Ordinances Presented To Council

After hearing a report from the city attorney on four ordinance amendments, City Council Wednesday night set Sept. 14 as date for public hearing on the proposed changes.

One would rezone a parcel of property owned by the Board of Education on the south side of East Ninth St. near the C and O tracks from residential to C-2 highway commercial.

Another would rezone areas in the southwestern part of the city near Graafschap from agricultural and suburban residential to A-O one-family residential.

The third would define use of open land athletic or recreational uses such as swimming, tennis or golf clubs, plus certain requirements on size of building, offstreet parking and the like.

The fourth would amend certain requirements of A-O one-family residential areas on building height, setback, side-yard and rear yard, and lot area and width.

Council changed the meeting of Sept. 15 to the previous day, Tuesday, Sept. 14, because of the annual meeting of the Michigan Municipal League which will be held in Grand Rapids Sept. 15-17. Mayor Nelson Bosman and Mayor Pro Tem Bert Slag were designated as official and alternate representatives of Council at the meeting.

Council set Sept. 14 as date for public hearing in a request of Holland-Suco Color Co. to vacate 100 feet of 21st St. lying east of Columbia Ave.

A petition requesting water service on East 16th St. from Hope Ave. east to 1375 East 16th St. was referred to the city manager for report.

A communication from the State Water Resources Commission giving information on projects eligible for aid under the Federal Water Pollution Control Act was referred to the Board of Public Works. Interceptor sewers are eligible under certain conditions, and the letter recommended that officials review plans with representatives of the commission. In all, federal funds for Michigan total $2,950,000.

The Planning Commission reported to Council concerning the purchase request of city property at 604 Pleasant Ave. recommending that the property be sold inasmuch as there is no future need for this property. It was referred to the city manager who said conditions of sale probably would follow the usual lines of competitive bids, accepting no bids lower than appraisals, and removing the present structure from the lot.

A claim against the city from Cornell Candea of Detroit was referred to the insurance carrier and the city attorney.

On recommendation of the city manager, Council amended requirements in police department personnel to restore a position as clerk typist I. This position had been inadvertently eliminated when a former recommendation called for reclassifying a clerk typist I to clerk typist II in connection with the drivers' licensing program.

The city manager reported on water main projects in Heather Dr. from Black Bass Ave. to Old Orchard Rd. and in Breco Ct. Public hearings were set Aug. 18 at 7:30 p.m.

In answer to a question of Councilman Bertal Slag on rough railroad crossings, City Clerk D. W. Schipper said three representatives from the Grand Rapids C and O office were in Holland last Friday and inspected all crossings in the city. They said a letter on their findings would be forthcoming before next Council meeting.

Councilman Hollis Clark asked about library parking and was assured work would begin soon after Council took over property west of the library Aug. 15. Clark also asked about proposed police and fire facilities and City Manager Herb Holt said he believed preliminary plans were adequate for proceeding with financing but that lots more study would be made on future plans.

James Bradbury asked whether Council had made any decision on recommendations of the Jaycee Report on Juvenile Problems, particularly on the first recommendation on establishing a child protective agency. Mayor Bosman said Council was still studying the report and had made no decisions.

Wednesday's meeting lasted only 35 minutes. All Councilmen were present except Morris Peerbolt. Councilman Eugene Vande Vusse gave the invocation.

House guests of Mr. and Mrs. Max Fields and family, 625 East Lincoln Ave., Zeeland, are her sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Cowen, of Columbus, Ohio.

The 40-year-old newsman has learned a lot about America during his seven weeks here . . . in fact, enough to become quite confused which puts him in the same class as most Americans.

When he gets back to his desk in Groningen he probably will regard American news developments in another light. Never a severe critic of American policy, he probably will be even more prudent in his future editorials.

It is his first visit to America, but he was well prepared since he knows his English well. In fact, he had no trouble understanding the American brand of

Council Tables BPW Water Plan

City Council Wednesday night tabled for further study a recommendation of the Board of Public Works to extend water service to the Federal school district at rates double those of Holland city.

The Board of Public Works made the recommendation after studying what the city's water policy should be in this area after receiving several individual requests for water service.

Council requested such a study after receiving such a request from First Michigan Bank and Trust Co. of Zeeland for water service to its branch bank in Federal area. Council had tabled the bank's request until a study was made and policy recommendation given. But after tabling the policy recommendation, Council voted to take the bank request from the table and granted it subject to the 200 per cent fee plus a hookup charge equal to what a city resident would pay in obtaining similar service.

In its communication to Council, the Board of Public Works pointed out that Federal district is more or less isolated from the rest of Holland township by virtue of Black River and is not shown as being included in the water service area outlined by their engineers.

The policy also recommended that the customer would pay a connection charge based on frontage per foot of 75 per cent of the cost of improvement adjusted to a six-inch main, similar to city costs, provided the customer makes connection to an existing distribution main.

In cast a customer is not on an existing main and an extension is required, it would be done at the expense of the township and assessed to the property owner, the city to operate and maintain the system.

Councilman Richard W. Smith asked whether water service to this area would present any great drain on the water system. Mayor Nelson Bosman thought not, citing that 200 customers in the area are already receiving city water and there are only 350 in the entire area. Federal area is bordered by Fairbanks Ave., 16th St., Waverly Rd. and Black River. It is surrounded by the city of Holland on three sides. The 200 per cent rate has been in effect for quite some time.

Sewage Plant Killed Fish

The Zeeland sewage disposal system was listed today by the Michigan Water Resources Commission as responsible for the death of 4,000 fish in Black River during May, conservation officer Harold Bowditch said today.

Bowditch said the death of the fish occurred when the disposal system was changing from a primary to a secondary sewage system and the bacteria consumed the oxygen of the water resulting in the death of the fish.

Dave Weaver, fisheries biologist in Grand Rapids for the Michigan Conservation Department, worked on the fish kill with Bowditch and reported findings to the Water Resources group.

Bowditch said the fish kill started where New Groningen creek enters Black River at 104th Ave., near the American Legion Memorial Park golf course and continued on below 120th Ave.

Included in the loss were 600 large and smallmouth bass, 120 northern pike, 2,472 carp, 1,212 suckers and 69 crappies plus several shad and panfish.

Study Outlined At Rotary Meet

Objectives of an area-wide vocational education study were outlined by Donald Gebraad for members of Holland Rotary Club at their Thursday noon meeting in the Hotel Warm Friend.

Gebraad, director of vocational education for Holland, West Ottawa, and Zeeland, is conducting a study in the southern half of Ottawa county to gather information to be used for offering appropriate vocational and technical courses, along with necessary facilities, in public schools throughout the area. Ab Martin of General Electric Co. is industrial consultant for the project.

The study includes a review of vocational education opportunities for girls as well as boys and for the physically handicapped. The need of agricultural courses in addition to industrial and commercial is also being investigated.

Gebraad said the need of a vocational education high school in the area is being evaluated. If this school does become a reality, students would attend on a part-time basis, and would be enrolled at and graduate from their regular high school.

He also mentioned a new exchange program in vocational education which will be instituted this fall between Holland and West Ottawa High Schools. Holland will offer a course in electronics and industry and West Ottawa will teach power mechanics. This will enable both schools to provide greater vocational education opportunities at minimum cost.

Christians Grow
Through Worship
Mark 1:35; Acts 2:46-47;
Hebrews 10:19-25
By C. P. Dame

Some Christians grow and some do not. Christians who grow pray and worship. Neglect prayer and worship, and growth ceases. This lesson history teaches.

I. Jesus prayed much. Mark says that early in the morning Jesus went to a solitary place to pray. After a busy sabbath day Jesus was tired. On the day following He realized His need of fellowship with God. Jesus believed in work and prayer. All Christian workers need to pray much in order to be at their best.

Jesus was at this time at the home of Simon Peter. In the morning he and the other disciples missed Jesus and went to search for Him and found Him and said, "Every one is searching for you." Jesus suggested that they go to the next town and preach there. He was thinking about the new work for which He most likely was praying.

II. Worship is important. The second part of the lesson text is from the Book of Acts. It describes the early church. Believers daily worshipped in the temple—praying and witnessing and studying the Bible. They felt the need of fellowship. They broke bread from house to house. Some think that they celebrated the Lord's Supper from house to house, while others think they met to eat their meals together. It is possible that they first celebrated the Lord's Supper and then had a common meal. These believers were joyful, we read that they "partook of food with glad and generous hearts, praising God." Conversions followed. When believers talk and walk as redeemed people, God saves souls. Congregations should study themselves to find out whether they are meeting God's conditions for conversions.

III. Attending church is God-ordained. The Old Testament sacrifices were ineffective to cleanse the consciences of men. The sacrifice of Christ is efficacious and final and that is the reason why the writer exhorts the readers to hold fast the new benefits and privileges. In the Temple a veil separated the Holy Place from the Most Holy Place into which the High Priest entered with blood once a year. When Jesus died the veil was rent in two (Matthew 27:51). Through the death of Jesus the barrier between man and God was removed and sinful man can now fellowship with God.

Three times the words "let us" appear in the text. We are exhorted to "draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience and our bodies washed with pure water." We are to worship with consecrated minds and hearts. The next exhortation is a summons to "hold fast the profession of our faith." We must stick to the basic doctrines. Do not let church mergers downgrade Reformation principles.

Thirdly we are called to incite each other to love and to do good works. We are also warned against neglecting church attendance. Many church members go to church but irregularly—only about thirty percent of church members go faithfully. Catholics have a better record than Protestants. These absentee church members hurt themselves, their fellow church members, and the Church. In most Protestant churches the evening services have stopped—and the midweek prayer meetings are out of date. Why? Spiritual weakness is the answer. We need a revival.

AMERICAN COOKOUT—A group of Japanese students attending a summer session at Hope College were introduced to American hamburgers at an outdoor cookout Wednesday at the home of Councilman and Mrs. Richard W. Smith. Bill and Rick Smith are in the foreground. Seated are Makiko Matsugaki, Yokozumi and Fumiko Eda. Standing are Kuniko Matsushita, Mrs. Smith, Richard Smith, Sachiko Ideta and Susan Van Wyk. The latter is a daughter of the Rev. Gordon Van Wyk, Reformed Church missionary who is serving as director of the exchange program in which groups of 35 Japanese students are attending summer sessions at Hope College, Western Michigan University and San Jose State. Japanese Girls Enjoy Adventure in Cookouts

Japanese students attending summer school at Hope College are finding life in America most interesting.

A chance meeting in a local church led Councilman Richard W. Smith to invite a group to tour General Electric where he is employed and then to join his family in an outdoor cookout at his home at 252 East 24th St. on Wednesday.

Wearing Japanese kimonos, the girls caused quite a stir at the General Electric plant. Posing for pictures was another thrill and when each visitor received a pair of wooden shoes with her name engraved, the enthusiasm was boundless.

The girls are among 35 Japanese students attending a five-week intensive American study program at Hope College. The Rev. Gordon Van Wyk, a Reformed Church missionary to Japan, helped organize the program, and his daughter, Susan, who will be a sophomore at Hope College in the fall, is one of four assistants hired by the local college to assist the group socially and academically.

Rev. Van Wyk explained that the Japanese program started as an exchange program between Hope College and Meiji Gakuin University in Tokyo and since has spread to 15 Japanese universities and college. The exchange program this year has three groups of 35 students each at summer schools in San Jose, Calif., Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo and at Hope College.

Of the more than 100 visiting students, 40 are from Meiji Gakuin University and of these 40, 25 are at Hope College.

In Holland, students will spend the next two weeks in private homes seeking to learn the American way of life. Then they will tour parts of the country before returning to Japan. Among places in their itinerary will be Niagara Falls, Washington, D.C., Texas, Grand Canyon. They had flown from Japan to Sacramento, Calif., and then came to Holland by bus.

At the Smith home, the girls ate American hamburgers with all the trimmings and said they loved American food, a change from their regular diet of rice, eggs and fish. They particularly liked the large yards which go with American homes and envied the open spaces which are a sharp contrast to crowded Japan.

American furniture is something new, and they puzzled over a living room chair which both rocked and swiveled. Tipping the chair over and examining the mechanism was another lesson in American know-how, and the girls demonstrated how Japanese sit in their own living rooms. Badminton and croquet (they pronounced it crockett) were new outdoor activities.

Young people in Japan have turned to western dress in recent years but all of them have kimonos and wear them on special occasions.

None of the girls knew each other in Japan, but five weeks in travel, study and dormitory life have formed friendships designed to be life-long.

"SAFETY ON THE HIGHWAY"

Recently the Senate held hearings on the Federal Government's role in highway safety. Executives of the large auto firms were present and came in for considerable criticism. The criticism centered on the question whether safety items should be installed only if they sell, or whether they should be installed simply because of their safety features.

The senators, including Ribicoff and Kennedy, argued for the latter point of view. They showed real concern over the industries' lack of leadership in the matter of safety. They felt that waiting for customer's acceptance, or placing an item of safety on the optional list, was detrimental to the program of safety on the highways.

We agree with the senators. If we were to wait for public acceptance of safety measures in all areas, we would find homes still running sewage into the streets. The General Services Administration has listed 17 safety features that it will require on 1967 model passenger vehicles purchased by the Government. These include padded dash boards and visors, impact-absorbing steering wheel and column, dual-brake systems, back-up lights, and outside rear-view mirror. According to Senator Ribicoff, all the 17 features could be added as standard items on all cars at a cost of about $100 a car. It seems simply a matter of prudence that this should be done. We can't wait for public acceptance. Safety on the highways ought not to be in the category of the choice of a soap or cereal.

Last year there were 22,000 traffic accidents in the United States, more than 3,000,000 injuries, and 47,700 deaths. If this doesn't call for action, we are at a loss to know what will. No one likes to have more federal action to force certain safety items. And we won't have to have this, if only the industry takes the lead in the matter of safety. And that means putting the safety items into every car.

10,000 See Boat Parade In Saugatuck

SAUGATUCK — Rain and a power failure at 7:10 p.m. made no difference to the enthusiasm for the annual Saugatuck Venetian Festival Saturday with about 10,000 persons attending the event.

An emergency meeting of the committee and Bud Austin, general chairman, was held about 6:30 p.m. to determine if the boat parade would be held. The power failure at 7:10 p.m. also complicated the already taut situation with restaurants crowded for the supper hour. A transformer which caused the blackout was restored about 7:45 p.m.

The pram and lightning boat races were held as scheduled Saturday afternoon and the three jet planes made two passes over Saugatuck to open the festival at 12:45 p.m. Only events actually cancelled were the skydivers and the outdoor musical.

Winning the awards for the Venetian Parade were "Hullabaloo," Robert Weller's Saugatuck boat, first; "Christmas in July," Clyde Battjes of Grand Rapids, second and "The Viking Ship," Dr. Paul Wilkinson of Kalamazoo and entered by Ox-Bow, honorable mention. Among the judges were Peter Baker of the Lansing State Journal, former Holland Evening Sentinel staffer.

Coast Guard Will Celebrate 175 Years of Service Aug. 4

Holland Coast Guard Station No. 271 will mark the 175th anniversary of the founding of the U.S. Coast Guard with an open house from 9 a.m. until 8 p.m. on August 4.

The Holland station operates from a spic and span cluster of white buildings on Ottawa Beach Rd. near Baker's Landing, on the shore of Lake Macatawa.

The station operates year around to provide marine law enforcement and emergency search-and-rescue service for the Holland area. This includes all of Lake Macatawa, and Lake Michigan from Port Sheldon to about eight miles south of Saugatuck — and as far out on the lake as the trouble is.

Other stations in South Haven and Grand Haven handle Coast Guard duties on either side of this area.

The Coast Guard was organized as the Revenue Marine in 1790, under orders of the first Secretary of the Treasury, Alexander Hamilton. It was founded to help stamp out smuggling along the coast of the newly founded Union that robbed her of needed revenues.

For eight years, until the regular Navy was organized in 1798, the ten tiny ships of the Revenue Marine were the nation's sole naval force.

Over the course of 175 years, the Coast Guard has become a far-flung force of thousands of ships, planes and stations—and the duties of the Guard have expanded right along with its strength.

The Coast Guard still holds smugglers in check, but now it also protects life at sea with search-and-rescue operations, buoys, weather ships, lighthouses and ice patrols, enforces Federal laws on the high seas and in all navigable waters of the United States, and is a part of the Armed Forces, available for direction by the Navy or the President in wartime.

The Coast Guard also is active in marine research and oceanography, and international treaty enforcement, and maintains a patrol off the coast of communist Cuba to pick up refugees and maintain stability in the Caribbean. The patrol has picked up more than 8,000 refugees in the seven years of its operation.

The Coast Guard is presently progressing on modernization plans to streamline the service with the addition of newer ships and aircraft, and consolidation and expansion of shore stations. The plans are scheduled to be carried out by the mid-1970's.

George Baum, Boatswain's Mate First Class and officer in charge of the local station, said that the station maintains two boats, a 30-foot utility boat capable of 20 knots (nautical miles per hour), and a 36-foot motor life boat. The motor life boat has five large watertight compartments and a lead keel to keep it upright in heavy seas.

The station also operate an AM short-wave radio, and is in the process of constructing an 80-foot antenna for a new FM radio that will provide additional broadcasting frequencies with less interference, and longer range.

Baum said that the seven-man station normally receives about 125 emergency calls a season, ranging from drownings

'Mary, Mary' Gets Off to Roaring Start

Take a good play, a good cast and a good audience, and you have the makings for a great evening of entertainment.

Such was the case Monday night at the opening of Jean Kerr's sparkling comedy, "Mary, Mary," at the Red Barn Theatre near Saugatuck. James Dyas' professional company was at its best in interpreting one of the all-time great contemporary comedies released this year after a long run on Broadway. The play runs through Saturday night with curtain time at 8:30 p.m. and a Wednesday matinee at 2:30 p.m.

A large opening night crowd proved unusually responsive to the witty sallies of a spritely tale of wedded-unbliss, leaving the audience convulsed in laughter if not rolling in the aisles.

Bruce Hall's fine sense of timing plus a perceptive interpretation of his role of ex-husband and Dorothy Lee Tompkins as the outspoken ex-wife provided the core of action into which the other three characters of the cast worked easily, resulting in one of the smoothest operating combinations of the Red Barn season.

Producer-Director Dyas' talent for that extra quirk and extra laugh was evident in the witty techniques in a production often interrupted by sustained laughter and applause.

Rounding out the cast were Don Bonevich as the lawyer attempting to work out income tax troubles for the divorced couple, Ray Dash as the dashing motion picture star attracted to the heroine, and Patricia Unger as the wealthy young socialite engaged to the ex-husband.

All personalities were sharply defined. Bonevich was the sympathetic family friend but with a wry wit quite as effective as that of Mary herself. Dash was the Rex Harrison type actor who was quite human in spite of glamor, and Pat Unger as the rather sweet young thing so very, very understanding of what she thought was human frailty but which playwright Kerr eventually made the strongest point of character.

Miss Tompkins in her first Red Barn role as a blonde had an unusually attractive wardrobe.

The stage set designed by Marsha Eck was a luxurious apartment calling for several exits, alcoves and other characteristics artfully arranged to be uncluttered on a small stage. Lighting was by Joseph Kelly, costumes by Gloria Gresham and hair styles by Barbra Miner.

Next attraction is the musical "Camelot" opening Tuesday, Aug. 10, and running through Aug. 21. Don Bonevich will play King Arthur, Patricia Unger Guinevere and Ray Dash Lancelot.

Grand Coulee Dam contains more than 22 million tons of concrete.

Vandalism Hits 18 Mailboxes

Allegan sheriff's officers and postal officials are investigating acts of vandalism in which 18 or more mailboxes on 64th St. (old Saugatuck Rd.) and Graafschap Rd. in Allegan county were damaged Sunday.

Holland Postmaster Louis Haight has advised postal inspectors in Grand Rapids and a number of property owners have called sheriff's officers.

Haight said the mailboxes apparently were battered with a heavy object with damage confined to the metal boxes, not the posts. The vandalism seemed to be a hit and miss affair sometimes damaging boxes in clusters and other times at widely separated points.

Tampering with mailboxes is a federal offense.

(Professor of History at the Meiji Gakuin University, Tokyo, Japan, the Reverend Gordon J. Van Wyk is presently on loan to Hope College by the Reformed Board of World Missions so that he can direct the 1965 Summer Program of American Studies for Japanese Students. Reverend Van Wyk received his B.A. from Hope in 1941, his B.D. from Western Theological Seminary in 1944, and his M.A. in History in 1946 from Yale's School of Graduate Studies. He has taught at Hope College and at the Fukien Christian University in China and was the Board of World Missions' R.C.A. field representative from 1959-64. —Editor's note.)

By Rev. Gordon J. Van Wyk
Meiji Gakuin University in Tokyo and Hope College have

much in common. Both schools trace their beginnings back to just over one hundred years ago, when each was founded by pioneering religious leaders as a direct expression of a typically Calvinistic concern for Christian education.

Neither, however, has been content with a vaguely defined title of "Christian school." In both cases the founding fathers thought of them as "church schools," a term which meant first of all not that they received church funds, but that they were closely linked with the church in mission. That is to say, the school shared with the church in having a specific role to play in the extension of Christ's Kingdom.

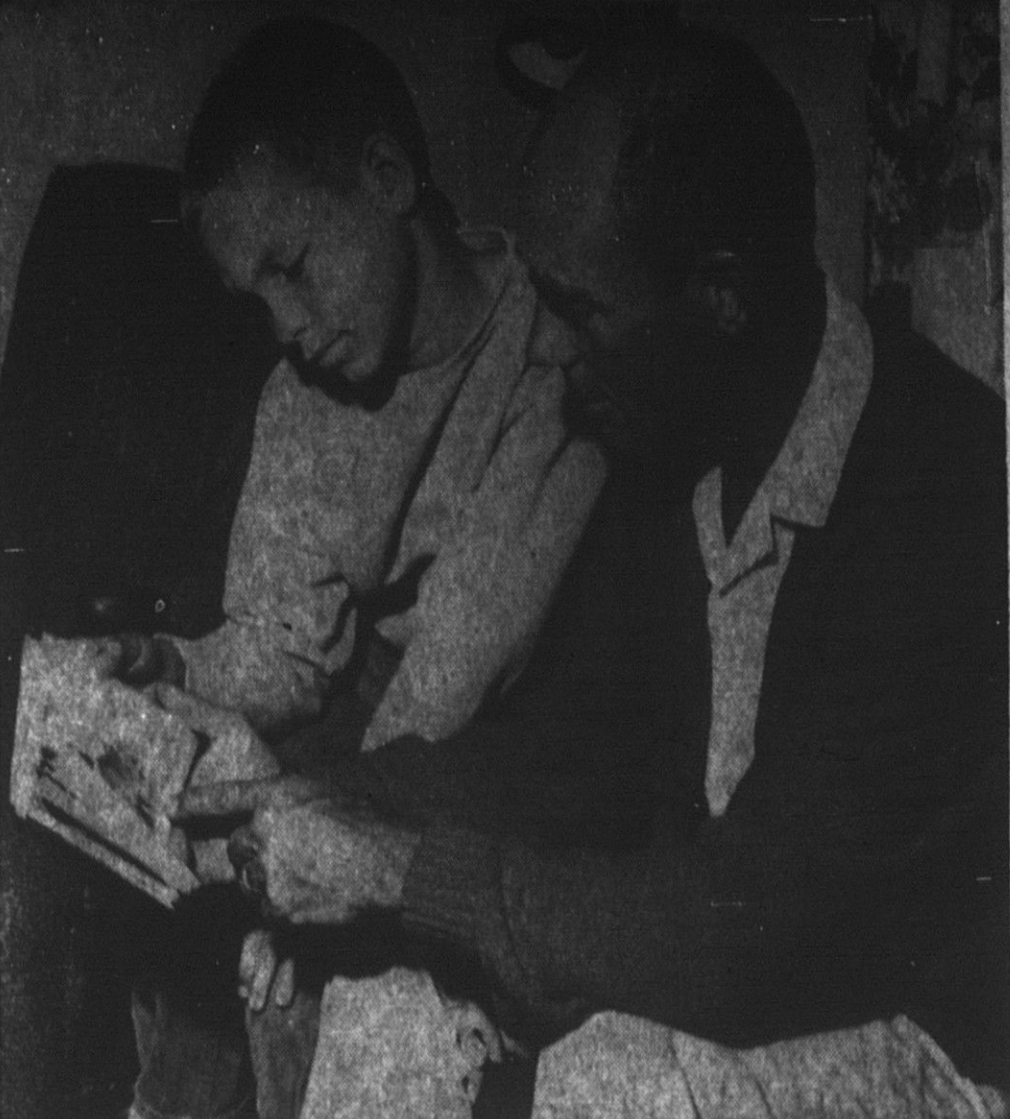

But when we go on to say that Meiji Gakuin for the last century has been a "mission school," we are using terminology we do not ordinarily apply to Hope College. A "mission school" is out over there and not here. It is founded by missionaries who have been sent out by the Christian church in one land to work and witness where there is no church. Missionary teachers play a key role on the faculty, missionary funds help to meet the annual budget, and special missionary gifts account for many of the buildings on the campus.

Such is the traditional "mission school"—and Meiji Gakuin is no exception. Meiji Gakuin is justly proud of its reputation as the oldest and one of the most famous of the mission schools in Japan. Its history is inscribed with the names of a number of great missionary educators of the Reformed and Presbyterian churches. The restoration and extension of the campus in post-war days is a constant reminder of the generosity of the churches in America. And the dominant role of leadership taken in the whole development of the Church of Christ in Japan by Meiji Gakuin graduates witnesses to the seriousness of the concern of the school for her task in missions.

But now we have come to a new day which demands that the whole concept of "mission school," at least as applied to Meiji Gakuin, be reassessed. Japan, though still overwhelmingly unevangelized, has a strong united church with an exceptionally well-educated clergy. The national prosperity, which has been climbing at a rate unequalled in the post-war world, has now enabled Meiji Gakuin to build a new university building of over ten stories without any aid from America. Mission boards are no longer able to provide many qualified educators of the calibre desired by Meiji Gakuin. And so the traditional marks of a "mission school" are slowly being lost.

In the face of these tendencies Meiji Gakuin has this year come to the Reformed and Presbyterian churches in America with the amazing challenge, "How can you help us to continue to be a mission school? Surely the mission relationship is not to be defined in terms of a dollar sign. Isn't it rather that you there and we here be mutually joined in aiding each other in our task of mission to the world in the name of Christ?"

And so Meiji Gakuin has been exploring with several sister church-schools in America ways and means of assisting each other in mission. First priority has gone to plans for the ex-

Colonel Ver Hey Describes 'New' Warfare in Viet

Returned to Holland last week after a month's service in Viet Nam, Lieutenant Colonel William Ver Hey contrasts the current war in Southeast Asia with another war he saw action in—the jungle campaign in New Guinea in 1942.

Colonel Ver Hey, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Ver Hey of 36 East 26th St., was in Holland on leave after being stationed in Viet Nam from May 6 until June 6, with the 173rd Airborne Brigade.

Ver Hey served as brigade executive officer until he was detached from the unit to be rotated stateside on leave.

The 173rd Airborne was assigned to participate in the defense of the strategic American airfield at Bien Hoa. He recalled that he was attending church services there when the airstrip was rocked by the accidental explosions which destroyed or badly damaged some 11 American fighter bombers.

Ver Hey said that he had flown over several scenes of fighting in South Viet Nam in a command helicopter, and noted that the Viet Nam war is very different from the one he participated in during World War II in the South Pacific.

He cited the helicopter as one of the major developments that is changing the nature of modern warfare.

In Viet Nam, helicopters are used for everything, from taking troops into battle, to resupplying them, to evacuating the wounded and taking the troops out of the battle zone.

Helicopters, said Ver Hey, make the troops very mobile. Actions in Viet Nam are not prolonged offensive pushes, but mostly short, fast strikes at enemy concentrations or supply depots. Thus many actions in Viet Nam are referred to as "search-and-destroy" operations rather than major offensives.

The helicopters enable troops to strike fast and unexpectedly, and, if necessary, to retire just as quickly. They are used to replace trucks, they have the advantages of not having to follow roads which may be lined with Viet Cong ambushes, or mired by the heavy summer monsoon rains that strike Southeast Asia.

Ver Hey said that troops in Viet Nam are much better conditioned for battle than were his trenchmates in WW II.

Troops in Viet Nam are in action for two or three days at most, he said, in mobile, fast-hitting offensives, and then return to "a shower and decent living" away from the fighting front for several days before entering battle again.

In contrast, he recalled that in the jungles of New Guinea, fighting men would be in battle for weeks at a time, inching forward through constant enemy resistance.

Ver Hey said that American troop morale is high in Viet Nam. He said that American troops are in no way inferior to the Viet Cong in battle, and that they have vastly superior equipment at their disposal.

He said that he had never heard a soldier complain about the Viet Nam war, and made it clear that Americans knew that there was a job to do in Viet Nam, and sincerely wanted to do it.

Ver Hey characterized the Viet Cong enemy as a well-trained, experienced group that "gives a good account of itself" in battle. He said that they are organized much like a reserve Army unit in the States, living quiet civilian lives until they are mobilized for battle. It is this scattered nature of the enemy, grouping only for attack and dispersing into the countryside at all other times, that makes the Viet Cong enemy so difficult and frustrating to find.

The Viet Cong uses a variety of weapons—captured American ones, Russian, Czech or Chinese, and also some wicked "homemade" weapons.

The most notorious of these "homemade" weapons, Ver Hey said, is the "Punji pit" or covered trap-like hole located along a trail or in a clearing likely to be used for helicopter landings. The bottoms of the pits are often covered with poisoned spikes.

Another Viet Cong favorite, he said, is putting tall bamboo poles in clearings that might be used for helicopter landings. Difficult to spot from the air, these poles foul or damage the rotor blades of helicopters.

The 173rd Airborne to which Ver Hey was attached is the only brigade of its type in the Army. It is a completely self-sufficient unit in the field, capable of meeting all of its own combat demands. Other brigades are always interdependent parts of a larger division. The 173rd is under the command of Brigadier General Ellis Williams.

Ver Hey served as brigade executive officer while the unit was stationed on the island of Okinawa, and returned to Okinawa on June 6, to rejoin his family.

He and his wife, the former Marie Rove of Milwaukee, Wis., whom he met and married in 1948 while both were attending Hope College, lived on Okinawa for two and one-half years prior to his return from Viet Nam. They have an eleven-year old son, Nick, who attended the American servicemen's dependents school on Okinawa.

Colonel Ver Hey has been reassigned to the Combat Development Command center at Fort Belvoir, Va., where he and his family will make their home.

Ver Hey is a career Army officer, with almost 20 years of service to his credit. He is one of 11 children, two others of whom are also career officers. His sister Hazel retired a year ago from the Women's Army Corps (WACs), having attained the rank of Major in 20 years of service. Hazel now makes her home in Chicago.

A brother, Ken, is now serving as a Sergeant E-6 at Fort Lewis, Wash. He has been in the service for 15 years.

Ver Hey is a graduate of Holland high school. He joined the Michigan National Guard in 1938. When the Guard was federalized, he was sent to Camp Beauregard, La., for combat training, and in 1942 he left with Michigan Co. D, 128th Infantry for WW II.

In the war, Ver Hey served in the South Pacific, seeing action in New Guinea, Leyte and Luzon. He received a field commission, and at the end of the war he was in command of a rifle platoon during the occupation of Japan.

In 1946, Ver Hey returned home to attend Hope College. He graduated from Hope in 1950, but in 1952 was again recalled to active duty during the Korean conflict, and he has been a career officer ever since then.

Ver Hey said that it was good to be back in the United States again, but that he was not yet change of Christian scholars, who bear a witness as they serve God in their academic discipline.

Hope College's unique reply to the challenge is the Intensive American Studies Program now in session. Of the thirty-seven students on the campus, twenty-six are on scholarships made available by Meiji Gakuin, chosen from over 150 applicants.

Each week the academic program focuses on some special aspect of American life. Daily lectures will deal with the role of the frontier (with the heritage of the Dutch migration a special case study); prejudice and discrimination; political, economic, and educational problems; and unique American contributions to the fine arts. Group discussions, class speeches, and weekly essays on the theme help develop facility in self-expression in the English language.

Life outside the classroom is an essential element in understanding America, and the citizens of Holland have generously welcomed the students to share in the life of the community. Some twenty-five church families have volunteered to let the students live with them for the last two weeks of the program, and the Christian witness of these homes may well be among the most influential of the experiences of the summer.

In all these contacts we here at Hope no doubt have much to share with these students. But the mission relationship is no longer a one-way street. We will only be joined with the church in Japan in mission if we also are ready to listen and to learn from them.
