Students complain to Congress about meals

Blue trays, table tents, the celery dispenser, and the scramble system are all part of the typical Phelps meal. Recently, some students have been writing Student Congress in order to improve their experience in Phelps by getting lower prices and a better menu. So far, Congress has received several letters since the beginning of the year, via e-mail and their webpage.

"Most were concerned that they bought 21 meals per week and only ate 15," said Matt Scogin '02, Student Congress Vice-President. "Most would also like us to go to a debit system."

Dining Services director Bob VanHeukolem said that when students purchase a meal plan, they are actually getting free meals. "Students think they're paying for 21 meals, and if they don't get 21, they think they're losing money," said Bob VanHeukolem, director of Dining Services. "The meal plan takes that into consideration that students don't eat all of their meals."

VanHeukolem said that's why there's only a small difference in the prices for the meal plans, since as the plans get smaller, there's a higher likelihood that students will eat all of their meals.

There have also been requests to institute a five meal per week plan. "We have that, but students don't know about it," VanHeukolem said. Hopefully, Congress will be able to get a five meal plan for students, and also renew a debit system to improve the meal plan at Hope College.
The first speaker of the Student Congress Discussion Series was close to home, as President James J. Bultman opened the series with a discussion on the direction of Hope. During the Dec. 1 event, Bultman discussed five visions he has for the Hope alumni.
Quitting time

As the fall semester began I partook of a new experience - I took my first painting class. At first I feared mine eyes would become a canvas, or that I would discover a previously unknown second talent. However, as the semester progresses, I have discovered that painting is not as frightening as I had thought it would be. It has actually become a very enjoyable pastime for me.

I have learned a lot from this experience and have come to enjoy the time I spend there, even though it is not always easy for me. I have found myself looking long hours at my paints and paintings, observing their details and colors, and trying to capture the essence of what I am seeing.

I find myself re-examining the world I live in, and trying to understand more of its beauty. I have learned to see the world with new eyes, and to appreciate the small details that I had previously overlooked.

As I continue to paint, I find myself gaining more confidence in my abilities, and becoming more comfortable with the process. I am beginning to enjoy the work I am creating, and am looking forward to continuing my journey in this new field.
Defining “religious”

The definition of “religious” isn’t as narrow as some members of the Religious Life Committee want to make it. There are some members on the Committee that want “religious” to equal Christian at Hope College. Those members need to realize that this change would be one of the worst moves the college could make. Committee members point to the mission statement of the college: “in the context of the historic Christian faith.” But even this argument holds no weight, as the meaning of the mission has been debated to no end. Even the worst moves the college could make.

What those Committee members, and numerous others in the Hope community, need to grasp, is that there are those at the college who aren’t Christian. Despite some personal agendas, Hope needs to resist the urge to create a narrow definition becoming attached to the Religious Life Committee. The Committee should reflect the beliefs that exist at Hope – all of them.

Narrowing the meaning of the Religious Life Committee is not only close-minded, but discriminates against a large segment of the campus community, a segment that’s much larger than the Committee thinks. The college also needs to stop defining “religious” as “Christian.” Religious implies religions, as in a number of different ways of believing and thinking. The college may be Christian affiliated, but that doesn’t necessarily mean it’s a Christian college.

Hope has long allowed “non-Christian” students to attend classes. By passing a strict interpretation of the term “Christian,” the college will give a big hint to those students: you aren’t welcome at Hope.

Perhaps that’s what Hope wants. It seems that the college is attempting some sort of “religious cleansing” as an attempt to create one view; a view that would exclude an even larger segment of the campus.

The college doesn’t need to be harshful about its Christianity, but if Hope wants to hold itself up as an institution of learning it needs to stop weeding out alternative ways of thinking.

Senior professors doubts about “sexual requirements”

To the Editor:

I have a favorite book. I enjoy hearing what other people have to say about this book, even if I don’t agree with them. They bring their own experiences to the reading and give new meaning to it for me. I can’t always expect to understand them. Last month a popular chaplain said some things about sex and marriage that were based more on cultural Christianity and the nuclear family theory than on the stories and instructions in the Bible. One of his statements, as badly as I could copy it, was this:

“There is no doubt that the only limitation in the Bible of our sexuality comes through the marriage of one man and one woman who promise to love one another, and only one another, throughout their entire lives.”

Marriage certainly is affirmed in the Bible, and most of the main characters (with the exception of Jesus) were conceived by married parents. God’s Chosen People received many blessings from marriage, but only heartache from sex outside of marriage. Two didn’t marry, but were “given in marriage.” Women also were not allowed to divorce, but men were. Hope students with big hearts are emotional. I’m not sure who had more fun and smiles – the Hope students or the families who attended. Even the “talking” animals at the petting zoo were on their best behavior. For the somewhat scary hayride, the improv group from Hope cuddled themselves as “The Three Wildie Crazy Scarecrows” and the “Headsless Horseman.” Some families even rode the hayride three or four times. The old fashioned booths, up time for prayer, and protected the family from illicit mandrake trafficking.

Marriage continued to develop throughout the Bible, and in the centuries afterward the “purchase” element gave way to the “promise” element. Nowadays the marriage aisle is open to many couples who in the past were barred for reasons of social caste, distance, skin color, handicap, material wealth, or living situation. Christianity still struggles to recognize that bond whenever it appears, regardless of society’s stance.

All love, if it is true love, comes from God. I guess I missed the part about husbands and wives being obligated to love their neighbors as well. For now I have to assume that when a chaplain says he loves me, he is either lying, or he is cheating on his wife.

The words, “no doubt,” were emphasized, suggesting that throughout the Bible and through history there isn’t a Christian who doubts the “sexual requirements” as set forth in this sermon.

To rebut, I hereby profess my doubt.

Jedediah Leachman ('00)
Never the Same

Dana Lamers

Meredith Adolat. (’01) had to ask her parents for directions to get to her own house. Adolat’s parents moved while she was away at school, putting an interesting twist on going home. “It was hard,” Adolat said. “I never felt like I lived there until this summer. My room wasn’t unpacked for months.”

Heading home for a weekend, a holiday, or summer vacation can be a confusing experience for any college student, and for those students whose parents decide to move, a trip home can become even more complicated.

“It’s difficult for Melissa Howe (’01) to consider her parent’s new home her own. My new house is just where my parents are,” she said. “My room is just a bunch of space where I can put my stuff. I don’t know anyone, have a church home, or even feel comfortable at the kitchen table.”

In the past six months, I’ve moved from Kollen Hall, to my home in Hudsonville, to Vienna, Austria, home again with my parents, and then back to school. College students simply don’t live at one residence for very long, before it’s time to move somewhere else again.

“Home” has become more of a state of mind rather than a physical location. Since that day I left home, I’ve learned to be comfortable in a lot of places. I’ve also learned from being uncomfortable in some situations.

We are realizing that life is constantly moving, that it’s about accepting transitions, being flexible in an ever-changing world. It’s about learning to be content wherever we lay our heads.

My new house is just where my immediate family,” said Christine Bradford (’03), whose parents recently moved to New Jersey. “The Christmas Eve service at my church will be missing, as well as the traditional parties with relatives who all live in Michigan.”

Gray also advised going to visit the old neighborhood on longer holidays, if possible. “Think of ways to keep in touch with your old friends and community and at the same time, start new traditions,” she said. Gray also advised considering going to visit the old neighborhood on longer holidays, if possible.

Gray said that students face several challenges when their families move such as loss of a space that’s their own, loss of familiar neighborhood, as well as the loss of contact with friends and acquaintances.

The hardest thing about going home for breaks is not knowing a single person,” Ford said. “It’s hard to meet people when you’re away at school all year, so when I’m in St. Louis I really have nothing to do.”

Some students also begin to feel they have more than just one home. “My new house is one of my many homes,” Bradford said, “If there is one thing I have learned in the past year, it’s that you can never have too many homes.”

My house in New Jersey is home because my family is there. How ever, Portage, Michigan will always be my home because I grew up there and have so many friends here.”

When parents move, it can be an adjustment, but it is not necessarily a negative change.

“I thought it would be weird when my parents moved,” said Anne Vandevel (’01). “I thought I would miss my old house, but I don’t. It’s my parents’ house, not mine. I go home, and my floor is the same. More so, my home is my floor.”

For some students, going home is more like going on a vacation. “It’s been strange,” said Dan Zoller (’03), whose parents moved to Florida during his freshman year. “I don’t have any friends at home. The first Christmas we were in a rental home, the next two times I went home my parents were building a home. I’ve never lived there in the summer.”

I’ve avoided that. I do have a room in the house, but it doesn’t seem like mine.”

**********

An Explanation...

As of this issue, I am resigning as the Infocus and Religion editor of the Anchor. I’m not pulling away from the Anchor altogether; I’ll still be designing ads and occasionally writing articles. And while I know that the Anchor is one of the most valuable experiences I’ve had in college, I also know that somewhere along the way I’ve stopped enjoying it as much as I used to. I’m simply burnt out, and drained by everything the Hope College has to offer. I want to take a writing class that meets during Anchor meetings. I’ve already started to work as a student assistant to the Writing Center’s staff. And now that I’m far enough along in school to take the classes that I want to take, I want to give them a little more time and energy.

Maybe this is just a sabbatical, maybe it’s a slow retirement from journalism. Either way, I’m just looking forward to little space to breathe and a different view for a semester.

My gut tells me that’s a good thing.
Sociopathic Christmas

Andrew Lotz

---

Christmas Is Dead

This holiday season, I think that I am recognizing the Spirit of Christmas.

I can feel its presence as I walk through stores hearing excerpts of "What Child is This?" or "Feltor Navidad" on P.A. systems. Cars drive by with elfed elves strapped to their roofs, and I can see the multicolored lights glowing brightly surrounded by ornament after ornament. The smell of sugar cookies fills my nose, and after ornament. The smell of brightly surrounded by ornament multicolored lights glowing their roofs, and I can see the cars.

"We all saw it coming," I suppose. Christmas finally died, although Dickens-homage, haunts me this year. This year, probably the holiday that I used to enjoy. This year, probably the one I was Jungle Chrisnmas. This year, probably the one I was looking forward to after I got back from my spring break.

"I don't care that we didn't win the contest," TerHaar said. "We just decided it would be fun to have some corporeal trace of a Spirit this year, probably the holiday that 1 used to enjoy. This year, probably the one I was looking forward to after I got back from my spring break."
Students prepare to celebrate 2000

The clock is ticking.
While the world prepares to greet the year 2000, many Hope students are wondering how to spend the last evening of the millennium.

"I kind of feel pressured to have an amazing New Year's," said Amanda Drover ('03). Drover plans to be in New York City on Dec. 31, a situation she looks forward to, but not without apprehension.

"I want to make sure I take advantage of all the fun and unique things that will be going on in the city," Drover said. "But I'm also kind of nervous. I'm a crazy girl who likes to have fun, but I also want to be safe."

Matt Tesch ('01) and Steve Engel ('01) plan to spend their New Year's Eve in Pontiac. The two will attend a sold-out concert at the Silver Dome, featuring such acts as Metallica, Kid Rock and Ted Nugent.

"The tickets were $100 a person but they were well worth it because we got great seats. It's going to be a lot of fun," Engel said.

While some students celebrate in the city, others see the evening as a money-making opportunity. Justin Savara ('01) plans to spend the first New Year's of the millennium waiting tables.

"A couple of friends and I are going to be working at a restaurant that is offering to pay us $500 plus tips," Savara said.

Some students see the night as an opportunity to gather with close friends. Kari Lubelan ('03) is holding a formal dance at her house in Groveland for her friends.

"We're going to dress up and dance," Lubelan said. "I just want the night to be memorable."

While a number of Hope students have big plans for New Year's Eve, others don't share their enthusiasm.

"I'll probably just do what I did last year and go to bed at eleven," said Heath Fowler ('02). With the uncertainty surrounding the Y2K bug, some students plan on laying low until the coast is clear.

"I feel that if the Y2K thing does happen people will riot and if it doesn't happen people will riot," said Sarah Pedley ('01). "There has been so much hype this year about this whole thing that people's expectations are crazed."

Pedley plans to spend her evening with friends until she is sure there is no fallout.

"I am fearful of what may happen that night so I'm laying low until midnight has passed and I see the outcome," Pedley said.

For a while I thought dinner and champagne at a fancy restaurant would be fun, I could welcome the new millennium in style.

Then I remembered I have the social grace of a decapitated chicken. Spills and stubbed toes follow my every high-heeled step.

Plus there's the issue of my age. I'm a member of the 18-20, "Ha! Ha! Good Luck," age group. I find it ironic, from a purely philosophical standpoint, that I am theoretically old enough to fight and die for my country, but a glass of wine on the final eve of the millennium is considered a misdemeanor.

Another option is to attend the festivities downtown. However I'd rather not be in the middle of the mob when everyone starts to riot because ABSOLUTELY NOTHING HAPPENS at 12:01.

My parents are pretty cool. I thought so.

My parents are pretty cool.

For the new millennium I plan to spend the evening with my close friends.

That way I can dance to my heart's delight and my friends won't mock me. . . much. If I trip or spill or sweat too much, they'll be quick to forgive.

And rather than being stuck in the cold, dark city streets, we'll watch the rioting mayhem from the comfort of a living room sofa.

New Year's angst

New Year's Eve is coming and I am worried.

High pressure social situations tend to make me nervous and the unspoken New Year's Rule, "You must have the best night of your life," always sits on the edge of my mind. Whenever I feel forced to have fun, I end up disappointed.

As if the normal New Year's Eve stress wasn't bad enough, this year's 1999.

Now not only do I have to go out, I have to be the most fun of the millennium or else I'll live in social shame for the next 50 years.

I could go dancing, but this presents several problems. I wouldn't call myself a klut - that's too kind. I am a coordinationally-challenged white girl with a rapid case of Dutch rhythm.

To put it kindly, I dance like Al Gore on crack. So dancing is out of the question.

For while I thought dinner and champagne at a fancy restaurant would be fun, I could welcome the new millennium in style.

Then I remembered I have the social grace of a decapitated chicken. Spills and stubbed toes follow my every high-heeled step.

Plus there's the issue of my age. I'm a member of the 18-20, "Ha! Ha! Good Luck," age group. I find it ironic, from a purely philosophical standpoint, that I am theoretically old enough to fight and die for my country, but a glass of wine on the final eve of the millennium is considered a misdemeanor.

Another option is to attend the festivities downtown. However I'd rather not be in the middle of the mob when everyone starts to riot because ABSOLUTELY NOTHING HAPPENS at 12:01.

My parents are pretty cool. I could spend a meaningful evening with the individuals who gave me life.

Unfortunately, Mom and Dad are hosting a party of their own this year and they say I'm not invited.

I could indulge my inner need and spend the evening in front of my computer, secretly hoping the Y2K bug proves to be a reality ("Whoa cool . . . Now all those hot Durfee guys will come to reprogram their hard drives").

But as fun as that sounds . . . I'll opt for a quiet, casual evening with my close friends.

That way I can dance to my heart's delight and my friends won't mock me. . . much. If I trip or spill or sweat too much, they'll be quick to forgive.

And rather than being stuck in the cold, dark city streets, we'll watch the rioting mayhem from the comfort of a living room sofa.

The Top Ten New Year's Resolutions

10. Stop fattening the squirrels with remnants of ice cream cones.
9. Recycle the Anchor.
8. Avoid stray frisbees.
7. Leave the salt shakers in Phelps.
6. Return our trays to the Kletz.
5. Bathe the elderly.
4. Buy air freshener.
3. Obey parietals.
2. Attend that darn 8 a.m. class that the snooze button always makes you miss.
1. Call home more often. And not just for money. OK, maybe just a few bucks to get through the week. And hey, it's winter, don't you need that nice wool sweater from the sale in DeWitt? We thought so.

--Amy Moldenhauer ('00)
--Megan Murphy ('02)
--Brandon Cota ('01)
--Amber Beeacon ('03)
--Steve Robison

RANDOM SAMPLINGS

Jane Bast

Paisley dAve will perform a benefit concert at the Knickerbocker Theater January 4, 2000. The concert is at 8:00 and all proceeds go towards the Heifer Project.

Anchor graphic by Chad Sampson

The concert is at 8:00 and all proceeds go towards the Heifer Project.
"We're all just cheesy romantics," Harl said. "It's pretty cool that we did it all within Hope's decorating guidelines."

Matt Sterling's (01) Kraker apartment is covered in a variety of Christmas decorations including lights, ornaments in plants and a variety of Christmas tablecloths.

"Decorating puts people in the giving mood, it helps celebrate the season," Sterling said.

Many Hope students think similarly to Sterling and many use Christmas lights to brighten their room for the holidays.

"The room gets really boring after a while," said Chris Winkler (02). "Christmas is the perfect time to add some festive things to our rooms. Plus, it brings some of home to school."

Winkler and his roommate, Keith Heustis (02), have attempted to do this by stringing white lights across their room and their Christmas "tree" (a cactus named Chester). They also have a section in their room which has ornaments Winkler received from various family members. For Heustis and Winkler, there was no question on whether or not to decorate their room for the holidays.

"The question is 'why not?'" Heustis said.

Have no fear the Huggy Bear Hour will be back.

At least we think so. That lovable show you've come to know and love will be back for another go round on 89.9 WTHS.

Michael Zuidema, Brian Dryfbout.
The only show on WTHS Mondays from 8 to 10 p.m.

PRAYERS
FRIDAYS AT FOUR
Semelink Hall,
4 - 4:30 p.m.
Western Theological Seminary
Join us every Friday for a quiet, meditative time of reflection and Scripture with music of the world church.

Hope Church (RCA)
Third Reformed
St. Francis de Sales Catholic
Western Theological Seminary

VILLAGE INN PIZZA PARLOR
LIVE MUSIC
Tuesday nights
8:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.
934 S. Washington Ave.
392-1818

WE'LL ERASE YOUR COLLEGE LOAN.
If you're stuck with a (federally insured) student loan that's not in default, the Army might pay it off.

If you qualify, we'll reduce your debt—up to $65,000. Payment is either 1/2 of the debt or $1,500 for each year of service, whichever is greater.

You'll also have training in a choice of skills and enough self-assurance to last you the rest of your life.

Get all the details from your Army Recruiter.

ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE:
www.goarmy.com

Order your 2000 book at the Student Union Desk
Exam Week Specials

PIZZA

PAPA JOHN'S

You deserve a study break!

- large 1-topping pizza or
- small 1-topping pizza & 20 oz. Coke

$5.99

- Party Pack -- 3 or more 1-topping pizzas

$5.95

Gift certificates available in $5 increments

- Make great gifts!

Everyone loves Papa Johns!
strictly classified.

ACT NOW! Get the best SPRING BREAK PRICES! South Padre, Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Acapulco, Florida, and Mardi Gras. Reserve needed... travel free.com $55 group discounts for 6+. 800-838-8204/www.leisurelouis.com group discounts for 6+. 800-838-8204/ www.leisurelouis.com

GO DIRECT! We’re ihc 8203/ www.leisurelouis.com

Padre, Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, SPRING BREAK PRICES! Soulh strictly Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida. Best Guaranteed Lowest Price! 1-800- mercy! Servicing ALL destinations. other companies begging for WHOLESALE pricing by elimina- inlernet-based company offering Reqs needed.. .navel free, earn $SS. cover charges! Book early & re- prices guaranteed! Free parties & cover charges! Book early & re-

Students: Know your rights!... about alcohol and the law!

Join Carl Brutterer (attorney) short lecture: Q & A session

Thursday, Dec. 9 8 p.m. at Phelps

Sponsored by: Interfraternal Council, Panhelhocene Council & Cosmopolitan Fraternity

THE 1999 ANCHOR: A segment of the fall Anchor staff: front, L-R, Andrew Lott (’91), Carrie Arnold (’92); second row, Kurt Kochler (’93), Dan Lamers (’91), Jane Bast (’93), Melanie Lequizad (’91), Jessica Evans (’92); back row, Andrew Kleczek (’92), Sara E. Lamers (’91), Julie Green (’93), Mike Zuidema (’90), Matt Cook (’92).

At these prices, it’s too bad we don’t sell cars.

Maybe one day we will sell cars, food and everything else you need. But right now, it’s great deals on textbooks every day. You can save up to 40%, and you’ll get your books in 1 to 3 days. Not that you would, but don’t sweat using a credit card. VarsityBooks.com is 100% guaranteed secure. Try saying that about a new SUV.

SAVE UP TO 40% ON TEXTBOOKS.

Anchor photo by Beth Bailey
Erin VandenBerg (‘03) would not let her older sister, Betsy VandenBerg (‘00) steal the limelight when the Hope College swim teams traveled to the Wheaton Invitational.

As Betsy VandenBerg was busy qualifying for national competition in the 200-meter breaststroke (2:23.11) and 200-meter individual medley (2:12.94), sister Erin was topping competitors in the 1500-meter freestyle (17:49.90).

“I wish she (Erin) had been challenged,” said coach John Palnoll. “She might have been able to get a ‘b’ cut."

The performance earned Erin VandenBerg a ‘B’ cut for Nationals. An ‘A’ cut is when a swimmer automatically qualifies for Nationals. A ‘B’ cut means that swimmer is next in line for a spot. Typically the top 18 to 20 ‘B’ cuts are invited to each event at Nationals.

Despite the strong performances of the VandenBergs, the Flying Dutchmen needed a little more rest than they usually get at this time of year. "Our times weren't as fast as they had been in previous years since we didn't rest as much," Patnoll said. "I felt it was more important, during this year to reach our peak at the end of the year and I felt if we took a longer rest that might be compromised."

This year both the men's and women's teams rested five days, instead of two weeks like many of the other teams at the meet. Patnoll feels the shortened period is next in line for a spot. Typically the top 18 to 20 ‘B’ cuts are invited to each event at Nationals.

Despite the strong performances of the VandenBergs, the Flying Dutchmen managed only a fourth-place finish at the meet, largely due to their lack of rest. "Our times weren't as fast as they had been in previous years since we didn't rest as much," Patnoll said. "I felt it was more important, during this year to reach our peak at the end of the year and I felt if we took a longer rest that might be compromised."

This year both the men's and women's teams rested five days, instead of two weeks like many of the other teams at the meet. Patnoll feels the shortened period is next in line for a spot. Typically the top 18 to 20 ‘B’ cuts are invited to each event at Nationals. A ‘B’ cut means that swimmer is next in line for a spot. Typically the top 18 to 20 ‘B’ cuts are invited to each event at Nationals.

Despite the strong performances of the VandenBergs, the Flying Dutchmen needed a little more rest than they usually get at this time of year. "Our times weren't as fast as they had been in previous years since we didn't rest as much," Patnoll said. "I felt it was more important, during this year to reach our peak at the end of the year and I felt if we took a longer rest that might be compromised."

This year both the men's and women's teams rested five days, instead of two weeks like many of the other teams at the meet. Patnoll feels the shortened period is next in line for a spot. Typically the top 18 to 20 ‘B’ cuts are invited to each event at Nationals.

Despite the strong performances of the VandenBergs, the Flying Dutchmen needed a little more rest than they usually get at this time of year. "Our times weren't as fast as they had been in previous years since we didn't rest as much," Patnoll said. "I felt it was more important, during this year to reach our peak at the end of the year and I felt if we took a longer rest that might be compromised."

This year both the men's and women's teams rested five days, instead of two weeks like many of the other teams at the meet. Patnoll feels the shortened period is next in line for a spot. Typically the top 18 to 20 ‘B’ cuts are invited to each event at Nationals.

Despite the strong performances of the VandenBergs, the Flying Dutchmen needed a little more rest than they usually get at this time of year. "Our times weren't as fast as they had been in previous years since we didn't rest as much," Patnoll said. "I felt it was more important, during this year to reach our peak at the end of the year and I felt if we took a longer rest that might be compromised."

This year both the men's and women's teams rested five days, instead of two weeks like many of the other teams at the meet. Patnoll feels the shortened period is next in line for a spot. Typically the top 18 to 20 ‘B’ cuts are invited to each event at Nationals.

Despite the strong performances of the VandenBergs, the Flying Dutchmen needed a little more rest than they usually get at this time of year. "Our times weren't as fast as they had been in previous years since we didn't rest as much," Patnoll said. "I felt it was more important, during this year to reach our peak at the end of the year and I felt if we took a longer rest that might be compromised."

This year both the men's and women's teams rested five days, instead of two weeks like many of the other teams at the meet. Patnoll feels the shortened period is next in line for a spot. Typically the top 18 to 20 ‘B’ cuts are invited to each event at Nationals.

Despite the strong performances of the VandenBergs, the Flying Dutchmen needed a little more rest than they usually get at this time of year. "Our times weren't as fast as they had been in previous years since we didn't rest as much," Patnoll said. "I felt it was more important, during this year to reach our peak at the end of the year and I felt if we took a longer rest that might be compromised."

This year both the men's and women's teams rested five days, instead of two weeks like many of the other teams at the meet. Patnoll feels the shortened period is next in line for a spot. Typically the top 18 to 20 ‘B’ cuts are invited to each event at Nationals.

Despite the strong performances of the VandenBergs, the Flying Dutchmen needed a little more rest than they usually get at this time of year. "Our times weren't as fast as they had been in previous years since we didn't rest as much," Patnoll said. "I felt it was more important, during this year to reach our peak at the end of the year and I felt if we took a longer rest that might be compromised."

This year both the men's and women's teams rested five days, instead of two weeks like many of the other teams at the meet. Patnoll feels the shortened period is next in line for a spot. Typically the top 18 to 20 ‘B’ cuts are invited to each event at Nationals.

Despite the strong performances of the VandenBergs, the Flying Dutchmen needed a little more rest than they usually get at this time of year. "Our times weren't as fast as they had been in previous years since we didn't rest as much," Patnoll said. "I felt it was more important, during this year to reach our peak at the end of the year and I felt if we took a longer rest that might be compromised."

This year both the men's and women's teams rested five days, instead of two weeks like many of the other teams at the meet. Patnoll feels the shortened period is next in line for a spot. Typically the top 18 to 20 ‘B’ cuts are invited to each event at Nationals.

Despite the strong performances of the VandenBergs, the Flying Dutchmen needed a little more rest than they usually get at this time of year. "Our times weren't as fast as they had been in previous years since we didn't rest as much," Patnoll said. "I felt it was more important, during this year to reach our peak at the end of the year and I felt if we took a longer rest that might be compromised."

This year both the men's and women's teams rested five days, instead of two weeks like many of the other teams at the meet. Patnoll feels the shortened period is next in line for a spot. Typically the top 18 to 20 ‘B’ cuts are invited to each event at Nationals.

Despite the strong performances of the VandenBergs, the Flying Dutchmen needed a little more rest than they usually get at this time of year. "Our times weren't as fast as they had been in previous years since we didn't rest as much," Patnoll said. "I felt it was more important, during this year to reach our peak at the end of the year and I felt if we took a longer rest that might be compromised."

This year both the men's and women's teams rested five days, instead of two weeks like many of the other teams at the meet. Patnoll feels the shortened period is next in line for a spot. Typically the top 18 to 20 ‘B’ cuts are invited to each event at Nationals.
Baltmanis’ buzzer-beater lifts Flying Dutch, 63-61

MIKE ZUIDEMA
editor-in-chief

There could have been some pre-season worry with the Hope College women’s basketball team only having one active senior and junior on the roster.

After this past weekend’s performance in the Subway Shootout, those worries should be erased.

Amy Baltmanis (‘03) clinched the title with an 18-foot jump shot as time expired to beat Spring Arbor, 63-61, in the Dow Center. The Saints advanced to the final with a 68-55 win over Cornerstone University.

Baltmanis scored 11 points against Spring Arbor, on her way to being named to the all-tournament team. But none of her shots were more important than the game winner.

“The play Hope was supposed to (run) just kind of got scrambled,” Baltmanis said. “(Becky) Hoekstra was named tournament MVP! She scored 25 points the night before, against Cornerstone.

“We moved the ball very well in the second half and we took care of the basketball,” said head coach Brian Morehouse. “I thought collectively we played very well.”

Hope controlled much of the tempo in the second half after leading at halftime, 28-26. The Flying Dutch held Spring Arbor to 40 percent shooting in the second half.

Spring Arbor head coach Tom Britsch felt the difference in the game was offensive rebounding.

“We couldn’t have played harder," said head coach Glenn Van Wieren. "(The play Hope was supposed against Aquinas in the second half of Saturday’s Grand Valley game) was as good a termination, as any game could have been a game that puts up in great position for us to win.”

“We got outrebounded 43-30 and that’s a losing stat for any team that wants to win.”

On Nov. 30, Hope defeated St. Mary’s 72-45 in the team’s conference opener. Hoekstra led the team with 20 points, and Koenigsknecht added 16.

The Flying Dutch next play tonight against Alma, before hosting Olivet, Saturday at 3 p.m.

Baltmanis drove and I was open on the baseline. She kicked it to me and I just shot it. I didn’t really think about it,” Baltmanis said.

The Flying Dutch went up 61-49 with 1:51 left on a Liza Hoekstra (‘00) basket, when Spring Arbor called timeout. Spring Arbor then used pressure defense to score 12 straight points to make it 61-61.

Then called timeout to set up the final play. After the play broke down, Sutton cut through a double team and found Baltmanis in the corner, where the freshman did the rest.

“I tried to concentrate because if she got it to me I’m going to have to catch and shoot,” Baltmanis said. “I just kind of felt relaxed when they made their little comeback.”

Baltmanis was one of several young Hope players to turn in strong performances in the tournament. Center Amanda Kerkstra (‘03) led the Flying Dutch with 14 points and 12 rebounds against Spring Arbor. Sutton added nine points, and Hoekstra and Kristin Koenigsknecht each had eight.

Hope then called timeout to set the final play. Baltmanis drove and was open on the baseline. She kicked it to me and I just shot it. I didn’t really think about it."

The Flying Dutch moved to 3-3 on the season heading into this weekend’s Hope Classic Tournament. Hope will face St. Xavier, Ill., Friday at 8 p.m. in the Civic Center.

In beating Aquinas, Hope was able to avenge revenge for their earlier loss, where the Saints’ Tim Wasilk touched the Flying Dutchmen for 29 points. Wasilk was held to 12 points Saturday, as Hope rebounded from a 44-43 halftime deficit.

The Flying Dutchmen held Aquinas to 33 percent shooting in the second half, after the Saints had shot 53 percent in the first half.

Mark Bray (‘00) led Hope with 18 points and 12 rebounds, including 4-5 from three point range. Ryan Koenigsknecht (‘03) added 21 points, six assists and five steals. In the first round of the Old Kent Classic, Hope was unable to find a way to counteract Wasilk and give a second half lead. Koenigsknecht scored 21 points and had 14 rebounds, and Craig Veldman (‘01), Chad Zagar (‘01) and Chad Carlson (‘03) each had 13 points, but it wasn’t enough as Hope shot only 43 percent for the game, including 5-25 from three point range.

“We simply have to shoot the ball better,” said head coach Glenn Van Wieren. “We’re in a rut right now. It’s a real battle for us if we don’t shoot the ball well.”

Against Grand Valley, the Flying Dutchmen were able to connect on 47 percent of their shots, but it wasn’t enough as Koenigsknecht was unable to create a shot at the end of the game.

“We’re really, really disappointed. We thought we played well, played together, played hard, played with our heart,” Van Wieren said after the Grand Valley game. “We couldn’t have played harder. We think we do that, we’re a very good basketball team.”

Velman led Hope with 18 points on his way to being named to the all-tournament team. Carlson added 16 points, and Bray had 11.

“Our guys played with as much heart and togetherness as they could,” Van Wieren said. “(The Grand Valley game) was as good a game as we could play right now. “Our shots went, we defended better, and we had tremendous determination,” he said. “This for us was a game that puts up in great position for us to win.”

photo courtesy of Public Relations

PLAYING TOUGH: Amanda Kerkstra (‘03) drives to the hoop against Cornerstone. Hope won 68-55.

© Anchor Photo by Jen Bodine

FLYING DUTCHMAN MENU:

• $100 OFF DISC GROUND

or 10% off Dragon Sunglasses

Pricing start at $2.99

We used C.D.’s up to $5.00 cash

All C.D.’s guaranteed

399-8384

Next to “Play it Again Sports” Holland Store only

(next sales purchases only—Excludes service work and gift certificates)

Anchor photo by Jen Bodine

December 8, 1999