Rotarians Hear Attorney General

Michigan's Attorney General, John R. Dethmers, told Holland Rotarians, at their noon luncheon Thursday, that local self governments are passing many of their affairs to the state and federal capitols for assistance and action. He spoke on the topic, "Trends in State Government."

He said it was especially true in the financial realm. "Government does not create wealth, it expends wealth," was one of the Attorney General's pointed statements.

He explained that the old-time local self-government, before the 1900's, was a real government by the people.

Visiting Rotarians included Noble Jones of St. Louis, Leonard Fells of Louisville and Honorary Rotarian Dr. John E. Kuizenga.

Visitors were Dr. Jacob Sessler, pastor of the Third Reformed church and Arthur Visscher, both of Holland. Robert Wismeier, recently returned from the Navy, was also a visitor.

Honorary Rotarian cards for the new year were presented Dr. Kuizenga and Dethmers.

Before and since the war, each year they have borrowed thousands of millions of dollars which future generations must repay with interest. They wasted billions in almost every conceivable way; spent millions to purchase political support to continue themselves in office.

The task of providing for our own people; of making available necessary supplies of food, clothing and building materials; of giving to the Veterans the things to which they are entitled, is a stupendous one and will tax our resources, our ability and out determination.

But the New Dealers intend to put upon the shoulders of coming generations the burden of feeding, clothing, providing homes for, the people of every nation asking our aid. They propose keeping an occupation force in Germany for from fifteen to twenty-five years and spending there two billion (not million) dollars per year.

The New Dealers, the Communists and the Political Action Committee of Sidney Hillman intend to control the next Congress by nominating their candidates, then to destroy our constitutional form of government, where laws are made by Congress, interpreted by the Courts and faithfully administered by an Executive Department. They intend to substitute for that form of government, which has given us all so much, regimentation, government by bureaucrats issuing orders, rules and directives.

No Congressman can please all the people all the time; You know my record. You know where I stand on every vital issue which will confront the next congress.

If you have had enough of the ruinous, wasteful, destructive New Deal policies; if you believe in our form of government which, adhered to, insures equality of opportunity, equal justice for all, your vote at the Primary on June 18 will be appreciated.

THE "PEEPU"

A group of notables, including Albert Einstein, Harold Ickes, Candidate Stassen, and several others, held an hour's long discussion about atomic energy and the atomic bomb. There was general agreement that if an international super-power is not created to which all the nations, Russia and America included, will delegate some of their so-called sovereignty the world is sunk and civilization will meet its death.

How to get the American people to delegate that slice of sovereignty to a super-government was not nearly so clear. What can the average, ordinary citizen do to bring this about? Can he do anything?

That question galvanized Archbald McLeish, librarian of congress. Of course the common citizen can do something, he declared.
In fact, the American government does only what the common people of America want it to do. This is truly and in fact a government of the people, by the people, for the people. If the common men and women will only make up their minds, the government will follow their dictates and mandates.

That sounds very nice in theory, and in terms of a long segment of history it is true. Over a period of a couple of generations the government does about what the people demand. But in the present situation we are confronted with something that can't wait a couple of generations; at least so all the speakers declared, including Mr. McLeish. Action is demanded now, or at the most in terms of less than half a decade.
To say that if the common men and women will only make up their minds, the question will be settled in terms of what they want, is not saying much of anything.

Men in seats of power are always spouting about the "peepul".
Most of the time those very spoutings are merely devices to get the "peepul" to think the way those in power think they should.
Privately those same men in power are apt to feel, even though they keep it to themselves, what the late Harry Hopkins felt when he blurted out that the "people are too damned dumb" to decide such momentous questions as those of peace or war.

Again and again the American people have been propagandized into seeming to want what special interests want them to want. Lincoln's "government of the people, by the people, for the people" is a beautiful ideal. It works in terms of centuries; in terms of single issues it breaks down. Who, for instance, knows, or can know, what the people want done with the atomic bomb?

Learning About the Kingdom Luke 9: 18-27, 46-48, 57-62; 11:1-4 12:1-12; 17:20, 21

By Henry Geerlings

The kingdom idea as held during the period of the ministry of Jesus, looked back to the time when God was the accepted ruler of the Jewish people. Even after the nation had a king, like the other nations, there was still a belief that the true kingdom had only God for its head. It was a spiritual and moral kingdom. Later, after the collapse of the United Kingdom, and particularly after the humiliating captivity of the Jews in Babylon, the captives began to rebuild in their minds the picture of the ancient thronecracy. By the time of Jesus' ministry the idea was quite mature.
The Jews not only looked upon themselves as the kingdom of Heaven, but anticipated that with the coming of the Messiah their kingdom should again come into earthly glory.

When John the Baptist began to preach that the kingdom of Heaven was at hand he undoubtedly was thinking of the Jewish people and of the coming Messiah.
Jesus, in turn, took up the same call that had made John famous and He passed it on to His disciples when they went out to preach.
Neither John nor Jesus failed to translate the kingdom idea into terms of moral conduct. John went so far as to assure his listeners, Pharisees and Sadducees though they were, that the kingdom did not stop with any racial and national boundaries. He insisted that God could make children of Abraham out of the stones.
The Jews were to bring forth fruit, otherwise they had no part in the kingdom.

The reader of the Bible is impressed with the variety of Jesus' modes of expression as He sometimes spoke of it as if there was a place that one might enter. He also said that the kingdom is a valued possession which one may acquire.
The parables of the hidden treasure in the field and of the merchant seeking goodly pearls carry such a thought. One who posseses the kingdom has the most valuable of all assets.

Sometimes Jesus spoke of the kingdom as an organization with members and officers. The members are children of the kingdom.
Officers are assigned, not as honors or rewards, but as opportunities for service, and always to persons willing to spend themselves in service. When the disciples spoke of the kingdom as if it were a government set up, Jesus did not tell them that they were wrong; He did, however, speak of the error of attitude toward the coming kingdom. Also, there are passages in which Jesus seems to be referring to the kingdom as a dispensation. This was certainly in His mind when He preached that the kingdom of Heaven was at hand, and when He told His disciples to pray for it and be ready for it.

The lives of Christians show that the kingdom with its high moral tone is opposed at some points to the world order in the midst of which it stands. The first clash that Jesus experienced was with the Jewish leaders. They thought the kingdom program as Jesus preached and practised it was politically and religiously dangerous. Several years later the kingdom program came into head-on collision with the Roman Empire. The first martyrs came to their deaths at the instigation of the Jews, but the later ones were victims of a pagan social order.
And there has not been a time in the intervening years that could not record a clash at some point between the kingdom and the prevailing world order.

Jesus broke at least in part, with the view of His day that the kingdom of God was totally in the future. He not only declared that the kingdom was at hand, but He gave such parables as the grain of mustard seed, by which He seemed to suggest that the kingdom ought to start then and there.
His own Messianic designations support such a view. In fact, He presented the kingdom as both present and future. He did not tolerate for a moment the idea that God has abandoned the world to man.

An earmark of the kingdom citizen is his willingness to follow Jesus, cost what it may. The thought of taking up one's cross is repeated no less than seven times in Matthew, Mark and Luke. It reaches its clearest definition in connection with Peter's great confession in which incident Jesus attempted to counteract the popular notion that the Messiah, because of His exalted position with God, ought to be spared the suffering and death Jesus had predicted for Himself. We are impressed with the fact also that when the writers quoted Jesus' remarks about bearing the cross, the cross held no glamour whatever. It was a thought to make them shudder or turn back.

There was no compromise in the entrance requirements to the kingdom. When men presented themselves on terms lower than those suggested by the cross-bearing phase, Jesus turned them away.

The kingdom of God was not a paper government, holding men together by an artificial tie that might be broken off. It was signified by a condition of heart which came from rebirth. Citizenship is therefore open to men who have become new creatures in Christ Jesus, from whose lives the lower passions are being replaced by right living.

Shotwell Sent To State Prison

Grand Haven, June 13 (Special) —Leo Shotwell, 19, formerly of Nunica, and now of Grand Haven, was taken into Circuit Court Friday for violation of probation. The Court revoked his probation and sentenced Shotwell to serve from eighteen months to three years in the Southern Michigan prison at Jackson.

Shotwell, together with Betty Morley of Muskegon, was arrested earlier this week on charges they had been living together in a trailer. Mrs. Morley, who has been married twice, pleaded guilty before Justice George V. Hoffer Friday morning to a disorderly charge and was sentenced to 15 days in the County jail.

Shotwell was placed on probation for three years on a non-support charge May 24 after pleading guilty in circuit court May 16, 1945. His wife is pregnant and the court had ordered at that time that Shotwell find a job and after the baby is born, to make a home for his family and take care of them.

He Was Tired... And the Sheriff Was a Grand Guy

Allegan, June 13 —One of the boys was tired and fell asleep.

Such was the plight of one member of the Brooklyn high school band on the closing day of Holland's Tulip Time festival.

The band stopped in Allegan to eat after a full day of activities and one weary youth fell asleep in the doorway of a store.

Home in Brooklyn, Supt. George W. King received a call from Sheriff Louis Johnson. The boy, Johnson said, was in his office "without money and quite exhausted." King suggested that Johnson advance money for food and a hotel room.

But Johnson thought better and took him into his own home for the night. The next morning, Johnson put the youth on a bus and saw him on his way.

King wrote, "When the lad arrived home he was lavish in his praise of Mr. Johnson and the treatment he received."

Boulevard Pole Falls on Awning

A sturdy bar on the awning of White's market which bent instead of collapsing kept damage and injuries to a minimum at 10:15 a. m. Saturday when the door of a bakery truck opened and knocked down a boulevard light pole.

The driver of the truck, Oscar Stehower, of Grand Rapids, told police the side door of his bread truck opened as he was backing the truck into the parking space. Stehower received scratches on his arm when a piece of glass fell belatedly.

Christians Told To Feed Hungry

London, June 7.—There should be no hesitation in asking Christians to make sacrifices on behalf of starving populations, Dr. Geoffrey Francis Fisher, Archbishop of Canterbury, declared here at a meeting of the Church Missionary society.

"So far as Britain is concerned," Dr. Fisher said, "there has been too much hesitation and apology on the part of sections of the press and even of the government in asking for anything that might be demanded from us. There has been too little statement of fact and too little call to a moral act of Christian duty, and also an inadequate conception of how willingly our people would respond when faced with fact and clear direction."

"It is intolerable to the Christian conscience that any person should die of starvation," Dr. Fisher stressed the need for immediate efforts "to avert the worst stages of famine and starvation in India and Germany."

Fertilizing Beans Profitably Calls For Careful Application to Rules

Grand Haven, June 13.—Use commercial fertilizer to increase bean yields—but use it with caution, warns L. R. Arnold, county agricultural agent.

Extensive tests conducted by the Michigan State college soil science staff show that all beans, including the pea bean and soybean, are very particular with respect to fertilizer placement. If the fertilizer is too close or in contact with the seed, the tender sprout will be injured. If placed too far from the seed, the increased yield seldom compensates for the cost of the fertilizer.

An ideal arrangement for placing the fertilizer correctly is the use of a modern beet and bean drill which places fertilizer one inch to the side and one and one-half inches below the level of the seed. On heavy soils, James A.

The sensible builder of life will take his knowledge of truth and put it into practice, Dr. Lester J. Kuypers of Western Theological seminary told the 206 Holland high school graduates at impressive baccalaureate exercises in Hope Memorial chapel Sunday afternoon.

Speaking on the subject, "The Sensible Builder," Dr. Kuypers took his text from Matthew 7:24—"Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock."

Examining carefully the ideals advanced in these times, the speaker told the graduates, "You have learned that the wrong rule gives the wrong answer. In the same way, wrong ideals bring the wrong result. Right ideals result in lasting benefits," he said.

"You have also learned in high school to exhaust all resources to gain life's objectives," Dr. Kuypers emphasized. "It is necessary not only to hold the right ideal but to strive for it. The sensible builder also builds for all time."

"It is incumbent upon you as sensible builders to so construct your lives after the pattern Jesus set forth that they may last for eternity. You are building your own houses. The sensible builder will put truth into practice," he said in conclusion.

The graduates appeared for the first time in their caps and gowns, the girls in white, the boys in maroon. The high school a cappella choir led the processional and sang two selections at the service under the direction of Miss Tricie Moore, "O God Our Help in Ages Past," "Credo-Hollis," and "Hail, Our Redeemer," Rhea.

Dr. H. W. Pyle, director of church relations for Hope and Central colleges, read scripture passages and offered prayer. Mrs. W. Curtis Snow presided at the organ.

Commencement exercises are scheduled for Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

Labor, Shortages Keep Telephone Waiting List Big

Despite the large number of telephones installed in the past year, continued material shortages, building difficulties, and production stoppages in many industries made it impossible for Bell Telephone Co. to keep up with the unprecedented and constantly increasing demand for service. Andrew G. Sall, manager, said. There are 212 families in Holland and 28 in Zeeland—a total of 240 in this area—waiting for telephones.

Shortly after V-J day a peak of 400 local orders was reached at the local exchanges. Michigan Bell has provided service to a record number of 580 families, but the waiting list is still sizeable.

Sall said that orders were delayed because of a shortage of cable to connect telephones to the central office. Cable installations are underway which will begin to provide some facilities in July of this year for Zeeland and in November for Holland. The company hopes to wipe out the present waiting list by the end of this year.

Sall said that both the Holland and Zeeland office is completing more calls than at any time in its history. The daily average in May for Holland was 49,870 which included 1,230 long distance calls. For the same period last year the Holland exchange was completing only 29,560 calls per day, including 900 long distance.

The Zeeland office last month completed an average of 5,740 calls per day including 300 long distance messages, as compared with 4,850 total calls daily for the same period last year.
