the gulf coast from Galveston to New Orleans also present a delightfully balmy winter beat for both sportsmen and invalids, who would be much out of doors. For a drier atmosphere, go to the high lands in the interior of the Carolinas and Georgia; and for those who would go further, New Mexico and Southern California offer conditions of healthfulness equal to any in the world.

MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE.

On the 27th Margaret Scott, the Superintendent of the Adrian Industrial Home for Girls, who is charged by the Senate committee with cruel punishment of the waifs in her charge, telegraphed to the Governor a general denial of the truth of the committee's report, and followed it up with a crisp telegram to Senator Gilbert, Chairman of the committee. In this message Miss Scott says: "After reading abstracts of your committee's report in the morning papers I wired the board to attend a meeting tomorrow. The charges you make are so serious and so lacking foundation in fact that the board and myself demand a prompt and full investigation. Will you communicate to the Senate these facts and this general denial of the charges?" Chairman Gilbert promptly replied to the Superintendent as follows: "The Secretary of the Senate will, as soon as possible, send you and the board a complete report as presented by the committee and you can make such answer as you may deem best. I am surprised from the evidence adduced that you should deny the charges in the report." The House passed the Markworth bill, which submits to a vote of the people at the election in the fall of 1892 a proposition to call a convention for a general revision of the Constitution.

On the 28th, the House Ways and Means Committee recommended the sum of $125,000 for the State exhibit at the World's Fair, and consideration of the measure was made the special order for the 3d. An attempt will be made to increase the sum to $150,000. The Railroad Committee reported adversely the Richardson bill which proposed an increase of the specific tax on gross earnings of express companies from 2 1/2 to 6 per cent. The Senate Judiciary Committee reported adversely the bill prohibiting importation of Pinkerton men into the State for police duty. The Senate passed a bill providing for winding up affairs of corporations whose charters have passed; also providing for commencement of election proceedings in such cases. The House passed bills providing for a uniform classification of accounts in state institutions. Authorizing incorporations of supreme and subordinate hives of the Lady Macabees.

On the 29th, Representative Dickman's kindergarten bill passed the House. It allows school boards at their option to introduce kindergarten in the district schools. The Senate passed the House bill appropriating $92,320 for the Normal School at Ypsilanti. The Governor has signed the bill allowing the State Militia Board to increase the number of companies in the State service from thirty-six to forty. The law cannot be made operative for another year, as the board has neither the money nor equipment for the new companies. Ironwood, Owosso and Cheboygan have made formal application for admission into the State service.

What is "Cognac?"

A Berlin journal, quoted in the current Board of Trade Journal, inquires what the French themselves understand by "cognac." The district of Charente is the place of origin of real "cognac," and has during the last seven years produced an average of 20,000 hectolitres, while the annual export by France of liquor known as "cognac" has exceeded seven times this quantity. In trade "cognac" is usually understood to be a brandy obtained by the distillation of wine, and which was formerly known as French brandy; but it has been shown by analysis, and in a bulky volume issued by the State Department of Hygiene, that there is no reliable method of distinguishing real brandy distilled from wine from the spurious. So it is interesting to have a decision of a French court of law as to what it understands by the word "cognac." A merchant of Angouleme, who bought brandy in Valenciennes and labeled it "cognac," was prosecuted for so doing, but was acquitted on the ground that the word "cognac" is not to be exclusively understood as descriptive of the place of production, but often, as in the present instance, as descriptive of the nature of the product. According to this decision it is to be regarded as sufficient when labels announce the nature of the goods to which they are affixed, and it is not requisite that the contents of a bottle should have been produced in the place mentioned on the label. This decision is not consistent with sentences pronounced by various French law courts upon manufactures of sparkling wines, who have been heavily fined for introducing into trade wines which they described as "champagne," and which had undergone a similar process to that of the genuine article, but had not been made from wine grown in the champagne district.—St. James Gazette.

MICHIGAN HAPPENINGS.

INCIDENTS THAT HAVE LATELY OCCURRED.

An Interesting Summary of the More Important Doings of Our Neighbors—Weddings and Deaths—Crimes, Casualties, and General News Notes.

A COUPLE of verdant Monroe County elopers, both deaf mutes, wandered into Toledo to get married. They could not make it, and left for Monroe to carry out their original intention.

JOSEPH HARG, a farmer living near Saginaw, was killed by the discharge of a shotgun he was loading.

A HUNDRED MILLION feet of logs have been bought in the Upper Peninsula by the Hall & Munson Lumber Company, of Saginaw. The logs belonged to Alger, Smith & Company, are to be shipped by rail to Bay Mills, and cost $1,500,000. It will take five years to fill the contract.

THE streams of Alcona County, are bristling with trout, the result of a planting four years ago. Cora Anthony, of Killmaster, is so far the champion this season, having landed a speckled beauty which weighed 6 1/2 pounds.

REV. FATHER O'BRIEN, of Kalamazoo, recently called for twenty-five persons to subscribe $100 each for the Leflore Institute and sixty responded. The unusual feature of more money being raised than was asked surprised the priest. Eight thousand dollars has been subscribed—more than half enough to build the college.

WHILE unloading ore from the schooner Sale at Hammond Bay the mizenmast, to which had been attached a block for hoisting ore, broke ten feet below the cross-tree, and Horn King, a sailor, had his brains knocked out. Another sailor named Edwin Zeist had his left arm broken and was otherwise injured. Several others received slight injuries.

TWO MEN found a boy's skeleton in the woods near Tawas the other day. A few pieces of clothing were recognized as part of the suit Daniel Long wore when he disappeared three years ago. The parents claimed the whitened bones and buried them in the family lot.

LUKE COONEY, of Kalamazoo, has secured a verdict of $2,084 damages against Nehemiah Chase for malicious prosecution. He has also begun a second suit for a like amount, claiming Mr. Chase owes it to him as administrator of the M. B. Shaw estate.

I HEARD an elderly gentleman patronizingly say to a man not yet away from the delicious privileges of youth: "Yes, he's well informed, but he has learned about all he knows from observation." The speaker was a learned man in the bookish sense and is not to be patronized because of it, but he has observed so poorly that he did not realize how stupid it was in him to patronize the man who has observed well. In these days of whole continents of paper and oceans of ink, with steam and electricity as controlling powers, the man who has not become learned by observation is not, in the language of the street, "a James dandy."—Free Press.

DICK BASSETT, the Grand Traverse hermit, has been made happy. He served throughout the war with a Western regiment, and served with great gallantry. He was several times wounded in battle, and to this day carries three or four rebel bullets around in his body. During his wanderings after the war he lost his papers, and was unable to prove up his claim for a pension. This did not worry him particularly, as the fish of Traverse Bay and the product of his island home are sufficient for his purposes. Last fall the interesting story of his life was told to the Detroit News, together with a description of his hermit home and his mode of living. The paper fell into the hands of the Captain of the company in which Bassett served during the war. The Captain lives in the East, and remembering Bassett as one of his boys, he opened communication with the hermit. The correspondence has resulted in Bassett getting a pension, with a goodly sum of arrears, the Captain being able to furnish the missing links in the chain of evidence required at the pension office.

At Marquette Walenty Nowak, Sr., convicted of the murder of Smith, was sentenced to twenty-five years' imprisonment in the Upper Peninsula branch of the penitentiary. Young Nowak was acquitted.

Mrs. RICHARD DEKOR, of Kalamazoo, in attempting to put out flames caused by the explosion of an oil stove, was nearly burned to death. Her clothes in flames, she jumped into a cistern and saved her life.

FATHER WELCH, of Schoolcraft, twice refused a tramp victuals, the other evening, and pretty soon his home was in ashes, including a fine library. There was only $1,000 insurance.

Miss M. L. GRIGGS, of St. Charles, killed herself. She tied a rag around her neck and died from strangulation. She was 59 years old, was once a student at the Patti Creek College, and is said to have hurt her mind by overwork.

CADILLAC has the promise of a $10,000 depot, to be built by the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad.

DURING the past two years 1,700 men applied for marriage licenses at Port Huron, and an even fourth of them were unable to read or write.

"Do you know I tried, a couple of years ago, to get up a branch of the Blavatsky's theosophical organization in this city, yet I failed, although I was listened to most attentively by all to whom I made advances." The above confession, made by a well-known Detroit lawyer, was followed by the question: "Do you believe in theosophy?" and the gentleman addressed answered, "Most assuredly I have implicit faith in the very, very little I know of the science; but that is the trouble, I know too little and most of the people I invited knew so much less that my effort was a failure." Then he offered to wager an elaborate dinner for six persons that in less than a year there would be a large and flourishing body of theosophists residents of Detroit.

Water Works Extension.

The week has been an important one, in a municipal sense. It witnessed the consummation of all previous efforts and labors for the further efficiency of our system of water works and its extension for fire protection and domestic purposes.

In answer to fifty circular letters with descriptive plans and specifications sent out by the clerk of the board of water commissioners to as many different houses and firms, the board, when they met on Monday noon, had the satisfaction of opening nineteen bids, sent in from different parts of the country. Many of these firms had their personal representatives on the grounds, and for several days the members of the board devoted their personal time and attention in taking contractors over the territory, explaining the nature of the work involved and imparting such general information as was required.

The competition was rather close. The highest bid for delivering all the material and doing all the work was $19,871.55, from The Heidenreich Company, of Chicago, Ill. The lowest was from the Dowagiac Construction Co., of Dowagiac, Mich., for $14,692.25. The board thereupon set out to select the lowest bidder for each of the several parts, and after careful computation they found as follows:

1. Furnishing Pipe—Addyston Pipe and Steel Co., Cincinnati, O., $8,500.
2. Laying pipe, etc.—Dowagiac Construction Co., $3,650.
3. Furnishing Hydrants and Gates—Bourbon Copper and Brass Works, Cincinnati, O., $1,550.
4. Furnishing Gate Boxes—M. Walker, Port Huron, Mich., $182.

These several items, footing up $13,882, leave the total fully $800 below the lowest bid received from any one firm for the entire work.

Contracts were awarded by the board in accordance with the above findings, and their action was confirmed by the Common Council. The work must be completed by the 15th of September. The appointment of a superintendent by the city, has not yet been made. The iron is ready to be shipped, and the contractor also is anxious to begin at once.

The amount voted last April was $17,950, while the total of all the contracts foots up only $13,882. In view of this margin the board of Water Commissioners recommended, as additional, the laying of a four-inch main on Eleventh street, between Cedar and Market streets, with a hydrant in the rear of the Central school premises; also to increase the proposed main on Twelfth street from Maple street to Harrison Ave and thence to Tenth street from four inches to six inches: all of which was adopted by the Common Council. Of the new hydrants six will be three-way hydrants.

The parties to whom the furnishing of the pipe has been awarded are the same, though under a different name that supplied the city eight years ago. They were so well satisfied with the dealings they had had with our people then, that they made it their boast in advance of again coming out successful bidders. It appears further that a very opportune time has been selected for to do this work, inasmuch as there are but three places in Michigan just now where they are similarly employed.

The Latest in Railroading.

Our neighbors at Allegan, Saugatuck and Douglas felt considerably alarmed, last week, by a telegram from Ohio, published in the leading daily papers, that their pet railroad project, the Columbus, Lima & Milwaukee Railroad, which they have been nursing for two years, was about to slip away from them. This road as is well known has already been partly built up to the Michigan state line, and it has been the hope of our neighbors that in making its western terminus at Milwaukee, the line would be established via Allegan to Saugatuck and thence by steamboat line across Lake Michigan.

The reports referred to had it that this projected C. L. & M. railroad had actually passed under the control of the Norfolk & Western railroad, which runs from Chattanooga, Tenn., to Ironton, on the Ohio side of the Ohio river and will eventually be extended to Norfolk, Va. Eastern capitalists, among whom Gov. Hill of New York and Postmaster-General Wanamaker are named, were to invest and push the project by connecting the two roads at Columbus, O., and complete the western end of the line to Lake Michigan. At the head of the enterprise is Dudley Farlin, a capitalist and railroad man of Albany, N. Y. In a published interview his manager has been reported as saying: "Yes, it's a fact that Mr. Farlin has purchased the C. L. & M. Instead of running it to South Haven or Holland on Lake Michigan, he will build it to Muskegon.

From there steamers will run to Mackinac, Marquette and Duluth. It is also a fact that he is interested in the Norfolk & Western and will build it through the coalfields of Ohio to Columbus. When it is completed the road will be almost a straight line from Muskegon, Mich., to Norfolk, Va., and will tap the copper, iron, lumber, salt and fruit districts of Michigan, the petroleum and coal of Ohio and the coal, iron, lumber, turpentine and tobacco of Virginia. It will run through Coldwater, Battle Creek, Grand Rapids and thence to Muskegon." The route has already been surveyed.

The impression created by the above with the citizens of Saugatuck is thus expressed in the Record: "If the above is correct this community may be said to be 'in the soup up to their neck.' It will be noticed that Saugatuck is not mentioned, also that 'the route has been surveyed.' No other port than Saugatuck has ever been mentioned in connection with the C. L. & M., and to no other place has a survey been made, hence we are of the opinion that the sender of the telegram was 'off his base' and did not know what he was writing. We still believe that we shall secure the road, and will not give up till we see it completed to some other point."

At Allegan likewise they are still very hopeful. Says the Journal: "This deal would leave Allegan and Saugatuck entirely off the route, and as it was essentially different from anything that J. H. Padgham, the Michigan attorney of the road, had intimated our reporter laid the matter before him and asked him what there was in it. That gentleman smiled as he remarked that it was surprising how big a story could be built on a very small foundation of fact, and then stated that the road had not been sold as reported, but that negotiations with New York capitalists were proceeding satisfactorily and would undoubtedly be closed up in a few days, and that the road would then be built at once and terminate at Saugatuck, as originally determined, and that connections were being arranged with other roads so that a large and prosperous business would be assumed from the start."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Stands at the head of all blood medicines. This position it has secured by its intrinsic merit, sustained by the opinion of leading physicians, and by the certificates of thousands who have successfully tested its remedial worth. No other medicine so effectually

Scrofula, boils, pimples, rheumatism, catarrh, and all other blood diseases.

"There can be no question as to the superiority of Ayer's Sarsaparilla over all other blood-purifiers. If this was not the case, the demand for it, instead of increasing yearly, would have ceased long ago, like so many other blood medicines I could name."—F. L. Nickerson, Druggist, 75 Chelsea st., Charlestown, Mass.

"Two years ago I was troubled with salt-rheum. It was all over my body, and nothing the doctors did for me was of any avail. At last I took four bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and was completely cured. I can sincerely recommend it as a splendid blood-purifier."—J. S. Burt, Upper Keswick, New Brunswick.

"My sister was afflicted with a severe case of

SCROFULA

Our doctor recommended Ayer's Sarsaparilla as being the best blood-purifier within his experience. We gave her this medicine, and a complete cure was the result."—Wm. O. Jenkins, Dewese, Neb.

"When a boy I was troubled with a blood disease which manifested itself in sores on the legs. Ayer's Sarsaparilla being recommended, I took a number of bottles, and was cured. I have never since that time had a recurrence of the complaint."—J. C. Thompson, Lowell, Mass.

"I was cured of Scrofula by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—John C. Berry, Deerfield, Mo.

An exciting incident occurred at this place Sunday morning. Eugene Lyon, of Riverside, drove out here from Holland, with a rig from E. J. The Flag and the School at Zeeland.

The teachers and pupils of our Public School, having procured a national flag and 50-foot pole, invited the patrons of the school to what proved quite an interesting literary entertainment, on the occasion of the raising of the flag in the school-yard for the first time Friday afternoon. The exercises opened with singing "Marching Through Georgia," followed by the following program:

"The American Flag," (by Drake) Benj. C. Van Loo.

"History of the American Flag," a dialogue, by a number of little ones, pleasingly rendered.

Recitation, "Union and Liberty," Lena De Kruif, well executed.

Song, "Our Flag," by the Primary class.

Recitation, "Devotion to the Flag," by Bert De Pree, Jennie Mulder, John Eding and Henry De Pree. The little gem, by the latter, was most excellently rendered.

"Barbara Fritchie," by Henry Pyl, was well spoken.

"Missionary Ridge," by John De Pree, was good.

"Star Spangled Banner," by Dick Boonstra, was well recited, and then sung by the school.

"Our Flag is There" was finely given by little Walter Hellenenthal, who is one of our best little speakers.

"Wave Forever," by Willie Van Leeuwen, touched a patriotic chord and was good.

Song, "Our Flag."

The whole school then march around the school grounds, led by six year old Leenoes Dekker and Eddie Fox, beating time on their drums. The latter gave us some fine drumming.

Then followed a representation of all the States, by 36 little ones of the 3rd primary and 8 of the 1st primary rooms, each reciting a verse in good style and closing with singing "Michigan, My Michigan." This was one of the best things on the programme, and reflected creditably on each little one taking part.

Next were some fine "Patriotic Selections," by Gertie Baert, Nellie Pyl, Jennie Dekker and Annie Everhard. These were all well spoken, that by Gertie Baert, being very fine and her execution of it the very best.

Then came a Concert Recitation, "Our Colors," by Dina Engberts "The Red," Maria Dekker "The White," and Nellie Coburn "The Blue." Good.

The school then sang "The Red White and Blue."

Gracie Kas then catechised a class on "Remarkable Sayings about our Flag," which was especially good and received with shouts of approval.

Johnnie Kamps, Henry Wichers, Geo. Rokus, Willie Wentzel and Dick Fish did themselves proud in this catechism.

The school then took position around the flag-staff and the new flag was raised to the top, when Susie Noordhof recited "The National Anthem"; Tonie Elenbaas "Our Flag," and Lizzie Goozen "The Hymn of the Moravian Nuns."

Next we had a fine recitation by ten little ones, entitled "Language of the Flag."

"Battle Flags" was finely given by Martin Zoutendam.

"Flag of the Union" was given by Corie Coburn in his own dignified, forceful way. Corie gets right to the fore every time. We will stake on him and "don't you forget it."

After a few remarks by the Director on "Our Flag, the Emblem of Nationality, of Union, of Authority, of Power of Safety and of Freedom," the exercises closed by singing a National Hymn. The school then paraded on Main street and around to the Reformed church, where the procession dispersed and all wended their way homewards, pleased and satisfied.

All passed off orderly and was greatly enjoyed by our citizens. Our thanks are due to teachers and pupils for affording us so rare a treat. It reflected great credit on all.

We are very sorry to learn that the primary teacher, Miss Ida Hashbarger, will not teach after this term. She gave great satisfaction and has the unbounded confidence and respect of all the patrons of the school, and the love of all the little ones. Our best wishes follow her. May life's journey be made as pleasant for her as she has made the school journey for our little folk.

OLD SAWS IN RHYME.

Actions speak louder than words ever do;
You can't eat your cake and hold on to it too.

When the cat is away, then the little mice play;
Where there is a will there is always a way.
There's no use crying over milk that is spilt;
No accuser is needed by conscience of guilt.
There must be some fire wherever is smoke;
The pitcher goes off to the well till it's broke.

By rogues falling out, honest men get their due;
Whoever it fits, he must put on the shoe.

All work and no play will make Jack a dull boy;
A thing of much beauty is ever a joy.

A half loaf is better than no bread at all;
And pride always goeth before a sad fall.

Fast bind and fast find, have two strings to your bow;
Contentment is better than riches, we know.

The devil finds work for hands idle to do,
A mis is as good as a mile is to you.

You speak of the devil, he's sure to appear;
You can't make a silk purse from out of a sow's ear.

A man by his company always is known;
Who lives in a glass house should not throw a stone.

Speech may be silver, but silence is gold;
There's never a fool like the fool who is old.

A RACE FOR A HOME.

BY CHARLES M. HARGER.

A flock of mammoth white-winged birds, resting for a moment upon the crest of a billow of prairie that was the picture presented by the new town of Leoti. It was but a few days old, and yet its residents looked westward and saw the blue cloud-like form of Pike's Peak looming above the horizon, such was their faith in their venture that their own town appeared destined to be no less permanent than the great backbone of earth a hundred and fifty miles distant.

Willis Emmet rode his pony slowly as he came in view of the tented city. "Not much of a show for a fellow," he thought, and he compared the place with his native Eastern town, with its heavy brick and stone structures and its tree-lined streets.

But he had little reason or disposition to muse over the past. Family reverses had taken him from college just after his twenty-first birthday anniversary, and he had come West "to grow up with the country," with little to build upon but his native pluck, for his father's blessing was not very available as assets.

He had heard so much of this growing western Kansas town, that now he had reached it he was somewhat disappointed. It was so new and so temporary to his eyes. A close glance could only detect a few frame buildings, and they were small and unpainted.

Entering the place, he rode directly to the first "land office" sign and interviewed the agent regarding the possibility of finding a good claim, or one hundred and sixty acres of land, to pre-empt.

"Haven't a single quarter-section to show you nearer than six miles," replied that individual, rubbing his hands. "I control nearly all the business here, and I assure you that'll be the best you can do. I'll sell you—"

"No," interrupted the new comer, "I'm not ready to buy."

Indeed the few dollars his pocket contained would have gone but a short distance toward a purchase.

The agent was accommodating enough, however, to show him a tent where he could sleep for the night, and left him with the remark that they would "look around to-morrow."

Somewhat disappointed, Willis lay back on his canvas cot and watched the sun go down that evening. The light flooded the haze-rimmed circle of prairie and changed dark grasses to gold. The tent-tops rose and fell steadily in the breeze, a meadow lark balanced and trilled on a tall sunflower near by, and the homesick adventurer was nodding with drowsiness, when a strange young man of about his own age appeared at the opening of the tent.

It was his room mate, a young surveyor, who had been assisting in locating the line of the new railroad, which was to make Leoti great.

"Good evening," exclaimed Willis, for his experience with the West had taught him that good-natured boldness was the best policy. "I heard that you had room for another lodger in this hotel, so I made myself at home."

"Why, yes," was the reply. "I am 'barking,' you see, but I guess you can get in since everything else is full."

They introduced themselves with slight formality, and when they went to the shanty, called by courtesy a "hotel," for supper they were on the best of terms.

Returning, Willis threw himself upon the cot and gave his hat a careless toss upon the floor of the tent.

The young surveyor, entering, stumbled over it, picked it up, gazed curiously at the hat-band, and exclaimed:

"So you're one of us?"

"One of whom?"

"Of the Phi Kappa Psi's," and he pointed to the three Greek letters of the stranger's college society, which were traced upon the band.

"Let's have the grip," said Willis laughing, "it will seem natural."

It was given heartily, and the two were as intimate in a short time as a year's ordinary acquaintance could have made them.

Their talk reverted to Western life and its opportunities, and Willis told of his dreams and his disappointments.

"I can help you, Mr. Emmet," said the other, starting up, his eyes fairly snapping in the darkness.

"How? Give me some work?"

"No, to get some land. I happen to know that there is a good quarter-section of government land on the other side of the town on which no claim has been filed. It joins the town site and will be valuable."

"When the boom strikes us it can be laid out in lots, I suppose," suggested Willis.

"I wouldn't be surprised," said the surveyor eagerly. "The land agent has been keeping people off it by telling them it has been claimed. He has it marked so on his maps. He is holding it for his brother-in-law, whom he expects out from the East?"

"Why don't you take it?"

"I can't; I've a claim entered on another quarter-section already. I only found it out a few days ago and have said nothing about it."

"But your friends?"

"I have no intimate friends near here. I expected some through soon and would have given them the chance, but I heard this morning that old Mosely, the teamster, had a bonanza claim in view, and I know from certain actions of his that it is this one. I'd rather you'd get it. You will have to go to W— to the United States Land Office to enter your application. It is sixty-five miles away, but if you are quick you can make it by to-morrow night."

Willis thanked his friend heartily, and began preparations for an early start, while the surveyor took a walk down the tent-lined street to look after Mosely. In a few minutes he returned much excited.

"You must start immediately," he exclaimed. "Mosely left about noon. No one knows where he has gone, but I am certain he is on his way to W—. Is your pony fresh?"

"Yes, I only rode six miles to-day," "Good! You had better get started right off. There's a settler's cabin fifteen miles from here, and you can put up for a little rest. You will reach it before midnight."

Taking a description of the claim hastily penciled on a piece of paper and mounting his pony, the young home-seeker cantered away through the darkness.

Only the faintest semblance of a road showed itself, but he was used to the prairies, and with the deep blue sky above lighted by diamond points that shine, brighter through the rarified air of the prairies than nearer the sea, he guided his way by Polaris and made brisk time.

When he reached the cabin of which the surveyor had told him, he saw light streaming from the window, and looking in, there was a girl poring over a book by the illumination furnished by a cheap lamp. Hearing the knock, she came quickly to the door.

"Oh," said she, startled as she saw a stranger before her, "I thought it was brother Will, he went to town and has not returned. I am waiting for him."

"Can I stay here until morning?" was Willis's question.

"Why, yes, if you can sleep on the floor or in the chair; we have one lodger already."

This was news, and a description was eagerly asked for.

"An old man," she said, "very tall and stooped, with nose and chin that seemed to be approaching each other."

This tallied with the surveyor's word-picture of Mosely, and Willis was satisfied.

It was already midnight and after confiding part of his story to his hostess, the traveler proceeded to make the most of the room's resources as a lodging place. The brother did not return and the girl retired to rest in another part of the house, where her father and the other lodger were sleeping.

It was perhaps four o'clock when, as Willis was peacefully snoring in the big arm-chair, he was awakened to see his new acquaintance standing beside him.

"He has gone," she whispered.

"Who? Mosely?"

"Yes."

"Without breakfast?"

"He said he had lunch with him in his wagon."

Willis was wide awake now to the necessity of quick action. Thanking the girl for her kindness and the lunch she had prepared, he brought his pony from the barn where it had made a good meal, and swinging into the saddle was again on his way.

Sunrise came and the soft-toned blue of the heavens, the deepening green of the prairie and the pink flush where they met made a picture such as only the plains of the West can furnish.

Soon, a long distance ahead, jogging along at a tolerably fast rate, he discerned the white mules and spring wagon of his rival. The sun was an hour high before he caught up with him, for Willis was too good a horseman to tire his steed at the beginning of a race.

"Hello!" he shouted, "where are you going?"

"Ter Wanda, air you?"

"Yes."

"Arter land like the rest of 'em, I 'spose?"

"They all seem to want land, that's a fact," was the evasive reply and during the remainder of the ride Willis kept the conversation chiefly on the subject of crops, weather and the like.

At last, after a mile of companionship he did not dare risk it longer and putting the spurs to his pony he left Mosely and his mules behind.

Forging on ahead he gained steadily all the forenoon and long before the horseman halted for noon-day rest, five miles from Wanda, the old teamster had ceased to be within his range of vision.

After a brief stop Willis went on and in a short time was cantering down the streets of the land office town. He drew up at the office and was rejoiced to find the surveyor's words correct and the land unentered. He took it as a home-stead, paid the fees, and had less than five dollars remaining in his pocket.

Going to the single hotel the place afforded the new landowner asked to be shown a room and ordered dinner sent there. He did not care to meet his rival if possible to avoid it.

In half an hour he saw the testy teamster come rattling along the street slashing the mules with a long snake-whip, and make for the land office. When after a moment he came out there was an expression on his face that boded no good to the person who had outgeneraled him. Then he came to the hotel.

Willis did not leave his room that afternoon or evening. He was not exactly afraid of Mosely, but thought it better to slip out quietly in the morning and return to Leoti.

But as he stepped out into the dingy hall of the hotel at dawn who should be the first man he met but the burly teamster;

"Say," was Mosely's first words, "you know that land I was goin' to claim?" Willis was not supposed to know, as his questioner had told him nothing of it, but the old man was so full of his subject that the listener nodded his head affirmatively.

"Waal," Mosely went on, "some galoot got in ahead of me; claimed it yesterday mornin', too. The villin's name was Em—by the way, what's yer name?" He had not asked it the day before, and a shrewd suspicion seemed to have just entered his head.

Willis started to give a fictitious name, but he was never much of an actor, and his face betrayed him.

"Great scott! I believe you're the fellow," exclaimed Mosely.

His suspicion was too strong to be overcome, and Willis pleaded guilty.

The old fellow was at first inclined to be angry, but when his successful rival had related his story he calmed down and apparently enjoyed the narration.

"Tell yer what I'll do," he offered when it was finished, "I'll gin yer three hundred dollars fer yer bargain."

The money was a temptation, and as the bills were counted down on a chair by the anxious teamster, the owner was almost induced to take it. But he did not, nor yet when the amount was raised to five hundred dollars.

So they patched up a piece and rode home to Leoti together.

The town of Leoti grew rapidly, and the tents were soon replaced with modern frame and brick structures. To-day it is one of the most thriving cities of the plains, and has around it a well-formed country dotted with smaller villages.—(Yankee Blade.)

MOUSE FOR BAIT.

A New Way of Catching Fish in Colorado.

We have recently learned some interesting facts concerning the Colorado trout and trout streams from Thomas Withers, civil engineer, and Deputy United States Land Surveyor for the State of Colorado. Mr. Withers has been in Washington, and while there collected some useful information preparatory to establishing a trout hatchery on a beautiful stream owned by him near Denver. He will probably make a special effort to get the native red-bellied trout (Salmo purpuratus), and devote considerable attention to its propagation. Mr. Withers is an enthusiastic fisherman and well posted as to the habits of the trout. He states that the helgramite is extremely common in the north fork of the Platte, and its fly form, which is there known as the willow fly, is one of the best natural foods for trout, and, also, one of the most excellent baits of the region.

Mr. Withers gives a very amusing account of the capture of large trout at Buffalo, near Denver, on the South Fork Railroad. There is in that vicinity a so-called mouse, which has the habit of going into the water very freely, and on this account we suppose the animal to be one of the shrews, probably the common shrew (Neosorex palustris), which is the largest of the shrews aquatic in their habits. It grows to a length of six inches, including the tail, which is two and a half inches long. It is found from Massachusetts to the Rocky Mountains and northward. The muzzle of this shrew is very long and abundantly supplied with whiskers.

Its feet are very long and have a fringe of hair. The ears are valvular and adapted for life in the water. It feeds upon insects and also upon other vermin, as we may gather from a description of a kind of stick bait mentioned by Mr. Withers. But to take up Mr. Withers' description of the capture of a big trout with a live mouse. He says: "We were led to try the mouse from the fact that on cutting open a large trout we were very much astonished by finding a mouse in its stomach. A hook was passed through the skin of the neck and the leader was attached to a large chip in such a manner that the mouse could not get away from its bait."

"Then the chip with its live freight was liberated in the creek at some distance above the bridge under which the big trout was known to secrete himself. The chip went merrily dancing down the stream, the mouse meanwhile running backward and forward as far as the limits of his raft would allow, and things went swimmingly until the bridge was reached. Here we saw a sudden commotion which we knew was caused by the big trout."

"His troutship seemed to hit the chip with its tail, for it flew out into the air a foot or so more above the surface of the water, and he swallowed the mouse. The fisherman in charge of the line succeeded, after some difficulty, in landing the trout, which proved to be a five-pounder." Afterward Mr. Withers learned that the live mouse was known to many of the fishermen as one of the most killing baits for the black-spotted trout, and its use is very general in that part of Colorado.—(Forest and Stream.)

She Was a Persistent Weeper.

Mrs. Thrale, Dr. Samuel Johnson's friend, often had a visitor at her house a young woman named Sophy Streetfield, who was universally acknowledged to be a most fascinating young woman. She was, moreover, one of those who, even in that tearful age, proved decidedly amusing from her habit of unnecessary weeping. One day Mrs. Thrale promised Fanny Burney, who had never witnessed the phenomenon, that she should "see Miss Streetfield cry." As Sophy was taking her leave, Mrs. Thrale urged her to stay, adding: "If you go, I shall know you don't love me as well as Lady Gresham." Then, indeed, the tears came into Miss Streetfield's eyes and rolled down her pretty cheeks. "Come here, Miss Burney," called Mrs. Thrale, in triumph: "come and see Miss Streetfield cry!" The young lady did not seem to be in the least offended by this, but gently wiped her eyes, and became composed again.—(Argonaut.)

SEIZED BY BRIGANDS.

TURKISH HIGHWAYMEN DERAIL A TRAIN.

Several Well-Known Tourists Carried Off—From Their Retreat in the Mountains the Bandits Send Out a Demand for $40,000 Ransom—The German Ambassador Will Advance the Money and the Porte Will Repay It.

A party of brigands near Tchereskai placed obstructions across the railroad track and succeeded in derailing the Eastern express, says a telegram from Constantinople. When they had thus brought the train to a standstill they found that there were several German and English tourists among the passengers. One of them was a banker of Berlin. The brigands have demanded $40,000 as ransom for the captives, and Chancellor von Caprivi has telegraphed to Herr von Radowitz, the German Ambassador there, authorizing him to advance this amount. The remaining passengers were despoiled of their belongings and were then left alone.

The place where the act of brigandage occurred lies between this city and Adrianople. The band which made the attack on the train numbered thirty men, led by the noted robber Anastasius. The brigands first seized the watchman on duty at the railroad station, and when they had prevented him from giving an alarm they set to work and tore up the rails for some distance. They set no warning signal for the engineer of the train, but allowed the cars to dash on to possible destruction. When the Eastern express reached the spot the engine tumbled over on its side, dragging with it the tender, a baggage car, and all the third-class passenger coaches. The first-class passenger cars luckily did not follow the rest of the train, but remained safely on the road.

When the train was thus disabled the brigands rushed forward, uttering loud yells and brandishing their guns in a most threatening manner and boarded the cars. Several of the passengers resisted the attack, but the brigands replied with a volley from their guns and dangerously wounded one of the men who sought to repulse them. The outlaws finally overcame the occupants of the cars and proceeded to plunder them, stripping the travelers of all their valuables and looting their baggage. When the brigands ended their work of robbery they seized four of the passengers in the first-class cars and also the engineer of the train and then started with their captives for their rendezvous in the mountains.

The men carried away by the outlaws were: Oscar Greger, Herr Israel, a banker of Berlin; Herr Maquet, a landowner of Siegen; Herr Zorbig, Prussian Saxony, and Freundiger, the engineer of the eastern express.

Upon reaching their retreat the bandits sent Herr Israel to get the ransom of $40,000 which they demanded for the release of the prisoners. Herr von Radowitz says the Porte will refund this money.

It Is Said That

MONEY talks, but it often goes without saying.

FIGURES can't lie, but liars can figure, all the same.

IGNORANCE of the law excuses no one, except the lawyer.

WHEN you laugh at your own jokes no one else laughs with you.

SOME men are too light for heavy work and too heavy for light work.

THE honest man pays up, and the other fellow has to pay down.

THE stubborn man is the man who will not listen to your reason or follow your advice.

THE person who is most contented with his or her lot occupies one in the cemetery.

TRUE kindness consists in letting a man bore you when you are nearly dying to bore him.

ALTHOUGH a man may admit that he is a fool, you better look out if you make the same diagnosis.

THE reason so many things go wrong in this world is because the men won't take woman's advice.

WHEN you hear a man saying that all men are alike, he is trying to apologize for something he is ashamed of.

CAPTAIN PORTER TELLS THE QUEER STORY.

Arrest of the Second Southern Illinois Minister Wanted for Passing Bogus Money—The Rev. Vancil Thought He Converted a Man Who Afterward Proved a Counterfeiter.

It was a remarkable story that Capt. Porter, of the Secret Service, told a Chicago reporter. The captain had just returned from Springfield, Ill., where he had taken to be locked up the Rev. George Vancil, a Baptist preacher, who was arrested near Duquoin, Ill., for passing spurious money.

The fact that makes the case more than ordinarily interesting is that Vancil is the second minister arrested in that locality for similar crimes within seven days. The first instance was the arrest of the Rev. "Jerry" Holmes for making the bogus money, and now come the details of the second offender's capture.

"Vancil is greatly inferior to Holmes," said Capt. Porter. "He has not the shrewdness nor the bodily health that Holmes has, and it was therefore an easy matter for Holmes to impose upon Vancil and make a dupe of him. Vancil's reputation as a liar is much more widespread than his fame as a good man. The arrest was made upon information given us by the Rev. Fishback, pastor of the Christian Church at Duquoin. This divine heard Vancil's voluntary confession, which was very complete, and was marked by expressions of repentance and humility. Vancil told me his story as we were returning upon the train."

"Jerry Holmes was one of the worst characters in Duquoin," he said. "Every one shunned him, as they thought he was too far gone to redeem. I tried to convert him. One night we rode over a long, dark road together. We talked about religion, and after a long argument he declared himself converted, and fell upon his knees in the muddy road and prayed. A short time thereafter he was appointed a minister and licensed to preach the gospel. A short time later I walked to church one morning with Holmes, and he said he had some counterfeit money which he wanted me to dispose of. I was very indignant and threatened to give him up to the authorities. He talked me out of that idea, and finally I took the money upon his promising to cease his evil ways. When he handed me two bad dollars, I thought I would have a stronger hold upon him with the money in my possession."

"I have a wife and eight children, and they must be fed. My salary is not large enough to support them well, and when my little girl wanted some little thing I passed the bad money and got the trinket for her."

"Holmes went away from Duquoin, and it is alleged that Vancil wrote to him, telling him he had passed it. When Holmes returned to Duquoin he brought back a sackful of the bad dollars, and helped Vancil hide them. Holmes gave Vancil nine more of the dollars, and the latter passed three of them at a little circus that came into the town. Several days thereafter Vancil entered the express office to receive a package upon which 25 cents was due. The express agent, R. G. Wheatley, happened to be reading of Holmes' arrest. He spoke of it to Vancil, and the latter confessed that he had been equally guilty in the sight of the world, but he knew that the Lord would forgive him, for he had done it so as to find out about the entire gang and tell upon them."

Wheatley immediately called over the Rev. Mr. Fishback, who was told the story of Vancil's disgrace. The Christian divine immediately telegraphed to Capt. Porter, and the latter, accompanied by Deputy United States Marshal Bacon, visited Vancil's residence, several miles from Duquoin. The erring divine was found wrapped in the arms of Morphine. Upon their explaining their mission Vancil fell upon his knees in prayer before the hard-hearted ones who would take him from his home. Vancil's protestations and pleadings were so loud that the eight children appeared upon the scene badly frightened. After Vancil saw that his words were having no apparent effect he ceased his importunings and kissed his weeping wife and frightened little ones and started off with his captors, saying: "Well, they may starve, but the law will be avenged, and of course the law doesn't care what happens to those we leave behind us."

BIGGAR MUST CONSENT.

Parnell Cannot Otherwise Use a Part of the Paris Fund.

The Dublin National Press says: "Owing to the death of Mr. Parnell, who he declares to be dying, he (Mr. Parnell) will have complete control of the Paris fund to divide among his followers. The McCarthyites have taken the best French legal advice on the subject, and find that unless the consent of the late Mr. Joseph Biggar's son is obtained Mr. Parnell can control only a third portion of the fund, after a long litigation which the McCarthyites will take into every court in France. The League Treasurer, Dr. Joseph E. Kenny, M. P., endeavored to gain Mr. Biggar's son's consent but was repulsed. The late Mr. Joseph G. Biggar, it will be remembered, was one of the trustees of the Paris fund."

FIVE YOUNG UNFORTUNATES.

Playmates in the Forenoon, They Were All Disabled Accidentally Before Evening.

A singular chain of accidents attended five little boys at Beaver Falls, N. Y. In the morning Lewis Tucker, Steve Murry, Daniel Greenwood, Charlie Caruthers and Robert Partington played together until they separated for dinner. By night Murry had broken an arm by falling from a hay loft; Greenwood had broken an arm by falling off a stump in the woods; Tucker had found a cartridge, and while pounding it with a stone it exploded and mangled one hand terribly; Partington was shot through the shoulder by an Italian boy who was fooling with an old pistol, and Caruthers was suffering from a lot of crushed fingers, having been caught in a cogwheel at the water works.

ATTACKED BY ROUGHS.

Decoration Day Exercises in Kentucky Broken Up by a Lawless Mob.

A riot occurred at Whitesville, Ky., on the occasion of Decoration Day exercises. A gang of ruffians from Taylorfield came in, dragged the speaker from the stand and dispersed the assembly. The veterans went to Whitesville to take the train, and here the ruffians renewed the attack, cutting two men seriously. Citizens hurried to their rescue, and a battle ensued. Burrell Taylor, the leader of the ruffians, was stabbed in the back and side and carried away dying. Wild Dave Smith was stabbed in the abdomen. The ruffians got the worst of it and retreated. The people of the town armed themselves and sent a posse after the ruffians. There was no political significance in the attack.

NEW REMEDY FOR LUPUS.

Dr. Combes, of Louisville, Announces Cure Made with Methyl Viola.

Dr. M. F. Combes, Professor of Physiology in the Kentucky School of Medicine, announces that he has discovered what appears to be a cure for lupus. It is three parts of methyl viola in 1,000 parts of water. In the cases he has tried he has had astonishing success. He first used one part of the methyl viola to one thousand parts of water, cleaning the sores with saline washes and peroxide of iron before making the local application. No tonics whatever were used. He says he gives out the remedy unreservedly, hoping that other physicians may test it, and if it does any good to lupus patients, he will ask no other reward.

REFUSES TO TOUCH LIQUOR.

John Stephenson Would Rather Die than Violate His Principles.

John Stephenson, who has built street cars for use in every civilized country on the globe, is lying seriously ill at his home near New Rochelle, N. Y. He is in his 82d year and his physician says he is wearing out. Mr. Stephenson's life might be still prolonged but for his own belief and the unyielding will which rules his life in accordance with that belief. He is a prohibitionist. No power on earth could induce him to vary one jot from the course he has followed so many years. His physician says that undoubtedly alcoholic stimulants would be beneficial to him, but he has not prescribed them. "I knew his habits," the doctor said, "and it would only have hurt his feelings."

GOTHAM'S POLICE PARADE.

Twenty-three Hundred Men in Line. New York's "finest" paraded up Broadway between two lines of people, extending from the battery to Forty-second street. There were 2,300 "cops" in line, divided into eight platoons of ten companies each, headed by a band and led off by Inspector Thomas Byrnes. Over 50,000 people saw the parade. Every officer appeared in full dress uniform, bright and new. The inspectors, captains and sergeants wore new helmets of pure white with a band of gold. The roundmen and patrolmen wore the regulation summer helmets of gray.

HAS MISSED THE ITATA.

The cruiser Charleston reaches Callao Without Sighting the Insurgent Steamer. The cruiser Charleston is now at Callao, where she arrived after a run of ten days from Anapulo. She will probably remain at Callao three days to coal and then proceed to Arica, Chili. Her chances for catching the Itata now seem to have narrowed down to nothing as she has neither seen nor heard from the insurgent vessel and her only chance of catching her now seems to be to run across her by accident. The movements of the Itata are still a mystery.

HEIRS TO $1,000,000.

Decision in the Celebrated Myra Clark Gaines Will Case.

Surrogate Abbott, in Brooklyn, handed down his decision in the celebrated Myra Clark Gaines will case. The Surrogate declared that the will of Jan. 8, 1885, made in New Orleans on the day before Mrs. Gaines died, and which named Marie P. Evans as sole executrix, is a forgery. He declares that the will made in January, 1885, which names William A. Wilder and James T. Christman as executors, is legal and admissible to probate.

BRIGGS MUST MOVE ON.

This Is the Assembly's Verdict.

The long debate in the Presbyterian General Assembly over the report of Dr. Patton's committee vetoing the appointment of Dr. Briggs as a member of the Union Theological Seminary faculty on account of his alleged heretical views concerning the Bible, terminated at Detroit by the adoption of the report by an overwhelming majority, the vote standing 440 to 80 in favor of disapproval of Dr. Briggs.

WILLIAM II. CHALLENGED.

One of His Late Subjects Wishes to Fight Him with Pistol.

Herr Richard Goederle, a well-known German, who has filled many positions and who is at present a Professor of Music at the Pennington Seminary in New Jersey, has leaped into sudden notoriety. It is not usual for one man to challenge a monarch to single combat. He says he has sent a challenge to no less a personage than Emperor William II. of Germany.

FAVORS FREE COINAGE.

Ex-Senator Tabor Says the President Will Recommend It in His Message.

A special from Denver says: In an interview with ex-Senator Tabor he is quoted as saying: "I had several friendly chats with President Harrison during his late visit. You may say from the President's conversation that he will recommend the free coinage of American silver in his next message."

Sister Catharine's New Convent.

Sister Catharine, better known to the world as Kate Drexel, has left the convent of the Sisters of Mercy, on Webster avenue, Pittsburgh, to take up her residence in the new convent which she built near Philadelphia. The new convent is to be the mother-house of the new order which Sister Catharine has founded, and Sister Catharine is to be the Mother Superior. She, with fifteen of the sisters from the convent on Webster avenue, has permanently left Pittsburgh. She will train them expressly for the work to which she has consecrated her life and fortune, that of educating the Indians and negroes of the West and South.

Bardsley Held for Trial.

John Bardsley, was arraigned before Magistrate Pole, at Philadelphia, on the charge of embezzling $30,000 of the city's money. On the charge he was held to answer, the amount of bail being fixed at a later hour. After this arraignment the State authorities pressed their charges against him for appropriating State moneys. During this proceeding Mr. Bardsley arose and said: "The moneys collected by me for the State are locked up in the Keystone Bank and I am unable to produce them."

Do Bank Examiners Examine?

The wholesale looting of national banks in Philadelphia, coupled with the incident of a New York bank president concealing a defalcation of $400,000 for many years, is what invites the query: "Do bank examiners examine?" It seems incredible that the business of banks should have been conducted for so long in the manner of these Philadelphia institutions unless the bank examiners, who were supposed to look into their affairs, were either incapable or untrustworthy.

The deed seems to have been committed after she had thought calmly and collectedly about it and finally decided that it would be for the best for her to end all her awful sufferings in one short moment.

Its Long Run.

"The Soudan" recently reached its 160th performance at Boston. This famous historical-spectacular production will appear at McVicker's following "Blue Jeans." At its former presentation in Chicago, the artistic and comedy elements suffered because of the enormous size of the theater in which it was seen. In McVicker's these features will so enrich the play that, except in the scenic magnificence, no one will recognize it as the same. Mr. Louis James will take the part of Major Temple.

Desires Independence.

The British Government is stirred by another trouble in South Africa. Jessup has been sufficiently recognized as the legitimate son of Gershom P. Jessup, deceased, and as such is the rightful heir to an estate now valued at $200,000.

The Russian Pharaoh.

The persecution of Jews in Russia is the most cruel and disgraceful spectacle of the century. No excuse can palliate the inhuman scenes in Moscow. It is enough to know that men are being marched through the streets in fetters, not because they are criminals, or accused of crime, but because they are born of a certain race. The facts are too well corroborated to be denied. They are not denied. By a coincidence just at this time Russia had invited the civilized world to Moscow to see an exhibition of art, and the visitors have been quite a different exhibition, one that takes away all taste for art under such patronage.

The czar has deliberately chosen to be the modern Pharaoh of the Jews, and he is dealing with multitudes vastly greater than those that excited the hate and jealousy of the Egyptian oppressor. They are helpless to resist his overwhelming power, but in a broader sense than the term was used of old there is a God in Israel, and such inhumanity cannot fall, in the course of Divine Providence, to be followed by exemplary retribution.—New York Press.

Woe! Woe! Unutterable Woe.

Why endure it daily, nightly, we had well said shortly. They do who are tortured by chronic rheumatism. The remedy, botanic, pure, safe and prompt is at hand. Were the evidence in behalf of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters collected, it would be found to team with well authenticated proofs that the medicine is both a preventive and a remedy in this malady of varying degrees and ever present danger. To forestall its chronic stage is the dictate of prudence. Bona fide dangerous medication. Far more effective, more certain, more permanent in the beneficial consequences is the use of the Bitters. Experience indorses, the recommendation of physicians sanctions its use. Begin early, use with persistence, and expect relief. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters relieves constipation, biliousness, kidney ailments, dyspepsia and malarial trouble.

Something New in Titles.

One often hears of Mrs. Senator Somebody, and Mrs. Judge So-and-So, but such titles are rarely met on visiting cards now. There was an instance of this striving of the wife to wear the husband's tail feathers in Paris, which struck many Americans as very ridiculous. A Mr. Warren had found favor with the Khedive of Egypt, and received the title of Bey. When he established himself in Paris, Americans had visiting cards left upon them reading, "Mrs. Dr. Warren Bey," "Miss Dr. Warren Bey." Many thought Bey was the surname.—Indianapolis Journal.

How to Make Money.

DEAR SIR—Having read Mr. Sargents' experience in plating with gold, silver and nickel, I attempted to write of my success. I sent to H. K. Delno & Co., of Columbus, Ohio, for a $5 plater. I have had more tableware and jewelry than I could plate ever since. I cleared $27 the first week and in three weeks $97. Any one can do plating and make money in any locality the year round. You can get circulars by addressing the above firm. WILLIAM GRAY.

He was an upright, hard working man, and had lately been in the employ of Henry Klomprens, pressing hay. The season for this kind of work being over, he next obtained employment at the saw-mill of Jas. Fairbanks, and started in on Thursday morning last. His first work was at the edger. It was new to him, having never worked in a mill before. He had some trouble in running a warped elm-board through the edger; tried to force it. When back it flew, striking him on the side of the head above the right temple, crushing the skull. The accident happened at 9 o'clock in the forenoon and at 10 o'clock Mr. Hofmeyer was dead.

Dr. F. J. Schouten: Dear Sir—About three months ago I bought a box of your anti-rheumatic pills and after using one-half of them I find myself in perfect health. Last year I went to Mt. Clemens, Mich., and although I obtained relief there, it did not cure me. At the urgent desire of some of my friends I tried your anti-rheumatic pills with the above happy result. I deem them the best I have used and I have tried nearly everything.

Respectfully Yours, WILL BREYMAN.

Peculiar.

Whoever heard of a medicine that a druggist will let you take two or three doses of without charge, because there is just as much left after you and others have sampled it? Whoever heard of a medicine that will last one person a year or more, but which costs but 50c.—1,000 treatments for 50c? Whoever heard of a medicine that is pleasant to take, can be carried in the pocket, and will give relief in five minutes? These "peculiarities" and many more are true of Cushman's Menthol Inhaler, which is endorsed by the leading physicians of the world for curing Headache, Neuralgia, Cold, Catarrh, Sore throat, Asthma and Bronchitis. Prove the truth of these statements by a free trial at H. Walsh's drug store.
