Holland Fair

The Holland Fair dates are Sept. 17, 18, 19, 20 and preparation are being made to give a good show this year. The premium books will be ready for distribution by August 15. Ald. Ben Brouwer has been selected as treasurer of the fair association in the place of Henry Liudens who resigned because his duties in the bank take most of his time. Wm. Orr will have charge of the ticket end of the fair and he will see to it that this end is worked in a systematic manner.

G. A. Van Dyke, of New Holland whom Dr. Van Den Berg took to the tuberculosis sanatorium at Howell, Mich., the middle of last month, wrote to the Doctor this week that he was improving nicely. The physicians at the sanatorium have started an exercising him by walking one and a half miles every day. He has gained 19 pounds while there. This sanatorium was made possible through a bill introduced by Nick Whelan. The pity only is that we do not have more of such institutions.

H. C. AKELEY DONOR OF AKELEY SCHOOL FOR GIRLS DIES IN MINNEAPOLIS

Friends in this city will be grieved to learn of the death of Healy C. Akeley, former mayor of Grand Haven and donor of Akeley Hall to the Episcopal church of that city. His death occurred at Minneapolis where he has resided for a considerable length of time. He was 76 years of age.

Mr. Akeley whose name was for many years closely identified with the lumber and shingle interests of Grand Haven and Muskegon, was born in Stowe, Vt., in 1836 and was the son of George and Electa Coffin and came of an old colonial family of English extraction.

At the age of 20, having received a good education he entered the office of Paul Dillingham, of Waterbury, Vt., as a law student and after one year of study entered the law school at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., from which he was graduated. He settled in Grand Haven, where he practiced law until 1863, when he enlisted as a private in the Second Michigan cavalry and served throughout the war, rising to the rank of adjutant of his regiment.

In Grand Haven he engaged successfully in the lumber business.

In 1889 he organized the H. C. Akeley Lumber company of Minneapolis. The annual output of this company totaled 90,000,000 feet.

Mr. Akeley was married in 1869 to Miss Hattie E. Smith of Grand Haven and two children were born to the union, one whom died at 11 years of age.

While living in Grand Haven, Mr. Akeley built an elegant home, which on moving to Minneapolis he presented to the Episcopal church of Grand Haven. It is now known as the "Blanche Hall Akeley Institute for girls."

HOLLAND'S OLD ENGLISH PAPER LARGE ADDITION TO SUGAR FACTORY

The news has in its possession a copy of the Ottawa Register Holland's oldest english publication issued during the war time. The copy of this paper is dated May 14, 1861, although yellow with age the print is very legible. This paper contains news of the Firing of Fort Sumpter, and the call to arms by president Lincoln, asking for volunteers. In regard to the article on Fort Sumpter the Register says:

The racking fire from Fort Sumpter against Fort Moultrie was terrible destructive, and when viewed in connection with the fact that no life was lost, is the most extraordinary case ever recorded in history. As you enter the eye falls upon the battered walls of the archway with openings in some places large enough for windows. All of the office quarters were battered with seven, eight, and ten balls, which penetrated the whole depth of the fort, even the beds and bedding were cut and torn to splinters. The flag of the Confederate State received three shots, and the Palmetto, flag four, rather a singular and peculiar circumstance, when viewed in connection with the seven confederate States.

In another column it gives the destruction of the Norfolk Navy Yards.

One fact seem strange when looking over this old relic of newspaperdom that is the lack of local news. The only local events chronicled are the arrivals and departure of sailing vessels among them we find, the Commencement, William Tell, Wollin, Three Bells, Ardent, Mary and Coaster North Star. The following boats cleared on May 9, Union, with 1,200 bushels wheat, 45,000 feet lumber for Pluggers and Co.

Persia with 1,200 R. R. Ties 10 cords of wood for Walsh & Co.

Commencement, with 55,000 staves for P. F. Pfanstiehl.

Wm. Tell with 55 cords of wood for A. Van Raalte and 25 cords of bark for H. G. Knol.

Ardent with 12,000 R. R. ties for Manley D. Howard.

North Star with butter and eggs for Pfanstiehl and Co.

There were no railroads leading to Holland at that time and the stage was the only mode of conveyance as you will see by the following adv:

New Stage Line from Grand Haven to Holland. The undersigned have made arrangements by which a new stage line will be put in operation on the route between Grand Haven and Holland leaving Grand Haven for Holland, every Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock A. M.

Derrick Vyn
P. S.—I shall carry a mail whenever requested.

Local advertising although not as brisk is now also occupies a prominent part in this paper among those who's names appear are A. Geerling, (Tinshop); Rice's Hotel Grand Haven, H. D. Post Notary Public; E. E. Witbeck, Holland Colony, Mason, and Plasterer; J. E. Sutton and W. E. Dowd Physicians and Surgeons; Dr. B. Ledebor Physician, Surgeon and Obstetrician.

The publication was edited by H. D. Post and published by Doesburg and Sons, and we are indebted to Harry Doesburg of this city who kindly loan us the old relic.

It is said the postoffice department has issued an order restraining dogs from biting the rural mail carriers, but one of the Holland carriers, said there was not a dog on his route that could read, so supposed it would do no good to post the order where they could see it.

Dr. M. L. Holm, state bacteriologist at Lansing, has discovered a means of sterilizing milk bottles by the use of the bleaching powder. The product sold in the various cities of the state will be tested in an effort to learn the standard of quality of the powder before it is recommended to dairymen.

A cigarette is described by an exchange as being "a roll of paper, tobacco and drugs, with a small fire on one end and a large fool on the other. Some of the chief enjoyments are condensed nightmare, fits, cancer of the lips and stomach, spinal meningitis, softening of the brain, funeral processions and families shrouded in gloom. There are plenty of subjects left, however, who are perfectly willing to undergo the trials of such a nature for the sake of putting on certain amount of style."

One of the porters of the City of Grand Rapids falling between the boat and the dock at Macatawa last evening created some excitement for a spell women fainted and the life savers were called but the man was soon fished out none the worse for his ducking

One of the men who is painting the stacks of the Holland Sugar Co. had a narrow escape from a fall to his death when one of the guy ropes from which he was suspended slipped sending him down several feet. He grabbed one of the other ropes however and saved himself.

DR. BELL'S ANTI-PAIN
For Internal and External Pains.

The Holland St. Louis Sugar Co. is building a large addition to its factory in which it will install machinery to dry the beet pulp. The plant will be ready before the next campaign at the factory begins. The beet pulp drying process will be a great convenience to farmers for the reason that of the dried pulp he can haul as much in one load as he could otherwise draw in 20 loads if the pulp were wet.

When the pulp is dried it will be put up in sacks and when Mr. Farmer wishes a load of beet pulp all he will have to do is to call at the sugar factory buy a sack full throw it into the buggy and he will have as much as he was drawing before with a double team, and box wagon. When he feeds it to his stock the pulp becomes live size again, and expands like popped corn.

To form some idea how this is done you must understand that Dried Beet Pulp is simply the natural root shredded, clean and sweet with only the sugar and water extracted, you can appreciate the possibilities of this product as the beet sugar refining industry develops.

In the sugar factory the beets are thoroughly washed, then shredded and placed in large cylinders or cells. Pure water is admitted and the sugar soaked out by the diffusion process. This liquor is drawn off and the pulp, containing about 95 percent of moisture, is conveyed at once to the drier, where it is first run through presses reducing the moisture to about 85 percent.

It is then put into kilns, where it is dried so that it contains only from six to eight percent of moisture. This drying process lasts 35 minutes, and as fast as the dried pulp comes from the drier it is sacked and is ready for shipment. One hour from the time the sugar is extracted from the beets the Dried Beet Pulp is in sacks ready to be loaded on cars. The process is strictly hygienic in every particular. Before drying, the clean beets are simply sliced and treated with pure water. The drying follows so quickly that there is no opportunity for fermentation. It has no chance to get sour. Dried Beet Pulp is clean enough to use on your table.

This new invention will certainly be a convenience to the farmers in the vicinity of Holland and no doubt they will be glad to pay the price asked by the Sugar Co. for this highly beneficial stock food. In speaking with representatives of the Holland-St. Louis Sugar Co., they informed the News that the farmer would be asked to pay for the drying of the pulp and that the price asked would be about as cheap as bran. It is figured that what the farmer saves in hauling will more than pay for the fodder.

Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock while terday afternoon at 3 o'clock while Jacob Kraal of Olive Center was doing carpenter work on a scaffold at the new school building that is being erected there the scaffold broke dashing the carpenter to the ground from a height of about eight feet. The remains of the Rev. N. M. Steffens D. D., who died suddenly at his home West Eleventh street on Friday night were laid at rest in Pilgrim's Home Cemetery Monday afternoon. The services at the home and at Hope church were very impressive.

Dr. G. J. Kollen, president-emeritus of Hope college delivered the address at the home and Dr. Karstens offered prayer. The remains were then taken to the church which was crowded to the doors by people from this not only, but by large numbers of friends from the surrounding country and neighboring cities. Dr. Beardslee presided and delivered a few opening remarks after which Dr. Zwemer read passages from Scripture and the Rev. Dr. Kolyn offered prayer.

A quartet composed of Mrs. J. C. Pelgrim, Miss Aris Yates, Prof. J. B. Nykerk and Frank Kleinhekel sang the hymn "When I Survey The Wondrous Cross" and "Rock of Ages" after which Dr. Dosker of Louisville, Ky., made the funeral address. While the choir sang, "Jesus Lover of My Soul" an opportunity was given the people to view the remains.

The Rev. E. J. Blekkink conducted the committal services at the cemetery where the choir sang "Asleep in Jesus."

Among the many clergymen in attendance at the funeral were the Rev. Nicholas Boer of Patterson, N.

Fourteen Year Old Lee Gilmore Is Badly Burned

Stepping accidentally in a pail of boiling water little fourteen-year-old Lee Gilmore was badly burned Saturday at his home at 166 East 7th street. The boy had been away on an errand for his widowed mother and returned from the store with an armful of groceries. Mrs. Gilmore had a pail of boiling water standing on the kitchen floor, and because of the groceries he was carrying the boy did not see the pail.

He planted his left foot directly in the pail and the water was splattered over a considerable part of his body. The left leg was badly burned and other burns about the body were caused by the water. Dr. Cook attended him.

Ill Luck Hoodoo Hits Grandville One Person Dead, Three are Injured

Grandville had its share of misfortunes during the past week, when one girl was claimed by death and three other persons suffered fractures of bones that will cause one to become bed-ridden and prove quite serious to two others.

Julia Hall, 9-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hall died this morning from injuries sustained last Monday when she attempted to light a gasoline stove.

Mrs. George Allen, 81 years old, slipped and fell on the floor of her home and suffered a broken right hip. Because of her advanced age it is thought that the injury will not prove fatal but she will be bed-ridden for the rest of her life.

The 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Van Kammen fell from a swing when it broke yesterday and sustained a fractured collar bone.

A fourth accident in the town occurred when Harry Buskirk, 45 years old, fell from a ladder onto a stone wall, sustaining a fracture of his left leg in two places when a heavy plank came tumbling down from the roof of his house, landing on the member.

Buskirk had recently moved into the new home and was engaged in fixing the roof. He was at the top of the ladder when he lost his balance and fell backward. The heavy plank which he was attempting to secure to its place on the roof of the house, slid from its fastening and fell on him when he landed on the stone wall.

All the patients in this ill run of luck were attended by Dr. J. D. Brook, a son of the late Rev. Derk Brook, who for some time was pastor of the 1st Reformed church of this city. He is also the brother of Mrs. Dr. Daniel Cook of this city.

THE QUEST OF GENTLE HAZARD

Being the Adventures in Love and Chivalry of Lord Richard Jocelyn

By H. M. EGBERT

(Copyright, 1912, by W. G. Chapman.)

Master and Man

Talbot, Lord Richard Jocelyn's servant, was dusting the apartment on Madison avenue, New York, in preparation for his master's return after a week-end vacation. Everything was finished save the final touches; the books were back upon their shelves, the mirror was spotless, even the solitaire board, with which Lord Jocelyn was wont to assuage his moments of ennui, shone like ebony. Satisfied at last with the results of his labor, Talbot put down his duster and sighed heavily.

"It's a bad business," he said sadly. "What 'is' father will say to it I don't know. But it's 'im' I'm sorry for."

He caught sight of his disconsolate visage in a mirror over the mantel and shook his fist at it.

"Billy haas," he cried, pounding his temples; "why didn't you save 'im from that 'ussy? Answer me that, Talbot, or 'old your blasted tongue for hever."

Suddenly, as though seized with an inspiration, he went to the writing desk, opened a drawer and pulled out a bundle of letters, from some of which he removed the envelopes.

"My darling Dick," he read with disgust. "Dick!" he muttered. "Fancy the likes of 'er calling 'im Dick! A common shop girl, that's what she is, the minx. Wrapped up 'is packages and found 'e was a lord an' set 'er cap at 'im! Talbot, it's up to you to hact, as the Yankees say."

He turned the sheet and read on, his features contorted with various emotions in which disgust predominated.

"When we are one, my darling, my love shall be yours for ever. Though you are of humble birth, and poor—so 'e's been stringin' 'er, 'as 'e?—you are a hundred times too good for me. But my love shall shield you—"

Talbot thrust the letter back into its envelope, tied up the package again and replaced it in the drawer; then closed the desk.

"The fact is, Talbot," he soliloquized, "Lord Richard, 'e's gone batty hower a designing shop 'ussy, what ain't worth wipin' 'is boots hon. An' 'is gone too far now. Talking of getting married next week, 'e is. An' then—then wot? 'E's ruined, that's wot. An' so, somethin' 's got to be done an' you're a-goin' to do it."

He sank into a chair and buried his head in his hands, remaining silent for an appreciable interval. At last he rose abruptly and betook himself into the hall. He came back, holding a letter, which he carefully placed away in his breast pocket. Then, taking the telephone receiver from its hook, he called up a district messenger office.

"Send me a boy at once," he said. "Can you 'ave 'im 'ere inside of fifteen minutes?"

The answer was evidently satisfactory, for Talbot's face became more composed. He began striding up and down the room noisily.

"It's touch and go," he muttered to himself. "But there's nothin' else to be done. Talbot, you've got to do it."

Within the period of time stipulated the messenger boy arrived and found Talbot fingering one of his master's visiting cards. "Give this to Mrs. Schmidt, 848 East Ninety-first street," he commanded. "And tell 'er to bring 'er daughter 'round 'ere right away. Tell 'er—" he paused to think of the message most likely to succeed in its purpose—"tell 'er it's a matter of matrimony," he blurted out.

"Yessir," said the boy, grinning. "And 'ere's a dollar and you can keep the change," Talbot pursued. "Now beat it."

The boy popped out of the door and Talbot watched him scurrying down the stairs. He had calculated his time to a nicety, for hardly had he disappeared through the front door when Talbot heard his master's step upon the hall and withdrew into the sitting-room. A minute afterward Lord Jocelyn entered, flushed with the exertion of running up five flights of stairs.

"Talbot, Talbot," he called briskly, "where's the devil's letter?"

"There's no letter come, sir," said Talbot.

"No letter? There must be a letter. Are you sure you didn't take one in?"

"Quite sure, sir," Talbot rejoined steadily.

Lord Jocelyn flung himself into his chair. "Then it's all off, Talbot," he cried. "It can't get married tomorrow."

"Which I'm sorry, sir," said his servant respectfully. "I remember sir, when Mrs. Talbot an' I, sir—"

"Shut up, you silly old fool," cried his master in exasperation. "Do you understand what this means to me? There won't be another English mail for a week now, and I haven't five dollars to my name. That's the first time my remittance has been late. I shall have to postpone my wedding, and what am I going to say to Lena?"

can I get married and spend my honeymoon on four dollars and a quarter?"

"Which would be difficult, sir," responded Talbot.

"I tell you what," cried his master, starting up in excitement. "Talbot, you must lend me something. You're richer than Croesus. Talbot, lend me five hundred for a week."

Talbot remained discreetly silent, his eyes cast down.

"Talbot, you won't refuse me," said his master. "Talbot, it would break her heart to have to wait now, when she's got all her gowns completed. Talbot, I never knew what it meant to be in love before," he cried rapturously. "To think of winning the love of such a good, innocent, beautiful girl! What if she does work in a shop? Her father was a retired Dutch army officer—she told me so herself. And she doesn't know I'm a lord; she thinks I'm plain Mr. Jocelyn, and poor. Oh, Talbot, you wouldn't have the heart to refuse me?" said his master reproachfully.

"No, sir," answered Talbot, raising his eyes. "But there's Mrs. Talbot I've got to think of, sir."

"What do you mean?" his master cried indignantly. "D'you think I won't repay you?"

"Which I do not, sir," answered Talbot. "But what if you was to die, sir, before the end of the week, sir?"

"Don't be a donkey, Talbot."

"Then honeymoon journeys is hapt to be dangerous, I'm told, sir," persisted Talbot. "I wouldn't trust myself in no American trains without a life insurance, sir. An' if you was to come to anythink, I could never get my money, sir."

"I'll give you an I. O. U., then."

"Which wouldn't be no use, sir, seeing as the remittance would be addressed to you an' I couldn't collect it, sir. But I'll lend you five hundred dollars if you'll write out a bill of sale for your furniture, sir. And sublet your apartment to me for one month from today, sir."

His master looked at him in astonishment.

"Talbot, you're a financial wonder," he said. "Here, give me a pen and ink and a couple of sheets of note-paper. Now, what do I write? 'I hereby agree that the furniture in my apartment at—what's my number?—shall, in consideration of five hundred dollars, become the property of Frederick Talbot.' Is that right? Now for the lease."

"And the receipt, sir," said his servant, when he had concluded. "That's to show that the money has been delivered, sir." He passed out into his bedroom and presently returned, bearing with him five bills of the denomination of one hundred dollars each, which he placed respectfully upon the table.

"Where—why—do you keep your money in your stocking, Talbot?" asked his master, pocketing the bills slowly.

"Yes, sir," answered Talbot, respectfully. "I never trusts no banks, sir. When Mrs. Talbot—"

But this time Jocelyn did not attempt to cut his servant's story short.

"An' now, sir," continued Talbot, when his narration was concluded, "I beg to hoffer you my resignation, sir."

"What for?" cried Jocelyn.

"A mere matter of form, sir. Hotherwise, sir, some doubt might arise as to the validity of these papers, sir. Enceforth, sir, so long as hour arrangement lasts, I'll hask you to be my guest, sir."

"Talbot, you're a wizard," cried Lord Jocelyn enthusiastically. "That's the enterprise and initiative of America coming out on your stolid British demeanor, Talbot. What?"

"Yes," answered Talbot indifferently.

"So we're to be equals for so long as our arrangement lasts," said Jocelyn. "That suits me, my dear fellow. I'm positively sick of playing master and bein' 'sir'd' by you, and I'm going to give you as good a time as I know how. We'll dine together and take in a few theaters—" he paused a moment. "I mean, after my return from my honeymoon, of course. Oh, Talbot, if you knew how I adore her!"

"And meanwhile," said Talbot, "if I might make the suggestion, suppose we start to prepare a little dinner."

"I'll help you, Talbot," answered Lord Jocelyn. "Positively, Talbot, you're giving me more fun than I've had in a year. How do I lay the table? We want a cloth, don't we?"

"Yes, sir—I mean, yes, friend," answered his former servant. "Take off your coat and roll your sleeves up. Now put on that apron that's hanging there. That's to keep the grease off your clothes. That's right; let me fasten it behind. Now suppose you get the plates and cutlery out of that cupboard, and I'll go down to the 'all and hask the janitor whether that letter's got into the wrong box by accident."

Leaving Lord Jocelyn busily employed at his new diversion, Talbot went into his bedroom and quietly abstracted his frock coat and silk hat from a cupboard. Donning these, he made his way out of the apartment, first placing a piece of paper under the clapper of the electric bell. His calculations had been as close as they were shrewd, and he knew that the message which he had sent would bring Lena Schmidt and her mother post-haste to the Madison avenue apartment in order that the marriage might be completed before the opportunity could slip through their fingers. Talbot had seen the young woman on several occasions. Her blond, Teutonic beauty which Jocelyn raved over had seemed to him the transient prettiness of the dairymaid; that she was coarse-minded and calculating he knew; at all hazard he was resolved to save his master from the fatal error he contemplated, and he was ready to go all lengths in order to achieve his purpose. Talbot's English blood was "up," and once the phlegm of the British butler is aroused, little short of an earthquake or an avalanche can quiet it.

Talbot gained the hall and, opening the door of the vestibule, peered into the street. He had fitted his calculations to events admirably, for there, just rounding the corner of the block, he perceived Lena Schmidt, accompanied by an older woman, horrible example of her daughter's physical destiny, and both dressed in astonishing finery. Talbot hastened back into the apartment house, gained the head of the stairs and, standing there, heard the faint whirr of the electric bell against the paper under the clapper.

"My Gawd, it's now or never," said Talbot, gathering his master's frock coat over his ample bosom. He went back into the apartment.

"Any letter?" sang out Lord Jocelyn from within. "I've set the table. Come and see if it's right."

"One moment," Talbot responded. "Don't come out of the kitchen—there's somebody coming up the stairs; it may be a tradesman."

"Righto," Jocelyn answered. "I shouldn't care to be seen in my shirt-sleeves. Talbot, you were right about the grease; the butter fell down over my trousers."

"Indeed?" said Talbot, his heart beating as he heard the heavy foot-falls of his visitors upon the stairs. He heard Jocelyn stamping around in tained, for at that moment Jocelyn, hearing the voice of his betrothed, came hastening out of the kitchen, still wearing his apron.

"Lena!" he cried ecstatically.

"Young man," said Talbot pompously, "you will please defer your love-making until you get into the park. Go and make yourself decent and take your friends away."

"What does this mean?" screamed Mrs. Schmidt. "Dick, who is this man?"

"It would be more to the point if you would tell me what this means, madam," said Talbot. "I am not in the habit of entertaining my valet's visitors, and I do not encourage his receiving females here."

"We ain't females, we're ladies," screamed Mrs. Schmidt.

"Talbot, have you gone crazy?" demanded Jocelyn. "What are you doing in my frock coat? Get out of here. You're discharged."

"Ah!" said Talbot, shaking his finger. "Young man, you've been drinking again and this time you'll 'ave to go. Understand me? Pack up and go or I'll call in the police."

He turned to the women, who, wholly overcome by this astonishing scene, were retreating toward one corner of the apartment.

"I see now that you have been under an error," he said. "This foolish young man of mine evidently meant to hentertain you 'ere while I was away. I came back unexpectedly from a holiday this afternoon and—"

"I thought he was a lord," sobbed Lena, covering her face.

Talbot roared with laughter. "So 'e's been himpersonating me, 'as 'e? Why, ladies, Jocelyn's father was a stable boy, and—"

He got no further, for Jocelyn, at last recovering possession of his senses, seizing the handiest object, which happened to be a bottle of seltzer water, flung it at Talbot's head. Talbot ducked just in time and the bottle smashed against the wall behind him, breaking the glass of a picture and deluging the carpet with bubbling water. Then, as Jocelyn sprang toward him, Talbot snatched a chair and adroitly parried his former master's assaults with it. At last, gasping for breath, Jocelyn de-

And I thought he was a lord," sobbed Lena, passing through the door, which Talbot held open for her.

"A narrer escape, my dear," her mother answered. "Them fake lords is thicker than blackberries. It's back to the shop—I mean—my daughter has some purchases to make, you know, Earl Talbot." She wrung her hands. "O, if she hadn't been and bought such a big trousseau," she moaned, and so passed weeping out of the room.

Talbot stood beside the door, looking at his master, who, wholly overcome, had sunk dejectedly into a chair. He waited for him to speak, but since Lord Jocelyn said nothing, he drew from his pocket the lease of the apartment and the bill of sale, as well as the receipt. He tore them into four pieces and deposited them at Lord Jocelyn's elbow. Then, still silent, he removed the frock coat, took up the silk hat and, passing into the bedroom, replaced them in the cupboard. Next he donned his working coat, put together a few articles of his property in a battered satchel and came back, carrying it in his hand. He paused beside Lord Jocelyn's chair, took an envelope from his pocket, and handed it to him.

"Your letter, sir," he said.

Then Lord Jocelyn looked up and Talbot saw tears in his eyes.

"Good-bye, sir," said Talbot, gulping, and moved toward the door. But as he placed his fingers on the handle Lord Jocelyn called him.

"Where are you going, Talbot?" he asked.

"I'm going 'ome to Hengland, sir," answered his servant.

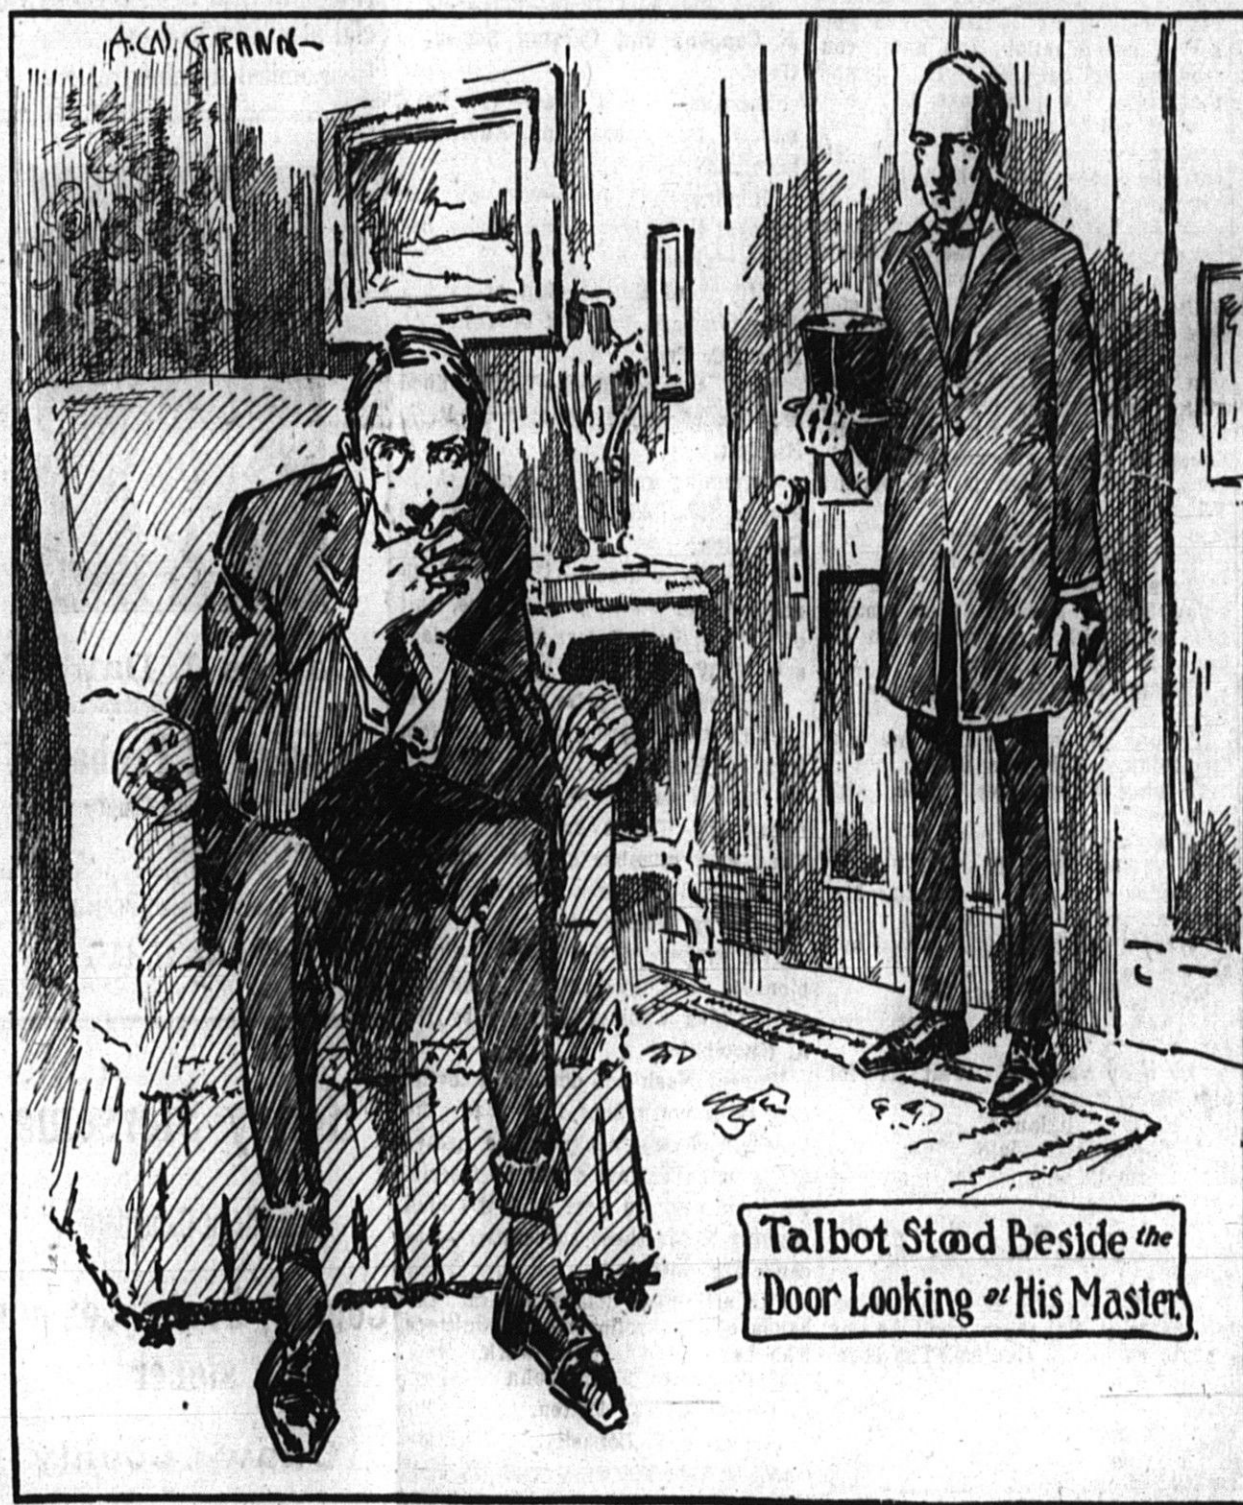

"Wait a minute, Talbot. Aren't you going to work for me any more?"

"You wouldn't want to re-engage me, sir?" Talbot stammered huskily.

"By the lord, wouldn't I?" cried Jocelyn, springing to his feet. "Talbot, you've done me a better service than any man has ever yet done for me."

"I'm glad to 'ear you say so, sir," said Talbot, dropping his satchel case. "Them was—pardon me—ussies, sir. They knew you was a lord, sir. Hi was honto their games, sir."

"Talbot," said Jocelyn, "why am I such a damned donkey?"

Talbot Stood Beside the Door Looking at His Master.

the kitchen as he sought the articles for the table; then two women turned the corner of the passage below and started to ascend the flight. Talbot closed the door softly.

Ping—gr—gr! went the electric bell within. Talbot strode to the door and stood before the visitors, to all appearance a heavy, prosperous Englishman, wearing the dignity acquired by many years of service in the fourth Viscount Jocelyn's family.

"Is Mr. Jocelyn in?" inquired Mrs. Schmidt sweetly.

"I believe Jocelyn is in, although it isn't his afternoon off," answered Talbot haughtily. "Walk in please. Go straight through, ladies; you'll find him in the kitchen."

"In the kitchen?" echoed Lena, rolling her on-ix blue eyes. "What is he doing there?"

"I really cannot say, madam," replied Talbot. "He doubtless knows his own business better than I do. He is probably washing my dishes."

"Washing your dishes?" re-echoed mamma. "And who are you, pray?"

"I have the honor to be Earl Talbot," replied Talbot haughtily.

"Why Dickie didn't tell me he was living with an earl!" exclaimed Lena in astonishment.

"Really, madam, I am not responsible for what my servants may or may not choose to say," Talbot answered with hauteur. "If you want to go in, you may."

What answer the petrified women would have returned cannot be ascerstated and stood facing Talbot, white with impotent rage.

"Poor fellow, poor fellow," said Talbot compassionately. "I took 'im from the Hinebrates' 'ome, ladies, hon his solemn promise never to touch liquor again. So 'e's been masquerading has a lord 'as 'e? Well, well, well, well!" He struck a dramatic pose. "The word of a Henglish beari 'as 'itherto been unquestioned," he said, "but being as you're furnurers—I mean Hamericans—perhaps you don't know that. If you will permit me, ladies, I will produce my lease of this apartment, hand halso the bill of sale for this 'ere furniture, hin proof of what I claim."

But the ladies, tossing their heads proudly, were already at the door.

"No, I thank you, Earl Talbot," said Lena Schmidt. "The disgraceful scene which I have seen—I should say witnessed—has altogether destroyed my once proud confidence in that monster of infamy. O, Mr. Jocelyn," she went on with a sob, "how could you have deceived me so?"

"As a rule," added her mother loftily, "we prefer not to mix up with common servants. Earl Talbot, I wish you a happy good afternoon."

"Stop! Stop!" cried Jocelyn, springing toward his inamorata. "Lena, for heaven's sake listen to me!"

"Back, misguided young drunken man," said Talbot, interposing a massive hand. "Trouble my guests no more. Your punishment is a fit reward for your perfidy."

"O, not that, sir. Perhaps, hif I might make so bold, a little bit of a—er—mule, sir. Hif's just Henglish hobstnacy, sir. Do you wish me to stay, sir?"

"You bet I do," said Jocelyn, grasping him by the hand. "And how Talbot, you old jackass, just wipe that seltzer water off the carpet and pick up those broken pieces of glass."

WIFE ROSE TO THE OCCASION

Man Could Meet Misfortune With Fortitude With Such a Help-mate to Cheer Him.

"I've got a little tale to tell by way of showing how the right kind of a woman meets trouble," said the traveling man who was getting gray. "I was there and saw it, so I know."

"You see, I had worked a good many years and had been successful in business in my small town, so that I saw a holiday ahead. I had been telling my wife as Christmas approached that we would take a holiday and a little trip. The little trip that I had in mind was nothing less than a tour of the Mediterranean. I had it all arranged to show her Christmas morning our tickets for the tour. We were to start on Jan. 9 and were to get home in April."

"I had $21,000 in the bank, and for a little town merchant I felt comfortable. The day before the time set for buying the tickets I was on my way home from the store, when the president of the bank called me across the street. He took me in and showed me a letter from his absent cashier saying that the writer would not return. The further information conveyed by the cashier was of a nature to warrant the bank's closing with some degree of permanence. A bank without money is rather a futile thing.

"That didn't cheer me up a bit. All my money was in that bank and the cashier had cleaned out the bank. It was easy to guess the answer."

"I went home, arriving a little late. My wife asked me what was the matter. I told her that a man came into the store just at closing time and kept me—just lied to her. She made no comment. After supper I soon turned in, and my wife went to sleep before I did."

"After a while she woke up and said: 'Are you asleep?'"

"I kept still."

"You're not asleep," she said. "How did you know?" I asked.

"By your breathing. Are you ill?"

"It's worse than that," I said. "What is it—trouble?"

"Yes, plenty of trouble. We're cleaned out, that's all. I deceived you this evening. I wasn't kept at the store. Fendall called me in on the way home to tell me that the bank's gone and all the money we had with it. Without that money I can't pay out and the business will have to close up."

"'Bad as that?' she asked."

"Yes, bad as that."

"What about that trip you were going to take—was it back to Pennsylvania or something like that?"

"No, it was a tour of the Mediterranean."

"Well, we might have been awfully senick. We've got old Billy and the buggy left, haven't we?"

"Yes, and a little more."

"Oh, well, we're not quite gone, she said."

"You're a plucky one!" I said. "She was asleep again in ten minutes."

"Talk about clear grit! She once scolded me for getting mixed up with a man who turned out crooked—she never blamed me once in all the years of struggle that followed. At a time of life when I had expected to be on Easy street I had to take to the road, and our lives have been a lot different and a lot less comfortable than they have been if I had had more foresight, but never once has she told me so. She seemed to have sense enough to know that a man's own knowledge of the facts, afterward, is as much punishment as he deserves, if not more."

"I believe in spite of the disappointment, that I've had more out of life than if I had quit and retired, satisfied with that small fortune."

"It was worth the money to find out how much grit my wife had."—Strickland Gillilan in Chicago News.

Fears Her Position is Gone.

The recent energy shown by the minister of finance in hunting out and cutting down sinecures of all kinds has roused perturbation in the mind of a humble, but little known, French functionary. This is the official lady's-maid attached to the wife of the prime minister. She is lodged, clothed and fed at the expense of the republic, and, in addition, receives 100 francs a month salary. But since the fall of the Combes cabinet in 1905 she has had nothing to do, for all the succeeding premiers have either been widowers, bachelors or divorced.

Carlyle's Antipathy Strong.

Carlyle had an inveterate hatred for Darwinism, which he described as the "gorilla damnification of humanity." Leonard Huxley, in his life of his father, recalls on incident that happened shortly before Carlyle's death. "My father," he writes, "saw him walking slowly and alone down the opposite side of the street, and, touched by his solitary appearance, crossed over and spoke to him. The old man looked at him, and merely remarking, 'You're Huxley, aren't you—the man that says we are all descended from the monkeys' went on his way."

More Like a Watersprout.

There is much interest for English people at the moment—though, perhaps, no particular comfort—in the announcement that the rainfall of a village among the hills of Assam during the ten weeks from May 1 to July 9 this year was 250 inches. The village is Cherrapunji, the rainiest spot in Asia, and presumably in the world. Its annual rainfall is something over 450 inches—say, fifteen times as much as London. Cherrapunji stands on a plateau, overlooking the plain of Sylhet, and it is 4,455 feet above sea-level.—London Tit-Bits.

Paid Debt in Person.

To accept a husband as payment for debt was the bargain made the other day by a Vienna landlady. A law clerk who boarded with her earned only $2 per week on which to keep himself while he pursued his university studies, and recently he found himself in her debt to the extent $40. Being a man of honorable inclinations and loath to defraud the woman of her money, but having no resources of any kind with which to meet the debt, he offered himself to the landlady as a husband in full settlement of all he owed.

Do you know who her grandfather was? Have you ascertained anything in regard to her pedigree? Those are things you ought to know about the woman you are to make your wife."

"Oh, hang her grandfather!"

"My boy, that's just what they did do."—Youth's Companion.

A GENUINE PROGRESSIVE MOVEMENT.

...A really "progressive" movement is the abandonment of the Roosevelt third party by many of those at first associating themselves with it. Not only is this movement progressive, but it is rapidly progressive, and the last week has accelerated it to a point where even such a radical Roosevelt organ as the Chicago Tribune has been compelled to recognize the growing tendency. The Tribune has now put the burden of proof on the colonel, where, it says, it rightly belongs, and it intimates rather broadly that he will be unable to carry it.

...It is a little surprising that anybody should be surprised at this development. It is now just a month since the Chicago convention adjourned, with the colonel sitting tight on the great majority of his delegates, standing pat on the proposition that if Taft was not to be defeated by Roosevelt he should not be defeated by anybody, and obstructing and thwarting all the efforts being made by many of his own followers to unite forces in the convention upon some man whose candidacy would appeal to all elements in the party. In that selfish action the colonel disclosed the insincerity of his own original purpose. His motive was then seen clearly to have been all along a personal and not a party or a public one. He was willing to split the Republican party, the party that made him and risk its defeat, in order to grasp at what he believed to be a prospect of his own personal success.

He deluded himself, and, for the moment, he deluded many others. But his action, in the crisis, was of that palpable bare-faced quality of selfishness which, after the tumult and the shouting die, needs but small time in which to soak in to that point where the reaction of disappointment and disgust is effected in the average man's consciousness. This soaking in has been the really progressive movement in politics during the last month. Along with the protest against his attitude in Chicago, has grown the conviction that his complaint of having been defrauded there rests on no stronger ground than that often heard after political conventions. In fact, he and his claimants were favored beyond precedent. All of the evidence in contested cases was heard in public and roll call after roll call showed the more responsible men in the committee among the progressives themselves, voting to seat the Taft delegates. There has been no basis for the Roosevelt movement. And there should be no surprise that Republicans of stature who had been counted upon to support it are now stampeding away from it. They have heard from the Republicans in town, city and country who have reached the conclusion that Mr. Roosevelt's thunderous attack upon Taft and his administration was made not for public ends but only to serve an insatiable personal ambition. Some of them have waited long enough to find the way the wind blows before declaring themselves, but they are declaring themselves now. The progressive movement has been "busted" by progressive thinking.

The split in the Michigan third party ought to make it the 3 1/2 party.

The cold weather having retarded the cucumbers in this vicinity assures a speech from Eugene V. Debs.

The latest drink is the "Bull Moose Cocktail" and it isn't made of milk either.

...So far as Bryan and T. R. are concerned, henceforth it is to be a battle between the Outlook and the Commoner.

Mr. Bryan remarks in his paper that he is among those who love Champ Clark. This affection was so dissembled at Baltimore that Mr. Clark still feels an aching void.

Bull Moose Sooy, say the Democrats are on the rocks and the Republicans are in the woods. Wrong again, there are no more woods.

Figures found in Madrid show that the eight-months voyage of Columbus during which America was discovered cost $7200. That real estate deal is cheaper than any Holland might boast of.

POLITICAL NOTES

One thing that has made those who have been thinking about casting their lot with the Bull Moose party think a second time is that if they finally decide to do this, they must enroll as Progressives on primary day, August 27th. In doing this they divorce themselves from the Republican party and cannot vote in the Republican primaries. They will therefore have no vote in the Republican contests for governor, congress man, county offices or legislative offices. Their vote will be confined to the hand-picked ticket which was made up for them at Jackson last Thursday.

Washington, July 31.—Senator La Follette attacks Col. Roosevelt in La Follette's weekly magazine, published in the west tomorrow. He says in part:

"Roosevelt, while he was president, offered no encouragement to the Progressive Republicans who were struggling with the old machine bosses to enact direct primaries and other progressive statutes. His influence was openly on the side of the reactionaries. His appointees were the most active agents of the opposition."

Until little more than one year ago, the Senator averred, Roosevelt had not even expressed himself as friendly to what had become "while he was in Africa," a widespread agitation so widely known as the Progressive Republican movement.

Milwaukee, July 31.—Senator Robert M. La Follette in a signed statement today makes a plea to progressive Republicans to sacrifice everything to maintain the progressive organization with the Republican party. He makes no suggestion as to which of the presidential aspirants deserves the support of the party, but says that Roosevelt is not the real progressive that is needed for president.

TAFT IN NOVEMBER

Many a Democrat has been elected in July, only to be buried under an avalanche of votes in November. Mr. Taft's prospects are now at their lowest ebb. First driven by treachery and shameful abuse to the extreme of undignified personal defence, then fought with unexampled bitterness in his contest for a deserved renomination, and now confronting not only an open detachment from his own ranks, but also a most resourceful and daring Democratic opponent, his record of accomplishments upon which he must ultimately rely is for the moment eclipsed. But the fact that few presidents have rendered more valuable service under trying conditions remains. Mr. Taft's fidelity, his conscientious endeavors, his singleness of unselfish purpose, his purity of intent, his noble achievements, are for gotten only for the time. They will be recalled with gratitude and emphasized with effect.—From Harper's Weekly, which is supporting Wilson.

HIS REGULAR FEE

"Lots of politics around," said the anxious-looking man to the complacent man with a newspaper on his knees in the street car.

"Plenty, sir—plenty," was the reply.

"Would you mind telling me how you think it will turn out?"

"I think we will get there with both feet."

"You do?"

"I certainly do. There is a wave of enthusiasm that is carrying him right along."

"Why, I didn't think he stood any show at all."

"No?" Well, you wait."

"I was told that the West was against him."

"My dear man, the West is for him bigger'n a house."

"But New England?"

"Whipping right into line. You don't seem to be up-to-date on the political situation."

"No, I don't read very much. Do you think the election will be close?"

"No, sir. He will have a thundering majority. No, there won't be any dispute as to the election. The country has made up its mind."

The anxious-looking man pondered for a moment, and then said:

"Come to think of it, you have mentioned no names. You have asserted that 'he' would get there."

"And 'he' certainly will."

"But do you refer to Taft or Wilson?"

"My dear man, I am a lawyer, and my regular fee for answering that question is $25. Do you wish it answered?"

"No, by thunder!" exclaimed the other. "I can go to a clairvoyant and get an answer for 50 cents!"

MORE RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE PROBATE JUDGE

The supreme court has handed down a decision to the effect that juvenile matters, shall be final. This means that there will hereafter be no appeal from the probate court when a decision has been reached by that court in disposing of a juvenile case. The finding of the supreme court adds another weight of responsibility and importance to the probate courts, and decisions made in cases against minors will require careful study and consideration, in order that justice may be done the young person interested and the public at large.

HOW IT FEELS TO LOOSE MONEY

The girl was very rich, and the young man was poor, but honest. She liked him, but that was all, and he knew it. One night he had been a little more tender than usual. "You are very rich," he ventured. "Yes," she replied, frankly. "I am worth $1,250,000."

ALL READY FOR BIG PICNIC

All arrangements are made for the big picnic given by the Marquette club at the Tennessee Beach this afternoon. The tennis court is converted into a base ball diamond and will also be used for all athletic events.

The Roast Committee will also do its best work in the dance hall, for during the quiet moments, Chairman Diekema and his cohorts will everlastingly pour the hot shot into the assembly. Automobiles will leave club rooms at 1:30 p. m. sharp.

ROBBINS' FINE CIRCUS

The great popularity of the Frank A. Robbins circus along his regular circuit is not to be wondered at after having seen the high class performance given in Hackensack last Monday night. SUTHERLAND'S EAGLE EYE SALVE
"Good for Nothing but the Eyes"

A very enjoyable night was spent Friday night at the home of Mrs. Hazel Jones. A company of 20 young ladies gathered for a miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Laura McClellan who will be an August bride.

A "missing contest" caused plenty of amusement, Miss Goldie Price finally carrying off the honors. Other contests were held in which Mrs. Mernice Mousel and Miss Clara McClellan won prizes.

A very unique scheme was carried out in presenting the presents which were numerous and useful. Light refreshments were served.

Thursday night at the home of the bride at 73 East Thirtieth street the marriage took place of Miss Anna Douma and Albert E. Lampen, Superintendent of the public schools of Saugatuck. Before the ceremony Miss Jennie Brouwer sang "Beloved, It is Morn." Mrs. Alle D. Zuidema of Detroit played the Swedish Wedding March. Llewellyn Du Mez carried the ring in a calla lily and Minnie Vanden Bosch and Majorie Esther Du Mez acted as flower girls carrying sweet peas.

The bride and groom took their places under an arch constructed by Ben Du Mez of ferns, daisies and hydrangeas decorated with red, yellow blue and white electric lights. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. D. R. Drukker, pastor of the First Christian Reformed church of Zeeland. They were unattended.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of embroidery lace over marquisette and carried a shower bouquet of roses and swansonia.

After the ceremony, Mrs. Robert Douma of Muskegon sang, "I Love You Truly" and "Grandmother's Advice," an old English ballad. Mrs. House of Saugatuck gave a number of recitations, Miss Jennie Brouwer sang, "Because" and Mrs. Alle D. Zuidema and Miss Matilda Notter gave an instrumental duet. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Douma of Muskegon were master and mistress of ceremonies.

The waitresses were Ida De Weerd, Gertrude Boot, Minnie Karrius, Mamie De Witt, the first three classmates of the bride, members of the graduating class of Holland High school of 1906.

During the month of August Mr. and Mrs. Lampen will take a wedding trip and in September they will go to their home in Saugatuck where Mr. Lampen will resume his work as superintendent of public school.

CIRCUS STAR BOUNCES DOWN STAIRS ON HEAD

Did you ever see a man walk down stairs on his head? Hillary Long, who will appear in Holland on August 6th, with the Frank A. Robbins. All Feature Shows, goes down a flight of stairs on his head twice a day, with as much ease as the average person walks down on his feet. He is the only person in the country today performing this act, and he has been secured by Mr. Robbins at great expense as the greatest feature of the greatest show that this veteran showman, whose name has been known to the public for thirty-two years, has ever put on the road. The show this year has been entirely rebuilt, with many new star acts and will give two performances here on the date mentioned, the first at 2 p. m. and the second at eight in the evening. The doors will be open an hour earlier in order to allow those who attend to have plenty of time to view the animals prior to each exhibition. The menagerie has been doubled in size over that of last year.

Saugatuck Boat Concern Puts in a Bid.

Smalley & Flint of Saugatuck expect to have their gravel scow ready for business about Sept. 1. They have submitted a bid on a job of hauling gravel for Ottawa county, which if secured will keep them busy for the next three years. It will be remembered that Ottawa county decided to spend a large sum of money on improving its roads and it is for this purpose the gravel is wanted.

At Pigeon Creek about half way between this city and Grand Haven some enterprising individual has started a factory to make oil of wintergreens. It was represented to us as being very simple and quite remunerative.

The woods are on fire and burning fierce at a great many places along the railroad between here and Grand Haven, and at several places all around us.

Last Thursday, Mrs. Zwiers, aged 40, a resident of Olive, was bitten by a rattlesnake. Everything was done to stay the poisonous effects of the reptile bite, but without success. She died Sunday morning.

The steamer "Queen of the Lakes" has carried, so we are told, twenty-five thousand and six hundred passengers since she commenced running on Macatawa Bay this season.

Dr. Van Putten has entered "Turk" the noblest trotter of them all, in the Allegan and Ottawa Circuit and none should fail to see him trot at the Races here, August 11 and 12.

A prominent business man told us this week that one of the officials of Holland City who is a staunch friend of the lightning rod and who was instrumental in securing the contract for the placing of rods on the school building was opposed to insurance of all kinds from "conscientious scruples," deeming it as trying to prevent the will of the Almighty, and still that man believes in putting rods on buildings as a protection against lightning. "Oh, consistency, thou art surely a priceless jewel."

A curiosity in the shape of a stone hatchet has been added to the collection of Indian relics on exhibition by Harry Doesburg. It was found by a miner in Bolivia who presented it to Dr. R. C. Saturday morning at about 4 o'clock fire was discovered in the rear portion of the Jenison Park hotel and two hours later the popular beach hostelry was in ruins.

The hotel was built about fifteen years ago and was one of the most popular of our resorts. The building was owned by Loomis Jenison of Jenison and his loss is variously estimated from $10,000 to $20,000. The loss to the guests ranges from $5,000 to $10,000.

MEMBERS OF LAST YEAR'S CLASS OF LOCAL SCHOOL HOLD PICNIC AT ALPENA BEACH.

The graduating class of 1911 of the local school for Christian instruction held their first annual reunion Friday afternoon and celebrated the event by going on a picnic to Alpena Beach. The boys and girls, 20 in number, that made up the class loaded themselves on a hayrack and the fun started right away. Miss Fannie Belt, for a number of years a favorite teacher of the class, accompanied the boys and girls as chaperon.

On the beach the class enjoyed a marshmallow roast and moreover there was plenty of other good things to eat. The afternoon was crowded with sports of various kinds and every member of the class voted that the reunion was most successful. There were two cameras in the company and a number of pictures were taken.

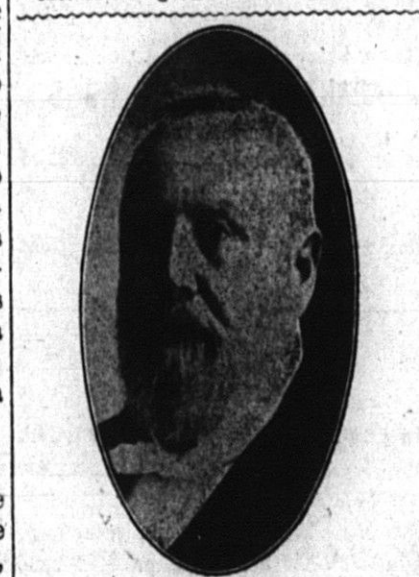

Those who took part in the picnic were:

Dena Kamphuis, Rolena Brink, Cornelia Kaasboek, Allie Van der Schel, Ada Plaggemars, Minnie Plaggemars, Bertha Slood, Dora Schermmer, Cathryn Jonkman, Wm. Rottschaffer, George Gebben, Sippe Houtman, George De Witt, Cornelius Steketee, George Prins, John Jellema, John Dykstra, Leonard De Vries, Dick Dieters.

E. J. HARRINGTON ONE OF CITY'S OLDEST CITIZENS.

Tuesday E. J. Harrington is quietly celebrating his 80th birthday anniversary at his home 89 East Ninth street. Mr. Harrington is one of the oldest residents of this city and has been closely connected with its growth from a little settlement of log houses to its present state.

Mr. Harrington was born in Onondago county, New York state, July 30, 1832. His parents moved westward and first settled in Allegan coming to this city with Dr. Van Raalte on his first trip through the forests in 1847.

The family first settled in Filmore township where Mr. Harrington grew to manhood. He was supervisor of that township during the Civil war also deputy provost marshal and Justice of Peace. Moving to this city he was elected Justice of the Peace and held that office for several years.

Mr. Harrington has also been closely connected with politics, serving as alderman of the First Ward and being elected mayor of the city in 1872 and again in 1873. Again in 1892, he was chosen mayor of the city and it was under his administration that the charter was revised and city enlarged. He was city attorney in 1868. Mr. Harrington was instrumental in getting the railroad lines into this city contributing largely to this cause.

For several years he conducted a dry goods and grocery store on the present site of the De Grondwet office. He also conducted stores on East Eighth street, building the first brick store building in the city shortly after the big fire.

Mr. Harrington is in the best of health and judging from appearances has many more years of activity ahead of him. Mrs. Harrington died just about a year ago. To them were born ten children, three of whom are living. Mrs. Lucy Ward of Grand Haven, Mrs. Ella Locher of this city and Herbert of Virginia Park.

MORE IS PAID FOR COAL THAN WINTER PRICES LAST WINTER.

This is the time of the year when prudent householders lay in the winter's supply of coal thus getting in to the game in time to take advantage of the summer prices which are usually lower than those charged in the heart of the cold season, but this year conditions have changed and there undoubtedly will be very many disappointed consumers. In the first place, coal is so scarce that it is barely obtainable not only in this city but throughout the country.

The dealers are not to blame for not having a supply on hand as they are still expecting coal ordered for delivery last April; rather the strike of the miners last spring. This strike caused the mines to be closed during the months of April and May and as all the coal which was above ground had been used last winter during the severe cold spell and no more was being mined none of the orders from dealers in the West have been fulfilled.

The great difficulty now is to get coal at all as practically all that is being mined is being used in the east and will be for a time to come. And as the dealers will be unable to obtain coal in any quantities at the lower prices coal will be sold at one straight price during the remainder of the summer, fall and winter months. The price of nut and mixed coal has been fixed at $8.40; $8.15 for stove and egg, and $7.90 for grate. It is very probable that these prices will continue during the entire winter. These same grades of coal a year ago sold for nut $7.75; and egg and stove $7.50 a difference in price of 65 cents a ton. The winter prices of last year were for nut $8 and stove $7.75.

This city has been very fortunate in never experiencing a real famine in coal. This was especially noticeable last winter. While in very many cities throughout the country factories were forced to shut down because of the lack of coal this city was fairly well supplied. Although the supply was limited at no stage was there danger of a famine. And while in other cities dealers were getting as high as $12 and $15 a ton for their coal in this city the highest price paid was ten dollars and only a very small amount at that price. The average price paid for coal last winter in this city was between $7 and $8 although dealers who had coal were offered as high as $12 a ton for the coal just as it stood in the cars.

And to make a bad matter worse coming at this time when coal is so scarce there is also a scarcity of cars for delivery. Coal dealers order their coal for spring delivery and thus have their main supply on hand before the crops are harvested and the demand for cars becomes so great.

HAROLD McLEAN TO TAKE FIVE YEAR COURSE IN SCIENTIFIC FARMING

Harold McLean, one of this year's graduates from the High school, has decided to take a five year course in scientific farming, specializing in the large fruits. He left recently for Watervliet, where he takes his first year in practical farming and fruit growing on the farms of R. H. Sherwood. Mr. Sherwood is himself a college graduate, and has long been recognized as a leader in the development of the fruit growing industry of this state.

Harold's life thus far in home, school and church is an earnest of a useful and successful future.

Road Commissioners May Use Crushed Stone

The board of county road commissioners have rejected all bids for the furnishing of gravel for the county road system except that of Walsema & Van Tol of Grand Haven and the bid of that local firm has been held over for future consideration. All bids submitted were considered by the commissioners to be altogether too high. In fact it is said that the price asked for gravel are nearly as high as those asked for crushed stone or macadam, and unless a better price can be secured, the board may decide to use crushed stone for the roads after all. As a matter of fact the crushed stone roads call for state reward of $1,000 per mile bring only five hundred dollars. With the high price of gravel a number of the commissioners feel that Ottawa county could better afford to build the stone roads.

Considerable comment was made about the high prices asked for the gravel, and it is even hinted, it is said, that there was evidence of a combination on the part of the gravel people to hold up the prices. Between now and the time for holding the next meeting the matter will be thoroughly sifted and unless some different arrangement can be made, the change to other material is liable to be made.

Pension for the rest of his natural life on a case of beer a week is the reward received by R. E. Wedge for promptly returning $8,000 in currency that had been lost. The gift was made to Wedge by a brewing company and is made out in order form on the brewery's stationery, the order stating that the bill has already been paid in full. Wedge, who is 26 years old, had been a driver for the American Express Co. for six years. The money was in the bank book of the brewery company and had been lost on the street while a messenger was on the way to make the deposit. Wedge picked the wallet up, and immediately returned it to the owners. Luckily Wedge does not live in Holland otherwise he would be compelled to take his weekly case to the jungles.

No More Chance to Get On the Primary Ballot

At 4 o'clock Saturday the entries in Ottawa county's political race was closed. As far as can be ascertained today all the petitions for places on different party tickets are in.

The Socialists and the Prohibitionists have put up practically a full county ticket this year, but no Bull Moose candidates have as yet come up on an independent ticket in this county, although some of the candidates are said to be adherents of the fighting "Teddy", and will campaign for nomination on that platform. The petitions of the candidates for the state senatorial nomination were sent directly to Lansing. The candidates for this honor on the Republican side are Joseph W. O'Brien and Dr. Edward Hofma of Grand Haven. Olaf J. Hansen of Holland and a member of the recent grand jury will be a candidate for the senatorial job on the Socialist ticket.

The Democratic candidates for the state legislature are Herman Van Tongeren of Holland of the first district and Berend Kamps, mayor of Zeeland from the second district; Morris Buck, who petitioned for the nomination of county surveyor on the Democratic ticket, has filed notice with the county clerk to withdraw his petition which was filed without his consent. His name will therefore not appear on the ballot.

FIFTEEN OF THEM ENJOY THEMSELVES ON WM. ORR'S LAUNCH.

Due to the kindness of W. H. Orr, fifteen Holland business men Thursday enjoyed the time of their lives and incidentally laid up a store of good health acquired in the bracing air of Black Lake. Mr. Orr took the businessmen for a fishing trip in his boat Idella and every minute of the afternoon and evening was crowded full of genuine enjoyment.

The half holiday that the merchants and clerks of a number of Holland stores are enjoying each Thursday gave the opportunity for the outing. Mr. Orr put his launch at the disposal of a number of his friends and they took advantage of it from 1 o'clock till about 10 at night. Leaving at one o'clock the party too a spin on Lake Michigan but the waves there were of such a size that fishing proved impossible. The party therefore went to the favorite fishing spots of some of the veteran fishermen among them and for hours the white bass came thick and fast. Nick Hoffman of the Boston Restaurant was present and he soon had two frying pans in commission while two of the party cleaned the fish.

A fish supper in the cabin was only one of the features of the excursion. The Idella is equipped with many of the comforts of a home and the business men had the run of it for the afternoon. They made themselves at home. Austin Harrington took the prize in number of fish caught, while J. B. Mulder was a close second. The booby prize was given to Herman Van Tongeren who was so busy thinking of how to conduct his campaign for the legislature that he did not as much as get a strike and fished all afternoon with the same minnow.

Grand Rapids, July 26—These are busy days at Jenison park. A number of large picnics are scheduled. The Young Peoples' societies of the Legrand St. Christian Reformed church yesterday held their annual picnic at the park about 200 young people making the trip on the Holland interurban. A program had been prepared and a general field day was held. Thursday, August 1, the Grandville Avenue Improvement association will hold its annual picnic at Jenison park. This will mean a crowd of at least 1,000. All places of business on Grandville avenue will close on that day and the residents of that vicinity will attend. August 6, the Hibernians and the Knights of Columbus will hold a field day at the park, insuring an attendance of about 1,000. August 8, the Grand Rapids grocers will hold their picnic, and the same day the Hamilton-Ivanrest Improvement association will spend the day at the park. August 15, the Holland Aid society of Grand Rapids will hold its annual picnic.

His Record is An Open Book

The work of the Probate Court in closer contact with the home than that of any other public office. This is true in the matter of estates of deceased persons, mentally incompetent, spendthrifts and minors. Insane, feeble-minded and epileptic cases, Delinquent, neglected and dependent children. Granting permits to minors to work. Adoption of minors. Appointment of guardian for habitual drunkards. The home and you as an individual are vitally interested in these matters, and during Judge Kirby's administration of the office he has always been too considerate of the feelings of the people coming into court to give these matters out for newspaper publication. He has always made out practically all papers in probate matters free of charge, thus saving large expense to those dealing with the court. Life is uncertain. Your estate may have to be handled by the Probate Judge in the next four years. Judge Kirby solicits your vote on August 27.—Pol. Adv.

Hundreds of Holland Citizens Can Tell You All About It.

Home endorsement, the public expression of Holland people, should be evidence beyond dispute for every Holland reader, of the merit of Doan's Kidney Pills. Surely the experience of friends and neighbors, cheerfully given by them, will carry more weight than the utterances of strangers residing in far-away places. Read the following:

Gerrit Doesburg, printer, 25 West Fourth Street, Holland, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for years and have received satisfactory results. I first procured this remedy some years ago at Doesburg's Drug store, as I had been afflicted for years with kidney trouble and pains in my back. Doan's Kidney Pills were certainly effective, living up to all the claims made for them. I shall always be pleased to recommend this preparation."

Former Neighbors Die Within One Week of Oneanother.

J. Hoogenstein, a former Holland resident died in Grand Rapids, Friday. The funeral was held Monday afternoon at that place. He is survived by the widow, three daughters Nellie, Anna and Edna and two sons Roy and Jack; four brothers, Roy, Albert, Hovort and Cornelius Hoogenstein, and his parents, living in this city.

One coincidence in connection with the death of Mr. Hoogenstein is the fact that his former neighbor in this city Robt. Wareham also died the same week, only a few days previous. Hoogenstein was an employee of the De Groot office years ago. Later he was employed by the Cappon-Bertsch Leather Co. Mrs. Hoogenstein is a sister to John Kramer in the Holland postoffice and also to Mrs. Henry Cronkright of this city.

Fred Dyke, formerly of this city, has taken a position with Carson, Pierre Scott & Co., of Chicago. He is on the road covering Indiana with headquarters at Indianapolis.

WAS HIS OWN LAWYER

In Justice Robinson's court Friday afternoon John A. Vander Veen proved that he should have got himself admitted to the bar so that he might have made a name for himself in the legal profession. When Vander Veen was told some time ago to appear in court on the charge of violating a state law in regard to selling firecrackers of larger than a certain size he decided that he was as good a lawyer as any. Instead of hiring high legal authority to defend him in the suit he decided to plead his own case and do his own spell binding of the jury.

Friday afternoon the case was tried. After some difficulty a jury was chosen composed of C. Blom, C. Fris, John Karreman, Joe Borgman, Lew Bouman and P. Raffenaud. Prosecuting Attorney Louis H. Osterhaus represented the people and the case aroused a good deal of interest because of the attorney for the defense.

Although this was his first attempt as a lawyer Vander Veen handled his case well. He cross-examined the witnesses and succeeded in bringing out all the points that were in his favor in such a way that the jury saw his side of the case. The principal witness against Vander Veen was Nick Van Slooten who was arrested on the Fourth of July on the charge of shooting a cracker that was larger than legal size. Van Slooten testified that he had secured the firecracker in Vander Veen's store but a number of witnesses for the defense swore that they had heard Mr. Vander Veen refuse to sell firecrackers larger than legal size in a number of cases.

The jury was out only a short time and brought in a verdict of not guilty.

MORE LIFE BOATS ON LAKE CRAFT IS RULE

Lake Michigan's big steamers must be equipped with lifeboats and life-saving apparatus sufficient to provide for every person on board, except between May 15 and September 15, when the equipment need only be sufficient for carrying 30 per cent, in conformity with the government's new regulations. River vessels must have life-boats capacity to accommodate at one time 10 per cent of all persons on board.

As a result of the new and stringent rules, boat owners are protesting. The regulations are the outgrowth of the Titanic disaster and the government inspection department announces that they will be enforced. Some of the lake passenger-carrying boats have already the equipment to meet the drastic demands of the government service, but others will be compelled to make a considerable outlay for life-boats and other life saving device.

All Classes Included
The new rules include ocean-going, lake, sound, harbor and river craft. Trans-Atlantic steamers are not included, as the British board of trade had supervision, but failed to enforce the already drastic requirements.

The text of the new regulations which have just been received from Washington, in so far as it applies to lake steamers, is as follows:

For the purpose of proportioning lifeboat and life-craft equipment, steam vessels under the jurisdiction of the steamboat inspection service, now in service or under construction shall be classified in accordance with the service in which they are engaged, the various classifications to be designated as follows:

Lake, Bay and Sound Steamers—Under this designation shall be included all steamers navigating the northwestern lakes, other bays, and sounds.

Half May Be Collapsible
Lifeboats required—All steamers, other than steamers carrying passengers, except as otherwise provided for, must be equipped with sufficient lifeboat and life craft equipment to accommodate all persons on board. One-half of such equipment may be in approved lifeboats or collapsible.

Lake, bay and sound steamers carrying passengers must be equipped with sufficient lifeboat and life-craft capacity to accommodate at one time all persons on board, including passengers and crew; provided, however, that such steamers navigating during the year from May 15 to Sept. 15, will be required to be equipped with only such lifeboat and life-craft capacity as will be sufficient to accommodate at one time 30 per cent of all persons on board; including, however, that such steamers, lying at all points within a distance of five miles from land, over waters whose depths are not sufficient to entirely submerge the vessel, will from May 15 to Sept. 15 be required to be equipped with such lifeboat and life-craft capacity as will be sufficient to accommodate at one time 10 per cent of all persons on board, including passengers and crew; three-fourths of the lifeboat and life-craft equipment on lake, bay and sound steamers may be approved lifeboats or collapsible lifeboats.

WHY I BUY AT HOME

Because this is the place I make money and this is the place to spend it.

Because my interests are here.

Because I believe in transacting business with friends.

Because the community that is good enough for me to live in is good enough to buy in.

Because I want to see the goods.

Because I want to get what I pay for.

Because every dollar I spend at home stays at home and works for the development of the city.

Because the man I buy from stands back of the goods.

Because I sell what I produce here at home.

Because the man I buy from pays his part of the city and county taxes.

Because the man I buy from helps support my school, my church, my lodge and my home.

Here is where I live and here is where I buy.

THE COST OF DYING

Sometimes Michigan thinks it gets a bit of money from an inheritance tax, but down in old New York the estates of John Jacob Astor and Isidor Straus, Titanic victims, will pay $6,000,000, or near that to the state.

Over in England, however, they beat this. The two Coates, James and Archibald, of thread fame, left an estate of about $16,000,000, and of this England took nearly $2,500,000 as death dues, or about 15 per cent.

The cost of living may worry the poor; but it is the cost of dying that makes the rich appreciate that they, too, are amenable to a government that is of the people and for the people—afterward.

"BLUE MOOSE"

Our Democratic friends ridicule the title "Blue Moose" for the progressives.

During the Revolutionary war "Yankee Doodle" was invented by the British as a term for ridicule of the American colonists; but "Yankee Doodle" is a national and patriotic tune.

In the national campaign of 1840, the "log cabin" and "hard cider" and the "coon skin" were used by the Democrats as terms of derision. They are now historical terms, and of great significance.

You never can tell. While there is life there is hope.

Horse Stolen

Sheriff Andre scoured the country as far as Coopersville yesterday to locate a horse owned by John Hantz of Crockery township, which was reported stolen. The animal was staked out in a field, and when the owner went to bring it in, no trace could be found of it. The officers are still in investigating the so called theft, but are of the opinion that after all the animal may have broken away and wandered off, to be taken in by some farmer.

The pall bearers will be Frank Bertsch of Macatawa, Edward T. Bertsch and Charles Bertsch of this city, Robert Ayres and Harley Bertsch of Grand Rapids; and Fred Bertsch of Chicago.
