High-Tension Line Nearly Takes Life Of Holland Man

Suffers First, Second,
Third Degree Burns
On Arms, Legs, Back

A broken high-tension wire nearly caused the death today of Charles Lundy, about 30, of route 4, after he came in contact with the wire as he rode atop a 16-foot steel tank being moved to Zeeland.

Holland hospital authorities report Lundy suffered first, second, and third degree burns on his arms, legs, back and across the shoulders. They report Lundy is responding well to treatment and was slowly coming out of shock early this afternoon.

As near as can be determined the mishap occurred at approximately 11:20 a.m. today at the intersection of 120th Ave. and Mason Ave. about one mile east of the Holland city limits.

Lundy was riding atop the tank guiding it under overhead wires. He used a stick to hold the wires over the tank as the truck carrying it moved slowly along the road.

It is believed strong winds ripped the wire loose from the stick. The wire caught on the steel tank breaking the wire in two. The exposed ends whipped back against Lundy causing the severe burns.

Ottawa County Deputies Clayton Forry and Nelson Lucas were immediately called to the scene along with an ambulance.

The two deputies along with five other men bucking strong winds spent nearly 30 minutes before it was possible to remove Lundy from atop the tank.

Finally a long ladder was obtained and hoisted to the tank's top. The semi-conscious Lundy was securely strapped to a stretcher and with a block and tackle arrangement was slowly lowered into the waiting arms of other men and taken by ambulance to Holland Hospital.

First to arrive on the accident scene was Holland postman Jerome Kapinga who was riding behind the truck on his mail route. He administered initial first aid and called for assistance.

Other men who participated in the rescue were Bob Naber, 21, route 5, driver of the truck; Clarence Boeve, route 5; Gerry Bos, route 5; Henry H. Boeve, Jr., route 5, and Gerry Bonzelaar, Holland.

Kjohede Resigns As Football Coach

Ted Kjohede, head football coach at Grand Haven High School the past four years, has resigned to take a similar position at Battle Creek Central. Both schools field class A football teams.

Only 10 days ago, Grand Haven's line coach, Bill Ward, left to become principal of Lake Orion High School. Kjohede was the youngest head coach in Southwest Conference history when he took over in 1949 at the age of 25.

Kjohede succeeds Bob Waldorf at Battle Creek, and will also assist with track and teach mathematics. Waldorf, whose brother Lynn is the ex-Michigan mentor, left to coach a Virginia high school.

During his four years as head coach, Kjohede's teams won 15 tied one and lost 19. Last fall, Grand Haven won six and lost three and tied for third place in the Southwest Conference play.

Kjohede joined Grand Haven in 1948 as reserve coach upon graduation from Central Michigan College, where he was an outstanding athlete. He still is a good athlete, having pitched a Memorial Day win for the Grand Haven Athletics over the Grand Rapids Carvers. He also plays independent league basketball.

In addition to being head football coach, Kjohede was coach of the tennis team and reserve basketball and track teams. He also taught biology at Grand Haven.

Ceramics Will Be Offered This Year; Begins June 15

An expanded handicrafts program sponsored by the Holland Recreation Department gets under way June 15, with Miss Muriel Hopkins director. One of the innovations is ceramics instruction to be given in the basement room at Longfellow School.

This will be the fourth year Miss

Hopkins is in charge and she will be assisted by Miss Louise Kleis, who is attending the School of Architectural Design at the University of Michigan.

Miss Hopkins has just completed a year's course in occupational handicrafts at Western Michigan College. She will apply what she has learned to the program and introduce basket weaving, printing, stitching, embroidery, square knotting, silver and copper crafts, and jewelry among others.

Of course, the old standbys—leather, string, shell and bead craft—will still be included. All this activity will take place at the Lincoln School from June 15 to June 26 from 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

From June 29 to July 31 there will be a morning session from 9 to 12 as well as an afternoon. Though specific times will be given to different age groups, the plan is to keep things flexible.

The ceramics group will have a kiln for firing and will meet from June 15 to July 10. Junior and senior high school boys and girls will work from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. and grades 5, 6 and 7 from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m., but the scheduling will also be flexible in order to meet individual needs.

Everything is free in the handicrafts program except materials, which will be supplied at cost. People with diverse interest—utilitarian as well as aesthetic—are invited to join.

155 Seniors Receive Hope College Degrees

One hundred and fifty-five Hope College graduating seniors were awarded degrees at ceremonies Wednesday in Hope Memorial Chapel, marking the 88th annual college commencement.

The seniors were told by Dr. Charles Malik, Lebanese Ambassador to the United States and a delegate to the United Nations, that "Young persons who are graduating from college need the peace of God more than anything else."

Dr. Malik went on to point out that "the greatest source of strength, is moral and spiritual," and reminded them that "history is justified not by man nor by the vain imaginings of men, but by the blood and tears of the saints."

Turning from personal responsibility to problems of the contemporary world, Dr. Malik stated, "In the life of every generation critical moments arise when one must come to grips with the fundamental questions of war and peace."

But peace, he charged, "is not the highest thing." "Truth, freedom, goodness and justice are higher than peace and if they are attacked, it will be our duty to take up arms and defend them."

"It follows," Malik said, "That war is not the greatest evil. Injustice, falsehood, despotism, darkness, these are worse evils than war." Malik went on to show how the greatest civilizations declined and fell because they held peace to be the only worthwhile goal.

"The Ambassador from Lebanon reviewed the Korean crisis, noting that until communism repents, 'real, lasting, genuine peace is impossible.'" Dr. Malik stated his personal opinion that there is no evidence that communism is changing.

Ceremonies opened with a processional hymn composed especially for the college by Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster. The Rev. Canon Claude L. Pickens, Jr., M. A., acting secretary of the near east division of Foreign Missions for the National Council of Churches, gave the invocation.

Devotions were read by the Rev. Theodore William Luidens minister of the First Reformed Church of Bethlehem, Selkirk, N. Y.

Following presentation of diplomas to graduating seniors, honorary degrees were bestowed on three honored guests.

The degree of Doctor of Laws was awarded the Honorable Arad Riggs, while honorary Doctor of Science degrees were given to the Honorable Charles Malik and Dr. James Leonard Popp.

Few Crashes Mar Holiday Week-End

HUDSONVILLE (Special)—Traffic was "really fouled up" but accidents were few in the Hudsonville area during the Memorial Day week-end according to deputy Al Hildebrand. Five special officers were on duty Saturday, but even then it was impossible to keep traffic moving constantly.

At one point Saturday, Grandville Police Chief Bernard Skipper noticed traffic blocked all the way to Grandville, six miles from Hudsonville, and hurried over to aid in what he thought must be a bad accident.

Instead, he found no accident, but just cars and more cars, all trying to get toward Holland and Grand Haven where it was supposed to be "cooler."

One minor accident was reported Saturday about 10:15 when a car driven by Robert Steil, 26, of 135 Cherry St., Grand Rapids, crashed into the rear of one driven by Fred Behrens, 21, of 5245 Stanton St., Hudsonville.

The crash occurred when both cars traveling west on M-21 about one half mile east of Hudsonville, were forced to come to an abrupt halt where heat had buckled the blacktopped highway and county workers had erected a barricade.

Only the left lane was affected, but the cars were passing and were unable to get back into the regular lane. A passenger in the Steil auto, Joanne Groendyk, 16, of 46 Colrain St., Grand Rapids, was taken to St. Mary's hospital for a cut right knee. Behrens was treated for cuts and bruises.

Deputy Hildebrand said the investigation is continuing and a summons would be issued.

THE "LIBERALS" AND SENATOR MORSE

The so-called "liberals" inside and outside Washington are yelling at the top of their voices that Senator Morse of Oregon is the victim of a Republican party conspiracy. Ever since the senators voted by an overwhelming margin not to restore Morse to the choice committee he had headed, even though he had fought a five month battle to get his assignments back, those "liberals" have been implying that there was political skullduggery in the vote.

But why should the Republicans give choice committee assignments to the man who stabbed the party in the back in the November election? After endorsing the party's candidates at the Chicago convention, Morse had a change of heart and worked tooth and nail for the party's defeat in November.

That was clearly his privilege. Any man, no matter what party he belongs to, has a right to turn against that party. Public men now and again feel compelled to do that as a matter of conscience. To the extent that they are sincere and honest about it, they deserve respect.

But it isn't reasonable for such a man to expect favors at the hands of a party that he denounced as corrupt and incompetent and a menace to good government. A sincere public man would scorn to accept preferment from a party that he had thus denounced—if he believed in his own denunciations.

For Senator Morse is of course not a Republican; he was elected as one but he repudiated his party. The Republican party, like any other party, looks out for its own members; it would be suicidal for any party to do less than that. If anyone could feel free to stab his party in the back during a critical election, without any penalty, that party could hardly hope to stay alive very long.

Senator Morse is now an Independent, no longer a Republican. It is logical for him to look to the Independent party for political preferment. But unfortunately for him, he is the only member of the Independent party.

But if a prominent Democratic senator had done to Adlai Stevenson what Morse did to Eisenhower, and then if Stevenson had won, no "liberal" could possibly have believed that the Democratic party was duty bound to give him preferred committee appointments. Those pseudo-liberals are liberal only when it is to their advantage.

Christian Stewardship
2 Corinthians 9:1-15
By Henry Geerlings

A much talked about theme today is stewardship. It nearly always has to do with money or what we give to Christian work. There has come to be an earnest desire on the part of a host of the best thinking men of the church to have the work of God carried on more intensively and on a larger scale. This all requires more money. So there has been much emphasis laid on plans for raising money.

But stewardship means more than this. It goes deeper than handing over an amount of money. It has to do with the attitude of a Christian towards God which expresses itself in one way by giving money, in other ways by giving service in a wide variety of kinds. Stewardship is a relation we have to God, rather than a relation to our money. When the former relation is all that it should be the giving will come as a natural sequence.

The apostle was writing to the Corinthians. He was anxious that these Christians should carry out their promises. Their promise had been that they would contribute a certain portion to maintain the unfortunate Christians at Jerusalem. They had been under the leadership of Titus when they made the promise, but since that time there had been a tendency to neglect their giving. Paul did not want this condition to continue, not so much for the money that was needed as for the bad effect their failure would have on the Corinthian Christians themselves.

Paul wrote to encourage them. He did not scold. He tried to show them what others were doing. He cited the Macedonians, who had been liberal givers, giving not only money when they were in poverty on account of the hard times through which they were passing, but offering themselves as workers in any way that they might be needed. Paul had not felt like urging the Macedonians to make gifts to the poor fund for Jerusalem, but they had asked for the privilege of giving.

He commended the Corinthians for their great strides ahead in knowledge and zeal and love. But he asked them not to become negligent in keeping up their pledges.

The apostle might have laid down an arbitrary law for the Corinthians to obey in their giving. He might have fixed an amount and a time for giving it. But he preferred to appeal to their sense of personal responsibility. He frankly told them he did not make the request in the form of a commandment, but that he had cited the splendid example of the Macedonians to encourage them to exemplify the sincerity of their love by keeping their promise and completing the gift according to agreement.

Paul went further and told how Christ gave. His example was to be theirs to follow. In the same spirit he had given so were they to give if they would come into possession of the joy of true stewardship. Jesus was rich, but he gave everything in order that others might rise from poverty to riches. This did not refer to riches in dollars and cents. It was a richness of glory that Jesus laid down so that the people laid down so that who had lost so much through sin, might regain the right to the privileges of God. Jesus had given unselfishly without any law to compel him. His giving was willing and cheerful. Paul wanted a similar attitude among the Corinthians as to their gifts for God's work.

How much was to be given was not intimated, but a well-known principle was called to their attention. They understood the matter of seedtime and harvest well enough to know that whenever there was a skipping in sowing there would be a skimping harvest to gather. Just the opposite of this was equally true. A liberal quantity of seed scattered in the soil would assure a larger harvest. In giving to God they were to follow the same principle. If they expected large returns they must be willing to give liberally. The blessings that would follow liberality were not enumerated but that they do follow was a fact none could deny.

When it came to considering giving from their own standpoint Paul gave good advice. It was not his to dictate the size of their gifts. Each man was to think the matter through for himself and give as he decided. If he was a true follower of Jesus he would be guided by the blessings he had received and the needs that were presented to him.

In conclusion the apostle announced something that seems quite strange to us. He said that willingness to give is a gift from God to us. It is God who makes us through the meaning of stewardship and helps us want to give and find joy in giving. This is not a spirit toward giving that we can simply have by deciding to have it. It comes only through the help of God. So Paul speaks of willingness to give as an unspeakable gift from God for which He devoutly returns thanks.

School Board Has Informal Session

The Board of Education held one of its monthly informal meetings Monday evening in Junior High School to discuss a revision of the high school English course, the Michigan Secondary School-College agreement plan, and drivers' training.

The session was one of information only and no action was taken Monday night, although further recommendations may be submitted at regular board meetings.

The English course revision recommends the study of American literature in the 11th grade and English literature in the 12th grade. Through this change, American literature would be correlated with American history also offered that year. Senior English is selective whereas junior English is required. New textbooks also were recommended. Clifford Marcus explained the revision, assisted by Mrs. Lucille Donivan who headed the study committee.

Principal J. J. Riemersma explained the secondary school-college agreement plan which he described as a co-operative arrangement among participating high schools and the colleges in the state in which the high school principal may recommend students for colleges regardless of the pattern of subjects they have taken. He said this agreement does not imply that students must be admitted to courses for which they cannot give evidence of adequate preparation. He said there are between 300 and 400 state high schools in the agreement, some large and some small.

Albert F. Drost explained the drivers' training program taught 16-year-olds in the high school. He said the drawbacks of the program are largely time limitation for behind-the-wheel driving.

The artist spoke briefly of his work on the royal portrait. The painting was accepted by Municipal Judge Cornelius vander Meulen on behalf of the museum. Judge vander Meulen is a member of the Board of Governors. Dr. I. J. Lubbers, president of Hope College, served as master of ceremonies.

More than 175 persons attended the event sponsored by the Holland Chamber of Commerce and the Board of Governors of the Netherlands Museum. Included among the guests were about 20 from Detroit.

In his address titled, "The Netherlands and the New Soviet Peace Offensive," Ambassador van Roijen said the free world has often profited by the Soviet Union's blunders. He cited the Communist guerrilla warfare in Greece which proved to be a serious miscalculation, bringing not only Greece but also Turkey as partners into the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance. He also classified the Berlin blockade, as a major blunder since not only did the Russians have to give up the blockade, but the airlift which was both technically and morally a superb performance served to enhance the prestige of the Western allies both in Germany and throughout the world.

As for the Communist attack on Korea, Dr. van Roijen said this naked aggression more than any other single factor served to unite the Western democracies and to strengthen and vitalize NATO.

"As a matter of fact, until not so long ago we were usually able to count on the Soviet leaders to help us out of a tight spot by their doing something which would frighten or anger us to such an extent that we would, so to speak, pull ourselves up by our bootstraps."

He added, however that the free world cannot continue to count on these sudden Russian interventions since a distinct change can be discerned in Russian tactics immediately following the death of Stalin. "But a change in Russian tactics in no way means a change in the ultimate purpose of the Soviet Union which is the destruction of the Western democracies, and it is inherent in the nature of Moscow communism that this supreme objective, whatever the necessary compromises of the moment may imply, will remain unaltered."

He said the effect of the Soviet peace offensive already is making itself felt in some parts of the world. In the countries of Asia it is widely felt that the Western democracies would be well advised to show their willingness to meet the Russian approach halfway. The ambassador summed up his country's attitude in three points:

1. We should be careful under no consideration to let down our guard and there should be no diminishing of our common defense efforts.

2. We should on the other hand seize every opportunity the Soviet Union offers us to lessen international tensions. If there is a real possibility of reaching an honorable armistice in Korea, we should constructively and positively take hold.

3. We should work towards maintaining the unity of the free world. Our greatest danger lies in the theoretical possibility that the Soviet Union partly through blandishment and partly through threats might succeed in dividing us and sowing dissension among us.

Dr. van Roijen's visit to Holland was part of a 10-day swing about Michigan with speaking engagements in Muskegon, Traverse City, Manistee, Sault Ste. Marie, Ann Arbor and St. Joseph.

Lone Accident Reported In Area During Week-End

Strict traffic enforcement by Holland police and Ottawa county deputies keep the accident toll down to a single accident and that involved a lone car.

The mishap occurred when a car driven by Aloyce J. Smith, 17, of 178 West 15th St. went off the road and struck a barn. The barn, set back 20 feet from the road, is located approximately one-quarter mile east of 120th Ave. on Gordon St.

The barn owned by Jacob Zuidema, route 2, came out second best, receiving damages estimated at $250 by police. A load of hay in the barn kept the car from continuing on through the structure, police said.

The '32-model Smith car sustained damages of less than $75. Ottawa County Deputy Nelson Lucas investigated.

Miss Smith was traveling west on Gordon St. at 10:30 p.m. Saturday night when the car went off the road.

ZEELAND (Special) — Hudsonville edged Zeeland 2-1 in a Ken-New-Wa League baseball game here Thursday afternoon.

Errors led to Zeeland's downfall in the sixth inning when two in a row set up both Hudsonville runs and Kuntz came through with a single.

Knoper's single, Ron Weatherbee's two hits and a single by Bob Berens were the safe blows for Zeeland. Hudsonville had just two hits off the offerings of Del Komejan, but the Chix committed four errors.

Neal Plagenhoef kneels beside his favorite beagle, Oak's Shadow Ruby. Ruby, though only a pup, has always finished in the money against tough competition in field trials and winner's stakes. Plagenhoef says that perhaps her chief asset while chasing rabbits is her nose—her uncanny sense of smell. "A rabbit would have to use a ton of perfume to evade Ruby," her master says.

Training Beagle Pups Presents a Challenge

Neal Plagenhoef, Holland police sergeant, has a hobby that brings him health and ribbons—he breeds and trains beagles to compete in field trials and winner's stakes.

In trials or stakes, which are held at beagle clubs throughout the country, a rabbit is released and beagles go after it. The dogs that stick closest to the trail, bark at the right times and respond to orders the best are the ones that win.

Plagenhoef belongs to the Holland and Wolverine Beagle Clubs. In back of his house at 225 West 28th St., he has a kennel containing eight Beagles and one Brittany Spaniel, a bird dog. Plagenhoef also fancies homing pigeons, and he has a home for them in back of the kennel. When the bird dog first arrived she cast longing eyes in their direction, but she's used to them now.

Although Plagenhoef started entering beagles in competition only six years ago, his love for them goes back to this youthful hunting days. "I get a great kick out of training pups," he says. "I love to see them advance from shy, awkward things to professional rabbit chasers."

Plagenhoef feeds his beagles horse meat and conventional dog food. He's careful not to give them sharp bones such as those from a chicken. He takes them to the veterinarian quite often for shots against diseases like distemper.

When Plagenhoef wants dogs that represents a golden mean as regards barking, he takes a "mouthy" dog—one that barks too much—and breeds it with a "tight" dog—one that barks too little. He then prays that the desired results will take place.

Plagenhoef's favorite dog is Oak's Shadow Ruby. He has entered her in four trials and stakes and she has placed in every one, including the International Derby Stakes at Pittsburgh, Pa., last month. Placing means winning a first, second, third or fourth spot in a field that may run as high as 100 beagles.

Although Plagenhoef will never sell Ruby, he has been offered as much as $300 for her. A champion beagle, one that has placed first three or more times, can command as much as $1,500. Beagles that aren't suited to competition, that can only be used as pets or hunting dogs, sell for about $50.

There are usually two reasons why a beagle may not be suited to competition: He may not stick to the rabbit's trail close enough, wandering off all over the place, and he may be too tall. Fifteen inches is the maximum height allowed in trials.

About twice a week, Plagenhoef takes his beagles to a special dog training area near Butternut Dr. He is very careful about whom he selects for Ruby's bractmates. He doesn't want Ruby to pick up habits from her companions that may be harmful in competition.

Last Thursday Plagenhoef gave Ruby alone a workout at the training grounds. As soon as she left his car, she started sniffing the ground. "This is a bad time of year," her master told a friend that came along. "The fresh grass masks the scent of the rabbit. And what little scent there is, this strong wind is taking away."

Ruby's tail soon began to wag and then away she went, barking continuously. "A good beagle won't bark unless she's got the scent," Plagenhoef continued. "When she loses the scent, she'll shut-up. I can tell each one of my hounds from their bark. As with finger prints, no two barks are alike."

"A rabbit usually runs in circles, and when it gets tired it will hole up on you. But beagles never get tired—they'll run all day if you let them. They like chasing rabbits even better than munching bones."

Ruby's bark grew less and less audible. Apparently, her rabbit was running on a straight line rather than in a circle. "This beagle hobby of mine sure makes one lead a healthy life—plenty of fresh air and sunshine. Don't you agree?" Plagenhoef asked his friend.

After about a half-hour and little sign of Ruby except for a faint bark now and then, Plagenhoef called "R-u-b-y, R-u-b-y! Come a here come a here!" He kept this up for several minutes before Ruby scooted into sight.

Whereas before the chase Ruby was sleek and clean, now she was wet and dirty. After shaking herself several times, however, she was reasonably tidy again.

Coast Guard Cautions Boaters

GRAND HAVEN—The Commander of the Grand Haven Coast Guard group that includes Holland, today called attention of the motor boating public to laws governing speeds and safe operation of such craft and added that all reports of violations will be investigated and violators "prosecuted to the full extent of the law."

State and local authorities have primary responsibility for enforcement of speed laws within harbor limits. But the Coast Guard is charged with enforcement of federal laws which apply to reckless and negligent operation of motor boats.

The act of April 25, 1940, second 13 and 14, (46 U.S. Code, 526, 1 and M) states in part "that motor boats or other vessels operated in a negligent or reckless manner so as to endanger the life, limb, or property of any person would subject the operator upon conviction to a fine not exceeding $2,000 or by imprisonment, at the discretion of the court."

The Coast Guard commander calls special attention of boat operators in this vicinity, who in the past have on occasion operated their craft at high speeds and in a reckless manner close to bathers and small boat fishing parties so as to endanger their lives, to the federal law.

Body of Drowned Dog Sought for Rabies Test

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Fogg, who live on the lakefront just north of Lakewood Farm, have been patrolling the beach the last few days in the hope of recovering the body of their dog, a large liver and white German short-haired pointer, which was believed drowned Sunday while chasing sea gulls in a heavy fog in the lake.

The Fogs are particularly anxious to recover the dog's body since the dog escaped from its run Saturday and bit a neighbor boy. It is not believed the dog is rabid, but persons concerned would like to have a test if possible.

The Holland Coast Guard has been searching the waters, and earlier this week the Fogs had a plane search the area from Port Sheldon to Holland Harbor with no results.

Any person who finds the body of the dog washed up on the beach or who perhaps has already buried the carcass is asked to get in touch with the Fogs immediately.

The dog disappeared while romping in the water with sea gulls when Fogg took it for a run on the beach Sunday.

Dutch Drop Final Game to Muskegon

Muskegon Heights defeated Holland High in the final game of the season Monday afternoon at Riverview Park, giving the Dutch a record of eight wins and seven losses. Muskegon made eight runs on eight hits while Holland had four runs on nine hits.

Jerry Victor started the game for the Dutch, but he was relieved by George Pierson in the fourth who himself was relieved by Jim Boeve in the seventh. Victor gave up three runs, Pierson two and Boeve three.

Holland scored one run in the fourth inning, two in the sixth and one in the seventh. Bob Smith pitched the entire game for Muskegon. Bob Van Dyke and Ron Boeve gave him the hardest time, Van Dyke getting a homer and triple and Boeve three singles.

Coach Ned Stuitt said he was a little disappointed that Holland didn't compile a better record, but he was sure the team would do much better next season since he will be able to build around a nucleus of seven veterans.

Stuitt loses five men to graduation. — Terry Burns, George Pierson, Jerry Victor, Jack Kemper and Ron Boeve. All of them will probably be in Holland Flying Dutchmen uniform this summer.

Stuitt also said his biggest trouble was with pitchers—they didn't have sufficient control. "Give me one pitcher with control next year," he added, "and Holland will be mighty tough to beat."

Anybody who tries to drive a car during the 5:30 p.m. bicycle traffic jam avoids it a second time," she said.

The ambassador's wife told of the progress in rehabilitation in the Netherlands following the February flood. She said every bit of the money given by generous Americans and other friends throughout the world goes to the individual families which lost their belongings. The real work of rehabilitation such as construction of dikes, railroads and bridges is financed by the Dutch government.

politics, but has acquired great experience on all matters. Parliaments and cabinets may change, but the queen remains.

"Not many women have jobs in the Netherlands. A great deal of dignity rests with the head of the house, and many households prefer to live with fewer luxuries than have the wife and mother work. Nevertheless, the Dutch housewife is a busy person doing most of the sewing for the family and endless patching and mending."

"The Dutch women are not particularly club-minded. Sometimes this is good since most women are busy in their own homes, but they could take a greater interest in what goes on in the world," Mme. van Roijen said. She added that all Dutch people have easy access to many cultural pursuits, explaining that concerts, plays and operas cost only 25 cents per person and virtually everybody attends.
