Soil Experts Say Reed Canary Seed Good for Wet Land

Poorly Drained Areas Can Be Reclaimed By Proper Seeding

Grand Haven, Aug. 1.—Plantings of Reed canary grass are the solution for the low, wet areas on farms that cannot be drained economically, according to Glenn W. Eaton in charge of the local West Ottawa Soil Conservation district office.

Not only will these wet areas be put into production but will produce green succulent feed for the upland pastures have become dry and dormant.

L. R. Arnold, Ottawa county agricultural agent, says that there is a large acreage of potentially fertile land in Ottawa county which because of poor drainage grows very little palatable forage, and that Reed canary grass is especially suited to these conditions.

John Alderink, Ernest Styf, Albert Heyn, Ernest Beck, Jack Olsen, and other farmers in the district are well pleased with the success they have had in raising Reed canary grass, according to Ed Long of the district staff, who is aiding co-operators of the district in establishing conservation practices on the land.

A fine, smooth, well-packed seed bed is to be preferred whenever possible. The attempts to get a stand on marsh grass sod or any other unprepared seed bed have been largely unsuccessful.

Since the areas to be planted to Reed canary grass are wet in the spring, seed bed preparation is difficult. The best time to prepare a seed bed is in the dry part of the summer, at which time the areas can be worked down into a good firm seed bed.

Further information as to when to seed, seeding rates and seeding instructions can be obtained from the county agent's office or the West Ottawa Soil conservation district office.

Ionia Schedules Annual Free Fair

Ionia, Aug. 1.—Persons exploring the shrunken value of their entertainment as well as living cost dollar these postwar days will still find the Ionia Free Fair going on for six days and six nights, Aug. 5-10, giving them the biggest entertainment value for their money in the state this year.

The fair, inaugurated in 1915 as the first free fair of the nation, is still maintaining its traditional policy of charging no gate admission. In addition to that, it is giving a week's program of entertainment, besides those for which admission is charged, that rivals the paid attractions of many a show, professional as well as community.

"For free" during the week and for which no patron, whether single or the head of a swarming family of children, has to pay a single, inflated penny are: light and heavyweight horse pulling contests; a calf scramble; an auction of last year's scrambled steers; a husband calling and a hog calling contest; a half-million dollar machinery exhibit; a new model automobile exhibit; thousands of displays in livestock, agriculture, art, flowers; a free, medical x-ray program; two special breeders sales, one by the Hampshire Breeders association; a 10-van army exhibit; and a nightly fireworks display.

Red Cross Aids Social Aid Bureau

Mrs. Bert Welton and Mrs. Peter Paulus, "old-faithfuls" in the making of surgical dressings for the Red Cross, were among the first to help on the local chapter's new project, making surgical dressings for clients of the Bureau of Social Aid here.

Because the bureau's budget does not fully cover medical supplies, the Red Cross is purchasing materials and making the dressings for aged and sick persons who require them.

Holland and Grand Haven chapters are turning out quotas of dressings each month.

Red Cross production rooms at 6 East Eighth St., will be the scene of the bulk of the work, but some may be let out to church groups or individuals who prefer to work at home. Mrs. Adrian Bort, production chairman, will give instruction on the making of bandages to workers in the production rooms Thursday afternoons from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Both Mrs. Welton and Mrs. Paulus contributed outstanding records in hours of work on surgical dressings during the war.

Typhoid Fever, Disease of Filth, Is Preventable

Contaminated Water, Food, Milk Supplies Carry Typhoid Bacilli

Typhoid fever is a disease of filth. It is commonly a disease of youth and early adult life, from 70 to 75 per cent of cases occurring in persons between 15 and 30. But typhoid is also a preventable disease and its prevention depends upon supervision of cases and carriers to prevent further spread.

Typhoid is caused by the typhoid bacillus, an organism which lives in the human intestine. It gains entry to the body through the mouth and leaves in body wastes. Once outside the body the organism soon dies unless conveyed to water, milk or food which becomes contaminated and spreads the infection to others. Contaminated water is the most common cause of the disease.

Despite its dangers, there are no rules or regulations in Holland pertaining to the prevention of typhoid. City Health Officer Ben Wiersema reports that many people have their water supplies checked of their own accord and professional well-diggers usually send a water sample to the state health department to be tested before they declare the job finished.

Waters such as Lake Macatawa at Kollen park are frequently checked for typhoid germs, he said, but it is never 100 per cent safe because the situation, may change even from one day to the next.

Persons who have recovered from typhoid sometimes harbor and excrete typhoid bacilli for long periods. These carriers are always a possible source of infection and are the most difficult problem in the control of the disease.

Under regulations of the Michigan Department of Health they are forbidden to engage in the handling of milk or other foods or living on premises where such supplies are for sale. Suspected carriers and exposed persons are under similar rule and all must submit blood and other tests required by the department at frequent intervals.

Each individual can be protected against typhoid. The general immunization course as reported by a local physician, is a series of three vaccinations at weekly intervals. This series may immunize the individual for the rest of his life, but it is best to repeat the process each three years, he said.

Holland school children, although immunized against small pox and diphtheria, are not vaccinated for typhoid, according to the Ottawa County Health service. Few people are immune to the disease, they report. Doctors, nurses, hospital employees and servicemen are commonly immunized and also people who are going into areas where typhoid is prevalent.

Anyone is susceptible to typhoid; therefore, everyone should make it his personal duty to immunize himself against the disease for the safety of himself and his community, health authorities say.

DAIRY BUILDING BURNS

Grand Rapids, Aug. 1.—Fire of unknown origin yesterday destroyed the Green Vale dairy farm building at Eastmanville, owned by Gerritt J. Buth, causing $30,000 damage.

Many a home is the scene of such a happy occasion when childless parents adopt a baby. A shortage of adoptable babies has resulted in a seller's market in children but the new adoption law in Michigan, effective since Sept. 1, 1945, makes it difficult to transact an illegal adoption, Ottawa officials declare.

Childless Gladdened by Arrival of Adopted Baby

Prospective foster parents far outnumber the number of babies offered for legal adoption.

The result of a "seller's" market in children—estimates say there are 50 to 100 foster parents for each adoptable baby—has resulted in fierce competition by the childless.

Theoretically, adoption of a child is a simple matter—as simple as any legal procedure. In practice, many suitable foster parents are disappointed because there just aren't enough babies to go around.

Conditions in Ottawa county roughly parallel those elsewhere in Michigan in supply and demand. County agencies, of course, adhere to the law.

"Adoption is a legal method by which a child becomes, through probate court action, part of a family other than that of his natural parents. The motive for an adoption should be the desire to bring about a happier life for both the child and the adopting parents."

This explanation is what the Michigan Welfare League and the Michigan Society for Mental Hygiene have published in their pamphlet, "How to Adopt a Child in Michigan."

Adopting a child in Michigan is relatively simple if the proceedings conform with the Michigan Adoption law, Public act 324, which became effective Sept. 6, 1945. This law provides uniform adoption proceedings for the entire state enabling adopting parents to obtain a child from any licensed children's home in the state. However, if a child is taken from a placement home in a county where the adopting parents do not reside, final adoption proceedings are made in the county where the adopting parents will live with their child.

Inter-state adoption is more complicated and if the legal proceedings are not closely followed the state cannot accept responsibility after the child is taken into the state.

No child can be legally placed or received in any home for the purpose of adoption without a prior order of the probate judge, who in Ottawa county is Miss Cora Van De Water. Subject to a prior order of the probate judge a child may be placed for adoption by his natural parents or guardian, by a licensed placement agency, or by any public child welfare agency.

Before a child can be placed in a home for the purpose of adoption the probate court orders an investigation, usually made by the county agent. Investigations can also be made, at the direction of the court, by a licensed child's placement agency, the Michigan Children's Institute or the State Department of Social Welfare.

Mrs. Ruth Van Duren is in charge of children's services in Ottawa county and conducts these home studies. She investigates the physical and mental health, emotional stability and personal integrity of the adopting parents. She also investigates their ability to promote the child's welfare.

The physical and mental background of the child and his family background is also studied. She then submits a written report of her findings to the probate court.

Mrs. Van Duren said no blanket adoptions are made. This is, every baby placed in the home of adopting parents was placed there because it is believed the child fits into the home and not simply because the adopting parents desire a child in their home.

To protect the future security of the child the results in these investigations are not open to the public. Also there is no cost to the adopting parents for the adoption of a child. The law provides criminal punishment of anyone who offers or gives any money in the adoption of a child.

Adopting parents desiring information regarding the adoption of a child should first go to the probate court in the county where they live and obtain all information regarding legal requirements and court procedures. Prospective adopting parents in search of a suitable child should contact the nearest licensed placement agency or the Michigan Children's Institute at Ann Arbor.

After a child is placed in a home, a one-year waiting period is necessary before the child is legally adopted. During this time the county agent frequently visits the home to determine the child's physical and mental development and to judge if the child fits into the home of the adopting parents. In few cases the one-year waiting period is waived, usually when the child's natural parent remarries and the new husband wants to adopt his wife's child.

The natural parents desiring to place their child for adoption can go to probate court or a child placement agency where they are required a sign a release. The parents or an unmarried mother are the only persons able to sign the release of their child. If a child is more than 10 years of age he is also required to give his consent to an adoption.

After a child is adopted a birth certificate is issued bearing the names of the adopting parents. This certificate is sent to the adopting parents on authorization of probate court. The original certificate of his natural parents is kept on file by the bureau of vital statistics in Lansing.

There is no age limit for parents desiring to adopt a child. However, it is good practice, socially, to fit the age of the child with the age of the adopting parents so that when the child reaches an adolescent age, his parents have reached approximately 50 years of age or younger.

There are many placement agencies in the surrounding area. The Michigan Children's Aid society and St. John's Home are located in Grand Rapids; Muskegon Children's Home in Muskegon and a Michigan Children's Aid society located in Kalamazoo.

However, no matter where the adopting parents obtain their child, whether it be in another county or state, final adoption proceedings are made with the probate judge in the county where the adopting parents reside.

Is Holland Fire-Jinxed? 1:30 p.m. Blazes No Joke

It might ordinarily happen two or three times in a row but when the fire alarm rings at 1:30 p.m. or thereabouts for a week in succession, it is strange indeed. Of course, there are exceptions to everything, even when it comes to fires, and those firemen by now must be getting used to dropping their games at 1:20 to get all set for the "daily" at 1:30.

The blaze Wednesday was a grass fire on 32nd St. near the Vogelzang Hardware warehouse,

Robert Post Killed As Motor Scooter And Car Collide

Sheriff's Officers Probing Accident on Port Sheldon Road

Robert Earl Post

Robert Earl Post, 17, son of Burt L. Post, local jeweler, was instantly killed Friday at 10:55 p.m. five miles north of Holland on the Port Sheldon beeline when the motor-scooter he was riding collided head-on with a car driven by Clarence Van Voorst, 22, of 272 East 15th St.

Post, apparently en route to the cottage at Port Sheldon where the Post family was resorting, was traveling north and Van Voorst and his companion, Glenn Slagter, 18, of 183 East 16th St. were driving south.

Van Voorst said he saw a moving object within the lights of his car about in the middle of the road and thought the rider would move over.

Van Voorst said he was driving at approximately 40 miles per hour and Post's speed could not be determined.

Post was riding without lights and it was understood he had had trouble with the vehicle's lights earlier in the evening. Some reports which had not been confirmed this morning by sheriff's officers, said he stopped at a service station to have the lights checked earlier last night.

Sheriff's officers who arrived on the scene about 15 minutes after the accident said Post must have been killed instantly. They reported that neither Post nor the scooter had been run over by the car, but the scooter became tangled under the front of the car and was dragged a considerable distance. Post was either thrown from the scooter or dragged with it after the impact.

Preliminary investigation showed that at no time was Van Voorst driving on the wrong side of the road. Further investigation was being made today. No charges had been made against the driver this morning.

Post was born Aug. 7, 1928 in Zeeland and attended Holland schools, enrolling a year and a half ago in Howe Military Academy at Howe, Ind. He would have been a senior at the academy this fall.

Active in scouting, he was a member of air scout squadron 7 of Third Reformed church and became an Eagle Scout in June, 1943. He had also served as a member of the camp staff at Camp Ottawa, Newaygo. He was employed by Model Drug store this summer.

The Posts live at 404 West 12th St. Surviving are the parents and two brothers, Dale, bugler at Camp Ottawa, and Jarvis, 4, both at home.

English Writer Finds America Fascinating

Mrs. Phyllis Glendinning Denny, free lance writer of Essex, Surrey, England, who arrived in this country July 18 for a visit of several weeks, writes her impressions of the United States and Holland. Mrs. Denny, who busied herself during the war with Red Cross activities in behalf of the servicemen, both English and American, finds America a fascinating country. She is a guest in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Plasmann, 235 West 19th St. Her home, 15 miles from the heart of London was in the "blitz" area.

Her comments follow: "Just a week ago I landed at LaGuardia field, N.Y., after what was for me a wonderful experience—my first flight. I felt then, and still do, that I realized the full significance of the title, "New World," as applied to America. It is for me, and I am sure it must be for all the inhabitants of the distressed countries, a breath-takingly lovely new world.

"I have only traveled about one-third of the way across this vast and varied land, but I have met a fair cross-section of people and talked with many, and my chief impression was of warm friendliness, independence and a child-like curiosity about the stranger from England which was not at all impertinent but very charming.

"The scenery through which I traveled was superb; at times strange, of course, but often curiously like England seen through a magnifying glass. That goes too for the American way of life intensified, enlarged and enriched. We passed through many cities on our way from New York to Michigan, but none exceeded and few equaled this beautiful city of Holland.

"We have villages in England of great antiquity which are gems of beauty, but our cities do not bear comparison with any here, especially Holland. Some of our cathedral cities are very beautiful with the mellow peace which age and suffering and the loving care of generations has given them, but Holland is to me, new, and yet has much of the graciousness which age brings. The planning and general layout is superb, and the wide roads with their large and beautiful trees and charming white houses thrill me anew every day. Everywhere it is so clean, so orderly, and even on the hottest days there is no dirt, dust, flies or unpleasant odors. Macatav bay on a sunny breezy day—a blue and gold day—is a sight never to be forgotten.

"I had never met my host and hostess before, (Mr. and Mrs. Plasmann), except through letters, but they received me as if I were an old and dear friend, and now, only a week after my arrival, I feel I have lived here for years. Dutch Victorious Over Lansing VFW In 6-0 Shutout

Van Wieren, Lefty, That is, Strikes out 17 Batters to Win

Behind the smooth hurling of Lefty Van Wieren in Riverview park Monday night, Holland's Flying Dutchmen marched to a 6-0 shutout victory over a Veterans of Foreign Wars team from Lansing.

Van Wieren, displaying top form, fanned 17 batters out of 27 men at the plate, collected two hits for his personal string and found time to score a pair of runs.

Holland's first run came in their half of the fourth inning when Russ Woldring whammed a neat triple to center field and scored on Juke Van Huis's single to left. Van Huis stole second but was put out at third to eliminate further scoring possibilities.

In the lucky seventh the Dutch collected four more tallies off the hitting with a double to left field. A single to left by Wayne De Neff advanced Van Wieren to third and he scored when Van Lente singled to center. Van Lente stole second, went to third on the second baseman's error and loped across home plate on a single to right field by Catcher Loren Wenzel.

Harry De Neff reached first on the Lansing shortstop's error and he and Wenzel both brought home the bacon when Woldring singled to center field. Juke Van Huis connected with another double to left field but was stranded when Mouse Van Wieren struck out. Frankie Bagladi was put out at first to end the inning.

Lefty Van Wieren again scored in the eighth when he singled to right field, hurried to second on a passed ball, reached third when De Neff went out at second and scored on Harry De Neff's single to right field.

Van Wieren allowed only two hits for the visitors, both of them singles, while the Dutch squeezed 13 out of Ozanich. Lansing moundster, Eight Dutchmen went down swinging before Ozanich. Van Wieren walked one Lansingite and Ozanich allowed four safeties. Wenzel and Van Huis each snagged three hits for the locals and Lefty Van Wieren and Woldring accounted for two each.

Japinga 'Sticks Up' For Team's Rights

(From Wednesday's Sentinel)

Norman Japinga, of the Ford baseball team in the Legion league, presented a legitimate "beef" Wednesday morning over the 5-2 score in the Hart-Cooley vs. Fords game Tuesday night and officials have been asked to decide whether to order a play off.

According to Japinga, who has argued his point with Dick Oggel, Legion baseball chairman, and with umpires for Flying Dutchmen games, the final score should have been 3-3 and the downed Fords are entitled to a playoff despite what Ernie Haight's scorebook says.

Victor, who was credited with a triple in the fourth inning, should have been given only a "ground-rule" double, says Japinga, because the ball landed in the run-way under the grandstand where, in Riverview park, it is automatically considered a two-bagger.

This, Japinga explained, would have scored only two runs in that inning for Hart-Cooley instead of the four with which they were credited.

Then, Japinga added, Fords were "gyped" out of an extra run in the seventh. Bakker who walked to first scored, he says, as well as Piersma who got a single in that inning.

Thus, says the protester, the final score would stand at 3-3.

Japinga said Oggel would have to discuss the matter with the Legion board before any decision is made on the protest or a possible date set for the playoff.

SEEING A PICTURE WHOLE

President Charles B. Shuman of the Illinois Agricultural association has issued a warning to the farmers of that state which might well apply to those as well who live in Michigan or for that matter
in any state. "Don't plow up your pasture land and ranges to provide soil for wheat crops in response to idealistic appeals for European famine relief," the Illinois man warned.

The temptation is always great to look at only part of an economic or social picture. Many people whose knowledge of the subject is limited to their experience with actual wheat in Europe have been calling upon farmers to cultivate every inch. They see only the immediate need; they don't realize that much of that land is unsuitable for wheat. Nor do they see that by disturbing the balance of wheat and grazing
they are, on a long-term basis, actually reducing the food supply of the country.

They are like the dear illusioned ladies who want all the sweet little bunnies carefully protected by law, not understanding that the bunnies eat up the crops that dear little children need to keep alive.
Nature is ruthless about such things, but it maintains a balance. When this balance is artificially broken, trouble follows.

On a smaller scale agriculture
as a whole has to maintain a balance. If the sobbing of relief enthusiasts, no matter how sincere such sobbing may be, disturbs the balance, trouble also follows. The national economy as a whole requires an adequate meat supply as well as wheat and corn. When pastures are plowed under for a big scale the meat supply inevitably dwindles, and meat hunger
will replace bread hunger.

This timely warning has application to a great many situations all over the nation. Congress is full of crackpots who see the food supply problem only in terms of their own partial portrait of a temporary or local need. And they are constantly being bombarded by outside crackpots who, sincere though they may be, do not see the picture whole. They sob not tears and they call any farmer hard-hearted who does not instantaneously abandon his own native sense and adopt their point of view.

For some years the whole New Deal administration was dominated by such crackpots, and millions of farmers all over America yielded to their blandishments. They killed food animals and plowed under food crops in defiance of common sense. It is time for the American farmer to become individualistic again and to develop the good sense to follow his own nose. Farmers should know much more about raising crops than do politicians.

Jesus and the Sabbath
Exodus 20:8; Mark 2:23-28
By Henry Geerlings

The practice and teaching of Jesus regarding the Sabbath gave great offense to His religious enemies. They had made up their minds that He was an utter here-tic regarding this venerable institution. They watched Him and His disciples closely and time after time they observed that they violated the Sabbath law. Time after time He healed on the Sabbath. Now He and His disciples go through a grain field on the Sabbath and because they are hungry they pick some grain and eat it and this gave offense to the strict sab-batarians. To do that is plainly against their law concerning the Sabbath.

Finally Jesus answered their criticism most searchingly and overwhelmingly; but it seems that their prejudices and fixity of mind left them innocent of any gleam of truth that Jesus tried to show them. He appealed to their sense of history, but it seems they had none. He tried to show that man's need and man's welfare are always above a law or an institution. But that was lost on them.
Jesus' appeal was like water flowing against a granite wall. Then He uttered those great and immortal words that apply not only to the institution named for the Sabbath, but to every sacred institution. "The Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath."

The Pharisees had taken the law of Moses and had built of it a vast array of prohibitions and injunctions respecting the Sabbath.
Many of them were silly and surprising. That seems as if man could hardly create such prohibitions with any thought of people accepting them. They made of this seventh day a burden, a kind of a holiness prison. Under their idea and use of it, it lost all of its useful and valuable significance. They seem to have robbed it of every vestige of its original purpose. It became a day of repression, not of expression; a day of gloom, not of gladness; a day of don'ts rather than do's; a day of tying the soul rather than liberating it. But we must not be too hard on these Pharisees when we remember the old Puritan Sabbath. It, too, was a day of gloom. There was scarcely a feature about it that would bring any inspiration to a man's soul. It was a day that seemed from this distance to concentrate every thought upon the sternness
of God and upon His fine detective qualities in searching out our hidden sins and tendencies.

Some of us were brought up on the doctrine that it was wrong to whistle on the Sabbath and that the blinds of the living rooms had better be down than up. We were made to believe that the less we were in evidence the holier we were keeping the day. Indeed there are some people who still cling to the Puritan conception of the Sabbath, but of course their number is very small. And yet the question persists as to the worth of some Puritanical practices for safeguarding our American Sunday. Perhaps some of the old-fashioned religious strictness of the colonial ancestors could be profitably allowed in some degree even in modern life.

The tragic fact of this day is that the present generation is swinging to the extreme and Sunday is treated with scant respect.
It is no different from other days and they are not different from other days. It may give opportunity to do some things that we have not been able to do during the week just preceding. Why should there be a Sunday at all? Is the question of many. We might counter with, why should there be any means or instruments for the welfare of man? Why should there be courts and libraries and railroads and airplanes.

The Sabbath was appointed for man's good, his welfare, his development, his unfolding life. It is to be used as a means to an end.
The more restrictions that are built around it the less the day can minister to man. And it is likewise true that the more wide open it is the more it loses its real significance. It is a day for rest and refreshment and rebuilding and inspiration and greater outlook upon life. It is a day to give wings to a man's soul and liberty to his heart for the exercise for its best affections.

A man may do anything on Sunday that will not lessen his respect for and his outlook upon God,
that will not make him less sympathetic with the suffering and needs of his fellow men, that will not make him feel at the end of the day as if he were a mere crippled fly crawling over the window panes of a great world-house.
Positively a thoughtful man should want to use the day for expressing—his deepest feelings about God, should want to give some time at least to real contemplation of the eternal values and to realize that he is not a mere material substance. Sunday may be the soul's library day, a day that forms the shining way over which a man may travel to the great satisfactions that a human spirit needs. The Sabbath was made for man—any arbitrary or mechanical trying to fit man into representing notions of the day destroys its value.

LOADING FOR A LONG FLIGHT

This bulldozer dug and wheeled for eight days on the sand ridges at Holland State park and now the mile-long beach is one graceful slope from the

the huge sand deposits was authorized by the parks and recreation division of the State Department of Conservation a few weeks ago following requests by the Holland Chamber of Commerce.
The contract was awarded to the Veltkamp Con-

Kiwanians Hear
Atomic Lecture

Dr. John Wierda, chairman of the science department of Long Island City High school, spoke on "Atomic Energy" Monday evening before local Kiwanians in the Warm Friend tavern. John Van Dam, program chairman, introduced the speaker.

In giving a brief history of chemistry dating back 150 years,
Dr. Wierda pointed out the discovery of radium by Madame Curie was the start of work on atomic energy.

Speaking about the atomic bomb, Dr. Wierda said, "The only secretary is how they control the start of fission and how they keep them under control until such time
as they want to get it to go off."

In discussing the use of atomic energy for everyday civilian use,
the speaker asserted, "An atomic powered automobile is something that will be impossible until there is a more effective means of sealing the radiations that come from it, because these radiations are very destructive."

The following visiting Kiwanians were introduced: Carl S. Bittner, Napoleon, O. J. A. Hixon, St. Louis, Mo., and August Grunow, Phoenix, Ariz. Kenneth Allen of Holland was a guest.

Civil Air Patrol Receives Federal Charter in Bill

Unit's War Service Recognized; Cadet Program Continues

Civil Air Patrol, war-born volunteer auxiliary of the Army Air Forces, has been granted a federal charter with the signing of a bill by President Truman and unanimous passage by Congress. Charles R. Sligh, Jr., commander of the Holland CAP unit, announced today.

The charter places CAP beside such public-purpose organizations as Red Cross, Boy Scouts, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans and the American Legion and is the first such charter approved in 13 years.

This unusual recognition was ascribed in House and Senate to CAP's war service on anti-submarine coastal patrol, border patrol, target towing, missing aircraft search, and other missions flown by civilian pilots in their own planes to relieve military aircraft and crews for duty overseas. More than 50 CAP airmen were lost.

Organized in all 48 States, with local units in more than 1,000 communities, CAP also served on a large scale as a recruiting and pre-induction training corps for Army aviation. For the future it will have a close tie-in with the Air Reserve.

The objects of CAP under its charter are:

- (1) To provide an organization to encourage and aid American citizens in the contribution of their efforts, services, and resources in the development of aviation and in the maintenance of air supremacy, and to encourage and develop by example the voluntary contribution of private citizens to the public welfare.
- (2) To provide aviation education and training especially to its senior and cadet members; to encourage and foster civil aviation in local communities and to provide an organization of private citizens with adequate facilities to assist in meeting national or local emergencies.

All units of CAP are trained and equipped to go into action as AAF auxiliaries in event of war and, at any time, to fly in such emergencies as flood, forest fire, explosion, or missing aircraft search. The nationwide organization was alerted last month for duty in carrying medical supplies during the rail strike. CAP members serve without salary or reimbursement for expenses.

The CAP cadet program, for young people of 15 to 17, inclusive, carries no pledge of military service but is considered an important source of recruits for the AAF, the Air Reserve, and the Air National Guard. Many AAF veterans are joining CAP as a means of continuing their aviation interest and are instructing the cadets needed as airmen become over-age for combat flying. Air Reservists who join CAP will be credited for time spent in teaching cadets.

Moving operations from the former location at 224 Central Ave. were completed Monday.

To improve small and inadequate housing facilities at the Central Ave. location, the firm decided to move to where it will have ample room and parking facilities and where all business operations can best be performed. Service conveniences have been emphasized in the new location for the benefit of customers.

Henry Ter Haar, proprietor, invited the public to attend his opening "inspection day" to view the all-brick building which features a large showroom and repair work space.

Consideration for the mechanics is included in a lunch room, equipped with tables, lockers and showers in the basement of the structure.

A new feature of the firm's service will be a bump and refinishing department.

In addition to all the latest shop equipment, a new motorcycle "servi-car" and a service truck to pick up and deliver cars as well as a courtesy car with a full time driver are service features of the enlarged business.

Mr. Ter Haar, who has been in the garage business for 22 years, has been local agent for Oldsmobile cars the last 15 years. Midland Newsman Finds West Most Friendly Region

Impossible to Keep Peeves Caused by Delays in Journey

(This is another of Phil Rich's articles telling about his Alaskan trip with Reardon J. Nehil. They reached Ketchikan Monday.—Editor)

By Phil Rich
SEATTLE—This could be a pet peeve story. But people out here are so friendly one cannot keep his ire up long.

It was this way. After winging in here—a 14 hour trip from Chicago—we had trouble sending a wire home. Western Union said that although it was 8.10 out here the office in Midland was closed. (11.10). The bellboy had deposited $2.10 for wires in the "automatic" but the operator would not send them until morning. So we phoned home at $1.60. The manager at WU said today this was not their "usual service" and this condition would be corrected.

Then we got up at 5 a.m. to get on the Ketchikan, Alaska, plane and someone made a mistake. Our tickets were pulled up in spite of the fact that we checked in at the field last night before going to bed. So we could not make it. Pan American and Northwestern got their signals crossed and we are stuck.

But we finally got back in the hotel for an "indefinite period." Then about noon Reardon phoned the office and they said to come down. Now we hold tickets for a "special flight" to Ketchikan, which is about 700 miles up the coast.

LUCKY we had tickets and letters confirming everything. We're novices at air travel. But it does pay to have it in writing. We cancelled a lot of reservations and telegraphed here and there to get things straightened out. The hotel was swell and took us back. The airlines were nice but firm: NO GO. So we hit here in Seattle for another day and a half.

On top of that my wrist watch band flew to pieces.

But one could sit in worse places than Seattle. I have always liked this town. Night before last when we came in over the mountains at sunset there was a beautiful red glow in the haze as we passed the Cascades. Mt. Rainier in all its snow-capped splendor stood as Seattle's watchdog. It's some 80 or 90 miles away but towers up in easy visibility on a clear day like today.

Last night we ate over at the Elks club. That's a great spot here and is rated as one of the best in Seattle. You can see the Olympic mountains through a couple of great glass windows. They still have some snow on them and as the sun went down and added a red glow to the west we could look out across the bay. It was a high grade view.

WE GOT a cab driver to take us on a tour. We saw a lot of carriers and battleships including the aircraft carrier Essex. All are being dismantled or "decommissioned" in the harbor. We drove among the beautiful homes with rock gardens of Elliot Bay and Puget Sound and then back to 28-mile-long Lake Washington and saw the floating concrete bridge across the latter. It is beautiful country with just enough mountains to make it interesting.

Travel is terrific now. It was boiling today, something over 90. They say here that it never gets hot—or cold—but it did today. But there is a cool breeze. The cabbie says he has geraniums all winter—they seldom freeze.

Lots of local meat coming on the market. The market on one of the main streets—offers round steak for 55c, T-bone for 65c, veal, lamb or pork chops at 55c. This is local meat the man says and there's lots of it depending on what you like. Also a great variety of sea food ranging from giant crabs to fish, smoked or fresh.

THEY WERE selling rose buds on the streets for 10c each, beauties.

One of the waitresses at the coffee shop at the B. Franklin wants to know if we're strangers. We admit it. She inquires where we are going. We say Alaska. She wants to know what part. "I have six brothers at Nome," she states, and lived there myself until two years ago. I'm going back. I love that country."

Her name is Mrs. Ruth Martin and she wants us to look up her brother, Ralph Ulrickson, and her brother-in-law, Pete Reader, and she allows the latter will take us out fishing and for pictures. Also that Mrs. Frank Martin, an Eskimo, might make us some mukluks—which are Alaskan snowproof boots.

Alaska travel is heavy now. Boat service is out of the question; they tell us. Air travel is packed. Fishermen are moving north for the big salmon runs and will come out in the fall. Tourists are plugging the lines.

If you can get to Alaska you can travel easily, according to Alaska Airlines, which has office in Seattle. But try to get there!!

First pre-marital examination law went into effect in the state of Connecticut in 1936. Thereafter similar laws were enacted in Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin.

VOLLEYS FROM AMBUSH

The Ambusher rubbed sun tans with the elite of the waterways over the week-end at the Fourth National Water Ski tournament of the American Water Ski association. Along with 8,000 other uninitiates we heroically tried to find out what the sport is all about.

In the first analysis it is evident the sport calls for physical endurance above average, a modicum of co-ordination, a reckless regard for laws of inertia and a fast speed boat.

The contestant rides on top of the water on two elongated butter pats while being dragged at speeds of 20 to 35 miles an hour, hurling natural hazards such as choppy water and the wake of boats and such unnatural hazards as jumps and fixed bouys.

Grand champions are named by adding up performance of each entrant in several events, including slalom, which is an obstacle race, jumping and trick riding. Spills are frequent and near spills add to the excitement for spectators, as contestants tilt for glory and prizes.

WHEN FRED Eggenschwiler of Bohn Aluminum attempted to locate a Detroit representative of the firm trouble began. The rep was vacationing at a remote place called "Lost Lake of the Woods." The Holland Chamber of Commerce uncovered no fewer than eight "Lost Lakes of the Woods" in Michigan and 25 lakes that were just "Lost." Eggenschwiler finally got his man.

Boyd De Boer is one man who can view the car shortage with some degree of calm. He has concocted an "all weather" car painted a flashy red. All this is crowned by a majestic brown and tan beach umbrella.

LOUIS Van Hartesvelt has come up with a most useful tool for fighting grass fires, plague of this driest of seasons. Louis has taken a 12-inch board, 10 feet long, and secured a pair of hand grips to the center. By dropping the board on the fire it is effectively smothered the length of the plank. The plank is then moved to the next section and so on. Louis says if the board is made of plywood it will be light enough for a woman to handle. This inexpensive tool sounds like a good idea.

We like this story because it involves price control at the consumer level. A man about town, whose name is withheld for obvious reasons, purchased a shirt from a haberdasher for $3.50. It was a white shirt. Remember that price, the story hinges around it.

Less than a week later, our M.A.T. chanced to buy two more shirts. For these he paid $1.79 each. Same shirts, same labels, same materials, different prices.

The buyer declares he'll never give the higher priced man any further business. Simple, direct and, we believe, effective. An American citizen has invoked his rights as a purchaser, the offending tradesman will be punished through loss of custom and no public funds were spent in control.

Allegan, Aug. 1.—Those big white birds that residents of southwestern Michigan have been seeing this month are American egrets, not albino great blue herons. Swan Creek wildlife experiments station reports. Some of these beautiful, pure white birds visited the station three times in the last week, and they are likely to be seen in Michigan, north of their nesting range, in August and September also.

Field Reduced to Eight in Local Club's Match Play Golf Tournament

The number of golfers in the American Legion Golf club tournament was reduced to eight today following results of third round matches. Joe Chamberlain defeated L. C. Dalman, Walt Hoeksema downed C. R. Trueblood, George Slikkers beat Frank Van Ry, Walt Reagan topped Al Timmer, Clarence Jalving defeated Eddie Rackes, Larry Lamb took a victory over Arrie Ter Haar, Lee Kleis beat Les De Ridder and Jim Hallan and Gerald Kramer tied at the end of 18. They'll playoff Saturday.

Pairings for the quarter-final round, which will start Monday, were announced by Tournament Director Paul Camburn. Kleis will play Jalving, Reagan vs. Slikkers, Hoeksema vs. winner Hallan-Kramer and Chamberlain vs. Lamb.

Chamberlain ousted Dalman three and two. Chamberlain took a two-hole lead at the end of the first nine and held it to the 12th where a par three gave him a lead of three. Dalman took 14 but Chamberlain came back to win 15 and when they halved No. 16 the match was over.

Hoeksema disposed of Trueblood when Trueblood failed to display the form he showed in beating Ernie Brooks last week. Hoeksema won holes one, five, six and seven and Trueblood only the eighth on the first nine. Hoeksema took 11, 12 and 13 to end the match six and five.

Slikkers entered the quarter-finals with a four and three victory over Van Ry. The match was even at the end of five but a bogey, a birdie and a par on six, seven and eight gave Slikkers a commanding lead.

Timmer lost to Reagan five and four. Leading by three strokes at the turn, Reagan won 12, 13 and 14.

Jalving and Rackes had a close match. Neither player took more than a one hole lead at any time. Jalving went one up with a par five on the 16th and then halved the 17th and 18th to win one up.

Lamb beat Ter Haar three and two. He assumed an early lead and held it against Ter Haar's continual threats.

Kleis won from De Ridder five and four. De Ridder was six down at the turn.

Hallan and Kramer played to a tie. Kramer had a one hole lead at the turn but Hallan won No. 12 to even the match and then went one up when he won the 16th. They both parred the 17th and Kramer's par on the 18th squared the match.

Midland Newsman Starts for Alaska Aboard Plane

Alcan Highway Plan Dropped After Inquiry Into Feasibility

(Phil Rich, Midland publisher, is off for a three months stay in Alaska. He will, from time to time, supply The Sentinel with stories of his adventures in the land of the midnight sun. This is the first. Others will appear from time to time.—Editor)

By Phil Rich

MIDLAND—We're off for Alaska. Wednesday we pulled out for that distant land... via air. There are two one-day stops and Saturday—with good luck—we hope to have lunch in Ketchikan with Emery Tobin, editor and publisher of the Alaska Sportsman.

Reardon J. Nehil and I have been planning the trip for months. I've had it in mind for years, in fact since 1939 when I first visited that vast wilderness paradise.

Back in 1940 I never was quite so unhappy as to have to turn down a trip up there with the Coast Guard. I had a telegram from the skipper to meet him in Seattle for a trip to Point Barrow in the Arctic via Dutch Harbor and the Seal Islands (Pribiloff) of the Bering Sea but I had to give it up. That was tough.

Since those days there were too many important things at home to be done. Every hand was needed. And I stuck to the most pressing job. But now it seems like a dream come true. We're off!

REARDON and I have explored every possibility for the Alaskan trip. We were going by boat. Then we discovered that the government still has the boats tied up under war-time regulations. You cannot get a reservation more than seven days ahead. And from Midland who can get ready for a long trip and be at Seattle in seven days?

So we tried the Alcan highway. We were shunted around from one Army group to another. Then, when the Army said it would be okay, the road was turned over to the civilians... to Canada and the Alaska road commission. Try to get over it! We finally got wound up in red tape in Washington and in desperation went and bought tickets via air.

Speaking of the Alcan highway, do NOT make any plans to travel this way for some years... maybe five. There are some 300 bridges or temporary-bridge rivers. The gas stations are miles apart. The accommodations are practically nil. It was an emergency Army road. Nothing else. And where an Army truck can go cars will have trouble, sometime, or most of the time.

BESIDES you have to have a real reason to get onto the highway. If you want to settle up north you might make it. But you must be prepared to eat, sleep, fix your own car, and carry your own gas. And CONVINCE the military that you are fit and able to get through on your own.

A Maj. Walter R. King at Washington wrote me: "The War department has turned the highway over to the Canadian government, retaining only the right to use it for military vehicles. Full jurisdiction over travel on this highway rests with the civil government of Canada at the present time. However, authorities on the Alaskan department inform me that it is impossible for civilians to enter the Alaskan territory over this highway at the present time."

"Several officers who have spent sometime in the highway and in the territory asked me to inform you that in their opinion such a trip in a civilian car over the highway would not be available. The road is in terrible shape inasmuch as it is a dirt highway and no attempt is being made to put it in shape for the full length."

THERE ARE no commercial facilities available along the road such as filling stations, hotels, garages for repair, etc. The Army has but few facilities and we have no authority to extend assistance or to furnish gasoline, oil or repairs to civilian vehicles.

The Major also said the War Department has no objection to travel, but lacked jurisdiction, etc., etc. It was all a shoo-away letter. And that's all you can get from the Army! So enough for the Alcan road. Unless and until Canada and U. S. do something about it, the road is a dud from a touring standpoint. And my guess is that it'll take years unless someone really raises hell and builds a fire under the plutocrats.

So here we are soaring out of Tri-City airport for Alaska. We'll stop off at a day at Chicago and another day at Seattle and then comes Ketchikan... way down in the southeastern panhandle section.

21 Teachers Are Needed in Ottawa

Grand Haven, Aug. 1 (Special) —D. H. Vande Bunte, county school commissioner, has reported that out of 112 rural schools in Ottawa county, 21 are still in need of teachers to fill vacancies caused by resignations at the close of school last May. In spite of the fact that World War II ended a year ago, shortages of teachers is still acute.

Unless legally qualified teachers are secured by the opening date of school, Sept. 3, several schools may be compelled to close and children transported to other districts. Every effort is being made to find teachers who are willing to teach the rural one-room schools where the greatest shortage lies.

Boards of education are offering up to $200 per month and in a few instances even more to engage a good teacher. Anyone interested in a rural school teaching position in Ottawa county should contact the office of Commissioner Vande Bunte in the court house at Grand Haven immediately.

Schools in north Ottawa which are still without teachers are Bignell, Grand Haven No. 5, Robinson No. 4, Olive No. 1, and Olive in Olive township; Polkton No. 9 and No. 11.

Cigaret Discounted as Cause of Tower Fire

Possibility that fire in the Youth Center at the Tower building was caused by a lighted cigarette was discounted Tuesday by Mrs. J. G. Van Leuwen, director of the Tower club.

"No smoking" rules are in effect at the club always, Mrs. Van Leuwen said, and there was definitely no smoking in the Youth center Friday.

Mrs. Van Leuwen said she did not know what caused the fire, but she was sure a cigarette was not the cause.

Custodian John De Bly notified firemen early Saturday morning when he smelled smoke. The floor, plumbing and electrical fixtures were damaged by flames.

Construction Here Totals $200,000 In New Buildings

Vets Housing Worth $78,000 Going Up On Two Sites Here

More than $200,000 in commercial construction is under way in Holland this summer including about $78,000 in government housing for veterans.

The government housing program includes 13 steel-framed houses for veterans and their families on Eighth St., between Maple and Pine avenues, and a large building on the Hope college campus for vet students.

Estimated cost of the Eighth St. houses is $56,000 and more than $20,000 for the buildings at Hope college.

Four new buildings are being constructed by businessmen.

Henry Ter Haar of the Oldsmobile-Cadillac and GMC truck garage on Central Ave., is ready to move into a $60,000 place at 711 Michigan Ave. The building will be used for car sales and service with a used car lot adjacent.

The Holland Veterans of Foreign Wars organization has under construction a $45,000 building just off River Ave., on Seventh St. The building is expected to be completed about Oct. 1.

It is two stories high. On the first floor will be club rooms, meeting room, kitchen, rest room, lounge and storage room. On the second floor is a banquet room, dance floor, cloak room, ladies powder room, kitchen and stage. A basement may be added later.

Forrest Maycroft and Grand MacEarchon of Grandville have the new Lincoln-Mercury garage on Seventh St., next to the new vets construction.

Maycroft said cost had not yet been totaled. The building is 83x122 feet, one story, with show room, offices, repair shop and stock department.

The Old News Printery will be moving from its second floor location above C. Thomas store on Eighth St. to a new red brick building at 74 West Eighth St. Estimated cost of the building is $15,000. Work will probably be completed by Sept. 15. The building is one story, 2,600 square feet and has two rooms—a workshop and office.

About 150 men have been employed in the task of constructing the buildings.

In the Lawley class Jack van der Velde smoothly took both firsts and Rex Young crossed the finish line second both times.

Bill Arnold and Ted Stickle took a first and second each in Crescent racing.

Death Takes Former Grand Haven Woman

Grand Haven, Aug. 1 (Special)—Mrs. Frank Weiss, 56, of Muskegon, died at her home Wednesday, July 24 after a year's illness. She was born Frances Falstaff, Jan. 1, 1890, in Chicago. In 1919 her husband came to Grand Haven from Chicago and purchased a restaurant which he and his wife operated for several years, and later sold to the late Robert Conant. They later owned and operated the Robinson township resort for a number of years. They retired and moved to Muskegon. Mrs. Weiss was a member of the Bethlehem Evangelical Lutheran church of Muskegon Heights.

Besides the husband, she is survived by two daughters, Mrs. F. James Klesgen and Mrs. Orlan G. Johnson, both of Muskegon; a son, Frank E., Jr., of Hart; a sister, Mrs. Henrietta Weiss of Ravenna, O.; and eight grandchildren.

Electric utility companies of the U. S. spent $482 million on new construction in 1942.

Annual value of coal mined in the U. S. is greater than all other metals combined.

Collapsible steel barrels have been developed to conserve shipping space.

Top photo shows the $56,000 veterans housing being built on Eighth St. between Maple and Pine avenues. Each of 13 buildings will house two families. Lower photo shows the large T shaped construction for vet students at Hope college. Cost of this building is more than $20,000. Both projects were started this summer when it was discovered there were not enough houses in the city to handle the number of veterans returning from the armed services to live here and attend college under the GI bill of rights. Galloping Withey and Worthington Capture Ski Honors at Holland

Lewis Withey, III, a 16-year-old Grand Rapids Central High school junior, was new national water ski champion today, in an upset victory.

The frail high school student won the senior amateur championship yesterday, after sweeping the junior title Saturday, to become the first double-champ in the same year to hold both titles.

As Withey was dethroning his godfather, Charles Sligh, Jr., of Holland, 1941 champion, Miss Willa Worthington, 18-year-old Oswego, Ore., entry, pulled an upset in the women's division by winning a championship against heavy favorites to give 8,000 spectators another surprise.

Withey, competing for the first time in national competition, swept all three places in the slalom, jumping and stunt riding in the junior events, but acquired the senior title the hard way—on accumulated points with three second places. His three second places gave him 900 points to edge out runnerup Sligh, who had 850 points.

Sligh, 40-year-old furniture manufacturer, took first place in men's jumping, and third in slalom and stunt riding. He was his godson's tutor when he took up skiing.

Bill Telling of Holland, third place winner, won first in the slalom, fourth in stunt, and tied for fourth in the jumping with Downing Pope, Winter Haven, Fla.

Miss Worthington, also competing for the first time in tournament competition, won first in trick riding, first in the slalom and third in jumping. She hopes to enroll at Linfield college, McMinnville, Ore., this fall.

Irene Boer of Holland, one of the heavy favorites, finished second, taking second in jumping and trick events, and third in the slalom.

Sligh won his title at Holland in 1941 and it was "frozen" for the duration. This week-end's tournament was the first national event since 1941. Lydia Mae Helder (Mrs. Mike Skaalen), 1941 women's champion, did not defend her title.

Graydon L. Blank, vocational agriculture teacher at Alma High school from 1939-46, has joined the staff at Michigan State college as extension specialist in animal husbandry.

Blank has a bachelor of science degree from MSC and a master of arts degree from the University of Michigan.

Under his leadership the Alma High school chapter of the Future Farmers of America recently won the gold award in a national FFA contest.

Attendance at the 1945 World Series between the Chicago Cubs and Detroit Tigers was 333,457, a record high. Receipts reached $1,592,454.

Rotarians Hear Dr. J. E. Kuizenga

Dr. John E. Kuizenga, professor of systematic theology at Princeton Theological seminary, spoke on the subject "What is New in Religion" at the regular Rotary club meeting Thursday noon at the Warm Friend Tavern.

In his discussion Dr. Kuizenga said that although the basic facts of religion have remained the same, there is a new feeling toward it.

In the field of medicine patients must be helped mentally as well as physically, and theological students, to recognize the fatherhood of God in medicine, are getting actual experience today in hospitals of the country, he said.

The only hope of the world economically, he said, is the embracing of the Galilean's principles who gave His followers the Golden rule. "Service to Humanity" must take the place of self-interest, thereby giving each an equal opportunity, he said. Christianity did not fail, he said, it was not tried.

Visiting Rotarians were Luther Dameron, Stewart, Fla.; Harry H. Hill, Vicksburg; J. F. Murphy, Detroit; Brick Travis, St. Charles, Mo.; Paul Bennett, Howell; Lee M. Barbecue Staged At Yacht Club

Members of the Macatawa Bay Yacht club staged one of the most successful events of the season Saturday night when approximately 180 persons attended a barbecue party and white elephant sale in the club house. Guests appeared in informal sports costumes for the event. Out-of-town guests included many who were at Macatawa for the national water-ski tournament.

A feature of the evening was square dancing under the direction of Charles Newman of Kalamazoo whose orchestra furnished the music.

Other special events on the club calendar include a fashion show in August and a costume party the last Saturday in August. Bridge luncheons continue in popularity each Wednesday afternoon; Thursday night is "family night," and dinner dances are held each Saturday. Meals are now under the direction of Paul Van Raalte of Holland.

Water Skiing is Modern Sport

Water skiing is probably the most modern of American sports. It is believed to have been introduced in 1930 by Don Isben of Seattle, Wash.

The sport drew little fan interest in its infancy but following its appearance at the French Riviera it became popular with Frenchmen.

Water skiing gained its first national prominence at the New World's Fair in 1939 when a team of Frenchmen presented daily performances.

It started rapid growth then. Although there were no championships during the war, its followers kept it alive. Saturday and Sunday on Lake Macatawa will be the first championship since 1941.

The average water ski is seven feet long and about six and three fourth inches wide. The foot is held in place by an adjustable rubber binding which will give sufficiently to release the foot in case of a spill.

Farm Accident Toll Runs High

Grand Haven, Aug. 1—More farm residents are accidentally killed in their homes than in any other place, according to the National Safety council. In 1945 6,500 home accidental deaths occurred to members of farm households. Another 4,300 farm people were killed in motor vehicle accidents. There were 4,300 deaths of farmers while at work, including 800 motor vehicle fatalities. Approximately 1,000 deaths resulted from public non-motor-vehicle accidents, both on and off the farm.

The farm resident accidental death toll was 14,800 in 1944, five per cent less than the 1943 total. In addition to the loss of life, one-fifth of the national fire loss in 1945 was farm fires which destroyed $90,000,000 worth of farm property.

L. R. Arnold, county agricultural agent, and R. E. Briola, district conservationist, soil conservation service, encourage every farmer to make a safety inspection of his own farm and remove all safety hazards so that this tragic loss may be stopped.

Dutchmen Leave 16 Men On Base; Lose to Chicago

Mike Skaalen Drops Second Game After Seven Wins in Row

The Holland Flying Dutchmen outthit the East Chicago Glants in Riverview Park Thursday night but left 16 men on base to drop a 5-4 decision. It was Mike Skaalen's second loss after winning seven in a row.

Two singles, two walks and an error gave Chicago two runs in the first inning and they added a couple in the third when Gentile Rollins belted a homer into the road over the rightfield fence with a man on base.

Holland left two men on base in the first inning, one in the second, three in the third, two in the fourth, one in the fifth and two in the sixth before breaking the ice in the seventh. They scored twice in that frame but left three men stranded. They scored twice in the eighth but left one man on and left another on in the ninth.

Chicago put across what proved to be the winning tally in the eighth on a walk, a single and double.

For six innings the Dutchmen found Bill Bridgman's southpawing baffling but the portside walked seven men in those frames to keep first and second base almost constantly occupied.

The locals finally got around to hitting the portside in the seventh but he was quickly removed when Harry De Neff singled, Juke Van Huis doubled and a couple men walked. With the bases clogged and two runs in, Ed Johnson took over. He got Skaalen on a pop-up and fanned Wayne De Neff to end the inning.

Don Van Lente, Loren Wenzel and H. De Neff singled in succession to start the eighth.

Van Lente and De Neff scored on Russ Woldring's triple after Wenzel had been caught going to third on De Neff's single to center. Johnson then fanned the next two batters to get out of the hole.

In the ninth, Lefty Van Wieren went to second on an error but was left there when Johnson retired the next three men.

It was Holland's sixth loss in 21 games and their second defeat on the home diamond.
