Swierenga speaks on Dutch immigration

The archives of Holland Historical Trust, Hope College, and Western Theological Seminary were officially united with dedication ceremonies on November 18 in Winants Auditorium for the Joint Archives of Holland.

After a short welcome by Larry J. Wagenaar, archivist, Elton J. Bruins introduced the featured speaker, Robert P. Swierenga.

Swierenga is a renowned scholar on Dutch immigration to and Dutch history in America. Swierenga spoke on "Dutch Immigration: Collecting Material" relating to the Middle West, a very appropriate topic to dedicate archives which are committed to collecting material "relating to the history of the Dutch heritage both in the surrounding area and Dutch immigration to the United States as a whole."

Swierenga discussed disagreements had by experts over whether immigration is uprooting, a brutal act, or transplanting, a more gentle act. Swierenga said that most of the Dutch immigrants came to America by choice.

After a brief question and answer period, the dedication ceremonies moved to the actual Archives in the basement of Van Wylen library, for a reception and the ribbon cutting.

Three college students per thousand may have AIDS

by Michael O'Keeffe

(CPS) - As many as three out of every one thousand college students may have AIDS, the preliminary results of a nationwide study involving 20 campuses show.

The results, if they hold up when the full study is completed in February, would indicate students are not paying much attention to efforts to get them to change their sex habits and mean a significant portion of the American student body is at risk of catching - and dying from - AIDS, observers say.

"If the figures hold, there is more concern than we had anticipated," said Dr. Roland Zick, director of the University of Colorado health center. "If there is an infection rate in that range then students will simply have to start paying more attention to educating themselves."

"At this point, the numbers are so preliminary it's practically meaningless," cautioned Anne Sims of the Centers for Disease Control (CDC). "Meaningful estimates won't be proper until the study is finished in February. The CDC, along with the American College Health Association, is gathering and testing 1,000 blood samples drawn from students on 20 campuses for other medical reason to see how far AIDS has spread.

Few know which 20 campuses are in the study, but Tulane and Rutgers universities as well as the universities of Colorado, Maryland and Georgia have acknowledged they're participating.

AIDS (acquired immune deficiency syndrome) is caused by a virus which destroys the body's immune system. The virus is most typically contracted by having sex or sharing intravenous needles with an infected person, or by contaminated blood products. There have been more than 76,000 cases reported in the United States since 1981, with 43,000 fatalities.

Causes lifestyles, health administrators believe, leave students especially vulnerable to the disease.

"Students are a sexually active group," said Dr. Florence Wimpf of the University of Georgia health center. And because they tend to be young and inexperienced, "they feel immune, even when they know the problem's out there."

Many students objected to the CDC study when it was proposed last spring, noting they would be tested for AIDS.

Angry students speak out against recent rapes

(CPS) — Still another campus erupted in anger last week to protest multiple rapes near their school. About 100 Brown University students gathered Nov. 2 to protest two recent rapes near their Providence, Rhode Island, campus, and to call for better security for women.

"On campus and in the Providence community as a whole," student Kathy Hathaway told the gathering, which she organized, "there's been so much emotion, but no forum to release the emotion. We wanted to provide that arena."

At the "speak out," about 25 Brown women told about how they'd been victimized in the past.

Two Brown women were raped within two weeks in October. Police suspect the same assailant committed both crimes, but have made no arrests yet.

In recent weeks, University of Illinois women have been marching repeatedly to express their frustration about the lack of arrests in a series of 15 rapes on or near their campus since last April.

UI police also suspect one person is responsible. Two women were assaulted in separate incidents in September near the campus of Plymouth State College in New Hampshire. Baylor and Yale University students also have reported near-campus assaults so far this school year.

In early October, the Santa Monica (Cal.) Hospital Rape Treatment Center released a report estimating that, nationwide, only one of ten campus sexual assaults are ever reported to authorities.

International students hold food fair

by Reka Jellema
Special to the anchor

The International Relations Club held their traditional International Food Fair November 12.

Club members from many different countries, including Japan, Spain, China and France, cooked a variety of cuisines.

The dishes included Middle Eastern Hummus topped with pin nuts; Black American "soul food" of Oxtails and black-eyed peas and for dessert bread pudding and sweet potato pie; a spicy, potato-filled Spanish omelette; a Spanish Curried rice and chicken dish; and tasty desserts including sweet, flaky baklava and Dutch banquet.

The occasion was stimulating to all five senses. The spicy, distinctly foreign aromas were intoxicating. The dishes were appetizing to the eye as well as the palate and many of the students were dressed in the traditional colorful garb of their countries.

Of special note was the costume of Masayuki, a student from Japan who wore a kimono, a mask and the Japanese wooden shoes called Geta.

The event, which lasted about two hours, attracted a large crowd. Unfortunately, very few students attended. However, the dinner is held each year as a fundraiser for the club and to enhance the Hope College and Holland area's awareness of the rich cultural variety around them.

Polls suggest young voters went for Dukakis in election

(CPS) — Initial exit poll results suggested that a slight majority of the voters under age 25 voted for Gov. Michael Dukakis in the Nov. 8 election, though George Bush won the endorsement of 56 percent of the nation's college grads.

The results, tabulated from exit polls conducted by the ABC, CBS and CBS television networks, did not distinguish between college students and other voters younger than age 25.

ABC News found Dukakis won a majority of the votes cast by youngsters under 25. AU CBS and CNN television networks, did not distinguish between college students and other voters younger than age 25.

The results indicated that, in general, young voters went for Dukakis in the election.

Ronald Reagan. The results were widely interpreted as a nation-wide swing to the right on campuses.

Young voters, said CBS political editor Dotty Lynch, were conspicuous by their absence at the polls. Voters younger than 30 made up only 20 percent of the electorate Nov. 8, down from 24 percent in 1984.

In both 1980 and 1984, pollsters of the students polled were youthful and older (over the age of 60) citizens, while winning 51 percent of those cast by people with only a high school diploma and 62 percent of the nation's high school dropouts.

Young voters — typically those who have turned 18 since the 1984 presidential election — preferred Bush instead of Dukakis by a 50-47 percent margin.

On the Write Track: Posing for pictures

I hate posing for pictures. The photographers always make you perch on those cold little metal stools and shine those white-hot, painfully bright lights on you. You want to squint or blink but you can't because you'll ruin the picture, so you stare into the brightness until the backs of your eyes ache. The photographers tell you to sit up straight, relax your shoulders, turn your head and tilt it right. Then they have the audacity to tell you to smile. Right.

The whole thing reminds me of a lot of writing papers. I know, it's a strange comparison, but think about it. Often professors are just as restrictive as photographers—they dictate your topic and tell you just how many pages or words to write, and expect your platter to have a thesis and three main points neatly framed by an introduction and conclusion. Then they tell you to be interesting and creative. Right.

There is an alternative to being a starving college student

by Heidi Gassensmith
Special to the anchor

"Not another dinner of Macaroni and Cheese! I can't stand it anymore! I'm going to die if I eat this again!"

If these are the thoughts that run through your mind while you sit waiting for the water to boil, you are not alone. Many students with a limited food budget find themselves eating expensive meals night after night in order to pay for their tuition and books.

But there is an alternative to being a "Starving College Student." Students who are not on a board plan should realize that there are ways to get food without shopping.

Students must constantly be on the lookout for free food on their college campuses. Seminars and programs often include the wonderful words of salvation: "Refreshments Served. It doesn't cost you anything. If you don't come, you don't have to." However, if you don't necessarily want to listen to a seminar on "The Biology of Temperate Species of Nettles," just make sure that you don't stay away from the cookies and punch. Also, keep in mind that the college Food Service is there to serve you. You can always pick up the leftovers immediately after the seminars. This delay could mean a bag full of donuts or cookies for you to bring home and enjoy at a later time.

Another alternative to shopping is dining out. However, as you might have already suspected, you have to find someone else to pay. Sometimes you can take advantage of your friends. Other times you can hint to relatives. If your parents come up for a visit be sure to wear baggy clothes. Another trick is to suck in your cheeks, adding to the "anemic" look. If your parents get wise to this act, work on getting a free meal out of your friends' relatives.

"Happy Hour" at the local bar should not be ignored either. Who says you can't live on nacho chips and bean dip? Do not feel the least bit uncomfortable when the bartender starts giving you dirty looks. Just keep thinking of that peanut butter and jelly sandwich waiting for you back home. Do not allow yourself to get overly stuffed. It costs money and can get you filled up fast. Also, you don't want to waste all of that wonderful food by getting sick.

Yet another alternative to buying food is tasting free samples. Many grocery stores have various stands set up for you to sample different products. The technique is simple. Do not look hungry, no matter how hungry your stomach is growing. A sample conversation:

SALESPERSON: Excuse me, Miss, would you like to try a piece of the new Jimmy Dean sausage patte?

STARVING COLLEGE STUDENT: Oh, I guess I could take just a little taste. (Don't lounge at the food.)

SALESPERSON: It's made with the choicest cuts of meat.

STARVING COLLEGE STUDENT: Umm, it's really good. (Act nonchalant.) But what was that word you used in the description? (Drop the bag.) That was, no, I just can't put my finger on it...

PREGNANT?...SCHING?

Today's teenagers and single young women are oftencought in the middle of a social climate which pressures them to experiment with sex, but abandons those who become pregnant. They are told that their pregnancy is a "dead end" and that they should be avoided by abortion. This is not true, however, as many young women have assisted the coupling and support they need to carry their child to birth, care for the baby afterwards, or give him/her to other loving parents than their own experience is one of loving sacrifices and deep personal growth.

If you think you might be pregnant, we offer you the opportunity to read the pregnancy text. We offer also our friendship and understanding. Let us help you...give us a call...We care!

Student Activities Fee needs an increase

Vision for the future is something which any organization should have. Having the ability to progress through expansion or renewal of current programs is vital to any long term improvement. Hope College has a recent history of anticipating its needs and preparing itself to deal with them. For example, during Calvin Vanderwerf's time as President, Hope hired many highly qualified faculty members in a period of academic expansion. Gordon Van Wylen's term was marked by growth in the physical structures of the college. Both of these men saw needs and worked to fulfill them before the situations became critical. It is in all likelihood that when John Jacobson retires people will be able to pinpoint his successful focus and concern for the financial future of the college.

There is one area at Hope College which has fallen to the wayside in spite of this vision: the Student Activities budget. Currently, the various student organizations at Hope which rely on Student Congress for their funding are in a struggle to meet their needs. In particular, the smaller groups with minimal budgets are in danger of being cut off completely. Why has this situation arisen and how can we repair it?

Several years ago, the student activities at Hope were well funded and stable. The primary element which changed this situation was the addition of WTHS to campus as a non-commercial FM radio station. Previously, as WTAS, the station had functioned as a campus research project. Equipment was inexpensive and easy to maintain and student needs from the station were simple. Suddenly, once the initial cost of equipping a FM station was paid, Student Congress now had to maintain all equipment, help the station to grow and support a group that now required ten times its previous budget needs. Yet the Board of Trustees moved to keep the Student Fee constant.

In the meantime, although the seed of the problem had already been sown, it grew progressively worse. In addition to ignoring the new station's budget needs, the Board also ignored inflation. Although the trustees were raising tuition to meet the rising inflationary costs, they again ignored the student fee. Now student organizations are in a position where they cannot even afford to provide the events they have always sponsored due to rising costs. Hopes for growth and expansion are minimal for existing groups. While existing groups suffer through their concerns, new organizations are defeated in budget before they begin. Hope has responded as a school to the realization that a more multi-cultural approach will benefit the campus. Changes in the Student Development office, the Admissions office, and the addition of a Dean of Multi-Cultural Life have begun to prepare Hope for this emphasis. However, no student groups to respond to this situation can develop unless there is funding to support them. The hands of Student Congress should not be tied in this matter.

Beyond the multi-cultural concerns, the realization that we live in a changing world of student interests is crucial as well. Different fads and crazes come and go in a liberal arts community. The ability to respond to and support students in their interests is one which would mark Hope as a progressive institution. Instead, we have a student body that on the whole is apathetic and lethargic. Perhaps this is because we have lived with the status quo for too long. While expanding their student activities such as WTHS and looking to add more, Hope has moved near the bottom of the Great Lakes Collegiate Association's schools in terms of student fee.

As the world changes around us, Hope must respond and keep up with new challenges that are presented in this process. There is no reason why the student activities which make up a significant part of the liberal arts student's life should fall behind in this process. We, as students, must evaluate our fiscal needs and act to make sure they are met, both immediately and for the long term. The problem can be solved through the raising of the Hope College Student Activities Fee. Act now to encourage your Student Congress representative to vote for a Student Fee raise.

Thanksgiving Break. I didn’t think I would make it. It’s been a long three months since I’ve been home and I’m more than a little ready to return. I realize that this must be happening, but I do have a point (it may be under my hat, but at least it’s there). Anyway, this is the first day in a very long time I am completely relaxed.

Stop for a moment and tell me when the last time was that you were completely relaxed? Other than tonight, I can’t honestly remember the last time I was so relaxed. You know something? That’s sad. Not a boo-hoo sad, but the nostalgic sad that is remembering your first girl or boyfriend. The kind of sad that reminds us that time is passing and yet there is a whole lot of life in front of us.

In high school and Health Dy (I see a connection here), every time they made us take a stress test I always succeeded in scoring somewhere to the right of heart attack by 30 points or so. I used to be a Type A personality. I was always running around overachieving, being impatient and getting disgusted. After a while cynicism set in. Nothing was ever good enough. Can you dig it?

Everything is all right

Jim Monnett

Jim Monnett, Mortgage, Manhattan, Man With One Red Shoe and a menagerie of other monstrosities.

Unfortunately, this year I forgot all about my Type M personality. I bit off more than I could masticate, er, more than I could chew. Too many tough classes, too much reading (my kingdom for aMMMMath prolem), too many writing assignments and just too much stressed time. To get it all done I s a n k b a c k i n t o t h e characteristics of a Type A while wearing the mustache of a Type M.

Well, it’s over now. I’ve had enough with Type A. This world is too bloody a-Musing to keep missing it (After all, what kind of world would invent ping pong?). Watching Peter O’Toole in that wonderful, strait-jacket movie “My Favorite Year,” I was reminded once again of how great a wee bit of insanity really is. O’Toole is Mad and it’s so much fun. He also made me sad, I’ve done so much this semester and missed so much of the world.

But you know, I have a feeling things are going to be different now. After Thanksgiving I’ll be back marvellously mellow. And everything will be kind of all right.

Off the Cuff

I'm not thankful for...

ERIC SHOTWELL

In the spirit of Thanksgiving, there really are a lot of things that I'm thankful for. But there are even more things this year that I'm not thankful for.

- I'm not thankful for having two exams in one day, right before Break (I'm sure I'm not the only one).
- I'm not thankful for Public Safety's ticketing procedure. If a student parks in a visitor's parking spot for ten minutes, watch out. But if a theater-goer parks in DeWitt circle the night of a performance (for several hours), public safety just drives by.
- I'm not thankful for George Bush getting elected. Not that I'd rather see Dan Quayle in his shoes.
- I'm not thankful for the long lines waiting to use the microcomputers at the library and at VanderWerf. Since when are less than 20 computers suitable for over 2,500 students?
- I'm not thankful for research papers. Ever notice that all the books on Chivalry in Medieval Literature are gone?
- I'm not thankful for Holland weather, particularly snow (I know, there's none on the ground yet, but I hate it anyway).
- I'm not thankful for the Kletz (now known by some as "Phipps Jr."). The only time lunch is really good anymore is on high school visitation days.
- On the same note, I'm not thankful for visitation days. I hate high schools!
- I'm not thankful for sweaters, you know, those big, bulky Ecuadorian sweaters they've been selling in DeWitt and the Maas Center...why are they there every week?
- I'm not thankful for sweet potatoes at Thanksgiving. Yuck.
- I'm not thankful for sweet potatoes...at Thanksgiving. Yuck. Give me stuffing and mashed potatoes any day.

Well, that just about covers it. I realize I seem a bit hateful, but I just got a parking ticket, waited in line to use the micros, and took two exams. Of course, I am thankful that the semester's almost over, and that Thanksgiving Break starts tomorrow. Just don't try to make me eat any sweet potatoes.

Letters to the editor

Some students must work, not dance

Dear Editor,

I am writing in reference to the letter written last week in The Anchor by Hope alumna Robert Doering, who chose to write a brief, yet very critical and judgmental letter directed to our ever "dishonestly apathetic student body."

The letter referred to the attendance at the previous week's Marathon Dance to benefit AIDS and cancer research. Mr. Doering explicitly expressed how offended he was when he noticed a mere 30 students supporting the dance, and accused that "students who call themselves Christians" could not spare but "one hour of your busy Friday" to support something so crucial to our lives.

Yet, Mr. Doering, I agree that the time and money put forth for cancer and AIDS research is very crucial, and believe me, my empathy toward individuals who are confronted every day with the horrors of these diseases is of great dimension. Still, Mr. Doering, your self-righteous attitude disgusts me.

First of all, who are you to point a finger to accuse me of not participating in the "right" Christian activities? I support many organizations both financially and with personal participation with my own best interest of humankind in mind. I do not feel that in any way I need to boast nor justify my support of any organization, but I also do not feel that you have a right to judge a person's Christianity or call it hypocrisy based on lack of participation at a dance for a worthy cause.

I do believe that there is some severe apathy present here at Hope College. Still, Mr. Doering, this is no excuse to attack someone's practice of faith simply because they could not attend a benefit dance. You do not know what the predominant reasons were.

We should all, as citizens, feel responsibility to our nation and its people to support as best we can the causes and programs which seek to help those who need assistance, yet whichever program is selected is up to the individual and his or her own beliefs.

I do applaud Diane Tague, the Promotional Director for WTHS as well as its staff, for constructing the dance. Unfortunately, much of their efforts went unrewarded, yet at least we can commend students for seeing the need to make the public aware of such a need.

You were correct, Mr. Doering. I did have a busy Friday night. Although I would much rather liked to have been dancing, I do live the reality of being a student and therefore, I worked.

Please excuse my "apathy," but I certainly hope you will still allow me to call myself a Christian, even though I was not there.

Very Sincerely,
Claudine Wagner

Singing "Rawhide" in their Blues Brothers' dress, the Delta Phis captured the plaque at the 1988 All College Sing last Friday, beating out 15 other acts.

The Centurians, singing a homemade version of "Nothing Dirty Going On Down Here," from the musical "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," and the Alpha Gamma Phis singing "Leader of the Pack" took second and third respectively.

The All College Sing was emceed by comedian Rondell Sheridan who filled in the gaps between acts with stand-up comedy and jokes about members of the audience and hecklers. Sheridan kept the show moving and made it more interesting than it has been in the past.

After the show was over, there was some minor controversy in the audience about the judging. Many students expressed a desire to have the show divided into two categories: Greek and Non-Greek. One of the problems with it, as established now, is that the volume and the spectacle of a filled stage that the Greek and Non-Greek Frater and Arcadian groups created was very difficult to compare. Sheridan kept the show moving and made it more interesting than it has been in the past.

Another problem was that not all songs were appropriate for the musical context. The Arcadian 5 not only dressed alike, but sang--a capella--that they were "Happy Together."

AND THE WINNER IS... -- Em Sheridan congratulated members of the Delta Phi sorority for capturing the All-College Sing.
The group called the Run Around Sue's and Company performed a choreographed version of "Run Around Lou."

Organizations can offer is built for independents to work with. Independents utilize the established structure's numbers to stage numbers comparable to that of Phi, the SIBs, the Center some of the other organizations.

A problem seemed to be the organization and spectacle with the judges over a 'My Girl.' Either the first place with "My Girl," or the re Five with "Happy" deserved to place at least. The top three since they both did such a good job, either way the winners should be picked in the four judged categories, and then an overall winner from those four teams should be chosen. This way more groups would be recognized for their accomplishments.

Judges for the All-College Sing included Dean Jim Bemering, Todd Steen of the Economics and Business Administration department, Mary Kempker of Public Relations, Dave Van Dyke, Assistant Director for College Advancement and Kama Jongerius.

The Cosmopolitan fraternity sang of their realization that "You Can't Live With 'Em, You Can't Live Without 'Em."

The Alpha Gamma Phi sorority performed the tragic story "Leader of the Pack" and received third place for their effort.

What is your opinion of raising the student activities fee?

Michelle Striegel
Senior
Math

"For sure. I think it would be worth it for our own experience. I'm sure we could afford it, like $10 more."

Gary Land
Sophomore
Bus. Admin.-Econ.

"I'm all for it, provided the raise is actually needed."

Al DeVries
Junior
Business Administration

"I don't think there should be a raise in the activities fee. It goes to a lot of groups, but I really don't think the students see much of it."

Jennifer Hough
Junior Communications

"I think it would be good if they raise it a little bit. I don't think it should be doubled, but maybe $50 or $60. You know it is used well, so it should be raised to meet costs."

Phi Jones
Sophomore
Physical Education

"I really wouldn't see any problem with a raise. It is benefiting student organizations which I think are very good."

Edelson speaks on 'Psycho'

by Jim Monnett
anchor Entertainment Editor

"The film is very much like a trip through a funhouse," said Michael Edelson about Alfred Hitchcock's 1959 movie "Psycho" at a "Friday Symposia" sponsored by the Hope Art Department.

Hitchcock's genius is the shower scene. Hitchcock stuns the audience by killing off the big name star Janel Lang a third of the way through the movie. Edelson explained that the first third of the movie seems to be intentionally boring which makes "the shower scene" so much more shocking. "When you see the shower scene for the first time, it stays with you throughout the rest of the movie. You never quite trust (Hitchcock) after that; you're almost on the edge of your seat from then on," Edelson said.

Before the shower scene, Miriam (Janel Lang) and Norman are talking in her room. Miriam tells Norman about her lover Sam and yet she lies about his name by signing her lover's name by checking the register after she has checked out. Edelson suggested this is all of us, Edelson suggested.

Norman Bates says, "We all go a little mad at times. Don't you?" Hitchcock plays on Norman's averageness to show the audience how little separates them from the unknown and in this case from the psychopath. Norman later says, "We're all in our private trap," as if he were admitting his schizophrenia in actuality. Edelson said, Hitchcock is reminding the audience that they could be Norman.

The key to Hitchcock's genius is the shower scene. Hitchcock stunned the audience by killing off the big name star Janel Lang a third of the way through the movie. Edelson explained that the first third of the movie seems to be intentionally boring which makes "the shower scene" so much more shocking. "When you see the shower scene for the first time, it stays with you throughout the rest of the movie. You never quite trust (Hitchcock) after that; you're almost on the edge of your seat from then on," Edelson said.

Before the shower scene, Miriam (Janel Lang) and Norman are talking in her room. Miriam tells Norman about her lover Sam and yet she lies about his name by checking the register after that and finds that she is using her lover's name by signing Miriam Samuelson instead of her true name Miriam Crane. Edelson said that he lied to Norman the guilt about murdering his own mother and her lover. At this point, Miriam becomes Norman's mother and he needs to kill her again as herself (dressed as his mother).

The voyeurism theme is crucial to the shower scene. Edelson said. In the office Norman is painting from the wall exposing a large hole with a smaller hole in the adjoining bathroom where Miriam is undressing. The two holes form an eye which Norman, by peering through, looks like a cameraman which ties the audience further to the scene.

When Miriam is in the shower, the eye motif is continued in views of the open toilet bowl, the spraying showerhead, the loops of the shower curtain, the drain through which the blood flows down and the last two frames which show Miriam's dead eye. The shower scene lasts 45 seconds and is made of 78 different pieces of film. Disproving myths, Edelson had slide frames that showed a sideview of a breast and another of the tip of the knife piercing the stomach of the model playing Miriam in this scene. Other than this one frame the knife is never shown to cut the flesh.

Contrasting the horror of "Psycho's" shower scene with the graphic violence of the "Friday the 13th" series, Edelson said, "You can supply with your mind much more gore than Hitchcock could ever be permitted to show you on the screen."

After the lecture, "Psycho" was shown to the audience.

Theatre will present Firebugs beginning December 1

HOLLAND - The Firebugs, Hope College Theatre's second production this season, will open on December 1 at 8 p.m. in the Ullis Studio Theatre, 12th Street at Columbus Avenue. Additional performances of The Firebugs will be Dec. 2, 3, and 6-10. An audience Participation Program will be held in the Studio Theatre immediately following the Dec. 3 performance. Led by Dr. James Cook and Dr. George Ralph, this session will give audience members the opportunity to respond to and ask questions about the production they have just seen.

Theatre Department faculty member George Ralph will direct this ironic, dramatic masterpiece. The play is centered around the character of Gottlieb Biedermann, a cautious German businessman, and his simple-minded wife Babette. Concerned about themselves and their home, this couple extends their hospitality to two uninvited arsonists. Biedermann is being played by Kevin J. Schneider, the drama teacher at Holland High School and Babette is being played by Trina Light, a senior majoring in theatre at Hope College.

Scenery and properties design will be by Richard L. Smith, costume design will be by Lois K. Carder, and lighting and sound design will be by Perry Landes.

Tickets are available at the DeWitt Center Ticket Office, Ticket Office hours: Monday-Friday, 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. and Saturday, 12 a.m. - 3 p.m. It will be open for extended hours on performance nights. Seating is limited, so reserve tickets early. Tickets are $5 for adults, $4 for Senior Citizens, and $3 for children under 12. Phone 394-7890 for further information.
Music by Three' draws large crowd

by Jim Monnett
anchor entertainment editor

The three classical artists of the "Music by Three" concert entertained a large crowd last Thursday in Dimnent Memorial Chapel as another part of the Hope College Great Performance Series.

Playing solo or in pairs, Violinist Benny Kim, pianist Jaime Bolipata and French hornist Eric Ruske performed pieces by Franz Joseph Haydn, Vincent Persichetti and Edvard Grieg.

After a short intermission, the performers returned to the stage to blend the music of their instruments in "Trio in Eb Major, Op.40" by Johannes Brahms.

Before the concert, Bolipata explained that there would be a few changes from the program on which he elaborated, but which were unclear to the layman. He started his solo piece on the grand piano with a flourish and soon was taking the audience with him into the music. He played two short pieces by Haydn before he moved into his more memorable piece which was the "Presto" of Haydn's "Sonata No. 21 in F Major." This closing piece of upbeat, lively, and quite enjoyable.

The second section of the concert had Bolipata playing his music in complementary fashion with Ruske's French horn. Ruske seemed to be having problems with some part of his French horn, but maintained his composure and filled the Chapel with the low wall of the horn. The high point of this duet was during the quiet, softly played middle section of the twentieth century work by Persichetti. The piano and French horn seemed to blend together in an amazing fashion, even to the uneducated ear.

Kim played violin with Bolipata again accompanying on the grand piano. Though Kim played extremely elaborate and seemingly difficult parts on the violin, he did so with an apparent audaciousness. Many times Kim would pause while Bolipata played and stand with his violin held between his shoulder and his chin without his hands. Maybe this is proper, but it appeared as if he wanted to keep the audience's attention on him rather than on Bolipata's playing. Afterword though, Kim did pat Bolipata on the back as though thanking him for his fine accompaniment.

After the intermission all three took their positions and their instruments' music was blended and molded together into one sound. Each artist so finely played his music that it wrapped itself around the strains of the other two's music, filling the chapel with melody.

Bolipata, Kim and Ruske are all winners of the Young Concert Artist International Auditions and varied other awards. Kim has performed as concerto soloist with the St. Louis Symphony and Chicago Symphony. Bolipata performed at the age of 13 with the Manila Symphony Orchestra in his native Philippines. Ruske is the associate principal horn of the Cleveland Orchestra, as well as hornist with the Cleveland Octet.

Hunting Bambi

BILL MEENGS

It's that time of year again. It's time for beer and playing cards to skyrocket, and for the B.S. start piling up. Yes, it's deer season again.

Deer season, time for grown men to take a week off, go to a cabin in the middle of nowhere and hunt for that elusive 10-point. I'd like to know if anybody ever shoots a 10-point because I've never seen one. Come to think of it, I've never seen a living 10-point either. I wonder if there really is such a thing. More likely it's just something invented in the hunter's mind.

Deer hunters are the only people who can rival fishermen with stories about "the one that got away." A typical deer hunter story would start something like: "Hey Jeb, you should have seen this 10-point I got a shot off at today." The next step would be for Jeb to ask why the hunter missed the shot. The hunter, not wanting to appear as a bad shot, would reply with "Well, I actually think I hit him, but he was so big, that bullet probably seemed like only a bee stung to him."

Well, Jeb now has to top this so he starts telling about a 14-point he got a shot off at in '76. This kind of thing continues until we get to the 36-point Jeb's cousin shot 12 years ago. "You should've seen the neck on that one," says Jeb. Considering that most deer hunters simply sit in the cabin drinking beer, playing cards and shooting the bull, these stories are really amazing.

I used to think my dad was a poor shot because he always came home talking about all the deer he had seen, but he never had any strapped to the car. I realize now that the deer he had was those that looked in the window or peeked their heads in the door of the cabin as the hunters were involved in a serious poker game.

There are two basic problems that have to be overcome if you want to get a deer. First is that you have to actually hunt. No matter how much your hunting partners laugh at you, you must get up at 5 o'clock in the morning, bundle yourself up and go sit in your deerblind during a blinding snowstorm. This is the only way to get your deer because the second problem is that deer are smart.

Deer figure that nobody would be dumb enough to get up at 5 a.m. and go sit all day in the middle of a driving blizzard, so that's the only time they come out of hiding. Don't kid yourself, deer know when it's deer season.

Why else do you think you see them all over the week before season, but they disappear on the first day of hunting season? It's because they know.

The Department of Natural Resources tries to even things out by issuing what they call "doe permits." But let's face it, the only person who would shoot a doe is a truly desperate hunter.

Senior running back Joe Cossey of Pennville was named the football team's most valuable offensive player while junior back Tim Lamie of Traverse City was voted the most valuable defensive player.

Senior Jeff Getzinger of Rogers City was named the recipient of the Allen C. Kinney sportsmanship award which is presented by the coaches for overall contribution to the football program.

Co-captains of the 1989 football team will be Lamie and junior Kurt Friedrichsen of Hamilton. Voted the most valuable members of the men's cross country team were Bruce Pletter, a sophomore from Grand Rapids, and Mike Northuis, a senior from Grand Haven, while Dave Steamply, a junior from Zeeland, was selected the most improved runner. Tri-captains in 1989 will be Flegar; Don Kent, a junior from Lodi, N.Y.; and Dal Townsend, a junior from Clayton.

Senior Tauna Jecmen of Jenison was voted the most valuable runner in women's cross country while Julie Hudson, a junior from Portland, Ind., was named the most improved runner. Co-captains in 1989 will be Anne Vanlam, a junior from Levering, and Vonnie Dood, a junior from East Lansing.

Senior Amy Johnson of Wilmette, Ill. was voted the most valuable player on the field hockey team. Johnson was also the co-most valuable field hockey player in the MIAA this year. Jennifer McIlwain, a freshman from Berkley, was voted the most improved player. Co-captains in 1989 will be Heidi Carigen, a junior from Zeeland, and Sue Spring, a sophomore from Vestal, N.Y.

Senior Steve Knott of Niles was voted the most valuable player on the MIAA championship golf team while Magnus Lunblad, a sophomore from West Bloomfield, was named the most improved. Junior Dave Tull of Rochester will be captain on the 1989 team.

The soccer team honored three players. Junior Brent Van Blois of Orchard Lake was voted the most valuable player, senior Hans Hiemstra of Renseelaer, N.Y. the most inspirational, and sophomore Tendo Kasara of Braeburn, Uganda the most improved. Tri-captains in 1989 will be sophomore Brenda Kronewetter of Delaware, Ohio, sophomore Grant Scott of Norrbrook, Ill., and Van Blois.

Three-time All-MIAA player Holly VandenBerg, a junior from Grand Rapids, was voted the most valuable player in volleyball while freshman Holly Brown of Kalamazoo was named the most improved. Co-captains in 1989 will be junior Shelley Koster of Wyoming and VandenBerg.
Women's b-ball seeks sixth straight winning season

HOLLAND – The Hope College women's basketball team will be seeking a school-record sixth straight winning season during its 1988-89 campaign which begins Saturday, Nov. 26 at Wheaton College in Illinois.

Coach Terri McFarland has guided the Flying Dutch to three consecutive second place finishes in the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association (MIAA). The teams have posted an overall 47-25 record during that span.

The Flying Dutch return seven players from last year's 14-9 squad which posted a 9-3 record against MIAA opponents for the second straight year. Hope featured a balanced scoring attack last year as only one player averaged in double figures.

This year's team has only two seniors on the pre-season roster. Co-captain Amy Warriner, a 5'7" guard from Greenville, led the seniors on the pre-season roster. Also returning is point guard Justin George, 6'3" center from Grand Rapids, ranked second on the team in scoring last year. Nienhuis, who missed six games due to injuries, averaged 8.5 points a game as she shot 50 percent from the floor and 83 percent from the free throw line while Roeters scored at a 7.6 points per game clip and was second in rebounds at 5.8 per contest.

This year's roster is one of the largest in the history of Hope women's basketball with 16 freshmen and 11 others joining the veterans in pre-season drills. The first home action will come the weekend of Dec. 2-3 when the Flying Dutch host the Great Lakes Colleges Association tournament.

Men's b-ball wins McDonald's tourney

HOLLAND – Hope's men's basketball team jumped into action last Saturday in the McDonald's Tipoff Classic. Hope won the tournament by defeating Northwood 104-68 in the championship game.

The Dutchmen have long been considered the underdog in the NCAA basketball race, winning seven of the eight championships in the '80s. This year, however, the Dutch will play in the underdog role. Hope returns eight lettermen from last year's championship team, but the team lacks experienced front-line players.

Hope lost to graduation two co-captains and their teammates. Matt Strong also lost through graduation were veterans Jim Nienhuis, Todd Marsman, and Bill Vanderbilt. Last year, these four averaged 53 of the team's 89 points per game and two-thirds of the team's rebounds.

The team returns much talent, however, as seniors Jack Holman, Greg Mitchell and Tim VanLiere all are returning. Holman, a 6'4" guard and forward, started all but one game last year and was the team leader in three point baskets (40 and 82). Holman averaged 10.3 points per game. Mitchell is this year's captain, and as last year's most effective outside shooter. Mitchell had a 55 percent average from three-point range and averaged 5.8 points per game. The 6'3" guard and forward also committed 12 turnovers in 27 games. VanLiere, a 6'2" guard and forward, shot 51 percent from the floor last year.

Also returning is point guard Eric Elliott. The 5'10" sophmore started in 22 games last year, and led the team in assists (90) and free throw shooting (83 percent). Other returning lettermen are 6'1" guard Justin George, 6'3" junior forward Dan Kluender, and 6'6" center Bruce VanderKolk.

The returning lettermen plus the fact that there are 29 players other than lettermen seeking berths on the varsity and JV teams make the chances of coach Glenn VanWieren having another winning season appear pretty good. Van Wieren is only 17 victories from his 200th career win.

Hope's next game is November 26 against Concordia College. The game is at the Holland Civic Center and game time is 8 p.m.

Sports Scoreboard

CROSS COUNTRY– In the NCAA national championship meet held last Saturday, Hope's Tauna Jecmen finished 36th in the women's race. Teammate Jilanne Banik finished 76th and Hope's Bryan Whitmore finished 168th in the men's race.
