ment the cost thereof may not be confined to $15

asked for be greater than that of clay and gravel,

Holland City News.

HOLLAND CITY, MICHIGAN.

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

THE EAST.

MRS. ANNA HEANEY, of New Haven, pleasantly chatted with a friend on a steamer by which she was going home from New York until the vessel had cleared the harbor. Then she jumped overboard and was drowned. The banking-house of Matthew Morgan's Sons, in New York, has made an assignment in consequence of the shrinkage of values in railroad bonds. They were rated at $1,000,000, and the institution was founded fifty years ago. They own large amounts of real estate, including the New York Hotel.

At the commencement dinner at Harvard College, President Eliot announced that only $125,000 had been donated during the year. The Rev. Henry Ward Beecher celebrated his seventy-first birthday at Peekskill, N. Y., surrounded by his grandchildren and many of his friends.

In the Columbia-Harvard freshman boat race at New London, Conn., the former crew beat the latter three lengths. Time—Columbia, 9:43; Harvard, 9:54.

Six lives were lost by the sinking of the schooner Babcock near Barnegat, New Jersey. H. H. Bangs (the Bay State Casket Company) failed at Boston for $400,000.

THE WEST.

JUDGE DRUMMOND, of Chicago, has forwarded his resignation to President Arthur, to take effect immediately. Floods in the Elkhorn Valley, in California, have broken the levee and destroyed 7,000 acres of wheat. The Chicago League ball club, by a decision of Judge Blodgett, will be allowed to use the grounds on the Lake Front until the close of the season, when it is enjoined from occupying the tract.

COL. CHAS. R. JENNISON, who, during the war, commanded the Seventh Kansas Cavalry, died at Leavenworth, of consumption, aged 50 years.

The door of the jail at Vincennes, Ind., was battered down with a rail by a party of fifty persons. Oliver Canfield, the murderer of Mrs. Gherkin, was taken from his cell and hanged to a telegraph pole near the scene of his crime. Canfield and his victim recently went to Vincennes from a neighboring town, and she was awaiting a divorce in order to marry him.

In San Francisco, William C. Milton killed Albertina Anderson for refusing to marry him, and then took his own life. The Rev. Dr. Eliphalet Potter, President of Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., has been elected Episcopal Bishop of the Diocese of Nebraska. The druggists of Marshall County, Iowa, have agreed to sell no liquors, even on prescription, when the prohibitory law takes effect, because the Attorney General decided that they must take out permits.

An important murder trial has been concluded at Lincoln, Ill. The accused parties—J. H. Hall, Belle Hall (his wife), and William Ferris—were charged with the killing of Farmer McMahon and his two hired men at Mount Pulaski, Logan County, several months ago. The jury found J. H. Hall guilty, and fixed his punishment at life imprisonment. William Ferris and Mrs. Hall were acquitted, but will be tried under indictments for killing Carter and Matthey.

EDWARD LANE, a young man well known in social circles in Minneapolis, killed himself with a revolver, leaving a note stating that for a year he had been insane. At Brainerd, Minn., John White, a jockey, while practicing for a race, was thrown from his horse against a tree, breaking his neck. A bridge over the Wabash River at Logansport, Ind., gave way, letting a Vandall construction train into the water. Engineer Grace and Fireman Scott were instantly killed. One brakeman escaped, while another received fatal injuries.

GEN. SHERIDAN and a party of friends visited Chicago to witness the inauguration of the Washington Park race-track. The meeting opened with stakes aggregating $87,000, and entries numbering 1,095. At San Francisco, Gustave J. Lowengart, nephew of Samuel Seller, a merchant, blew out his brains while an officer was reading a warrant for his arrest on the charge of threatening his uncle's life, who refused to give him money for gambling purposes.

A RECENT dispatch from Helena, Montana, states that Ed Owens and Si Nickerson stole eight horses from the Benton and Billings Stage Company at Rock Springs Station, 100 miles northeast of Helena. John Davis, the Superintendent of the stage line, pursued the thieves down Musselshell River. When fifty miles below the station he was told by cowboys that the thieves passed with the horses a few hours before. Fifteen cowboys volunteered to follow the trail. The thieves were overtaken thirty miles north of Black's Ranch, and attacked. The cowboys were driven back, being armed only with revolvers, while the horse-thieves had rifles. Men were sent to the camp for guns and the fight was renewed. Si Nickerson was shot dead and Ed Owens wounded, captured, and hanged. William Jones and Tim Devlin, cowboys, were wounded. Col. George A. Heary, of Chippewa Falls, Wis., timber agent, has been indicted by the United States Grand Jury for receiving two bribes for dropping trespass suits against certain parties. Palmer, the Cincinnati murderer, who is partly responsible for the terrible riots in that city last March, has been sentenced to be hanged on October 10. John Strange, lumber dealer, of Menasha, Wis., has gone into bankruptcy. Liabilities, $40,000; assets, $20,000. Kingman & Co.'s large warehouse, filled with agricultural implements, at East St. Louis was destroyed by fire. Loss, $50,000; insurance, $20,000. The iron steamship Onoko took from Chicago to Buffalo 100,000 bushels of wheat, the largest cargo ever known on the lakes. Judge Wylie, of Columbus, has decided against playing baseball on Sunday in Ohio.

THE SOUTH.

THE LADY, a negro 25 years old, who recently made three attempts to outrage white women at Whitney, Tex., and succeeded in one instance, was taken from jail at that place and lynched. The vigilantes also cut his ears off.

ZENO T. YOUNG, editor of the Madisonville (Ky.) Times, fell from the second story of his office and was fatally hurt. The National field trials for sporting dogs will be held at Canton, Miss., beginning Dec. 8 next. William Cox, of Danville, Ky., in shooting at two men who were trying to break into his house, shot and killed his mother.

COL. CASH, the South Carolina duelist, revenged himself on the people of Cheraw by removing the remains of his wife and her handsome monument from the village cemetery to his plantation. The wholesale furniture stores of McCracken & Brewster, W. J. Tebault, and F. B. Christensen, at New Orleans, with adjacent buildings, were burned, resulting in damage of about $175,000.

Doc WALKER was hanged at Texarkana for the murder of Lucas Grant. Two thousand citizens were permitted to witness the execution.

ON account of the failure of the air-brakes to work, a Virginia Midland express train ran at a high rate of speed onto the bridge over the James River, near Lynchburg, Va. The corner of the smoking-car struck the upright girders, throwing it from the track. The trucks of the car dragged the sleepers a distance of 100 feet, and one coach fell through the opening into ten feet of water. All the passengers were saved, most of them being taken out through holes cut in the ventilators in the top of the car.

WASHINGTON.

ELI H. MURRAY has been renominated as Governor of Utah, and John W. Meldrum as Surveyor General of Wyoming. The Comptroller of the Currency has called for a statement of the condition of the national banks at the close of business on the 20th of July.

COL. GILBERT A. PIERCE, a Chicago journalist, has been nominated for Governor of Dakota by the President. Gov. Ordway was a candidate for renomination, but his claims were not considered sufficiently strong. John H. Kinkead, of Nevada, has been nominated for Governor of Alaska.

THE President has signed the bill organizing a National Bureau of Labor. Under the bill this bureau becomes adjunct of the Interior Department. An appropriation of $25,000 is given. The appointments to be made are a Commissioner by the President and a Chief Clerk by the Secretary. All other work will be that of experts, and they are to be chosen by the Secretary on the recommendation of the Commissioner. The comparatively small appropriation will render it impossible this year to do any large amount of investigation, as there will be room-rent, printing, correspondence, copyist, etc., to pay for. The bureau is authorized to inquire into matters relating to wages, hours, woman and child labor, imported contract labor, such as that of the Italians, Slavonians, Hungarians, and Chinese, now brought here in gangs.

POLITICAL.

THE Texas Democratic State Convention selected as delegates at large to Chicago, Gov. Hubbard, D. C. Gidding, Thomas J. Brown, and John P. Smith. Before the declaration of Mr. Tilden was made known the delegates were instructed for the old ticket; but subsequently a resolution was passed allowing the representatives of the State in the national convention to act on their judgment.

GEN. LOGAN was notified at Washington, by the Convention Committee, of his nomination for the Vice Presidency, and formally accepted it as a trust reposed in him by the Republican party.

GEORGE W. STEELE was renominated for Congress by the Republicans of the Eleventh District of Indiana after a close contest. Mr. Steele was elected last time by about 500 majority over Dailey (Dem.). The Chicagoans composing the Finance Committee for the National Democratic Convention have been offered all the tickets they desire and a chance to audit the accounts of the convention. They insist upon supervising all contracts, in addition to having the seats numbered.

THE official count in the Oregon election gives Herrmann, Republican, for Congress, 25,699 votes, to 23,652 for Myers, Democrat. There were 11,223 votes for the woman's suffrage amendment, and 28,176 against it. The Missouri Democratic Convention elected John O'Day, Morrison Munford, D. R. Francis, and Charles H. Mansur delegates-at-large to the Democratic National Convention. The delegates-at-large and the district delegates are understood to be in favor of Cleveland for President.

THE Indiana Democratic State Convention nominated Isaac P. Gray for Governor, and M. D. Manson for Lieutenant Governor. The Ohio Democratic State Convention was held at Columbus. The platform adopted favors a tariff for revenue limited to the necessities of the Government, so adjusted as to encourage productive interests at home, but not to create monopolies.

THE Republican National Committee met in New York and elected B. F. Jones, of Pittsburgh, Chairman, and Samuel Fessenden, of Connecticut, Secretary. Gen. E. A. Perry has been nominated by the Florida Democratic Convention for Governor. M. H. Mabry is the Democratic nominee for Lieutenant Governor. William Williams, of Kosciusko County, was nominated for Congress at Michigan City, Ind., to succeed Major Calkins. Mr. Williams is at present United States Minister at Paraguay.

THE Arkansas Democrats in convention adopted a platform favoring public education, inviting immigration, favoring retrenchment and reform, and a reduction of duties. Regret is expressed at the declaration of Tilden, who is extolled as a patriot and statesman.

GENERAL.

GEN. WARD B. BURNETT, who graduated at West Point in 1832, and was known as a veteran of five wars, died in Washington.

SECTIONS of Western Pennsylvania and Eastern Ohio were swept by a wind and thunder storm, several persons being killed by lightning. Near Newcomerstown the hurricane uprooted trees and seriously damaged the growing grain. An American has offered $250,000 to the heirs of Richard Wagner for the exclusive right to play "Parsifal." The offer was declined. The supreme officers of the Knights of Honor have secured a charter in Missouri, and will locate the offices in the building at St. Louis formerly occupied by the United States customs authorities. They will cut loose from the Kentucky charter, and not permit the order to be ruled by the clique in Kentucky, backed up by its State courts.

WILLIAM FITZSIMMONS, engineer of a Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago passenger train, injured in a collision two years ago near Alliance, Ohio, was awarded $26,000 damages in the District Court at Youngstown, Ohio.

THE Trustees of the Garfield National Monument Association have decided upon the design for a monument. The first prize, $1,000, was given to George H. Keller, of Hartford, Conn.; the second prize, $750, to Charles F. and Julius A. Swinforth, of Cleveland; the third prize, $500, to Moffitt & Doyle, of New York.

MR. GAYNON, an evangelist preacher, was killed by lightning while in bed at Winnipeg, Manitoba, recently. There were 199 failures in the United States and Canada during last week, against 505 for the preceding week. Eleven men were dangerously injured by the explosion of a boiler in a flour-mill at Stryker, Ohio.

SANTIAGO SEGUIN, Mayor of New Laredo, Mexico, has been sent to jail by the District Judge for embezzling money while City Collector. The preceding Mayor has suffered imprisonment for some months for participating in a train-robbery. At Culaca, Mexico, a mob attacked the Protestant mission, controlled by the Rev. A. W. Greenman. The latter and his party fled to an adjacent house, pursued by the Mexicans, who fired on them. The mission people returned the fire, killing one of the rioters and wounding others. The mob was encouraged by the Mayor.

FOREIGN.

DELEGATES from every quarter of the globe are in attendance upon the Presbyterian Council at Belfast, Ireland. The floods in Bohemia are increasing and the inhabitants are in great distress. Three thousand loaves were sent from Cracow for the relief of the more urgent cases of suffering. The English Court of Appeals decides that the proprietors of English gambling-houses are liable to fine and imprisonment for permitting gambling in their places. It holds players innocent. Such was the effect of a judgment entered in what is known as the "bacarat" cases. The case of George Johnson, who confessed he took part in the Victoria Railway explosion, turns out to be a bold attempt to obtain money from the secret fund of the Police Department.

CONTRARY to treaty stipulations the Chinese regulars, with artillery, entrenched themselves at Langson. They attacked the French forces as the latter were on the march, killing seven and wounding forty-two. The French commander, on being reinforced, routed the Chinese. Hohn, a tailor, and a socialist leader, has been elected to the Danish Diet for Copenhagen. The Irish Nationalists have agreed to levy a tax of 2 pence on their property and pay salaries to their members of Parliament. Lord Carnarvon, a Whig Minister, has given notice in the British Lords of a motion censuring the Gladstone Government's Egyptian policy. Official reports indicate that the French wine crop will be better this season than it has been for seventeen years.

ARMSTRONG'S omnibus factory at Belfast, Ireland, has been destroyed by fire. Thirty-nine horses perished. A majority of the physicians of Toulon pronounce the epidemic which has appeared in that city Asiatic cholera. Great precautions are being taken by French officials to check the spread of the disease. O'Brien, the Irish editor who has been making war on the Dublin Castle officials, says that the articles which he published in his paper alleged to be libelous were privileged. He refuses to pay the fine imposed on him for contempt of court, urging that his position as a member of Parliament protects him. Andrew Lewis Richter, an artist of Dresden, Saxony, is dead.

MR. BURGE, a London stock-broker, committed suicide in his office on account of recent losses. A Spanish revenue cutter seized a British steamer one mile outside the batteries at Gibraltar, and on releasing the vessel carried away her passengers as hostages. A seditious notice placarded at Doneraile, County Cork, threatens to murder Lord Doneraile. The notice says "an end must come to Ross-morism and landlordism." It summons the Invincibles to meet to arrange for the removal of Lord Doneraile.

ITALY has requested that the mail sent to that country from America be inclosed in tarred sacks. The mail will pass through France, and the precaution is necessary to prevent the spread of cholera through the mails. Mr. Parnell writes that, in case he can not attend the Irish National Convention at Boston, Aug. 13 and 14, Mr. Sexton will come in his place. Queen Victoria's book, devoted principally to John Brown, has had a small sale. She is distributing copies among patients in the public hospitals. Two officers of the Spanish army, who deserted in April, were shot at Gerona, Spain, on the order of the King. An immense crowd was present. A cablegram announcing the shipment of $750,000 in American gold for New York assigns as a reason that money is a drug in London.

ADDITIONAL NEWS.

ST. JOSEPH'S Catholic Orphan Asylum near Newport, Ky., was destroyed by fire. The inmates all escaped, and are temporarily quartered in Newport.

GEN. SCHOFIELD will be President of the court-martial which will meet in New York Sept. 11 for the trial of Judge Advocate General Swaim.

THE residence of Mrs. Patrick Murphy at Brier Hill, near Youngstown, Ohio, was destroyed by fire. Three of the children, aged 5, 7, and 9 years, perished in the flames. Mrs. Murphy herself escaped, and she succeeded in rescuing her fourth child. The Sheriff of the Cherokee Nation is engaged in taking down fences on all tracts larger than fifty acres, and confiscating the wire. He began work south of Coffeyville, and has removed thousands of miles from inclosures which exceeded the limit fixed by the council.

THERE is intense feeling against the Jews in Western Russia, and they are greatly alarmed. Some of the Slavic organs encourage the anti-Semitic people, declaring that to give equal rights to Jews and Christians would be a greater misfortune for Russia than the former Mongolian yoke. In the British House of Commons, Mr. Gladstone moved that the vote on the proposition to censure the Government for its Egyptian policy be given precedence over all other business, but the motion was defeated. The Theater Royal at Edinburgh, Scotland, has been destroyed by fire. Several buildings adjacent were burned down. The German Government will next session submit to the Reichstag a scheme for the material enlargement of the navy. The Mark Lane Express reports foreign wheat greatly depressed, the heavy receipts causing unusually low rates.

A CABLE dispatch reports that cholera has appeared at Saluzzo, in Northern Italy. The disease was increasing at Marseilles, France. A naval captain in the latter city killed himself when his wife was attacked. French Government physicians, having examined the epidemic at Toulon, report that it is a mild form of Asiatic cholera. A number of deaths from cholera have occurred at Odessa, Russia. A dispatch from Toulon says: "It is generally admitted that the worst of the cholera crisis is over. One feature of the disease has been the shortness of time elapsing between seizure and death. This would seem to indicate that the malady is Asiatic cholera."

ORANGEMEN at Twillengate, N. F., wrecked one of three houses tenanted by Catholics in that place. At Green's Pond Harbor the Orangemen drove off four vessels which put in for shelter, brutally beat the sailors, and seriously damaged the crafts by missiles. In St. Mary's Bay the crew of a bark entered the Catholic Church, destroyed the furniture, carried off the chalice and sacred vessels, and desecrated the structure in various ways. The parish priest and merchants prevented the destruction of the ship and cargo by the Catholic population. "Bill" England, a British pugilist, who came over to make a match with John L. Sullivan, was "used up" by George Rooke, at New York, in four rounds.

Bills were reported to the Senate on the 30th ult., to forfeit the unearned land grant of the Northern Pacific Road, and for the erection of a public building at Akron, Ohio. An adverse report was made on a bill to grant public lands to the survivors of the Mountain Meadow massacre. Mr. Cameron called up a resolution to discharge the Finance Committee from further consideration of the bill for the retirement and recoinage of trade dollars, but it was voted down. The river and harbor bill was taken up, and several amendments were disposed of. A House joint resolution was passed continuing the present appropriations for five days from June 30. President Arthur sent to the Senate the name of ex-Confederate Henry S. Neal, of Ohio, to be Solicitor of the Treasury. In the House of Representatives, Mr. King introduced a bill appropriating $200,000 to prevent the introduction of cholera into the United States. The conference reports on the bills authorizing a bridge at St. Paul and the disposition of useless military reservations were agreed to. The Committee on Elections made a report that John S. Wise is entitled to retain his seat as Representative-at-large from Virginia. The legislation bill was discussed. Messrs. Horr, Finerty, and Dorsheimer favored the majority report for a large appropriation. Messrs. Holman and Follett made speeches on the opposite side. No action was taken.

THE WORK OF CONGRESS.

What Is Being Done by the National Legislature.

THE Senate, June 24, passed the Mexican pension bill, with an amendment that no person shall be entitled to more than one pension at a time, and the House bill to authorize the appointment of two additional Justices of the Supreme Court for Dakota and one for Washington Territory. In the House of Representatives, a bill was passed to repeal the pre-emption and timber-culture laws, with an amendment that agricultural lands shall hereafter be reserved for actual settlers under the homestead law. The House electoral-count bill was passed, as was also the Senate bill to give an annual vacation of fifteen days to each letter-carrier.

THE Senate, on June 23, spent the day on the legislative appropriation bill, and struck out the clause directing the consolidation of customs districts. The House of Representatives admitted James R. Chalmers for the Second District of Mississippi, a resolution to declare the election void being voted down by 56 to 161. Bills were passed to authorize the establishment of a branch Soldiers' Home in the West, and giving permission for a horse railway on the island and bridges at Rock Island.

THE Senate, on the 28th, passed the legislative appropriation bill, with an amendment that all reports in the Record shall be an accurate transcript of the proceedings and debates. The House passed a bill authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at White Cloud, Kan. Bills were reported to pension the surviving officers and men of the Tippecanoe campaign, and for disposing of the Cherokee reservation in Kansas.

THE Senate, on June 27, passed a bill granting right of way through the Indian Territory to the Southern Kansas Road. A bill for the relief of William McGarran was reported adversely. Mr. Mitchell introduced a bill to incorporate the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic. Mr. Hawley called attention to a false statement in a speech printed in the Record, that Gen. Logan owned 80,000 acres of land. The House, by a vote of 124 to 114, tabled the bill to forfeit the "backbone" railroad land grant. The subject of printing undelivered speeches in the official report of proceedings led to some hot words and considerable merriment.

A FAVORABLE report was made in the Senate, June 19, on the bill to pension the widow of General James B. Steedman. The general deficiency bill was passed, with an item authorizing the payment of $3,000 to Charles H. Reed for defending Charles J. Guiteau. The River and Harbor bill consumed the remainder of the day's session. In the House, the Speaker stated that the regular order was the question of privilege coming over from yesterday, and presented by a resolution offered by Mr. Cannon, that the Record be so amended as to show that the speech, purporting to have been delivered by Mr. McAdoo, in which allusion is made to Senator Logan, was not actually delivered by him. Mr. Cox after deprecating the practice of printing long essays in the Record, said the present dispute arose from the publication in the Record of a newspaper article stating that Senator Logan owned 80,000 acres of land. It had not been charged that he came by it wrongfully. He (Cox) did not know that Logan was a disunion man. What was the object of this discussion to-day, except to prevent adjournment? In order to put an end to the discussion, he moved to lay the whole matter on the table. (Cries of "Good" and "Vote.") The motion was agreed to without a division. Mr. Loverine's eight-hour law, which proposed to pay Government employees a full day's pay for eight hours work, was defeated.

To Succeed on the Stage.

John McCullough insists on familiarity with routine, and an habitual unconsciousness that leaves the intelligence perfectly free. But the two qualities which he regards as imperatively essential to success are comprised in the terms—heart and untiring industry.

Joe Jefferson says that the successful actor must be gifted with "sensitivity, imagination, and personal magnetism." The student should begin at the foundation to learn. He thinks it a mistake to regard the lower positions degrading. Some actors he says, are inspirational and inventive, while others must have everything clearly mapped out, and a thorough plan of action arranged before they begin.

Lawrence Barrett does not think that physical size has anything to do with success. He says there have been large generals and small generals. Salvini and Booth illustrate the fact in relation to tragedians. In his opinion, it would be best if a young man could start in a school of actors, so that he might have none but models to guide him. Every actor is an imitator of some time in his youth. An actor can be great in only a few parts.

William Warren says the chances for getting on are greater than when he was a boy. He says of the comedian that he should have a real, genuine appreciation of the humorous and grotesque in life, and the magnetic power to make others feel as he feels. He need not, by any means, be what is known as a "funny man." He does not hold to the theory that any particular size of body is essential to success as a comedian. John Reeve and Burton were fat men decidedly; Charles Matthews, on the other hand, was thin.

Modjeska believes in "vocation." She thinks the best school for acting is the stage itself, when one begins by playing small parts. She believes more in inspiration, at the last, than technique or art, important elements as the latter are.

Maggie Mitchell says the stage is the only school, and 18 is the minimum age for going before the footlights; and she hails the change in favor of simple and judicious female costuming on the stage.

HENRY WARD BEECHER is reported as having said: "Pie, sir, goes with civilization; where there is no civilization there is no pie." Accepting that theory as correct, some printing offices where "pi" is constantly accumulating must be in an eminent state of civilization. It is a well-known fact that when a new batch of "pi" is made in a printing office the foreman uses some very Christian-like expressions.—Carl Prezel's Weekly.

LOVE never tires; and the more we love, the more we have of solid satisfaction. Every new soul we come in contact with and learn to esteem fills us with new life. Those who love others are themselves full of sunshine, and the day marches triumphantly on with them from rosy morn to dewy eve and silent night.

IN THE DEAD OF NIGHT.

The Murderer of Mrs. Mollie Gerkin
Suspended to a Telegraph Pole.

He Was Taken from the Jail at Vincennes, Ind., by a Mob of Men.

[Vincennes (Ind.) telegram.]
The threats made last evening by angry citizens to summarily punish Oliver Canfield, the young miscreant who shot Mrs. Mollie Gerkin last Tuesday night, were not idle ones. As the hours went by the knots of men who stood talking quietly at the street corners were gradually re-enforced until several hundred were gathered in the vicinity of the jail. There was no loud talking or noisy display of any kind, but the grim, set features of those who had assembled to avenge the murdered woman boded ill for the unhappy wretch who cowered in his cell, fully alive to all that was transpiring and to the dreadful hopelessness of his case.

At midnight the avengers, a body some fifty strong, composed of the best citizens, moved through the inky darkness toward the jail. The stout doors were quickly unlocked and a piece of railroad iron that had been brought from the track for the purpose. Meeting with no resistance, the avengers rushed on to Canfield's cell, the door of which was battered down with three or four blows of the ram. The prisoner cowered down in a corner and attempted to pray, but was roughly bidden to prepare to come out. Trembling in every limb, and with features ghastly in the sickly pallor, he complied, and was marched slowly between the two masked leaders out of the jail into the open air.

The first proposition made on the outside of the jail yard being reached, was that Canfield should be strung up then and there, but, with strange persistency, he pleaded to be put to death on the same spot where his helpless sweetheart met her fate at his hands. His proposition was received with deafening yells of approval by the crowd, and he was rushed off to a convenient telegraph pole within a stone's throw of the murder. A stout rope was slung over the lower cross-ties, a noose made, and the victim placed in position. His aspect was pitiable but it called forth no expression of mercy or sympathy from the determined men around him, and he was told if he had anything to say to say it quickly. He faltered forth that he was guilty, and was sorry he killed the woman. He begged that his mother be told that he tried to be reconciled to the Almighty, but that he should never go to heaven. He was given a minute to say his prayers, but he had by this time sunk so low that he could scarcely be roused. The rope was soon adjusted around his neck, and amid the applause of the crowd, he was drawn to a height of ten feet and left to hang. There was scarcely a struggle perceptible, but the victim probably lived thirty minutes. A card was pinned to his coat requesting the coroner to leave the body hanging until 12 o'clock to-day.

No resistance whatever was made by the jail officials. The Sheriff merely refused to deliver up the keys of the jail when requested quietly to do so, but after the doors had been battered down the lynchers were not interfered with.

The crime for which Canfield suffered his terrible punishment was committed last Tuesday night. He had been paying marked attentions for a year past to Mrs. Mollie Gerkin, a beautiful widow. Canfield wished her to marry him, but as a divorce suit was pending between the woman and her husband, she was unable to comply. A week ago last Friday Canfield and the woman came to Vincennes from Washington, Ind. She obtained work in a boarding-house, while he spent his time in idly loafing about. Tuesday evening he called at the house where she was staying and requested his sweetheart to take a walk with him. She complied with apparent willingness, and the two strolled down Main street and turned in the direction of the bridge. Suddenly, without a moment's warning, Canfield threw his arms around Mrs. Gerkin's neck and kissed her. At the same moment he drew a revolver from his pocket and sent a bullet crashing into the marble forehead that rested lovingly and confidently on his shoulder. His victim sank to the earth without a groan, but not satisfied with the result of his devilish work he fired four more shots at her as she lay prostrate on the ground. A great crowd gathered and in the excitement Canfield escaped. He fled to Washington and went to his sister's house, telling her what he had done, at the same time handing her a knife and revolver. These his sister threw into a vault. The murderer spent the night hidden in the woods near his mother's house, and was captured early Thursday morning by the officers, who had followed closely on his heels. Brought back to Vincennes, he refused to give any motive for his deed, but declared that he was sober and rational at the time of his commission. Canfield was but 23 years of age. He was known as a hard character, and had spent most of his time working in coal mines. Mrs. Gerkin died yesterday morning, and the plans for lynching her murderer were immediately consummated.

Nihilists Assassinate a Russian Officer.

A cable dispatch from St. Petersburg says: At Odessa Capt. Gerdzey, a prominent officer of the gendarmes, has been assassinated. His body was found with a bullet hole in the temple and a dagger sticking in his heart. A note pinned to the coat left no doubt that the murder was the work of nihilists. Capt. Gerdzey was a capable, courageous official, and specially devoted himself to grappling with nihilism. He thus incurred the bitterest hatred of the members of that body. The murder has produced a sensation in Russia equal to that occasioned by the assassination of Lieut. Col. Sudeikin.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE.

Thrilling End of a Fast Run on the Virginia Midland Railroad.

Two Sleeping Cars Fall Through a Bridge Into Ten Feet of Water.

[Lynchburg (Va.) Telegram.]

A railroad disaster of a thrilling and remarkable character occurred on the Virginia Midland Railroad near this city. The Washington and New York sleeping-cars were precipitated from a bridge into the James River, and yet not a single life was lost. The escape of forty or more persons from death was almost miraculous, and the scenes while their rescue was being effected from the submerged cars were exciting beyond description. The train was the morning express, to which the through sleepers from New York and Washington had been attached, and both were well filled with passengers—men, women, and children. All went well until reaching a point about two miles north of Lynchburg, where there is a heavy down-grade. The engineer found that the speed of the train was rapidly increasing, though he had shut off steam and applied the air-brakes. To his surprise there was no perceptible diminution of the train's motion, and it became apparent that, through some defect in the brakes, they were not operating. The speed of the train increased with each revolution of the wheels, and, during the run to the river, a distance of nearly two miles, the train swept along at the rate of more than a mile a minute. Some of the passengers were alarmed, but none were prepared for the thrilling episode which was so soon to follow.

Upon reaching the bridge the engine, tender, and baggage-car kept the track, but the smoker swayed so that it struck the girders, throwing it from the track and causing the cars following to do the same. The trucks of the smoking-car tore the sleepers away for a distance of more than a hundred feet, and when the heavy sleepers reached the place the strength was insufficient for their support, and they went crashing through into the river. The water into which the cars plunged was ten feet deep, and the terrified passengers were of course imprisoned like dogs in a pound. Their stifled screams for aid as the water rose around them were pitiable in the extreme, but there was apparently little room to hope for their rescue.

Conductor William King was thrown from a platform and had two ribs broken, but realizing the peril of the passengers he went promptly and heroically to their aid. Propping an ax he, with one or two other persons, swam to the submerged cars and smashed in the ventilators at the top of the cars. By this time the water had reached that point, and the struggling passengers were clinging to upper berths and the bell-ropes to keep from drowning. The screams of the women and children were heartrending. One by one the half-drowned passengers were dragged through the opening and helped ashore until all were got out safely.

Among the many thrilling incidents was that experienced while rescuing the child of Mrs. J. S. Farden. The terrified woman while in an upper berth which was fast being flooded with water, pushed her 2-months-old baby through a window and held it there until it was rescued. The heroic woman was then saved herself.

Old railroad men say this escape was one of the most remarkable that have ever been recorded in the history of railroad disasters.

PROHIBITION PARTY.

The National Convention to Be Held at Pittsburg, July 23.

[Pittsburg dispatch.]

Reports received at the Prohibition headquarters indicate that the national convention, which will assemble in this city on the 23d of July, will be one of the largest temperance gatherings ever held in the world. Over 1,000 delegates are expected to be present. The convention will be held in Lafayette Hall, where the first National Republican Convention was held. Arrangements are being made by a committee of 200 local prohibitionists. The expenses will be met by private subscriptions. The local leaders talk most extravagantly of the prospects of the party. Many firmly believe that the convention will name the next President of the United States. Secretary Swager said in an interview to-day: "We contend that Ohio and Michigan are already pronounced Prohibition States, and that in calculations of the present dominant political parties they should be left out. By nominating such a man as Clinton B. Fiske, of New Jersey, I believe that New York, New Jersey, California, Kansas, Iowa, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, and some of the Southern States will give their electoral votes to the Prohibition party." The canvass for the nomination is quite animated. Gideon T. Stewart, of Norwalk, Ohio, is probably the leading candidate, and will come to the convention with a very strong support. In this locality, however, Clinton B. Fiske, of New Jersey, is the leading favorite, and in Methodist circles is being strongly and effectively urged. R. H. McDonald, President of the Pacific Bank of California, is urged by the Western and Pacific-Slope Prohibitionists, and will come into the convention with the unanimous support of the delegation from California. Gov. St. John, of Kansas, will have the support of the delegates from his State. There are other names mentioned, but Fiske for President and John Russell, the veteran Prohibitionist of Michigan, for Vice President, seems to be a very satisfactory combination.

PUTTING UP LEADERS.

Indiana Democratic Delegation to Support McDonald for the Presidency.

Ohio Democrats Demand the Unanimous Nomination of Tilden.

[Indiana Democrat.]

The Indiana Democratic State Convention was called to order at Indianapolis by the Hon. Joseph E. McDonald, Chairman of the State Central Committee, who was received with much applause. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Dr. Allen.

The platform was read by the Hon. W. H. English. It renewed the pledge of fidelity to the Constitution and to the doctrines taught by the men who were its founders, condemning the corrupt and extravagant expenditure of the public money, advocated a tariff for revenue according to the necessities of the Government, and demanded the enforcement of the laws against Chinese immigration, and the redemption of public lands for the occupancy of citizens of the United States.

A resolution to instruct the delegation to vote for McDonald at Chicago was carried amid applause.

After the adoption of the platform, Isaac P. Gray, M. D. Manson, and David Turpie were placed in nomination for Governor. On the first ballot Gray was nominated, receiving 699 votes; Turpie, 223; and Manson, 181. Gen. Manson made a speech saying he had supposed the soldier of two wars would have received more consideration in the Democratic convention, but he was satisfied and moved that the nomination be made unanimous. Col. Gray responded at some length, arraigning the Republican party and discussing the Chicago platform. Several nominations were made for Lieutenant Governor, but all withdrew in favor of Gen. Manson, who was nominated by acclamation. W. B. Meyers, of Madison, was chosen for Secretary of State. James H. Rice, of Floyd, for Auditor, and John J. Cooper, of Marion, for Treasurer, were nominated by acclamation.

Delegates to the Chicago convention were elected as follows:
At-Large—Thomas A. Hendricks, Daniel W. Voorhees, Robert C. Bell, and Charles Danby.

First District—G. V. Menzies and F. Lowenstein. Second—J. M. Andrews and Samuel H. Taylor. Third—Jason B. Brown and Geo. H. D. Gibson. Fourth—E. D. Bannister and J. H. Woolford. Fifth—Thomas W. Woollen and P. H. McCormick. Sixth—W. A. Bieble and Henry Wyser. Seventh—O. B. Ford and Peter Lieber. Eighth—Thomas F. Davidson and C. F. McNutt. Ninth—J. V. Brunt and S. S. Daily. Tenth—Clinton Chamberlain and A. L. Jones. Eleventh—D. Yeungling and Hugh Dougherty. Twelfth—Norman Freygang and Henry Colerick. Thirteenth—Hudson Beck and Daniel McDonald.

After the convention adjourned the State Central Committee held a meeting, and organized by the election of Ebenezer Henderson as Chairman and J. L. Riley Secretary. The delegates to the national convention held a conference and determined to do everything possible to secure the nomination of McDonald.

Ohio Democrats.

The Ohio Democratic State Convention was called to order at Columbus by Congressman D. R. Paige. There were very few people present except the delegates. Gen. E. B. Finley was elected permanent Chairman. He reviewed the history of the party, and predicted that it would carry Ohio this fall. Elmer White presented the platform, which reaffirmed the principles set forth in 1883. It indorsed the principles of the party as in favor of personal liberty; demanded the purification of the public service, and the equalization of public burdens; favored a tariff for revenue limited to the necessities of the Government, and so adjusted as to prevent unequal burdens; advocated the adjustment of the wool tariff; commended the action of the Democratic Legislature in abolishing the contract-labor system, and its reform of prison management; and arraigned the Republican party. A radical free-trade plank, offered by Mr. Russell, of Cleveland, was voted down unanimously. A resolution offered by Congressman Converse favoring the nomination of Tilden was unanimously adopted. An effort to force the unit rule on the Chicago delegation was defeated. The delegates at large were elected as follows: Gen. Durbin Ward, Allen G. Thurman, John E. McLean, and Lieut. Gov. Mueller. The State ticket was named as follows: Secretary, James W. Newman; Supreme Judge, C. D. Martin; Member of the Board of Public Works, John H. Beuter.

North Carolina Democrats.

The Democrats of North Carolina, in convention at Raleigh, nominated Gen. Alfred M. Scales for Governor and Charles M. Stedman for Lieutenant Governor. The delegates to the Chicago convention are divided between Bayard and Cleveland.

Devoured by Sharks.

While the Pacific Steam Navigation Company's steamship Chala, Capt. Hogg, now in this port, says the Panama Star and Herald, was leaving Bahia, one of her cooks, who was asleep on the rail, fell overboard. An alarm was immediately given, the ship was stopped and backed, life-buoys were thrown overboard, and, with amazing rapidity, a boat was in the water and in charge of Mr. Kellick, the first officer, pulling hard in the direction of the man, who was a splendid swimmer, and who made good progress in the direction of the boat. Suddenly, however, the place became alive with sharks, and it at once became apparent the unfortunate man was doomed. Once he threw himself out of the water in an effort to escape the jaws of one of the monsters, but a few seconds afterward he was evidently seized and dragged under, as nothing more was seen of him. Other sharks, apparently disappointed in their hopes of prey, were then observed rushing through the water in all directions, and even appeared to meditate an attack on the boat, which, after an ineffectual search, pulled back to the ship. The sharks were apparently ravenous, and the rapidity with which they swarmed around the unfortunate man amazed all who witnessed this striking proof of the voraciousness of these denizens of the deep.

CURIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC.

The annual rainfall in this country according to the Weather Signal, is lowest in New Mexico (13 inches) and California (18 inches), the highest in Oregon (49) and Alabama (56). The annual rainfall in the British Islands among the mountains is 41 inches; on the plains 25 inches; 45 inches of rainfall on the west side of England, 27 on the east side.

According to the official report of the Analyst of the Municipal Laboratory, almost every article of drink and diet in Paris is adulterated. Even the natural mineral waters, so-called, are "doctored." This is interesting for those in America who are willing to pay high prices for these imported waters and for French wines generally.—Dr. Foote's Health Monthly.

MANY very old and rare silver coins in excellent preservation were lately found on a rock in a burn near Portree, Scotland. Antiquarians consider the "finds" a very interesting one. The authorities have come into possession of about fifty-three of these relics. Some of the coins are of the reigns of Elizabeth and James VI. and bears dates ranging from 1572 to 1602.

WE now make one-fifth of the iron and one-fourth of the steel in the world, and we furnish one-half the gold and one-half the silver of the world's supply. Taking all the mining industries of the world, the United States represent 36; Great Britain, 33; and all the other nations 31 per cent of the total. Anglo-Saxondom, therefore, represents 69 per cent of the mining industry of the earth.

SPONGES can be bleached to a very pure white by immersing them, after being thoroughly cleansed of sand and dirt, in a solution of one part of permanganate of potash in one hundred parts of water, then washing them in water, squeezing them dry, and afterward steeping them for fifteen minutes in a solution of sodium and one ounce of oxalic acid in a gallon of water. On being washed clean they will be found to be white.

IN 1833, or little more than half a century ago John Walker, of Stockton-on-Tees, made the first lucifer match in England. There was a match factory established in Vienna in the same year. For fourteen years the person engaged in making the old lucifers suffered from phosphorus necrosis. Amorphous phosphorus was submitted for the common kind, and a terrible disease banished from what was soon found to be a useful and ultimately an indispensable industry.

THE vapor of tobacco juice has been tested in France, with great success, as an insect destroyer in hot houses. Instead of burning or smoking the tobacco, it is soaked or boiled; the juice is then placed over a chafing dish, a fire or the flame of an ordinary lamp, and deposited in the greenhouse or conservatory. Delicate plants which are very sensitive to smoke are not injured by this vapor, and it leaves no offensive atmosphere, while it effectually disposes of thrips, scales, insects, and slugs. One quart of tobacco juice vaporized in a house containing 350 cubic feet is an ample amount.

A Word to Mothers.

What the mothers of to-day need is independence and common sense. In these days of fashion many a woman wears out because she is desirous her children shall have as many tucks, flounces, plaits and frills as her neighbor's children. Or she heats her blood until she is tired and cross over a cooking range that she may prepare food to equal or excel her near neighbors. She, maybe, belongs to that unfortunate class whose better half judges her from the amount of labor which she performs. "My wife is the smartest woman in town. She will do more work than a man any day."

Have you not heard such remarks? Beware, husband; nature will have her revenge, and if you want that "smart" woman to care for you in your old age save the strength, stop the overworking of those strained nerves, unless you desire to have another to fill her place.

Mothers, dress your children according to your means and ability. If your friend's 2-year-old Susie is "so sweet and pretty in her embroidered white dresses," don't try to excel, but let your 2-year-old Flossie wear her warm, dark woolen dresses, and her health will be cared for, and she will become a more sensible woman than Susie, whose mother's aim is for her baby to be admired. We do not discard fashion when properly used. Copy that happy memoir which calls for no remarks.

If you cannot dress as your neighbor without working far into the small hours of morning, wearing out brain and body, for your husband's sake, make your dress with less bands and shirrings, and save your strength. "As you commence so you must go on," is an old saying. Make yourself a slave to fashion for a child, and assuredly, by the time she is 16, your bones will ache and your spirit quake over the endless work of her wardrobe.—Cincinnati Saturday Night.

THE physicians of England were strong on the code 100 years ago. A great court doctor was traveling with a friend in this country. The friend fell down stairs in an apoplectic fit, and the doctor refused to bleed him because it was contrary to professional etiquette for a physician to perform that operation.

NOTHING is so great an instance of ill-manners as flattery. If you flatter all the company you please none. If you flatter only one or two, you affront the rest.

MICHIGAN AFFAIRS.

—It is proposed to bore 1,000 feet at the Adrian water-works and secure gas for fuel to run the pumps with.

—Will Slocum, of South Lyon, attempted to kill his wife in a fit of jealousy, and then shot himself, probably fatally.

—From April 24, the opening of navigation, to June 11, inclusive, there were 392 ore-carriers in the port of Escanaba.

—Sagatauck Township, Allegan County, has permission of the Board of Supervisors to build a $5,000 bridge across Kalamazoo River.

—A man by the name of Jacob Fogle cut his throat at Caseville recently. No cause is assigned. He was 30 years old, and in good circumstances.

—Benjamin Ball, a wealthy deaf mute, who resided at Lapeer, was struck and killed by a train of cars in Flint. He was nearly 80 years of age and a bachelor.

—The Hamilton & McGregor mill, formerly known as the Weber mill, at Bay City, caught fire in the roof and was entirely consumed. The mill was leased to M. L. Frimmel, who has been sawing logs for the Litchfield estate, Moore & Whipple, of Detroit, and others. The loss on the mill reaches $20,000, with an insurance to cover it. Five thousand barrels of salt were destroyed, and nearly 1,000,000 feet of lumber, mostly insured, and valued at $15 per 1,000 feet was consumed. The mill, which was somewhat run down, had been repaired at considerable expense by Gimmel.

—Sixteen years ago Jas. Lapp, of Saginaw City, mysteriously disappeared, and Cole Lincoln and James Collins were arrested, charged with having murdered him, but were acquitted. Lapp arrived in Saginaw City recently and was interviewed. From his story it is learned that he was in the employ of A. B. Paine, driving a team; that it was Saturday night, just at the edge of evening; that a snow storm was prevailing, and that he was going to his home, which was near Throop street, with his hat well drawn over his face, when three men attacked him. They first struck him on the back of the head. He fell and when he attempted to rise they struck him across the front part of the head, the scar from which blow he still carries. They then carried him to the river and laid him on the ice. They thought he was dead. He saw them look at him as they walked away and he feigned to be dead. He was afraid they would put him through an air hole. He can scarcely tell how he got off the river. He fell in with two brothers named Dougherty, who had known him in Canada. He says that one of them took him to Sarnia in a sleigh. He could not remember much about what happened. He could not tell whether any doctor dressed his wounds. It was some time before he knew where he was. He finally found his family in Detroit. He never heard of any one being tried for his murder. He had never been back there since that time. He said he was now 64 years old. Mr. and Mrs. Brown, where he is at present stopping, both fully identify him as the missing Lapp. There are evidently parts of his story too improbable to be true, though there is perhaps no doubt that he firmly believes them true. The writer has not the data at hand to give an exact history of the case, but as it is commonly repeated, it is that when Lapp disappeared James Collins and the late Cole Lincoln, who was shot last August, were the last men seen with him. His hat was found on Lincoln's sleigh, with two gashes in it. Lincoln and Collins were tried for the murder and the defence produced a witness who had seen Lapp in Canada after his disappearance, and Lincoln and Collins were acquitted.

In the terrible calamity which befell our home on Saturday, June 21st, much sympathy and help have been extended. To the many physicians who labored so faithfully to develop whatever of vitality might remain in what proved to be the lifeless form of our beloved daughter we desire to express our appreciation. To all our friends who in different ways administered to our relief we would offer our grateful feelings. Through whatever trials they may be called to pass may they experience as much comfort and assistance as we have received. Above all, in the darkest hour and the most distressing circumstances may the grace of the Savior be the strength and support of their souls.

"40 Rounds, U. S."

On the return of the 15th corps from the relief of Knoxville, after having marched all the way from Memphis and back to Chattanooga, a soldier of the Eighth Missouri—one of Sherman's bummers, an Irishman who had been a roustabout on the levees of St. Louis—came straggling along behind the column on a cold, dreary day, for that section; his knapsack slung on one shoulder, his blanket over the other; across his breast and tied at his left hip, a greasy, but empty haversack; his pants worn and rent in many places and in others sewed up with cord; no peak to his cap, his musket at "reversed arms," and altogether presenting the appearance of general disgust and demoralization. Off from the road he was attracted by a headquarters tent and sentinel in a neat and comfortable uniform, whom he approached and accosted, when the following dialogue ensued:

"I say, Sinitini, could you tell me where me regiment is?"

"What regiment do you belong to?"

"Eighth Misshery, sure."

"What Division?"

"Morgan III [L] Smit's, av course."

"What Brigade?"

"Phwat Brigade? Faith, an' dont ye know its Giles Smit's—the Second Brigade of Morgan III's Division."

"What Corps is it in?"

"Phwat Coor is it? Ah, thin, ye black-guard, doesn't everybody know that its the Fifteenth Coor?"

"How could I tell what Corps you belong to when you have no Corps badge?"

"Noa badge, is it?—Coor badge! Now, thin, phwat's a Coor badge?"

"Do you see that crescent on my partner's hat? Well, that's the badge of his Corps—the Eleventh; and this star on my cap is the badge of my Corps—the Twelfth."

"He, ho! I see now. Thin's the lights yez Potomac byes have to show you home some dark nights. Yes, take the moon an' shiners along wid yez."

Laughing at the witty remark, the sentinel responded: "Welt, what's the badge of your Corps?"

Hesitating a moment to gather a thought, then making a left face and slapping his right hand on his cartridge box, the Irishman replied: "D'ye see that?" [Then a moment's pause.] "Forty rounds in my cartridge box and 20 in my pocket—that's the badge of Logan's Fifteenth Coor, do yez mind that! that kem all the way from Vicksburg to help yez Potomac fellers foight at Chattanooga."

The incident having been related to Gen. Logan the same evening by an officer who overheard it, the cartridge box, bearing the legend "40 Rounds, U. S.," was at once adopted by Gen. Logan as the corps badge, and a general order to that effect issued next day.

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage dated May Fourth (4th), A. D. 1870, and executed by Robert Akery and Sary C. his wife, to George W. Joscelyn, and recorded August second (2nd), A. D. 1870, in the office of the Register of Deeds for Ottawa County, Michigan, in Liber 11 of Mortgages, on page 404, upon which mortgage there is claimed to be due, at the date of this notice, four hundred and ninety-seven dollars and nineteen cents ($497.19), and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity having been instituted to recover the debt or any part thereof secured by said mortgage, now, therefore, by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and of the statute in such case made, and provided, notice is hereby given that on the

How did you like the Procession?

LEMONADE stands were numerous yesterday.

THE biggest nuisance in this city at present is the dust. When will this be abated?

Miss ELLA CORBETT and Miss Kate Birkhoff, of Chicago, are visiting Miss Mary Van Putten of this city.

Mr. H. BOON's "carry all" and the omnibuses of the Hotels are daily filled with passengers for the Park from the 10 o'clock train due from Grand Rapids.

THE Chicago and West Michigan R'y has done a big business at this place the past month. Our station men have handled nearly eight million pounds of freight, mostly hemlock bark.

LAST Wednesday morning a young man, by name Chas. Osborn, while coupling cars got his right hand caught and badly jammed. Dr. R. B. Best dressed the wound and amputated the fore finger at the second joint.

THE Common Council have appointed Mr. P. Winter to take charge of the running of the pumps for our water works at $1,000 per year for all necessary work. Mr. Winter is a good man and undoubtedly will give good satisfaction.

LAST Monday John Dennis, of Olive Centre, an employer of Carey's Mill at that place, accidentally got in the way of the log carriage and was struck by it, breaking both bones of the left leg below the knee. Dr. R. B. Best of this city was called and set the leg and made his patient as comfortable as possible.

LATE last week Friday afternoon a little five year old son of Capt. J. Bergman fell into tannery creek off from the bridge on Eighth street and would have drowned but for the timely and brave assistance rendered by Miss Maggie Van Putten, daughter of Mr. G. Van Putten, who, with difficulty, rescued the child from a certain and early death.

THE fishermen who are still engaged in fishing in the Bay with nets are rather defiant. It is reported that they have a regular arsenal near their nets and will shoot the first man that interferes with them. These self-styled "hard cases" undoubtedly mean war and in that case it seems as though some one of our citizens ought to give them satisfaction legally. Who will it be?

AN accident occurred at Ottawa Station last Monday which might have resulted fatally to at least two individuals. Frank Stewart and John Richards were engaged in peeling bark together in the woods. They were felling a tree and as it fell it struck a neighboring tree, knocking off some of the branches, one of which struck Stewart on the head, cutting a severe gash, and Richards on the chest, causing hemorrhage of the lungs. Dr. R. B. Best, who attended, reports that the men are, at present writing, in as comfortable a condition as possible.

Miss HELEN PFANSTIEHL, who has taught in our schools so long and so successfully, has accepted a position in the Muskegon schools at a salary of $450. Miss Emmeline Dutton has also accepted a position in the same school at a salary of $400. We are sorry to lose these teachers, and while we favor economy in school matters, we would suggest that true economy is always mixed with a little wisdom. We are informed that both of these teachers could have been retained for $100 less each than they receive in Muskegon. Good teachers make a good school, and it is the part of wisdom to retain such.

THE West Michigan Fruit-growers' Society held a special meeting in this city on Tuesday, beginning at 3 o'clock, p. m., at one of the rooms in our city hall. The president, Walter Phillips, of Grand Haven, presided. Among the prominent fruit-growers present, we noticed A. S. Dykman and Joseph Lawvini, of South Haven, G. A. LaFleur, of Allegan, A. D. Knizly, of Benton Harbor. Among others present were Rev. A. S. Kedzie, of Grand Haven, and many of the prominent fruit-growers of Holland, Zeeland, and vicinity. The main object of the meeting was to perfect the organization, to adopt by-laws and generally to mark out its sphere for future work. Both an afternoon and evening session were held on Tuesday, and a forenoon session on Wednesday morning. Resolutions were passed by the society to the effect that in packing fruit none but healthy fruit should be used and this should be of uniform quality throughout the package. Also resolutions of thanks were passed for the generous entertainment and courtesies shown them by the good people of Holland, after which the meeting adjourned. Some of the leading features of work to be done by this society we hope to be able to report in succeeding issues.

HEMLOCK bark $5.75 per cord.

FIRE crackers were only four cents a bunch and the small boy was in his glory.

A LARGE party of our young people were picnicing at Macatawa Park last Wednesday.

MESSRS. W. AND R. McKEEN, of Terra Haute, Ind., are the guests of G. A. Kanter, who recently returned home from College.

OF WOOD. One of many showed considerable taste and an idea of style, preferring always the most gaudy color which he could find in the tank. The little animals will spend hours every day at their toilet, appropriating with their hand-like claws bits of seaweed, Sertularia, sponge, or Tubularia. One will perhaps place a bit on the tip

SOME of the numerous roughs that infest this neighborhood are almost constantly committing depredations. Last Tuesday night fences were broken down and night made hideous by their noises. This should be stopped and extra efforts put forth to capture some of the ring-leaders.

AMONG those camping at Macatawa Park we find the names of Messrs. R. Deornik, G. Applehof, C. and G. Lankester, of Grand Rapids. These gentlemen have bought the cottage formerly owned by Messrs. Boone and Breyman of this city. For social qualities, sparkling wit and genial humor, parties at the park are all compelled to pronounce them a rare combination.

THE propeller A. B. Taylor will leave Harrington's Dock, Holland, at 3:00 o'clock p. m. every Saturday, Tuesday and Thursday for Chicago. The Taylor has not made very regular trips to this port so far this season but we understand that hereafter the public may depend on her leaving this place at the advertised time. The boat is receiving increased patronage from our people each trip and the day is not far distant when a boat line between this city and Chicago will be found a paying investment.

A VAST sea of radiant colors dotted with fluttering fans and waving plumes was the scene that met our eye looking from the stage in Lyceum Hall last week Friday evening. Fully six hundred people had come together in that hall to witness the graduating exercises of the class in our High School and nearly two hundred more were turned away, unable to gain admission. The stage was occupied by the School Board, Superintendent, Teachers, the graduating class, and Rev. George of the Methodist Church. The decorations were really beautiful. The young ladies were all becomingly dressed in white. After some delay the exercises were opened by music, an overture, by the Orchestra. Rev. N. M. Steffens then delivered an eloquent prayer when the audience were again favored with a beautiful piece of music entitled "Life is a Dream." Miss Reka Verbeek then read an essay on "Seedtime." "Roundhead or Cavalier" was the title of an essay of a historic nature, read by Miss Sara Jennings. Miss Fannie Boyd's production was "Unconscious Power," she said that the most important factor of the individual was intelligence. The more intelligence possessed the greater was the unconscious power of person. Our looks, words, and acts, in themselves often were the seeds that would result in changing the whole current in the lives of our fellow men. How essential was it then that we should be our guard. The orchestra gave another selection which was followed by an essay by Miss Minnie Mehr. Miss Mohr compared the times of Queen Elizabeth with our present age, the advancement made in science, literature, art and even in the customs of society. This essay was followed by the "Farewell to the School to Class" by Miss Maggie Pfanstiehl, a member of the class graduating next year. Miss Addie Clark's essay was entitled "Harvest Time," with the Valedictory. The orchestra then rendered a selection, which was followed by the presentation of Diplomas by Prof. Hummer, who made a few remarks. The floral offerings and designs presented to the graduates were beautiful and numerous. All the essays both as regards the composition and subject matter were highly creditable. The music by Dr. D. M. Gee, Miss Welters and Prof. J. A. Lambert was excellent and was highly spoken of by all who heard it. The graduates, teachers and pupils of the High School were all entertained by Prof. Hummer after the close of the exercises. That the people of our city are proud of the work performed by the High School was evident from the large audience in attendance, and that the alma mater will henceforth be increased yearly is undoubtedly an assured fact.

J. W. BOSMAN, Jr., has returned home from Ann Arbor and the State University.

MR. L. FINNEY and wife, of Grand Rapids, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Hopkins this week.

THE steamers A. B. Taylor and Macatawa made hourly excursions yesterday and carried fully three thousand visitors to Macatawa Park.

EDITOR A. S. KEDZIE of the Grand Haven Herald, called on us this week. Mr. Kedzie was attending the meetings of the West Mich. Fruitgrowers Society.

AT Grand Haven yesterday during the Sham Battle one of the artillerymen had his arm blown off and another had his thumb and hand mutilated by the premature discharge of a cannon.

QUITTING advertising in dull times is like pulling down a dam when the water is low. When trade revives, it will rush by him who does not stay it with ready customers. The way to have such always on hand is through advertising.

REV. J. H. KARTEN arrived last Tuesday and will enter immediately upon his duties as Editor and Manager of The Hope. Pres. Doesburg and Kellen not wishing to continue the publishing of the above paper any longer, they had requested the Council of Hope College to take it off their hands at the expiration of their contract, July 1st.

THURSDAY night a severe thunder storm visited this city and the morning of the Fourth of July opened bleak and gloomy although dry. At sunrise the day was ushered in by the ringing of bells, and after some trouble those who had kindly agreed to fire the cannon were enabled to do their task. Some of the rowdies who seem to be a burden on this community had run the cannon off and changed its setting, and it was only by accident that the place of hiding and the nature of the tampering was discovered or else serious results might have followed. There are no words adequate to censure these worthless chaps whose acts endanger the lives and limbs of respectable citizens, and action should be taken to teach them a lesson which they will not soon forget. By eight o'clock the town began to fill with people, and the fellow with his girl and the fellow with somebody else's girl flocked through our streets. On the arrival of the 10 o'clock trains fully eight thousand visitors were in our city. At 10:30 the sun broke through the clouds and the balance of the day was pleasant. The procession took up the line of march through our principal streets at the advertised time, and was arranged as follows: Dr. Gee's band, Firemen in uniform, carriages containing the President of the Day, the Chaplain, Reader, Orator, Common Council, City Officers and the Press. Then followed the fire engines, hose cart, and hook and ladder truck. After Huff's martial band came the chariot with the young ladies representing the states with the Goddess of Liberty as the figure-head. This representation was favorably commented on by everyone. After the chariot came the merchant and trade's representations as follows: Kremers & Bangs, druggists; Pessink's ice cream wagon, with a lot of youngsters eating cream, and one wagon advertising his confectionery; Holland Manufacturing Company, with a wind engine and tank; R. Kanter & Sons' hardware store drawn by four horses; Visser & Kok, blacksmiths, busy at work; B. Van Raalte, agricultural implement dealer, with two wagons; A. F. Slooter, cigars, confectionery and ice cream; Walsh, De Roo & Co., Standard Roller Mills; Phoenix Planing Mill, with hands busy at work; J. Van Putten & Co. Holland Butter Tub Company; P. Wilms, pump manufacturer. Then followed a large number of carriages and citizens on foot. Time and space forbids us giving a detailed account of the wagons, but some of them were very fine and showed that no trouble or expense had been spared to make them the finest ever seen in this city. The exercises at the grove on the college campus were carried out according to program. The oration by Hon. John W. Stone was a masterly effort. At 1:30 a base ball match took place on the college grounds between a team from the East and West end of the city. The game resulted in a victory for the East end by a score of 17 to 7. At 2:30 the yacht races on the Bay took place. The race was over a six mile course. In the "First Class Race" the "Maggie Plugger" and the "Sweepstakes" were the boats entered. This was a hotly contested race the Plugger winning only by one minute. The "Second Class Race" resulted in a victory for the yacht belonging to Chas. O'dell. The tub race was won by George Bender. The foot race was won by Cornelis Hazen as was also the wheelbarrow race. The sack race was won by Charlie Blom. In the evening a very fine pyrotechnic display was witnessed at Centennial Park which continued until after 10 o'clock when everyone retired to their homes well satisfied that the celebration of July Fourth, 1894, was the finest ever had in Holland.

IN STATE.

BY JAMES WHITCOMB RICE.

Is it the martins or the cats?
Early morning or late at night?
A dream, perhaps, or a knock down on the lids
Of a dying man's eyelids.

Over and over I read the rain—
Over and over I waited to see
The face of the lamp as again and again
Its flame insulted me.

Time is so long when a man is dead!
Some one says, and the room is made
Very clean; a dith'ry is she!
Soft rough the wind-w-shade.

Yesterday I thought: "I know
Just how the bells will sound, and how
Friends will talk, and the sermon go,
And the house-boat and how!"

This is to-day, and I have nothing
To think of—noting whatever to do
But to hear the throb of the pulse of a wing
That waits to fly back to you.

JUDSON'S BILL.

"Oh, here is Judson's bill, Maria,—just thirty-five dollars. He paid me last night," said George Dwight, handing his wife a roll of crisp bills as they both rose from their early breakfast. Then kissing her and leaving a good-bye for his two boys, he left the house to take the train for the city, and his brisk, firm tread echoed down the gravel walk.

She snuffed and smoothed out the notes with a sense of thankfulness and satisfaction. They were far from rich, and this money, hardly and honorably earned, typified to her, comforts, necessities and charities.

When she rose from the table she carried the money to the pantry, and put into one of the crystal glasses on the second shelf. She always had a feeling of added responsibility when she had money in charge in George's absence.

She was a brisk, pretty little body, with a deal of vim about her, and it was not long before the dishes were washed and the room tidied. Then she went out to feed the half-dozen white Leghorns. Coming back, she stopped to see how matters were progressing in the garden.

The beans and peas and lettuce were doing finely, and the tomato plants began to look quite sturdy, but she noticed, with vexation, that the currant worms were destroying the bushes. "I must get," she thought, "some hellebore to-day."

When she came into the house again, she heard Eddy and Larry awake up stairs, and went up to help the rosy, healthy little fellows dress, who soon came down to their breakfast of bread and milk, after which they went out into the yard to play.

After airing and making beds, she thought now was a good time to slip down to Atlee's store for the hellebore—but that thirty-five dollars! She never could leave it in the house during her absence. Supposing a tramp should happen along? There had been one there the day before, a glowing, hard-faced creature, with vile and wolfish eyes and brutal mouth, and it was not reassuring to think of him as yet in the vicinity.

A little round pocketbook of Eddy's, tied with a red ribbon, lay on the window sill. She took it up, placed the bills in it and thrust it down deep in her pocket. Occasionally she gave it a furtive pat as she went down the street to convince herself of its safety.

She wondered how it was that George could thrust ruffled bills so unconcernedly in his vest-pocket, and never seem to give them a single thought!

She got the hellebore, came home and prepared the mixture to sprinkle the currants. That work finished to her satisfaction, she went in to peel some potatoes to make cream-potatoes for the children's lunch. She peeled them deftly; she had pretty, dimpled wrists and taper fingers. The dark oak table and the yellow pipkin were of harmonious tints, and she made a home-like picture with the brindle cat by her side and the sunshine streaming in on her neat blue calico.

She laughed merrily as she took the little pocketbook from her pocket, for the purpose of laying it for a few moments on the mantle-piece.

"It's safe enough," she said; "but I'm sure if I had a thousand dollars in my sole charge for a day, George would come home to find me a lunatic."

She had barely finished the potatoes, when an over-grown, freckled girl walked in through the open door without ceremony, and sat down.

"Mornin', Ria," she said.

"Good morning, Mary," she answered, kindly. "And how are you and the rest of the folks this morning?"

"Oh, everybody's well enough. Aunt Eunice's baby had the colic last night, but he's all right now. Peelin' potatoes, eh?"

As this fact was sufficiently perceptible, Ria made no answer; she was secretly wishing that Mary, poor girl! had better manners. Mary was her half-sister—her father's daughter,—who, since her orphanage, had been living with her mother's sister, an ignorant woman, who was letting her, after the manner of Topsy, grow.

She was not a very lovable or agreeable child; she was rather sly, very prying and very conceited, but she had a wonderfully kind heart, and would fetch and carry for those of whom she was fond like any Spaniel.

"It's awful nice to-day," she said, in the pleasant, soft voice that was one of her few agreeable characteristics. "I've started to go up to Tallman's meadow for strawberries. George Dunn said there were some of 'em there. Don't you believe, Ria! Jennie Dunn has a new dress—a pink-sprigged lawn. I wish I had a new dress. I never get nothin' like I used to, sence mother died."

"Oh yes, Mary; your aunt dresses you quite nicely, but she does not want to spend your money carelessly. She is very honorable about trying to save it until you are grown up."

"I don't care for that, Ria; she's awful mean about lettin' me have even a penny. I just wish I could have money when I want it. Say, now, haven't you some molasses cake you want to eat? I have never had none sence mother died that tastes like her'n but yours."

Maria knew Mary was a little gourmand, but her gentle heart was touched to think the child craved some cake like that her mother used to make; so the potatoes being finished, she set the pipkin on the table and threw the peelings into piggy's pail that stood outside the door.

"I guess I can find you some," she said, cheerily, going down the outer cellar stairs. She was hardly as quick about doing it as she had intended. There were some crumbs on the floor that must be swept up, and while she was down there, she thought she had better turn back the edges of the cream in the pans that it might not get bitter.

But at last she cut some generous squares from the amber molasses cake on the shelf, and came with it up the inside stairs. Mary, who was standing by the mantle, started as if frightened and colored all up; then she crossed quickly to the door and took up her basket.

"Here is your cake," said Maria. "But hadn't you better stay, dear, and lunch with us?"

"Oh no, no!" said Mary, hastily. "I couldn't, I couldn't! I'm goin' strawberryin'."

She fairly darted out of the door. "Poor girl!" said Ria, with the prying sight with which she often spoke of her.

Just then old Mrs. Gorham, with her full-moon face and wheezing from very corpulency, came into the yard and up to the house. She sank into the rocker and untied her bonnet-strings.

"How do do! What's the noos?" she panted.

This was her regular salutation. She could no more have omitted the second interrogation than the first. A world without news would have been to her a vast Sahara. Maria remembered Mr. Atlee had told her that old Mr. Dobbs had caught his right leg in the threshing-machine yesterday afternoon, and that his ankle was badly broken.

This news, bad as it was, had an enlivening influence on the old lady. It gave her a scope for asking all manner of questions concerning the affair, until having worn the topic threadbare, she munched some cake with gusto and casually inquired the price of Eddy's new hat, as she was a very cormorant in pursuit of knowledge, even the most trifling, pertaining to her neighbors. It was quite two hours before she waddled away, a good-natured old busy-body, and then it was lunch time.

Afterwards Maria carried a pail of water to the handsome Alderney, tethered in the clover-plot south of the house, fed the pig, and then coming in, sat contentedly down to her sewing.

All at once she started up and went to the mantle-piece.

"What a careless creature I am!" she said.

Then she turned pale; searched her pocket, her work-basket, the pantry; lighted a lamp and went looking carefully down the cellar, only to come up flurried and frightened. The pocketbook with "Judson's bill" in it was missing! Could Eddy or Larry have seen it? But no! when she called them in from their play to ask, it was plainly evident that neither of them had seen the little round pocketbook tied with the red ribbon.

She went carefully over all the transactions of the morning. "I went after hellebore; I had it then! I went to peel potatoes; I had it then! I laid it on the mantle-piece, meaning to put it under the table-cloth on the pantry shelf. I forgot it—and it is gone!"

Mrs. Gorham! It was ridiculous to think of her touching it! Mary! and then a black, ugly thought etched Maria's heart and left her faint and giddy. It seemed for the moment as if something snapped in her head. She looked again and again into impossible places; even lifted up the oil cloth beside the chimney, thinking it might have fallen and been somehow pushed under; but no pocketbook rewarded her search, and she could think of nothing but Mary's startled movement from the mantle and her burning, sufficing blush!

She went out and sat down on the stoop. Larry came to her, trying to be brave; he had a splinter in his little tanned thumb; she must take it out.

For a wonder she did not mind his shiver, or praise his courage.

"Never mind such a little hurt," she said. "There are hurts that are far worse."

Then she caught him to her with a sudden, passionate cry. "Much as I love you, Larry, I'd rather dig your grave with my own hands to-day than have you grow up to do bad, wicked things! to lie to—to steal!"

He whimpered as she let him go; he was not used to such sudden outbursts from his merry, cheerful little mother.

Maria's eyes wandered to the currant bushes. She felt no solicitude about them now. She did not heed the cock and hens who were scratching in the onion-bed, but she mechanically marked a measuring-worm looping his odd way along the step.

"My father's daughter—my sister—a thief—a thief!" was her mental cry.

Mary was curious; she had seen the pocketbook, examined and coveted—the wish had been followed by the criminal deed! Oh, if she had only never placed the money there—never put the temptation in Mary's way! It was herself was partly to blame. It was queer how now so many little, almost-forgotten facts about the child revived and came buzzing like a swarm of bees into her brain.

There was the time Mary shut herself up in the store-closet to pilfer sweet trucks; that other time when she took George's pencil-sharpener; and there was Eddy's ten-cent piece that she had picked up—and kept!

Maria had meant to talk to her seriously about these things, but she had somehow put it off, and now it was too late. Oh, the poor wicked, wicked child! Anger, compassion, sorrow, shame, tore Maria's heart. The worm had looped his way across the step and vanished, and she, became suddenly conscious that Eddy and Larry were clamoring for something to amuse them.

"Get you basket," she said, "and we will go strawberryin'."

She meant to follow Mary at once and confront her with the accusation. She longed for wings to fly, she was so impatient to meet the erring child. Eddy and Larry felt that she hurried them needlessly. They wanted to stray hither and thither, to stop at the bridge and skip stones, or watch the Caddies flies skipping on the water, or the minnows sporting in the shallow depths.

It was a beautiful day. The sky was a blue realm of purity; the air was as soft as an infant's breath; buttercups and daisies starred and gammed the roadsides; but Maria was careless of it all.

They came across old Mr. Slocum ditching his marshy ground. He stopped to talk with them, leaning idly on his spade. He was willing to be loquacious, for his work was not pressing, but Maria was in no mood for conversation. What did Mr. Slocum with his easy good-nature know of her troubles? He had never had a thief in his family, never!

What would he say now if she should say, "I am in a hurry; my sister Mary stole thirty-five dollars from me this morning!"

She could imagine his look of blank consternation.

"Pshaw—now—you don't mean it?" he'd say.

She actually believed she was losing her wits and might say it, so he hurried on. She trembled with nervous excitement as she followed the cowpath that wound among the elder and sumach bushes, with a thin little stream of water tinkling its rhythm alongside. She actually laughed as they came out upon the broad expanse of the wild strawberry lot and saw nothing there but a dirty-faced boy, the bees humming in the clovers, and the swallows skimming overhead.

"No, there hadn't bin no girl, nor nothin' there, sence he'd come," the boy said in answer to her inquiry. He seemed to resent their intrusion and looked wrathfully at the children; probably if their mother had not been with them, the pasture lot would have become a battle-ground.

The afternoon was nearly passed when the children were willing to turn their faces homeward. Maria was miserable. She could not go to Mary's Aunt Eunice's now, for the chores had to be done and dinner got ready for George.

Oh, if she only needn't tell George about Mary taking the money to-night! He was quick to condemn—bitter when roused. He would go right down and have no mercy on the poor, erring child, and he would tell Aunt Eunice, who always told everything—even her own family secrets, for she was one of those women who must prattle, even if it be about herself; and Mary would be branded forever and her feet be set—how knew in what descending paths! It was terrible! terrible!

The children went gracefully about their allotted tasks. Eddy loosened the gentle Alderney from her tether and led her into her comfortable stall. Larry ran to feed the chickens, and Maria went to get the meal for the little porker who was grunting greedily in his pen. He was a voracious fellow, like all of his kind, and she watched him for a moment.

"I don't wonder," she said, listlessly looking down, "that Circe transformed Ulysses' gourmands into swine."

Then she gave a choked cry.

"Larry, come here—quick! Climb over in the pen and pick up—that!"

Larry obeyed readily, and fished out of the litter at the head of the trough a little round, dirty pocket-book. She caught it from him with a hysterical laugh.

"That's it! that's it!" she cried. "It's Judson's bill!"

She opened it with trembling fingers. The crisp notes seemed fairly to smile up at her.

"Thank the Lord!" she said, brokenly. "Why, I never could have put it on the mantle—never! and I was perfectly sure I did; and Mary never even saw it. I had thrown it out in the potato-peelings, and if the pig had destroyed it, I should always, always have thought she had taken it. I might have ruined her life. Poor child! poor child!"

"Where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise." Mary never knew with what a self-reproachful heart Maria, as a faint reparation for her unjust suspicions, baked the next morning a delicious molasses cake and sent it to her by Eddy. The good-natured girl took it with surprised delight.

"How awful good of Ria!" she said. Then she hesitated a moment as Eddy turned to go.

"Eddy," she called.

"Well, Aunt Mary?"

"Eddy, I want you to tell Ria that I broke the foot off that china match-safe on the mantle, yesterday. I put it under again; but when she finds it out she might think you or Larry broke it. Tell her I'm sorry."

She did not add that she had meant

Ria should think some one else had done it. Since she had confessed, it was not necessary to say more.

Maria merely nodded when Eddy told her. She could not care much about such a trifle as a twenty-five-cent match-safe after her experience of the previous day. Still, she was glad that Mary had had honor enough to tell the truth about it—and she saw now what had caused her extreme confusion yesterday—and more than ever was she smitten with self-reproach.

"This has been to me a lesson for a life-time," she said.—Youth's Companion.

The Dismal Swamp.

This little-visited district, on the borders of Virginia and North Carolina, derives most of its celebrity from the ballad written by Tom Moore at Norfolk on a supposed legend of a distracted ous forest of juniper and cypress trees, while below was a thick entangled undergrowth of reeds, woodbine, grapevines, mosses, and creepers interlaced and complicated. But man has wrought great changes, since this account was given. The Dismal Swamp Canal, connecting the Elizabeth and Pasquotank rivers, now traverses the district for twenty miles, while another runs from Lake Drummond to the Nansemond River.

The first attempt to drain the swamp was made by a company organized by General Washington after the close of the Revolutionary War; but although the original design of reclaiming the land was never carried out, the land company realized enormous profits from the lumber it took out. Immense quantities of staves, shingles, and the like have been sent from the thick dark groves, and to-day most of the valuable gum, juniper, cypress, and white pine has been cut. The undergrowth is varied and luxuriant; reeds prevail everywhere, and to the south form a sea of verdure. The soil is deep and soft, and large quantities of fallen trunks have been taken from beneath the surface, where they have been preserved by the antiseptic qualities of the water.

The water of Lake Drummond and the swamp in general is dark colored like coffee, but is pleasant to the taste, and will keep pure for a long time. The spongy nature of the soil renders road-making a difficult task, and the first railroad engineer almost despaired of success. The mule roads are simply logs laid side by side, over which the shingle carts pass.

The swamp is intersected by some ridges elevated above the watery level which constitutes the greater part of the region, and on them the harder kinds of timber grow. These portions of the swamp are, perhaps, susceptible of being reclaimed. As to the rest, numerous schemes since that of Washington have been proposed for making it available for cultivation, and for using the upper bog surface for fuel resembling the peat so commonly cut from the bogs of Ireland and of Scotland.

About six months ago there were some notices published of a new enterprise looking to the reclamation of this enormous tract of land. The field is a large one, and modern appliances for draining large areas of water-saturated land have been so perfected that it is probable that success will, to a certain extent, crown the efforts of the society making the attempt.—Harper's Weekly.

Boston Way.

"Now," said the Boston school teacher, "the question I am about to put to you is an extremely difficult one, and to answer it correctly you will be obliged, metaphorically speaking, to imitate the trunk conformation of the dromedary of the desert." A Western school teacher would have put the question and said, simply: "Now hump yourselves."

OF ALL the actions of a man's life his marriage does least concern other people, yet, of all actions of our life 'tis most meddled with by other people.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR.

In rheumatic fever the skin of a patient is particularly sensitive and you may cause a chill which may have a bad effect; better wait in another room for a few minutes. There is no complaint which requires so much gentleness as this. A person in health can form no idea of the suffering. There is not only racking pain in ever joint, but a dread of being touched, or of the slightest breath of air. Even when not within three or four feet of the patient he will cry out to you not to tread upon him. The banging of a door, shutting down violently, letting anything fall. All sudden noises must be carefully guarded against.

THE CARE OF CHILDREN.—The little children die rapidly in a large city during the heated term. To prevent this as far as possible attention to the following rules will be found useful: 1. An infant should not be weaned between May 1 and October 1, if it can be avoided. 2. All children under 2 years should be kept in pure cool air as much as possible. 3. The great mortality among infants is mainly due to diarrheal diseases caused by errors in diet, heat and impure air. Beware of over feeding; it is not necessary to feed an infant to quench thirst; a little pure, cold water is often much better for the child than milk. 4. Do not use any patent infant foods except when prescribed by a physician. Do not use any complicated nursing bottles having tubes and joints unless extra precautions are taken as to cleanliness. A common twelve-ounce bottle with a nipple of black rubber is satisfactory. As soon as used the bottle and nipple should be thoroughly rinsed and then kept entirely under water till again wanted. They should never be allowed to get dry. 5. The food for infants recommended by the New York Board of Health is the best and cheapest. It is prepared as follows: "Boil a teaspoonful of powdered barley (ground in a coffee grinder) and half a pint of water, with a little salt, for fifteen minutes, strain and mix with it half as much boiled milk, add a lump of white sugar size of a walnut, and give it lukewarm. For infants five or six months old give half barley water and half boiled milk. For infants very colicky use oatmeal instead of barley, cooking and straining as above." 6. Give well children an all-over wash or bath with cool water twice a day. Give them as much fresh air as possible and keep them cool, but be careful that in a sudden fall of temperature they do not get chilled. Light flannel clothing next to the skin is better than cotton. 7. Beware of bad smells about the house, but remember that it is not the smell itself that is dangerous, but what it is a sign of, and, therefore, try to discover and remove the cause of the smell, whether it be a leaky soil pipe, a foul sink or garbage box, a filthy cellar, or gutter, or what not. 8. If a child has diarrhea, consult a physician at once, and do not waste time with domestic remedies. 9. Let those who have no children to care for try to help the thousands who have, but who are too poor to give them a chance for life, by taking them where they can have a few hours enjoyment of fresh, pure air.—Irish World.

The Herodian Family.

The Herodian family occupy a not very enviable position in the sacred Scriptures. Herod the Great, King of the Jews, was the second son of Antipater and Cypros, an Arabian lady of noble descent, and was born at Ascalon, Judea, about the year 72 before Christ. At an early age he obtained the Governorship of Galilee, broke up the hordes of robbers that then infested the province, and put many persons to death on his own authority, which caused him to be summoned before the Sanhedrim on complaint of having killed Jewish citizens without trial. His judges were awed by the martial host that came with him to the trial, and by intimidation he secured an acquittal. He enjoyed the support of Brutus and Cassius, Mark Anthony, and Augustus, the latter confirming him in his kingdom. He still pushed himself forward; had Hyrcanus put to death on the charge of treason; his own wife was murdered, as well as her two sons, and several near relatives and chief counselors. A fearful disease was consuming him in the latter part of his reign, and it was then he ordered the execution of his son and the massacre of the children at Bethlehem. The murderer of the innocents, in anticipation of his death, gave orders that the principal Jews, whom he had shut up at Jericho, should immediately after his decease be put to death, that mourners might not be wanting at his funeral. Herod was married to no fewer than ten wives. According to the custom of the times, he made his sons the heirs to his kingdom by a formal testament, leaving its ratification to the Emperor; so Archelaus became Tetrarch of Judea, Samaria, and Idumea; Philip of Trachonitis, and Iturea; and Herod Antipas, of Galilee and Perea. There followed this Herod a numerous brood of whom the less said the better. —Inter Ocean.

THE marvel is that, considering their miserably superficial education, which fits them for nothing in this world or the next, women stand on so high a plane as they now do. It only shows what mother wit has done for them. No pure, noble womanhood can come from the present order of society. There can be found no grand men without grand mothers. Therefore, this Republic had better look to its women. Beauty and style and veneered accomplishments do not make a woman.—Kate Field.

INTEGRITY is a virtue which seeks and needs no costumer.

The Disease of Modern Letters.

M. Guillemot, denouncing the growing tendency of authors and dramatists and artists to thrust themselves and their private life before the public, traces the origin of the malady to America. Unless it is checked, he declares that it must of necessity lower the standard of all modern literary productions. It is natural enough that an author, an artist, or a poet should be ambitious to leave an honored name to posterity; but that is an altogether different thing from craving to be talked about and marveled at while in the land of the living. Formerly the poet sang his song, the author told his tales, and the artist completed his work without ever a thought of putting himself to the front. Whether he was married or single, whether tall or short, fair or dark, sanguine or bilious—what had this to do with his work? No one knew, and no one cared to know. They gave their spirit, their mind to the world, and besides this they were nothing to the public at large. They remembered Confucius' words, "Do not talk of yourself either good or evil; because in the former case no one would believe you, and in the latter everybody would." Within the last two centuries all this has changed. At present all houses are built of glass, the inhabitants themselves being the architects, throwing open to the gaze of the public even those chambers which have hitherto been held sacred in their privacy. "And is not this fact," asks M. Guillemot, "the characteristic of modern society? A gossamer society, thanks to which the term private life is nothing but a vain phrase, and Paris an immense crystal palace." Fortunately for France these evils do not originate within its frontiers, but come, like tempests, across the Atlantic from "that powerful nation which in turn astonishes the world by its grandeur and its folly, its love for liberty and its contempt for inferior races; from the United States, which let a Lincoln die and a Barnum live." Audacious, resolute Americans exercise the same influence on the French which every firm spirit does on the weak and undecided. "We are, as wax in their hands." It was in America that conferences and lectures originated, the Yankees having always had a great desire to approach the persons of great men. That, however, is due to a physical effect, which incapacitates the American from seeing the difference between a justly celebrated poet and a two-headed calf—a remark which Mr. Arnold will perhaps not be slow to appreciate. It is by no means the deep interest in the works of a great man which excites this curiosity among the people; in the same degree as art declines, the personality of the artist increases in interest. American journalism and reporting strengthen this tendency to pry into the private life of public characters, and France has eagerly taken up the evil habit.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A Tortured Child.

My studies are arithmetic, algebra, geography, astronomy, grammar, United States history, general history, etymology, spelling, and composition; then drawing, reading, writing, and singing by note. Every little while I am obliged to have an account of some celebrated person or place learned well enough to write on a slate. "After spending a long, wearisome day in a close school room, trembling every minute for fear I shall forget some date in history or rule in algebra, I walk home, a distance of three short blocks—the only exercise I have except at lunch time, with a short recess in the forenoon in a crowded school yard. As soon as I arrive at home I sit down to work out my number of algebra problems, which I would not mind if I wasn't so nervous and tired. After them comes my spelling twenty review words of former grades and twenty historical, geographical, or astronomical names, which take quite a long time to hunt up in their respective text-books. Then the next in order of exercises is a long history lesson, with such lists of names and dates that it makes my head swim to look at them. I study the civil war, together with the explorations and early settlements. By the time I lay down my book to have supper, my head feels as if it would burst. I hastily swallow my food thinking all the time of how much more I must jam in somehow before I can rest. I hurry to two chapters of geography, and while studying them think, 'Oh dear! I don't half know that history yet!' and I've got astronomy and an account of Solymann to find in an encyclopedia, history, or elsewhere, besides preparing the definitions of a reading lesson, with the notes about the author. I study and search in histories and text books until I am about worn out. At last my little clock strikes eleven. How I long for sleep and rest, but I have not finished yet. How those lists of dates run through my mind while I am trying in vain to learn my astronomy! Oh, at what a cost am I getting my education!"—Child's Letter, in Frank Leslie's Newspaper.

An Ingenious Hen.

A correspondent in Kentucky Gentleman says: A black-breasted red game hen that was raised from a trio of games I bought years ago from A. D. Warren, of Worcester, Mass., has been for some years stealing nests in my hay-loft at the stable. The hen was hatched in the spring of 1874, and for years has hatched out and raised two broods of chickens each year. The last brood was hatched sooner than expected, and the hen evidently felt a little indignant at being left to her own resources. She came down and fussed about considerably, and then went aloft again and brought her brood to the window of the hay-loft. She clucked about them some, and then flew down and called them vigorously. The chicks, one at a time, tried to fly down, and the hen received each one in a quite sensible way. She ruffled up her feathers and spread her wings, and caught them on her back. Not a chick was hurt, and now, nearly a week later, they are doing well. The window is ten feet from the ground. There are five chicks, and they are a cross with white Leghorns.

The Sea-Spider.

Of all the crab tribe, this is surely the most fantastic little fellow, and ought to be considered the "missing link" for he has certainly one of the first instincts of civilization, namely, that of attempting to cover himself with extraneous and ornamental garments. He is the dandy of the sea. Bits of seaweed are his great reliance, but small objects of almost any kind he will appropriate, even to pieces of stone or wood. One of mine showed considerable taste and an idea of style, preferring always the most gaudy colors which he could find in the tank. These little animals will spend hours every day at their toilet, appropriating with their hand-like claws bits of seaweed, Sertularia, sponge, or Tubularia. One will perhaps place a bit on the tip of his nose, or suspend from it a long, ribbon-like strip of red or green algae, or affix similar fragments to his legs, elbows, or knees, as we may call them. He does not appear to take these pieces at random, but has the air of selecting them with care, and then leisurely cutting them off from the large fronds with his own nippers, of which he has two pair, one upon each of his two foremost arms. Having severed the desired portion, he takes it up in one of his hands (for his nippers serve for hands as well as shears), and, placing one end of it to his mouth, evidently deposits upon it a species of mucus, or marine cement, which secures the object in the position in which his lordship sees fit to arrange it, and in which matter he is somewhat fastidious. This mucus must have great strength, for in his native element he will walk about thus arrayed, without any danger of his ornaments being washed away even by the rolling surf. In the tank, when his toilet is completed, he will advance to the front or most conspicuous spot he can find, and as near to the spectator as he can conveniently get, with a self-satisfied air, as much as to say: "I'm in full dress now; how do you like my style?"

For Half a Life-Time.

Mrs. John Gemmell, Milroy, Milfin Co., Pa., in the Spring of 1864 injured her spine and partial paralysis ensued. For nearly twenty years she was unable to walk. In the Spring of 1883 she was advised to use St. Jacobs Oil. She great conqueror of pain. The first application gave instantaneous relief. Before the second bottle was exhausted she was able to walk, and is cured.

Reclaimed Himself.

Women are skillful. "Who is that horrid whisky bloot?" asked a lady of an acquaintance, while they stood viewing the guests at a fashionable reception. "Which one?" "That one with the red mustache and awful nose. Don't you see?" "He is my husband!" "Oh," laughed the lady, "I see that you are not sensitive," although she saw vengeance in the eyes of the insulted lady. "Several nights ago a friend made a similar remark about my husband and I became very angry. I declared it would anger any woman; but my friend said that you, having the best husband in the world, would not care, and I wagered a pair of gloves that you would; but you see I have lost. I hear that your husband is spoken of as an available candidate for Governor. How clever he must be."—Arkansas Traveler.

Special from Waltham, Mass.

Fifteen hundred watches are now made daily at Waltham, and they are better in quality and lower in price than ever before.

Arkansas Appetite.

An old fellow living in a "back country" of Arkansas found a lot of eggs, and, thinking they were the product of the turtle, boiled and ate them. About the time he was finishing his repast, a friend came up and said: "Great Lord, Jim, do you know what you're eatin'?" "Yes; eatin' turtle eggs." "No, they ain't; they are snake eggs." "Well," swallowing the last one, "it's too late now to quit. Next time I'll be more particular."—Arkansas Traveler.

The Nopal Cactus.

This plant which is abundant in Texas and Mexico, is claimed to be excellent food for sheep, and is so full of watery juice that sheep fed on it do not need water, but can be kept in the driest sections of the country; but before being used the cactus must be divested of its numerous thorns and spines, and to accomplish this a machine has been devised.

Repel an Attack.

Of liver complaint, not with counter-attacks of blue pill, calomel and mandrake, but with the gentle and efficacious aperient and anti-bilious medicine, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Without griping, and progressively and easily, it will relax the constipated bowels, banish the discomfort from the region of the liver, remove the yellow tint from the countenance and whites of the eyes, and relieve the nausea, sourness of the breath and fullness of the blood vessels of the head, which accompany disorder of the hepatic gland. Voyagers in the tropics and residents of southern climes, where liver ailments are so easily rife, testify with emphasis to its preventive and remedial efficacy. Chills and fever, and remittent fever disorder always involve the liver, and they are both averted and cured by this excellent specific. Rheumatism and kidney complaints, and debility arising from imperfect assimilation and indigestion, are also thoroughly remedied by the Bitters. Give it a systematic and fair trial.

The mignonette, which holds within its tiny heart a fragrance that should be known in every collection, is much more popular than many flowers of superior beauty. This little plant has drifted to us from far Egypt, where, as some writer gracefully remarks, "it may have wafted sweet odors from the banks of the Nile to the infant Moses as he floated by in his ark of bulrushes."

PALPITATION or rapid breathing of the heart, followed by periods of complete cessation, is caused chiefly by nervousness and bad blood. If the disease is neglected it is liable to result seriously, especially at a time of sudden excitement. Purify the blood, strengthen the muscular and nervous system governing the heart, by using Dr. Guyot's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, and you will soon be rid of every trace of the affection.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S Vegetable Compound is a most valuable medicine for ladies of all ages who may be afflicted with any form of disease peculiar to their sex. Her remedies are put up not only in liquid forms, but also in Pills and Lozenges, in which form they are securely sent through the mails.

It Will Cost You Nothing.

"For what?" For a medical opinion in your case, if you are suffering from any chronic disease which your physician has failed to relieve or cure. "From whom?" From Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1109 Girard st., Philadelphia, dispensers of the Vitalizing Treatment by Compound Oxygen which is attracting wide attention, and by which most remarkable cures in desperate chronic cases are being made. Write and ask them to furnish such information in regard to their treatment as will enable you to get an intelligent idea of its nature and action.

DR. JOHN BULL'S Smith's Tonic Syrup FOR THE CURE OF FEVER and AGUE Or CHILLS and FEVER, AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

BULL'S SARSAPARILLA is the old and reliable remedy for impurities of the blood and Scrofulous affections—the King of Blood Purifiers.

DR. JOHN BULL'S VEGETABLE WORM DESTROYER is prepared in the form of candy drops, attractive to the sight and pleasant to the taste.

PAIN.

Pain is supposed to be the lot of us poor mortals, as inevitable as death, and liable at any time to come upon us. Therefore it is important that remedial agents should be at hand to be used in an emergency when we are made to feel the excruciating agonies of pain, or the depressing influence of disease.

Such a remedial agent exists in that old Reliable Family Remedy,

PERRY DAVIS' Pain-Killer

It was the first and is the only permanent Pain Reliever.

ITS MERITS ARE UNSURPASSED.

Foote is now nearly fifty years of age, with a record second to none in the history of his profession. He has been a patient in this country for many years, and has been a successful in the treatment of diseases incidental to humanity, especially to families. He has inherited largely from his father and life on the direct road to success and usefulness."

ONE MODERN TERROR.

Increasing in Frequency and Danger—What Can be Done to Stop the Progress of Kidney and Bladder Complaints?

There is no more agonizing class of disease, and none more certain "not to get well of itself," than the disorders of the kidneys and bladder. Physicians too frequently fail to recognize what they are, and even if knowing them, lack the skill for their proper treatment. So that they are liable to be allowed to progress until they are almost unendurable, and their victims are made to undergo the most frightful tortures of a surgical operation. The only medicine that does afford speedy relief and permanent cure of such affections is DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY (of Rondout, N. Y.). It is not a mere soothe, temporarily, of pain; but by the alternative action purifies the blood, restores a healthy condition to the diseased organs, and even dissolves and causes the expulsion of gravel and stones from the kidneys and bladder. The testimony of hundreds who have been cured by it vouches for this. If you have weakness, or pain in the back over the kidneys, or if your urine is dark colored, do not delay treatment for a single day, but hasten at once to arrest the progress of the disease by the use of Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. Dr. Kennedy assures the public, by a reputation which he cannot afford to forfeit or imperil, that the FAVORITE REMEDY does invigorate the blood, cures liver, kidney and bladder complaints, as well as those diseases and weaknesses peculiar to females.

"Righteousness Exalteth a Nation."

Each day adds another day to our history. A desire to beautify the appearance of our city seems to have seized everyone who has a house or plot of ground to improve. To beautify is not the sole pervading desire, but utility and beauty are going hand in hand in many of the transformations. The weary beasts need no more drag the cumbersome carriage through an almost unfathomable bed of sand, nor need the pedestrian wade with slow pace through the sliding masses which everywhere oppose themselves to his progress. Water works will soon be in operation to cool the atmosphere and lay and allay the dust. Almost every modern improvement is finding its way into our little city. Is there an equal solicitude shown for the moral and spiritual improvement of the people? Is the casket more valuable than the jewel? These improvements are praiseworthy, but are they to be compared to the sons and daughters of our city? We need not be taught the demoralizing effect of alcohol, and yet we see men who stand high in the church and state using it and sanctioning the use of it. Those who have a name among the followers of the pure and spotless Saviour, partaking of the cup of the Lord and the cup of devils. Those who know so well what will improve the appearance of the place, giving their ballots for licensing saloons to sell strong drink, which not only makes man repulsive in appearance, but sinks him beneath the level of the brute. The Ancients had walls and bulwarks to protect their towns against the enemy. We allow the enemy to erect his breastworks, ensconce himself behind them and then give him a license to do his best upon our citizens. Perhaps the son is warned to keep away from those places of temptation, but he knows his father has had something to do in legalizing this traffic and perhaps partakes of the demoralizing beverage himself. He knows that many of the citizens who are honored by the mass use it, and he is tempted to follow the multitude. If the father ever sees his error it may be too late to arrest the downward course of his son, and the probability will be that both father and son will see their mistake when it is too late to retrieve the loss.

A Great Discovery.

Mr. Wm. Thomas, of Newton, Ia., says: "My wife has been seriously affected with a cough for twenty-five years, and this spring more severely than ever before. She had used many remedies without relief, and being urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery, did so, with most gratifying results. The first bottle relieved her very much, and the second bottle has absolutely cured her. She has not had so good health for thirty years."

Trial bottles free at H. Walsh's Drug Store. Large size $1.00.

How He Was Hurt.

"Poor fellow! poor fellow!" murmured a sympathizing old lady at the Broad Street Station, as the form of a man all wrapped up in bandages was borne on a litter from an incoming freight train to an ambulance. "Poor fellow! He seems to be very much hurt. Do you know how it happened?"

"No, mum," answered a police station hand.

"Maybe he was in a collision," suggested the old lady.

"There has been no collision on the road that I know of," was the reply.

"Could he have been run over?"

"He is not hurt enough for that."

"True. His limbs seem to be all right. The hurt seems to have come from bruises or blows," added the old lady.

"Yes, mum. Looks like it."

"But can't you guess how it happened?"

"I don't know, mum, unless he tried to take up a Presidential vote."—Philadelphia Call.

GOLDEN SEAL BITTERS are the great blood purifier, liver and kidney remedy and life giving principle, a perfect renovator and invigorator of the system carrying away all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition, enriching it, refreshing and invigorating both mind and body. They are easy of administration, prompt in their action, certain in their results, safe and reliable in all forms of disease. Every moment of our lives, every part of our bodies, is wearing out and is being built up anew. This work is accomplished by the blood. The blood is pure makes the entire circuit of the body every seven minutes. But if it becomes weak or vitiated and does not perform its work properly the system is actually poisoned by the worn-out matter clogging the vital organs instead of leaving the body. Cleanse the blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in pimples, eruptions, sores, etc. Keep the liver in order, the blood pure health of the system will follow.
