CITY AND VICINITY.

Architects are preparing the plans for the new Kent county infirmary.

Home raised strawberries are being offered now, and sell for 10 cents a quart.

Forepaugh's Show at Grand Rapids, Wednesday, drew the usual crowds from the surrounding country and towns.

The funeral of G. J. Hofmeyer, killed at the Fairbanks & Lowing mill, Friday last, took place Monday afternoon from the H. C. Ref. church at Overisel.

The contract for the new residence of A. Steketee, cor. of Cedar and Ninth streets, has been taken by J. R. Kleyn, who will also put up the one for P. Brown, on Ninth street.

J. N. Louckes has again taken charge for the season of the supply store near the steamboat landing at Ottawa Beach. Refreshments and cigars, bowling alley and pool table are also on his sign.

At the annual convention of the State W. C. T. U., held at Grand Rapids, last week, Mrs. M. S. Van O'Linda, of this city, delivered an address on "The value of right sentiment on the part of foreign speaking and colored people in the settlement of the temperance question."

From the Saugatuck Commercial: W. B. Griffin informs us that the people of Holland are taking an interest in the success of their boat line now and are doing well by the Kalamazoo in both passenger and freight business. Mr. Griffin is advertising the line extensively and if it fails of success it will be no fault of his.

At the West Mich. Furniture factory the abutments have been placed for a new warehouse, 60x140. It will be located south of the main building, near the Bay View switch. At a meeting of the board of directors held this week, Fred Metz was elected president, vice G. J. Richmond, who upon his removal to Grand Rapids has also disposed of his stock in the factory. At the same meeting A. Ver Schure was elected vice president of the board.

Under the supervision of J. H. Alliger, the director of amusements at Ottawa Beach, a Boat Carnival will be held on Macatawa Bay on Thursday, the 18th inst., beginning at 9:00 o'clock in the evening. Seven steamers and about 50 boats and other craft will participate. The procession will form at the upper end of the bay and then circle around this beautiful sheet of water. The boats and the shore lines will all be illumined and the entire scene will be one of the most beautiful ever witnessed. Special trains will be run that evening from Muskegon, Kalamazoo, Grand Rapids and all surrounding towns. The occasion will be made quite a feature in this season's attractions at the Holland resorts. Over thirty boats have already been entered. Each one will carry an illumined platform, such as "Cleopatra's Barge," "The Seasons," scenes from "Pinafore," etc.

The docks for the steamers of the Milwaukee & Eastern Transit Co., at the harbor, are nearing their completion and it is confidently expected they will be finished by the middle of next week, when the line will be formally opened and the steamers City of Fremont and City of Marquette begin their regular trips. By that time, the weather not interfering, the dredging between the piers will also be sufficiently advanced to warrant the announcement of the schedule for the season. The dock is 250 feet in length, and located east of the hotel landing, near the old dock. Along the west side a track has been constructed on piles, the full length of the dock, but independent thereof and low enough to bring the floors of the main dock and those of the freight cars on one level. The steamers will land on the east side, where inclines have been built to suit the depths of the steamers, when loaded. On the dock is a well constructed warehouse, 32x112, with an eight-foot walk on all sides, under the same roof. The office will be in the south-west corner. It is said that one of the first shipments by the boats will be the iron and the rails for the northern extension of the C. & W. M. to Charlevoix. Take it all in all and the character of the work is such that it dispels all idea of being a mere experiment. The entire work is being done by J. M. Allmendinger, of Benton Harbor, he having taken the contract for the labor, the company furnishing the material. Upon its completion there will still remain much to be done north of the dock, in the line of grading and filling, all of which will be attended to at once.

Don't overlook the new time-card of the C. & W. M.

A congregational meeting of the First Ref. Church will be held Monday evening, to bring out a call on a pastor.

Next Tuesday the furniture men of Grand Rapids will have a grand banquet at the Hotel Ottawa.

The finance committee of the Ottawa county board of supervisors had a session at the Court house, Monday.

Ground was broken at the Akeley Institute, Grand Haven, Thursday, for the new annex, 40x125 feet, three stories and basement.

Next Monday, under direction of Col. Ludlow, U. S. A., there will be sold at Benton Harbor, at public auction, the old hull of the U. S. tug "General Graham."

Dr. Perry Schurtz, one of the foremost surgeons and physicians of Grand Rapids, was here one day this week in consultation with Dr. H. Kremers, in the case of G. Slenk, who is very low.

Just now Geo. De Haven, Gen'l Passenger Agent of the C. & W. M., is doing some special advertising of the Holland resorts at Chicago, St. Louis and Louisville, and other points south.

J. R. Kleyn was at Macatawa Park Wednesday, staking out the site for the new pavillion, 30x50 feet, northeast of the Park Hotel. It will be an elegant structure, on stone abutments, with mansard roof, and will be completed next Saturday.

The steamer Lizzie Walsh, Capt. A. Woltman, returned to this port last week, having undergone considerable repairs. She has been neatly painted and looks as bright as a dollar. Those visiting the resorts will find her plying the ferries, same as last summer.

Monday tables were set for about 360 guests at the Hotel Ottawa, to be the picnic-day of the Grand Rapids pastors. They and their friends filled eight coaches. In the afternoon the steamer Macatawa gave them a complimentary excursion on Lake Michigan.

Those who desire to compete for the pair of oars that will be presented to the boat that parades the most unique design in decoration in the Boat Carnival to be held at Ottawa Beach, on Thursday, June 18th, will please send their names to James H. Alliger, amusement director, Ottawa Beach.

Geo. Brandt, of Grand Rapids, is building a two-story cottage at Macatawa Park Grove, generally known as Harrington's Landing. Prof. Anderson's cottage, a little further west, is also being enlarged. Rev. C. L. John of Jamestown moved his family this week to his new cottage, at Central Park.

I. Fairbanks, Esq., has received notice from Washington that the following claims for pensions, from his agency, have been allowed: Peter A. Peterson, West Olive; Gerrit J. Hesselink, Holland town; Roelof Dalman, Beaverdam; Johanna, widow of Wm. Blom, Holland city; Francis M. Harvey, of Jackson, formerly of Olive; and Clara A., widow of Francis L. Cain, of Newaygo county, formerly of Olive.

Sunday evening the barn of J. Knol, near his dwelling house, on Maple street, was burned. It was after ten o'clock and the folks had retired. During the excitement some one managed to appropriate Mr. Knol's pocket book, containing $37 in money and some promissory notes. Loss $100, covered by insurance. The fire alarm did not respond on this occasion, and this is said to explain why the pressure in the water mains was so light.

At the head of the Western Theol. Seminary in this city, is Rev. N. M. Steffens, D. D., a gentleman whom it is generally conceded as being eminently well qualified for the chair he occupies. About a year ago he had become somewhat dissatisfied with matters and things and managed to have a congregation out west, at Pella, Ia., extend to him a call, as pastor. Decisive action upon this call had to be postponed for a year, until the General Synod of the Reformed Church, the body from whom he received his appointment, could act upon his resignation. This body met last week at Asbury Park, N. J., and they have requested the professor to withdraw his resignation. The gentleman at present is at Pella, Ia., visiting the congregation that have called him as their pastor. It is now confidently hoped by the friends of the Doctor and of the Seminary that the good people of Pella will release him from his implied obligations towards them, in order to enable him to retrace somewhat gracefully from the awkward position in which he allowed himself to be placed by his action of a year ago.

Wheat $1.00.

A lost shawl is advertised for. See notice.

Our readers can look for a new "ad" of E. J. Harrington next week.

Ex-Senator Thomas W. Ferry is still in the hands of the grippe.—G. H. Tribune.

At Hope College everybody is stirred up, preparing for the annual Commencement festivities.

The special rush at the C. & W. M. depot, in this city, upon the arrival of the 10 A. M. trains, is again at hand.

Rev. P. De Bruyn, of Rochester, N. Y., will occupy the pulpit of the First Ref. church, Sunday forenoon and afternoon.

In a few days Grand Rapids expects to be thronged with furniture buyers. The advance guard has already put in its appearance.

Several farmers north of here clipped the rye fields that were nipped by the late frosts, and in most cases the new growth promises well.

The depot building at the New Holland station on the C. & W. M. railroad has been moved to Resort Junction, north of Black river.

Monday the proverbial peace of the burgh was broken by three cases of assault and battery. In one of them it was a simon-pure petticoat affair.

The Monday forenoon passenger train from Grand Rapids came in deadly conflict with a cow, near Hudsonville. The engineer and fireman escaped unhurt.

Dr. A. Van der Veen, of Grand Haven, is mentioned to succeed Dr. C. Brown, late of Spring Lake, as a member of the Medical Examining board for pensions.

The special election notice in another column should not be overlooked. Those of our young citizens who desire to take an interest in the issue involved will do well not to procrastinate.

Saturday night will be a gala night at Ottawa Beach. The new Casino will be opened with a grand strawberry and ice-cream festival and a hop will be given. The steamer Macatawa will make an excursion.

The ladies of the "Suburban Aid Society" of the M. E. church will give an Ice Cream Social at the residence of George Harrington, on Wednesday, June 17. Teams will beat the parsonage at 7:30 o'clock. Conveyance free.

The "Ladies' Band" of Coopersville, will attend the joint meeting of the North and South Ottawa Teachers Association at Macatawa Park, Saturday, the 13th. They will arrive in this city in the forenoon, on the 10 o'clock train.

T. Keppel celebrated his 68th birthday, Wednesday, and the day was made a general family gathering. Two of his daughters, Mrs. Johanna Rademaker and Mrs. Jennie Stouthamer, both of Milwaukee, made it the occasion for a visit to the old home.

A very pleasant family re-union was held at the home of Nicholas Trompen Zutphen, on Friday of last week. All the children were present. Those from abroad were Cornelis Trompen, dentist, at Roseland, Ill., Rev. Jacob Trompen, of Ramsey, N. J., and John Trompen, of Grand Rapids.

Col. E. P. Gibbs, of Grand Haven, was in the city Thursday, and delivered a very interesting address in the evening, at Lyceum Hall, on the history, the object and the growth of the Order of the Maccabees. The Knights of this city, as they marched to the hall in a body, made a very creditable appearance.

Died, on Thursday morning, at his home in this city, Johannes Elenbaas, aged 73 years. The deceased came to this country from the Netherlands, in the early part of 1847. He remained some time in Allegan, and then settled upon his farm, south west of the city, where he lived until he moved to this city, a few years ago. He was noted among his fellow-citizens for his eccentric views on many questions, especially on matters of religion, much of which centered around a certain grievance he alleged—but failed to verify—against the leaders and founders of the Holland Colony for having intentionally neglected to recognize the part he took while in Albany, N. Y., in inducing a large delegation of Holland emigrants (the Zeeland colonists) to locate in "Van Raalte's Colony in Michigan."—Mr. Elenbaas leaves a widow and six children: Mrs. G. Teeseling, of Fillmore, Mrs. L. Lugers, Holland town, Mrs. J. Lokker, city, and Anna, Mary, and John, who are still at home.—The funeral will be held Saturday forenoon, at 11 o'clock, at the residence, and the remains will be interred at the South Holland cemetery.

New potatoes, imported, are selling for 45 cents a peck.

The Ann Arbor students are gradually returning home, for vacation.

Mrs. J. W. Fileman, River and Third streets, has a cactus plant, with no less than 272 flowers and buds.

The attachment suit of L. Jenison vs. The Pneumatic Railroad Gate Co., involving the new plant at Jenisonville, is on trial before Judge Arnold. The case involves thousands of dollars, and is closely contested.

The result of the annual examinations of the graduating class at the West Point Military Academy, were announced at dress parade, Wednesday. In a class of 63 cadet Bertsch, of this city, stands 24.

The street car strike at Grand Rapids culminated into a regular riot Wednesday. Stones were thrown, clubs used, pistols fired, wounded carried off and several arrests made. For an early solution of this difficulty it is very unfortunate that just now we have a congressional election on our hands.

The press of Ottawa county is undergoing continual changes. The Hudsonville Herald now has for its editor C. K. Hoyt, and the Grand Haven Courier-Journal and evening Tribune are being managed by A. E. Winchester. We notice also that H. Potts has sold out his new enterprise at Muskegon, and will represent the G. R. Democrat along the west shore, with headquarters at Muskegon.

Personal Mention.

E. P. Ferry, of Utah, is in Grand Haven, his old home.

This new preparation is the superior of kalsomine, for Walls and Ceilings. It comes prepared, ready for use, by the addition of cold water, thus saving time, labor, trouble, and expense. When mixed it will neither spoil nor decay. It works easy and can be applied with less labor than any other article in the market. Its qualities are adhesive and elastic, and its virtues highly recommended. Those preferring Kalsomine can also be supplied with Diamond Wall Finish and Anti-Kalsomine.

THE BOOK TRUST KNOCKED OUT
A Card To The Public.

Some six months ago we began the publication of our reprint of the famous Encyclopaedia Britannica in 25 Volumes which we issued at $1.50 per volume. The price of the English edition always has been and still is $8.00 per volume, and the Scribner edition $5.00 per volume in the cheapest binding.

That the public appreciate so great a bargain is shown by the fact that over half a million volumes of this reprint have been sold in less than six months.

This elegant new edition we still offer at the same price, $1.50 per volume. This is the greatest bargain ever known in books.

Better still, we will deliver the set complete on such easy payments, to suit the convenience of customers. Remember this is not an abridgement, but the great Edinburgh ninth edition, reproduced page for page, with important articles on American subjects rewritten to date by eminent American authors, and new maps, latter and better than in any other edition.

We further announce that we have in preparation three volumes of "American Additions and Revisions," thoroughly supplementing the original work. With these supplemental volumes you will have at small cost an Encyclopaedia unapproachable in completeness; a thorough "digest of the libraries of the world," and a complete record of current progress and events.

SPECIAL OFFER:—We claim that our reprint compares favorably with the high priced editions in every respect, and in respect to maps, and strength and beauty of bindings is superior to them. In order that this claim may be tested by a personal inspection we make the following proposition: We will furnish volume I. at 60 cts.—a fraction of actual cost—if sent by express. Add 40 cts. postage if wanted by mail. Amount paid for Volume I. will be credited on price of set when ordered.

Drs. Starkey Palen's TREATMENT-BY INHALATION.

1529 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa.

The original and only genuine Compound Oxygen Treatment, that of Drs. Starkey & Palen, is a scientific adjustment of the elements of Oxygen and Nitrogen magnetized; and the compound is so condensed and made portable that it is sent all over the world.

It has been in use for more than twenty years; thousands of patients have been treated and one thousand physicians have used it, and recommended it,—a very significant fact.

The great success of our treatment has given rise to a host of imitators, unscrupulous persons; some calling their preparations compound-oxygen, often appropriating our testimonials and the names of our patients, to recommend worthless concoctions. But any substance made elsewhere or by others and called Compound Oxygen, is spurious.

"Compound Oxygen—Its Mode, Action and Result," is the title of a new book of 300 pages, published by Drs. Starkey & Palen, which gives to all inquirers full information as to this remarkable curative agent, and a record of surprising cures in a wide range of chronic cases—many of them after being abandoned to die by other physicians. Will be mailed free to any address on application.

NAVAL OFFICERS CAUGHT SMUGGLING.

Dutiable Goods Discovered on Board the Omaha and Swatara.

At San Francisco, a sensation was created in naval circles when it was learned that a large amount of dutiable goods had been seized on the United men-of-war Omaha and Swatara on their arrival. It is the usual custom for the chief officers of men-of-war coming from Oriental ports to submit manifests of articles brought in by officers. In the case of the Omaha and Swatara this was neglected and a search by Special Agent Evans revealed the presence of a large amount of valuable silks and curios which are dutiable. The entire list of articles amount in value to several thousand dollars. Special Agent Evans has written to Washington asking if the chief officers of these vessels shall be indicted as ordinary smugglers.

SIR WILLIAM DID CHEAT.

And the Prince of Wales Owned the Gambling Outfit.

The jury in the baccarat scandal case at London returned a verdict against Sir William Gordon Cumming. He had brought suit for slander against several persons who accused him of cheating. In the game in question the Prince of Wales participated, and he was called as a witness. It was proved that Wales not only started the game, but that he owned the "lay-out." Just like any ordinary gambler. The whole affair is most scandalous, and will result in Cumming's expulsion from the army.

SHOT ON THE CHURCH STEPS

SHOT ON THE CHURCH STEPS.

A Man Fatally Wounded in a Dispute as He Was About to Enter a Meeting House.

At a country church near Warrior, Ala., a large congregation was engaged in worship when they were suddenly startled by the reports of two pistol shots on the front steps. Hall Hambrick and James Jett had a dispute about a shovel-handle and at church renewed the quarrel, winding it up after everybody else was indoors and a lone could interfere. Hambrick was fatally wounded, and in the uproar that followed Jett escaped.

Three Deaths from Hydrophobia.

Recently a mad dog bit a steer, one of the herd of cattle belonging to the Vanderburg Brothers, living in the western portion of Atchison County, Kansas. The steer was soon afflicted with hydrophobia, which spread to other members of the herd. There were three of the Vanderburg brothers, and each of them was bitten by one or another of the infected animals. Two of the men have died in the most excruciating agony, and the third can survive a day or two at the furthest.

Mackerel on the African Coast.

The Alice, the pioneer fishing schooner to Africa, returned from a twenty months' cruise, brought about fifty barrels of mackerel, and has sent home nearly one thousand barrels. The Alice aroused the jealousy of the local fishermen, as one sweep of the American seine took more fish than all the other fishermen could catch during the day. After a hot fight a law was passed prohibiting the use of the deep-water seine, which spoiled the Alice's fishing at Cape Town.

Prize Fight in a Church.

Jack Stutz and Dave Glass fought for a purse of $10 a side at Centerville, Ind. The house where the fight occurred is used as a church and schoolhouse, and nine of the spectators brought their wives to see the disgraceful show. Glass sprained his arm, and the fight was called a draw. No arrests.

Tennessee Counterfeiters Run to Earth.

A gang of counterfeiters, whose headquarters were at Dayton, Tenn., have been run to earth. Their mint was in the basement of a saloon, and in it were found a pile of bogus dollars well calculated to deceive; also the molds for casting them three at a time.

The appraisers appointed to inventory the estate of the late P. T. Barnum have completed their work and filed the result with the Probate Court. Following is the total: Personal property, $1,283,539; real estate, $2,993,953; grand total, $4,277,532.

Tried to Bribe a Juror in the Mafia Case.

At New Orleans Bernard Glauudi was convicted of offering a bribe of $500 to Henry B. Atwood, a tales juror in the Hennessey case. The jury was out only three hours.

No Fooling with Hippolyte.

Since the suppression of the recent outbreak in Hayti, President Hippolyte has had several hundred persons supposed to be in sympathy with the insurgents shot.

Is She a Real Poacher?

The United States revenue cutter Corwin has been instructed to overhaul the steamer Hatle Gage, which sailed from San Francisco ostensibly for Unga Island, Alaska. It is stated that the real destination of the Gage is Behring Sea, where she will engage in seal poaching.

Shot and Killed the Postmaster.

B. M. Clark, postmaster of Old Jefferson, Tenn., was shot and killed by an unknown assassin as he was leaving the residence of Miss Susie Wade, where he had been making a call.

TABERNACLE PULPIT.

REV. DR. TALMAGE PREACHES ON THE BURDEN BEARER.

His First Discourse Since He Was Made Chaplain of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts.

The subject of Dr. Talmage's sermon last Sunday morning was "The Burden Bearer," and his text Psalms iv, 22: "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee."

David was here taking his own medicine. If anybody had on him heavy weights, David had them, and yet out of his own experience he advises you and me as to the best way of getting rid of burdens. This is a world of burden bearing. Coming into the house of prayer there may be no sign of sadness or sorrow, but where is the man who has not a conflict? Where is the soul that has not a struggle? And there is not a day of all the year when my text is not gloriously appropriate, and there is never an audience assembled on the planet where the text does not fit the occasion. "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee."

In the far East wells of water are so infrequent that when a man owns a well he has a property of very great value, and sometimes battles have been fought for the possession of one well of water; but there is one well that every man owns, a deep well, a perennial well, a well of tears. If a man has not a burden on this shoulder, he has a burden on the other shoulder. The day I left home to look after myself and for myself, in the wagon my father sat driving, he said that day something has kept with me all my life: "De Witt, it is always safe to trust God. I have many a time come to a crisis of difficulty. You may know that, having been sick for fifteen years, it was no easy thing for me to support a family; but always God came to the rescue. I remember the time," he said, "when I didn't know what to do, and I saw a man on horseback riding up the farm lane, and he announced to me that I had been nominated for the most lucrative office in the gift of the people of the county; and to that office I was elected, and God in that way met all my wants, and I tell you it is always safe to trust Him." Oh, my friends, what we want is a practical religion! The religion people have is so high up you cannot reach it. I have a friend who entered the life of an evangelist. He gave up a lucrative business in Chicago, and he and his wife finally came to severe want. He told me that in the morning at prayers he said: "O Lord, thou knowest we have not a mouthful of food in the house! Help us, help us!"

And he started out on the street, and a gentleman met him and said: "I have been thinking of you for a good while. You know I am a flour merchant; if you won't be offended I should like to send you a barrel of flour." My friend cast his burden on the Lord, and the Lord sustained him. In the Straits of Magellan, I have been told, there is a place where, whichever way a ship captain puts his ship he finds the wind against him, and there are men who all their lives have been running into the teeth of the wind, and which way to turn they do not know. Some of them may be here this morning, and I address them face to face, not perfunctorily, but as one brother talks to another brother, "Cast thy burden upon the Lord and He shall sustain thee."

First—There are a great many men who have business burdens. When we see a man hurried and perplexed and annoyed in business life we are apt to say: "He ought not to have attempted to carry so much." Ah! that man may not be to blame at all. When a man plants a business he does not know what will be its outgrowth, what will be its roots, what will be its branches. There is many a man with keen foresight and large business faculty who has been flung into the dust by unforeseen circumstances springing upon him from ambush. When to buy, when to sell, when to trust, and to what amount of credit, what will be the effect of this new invention of machinery, what will be the effect of that loss of crop, and a thousand other questions perplex business men, until their hair is silvered and deep wrinkles are plowed in the cheek; and the stocks go up and the mountains and go down by the valleys, and they are at their wits' ends, and stagger like drunken men.

There never has been a time when there have been such rivalries in business as now. It is hardware against hardware, books against books, candlery against candlery, imported article against imported article. A thousand stores in combat with another thousand stores. Never such advantage of light, never such variety of assortment, never so much splendor of show window, never so much adroitness of salesmen, never so much acuteness of advertising, and amid all these severities of rivalry in business, how many men break down! Oh, the burden on the shoulder! Oh, the burden on the heart! You hear that it is avarice which drives these men through the street, and that is the commonly accepted idea. I do not believe a word of it. The vast multitude of these business men are toiling on for others. To educate their children, to put the wing of protection over their households, to have something left, so when they pass out of this life their wives and children will not have to go to the poorhouse—that is the way I translate this energy in the street and store—the vast majority of that energy. Grip, Gouge & Co. do not do all the business of the world. Ah! my friend, do you say that God does not care anything about your worldly business? I tell you God knows more about it than you do. He knows all your perplexities; He knows what mortgage is about to foreclose; He knows what note you cannot pay; He knows what unsalable goods you have on your shelves; He knows all your trials, from the day you took hold of the first yard stick down to the sale of the last yard of ribbon, and the God who helped David to be king, and who helped Daniel to be prime minister, and who helped Havelock to be a soldier, will help you to discharge all your duties. He is going to see you through. When loss comes, and you find your property going, just take this Book and put it down by your ledger, and read of the eternal possessions that will come to you through our Lord Jesus Christ. And when your business partner betrays you, and your friends turn against you, just take the insulting letter, and then read of the friendship of him who "sticketh closer than a brother."

A young accountant in New York city got his accounts entangled. He knew he was honest, and yet he could not make his accounts come out right, and he toiled at them day and night until he was nearly frenzied. It seemed by those books that something had been misappropriated, and he knew before God he was honest. The last day came. He knew if he could not that day make his accounts come out right he would go into disgrace and go into banishment from the business establishment. He went over there very early, before there was anybody in the place, and he knelt down at the desk and said: "Oh, Lord, thou knowest I have tried to be honest, but I cannot make these things come out right! Help me to-day—help me this morning!" The young man arose, and hardly knowing why he did so, opened a book that lay on the desk, and there was a leaf containing a line of figures which explained everything.

Second—There are a great many who have a weight of persecution and abuse upon them. Sometimes society gets a grudge against a man. All his motives are misinterpreted and his good deeds are depreciated. With more virtue than some of the honored and applauded, he runs only against railery and sharp criticism. When a man begins to go down he has not only the force of natural gravitation, but a hundred hands to help him in the precipitation. Men are persecuted for their virtues and their successes. Germanicus said he had just as many bitter antagonists as he had adornments.

The character sometimes is so lustrous that the weak eyes of envy and jealousy cannot bear to look at it. It was their integrity that put Joseph in the pit, and Daniel in the den, and Shadrach in the fire, and sent John the Evangelist to desolate Patmos, and Calvin to the castle of persecution, and John Huss to the stake, and Korah after Moses, and Saul after David, and Herod after Christ. Be sure if you have anything to do for church or state, and you attempt it with all your soul, the lightning will strike you.

The world always has a cross between two thieves for the one who comes to save it. High and holy enterprise has always been followed by abuse. The most sublime tragedy of self-sacrifice has come to burlesque. The graceful gait of virtue is always followed by grimace and travesty. The sweetest strain of poetry ever written has come to ridiculous parody, and as long as there are virtue and righteousness in the world there will be something for iniquity to grin at. All along the line of the ages, and in all lands, the cry has been: "Not this man, but Barabbas. Now Barabbas was a robber."

And what makes the persecution of life worse is that they come from people whom you have helped, from those to whom you have loaned money or have started in business, or whom you rescued in some great crisis. I think it has been the history of all our lives—the most acrimonious assault has come from those whom we have benefited, whom we have helped, and that makes it all the harder to bear. A man is in danger of becoming cynical.

A clergyman of the Universalist church went into a neighborhood for the establishment of a church of his denomination, and he was anxious to find some one of that denomination, and he was pointed to a certain house and went there. He said to the man of the house, "I understand you are a Universalist; I want you to help me in the enterprise." "Well," said the man, "I am a Universalist, but I have a peculiar kind of universalism." "What is that?" asked the minister. "Well," replied the other, "I have been out in the world, and I have been cheated and slandered and outraged and abused until I believe in universal damnation!" The great danger is that men will become cynical and given to believe, as David was tempted to say, that all men are liars. Oh, my friends, do not let that be the effect upon your souls!

If you cannot endure a little persecution, how do you think our fathers endured great persecutions? Motley, in his "Dutch Republic," tells us of Ezr. mont, the martyr, who, condemned to be beheaded, unfasted his collar on the way to the scaffold, and when they asked him why he did that he said, "So they will not be detained in their work; I want to be ready." Oh, how little we have to endure compared with those who have gone before us!

Now, if you have come across ill treatment, let me tell you you are in excellent company—Christ and Luther and Galileo and Columbus and John Jay and Josiah Quincy and thousands of men and women, the best spirits of earth and Heaven. Budge not one inch, though all hell wreck upon you its vengeance, and you be made a target for devils to shoot at. Do you not think Christ knows all about persecution? Was He not bled at? Was He not struck on the cheek? Was He not pursued all the days of his life? Did they not exasperate upon Him? Or, to put it in Bible language, "They spit upon Him." And cannot He understand what persecution is? "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee."

Third—There are others who carry great burdens of physical ailments. When sudden sickness has come, and fierce cholera and malignant fevers take the castle of life by storm, we appeal to God; but in these chronic ailments which wear out the strength day after day, and week after week, and year after year, how little resorting to God for solace! Then people depend upon their tonics, and their plasters, and their cordials, rather than upon heavenly stimulants. Oh, how few people there are completely well. Some of you, by dint of perseverance and care, have kept living to this time; but how you have had to war against physical ailments! Antediluvians, without medical college and infirmary and apothecary shop, multiplied their years by hundreds, but he who has gone through the gauntlet of disease in our time, and has come to 70 years of age, is a hero worthy of a palm.

The world seems to be a great hospital, and you run against rheumatism and consumptions and scrofulas and neuralgias and scores of old diseases baptized by new nomenclature. Oh, how heavy a burden sickness is! It takes the color out of the sky and the sparkle out of the wave and the sweetness out of the fruit and the luster out of the night.

When the limbs ache, when the respiration is painful, when the mouth is hot, when the ear roars with unhealthy obstructions, how hard it is to be patient and cheerful and assiduous! "Cast thy burden upon the Lord." Does your head ache? His wore the thorn. Do your feet hurt? His was crushed of the spikes: By your side painful? His was struck by the spear. Do you feel like giving way under the burden? His weakness gave way under the cross.

When you are in every possible way to try to restore your physical vigor, you are to remember that more soothing than any anodyne, and more vitalizing than any stimulant, and more strengthening than any tonic is the prescription of the text, "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee." We hear a great deal of talk now about faith cure, and some people say it cannot be done and it is a failure. I do not know but what the chief advance of the church is to be in that direction. Marvelous things come to me day by day which make me think that if the age of miracles is past it is because the faith of miracles is past.

Another burden some have to carry is the burden of bereavement. Ah! these are the troubles that wear us out. If we lose our property, by additional industry, perhaps we may bring back the estranged fortune! If we lose our good name, perhaps by reformation of morals we may achieve again reputation for integrity; but who will bring back the dear departed? Alas! me for these empty cradles and these trunks of childish toys that will never be used again. Alas! me for the empty chair and the silence in the halls that will never echo again to those familiar footprints. Alas! for the cry of widowhood and orphanage.

What bitter Marahs in the wilderness! What cities of the dead! What long black shadow from the wing of death! What eyes sunken with grief! What hands tremulous with bereavement! What instruments of music shut now because there are no fingers to play on them! Is there no relief for such souls? Aye, let the soul ride into the harbor of my text.

The soul that on Jesus hath leaned for repose, I will not, I will not desert to its foes; That soul, though all hell shall endeavor to shake, I'll never, no never, no never forsake.

Now, the grave is brighter than the ancient tomb where the lights were continually kept burning. The scarred feet of him who was "the resurrection and the life" are on the broken grave hillock, while voices of angels ring down the sky at the coronation of another soul come home to glory.

Then there are many who carry the burden of sin. Ah, we carry it until in the appointed way that burden is lifted. We need no Bible to prove that the whole race is ruined. What a spectacle it would be if we could tear off the mask of human delirium, or beat a drum that would bring up the whole army of the world's transgressions—the deception, the fraud, and the rapine, and the murder, and the crime of all the centuries! Aye, if I could sound the trumpet of resurrection in the soul of the best men in this audience, and all the dead sins of the past should come up, we could not endure the sight. Sin, grim and dire, has put its clutch upon the immortal soul, and that clutch never will relax unless it be under the heel of Him who came to destroy the works of the devil.

Oh, to have a mountain of sin in the soul! Is there no way to have the burden moved? Oh yes, "Cast thy burden upon the Lord." The sinless One came to take the consequences of our sin! And I know He is in earnest. How do I know it? By the streaming temples and the streaming hands as He says, "Come unto me all ye who are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Why will prodigals live on swines' huts when the robe and the ring, and the father's welcome are ready? Why go wandering over the great Sahara desert of sin when you are invited to the gardens of God, the trees of life and the fountains of living water? Why be homeless and homeless forever when you may become the sons and the daughters of the Lord God Almighty?

It has been objected to those who speak of the "emotions" of an ant or a bee, for example, that we are not justified in applying terms derived from human psychology to animals so remote in structure from the human type. Dr. Romanes replies to this objection by showing that the ground of all inferences as to the mental processes of animals is an argument from the analogy of their actions with our own. "Now, it is of course perfectly true that the less the resemblance the less is the value of any analogy built upon the resemblance, and, therefore, that the inference of an ant or a bee feeling sympathy or rage is not so valid as the similar inference in the case of a dog or a monkey. Still it is an inference, and, so far as it goes, a valid one—being, in fact, the only inference available. That is to say, if we observe an ant or a bee apparently exhibiting sympathy or rage, we must either conclude that some psychological state resembling that of sympathy or rage is present, or else refuse to think about the subject at all; from the obvious fact there is no other inference open."

Assuming that we are justified in concluding that the mental processes are similar when there are similar external appearances, we still need a criterion of mental, as distinguished from reflex, action; for we find, both in men and animals, examples of actions that are "mind-like and yet not truly mental." Objectively considered, the only distinction between adaptive movements due to reflex-action and adaptive movements due to mental perception consists in the former depending on inherited mechanism within the nervous system being so constructed as to effect particularly adaptive movements in response to particular stimulations, while the latter are independent of any such inherited adjustment of special mechanism to the exigencies of special circumstances. The criterion proposed is, therefore: "Does the organism learn to make new adjustments, or to modify old ones, in accordance with the results of its own individual experience?" If it does we have the evidence that the limit of non-mental action has been passed; that is, we are able to fix, by means of this criterion, "the upper limit of non-mental action." After distinguishing reflex from mental action, it remains to distinguish "instinct" from "reason." Dr. Romanes proposes to define instinct as "reflex action into which here is imported the element of consciousness," and "reason or intelligence" as "the faculty which is concerned in the intentional adaptation of means to ends."

MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE.

The House on the 2d passed a bill appropriating $100,000 for the State exhibit at the World's Fair. The committee of the whole agreed to $150,000, but the House did not concur. A committee was appointed to investigate the charges of bribery against Representatives Doyle and Munroe of the Upper Peninsula. The House passed a bill providing for an entire change in the system of control of schools. It provides for the election of one County Commissioner of Schools by the people, and two assistants by the Board of Supervisors in each county, the three to constitute a Board of Examiners. The compensation is graded according to the number of schools in the county; that is counties having fifty schools to be not less than $400, and in counties having as high as 125 not less than $1,500, but amounts in excess of these sums may be allowed in the discretion of the Board of Supervisors. The Senate passed a bill appropriating $12,000 for establishing employment bureaus at Detroit, Grand Rapids, Saginaw, Kalamazoo, Manistee, Sault Ste. Marie, St. Joseph, and Ishpeming.

SENATOR BASTONE's bill to provide uniform school text books passed the House on the 4th. The bill was amended so that it will not go into operation until the first Monday in June, 1893. After that day all school books except in cities of over 4,000 population must be uniform. A commission composed of the Secretary of State and the State Board of Education will purchase the books on five years' contracts or order them printed at State expense if they cannot be purchased as cheaply as Michigan can print them. The branches which will uniformly be used are: Reading, civics, government, history, grammar, physiology, hygiene, arithmetic, geography, and the theory and art of teaching. The books will be supplied through the office of the Secretary of State to the districts at cost. The House passed a substitute for the Senate redistricting bill a measure in which Detroit is divided up among three districts. Both Houses, under a suspension of the rules, passed bills consolidating Benton Harbor and St. Joseph as independent cities. This ends all attempts to consolidate the cities. In the House the bill to increase the specific tax on express companies to 5 per cent. of their earnings on Michigan business was defeated by a close vote.

On the 5th, the committee investigating the charges of bribery made against Representatives Doyle and Munroe of the Upper Peninsula, called as first witness Representative Eaton, Commander of the Michigan Department of the G. A. R., who testified that William C. Graves, a newspaper correspondent, had shown him an affidavit signed by Senator J. H. D. Stevens, of Ironwood, which contained the charges of bribery substantially as they have appeared in public press. Mr. Graves was not summoned, but, upon being asked if he showed Col. Eaton the affidavit referred to, he refused to answer, and further more declined to give any reason for such refusal. This brought the investigation to a standstill, and the committee reported the matter to the House, with the recommendation that Graves be adjudged to be in contempt of the House and ordered arrested. The Senate passed the House game bill, but has changed the season for shooting deer in the Upper Peninsula from the month of September to the two weeks between Oct. 15 and Nov. 1. The Senate also passed Jackson's fish bill giving the public the right to fish on navigable waters wherever fish have been or may be planted at the expense of the State. The bill was designed to prevent sporting clubs from securing exclusive privileges, but its usefulness in this direction was sadly impaired by the striking out of the provision granting the right to shoot wild fowl on navigable waters. The House passed the bill providing an annual salary for county clerks, treasurers, and registers of deeds, in lieu of the present fee system, and killed the bill requiring private bankers to report to the Commissioners of Banking and submit to examination by that official.

Our Flag Victorious in the Old World.

The only town in the Old World ever captured by the United States is the Town of Derne, in Tripoli, on the north coast of Africa. The inhabitants were chiefly Moors, Turks and Arabs, of the Mohammedan religion. The ports of the Barbary States—Algiers, Morocco, Tunis and Tripoli—were infested with pirates, who darted out upon vessels which sailed up and down the Mediterranean Sea, and after plundering them, either murdered the crew or sold them into slavery. These pirates became the terror of Europe; and some mercantile countries had to pay a yearly tribute, in order to secure safety for their vessels.

England was the only nation feared by these pirates; and, so long as American vessels sailed under the English flag they were reasonably secure; but when the United States became a separate nation, the pirates demanded tribute. For a time the Government paid the tribute, as the easiest way to secure her commerce; but in 1801 the Dey of Tripoli grew so bold as to declare war against the United States, being dissatisfied with the payment of the tributes.

For four years a series of fights took place, until, in 1804, the American navy having been increased in the Mediterranean Sea, a vigorous attack was made upon the pirates. General Eaton succeeded in taking Derne, one of their ports, and raised the American flag over it. This was the first and last time our flag was unfurled in victory over a foreign town. A treaty of peace was made, prisoners were exchanged, and piracy for a time came to an end.

MICHIGAN HAPPENINGS.

INCIDENTS THAT HAVE LATELY OCCURRED.

An Interesting Summary of the More Important Doings of Our Neighbors—Weddings and Deaths—Crimes, Casualties, and General News Notes.

It is estimated that at least 500,000,000 feet of timber in the Menominee River district has been damaged by forest fires during the past six or eight weeks, involving a loss to the owners of at least $2,000,000. The fires have extended over an immense tract of country from the tier of towns numbering thirty-eight northward, many miles north of Iron River. All of the large lumber companies have lost heavily. Nearly all of the burned timber must be cut during the summer, winter and fall, or it will never be worth cutting at all, as the pine worm will play havoc with it. The cut during the coming season will be the largest ever known in the upper country, and next spring's drive will be unprecedentedly large.

REV. BARR, of Bad Axe, went over to Tyre recently and preached a powerfully impressive sermon, but some of the impressions fell on stony ground, for some hard-hearted wretch stole the preacher's hat.

BERTHA WILSON, of Alamo, died, and now it is said she took morphine to end her disappointment over a love affair. No inquest was held.

SAGINAW is 20,000,000 feet behind its lumber shipments at a corresponding date last year. The strikes and Canadian lumber are said to be the causes.

FRANK TREPOREK, of Bay City, put $100 into a stove, and his wife came along and made kindling of it. They rescued only $20.

THE Bay City, Caro. and Port Huron Railroad has apparently failed to go. Colonel Boone, who projected the idea and got large promises of bonus, has completely disappeared from sight, at least just now.

THE Gratiot Circuit Court has thirteen divorce cases, besides five more suppressed ones that will come up if the court-room is not too crowded.

HARLOW HERRICK, of Ionia, is dead. He was a pioneer, and lived to be 90 years old.

OTSEGO COUNTY votes by a very small majority to bond for a $12,000 court house at Gaylord.

THE new $80,000 Polish Catholic Church at Bay City will be ready for dedication in August. It is a marvel of magnificence built by a few thousand poverty-stricken parishioners.

CHARLES JONES, of Richland, is the president of a new Kalamazoo County poultry association.

GEORGE T. CROSS, of Saginaw, has bought 200,000 feet of hard wood in central Kentucky.

BAY CITY's two murder cases go over to September because somebody neglected to have the witnesses ready.

THE Owosso fire department is yet waiting for a vote of thanks for assistance rendered in the late fire at Ashley, not to mention the $100 promised.

THE St. Clair postoffice lost $40 worth of stamps by a burglar's visit. The job was well done and almost under the nose of the night watchman.

PINNEBOG has just discovered that it can connect with artesian wells at a depth of seventy-seven feet. Pinnebog is in Huron County.

DR. WM. H. CLARK has been buckled into the harness as pastor of the Saginaw First Presbyterian Church.

DR. R. P. DE VOER, of Muir, sues Farmer King for $10,000, alleging slander in accusing malpractice.

JUDGE SHERWOOD, of Kalamazoo, who was stricken with paralysis the other day, is getting well.

STATE SALT INSPECTOR CASEY reports nearly 400,000 barrels of salt inspected during May. The districts and amounts are: Manistee County, 121,184 barrels; Bay, 84,400; Saginaw, 77,081; Mason, 44,115; Iosco, 32,362; St. Clair, 21,560; Huron, 3,613; Midland,

SATURDAY, JUNE, 13 1891.

The Attractions for 1891.

Have you been at Ottawa Beach since the season has opened, and taken a survey of the changes and the numerous improvements that have been made there this spring?—is a question constantly heard on the streets, and unless one has been there and spent some time in viewing them all, he can form no conception of what has been accomplished there within the last few weeks.

As an index to the present situation it should be understood first that the lessee of Ottawa Beach this year is none other than Mr. Charles M. Heald, the active manager of the C. & W. M. and D. L. & N. railroads, and that the management of this resort is now being conducted upon a basis which cannot help but insure success—in fact, it may be considered that, for the present at least, the Ottawa Beach resort is a part of the C. & W. M. system, and that it rests under the very supervision and efficiency that have made this railroad system such a favorite among the public.

The continuation of the track from the Hotel to the beach, for a distance of nearly half a mile, was only an entering wedge and the starting point of an elaborate system of improvements along the beach of Lake Michigan, the completion of which have converted that heretofore barren spot into one of the most beautiful places found at any resort in then orth-west.

At the end of this track, near the bath houses, and only a few rods from the beach, there has been laid out a plaza 500 feet long and 50 feet wide, with fountains and flower beds, sodded border and walks, and seats on all sides. For special use at this plaza an independent system of water works has been established, with pipes leading in all directions. In the evening colored lights will be dispersed among the playing fountains and two powerful headlights at each end of the plaza will illuminate the whole.

The plaza is flanked by two semi-rustic pavilion buildings. The further one at the north end is the Lunch Pavilion, 80x50, with check room. This has been put in charge of W. N. Daniels, and the furniture and outfit for this hall is now being specially manufactured by Nelson & Matter, of Grand Rapids. The other building is the Casino, 40x70, and arranged for social hops and evening parties. The beach in this vicinity will be cleared up and all the wood carted away. The number of bath houses has also been increased and for the special benefit of the timid "you know," three large barrels will be anchored at a distance out in Lake Michigan, with guide ropes extending to the shore.

In addition to this there will be a music stand which can be wheeled to any part of the grounds, also a merry-go-round and other amusements; recreations for the little folks will be constantly furnished.

These attractions at the beach will greatly relieve the Hotel and the hotel grounds of the immense throngs that crowd in there on the occasion of special excursions, of which there will be an unusual large number this season. Hence all trains upon their arrival at Ottawa Beach will first run through to the lake and then return to the Hotel. A steam dummy and pavilion car, very ingeniously arranged, will run every ten minutes between the hotel and the plaza, and the material is being hauled on the ground for the construction of a serpentine path between the two localities, which will wind its way partly over the bluffs, and be one mile in length.

The inspiring and creative genius in all this enterprise is the gentleman who at present occupies the position of Gen'l Passenger Agent of the C. & W. M. and D. L. & N. railroads, Mr. Geo. De Haven. It is one of his ways of advertising, and of drawing general attention; and it is the success which has marked all his undertakings in this line which argues so well for the future of Ottawa Beach.

The same line of improving and beautifying which will make the plaza the loveliest spot on Lake Michigan has also been carried on at and around the Hotel grounds. Large plats have been graded and sodded; the walk to the annex has been covered; flower baskets in great number suspended from the piazzas; new cottages have been built, walks laid out, etc., etc.

In the Hotel proper the improvement which first strikes the eye and produces a very favorable impression is the enlargement of the office. This has been done by tearing out all the rooms in the south wing and adding this additional ground floor to the already spacious office. The wash room is new and in another part of the first floor. The ladies' parlor upstairs has been re-papered and painted and the nursery located on the floor above. As a part of the hotel arrangement, and what will be of great convenience to guests, they have managed to have the telegraph, telephone, mail and express all located in the same building. The news stand is in charge of F. C. Spring of Grand Rapids; the music will be supplied by Tomasso's Orchestra, of Chicago; the office duties will be performed by H. B. Saynor, assistant manager; while the amusements and decorations will be under the special direction of J. H. Alliger, who of late years has been similarly connected with the leading resorts in the land.

The actual management of the Hotel Ottawa is with Mr. C. H. Southwick, a gentleman who has spent years in the hotel business and is at present in charge also of the new Livingston, Grand Rapids. For several seasons he was the successful landlord of The Ashville, in North Carolina. The many departments are placed under direct supervision of experienced assistants, each of whom is responsible for the success of his part.

The entire outfit of the Hotel, with its additions, is complete, and as now arranged, Ottawa Beach extends hearty greeting to the public and a cordial invitation to the summer tourist from near and afar.

Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Whoever heard of a medicine that a druggist will let you take two or three doses of without charge, because there is just as much left after you and others have sampled it? Whoever heard of a medicine that will last one person a year or more, but which costs but 50c.—1,000 treatments for 50c? Whoever heard of a medicine that is pleasant to take, can be carried in the pocket, and will give relief in five minutes? These "peculiarities" and many more are true of Cushman's Menthol Inhaler, which is endorsed by the leading physicians of the world for curing Headache, Neuralgia, Cold, Catarrh, Sore throat, Asthma and Bronchitis. Lansing Notes.

Although the season for the final adjournment of the legislature is at hand and most of the members realize that they ought to go home, they are not in a position to even designate the date nor anywhere near approximate the time when they will disperse. There is too much general legislation that has been neglected or postponed. Platform planks, campaign promises and gubernatorial recommendations are still unfulfilled and several important measures hung up in committee. The people were promised a radical revolution in the system of taxation and in the manner of collecting delinquent taxes, but as the leading minds are brought face to face with these innovations, they shrink from the task and lack the nerve to pass the proposed measures. And well they might. The election bill, to bring the present system in closer harmony with the so-called Australian system is also still awaiting action.

Then there is the apportionment, railway, telegraph and telephone bills, the world's fair bill, the Detroit charter, the bills consolidating the state boards of control, and several big appropriation bills. All these are still side-tracked in one house or the other, while the tax, election, and liquor bills are not even reported from the committees.

In addition to this the House and Senate have each a case of alleged bribery of one or more of its members on their hands, which call for investigation, and unavoidably absorb a large share of the attention which otherwise might be devoted to public business. Take it all in all, and the Legislature of 1891, as a reform body, cannot be pronounced a success.

The bill providing for the introduction of the kindergarten method and making it a part of the public school system of our state, introduced by Rep. Diekema, in the House, has passed the Senate and been approved by the governor.

Under the new apportionment bills, which are likely to become law, the old senatorial connection between Ottawa and Muskegon counties has been severed and Allegan and Ottawa have been grouped together and will constitute the 19th Senatorial District, while Muskegon, Oceana and Mason counties will make up the 20th. The 5th Congressional district will comprise Kent, Ottawa and Ionia, and Allegan county has been gerrymandered into the fourth.

Gov. Winans has approved the new charters of St. Joseph and Benton Harbor, incorporating each as a city. The project of consolidating the two cities into one, under the name of Port Michigan, was wrecked upon the issue of the name. St. Joseph was too old a name and with it was associated too much history than that it could consent to its being wiped out, and the past strife and jealousy between the two villages had been too intense than that the Benton Harbor people would consent to being wiped out, by name, from the map, in order to be hereafter designated as part of a new corporation bearing that much despised name of St. Joseph.

The legislative correspondent of the G. R. Tel.-Herald recently gave the following pen picture of the two leading members of the House, Rep. Barkworth, of Jackson, a democrat, and Rep. Diekema, of this district:

"Gerrit J. Diekema, of Holland, is in length of service, the senior member of the House. He is of Dutch descent, and a fourth-term in office. By seniority, experience and natural fitness, he is the leader of his party. In early life his lines fell in much pleasanter places than his opponent's, Representative Barkworth. He received a collegiate training at Hope College, and a legal education at the University of Michigan, so that he entered his chosen profession well equipped.

"He is the best parliamentarian of the House. He is as quick to detect and challenge any irregularity of procedure as Representative Barkworth is on an unconstitutional provision. His skill in practice has enabled him to lead the Democratic majority into an embarrassing position. With a sober, deacon-like expression on his face he once moved a very innocent appearing amendment to a set of resolutions, which was agreed to before the Democrats realized that they had been entrapped into an endorsement of simon-pure James G. Blaine reciprocity.

"Though not so strong a constitutional lawyer as Representative Barkworth, Mr. Diekema is no novice in measuring bills by the constitutional standard. His experience in practical legislation has made him ready in detecting the weak points in a pending measure. Mr. Barkworth has been accustomed to criticising the finished acts of the Legislature and exposing their weakness, while Mr. Diekema has taken the crude material and worked it up into the finished product. They have criticised legislation from widely different standpoints. The skill and experience of the one supplement and complete those of the other. As associate members of the Committee on Judiciary, each fills a niche that could not be so well filled by the other.

"Mr. Diekema's speeches are more finished than Mr. Barkworth's. His superior educational training becomes apparent upon a comparison of the two. His style is much more rhetorical, but less logical than Mr. Barkworth's. At times his language is exceedingly chaste and beautiful. He is never labored in speech. His rhetoric is just as much a part of the man himself as is Mr. Barkworth's logic. As Mr. Barkworth's logical style never becomes tedious, so does Mr. Diekema's ornate style never become nauseating. Each one keeps his peculiarity well under control. As a result, each one is listened to with pleasure, and an oratorical tilt between the two is a genuine treat.

"Mr. Diekema is gifted with a delicate sarcasm, which he uses with discretion and, hence, invariably with effect. He is quick in repartee and has never yet been worsted on the floor of the House. His private character is unblemished and no one has found a flaw in his official record. This gives him high standing among his associates, who recognize and admit his real worth. Of the two political opponents it must be said that they are warm personal friends."

CHRISTINA'S GUARDIAN.

"There's a telegram, Chris! They will be here by the 6.30."

Christina Barrett turned round quickly. "Really and truly?" she cried. "You are not chaffing?"

"Honor bright; look! here it is."

Christina read the paper eagerly, and then fairly danced up the steps into the hall, saying: "My dear old guardian! Now, I shall have somebody belonging to me at last."

Janet and May Drayton watched her half sadly; they had parents, and brothers, and cousins innumerable, but poor little Chris was alone in the world. Then the excitement of the new arrivals was too much for them, and Janet, full of the subject, went on. "We have not seen Will for five years. How long is it since you saw Major Wetheral?"

"Fifteen years!" said Christina, sobering down at once. "I was four years old when I left India, and I had not seen father for seven years before his death."

"Oh! girls, whatever you do, don't have anything to do with native regiments."

"I would not for anything!" cried May. "Just look at you and your people. Why, it's worse than exiles."

Janet said nothing; somebody was trying for the staff corps, and she thought it advisable to change the subject before it became personal, so she suggested that the other two had better take things off, as it was just tea time, and no one thought anything more about partings, for the meeting absorbed everybody. Major Wetheral was in a sad mood all the journey down from town. Christina was the only child of his dearest friend, besides being his playmate and ward; and only a year previously Col. Barrett was preparing to return, when he got fever and died after two days' illness. Christina was likely to be a serious charge, for she had lately inherited a large fortune from the distant relative who had taken care of her ever since her return from India, and the Major would have to attend to all the business, which had been interrupted by Col. Barrett's death.

Christina always spoke of Major Wetheral as her old guardian, and his appearance rather bore out her words, for his dark hair was plentifully streaked with gray, and his face had many anxious lines about it. But it was care that had aged him, and his friendship with young Will Drayton was not quite such a strange affair as Janet and May thought, for he was barely forty, and as hale and strong as any officer in her Majesty's service.

The drawing room at Drayton Hall was brightly lighted, and dazzled the two men's eyes as they came out of the November darkness; but it was only for a moment, and then, while Will was embraced by his mother and sisters, a slender, golden-haired, black-robed figure came eagerly up to the Major, two hands clasped high, and a low, sweet voice said in his ear: "Oh! guardian, I am so glad to see you again," and all his dismal surmises vanished into thin air in a moment.

Christina was very pretty, and Major Wetheral, who saw the resemblance to her fair young mother, was very much struck with her; but he felt a little envious when he saw that Will Drayton admired her immensely. The young man managed to sit next to her at dinner, and it was very irritating to the Major to hear the two tongues going, and to know that Chris was asking all the questions that he ought to have answered, and that Will was drawing all the pictures of Lucknow and the native lines he had rehearsed in imagination. But after dinner the girl came up to him with her pretty, gentle manner, and said: "I want you to tell me so many things," and Major Wetheral was disarmed in a moment, and a long talk followed that was very pleasant to both.

"Where is Miss Barrett?" asked Will one day. "The ice bears and I want to give her a lesson."

"You won't get her this morning," answered May. "Major Wetheral has taken it into his head to make her a woman of business, and she is hard at work in the library learning the difference between real and personal property."

"Is she so rich, then?" inquired Will, who had for the last three weeks only regarded her as a pretty girl who was not a poor relation.

"She will have five thousand a year at least," said May impressively. "besides a lovely old place in Herefordshire; but everything is in such a mess owing to her father's death and the wording of the will that it will take the Major his two years' leave to get it in order."

"Why doesn't he leave it to the lawyers?" said Will, carelessly, and then sauntered out into the park.

Meantime Christina was giving all possible attention to her guardian's explanations, and showing so much comprehension and good sense that he was delighted with her.

"I am very glad you understand it all," he remarked kindly, "for you will have to look after these things yourself when I go back to India."

"Must you go back?" asked Christina.

"I am a poor man, dear, and must stay a bit longer. If I get the command of the regiment another year, I may be able to come home in five or six years."

"Or you may get fever, like daddy did," said the girl, piteously. "Oh! guardian, I wish you would stay and live with me."

"I could not do that, Chris," was the answer. "Some one else will want you one of these days."

"I don't want any one else," cried Chris. "Why can't you live with me?"

The major blushed. "I don't think Mrs. Grundy would allow it, dear, though I am twenty years older than you. You must marry some one—there will be plenty of people asking for you—and then I shall go back to my work with my mind at ease."

Christina said no more, but she thought to herself that she should never care for a young man as she did for her old guardian, and then, girl-like, she let the future be, and devoted herself to enjoying the present. They had a gay Christmas at Drayton Hall, and the young people made the most of it—they skated, they rode, they snowballed, according to the weather, with almost equal zest, and wherever Christina was Will was sure to be close by.

"What is the matter, Major?" The second post was in, and Major Wetheral had sat for quite five minutes with an open letter on his knee.

"Bad news, Chris!" he said cheerily. "They are going to send a force to Suakim, and my regiment has orders."

"Going to send Indian troops to Suakim? Nonsense!" cried Will; "they'll never do that."

"They are going to do it," answered the Major, "and my leave is cancelled in consequence—don't cry, Chris; be brave, like a soldier's daughter." But Christina was past being brave. She clung to him and sobbed, and begged him not to go, till he had to grow stern; and tell her not to be silly, and even then it was all they could do to soothe and quiet her again.

Major Wetheral was to join his regiment at Suakim, and found that if he went by Brindisi he should have a fortnight for preparations; and a very busy fortnight it was. Not only did he have to see to his own affairs, but as he did not shut his eyes to the probability of meeting his death in the war, he had to make arrangements for his ward's future.

"If anything happens to me, Chris, you will be made a ward in Chancery," he said to her one day. "But for the present Mrs. Drayton will keep you with her."

"I seem always to be a trouble," sighed Chris. "Shan't I be dreadfully in Mrs. Drayton's way?"

"Not a bit. On the contrary, they would be only too glad to keep you altogether. How would you like it, dear?"

"Like staying here?" answered the girl unhesitatingly. "Oh! they're very kind, and I am very fond of Janet and May; but I think I would rather be somewhere with you, guardian."

"I did not mean the girls, dear," said the Major kindly. "Some one else wants you." And then, as Christina looked up surprised, he added, "Will Drayton has been asking my leave to ask you to marry him, little girl. What do you say to that?"

Christina blushed. "I don't know," she said doubtfully. "I never thought about being married."

"I don't want you to marry unless you wish it," said the Major gravely. "But Will Drayton is a fine young fellow, and would make a good husband. You had better think about it."

"Would you like me to marry him?" asked the girl, with a look of decision which was new to her.

"I should be glad to think that you had some one to care for you in case of my death; but, as I said before, it is a matter for you to decide. So don't worry, little girl; some one else will turn up one of these days."

But though Major Wetheral tried to be cheerful, he felt anxious, for Christina's simplicity and gentleness had won her a very warm place in his heart, and it was hard to leave her without any one to take care of her. But Chris had made up her mind while he talked to her, and that evening, when Will Drayton took her into the conservatory, she knew what was coming, and prepared to please her godfather.

"I will marry you if you like," was her answer to his appeal. "The Major says I must marry somebody. But you won't marry me just yet, will you? And there was a frightened look in her blue eyes which made Will promise to give her as much time as she liked.

So Major Wetheral started, and Christina was left alone, and, strange to say, felt far more lonely now, in spite of her handsome lover, than she had done in the old days, when her guardian was still an abstraction and lovers were unknown.

March had come in, and the Draytons were in town, and had taken Christina with them. She was looking forward eagerly to the gaveties which would fall to her lot after Easter, and was enjoying various concerts and exhibitions all the more because Will's leave had come to an end, and he was with his regiment at Colchester.

They were an odd pair of lovers; at first he had looked forward to having a nice little wife, whose pretty face was made more charming by the addition of a large fortune; but since his engagement he had been falling deeper and deeper in love, and now wrote letters, and grumbled every moment that he had to send on his duties, and not in rushing up to town to see her. As to Christina, she had developed far more character than any one would ever have suspected of her—she was quieter, and her merry, childish ways had given place to a gravity which added womanliness to her gentle manner. But if Will had grown warmer, she was certainly colder; discouraged his vehement love making, absolutely refusing to spend the evenings tete-a-tete with him when he came up for a night; and answered his long letters with short notes once or twice a week. "I can't help it," she said, when he reproached her. "I can't make believe, and I hate spooning. If you behave yourself I will marry you some day, but if you want what I can't give you, we had better make an end of it."

The threat startled Will, who was far too much in love to risk the future, and he put his feelings so far aside as to behave what his fiancée called "quite nicely" from Saturday till Monday, when he had to return to Colchester.

Chris had taken to reading the papers, and between careful study of the news from the Suakim field-force and Major Wetheral's letters, had grown to be quite an authority about the war; but no one was prepared for the state of restless misery that came over her when the battle of Hashen was telegraphed. No list of killed and wounded came with the first news, and she had to wait what seemed to her endless hours before the special editions of the evening papers brought her what she had dreaded.

"Bombay Cavalry: Major Alfred

Wetheral severely wounded." Christina read, and then, to the horror of Janet Drayton, who was with her, collapsed onto the floor in a dead faint, from which she revived only to weep in the piteous childish fashion in which she had grieved over her departure. Particulars arrived in a few days. Major Wetheral had been wounded in the arm by an Arab sword, but had retained command of his men till a bullet in the thigh caused him to succumb. He was doing well, but there were grave fears for his arm, which would probably have to be amputated.

Christina heard it all dearly; he was injured, that was enough for her, and she grew wan and white, and looked so unlike herself that Mrs. Drayton got seriously anxious, and wrote to Will imploring him to get a couple of days' leave, and see what he could do to cheer the girl up.

Will came, and found Christina lying on the sofa, looking so delicate that he was frightened, and sat down by her tenderly.

"My poor darling," he said, taking her hand, "you have been very anxious this week?"

"He is not out of danger yet," sighed she, as if nothing else in the world mattered.

"No; but he will be. Cheer up, Chris; he will soon come home, and you must be ready to nurse him instead of having to be nursed."

"I suppose I ought," said Chris, brightening. "Thank you, Will; I'll try and not be silly."

She certainly was the better for the young man's visit; though, as he reflected on his way back, she had not once kissed him or spoken to him about anything but her guardian's condition, and he could not help thinking that there was something wrong about their relation to each other.

Time passed on, and Major Wetheral was well enough to be moved, and at length he arrived at Portsmouth and was brought to London, where the Draytons received him with the warmest of welcomes.

His arm had not been amputated, after all, but was in a sling, and he was lame enough to require a good deal of waiting on, but as Christina seemed to think that to run errands for him was the height of human happiness, no one complained of that.

"It is very good of you to take such care of me, little girl," he said, one afternoon when she had been reading to him. "But I don't want to be selfish, and I must not keep you from Will."

"I would rather stay here, thank you," answered Christina, decidedly. "Janet and May are going out with Will."

"But doesn't he want you?"

"I don't know," with a little pout. "I did not ask him."

Major Wetheral was puzzled. Two or three things had struck him about the young couple, and there was something very marked about his ward's complete indifference to her lover's visits, so that he was hardly surprised when Will came up to him that evening for a talk.

"I am very sorry to have kept Christina from you all the afternoon," began the Major apologetically, by way of introducing the subject.

"Pray don't apologize," answered the young man grimly. "Christina very seldom honors me with her company."

"I am sorry—" began the Major, but Will stopped him.

"I want to speak to you," he said quietly. "Christina does not care for me, and I don't think our engagement ought to continue. I should have spoken before this, only as you were away, and she was with my people, I thought it might be unpleasant for her."

"What do you mean?" cried the Major. "She accepted you of her own free will!"

"She accepted me because she thought you wished it," proceeded Will. "And in the innocence of her heart she thought it would be all right. In the last six months she has grown into a woman; she has a woman's capacity for loving, and she does not love me."

"But who in the world does she love?" was the perplexed inquiry. "She has hardly seen any other young men."

"She has not fallen in love with a young man," said Will, shortly. "Look here, Major Wetheral, last Christmas I knew nothing about the affair. Since we have been engaged I have grown to love her very dearly, and now I can understand it all. Do you suppose pretty girls give up all their time to guardians simply because they are ill?"

At last the Major grasped the situation. "You are talking nonsense!" he cried. "Why, I am an old man, and her guardian."

"You are only twenty years her senior, and that goes for nothing nowadays," answered the younger man. "And you watch her as she moves about the room in a way that is not at all paternal. Why can't you make each other happy, and have done with it?"

Why not, indeed? Major Wetheral saw an utterly unexpected dream of happiness unfolding before him, and then, like the gentleman he was, he turned to Will.

"And you?" he asked simply.

"I shall get over it," was the answer.

"And, at all events, I will not make her unhappy;" and the two men shook hands warmly.

Some time later, when Will had carefully smoothed over matters with his mother, so that Christina should not find herself less welcome in the Drayton household, and had then taken a quiet, friendly farewell of her, she came back to her guardian's room and offered to read to him.

"I don't think I want to be read to," he answered. "Are you inclined to talk to me, little one?"

"If you like." The girl's eyes had a suspicious brightness in them, but there was nothing heartbroken about her appearance.

"Do you know that Mr. Drayton has gone away?" she inquired, taking up her work.

"I am not surprised to hear it? Did he say anything to you before he went?"

Christina's fingers stitched busily as she answered. "He told me that he had been talking to you, and that you and he both thought our engagement had better come to an end."

"Well done, Drayton!" thought the Major; but he said, "And did you object?"

"Oh, no! I was very glad! I don't think I should have liked marrying him, guardian."

Major Wetheral made a movement of impatience. "You will have to give up calling me guardian, Chris. It makes me feel so old."

"I am sorry!" The girl looked up eagerly. "You are not a bit old," she cried. "You are young enough for anything."

"Am I young enough to marry? Chris! my darling, could you put up with a broken-down old soldier?"

Christina was on her knees by his sofa. "Not old nor broken down," she exclaimed. "Oh! guardian, you have made me so happy!"

And the Major showed no objection to being called guardian this time.—[Cassell's Family Magazine.]

What is a Sound Horse?

Who can answer? One authority has said that when applied to horses "sound" means "perfect," but this definition has been overthrown, for there is scarcely a perfect horse in existence. The most skillful veterinary surgeon cannot many times tell whether a horse is sound or not. The internal organs are hidden from view and symptoms of their affections are not always clear and plain. The organs of respiration vary in different animals under different conditions; and any apparent abnormal respiration, for instance, might in one case indicate disease and in another not, even though the apparent or real abnormal respirations were exactly alike. Similar undecisive conditions may prevail in the osseous anatomy. No two horses are alike in their osseous developments, hence arise these strange anomalies in limbs and joints about which experts are so prone to differ in opinion as to the presence or absence of disease. The hocks, for instance, present such a variety in conformation, and in some instances such unusual development of bony structure as to render a correct diagnosis a matter of the greatest uncertainty. If the extraordinary osseous development is congenital, then so far as this point is concerned the animal is sound, but otherwise not. Not knowing the animal from birth up, no one could tell whether he were sound or not.

There are several different conformations of horses and gait in travel that often indicate unsoundness in some respect when none exist. A certain constriction of the rump, when existing in an exaggerated form, imparts to the action and the appearance of lameness in one hind limb when the horse goes from you and in the other when he approaches. A slight inclination inward of one fore foot conveys the impression of lameness in the opposite limb, and this inclination may be caused by improper shoeing. Straight shoulders and upright action tend to the belief of lameness in both fore legs. The hind legs set widely apart occasion oscillation of the body, and a sense of lameness is incited as affecting both fore limbs. Sometimes the smith in shoeing has "pricked" both fore feet, and in consequence when the animal moves he appears "stiff in front" or "foundered." So often disease exists when there are no evidences of it, and so frequently does disease not exist when there is apparent evidence of it that unless evidences are clear and beyond dispute, it is precarious to express a judgment.

A piece of machinery may be taken apart and examined, and an expert can tell whether it is sound or not; a physician could not tell half the time whether a person is sick or not if the patient would keep his mouth shut—he must get his "cue" from the sick man himself; but with dumb animals they cannot be taken apart and examined, piece by piece, nor can they tell whether or how they are sick or unsound, hence the difficulty many times to tell whether disease exists or not. A second authority, in defining "soundness," says: "If the disease is not of such a nature as to impair the natural usefulness of the animal for the purposes for which he is used, it will amount to an unsoundness." A third authority states similarly as follows: "If a horse is purchased to be used in a given way the word 'sound' means that the animal is useful for that purpose; and unsound means that the time is affected with something which will have the effect of impairing that use." In a large majority of cases a horse warranty is not worth more than a snap of the finger.—[Dr. Galen Wilson, in Horseman.]

Skinning Eels Without a Knife.

"Lute" knows as much about skinning eels as any man between Hunter's Point and Sag Harbor. But he is not proud and admits that there was a time when he did not know so much about this slippery product of the Sound.

"It cost me the cigars for a big crowd once," said he, "to learn how to skin an eel without using a knife. I didn't believe it could be done and there don't nobody until they sees it for themselves."

I confessed that the skinning of an eel without a knife would be an exploit sufficient to excite my admiration.

"Well, now, just watch," Lute dropped the eel he held on the ground, put his large and robust boot upon its tail and rolled it rapidly back and forth.

The tail did not smash, as one would think, but after being rolled a dozen times or so the skin split in two seams along the sides. He took an end in each hand and pulled them apart. The skin peeled off easily in two sections.

"That's wrong end first, as most folks skin eels," said Lute, "but it's just as good a job."—[New York Herald.]

Frogs' Legs and Frenchmen.

People are usually inclined to regard that toothsome viand known as frogs' legs as a dish peculiar to the French, and more than once unfriendly individuals have alluded to that country as a nation of frog-eaters.

For this reason I was surprised the other day while dining at a modest little Parisian restaurant in the French quarter of this city to find that out of a party of four French people, two ladies and two gentlemen, there were two who had never tasted the succulent white meat peculiar to the hind legs of the gentle bullfrog.

More than that, either could be persuaded to taste the dish at all, although it was served a la poulette and cooked to perfection.—[New York Herald.]

SIR JOHN MACDONALD

FIRST OF ENGLAND'S EMPIRE BUILDERS

Since Clive and Hastings—The Affectionate Regard in Which "Old Tom-Morrow" Was Held by the Luminous People—The Greatest Canadian Has Fought His Last Fight.

It is very long since any other man held a place so peculiar in the affairs of any country as Sir John A. Macdonald has won for himself in the affairs of the Dominion of Canada. There is not, nor has there been in modern times, a man in the United States whose domineering policy of Bismarck did not disarrange the policy of Germany. There is no man now living in France whose death would cause a jar or a pause in the motion of the political machinery of the country. But the death of Sir John will leave the Tories of the Dominion without a leader. While his life was devoted to the service of Canada, he was for many years one of the foremost men in the British Empire, distinguished above his fellows in those vast colonies of Britain that girdle the earth.

To look back over the great retrospect of Sir John A. Macdonald's long public life is to review the whole history of greater Canada. He was a native Scotchman, but he became identified with the affairs of British North America before the patriot war, commencing the practice of law in Kingston in 1836, in his 21st year. He was active in political life from this time. He was first elected to the Parliament of Upper Canada more than forty-seven years ago. He was chosen for Kingston, for which city he sat in Parliament at the close of his brilliant career.

Sir John became a member of the Cabinet of Canada (then comprising Ontario and Quebec) early in 1847, as Commissioner of Crown Lands. He served until 1850. He was again a Cabinet officer from 1854 to 1858, as Attorney General. He first became Premier in 1858, and had firmly the foundation of his subsequent great fame. In 1862 he was Minister of Militia, and his Government suffered defeat on the militia bill of that year. For two years he was the leader of the Opposition, but did not endeavor to embarrass the Ministry, which was trying to administer the affairs of Canada on the policy of the double majority, or governing both Ontario and Quebec by its own preponderance of representatives in the House. This effort was a complete failure. In May, 1863, John A. Macdonald moved in the House a vote of want of confidence in a powerful and logical speech, ever since remembered in Canadian history, and regarded as one of the greatest of his life. The vote carried, and from this day Macdonald's conspicuous leadership in Canadian politics was recognized everywhere. It was not until the following year that he again took a Cabinet office and became the acknowledged leader of the effort for the consolidation of all British North America into the Dominion. He was a delegate to the convention on Prince Edward's Island in 1864, where the union was first projected, and the leader in the second conference, at Quebec, later in the year. He was chairman of the London colonial conference of 1866, and remained in Europe until the passage of the Imperial Act for the consolidation of the North American provinces.

He returned to the new world and was at once intrusted with the work of forming the first government of the great northern Anglo-Saxon nationality of which he had dreamed from his first entry into public life, and to which he had devoted many years. He became Premier of the new confederation, and was knighted by the Queen. From 1867 to the present time he has been the grandest figure of the Canadian nation. With the exception of a few years in the early seventies he has continued the Premier of the greatest dependency of the British Crown, which he did so much to make great and so nearly independent.

Canada has grown in domain, in population, in wealth and in influence during all the years of Sir John's preponderance in her affairs. She extends from ocean to ocean and from the lakes to the frozen sea.

He was at the very zenith of his great fame when the summons came. He had not found the semi-sovereign republic which he created ungrateful, for the incentive of the approval of the people came still fresh upon his senses from their last opportunity to express it.

The greatest Canadian has fought his last fight; his remarkable career is at an end. All Canada sincerely mourns. Partisanship is forgotten. At this visitation of death, a nation is in tears. As the sweet singer who wears the laurel of the empire has said of another one gone before:

Fallen at length,
That tower of strength:
That steel four square,
To all the winds that blew.

Wales Not of Good Character.

In court at Pittsburg, Pa., on application of Johnnie Staley, well known in every sporting center, for a transfer of liquor and hotel license, the court objected because he was given somewhat to gambling. Staley's attorney remarked: "I desire to call your Honor's attention to the fact that the Prince of Wales gambles a little." "Well, I don't consider him of good character. He could not get a license in this court," replied the Judge.

The hand of fortune—Four aces.

A New Aristocracy.

The latest novel to create a genuine sensation among the scholarly critics is "Birch Arnold's" "A New Aristocracy." A lady, under the above nom de plume, is the author. It relates to the social-industrial question, and prophesies the future upbuilding of a new aristocracy, which shall be that of the heart and brain—the heart to feel for the miseries of our fellow-men, and the brain to wisely plan for their relief. The author will hear of no other sort of Christianity, and denies our right to amusement while fellow-creatures are doomed by poverty to a life of toil and suffering. Apart from the sweetness and devotion of its spirit, this book is an excellent told story. The Chicago Herald says: "This is a novel with a purpose, and it may be a very great novel despite what certain critics may say. Through every chapter of certain novels by Dickens and Thackeray, a purpose gleams; and, too, by means of them some very serious evils in law and society were overthrown and the world made happier and better." Bartlett Publishing Company, New York and Detroit.

Time Brings Changes.

Messenger Boy—Where's the man what sent me out with this here message?

Mr. Smith—It was I that sent you. Messenger Boy—Naw, the feller what sent me was a clean-shaven bloke, an' you've got a long beard.

Mr. Smith—Well, it grew since you started.—Munsey's Weekly.

Presence of Mind.

Freddy—Baw Jove, Cholly, when that nasty, ugly dawg twined to bite me, I just stopped still and looked at him—like this—and, baw Jove, he tuhned wound and wan off. Wasn't that gwat pwesence of mind?

Cholly—It was, indeed, ole chappie. Who would have expected to see it in a dog?

Escape of Prisoners.

The report that prisoners have been and are constantly escaping from that malignant gaoler, liver complaint, is fully corroborated by the self-liberated captives. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are, they say, the means by which they get rid of their fetters. Few altogether avoid the bondage of this ailment, and few are unacquainted with its signs, viz., pain through the right side and shoulder blade, furred tongue, yellowness of the eyeballs and skin, sour breath, sick headache, dyspepsia and constipation. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters put a prompt period to these, and brings them to a full stop in short order. Whether the trouble is chronic or temporary, this medicine is equally effective, regulating the liver and bowels thoroughly. It is likewise a sovereign remedy for rheumatism, kidney complaint, malaria, heartburn and nervousness.

The firm without pliancy, and the plant without firmness, resemble vessels without water, and water without vessels.

LADIES employed in fashionable stores, whose duties keep them standing all day, should send 2c stamp to Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for "Guide to Health and Etiquette."

A PERFECTLY civilized man can never be perfectly happy while there is one unhappy being in the universe.

J. C. SIMPSON, Marquess, W. Va., says: "Hall's Catarrh Cure cured me of a very bad case of catarrh." Druggists sell it, 75c.

A MAN may smile and smile, but if he doesn't quit he will see snakes.

Frank Haven advertises for a strayed horse in this issue of the News.

We call attention to the renewed advertisement of Miss De Vries & Co., milliners. A legitimate rivalry and competition in this line of trade, this season, compels our milliners to carry the best of stocks and the latest of styles. For all of which they are respectfully referred to the above named firm.

The following circular letter from the Newspaper Union of Sioux City, received by us, will be of interest to many of the old readers of the News: "The proprietors of the Sioux City Newspaper Union take this occasion to inform their patrons that they have this day appointed W. H. Rogers, resident Manager of their house in Sioux City. Mr. Rogers is an old publisher, who thoroughly understands the requirements of the trade, and will spare no pains to so conduct our business as to merit the friendship and good will of the numerous publishers and printers of the northwest, who have favored us with their patronage during the past seven years."

One of Mr. Schipper's horses ran into a wire fence last Tuesday and was very badly cut in the legs and breast. Dr. Curtis' services were secured and it is hoped the injured animal will come out all O. K.

H. Lemmen's oldest stallion fell dead last week, at W. Diekema's place, in Holland township. It is thought that this was caused by driving the horse to fast and thus overheating it.—Allegan Journal.

For the Holland City News. A Nuisance.

People driving south out of the city have for a long time complained about the stench from the slaughter house, just this side of Wilson Harrington's place. Some farmers have also complained that their horses were scared there at the smell. This is a public nuisance, and the health officer of Holland township should see that it is abated, and that the slaughter houses and grounds are as cleanly as possible.

The Late Fire.

EDITOR HOLLAND CITY NEWS:

If not encroaching too much upon the space of your paper, it would be of interest to the residents of the "West End" to know who is to blame for the state of affairs which existed on Sunday evening last, when the barn of Mr. A. Mol was destroyed by fire.

There were several attempts made to send in an alarm from the C. & B. Tannery, but no answer was received. Next the Phoenix planing mill and the City Hotel were tried, with no better success. So there was no alarm.

The members of "Eagle Hose Co.," who live close by, were aroused and with the aid of others done the best that could be done, with the pressure to be obtained, in saving adjoining property. Luckily there was no high wind, such as prevailed at the Third church fire, or great loss would have resulted.

Now we would suggest, that if our fire alarm system is too complicated, it be simplified, or given in charge of some one who will try and keep it in order. And also some way of letting the engineer at the pumping works know when his pumps are laboring hard to keep up the pressure, while a large amount of water is being used. There being three streams used on that night it must have shown the engineer at the works that something was wrong, the alarm not working.

Now, if that is asking too much, it might be well to ask the Common Council to furnish buckets to the hose companies, for use in such emergencies.

College Items.

Although this term is considered to be the most trying to the student, on account of the allurements of nature, which continually tend to draw his attention from the studies and College duties to the beautiful lake and shady groves, yet for many of the boys this is the busiest time of the entire year. Their whole afternoon being engaged in special work for the closing celebration they may be found during the evening pondering over a few Greek or Latin pages in review, or else taxing the full strength of their minds in solving some of the intricacies of mathematics. But wait till two weeks from now, when all cares have been cast off, and the boys dressed in their commencement suits strut about the streets of Holland, as though they would make known to her citizens, that now they are prepared for picnics and evening parties, and that boating will not at all interfere with their happiness.

About 8 o'clock Wednesday morning last, the Columbia class might be seen marching in solemn file to the home of one of their number, Homer Van Landegent, where a very pleasant evening was spent. After partaking of a right royal feast, they proceeded to surprise Prof. Sutphen and D. Esburg, and fully convinced these worthy men, that the Columbians do not believe in spending all their time in the study of Latin and modern languages.

On Friday, June 15th, a party of nine went out to Overisel, to attend the closing exhibition given at the little red school house, where Messrs. Albers and Flanagan had taught during the year. Mr. G. H. Dubbink of the Junior class, of Hope College, took part in the exercises, and carried off all the honors to the surprise of all. As a result Mr. Dubbink is now being spoken of as the orator for the Fourth of July, at Overisel.

The base ball game played last Saturday again showed that the prep's are masters in the line of ball playing. The score stood 16 to 20, in favor of the Preparatory Department. The College Nine however say that they will defeat the younger boys the next time they try.

The Sophomore class followed the example set by the Juniors and spent a day at the Park last Wednesday, fishing, surveying and navigating.

Port Sheldon.

Your correspondent is like the rest of the farmers, and has been too busy lately to send you a few items, and to congratulate you upon your removal to your new quarters, but now he will try and do better. The crops in these parts are in a poor state. Wheat and rye are badly frozen. Grass has begun to grow. Corn is looking good so far, but the cut worm is very numerous and cuts it off as soon as it appears above ground. Oats I am afraid will be a failure. The frost we had on the 27th of May, killed our apples, peaches and strawberries. Peas look the best of any.

Some fishermen sneaked into our harbor last week, with all of their paraphernalia, to clean out our harbor of all the fish, but they were promptly requested to leave, which they did.

Our new overseer of highways has been around with his road warrants and it will be gratifying to the small farmers to find that there is a decided reduction in taxes this year, and also a reduction in the work to be done on the roads. Hence they must not feel dissatisfied if the roads are not in as good repairs as they would desire, as long as their taxes are only reduced. Your correspondent has been in nearly all the civilized countries in the world and can safely say that the highways here are the worst of any he has seen during his travels. It needs a reform in some manner.

J. J. Joslyn moved his portable mill past here to West Olive. His new traction engine was quite a novelty, going along the roads. It worked very well on our loose sand hills, and climbed them without any difficulty.

THE HAIR

When not properly cared for, loses its lustre, becomes crisp, harsh, and dry, and falls out freely with every combing. To prevent this, the best and most popular dressing in the market is Ayer's Hair Vigor. It removes dandruff, heals troublesome humors of the scalp, restores faded and gray hair to its original color, and imparts to it a silky texture and a lasting fragrance. By using this preparation, the poorest head of hair soon and beautiful. All who have once tried Ayer's Hair Vigor, want no other dressing. Galbraith & Starks, Druggists, Sharon Grove, Ky., write: "We believe Ayer's Hair Vigor to be the best preparation of the kind in the market, and sell more of it than of all others. No drug store is complete without a supply of it."

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor with great benefit and know several other persons, between 40 and 50 years of age, who have experienced similar good results from the use of this preparation. It restores gray hair to its original color, promotes a new growth, gives lustre to the hair, and cleanses the scalp of dandruff."—Bernardo Ochoa, Madrid, Spain.

After Using

A number of other preparations without any satisfactory result, I find that Ayer's Hair Vigor is causing my hair to grow."—A. J. Osment, General Merchant, Indian Head, N. W. T.

"Ayer's Hair Vigor is the only preparation I could ever find to remove dandruff, cure itching humors, and prevent loss of hair. I can confidently recommend it."—J. C. Butler, Spencer, Mass.
"My wife believes that the money spent for Ayer's Hair Vigor was the best investment she ever made, it has given her so much satisfaction."—James A. Adams, St. Augustine, Texas.
