Klomprens & Oudemool have the contract for building a residence for Fred Reimink, corner 17th and Van Raalte avenue.

J. Prakken, former alderman, is very ill with consumption and physicians fear that he can live but a few days. He has a wife and five children.

Prof. and Mrs. Egbert Winter of Spring Lake are entertaining twins, the second pair the stork has left beneath their roof. They are girls, but the first pair were boys.

At the bride's home occurred the marriage of Miss Esther Bradwald, formerly of Grand Rapids and Claude H. Countryman of Dayton, Tenn. Following a wedding trip through the south the couple will be at home at Dayton.

Rev. A. R. Merrill will preach his farewell sermon Sunday morning at 10:30. Rev. Merrill leaves for Willington, Ingham Co. to take charge of the Wesleyan Methodist church there. He has served as pastor of the local church for six years.

Pool Bros. printing plant has received the contract for getting out an advertising booklet for the Western Michigan Development Association. About 15000 of these booklets are to be distributed and the cost of the issue will be about $6,000.

A carrier pigeon, numbered 4,108 D. lighted at the conning tower of the life saving station at the mouth of White lake Friday afternoon. It was so thirsty, Captain Curran said, it seemed that the poor creature could not drink enough, and was reventously hungry as well.—Montague Observer.

Chief of Police Kamferbeek has made his report for July showing that he made 29 arrests during July. This is about three times the usual number. Of these convictions were secured in all but two cases, but $50 in fines were collected, the prosecutions being for unimportant offenses.

A local justice of the peace has received a letter from a local autoist threatening to sue the justice if he does not refund a ten dollar fine collected for exceeding the speed limit on Eighth street. Since the fine was imposed the State law allowing a speed of ten miles an hour in business districts has been declared in force.

Gerrit Pamphius, aged 12 and Carl Velzy, aged 11 have been arrested on a charge of stealing a bicycle belonging to Herman Fassen which they found in a rack at the West Michigan Furniture company's factory. It is charged that they took the wheel to Zeeland where they attempted to sell it to a second hand dealer.

Gas testing machines have arrived and will be installed within a short time.

The council also reconsidered their action to sprinkle 11th and 12th streets with Westrumite oil. These streets will be sprinkled provided the property owners on the street pay for the oil.

All petitions in the future will have to be brought before a meeting of the council before same is granted. It appears that some of our citizens when they wanted a petition granted went around to the alderman, received their endorsement outside of meetings and when enough signatures were procured, went ahead with what that petition called for. The council does not think this business like and has amended this rule so that all petitions shall come before that body when it is in session where it can be discussed and then granted if deemed advisable.

Burglars are again busy in Holland. Tues. night at the home of Albert Kleis, a mail carrier, the midnight guests secured $5 missing a roll of $200 which Kleis had under his pillow. At the home of Chris Lokker the visitors got $20 from Mr. Lokker's pocket. The burglars affected entrance to both places by cutting away a screen to a back window.

Benjamin L. Scott of this city and Mable Adella Rhodes of St. Joseph Mich. were married last Saturday at Elkhart, Ind., by the Rev. R. J. Wade pastor of the Trinity M. E. church of that city. The marriage took place at the home of Mr. C. L. Moninger, a friend of Mr. Scott. Mr. Scott is manager of the Scott Lagers Lumber Co. and is one of the leading business men of the city. They will reside on 19th street, corner of Central avenue.

Police Officer Sam Leonard and Constable J. Oldenink have caused the arrest of Charles W. Enos, a Douglas farmer, on a charge of criminal slander. He will be arraigned some day this week. Recently the two officers arrested Enos on a drunkenness charge and he is claimed to have spread a story that when he was arrested his pocket-book contained some money, but it was missing shortly after.

Roosevelt for Diekema

The man to whom everybody is looking now for the proper word on politics has spoken in favor of the congressman from the Fifth district of Michigan, even though he refuses to speak for or against others who have sought his o. k.

The endorsement of Diekema comes from Mr. Roosevelt through G. J. Kollen, president of Hope College, who has just returned from an extended trip to New York. While there he called on Mr. Roosevelt at his Oyster Bay home. Through him Mr. Roosevelt sent his warm personal regards to the congressman from the Fifth and in discussing his services in the house agreed, says Dr. Kollen, that it is a pity that a man who has made such a brilliant record in Washington should have to make a campaign for re-election.

At last night's meeting of the Common Council, the committee who had charge of looking up the matter in regard to the charges made for making connections with gas stoves by the Holland Gas Co. reported that they deemed it not in accordance with the franchise and the matter was referred to the Ways and Means committee and the city attorney to take action.

The bids for paving West Eighth street were opened and C. Marsman was considered the lowest bidder.

The bids per yard are as follows: Carpenter and Anderson, $1.80 for concrete filler, $1.90 asphalt; Anson Green $1.87 and $1.77; C. Marsman $1.83 and $1.69. These bids call for Metropolitan brick. Marsman also bid on Besimer brick $1.79 and $1.65 and on Minerva $1.77 and $1.63. The matter was referred to the City attorney, City engineer and the committee on Streets and Crosswalks.

Gas testing machines have arrived and will be installed within a short time.

The council also reconsidered their action to sprinkle 11th and 12th streets with Westrumite oil. These streets will be sprinkled provided the property owners on the street pay for the oil.

All petitions in the future will have to be brought before a meeting of the council before same is granted. It appears that some of our citizens when they wanted a petition granted went around to the alderman, received their endorsement outside of meetings and when enough signatures were procured, went ahead with what that petition called for. The council does not think this business like and has amended this rule so that all petitions shall come before that body when it is in session where it can be discussed and then granted if deemed advisable.

Assaulted Girl in the Employ of Ex-Senator Suel A. Sheldon.

Charles Palmer, aged 48, has confessed to an assault upon Mary Swanson, an 18 year old girl employed at the home of Suel A. Sheldon in Wright township. The girl left the house one afternoon recently to go into the berry patch in the rear to pick berries for supper. She was suddenly seized from behind and thrown to the ground. She was terrified into silence by his threats to kill her. After a hard chase Palmer was captured near the scene of the crime. He was taken before the Swanson girl at the Sheldon home. After the girl had positively identified him he broke down and confessed.

The Resorts Have a Market.

Holland is behind the times when a market place is taken in consideration. The Holland resorts even have us beat. On the outskirts of Macatawa early in the morning may be seen wagon loads of greens, berries, vegetable of all kinds. This was brought about by the Macatawa Park association who have given the concession of selling these articles to certain men who are willing to pay the concession money.

And this rightly so as these concessions are partly the revenue which keep up the park. The colony of farmers however who formerly visited the resorts and peddled from house to house have started a little market of their own in the opening near Harkema's woods, and the house maid, hired men or the house wife can be seen early each morning meandering to the market place with their baskets getting their supplies for the day. One farmer said, "We like this system better as we do not have to peddle, altho we sell our produce a little cheaper it does not take near as much time and hard work."

Was Holland Out Manoeuvred?

Grand Haven has secured two large factories through the efforts of their Board of Trade. One is the Fountain Specialty Co., who manufactures soda fountains and pays high wages, employing a force of two hundred men. The employees consist of silver and copper smiths, metal workers, high priced wood carvers, etc. The other factory is the Motor Car Co. who makes $800 runabouts for which there is a great demand. This factory will also employ high priced labor, something so beneficial to any town. Regarding the securing of the Fountain Specialty Co. the Grand Haven Tribune says in part:

For some time the Board of Trade has been in negotiation with various sizes and kinds of manufacturing institutions with the idea of locating a factory in Grand Haven. While in Holland a few weeks ago, a member of the Grand Haven Board of Trade met W. H. Cushman, president and general manager of the Fountain Specialty Co. of Chicago, who was in Holland negotiating with the Holland Chamber of Commerce for the removal of his factory to that city. The Grand Haven man put in a good stiff plug for Grand Haven, asking Mr. Cushman to keep Grand Haven in mind should there be a hitch in the proceedings at Holland. There was a slip at Holland and the Grand Haven Board of Trade jumped at the chance. A committee met Mr. Cushman and at once put up the proposition up to the representative of the concern. The terms under which the Fountain Specialty company comes to Grand Haven under terms particularly fair and advantageous to the city. The city furnishes the site and the building for the plant, being absolutely protected in return by the coming concern.

Saugatuck

The new pier built by the Crawford Transportation Co. at Plummerville is nearing completion and is a dandy. The drive to the pier and a new platform make it about the best landing between Saugatuck and South Haven. It will prove a great accommodation to the farmers in getting their fruit to market and will also help Saugatuck harbor all of the fruit leaving Plummerville pier will be weighed out at Saugatuck. This will give the place a better chance to make good in the five years trial in which the government is testing whether it will pay or not to keep open the harbor at Saugatuck.

C. E. Bird and Henry Perkins undertook the task of stocking Kalamazoo Lake and River with pike and black bass this spring with fish supplied by the state and have put pike in the following place: Mann's Creek, 10 gallons; Indian Cut, 10 gallons; 10 gallons in river above Douglas; 30 gallons and 70 gallons around the Kalamazoo Lake. The black bass they distributed as follows: 20 gallons in Hanson Bayou; 30 gallons above Douglas; 70 gallons in the channel near Silver Lake. This has all been done by them free of charge for it was necessary to keep the river well stocked in order to maintain its reputation as the best place in Michigan to fish.

Early apples put in their appearance the first of the week. The average apple crop in this vicinity will be less than half what it would have been had the spring weather been normal. Many orchards were sprayed but in spite of this few real fine apples will be harvested in this part of the state this season.

Caught by the undertow while bathing in the heavy surf on the Saugatuck beach Saturday afternoon, George Mamerow of Saugatuck was carried out in deep water and drowned without any of his companions being able to render assistance. The accident occurred at 1:30 p.m. and all of the life savers were notified at once, they were unable to find the body. The accident occurred just south of the south pier at the new harbor, and it was hoped to find the body in the short stretch of beach between the scene of the drowning and the old piers. Mamerow was 35 years of age, and is survived by a widow and a son and daughter, all of whom are at Saugatuck. Mamerow was the owner of the Park House at Saugatuck and was staying there with his family. The life savers are making every effort to find the body, but it is believed that it was carried out into the lake and may not be recovered for some time.

being on the ground early in the contest. Furthermore, Diekema has good reason to have confidence in his ability for those lines. As speaker of the house of representatives he went years ago he made a very rightfully is envied position. He held the position at the time when the tasks of speaker in the silver law-making body were not easy. Yet, both as a man of judgement and as a parliamentarian, he evinced such rare qualities that both republicans and democrats extended him a vote of appreciation for his accuracy and fairness. It is said that during his entire incumbency not one of his decisions was overruled.

Diekema's reasoning that he stands in a proper position for a candidate to succeed the present speaker, should the latter resign, as has been announced, at the end of the present term, also is well founded. It is altogether probable that a man from the middle west will be chosen, also one that assumes a proper attitude toward the administration. Diekema fills the bill in both particulars. —Hancock Journal.

AFTER DIEKEMA BROKE THE ICE.

Congressman Diekema broke the ice. He pointed the way to the solution of the speakership question, and it has been remarkable to see the other fellows fall into line. Hardly had the papers been printed with his announcement of candidacy before the Pennsylvania delegation put forth a candidate in the person of Marlin E. Olmstead, a congressman from their state.

CONGRESSMAN McLAUGHLIN'S O. K. FOR DIEKEMA AS SPEAKER.

In my opinion there will be a strong and very proper demand for a candidate who is an ardent and reliable Republican; a man in thorough sympathy with advanced sentiment of the people on great questions, and, withal, a man who has the courage of his convictions. In the opinion of every member of the house who knows Mr. Diekema well he possesses all these qualities. Without such a candidate the Republican party cannot and ought not to win the speakership.

The leaders of the Republican organization of the house recognizing Mr. Diekema's ability and independence have courted him. Mr. Cannon has placed him on the great judiciary committee and has called him more than any other member to preside over the house in committee of the whole. These evidences of respect for and confidence in Mr. Diekema, and these efforts to gain his fealty and co-operation have had no effect upon his independence but have given him unusual opportunity to display his ability, his familiarity with pending legislation and his skill as a parliamentarian. He has had exceptional opportunity to score as a candidate for the speakership. Mr. Cannon and his friends may find that they have unwittingly been grooming the winner of the race.

DIEKEMA WELL FITTED FOR SPEAKERSHIP

It may seem a little premature at this time for Representative Diekema of Holland to announce his candidacy for the speakership in congress and it probably is rather early for any of his friends to begin booming his campaign. However we see no valid reason for the Michigan man not announcing his intention at this time. If he feels so disposed. There is nothing

Funeral services will be held next Thursday afternoon from the home and at 1:30 from the First Christian Reformed church, Rev. W. D. Van der Werp, pastor of the church officiating. Internment will be at the Zeeland cemetery.

Zeeland's evergreen milkman, L. Shoemaker, has disposed of his milk route and outfit to James Posma and Wynand Vanden Berg of this city and they will take possession next Monday, with Mr. Posma in charge. Mr. Shoemaker bears the distinction of being the oldest milkman in Zeeland, having conducted the business for twenty two years, and the fact that he turns over to successors, customers that have been with him continually for twenty years, is sufficient evidence that the "goods" which he sold were right. A week or ten days ago the milk dealers of this place got together and raised the price on milk from five cents to six cents per quart, and as usual this meets with a great deal of objection on the part of the customers. Mr. Shoemaker was satisfied with the price received for his product and did not believe in raising. The fact that his successors are of the same opinion and will continue at the old price promises to make for them a big hit from the very start. Attempts at raising the price of milk have been made before, but failed as often as tried.

Last Friday afternoon the funeral took place of John Dekker, who died at his home in Drenthe Wednesday, aged 75 years. Paint the Mail Boxes White.

The postal department is asking all rural route patrons to paint their boxes and the posts to which they are attached a pure white. This course, if pursued, will not only result in benefit to the patron in serving to protect his post and box from damage by the weather, but will give all boxes a uniform color and serve to fix their identity in all parts of the country as U. S. mail boxes, and will give a much needed and sightlier appearance than the now possess. It is also desired that patrons be induced to print their names and box numbers on in black block letters about two inches high.

Half a Chance

By FREDERIC S. ISHAM,
Author of "The Strollers," "Under the Rose," "The Lady of the Mount," Etc.

Copyright, 1900, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company.

For a time they two seemed the only pedestrians that had ventured forth that night in a locality so uninviting. Through the gulchlike passage swept a cold draft of air. It made little rifts in the fog and showed an entrance—a dim light. At the same time the sound of the footsteps in front abruptly ceased.

For a few minutes Steele waited. He looked toward the place Dandy Joe had entered. It was well known to him and, what seemed more important, to Mr. Gillett. The latter would remember it in connection with the Frisco Pet and presumably turn to it as a likely spot to search for him who had been forced to leave Captain Forsythe's home. That contingency—nay, probability—had to be considered. The one person he most needed to find had taken refuge in one of the places he would have preferred not to enter. But no time must be lost hesitating. He had to choose. Dismissing all thought of danger from without, thinking only of what lay before him within, he moved quickly forward and tried the door. He entered, felt his way in the darkness through winding passages downward, avoiding a bad step—did he remember even that?

How paltry details stood out! The earthen floor still drowned the sound of footsteps. The narrow hall took the same turns.

A slant of light like a sword, from the crack of a door, gleamed on the dark floor before him. He stepped toward it. The low sound of men's tones could be heard—Joe's; a strange voice, so, a familiar one, that caused the listener's every fiber to vibrate.

"And what did you say when he pumped you for the cote?"

"That you would rather call on him."

"And then he cared nought for the job? You're sure— anxiously—"he wasn't playing to find out?"

The other answered jocosely and walked away. A door closed behind him. For a time the stillness remained unbroken. Then a low rattle, as of dice on a table, caused John Steele to glance through a crevice. What he saw seemed to decide him to act quickly. He lifted a latch and stepped in. As he did so a huge man with red hair sprang to his feet. From one great hand the dice fell to the floor. His shaggy jaw drooped. Casting over his shoulder the swift glance of an entrapped animal, he seemed about to leap backward to escape by a rear entrance when the voice of the intruder arrested his purpose, momentarily held him.

"Oh, I'm alone! There are no police outside." He spoke in the dialect of the pickpurse and magsman. To prove it, John Steele stooped and locked the door.

The small bloodshot eyes lighted with wonder. The heavy brutish jaws began to harden. "Alone?"

The other tossed the key. It fell at the man's feet. John Steele walked over to the opposite door and shot a heavy bolt there. "Looks as if it would hold," he said in thieves' argot as he turned around.

"Are ye a gaby?" The red-headed giant stared ominously at him.

"On the contrary," coolly, "I know very well what I am doing."

A question interlarded with oaths burst from the other's throat. John Steele regarded the man quietly. "I should think it apparent what I want!" he answered. As he spoke he sat down. "It is you," bending his bright, resolute eyes on the other.

"And you've come alone?" He drew up his ponderous form.

John Steele smiled. "I assure you I welcomed the opportunity."

"Do you know what I am going to do to you?"

"I haven't any curiosity," still clinging to thieves' jargon or St. Giles Greek. "But I'm sure you won't play me the trick you did the last time I saw you."

The fellow shot his head near. "You're the swell cove who wanted to palaver that night when—"

"You tried to rob me," John Steele laughed. "Do you know the penalty for attempting that game, Tom Rogers, alias Tom-o'-the-Road, alias—"

The man fell back. "Who are you? By —" he said.

"John Steele."

"John Steele?" The bloodshot eyes became slightly vacuous. "The —? Then you used him, indicating savagely the entrance at the back, for a duck to uncover? I'll burke you for that!"

John Steele did not stir. "How? With the lead or—"

The fellow lifted his hairy fists. "Those are all I—"

"In that case"—Steele took the weapon on which his hand had rested from his pocket, and, rising with alacrity, he placed it on a rickety stand behind him—"you have me a little outclassed. About seventeen stone, I should take it. I barely turn thirteen myself. However," tossing his coat in the corner, "you look a little soft—hardly up to what you were when you got the belt for the heavyweight championship. Do you remember? The Frisco Pet went against you, but he was only a low, ignorant sailor and had let himself get out of form. You beat him—beat him!"—John Steele's eyes glittered; he touched the other on the arm—"though he fought seventeen good rounds. You stamped the heart out of him, Tom!"

The red-headed giant's arms fell to his side. "How do you?"

"I was there!" An odd smile crossed Steele's determined lips. "Lost a little money on that battle. Recall the fourteenth round? He nearly had you, but you played safe in the fifteenth, and then—you sent him down—down." John Steele's voice died away. "It was a long time before he got up," he added, almost absently.

"You know all that?"

"And all the rest!"

"See here, what's your little game? Straight now, quick! You come here without the police. Why?"

John Steele's reply was to the point. He stated exactly what he wanted and what he meant that the other should give him. As the fellow heard he breathed harder. He held himself in with difficulty.

"And so that's what you've come for, mister?" he said, a hoarse guffaw falling from the coarse lips. John Steele answered quietly. "And you think there is any chance of your getting it? May I be asking?" with an evil grin, "how you expect to make me, Tom Rogers," bringing down his great fist, "do your bidding?"

"In the first place, by assuring you no harm shall come to you. It is in my power to avert that in case you comply. In the second place, you will be given enough sovereigns to—"

"Quids, eh? Let me have sight of them, mister. We might talk better."

"Do you think I'd bring them here, Tom-o'-the-Road? No, no!" brusquely.

"That settles it."

"In giving you your choice of doing what I ask or of being turned over to the traps."

"The traps?" The other fellow's face became contorted. "You mean that you?"

"Will give you up for that little job unless—"

For answer the man launched his huge body forward, with fierce swinging fists. He beat, rushed, strove to close. His opponent's lithe body evaded a clutch that might have ended the contest.

The other came at him, muttering. The mill was unduly prolonging itself. He would end it. His fist struck at that face so elusive, but crashed against the wall. Like a flash Steele's arm lifted. The great form staggered and fell.

Quickly, however, it rose, and the battle was resumed. John Steele's every muscle ached. His shoulder was bleeding anew. The need for acting quickly, if he should hope to conquer, pressed on him. Fortunately, Rogers in his blind rage was fighting wildly. John Steele endured blow after blow; then, as through a mist, he found at length the opening he sought—an instant's opportunity on which all depended.

Every fiber of his physical being responded. He threw himself forward. The weight of his body, the force of a culminating impetus, went into his fist. It hit heavily full on the point of the chin beneath the brutal mouth. Tom Rogers' head shot back as if he had received the blow of a hammer, and he threw up his arms. This time he lay where he struck the ground.

John Steele swayed. With an effort he sustained himself. Was it over? The prestrate man did stir now. He groaned. John Steele touched him with his foot.

"Get up," he said.

John Steele went to the stand, picked up his revolver and then sat down at a table. "You're as foul a fighter as you ever were," he said contemptuously.

CHAPTER XV.
THE LAST SHIFT.

THE candle burned low. It threw now on grimy floor and wall shadows of two men, one seated at the table, the other not far from it. Before John Steele lay paper and ink, procured from some niche.

"Where were you on the night this woman, Amy Gerard, was found dead?"

A momentary expression of surprise, of alarm, crossed the bruised and battered face. It was succeeded by an angry suspicion that glowed from the evil eyes. "You're not trying to fix that job on—"

"You? No."

"Then what did you follow him here for—to pump me? The Yankee that got transported is—"

"As alive as when he stepped before you in the ring!"

"Alive?" The fellow stared. He looked at Steele closer. "Blame if there isn't something about you that puzzles me," he said.

"I represent him—the Yankee."

"Well, he got a good one. You know how to use your fists, mister."

"Better than this Frisco Pet did come, eh, Tom?" The man frowned.

"But to return to the subject in hand.

That question you seemed afraid to answer just now was superfluous. I know where you were the night the woman was shot?"

John Steele leaned forward and said something softly.

"How'd you find that out?" asked the man.

"The Frisco Pet knew where you were all the time, but did not speak because he did not wish to get you into trouble, also because he did not know then what he long afterward learned indirectly—that you could have cleared him!"

"Indirectly? I? What do you?"

"Through your once having dropped a few words. Wine in, wits out."

The fellow edged his chair closer. "Keep where you are!" John Steele's hand touched the revolver now on the table before him. Even as he did so the room seemed to sway, and it was only by a strong effort of will he kept his attention on the matter in hand and fought down the dizziness. "And let's get through with this. I don't care to waste much more of my time on you."

"You're sure nothing will happen to me if— The man watched him closer. "This paper need never be made public, but it might be useful in certain contingencies."

"And what am I to get if I do what you?"

"You shall have funds to take you out of the country; the alternative," he bent forward, "about fifteen years if the traps!"

The fellow pondered. At last he answered. For a few minutes then John Steele wrote, looking up between words. His head bent now closer to the paper, then drew back from it, as if through a slight uncertainty of vision or because of the dim light. The fellow's eyes, watching him, lowered.

"You know—none better—that on that particular night some one else, some one besides the Frisco Pet, entered your mother's house?"

Oaths mingled with low flicers' slang, but the reply was forthcoming. Other questions, too, were answered tentatively, sometimes at length, with repulsive fullness of detail.

"You can state of your own knowledge what happened next?" John Steele spoke sharply. The fellow's red brows suddenly lifted.

"Oh, yes," he replied readily.

John Steele's manner became shorter. His questions were put fast. He forced quick replies. He not only seemed striving to get through his task as soon as possible, but always to hold the other's attention, to permit his brain no chance to wander from the subject to any other. But the fellow seemed now to have become as tractable as before he had been sullen, stubborn; gave his version in his own vernacular, always keenly attentive, observant of the other's every motion. His strength had apparently returned. He seemed little the worse for his late encounter. At length came an interval. Just for an instant John Steele's eyes shut. The fingers that had held the pen closed on the edge of the table. A quick passing expression of ferocity hovered at the corners of the observer's thick lips. He got up. At the same time John Steele rose and stepped abruptly back.

"You know how to write your name?" His voice was firm, unwavering. The revolver had disappeared from the table and lay now in his pocket.

"All right, gov'ner!" The other spoke with alacrity. "I'm game. A bargain is a bargain, and I'll take your word for it," leaning over and laboriously tracing a few letters on the paper. "You'll do your part. You'll find me square and aboveboard, although you did use me a little rough. There; here's your affidavit."

John Steele moved back to a corner of the room and pulled a wire. In some faraway place a bell rang faintly. "Are"—he spoke a woman's name, obviously a sobriquet, "and her daughter still here?"

"How?"

"Never mind; answer!"

"Yes; they're here, gov'ner. You'll want them for witnesses, I suppose."

Not long after, the paper, duly witnessed, lay on the table. The landlady and her daughter had gone. John Steele only waited for the ink to dry. He had no blotter or sand. The fluid was old, thick. The principal signature in its big strokes, with here and there a sputter, would be unintelligible if the paper were folded now. So he lingered. Both men were silent. A few tense minutes passed. John Steele leaned against the wall. His temples throbbed. The fog seemed creeping into the room, and yet the door was closed. He moved toward the paper. Still maintaining an aspect of outward vigilance, he took it and held it before him as if to examine closer.

The other said nothing, made no movement. When the women had come in his accents had been almost too frank. The gentleman had called on a little matter of business. He, Tom Rogers, had voluntarily signed this little paper, and they could bear witness to the fact.

John Steele folded the paper and placed it in an inside pocket. The other suddenly breathed heavily. John Steele, looking at him, walked to the door leading to the street. He put his hand on the key and was about to turn it, but paused. Something without held his attention—a crunching sound as of a foot on a pebble. It abruptly revived misgivings that had assailed him before entering the place.

"Involuntarily he turned his head. Tom Rogers sprang behind in a flash and seized John Steele by the throat. It was a deadly, terrible grip. The fingers pressed harder. The other groaned, but slowly fell. As dizziness began to merge into oblivion Rogers, without releasing his hold, bent over.

"You fool! Did you think I would let you get away with the paper—that I couldn't see you were about done for?"

He looked at the white face and started to unbutton the coat. As he reached in his attention was suddenly arrested. He threw back his head.

"The traps!"

Voices below resounded without.

"So that was your game! Well," savagely, "I think I have settled with you."

He had but time to run to the rear door, unbolt it and dash out when a crashing of woodwork filled the place and Mr. Gillett looked in.

When John Steele began to recover he was dimly aware that he was in a four wheeler which rattled along slowly through streets. At his side sat a figure that stirred when he did, spoke in crisp official accents. The police agent had come well armed and, moreover, had taken the precaution for this little journey of providing a cab in front and one behind, containing those who knew how to act should the necessity arise.

Furtively the prisoner felt his pocket. The memorandum book containing the paper that had cost so much was gone. He looked at the agent. Had it been shifted to Mr. Gillett's possession, or (dimly he recalled his assiduous last words) had Rogers succeeded in snatching the precious evidence from his breast before escaping? In the latter case it had undoubtedly ere this been destroyed. In the former it would presumably soon be transferred to the police agent's employer. To regain the paper, if it existed, would be no light task. Yet it was the Name for New Theatre.

The News feels a personal interest in the success of the new theatre that is now being built. We are sure that its success will accrue to the welfare of this city in many ways, and it is a paper's privilege as well as duty to be interested in the city's prosperity.

We wish to take upon ourselves the self imposed duty of suggesting a name for the new theatre. "What's in a name?" has become a stock quotation, but whenever it is cited people agree that after all, there is a good deal in a name. Uneda Biscuit is a living example of the magic of a name—it often means success or failure.

Our name for the new play-house is THE KNICKERBOCKER THEATRE. "There's a reason," as the Postman says; rather, there are several reasons. The new theatre needs a dignified name. In spite of all the safeguards the Board of Trade has given the public against low class plays, there is still a lingering suspicion that the theatre will be only second rate. A dignified name will do its share toward wiping out this suspicion. Suppose the theatre were called The Bijou or the The Gayety or The Court or Smith's Opera House, the name would carry with it associations of similarly named theaters in other cities. About every one of those names there is a suggestion of frivolity and a lack of the artistic which all real theaters, that wish to make a bid for the better class patronage, should be anxious to avoid. The name Knickerbocker Theatre is not open to this objection. It suggests in the first place the matchless literary art of Irving. It is associated with the blue blood of what may be called American aristocracy. It is dignified in origin and association, and it has a dignified sound.

Furthermore, the name of the new theatre should really characterize it. Suppose it were called merely The Opera House, which was the name the old theatre went by, it would suggest a colorless institution with no individuality. But the word Knickerbocker is the one term that suggests all that is most dignified and most cultivated in Dutch life in America. It is a characteristically Holland name and for that reason an ideal name for Holland's theatre.

The large Knickerbocker Societies of New York, Grand Rapids and Ann Arbor, including on its membership role some of the most cultivated men in America, witness to the popularity of this name.

The objection might be made that the name Knickerbocker is not novel enough—that it is too common. But that is exactly what is needed. A theatre is a popular institution and needs a popular name. And when a popular name carries with it suggestions of culture and art and intelligence it is so much the more valuable a trade mark.

Osborne and Education.

At the beginning of the campaign for the Republican nomination for the governorship, Chase S. Osborne took exception to Judge Montgomery's candidacy, because of the fact that he was holding a state position. Osborne argued that Montgomery could not discharge his duty as judge impartially toward men who come before him, since he might look upon these very men as possible supporters of his candidacy. Mr. Osborne is a regent of the University of Michigan and has personally addressed the students there with the result that an Osborne club was started at the University before commencement in June.

There is of course nothing at all illegal in this, but it is hardly in good taste in view of Mr. Osborne's attitude toward Judge Montgomery.

The University of Michigan has the reputation of being the most democratic institution in the United States, free from party affiliations. But it depends upon the state for its support, and should Osborne be elected he could or could not do the school a good turn in the line of appropriations as he might see fit. As regent he is sitting in judgment on the institution every day.

When politics gets mixed up with education true education is doomed. Let the student learn the theory of politics, and let the professors be active citizens, but let the government of the school be detached from the maze of practical politics. It is said that the state institutions of some of the Western states are honeycombed with political combinations. As a result an applicant for a position is asked what his political affiliations are before he can receive an appointment. Very often a poor instructor gets in because his politics are "right," while a strong man goes begging for a job. Such a condition of things will never be tolerated in the great state of Michigan, which is more proud of its university than of anything else. But even the semblance of political complications in state education should be avoided and Mr. Osborne pronounced a judgment upon himself when he criticised Judge Montgomery.

Mr. Kelley is a man deeply interested in the educational system of Michigan, but he has no damaging affiliations like Mr. Osborne. He is an ex. superintendent of public instruction and has always had the interests of public education at heart. Although in sympathy with higher education such as is given in the University, he is especially interested in the public school. He knows the needs of the common school better than perhaps any executive that has ever sat in the governor's chair, and he could do the state an inestimable service along this line as well as along other lines.

Mr. Kelley is a man of high culture and refinement and his attitude on the question of education is in striking contrast to that of Mr. Osborne who is not above making his connection with the University help him in his candidacy for the governorship.

Postmaster Van Schelven Tells a Good One.

Talking about bingos in base ball Postmaster Van Schelven, former editor of the News, has one that can't be surpassed.

First you must consider that the longest drive ever made in the big league with a Spaulding ball is 413 feet, by Mitchel of Cin., and that a city block is 1100 feet long. Also that the ball Van has reference to was one made up of a green apple, and some string and the covering bore the ear marks of the shoe makers, last. You must imagine that you hear the chug as it is struck by the bat, and the sailing away of a flattened object like a dirigible. You must consider all this to appreciate the story.

It was about twenty-five years ago Hope College was playing some rival team, says Van. Excitement was intense; the game stood 5 to 3 in favor of the visitors; it was the ninth inning with Hope having its last bat. The cause looked hopeless, two men out and two on bases; all the fans were standing with beated breath for here comes Hope's deliverer, J. Smith who steps to the plate. Alas, one strike! two strikes! a storm from the visitors, an awful swing, a horrible chug, a graceful sail, and you ought to see that ball go. Think of it! Way from the old Hope office on College ave., over the hill of the campus and into Van O'Linda's apple trees on Columbia ave. Did we win? I should say so! Does Van smile when he tells it? I should say No! But the fan of to day does.

Sunday at Hope Church.

In the morning, will be a Gospel message to old and young. Boys and girls are especially invited on this and every first Sunday morning of the month, so they will get the habit of coming every time, even when music, Bible reading and sermon is not peculiarly adapted.

The topic is "All to the Glory of God" I Corinthians 10:31, with the illustration drawn from Browning's "Pippa Passes." The Christian Endeavor Hymn book will be used.

In the evening, Rev. Edward Niles, pastor-elect, preaches on "Where? What? Why?" The ushers will be glad to seat those who come after worship begins immediately following the Creed and the Scripture Reading.

The next Prayer meeting topic is "Was Peter's? What then shall we have? a wrong-motived question?"

The music is in charge of Prof. J. B. Nykerk, who has returned from his vacation.

Is Unique Record.

There were 71 births and 38 deaths in Ottawa county during the month of June. Grand Haven had an unusually high death rate during the month, there being but four births and ten deaths. Holland reported 19 births, 9 deaths. Zeeland reported 9 births and no deaths.

Superintendent DeYoung Resigns.

At the Monday evening meeting of the Board of Public Works James DeYoung, who for the past twelve years has held the position of superintendent of public works, tendered his resignation to take effect the first of September. Mr. DeYoung gives as a reason for this move the acceptance of an offer of the Michigan Power company to take charge of their main power plant, a position that will be a material improvement over his present position.

Mr. DeYoung has met with great success during his administration as head of the local lighting and water plant, having managed not only to put the plant upon a self supporting basis but also to derive from its management a fairly large margin of profit. This is a record seldom achieved in municipal power plants and is an excellent criterion for judging the character of Mr. DeYoung's businesslike administration. While the resignation tendered at the meeting of the board was not acted upon at the meeting it is quite likely that it will be considered at the next regular meeting. An effort will probably be made to induce Mr. DeYoung to continue to administer this branch of the city's business.

Farmer's Picnic at Jenison Park

This year's Farmers picnic which will be held at Janson Park, Wednesday, Aug. 17, promises to be the greatest attraction in years. The program is all day and evening. Both at noon and at 5:00 P. M. there will be a barbecue with roast oxen, sheep and coffee served free to the visitors at the park. In the forenoon there will be games and sports, and in the afternoon, a long program with a special celebration in the evening. Both Congressman E. L. Hamilton and Gerrit J. Diekema will be on the program for speaking, with others.

The Holland Interurban has given a special round trip rates from Saugatuck to Jenison Park and return 20 cents; from Zeeland to Jenison Park and return 25 cents; from Vriesland 30 cents; from Jamestown 40 cents; from Grandville 50 cents. A 20-minute service will be maintained throughout the day, with extra service in the evening. The Pere Marquette will run a special train from Allegan, which will bring a large number to the park on that day. The program for the day includes a great many novelties and special features which will make the day one long to be remembered.

Births.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Nelson, of Allegan, a daughter, Mrs. Nelson formerly resided in this City. H. R. Doesburg, Walsh Drug Co.

Diekema Has Organization

Congressman Diekema has completed his organization and headquarters will be opened at once, probably in the Tower building. Grand Rapids will be headquarters for the district and county organizations will be formed in each of the three counties in the district. The officers so far selected are as follows: District Chairman—Millard Palmer. City Chairman—Peter Lankster. Secretary—Ald. E. F. Smith. Treasurer—Guy Rouse.

Mr. Palmer managed Mr. Diekema's campaign two years ago and was very successful in it. It has long been expected he would take the reins of the job again this week.

DEATHS

The funeral of Officer Fred A. Kieft was held Tuesday from the Fourteenth street Christian Reformed church, Rev. Dr. R. Druker officiating. The pall bearers were Chief of Police Kamferbeek, Officers Steketee and Leonard, John Wagner, Louis Koeman and Sam Meeuwse. Mr. Kieft died Saturday afternoon at 3:45 surrounded by his family. He had been ill with cancer of the liver for about a year, and death was not unexpected. Shortly before his death came the officer requested that he might die in uniform, and he was buried in the clothes he wore on the beat and in which he served the city faithfully for years. Mr. Kieft was 37 years old and had been a member of the Holland force for nearly three years. He was a charter member of the H. O. H. Kieft was born in Grand Haven and spent the first 20 years of his life in that city. For the past 17 years he has been identified with this city. He is survived by a wife and two children.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDIES

THE CAMEL AND THE NEEDLE'S EYE.

Matthew 19:13-26.—August 7.

"Jesus said, Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

EN ROUTE towards Jerusalem the Master was met by mothers desiring to have his blessing upon their children. The Apostles, realizing the greatness of their Master and the importance of his time, forbade this and rebuked the mothers. When Jesus heard, he called them and said: "Suffer little children, and forbid them not to come unto me; for of such is the kingdom of heaven," and he put his hands in blessing upon their heads.

From this we are not to understand that the Kingdom of Heaven will be composed of little children. This erroneous idea has gone broadcast and such an impression respecting the Kingdom has thus resulted. On the contrary no little children can get into the Kingdom. Only those who have the hearing of faith are even "called" to the Kingdom and its glories. Our Lord's blessing upon little children merely signified his sympathy and love and his appreciation of the purity and innocence of childhood. Those who will be of the Kingdom of God must be like little children in the sense of being simple hearted, true, honest and trustful of their heavenly Father—of such-like will be the inheritors of the Kingdom.

Another account tells us of Jesus' further words to the effect that all who would be his disciples must become as little children—must be like little children in guilelessness, faith, etc. But those who will be heirs of the Kingdom will all be "overcomers." Such take up their cross and follow the Lord whithersoever he leadeth. As our Lord could not have taken up his cross when he was a boy of nine, so likewise children cannot become the followers of Christ in the Scriptural sense until they have reached the age of discretion, which with some may occur much earlier than with others. We have known children of twelve years or thereabouts to give excellent evidence of faith, obedience and consecration to the Lord's will and evidence of being begotten of the holy Spirit. These, of course, but no other children, could have hope of sharing with Christ in his Millennial Kingdom.

On his journey our Lord was accosted by one who said, "Good Master, what good thing shall I do that I may have eternal life?" He had the right idea; namely, that eternal life is the grand desideratum, the grand hope of all hopes before the human family. We are glad of the question; for it brought forth the inspired answer in which everybody is interested. What is the value of the present life, except as it leads us up the passageway to eternal life? How utterly lost we should feel if assured that at death we would be blotted out forever! How little in this life would be worth consideration—how little it could do toward filling the longing of our hearts, which yearn for eternal life!

Our Lord parried the question, in order to draw out the young man and make him commit himself. "Why do you call me good?" Why do you acknowledge me as a good teacher? I am either the Messiah, as I claim, or else an impostor and far from good. Do you accept my Messiahship? If you do not, how can you call me good or acknowledge that anything could be good that does not proceed from God, the Fountain of all goodness? But answering your question: if you would enter into eternal life, keep the commandments. The young man replied, Which? The Master answered, Thou shalt do no murder, nor commit adultery, nor steal, nor bear false witness, but honor thy father and thy mother and love thy neighbor as thyself. The young man replied, "All these things have I observed from my youth. What lack I yet?"

He was a model young man and Jesus loved him. Evidently he was keeping the Jewish Law to the extent of his knowledge and ability. He thought that he was loving his neighbor as himself; but this was a mistake which the Lord disclosed to him by the following suggestion: "If thou wouldst be perfect, go sell all that thou hast and give to the poor and thou shalt have treasure in heaven" instead of on earth; sacrifice also your earthly reputation and become my follower.

Ah, how the Lord knew to put his finger on the sore spot! The young man had come to him very boastful, very sure that if any one in the world was seeking to be in harmony with the Divine arrangement he was that one. He came for the Master's approval, that he might hear him say, "You are the one exception to the rule." The Lord did not say, "If you love your neighbor as you love yourself you will at least put forth an effort to make that neighbor as comfortable as you desire to be comfortable." He was content to be very rich while some of his neighbors whom he thought he loved as he loved himself were very poor—abjectly, sorrowfully so. When Jesus discovered to him the difficulty of his situation, he grasped it at once. He saw himself as never before. It became a new test with him. Thus it is with all. A previous lesson showed us the Kingdom as a great prize, a pearl of great value, a treasure, which to possess, will cost all that we have; and this lesson points out the same fact.

Let us not make the mistake made by some, and suppose that the young man who lived so honorable a life and failed to gain heaven, would be thrust down into eternal torment because he did not sacrifice his all to become the Lord's disciple. His loss of the Kingdom was a sufficient penalty without suffering eternal torment in the future. Such members of the human family, under the blessed conditions of the Millennial Kingdom, will doubtless make very rapid progress and will obtain eternal life on the plane of human perfection, though not worthy of the Kingdom honors which belong only to the elect. And the elect are those only who are gladly sacrificing their lives and their all to gain the great prize.

Our Lord commented upon the matter to his disciples and added that the rich must have great difficulty in connection with their endeavor to enter the Kingdom. He said, sympathetically, rather than in a denunciatory manner, "It is easier for a camel to go through the needle's eye than for the rich to enter the kingdom of God." This astonished the disciples very greatly; for they knew that the majority of the religionists of their day belonged to the wealthy class, the Scribes and the Pharisees. They replied, "Who then can get into the Kingdom, if these cannot?" Our Lord's reply was, "With men this is impossible, but not with God." Men would be inclined to say that God would find no one for the Kingdom at all if he rejected the rich.

In a word, no rich man can get into the Kingdom. He must give up everything to the Lord or else be barred from a place in the Kingdom. The terms of acceptance are the same to the rich as to the poor. He who would have the "pearl of great price" must sell all that he has in order that he may obtain it. The rich must give up all to the Lord, and then as stewards of their riches will be held responsible for their stewardship.

The following little poem describes the needle's eye, or small gate beside the larger gate, through which the camels might pass into the walled city after sundown and without any of their burden. So the rich by unloading and becoming poor may have access to the Kingdom:—

THROUGH THE NEEDLE'S EYE.

"Tall was my camel and laden high,
And small the gate as a needle's eye,
The city within was very fair,
And I and my camel would enter there.
"You must lower your load," the porter cried,
"You must throw away that bundle of pride."
"This I did, but the load was great,
Far too wide for the narrow gate.
"Now," said the porter, "to make it less,
Discard that hamper of selfishness."
"I obeyed, though with much ado,
Yet still nor camel nor I got through.
"Ah," said the porter, "your load must hold
Some little package of trust-in-God."
"The merest handful was all I had,
Yet 'Throw it away,' the porter bade.
"Then lo, a marvel! the camel tall
Shrank to the size of the portal small,
"And all my riches, a vast estate,
Easily passed through the narrow gate!"

WHAT YOU SAW IN THIS PAPER

35 Years ago To-day.

Mr. H. Boone has commenced on his new residence on 9th street.

A wag lent a clergyman a horse that ran away and threw him, and then claimed credit for spreading the gospel.

A case of suicidal or accidental drowning took place on Friday last. Mr. Jan. Schreuer and boy in riding over the bridge on Friday, had noticed a bag standing near the edge of Mr. Howard's dock. Toward evening they concluded to look and see. Picking up a pocket book, containing about $12, fell out of the mouth of the bag. Inside were a few articles of clothing. The bag was taken to the office of Justice Post. In the course of the next day, Saturday, suspicions were entertained and inquiries made. The clothing was somewhat identified and it was surmised that the party to whom it belonged was Joseph Midman, a German, about forty of age, unmarried, and living north of Port Sheldon, on a small tract of land purchased some five years ago from Mr. Ten Hagan. On Sunday the body was found afloat alongside the dock, confirming the ideas entertained on the preceding day. A coroner's inquest was held, and several witnesses were sworn and examined. Dr. B. Ledeboer examined the corpse and testified that he found no bruises or wounds of any kind, and that there were no indications of blows before death; also that he knew of instances when bodies would float within twenty-four hours after drowning, in cases where strong drink had been used. The jury rendered a verdict of accidental drowning. The deceased had a brother living at Saugatuck, who was duly notified of the event. The jury consisted of G. Lauder, P. Koning, C. Dek, L. T. Kanters, U. DeVries and J. De Everhard.

Accidents, one after the other without intermission, appear to be in store for Holland this season. Having hardly taken down the details connected with the suicide of Joe Midman, on Monday morning, but what we heard of another sad accident, just happened on the shipyard of Messrs. Baas & Schols. Four boys of Mr. E. Vander Veen had went there to play that day. In the course of the forenoon three of them climbed on Ferris' stump-machine, which is a concern at least twelve feet high with lever and chains attached. They fastened one of the chains, in such a manner that the lever projected horizontally from the top of the machine. While seated on there the chain slipped and one of them, Willie, eleven years old, fell and was struck by this lever or chain in the right side causing internal injuries. He was carried in the house and died within an hour.

M. Hy. Potts has moved the Ottawa Courier down to Grand Haven. Hy says his paper will be the only straight Democratic paper in the county, and his friends wish him to make it a success, both politically and financially. Ed they are both dead.

WHAT YOU SAW 25 YEARS AGO

Over fifty tents have been pitched at the park and are occupied by campers. Tents are in great demand, and it is with difficulty that guests can be accommodated.

A sad accident happened in Overisel last Wednesday afternoon at the farm of Mr. John Dubbink. Mr. Dubbink was drawing wheat into his barn and the horses becoming restless and nervous from the flies stepped forward until the front wheels of the wagon dropped from the floor of the barn to the ground, a short distance, probably two or three inches, but enough to scare the team which started to run. Mrs. Dubbink seeing them running jumped in front of the now thoroughly frightened horses with the purpose of stopping them and was run over, the horses stepping on her and the wagon passing over her body. She was picked up, taken to the house and despite medical aid expired at 5 o'clock, just four hours after the accident. Mrs. Dubbink was 25 years of age, an estimable lady and leaves her husband and three children.

WHAT YOU SAW 20 YEARS AGO

Marinus, the 6-year old son of L. Mulder, publisher of the Grondwet, while playing near the house Monday afternoon fell from a stepladder and broke his right arm, near the wrist. Dr. Van Putten rendered the necessary medical aid.

WHAT YOU SAW 15 YEARS AGO

There was quite a spirited contest at Macatawa Park Thursday morning between the Holland and Zeeland gun clubs. There were six representative shooters from each club and the outcome of the first event at 25 singles was as follows:

Zeeland: A. Kampe, 18; H. Har-sten, 19; F. Hieftje, 21; A. Smits, 23; H. Van Ebeck, 19.

Holland: C. J. De Roo, 18; D. Blom, 7; G. Bender, 19; W. Thomas, 12; P. Dulyea, 15; C. Harmon, 12.

There was also a shoot at 20 single birds for a purse of $10 and the score resulted. W. Thomas, 10; H. Karsten, 15; D. Blom, 9; C. Harmon, 10; A. Eding, 12; P. Dulyea, 8; A. Kampe, 14; H. MAN BELONGS TO HIS AGE

Essentially Subject of Environment, Life in Other Periods Would Be Impossible to Him.

Could a man, were he given the opportunity, really live in any age widely remote from his own? Modern philosophy tells us that life is then at its highest and best when the organism is perfectly adapted to its environment. If this be so, then it is clear that any large, sudden and abrupt change in the environment must impair the vitality of the organism, and might even destroy it altogether. If we think of it, a Greek of the age of Pericles, a Roman of the age of Julius Caesar, would find it as hard to live the life of today as any man now alive would find it hard to live on were he by some freak of magic, to fall asleep in his own world tonight and to wake up tomorrow morning in the Athens of Pericles or in the Rome of Julius Caesar. The mere effort of the organism to adapt itself to the strange environment would benumb all its energies and arrest all its functions. You might as well expect a palm tree to flourish in the arctic regions. It would languish and die in the attempt.

Yet there are many worthy people who delight to call themselves old fashioned and are always longing, so they pretend, to live in some other and better age than their own. They make to themselves a paradise of a past they have never known and fondly imagine that were they its Adam and Eve no serpent would ever beguile them into wanting to know the good and the evil of the present. It is a vain aspiration and those who entertain it only succeed, so far as they succeed at all, in getting hopelessly out of touch with their own age.

POPULAR WITH THE FAIR SEX

Strange Fascination Exercised by Liast Over the Literary Women of His Day.

Though not of a specially passionate temperament, Liast exercised an irresistible fascination over the enthusiastic literary ladies of his day. They were all at his feet, and, as he seems always to have had an eye to the main chance, he chose from time to time some lady of high rank as well as mental ability to unite her life with his. The Comtesse d'Agout ("Daniel Stern") and Princess Caroline Sayn-Wittgenstein were successively the arbiters of his destiny, and Doctor Knapp recounts a good many other episodes more transient if less important. There was a singer of great eminence (we are not told who she was) who made her way into his presence in male attire, hopeless of attracting him by other means; another threatened to murder him; and altogether his experience read like a rather crude melodrama.

It is curious that when he was only sixteen his dying father warned him that women would upset and dominate his life. As Doctor Knapp says, "He was neither made to do without a woman nor to remain faithful to one alone."

Indian Superstition.

Dying to order is one of the most sacred customs of the American Indian. Thirty years ago Standing Elk came to Maj. James McLaughlin, the author of "My Friend, the Indian," and said: "Father, my wife will die to-day, and she wants a coffin from you." The major asked him what the ailment was, and he replied: "Just nothing, but she heard the ghosts calling and must go." Somebody had told her, it turned out, that she was sick, so she had "painted for death" and all her relatives had gathered about her to bemoan her—and incidentally to divide her property as soon as she was dead. There was no use in the major arguing about it, so he had the coffin made. In many cases those "painted for death" are actually bullied into dying, but Mrs. Standing Elk was still too vigorous. Finally in despair she carried the coffin into the house on her own shoulders, and several years later the major saw it still standing on end in her house. Shelves had been fitted into it and it was doing duty as a cupboard.

The Growth of Languages.

There is an interesting and from the national point of view a satisfactory statement in the statistics lately published in an Italian paper concerning the growth of modern languages. According to the figures given the English language, which a century ago was spoken by 20,000,000 individuals, is now the means by which no less than 100,000,000 give expression to their views of things. French, on the other hand, has spread less than any of the chief European languages, for whereas it was used by 34,000,000 men at the beginning of the nineteenth century, it is now spoken by 46,000,000. Seventy million individuals speak German today, against 36,000,000 100 years ago; 69,000,000 Russian, against 30,000,000; 32,000,000 Italian, against 18,000,000, and 44,000,000 Spanish against 30,000,000.

Two Evils.

"It must be awful to be caught with the goods on you."

"It's worse to be caught with the goods off you. I forgot three of my wife's errands yesterday."

No Insult.

He—I never look at you without thinking of a menagerie.

She—Sir!

He—Yes, your dear face and tapering, you know.

A Beer Strike.

Did you ever hear the likes of that? We won't pitch a bundle or lift our fork until you pass the beer! is the greeting that met John B. Slagh the other day on his farm in New Holland. It was threshing day and as has been the custom in this vicinity instead of the proverbial "comitje coffee" it has always been the amber brew. The threshing gang lined up soldier fashion with forks presented, ready to march away at the command of their leader. Beer was the watch word and that they must have. Mr. Slagh realizing that he never would get his wheat to mill if this condition continued pleaded and cajoled but the cause of the men finely won out and one of the fleetest steeds made haste to Holland where an ample quantity of Val Blatz and Grain Belt were procured. The men thirst satisfied and the cobwebs removed from their throats, the threshers song was heard for miles around, and the work went merrily on.

G. J. DIEKEMA

The Man who is Worthy

Remember to come to the Primaries on SEPT. 6th, and cast your vote for him. He deserves to be returned.

Well wifey things look pretty good on the farm. Fine crops and all that so me and you and the kids will take the Holland Interurban for Jenison Park on Farmer's Picnic Day, Aug. 17th, by Heck. There will be doings all day long, not mentioning the barbecue, where there will be free roast ox and lamb for everybody. You know what a fine time we had last year and the day is meant for us.

The Ball Game

The Eighth street River street Indoor baseball game played out doors yesterday at Jenison Park at the Merchants picnic was as much of a circus as Buffalo Bill and Ringling Brothers rolled into one. Both teams marched upon the field with blood in their eyes and both were looking for scalps. Abe Stephan and his faithfuls formed the defenders of the River street honors and Jack Schouten with a bunch of old timers took up the cudgels for Eighth street. The score at the end of the game stood 8 to 6 in favor of Stephan's aggregation of players, but the River streeters had to stand some hard knocks before they achieved this result as the Eighth street bunch was game to the core.

Peterson was umpire and his famous smile was proof against all kicks. Van Tongeren, who did much to make the game a go, also did much to make it interesting by making a sensational catch on a dead run. VanderPloeg and Dekker caught a fly in a four handed catch. De Loo's pitching for River street was the sensation of the day, and Schofield, manager of the Bell Telephone company who played first and Mitchell as catcher played as veterans. Sooy was there with the goods bringing in a run by a famous steal. But VanderMeulen, who acted as catcher for Eighth street did the most sensational stunt of all. He tried to catch a ball with his mouth, but slightly misjudged it and took it on his nose. Vander Sluis was very much in evidence as a base runner and in various other ways, and there were many other features of the game too numerous to mention.

The Eighth street bunch attribute their defeat to a strange circumstance. In that variety of ball a team can place ten men. But 8th street never noticed that it was only playing nine men until the 8th inning and then they started to raise a kick.

The crowd was wild with excitement and if the Michigan State League could stir up as much enthusiasm there need be no fear of keeping Holland on the baseball map. Following were the line ups;

River street, DeLoof, pitcher; Mitchell catcher; Schofield, 1st baseman; Kramer, 2nd baseman; Van Ette, 3rd baseman; J. W. Kramer and Orr, short stops; Vissers, R. F.; Vander Poel, C. F.; Dekker, L. F.

C. Vander Meulen, catcher; Jack Schouten, pitcher; M. A. Sooy, 1st base; John Vandersluis, 2nd base; Fred Beeuwkes, 3rd base; Geo. Steketee, short stop; H. Van Tongeren, right field; Joe Brown, C. F. Len Visser, L. F.

Grand Rapids Man for Diekema

Another word of favorable comment and praise for Congressman Diekema is contained in a letter just received by J. J. Cappon of this city from Wm. A. Wallin of Grand Rapids, one of the leading tannery and leather manufacturers of the country. Mr. Wallin's letter, coming from so well known and well posted a business man as he is recognized to be, bears considerable weight with the voters of the Fifth district, being as follows:

July 29, 1910

Mr. John Cappon,
Holland, Mich.

Dear John:—

I see by the papers that Congressman Diekema will have to make a fight to get the Republican nomination this fall. It seems there are others.

I think you know that I spent a good deal of time in Washington during last year. I saw a good deal of national politics and politicians. I met a large number of the members of the House and the Senate and I also met a lot of the best newspaper men of the capital representing the strongest papers in the country. While on the free hide fight there was in Washington a constant stream of men interested in the struggle coming and going whose particular business it was to meet the legislators, size them up and then compare notes.

Through all this touching of elbows I had unusual opportunity to judge the standing of many members of Congress. I heard frequent criticism and occasional applause. The result of this judgement is a firm belief, that our Michigan delegation is an unusually strong one. It is away above the average. There are men in congress who are not a credit to the district that sends them, men you would refuse to take to your home and claim as a friend; but the men in our Michigan delegation are clean, able, high-grade men, and of the delegation none are superior to Mr. Diekema. In fact, in all fairness to the others, I think it may be said that although Mr. Diekema is serving his first term and several others out-rank him in length of service, he has in many ways become the leader of the delegation. This is witnessed by the cordial support given him by every Michigan member in his candidacy for the speakership. It is remarkable that a first term should have the entire support of his own state as a candidate for Speaker, it is more remarkable that he should have strong support outside of his own state. It is true that Mr. Diekema has this support, and more, I believe he has more than even chances of winning the election.

Of course you know Mr. Diekema's character, home life and business life are above reproach. Honest, clean, forcible, able and shrewd, he should be returned. He has already won for the Fifth District a place in national politics. He has made a national reputation. It would be a serious loss to Grand Rapids and to the district to change him for any new man.

With kindest personal regards,
I am, Yours truly,
VAN A. WALLIN.

JOB FOR THE FOOL-KILLER

Had He Been on the Lookout Inquisitive Passenger Certainly Could Not Have Escaped.

It all took place on a car the other day. Most of the passengers had made a mental note that the man with his jaw tied up was suffering from the toothache. The ever-present individual with the never-absent interest in the other fellow's ailment leaned over and spoke to the apparent sufferer.

"Does it keep you up nights?" he spoke. The toothache man never replied.

"I'll bet it's a double tooth," continued the inquisitor, "and that the dentist couldn't pull it out without an awful lot of trouble and that—"

"You fool," muttered the man around the corner of the bandage.

"Oh, all right," replied the stranger, "if that's the way you feel about it I won't say another word, but you are old enough to know that you shouldn't be riding on a car, for the cool air striking an exposed nerve causes an ache and that there are thirty-five hundred nerves radiating from your gums and that the exposure of any one of those is liable to cause more trouble, and furthermore every time you bite down on a piece of food you use enough force to close a door—why I knew a man who actually went crazy with the toothache—he looked a bit like you, too, and I often told him that the best way to stop a raging toothache was to go and take a—"

By this time the man with the aching molar had signaled the conductor, left the car and was rapidly beating it to the sidewalk.

"Strange," muttered the inquisitor to another passenger sitting alongside, "how unfriendly a man with the toothache is!"

BAD BOY FOOLED OLD LADY

Got Away With Toy and Left Helper in Somewhat Embarrassing Situation.

When a kind old lady, in walking along a residence street, beheld a small boy struggling vainly to reach something between the gratings of a tall iron fence surrounding a palatial residence, she paused to watch his operations. The object of his quest she discovered to be a handsome mechanical toy, an automobile that would run when wound up. The boy had a stick with which he was trying to pull the machine toward him, but as he could barely reach it, the struggle was well-nigh hopeless.

"Let me try it," said the old lady. "My arm is longer than yours."

"All right," replied the youngster, relinquishing the stick.

Getting down on her knees the old lady, by dint of much stretching and careful manipulation, gradually worked the machine toward the fence and at last had the satisfaction of seeing the little boy grasp it with eager fingers.

"Now," she said, "you must be more careful and not let it get away with you again."

"Gee," said the boy, "it never got away from me, an' it ain't goin' to neither."

"Wh-wh-why," faltered the old lady with the dawning of a horrible suspicion. "Isn't it yours?"

"You bet it's mine now," said the kid and away he scampered, leaving the good old lady alone with her conscience.

Invisible Animals Alive in the Sea.

The shore of the sea permits the study of more than the poet's horizon or tinted shell. There are tiny animals that live and move among the plants of the sea, and these may be observed clinging to any favorable ocean object. "A small fragment of bark, streaming with fine plant-like growths," says Howard J. Shannon, in the June Harper's, "is cut from the water-worn timbers which the receding tide has exposed; and this apparently insignificant fragment, populous with curious life, is placed in a glass of water beneath the microscope. . . . Veritable miniature forests appear, endless vistas open, teeming with curious interest and populated by creatures more strange and more wonderful than any the imagination can conceive."
