Mrs. Geo. Isel, east Tenth street, died Saturday, of consumption, aged 27 years, leaving a husband and three children. She was buried Monday, under the auspices of Hope church ladies' aid society. The officiating clergyman was Rev. J. Van Houte.

Sheriff Keppel, accompanied by Geo. Ballard, R. H. Habermann and Dr. F. M. Gillespie of this city, drove to the vicinity of Port Sheldon Saturday, and exhumed the body found on the beach the other day and which had been buried there. Ever since the unaccounted for disappearance of David Cronin last spring, all sorts of theories and surmises have been advanced, and it was this that led the authorities to pursue the above course. Upon examination of the body however, nothing was found upon which to base any identity.

Hendrik Van Eyk died Tuesday morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Rev. A. Stegeman, North Holland, at the age of 74 years. He was one of our early settlers, and for a series of years resided on his farm in Groningen, until he went west, to Dakota, returning from there only a few years ago. Mr. Van Eyk was a well-informed man. He was a long the first Holland colonists that took an active and leading part in the administration of local affairs in Holland township, holding the positions of township treasurer, supervisor and justice, way back in the 50's. In 1864 he bought De Hollander, and was its editor and publisher for four years. Mr. Van Eyk was an upright man and a true friend. On Thursday his remains were laid at rest in the Groningen cemetery, beside those of his departed wife. The funeral address was delivered by Rev. F. J. Zwemer, a former pastor of the deceased when both resided in Harrison, South Dakota.

Charles B. Scott, for six years connected with the St. Paul High School, has been tendered and has accepted the professorship of chemistry, geology, and physics in the New York State Normal Institute, located at Oswego. He is now spending his vacation at Macatawa, and will leave for his new field of labor early in September.

Geo. H. Souther adorned the editor's table with a collection of apples one day this week—Benonas, Primates and Tetofskies. The point George desired to make was this: These apples had not been sorted, and yet there was not a wormy one in the lot. He ascribed this to their having been twice sprayed with a solution of London purple.

The season for some of the game in this state opens as follows: Woodcock, Aug. 15; duck, gee-e, snipe, and plover, Sept. 1, partridge, and quail, Nov. 1. The Holland Rod and Gun Club again offers a reward of five dollars for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any one violating the game and fish laws.

Another attempt at robbing the post office in this city was made during the night between Wednesday and Thursday. This was evident by the chisel marks at the rear windows, and the hole that was bored on the front door, close to the lock. It developed during the day that the tools—a cold chisel, hammer, brace and bit—had been taken from Lanting's blacksmith shop.

Monday the Laketown dock will be open for business, and the stmr. of the Chicago-Holland Trans. Comp. will land there regular. In referring to this new enterprise the Saugatuck Commercial makes the following observation: "The next move will be a gravelled road leading well to the south boundary of Laketown township, the intention being to capture the peach shipments of that section. As the roads from Laketown to Saugatuck are the very worst, it is quite probable that if the Holland people carry out their program they will capture a considerable amount of trade which would otherwise come here."

Battle of Tebb's Bend.

Fought July 4, 1863.

BETWEEN TWO HUNDRED MEN OF THE 25TH MICH. INFY., AND GEN.
MORGAN WITH A FORCE OF THREE THOU-SAND.

The Twenty-fifth regiment of Michigan Infantry left the State and took the field in September, 1862. One of the companies (Co. I.) was enlisted largely from Holland and vicinity. After doing provost duty, guarding railroad bridges and chasing independent bands of confederate troops in various parts of Kentucky, the regiment in April, 1863, was ordered to Louisville, to do provost duty, the Colonel, Orlando H. Moore, being appointed provost marshal of the city.

This position was a very trying one. The duties involved were largely of a civil nature, the status of the negro, then and there, being specially complicated. Kentucky, though a slave state, had, as a state, never seceded from the Union, and hence President Lincoln's proclamation of emancipation did not cover her slaves. The loyal citizens of Kentucky, at least many of them, insisted that the legal status of their slave property should be recognized by the military forces, while the very presence of these forces demoralized slavery as an institution and foretold its doom. It can therefore be inferred how as provost marshal of the city of Louisville, Col. Moore got involved in all sorts of difficulties. His immediate superiors were Kentuckians, whose sympathies were naturally with their own people, while the Colonel's view on the negro question were those of a northern abolitionist. The pressure on the part of the "blue bloods" and the antagonism of Geo. D. Prentice with his powerful Louisville Journal, were too much for Col. Moore and in due course of time he was relieved as provost marshal.

There was a good deal of hard feeling connected with this removal, on the part of both. With one-half of his regiment, companies D, E, F, I and K, he was ordered to Green River, June 10. Intimation was received at head-quarters that an invasion of Kent was imminent.

1893, not even to such a superior cavalry force of 3,000 men, commanded by Gen. John H. Morgan.

The accompanying diagram has been drawn from recollections by the resident survivors of that battle in Holland, aided by an outline furnished by Col. Moore during his visit to this city, some years ago, and will aid the reader somewhat in a proper understanding of the battle of Tebb's Bend. It will also convince him of what it is to an army, large or small, to have a commander that knows how to utilize his surroundings and force them to contribute to his success.

The regiment having arrived on the banks of Green River about June 15, it went into camp, on the north side. This was in Green county, about 10 miles north of Columbia. The road crossing the river at that point was the main wagon road running north to Lebanon and Louisville. On the morning of July 2, Col. Moore was advised by union citizens that Col. Basil Duke and Johnston, under command of Gen. Morgan, were crossing the Cumberland river to invade not only Kentucky, but to also carry their raid into Indiana and Ohio. Morgan's object being to liberate thousands of rebel prisoners and destroy millions upon millions of government stores and supplies. Morgan's command consisted of between three and four thousand picked men, with able officers. The nearest union troops to Tebb's Bend were thirty miles distant, and there was nothing left for Col. Moore but to fall back upon his own resources. He felt it his duty to resist Morgan and retard him even if it were only for a few hours, as they might be of immense importance to either Louisville or Cincinnati.

Col. Moore made a thorough examination of the topography of the country, and selected for his battle-field a horse-shoe bend on the south side of the river, about one mile from where the regiment was encamped. The road on which Morgan was advancing ran through this bend. Near the river was a small wooden fortification, a stockade, erected there by previous detachments to guard the bridge. Had Col. Moore selected this spot he and his command would have been gobbled up in less than no time. The battle-ground had high bluff banks, affording protection to the flanks, and compelling the enemy to fight us upon our front. This front had been protected as well as the limited time allowed. The defence consisted of felled trees on the battle line, which was in the rear of an open field, and intended particularly as an obstruction to the advance of cavalry, while to the front, about one hundred yards in an open field, was thrown up a temporary earth-work, or rifle-pit, intended to check the enemy's advance.

This earth-work could not be held against charges of a superior force, on account of the sides, or flanks, not being protected. Therefore at the opening of the battle it was occupied by only seventy-five men, who were instructed that when it became necessary to abandon the work, it should be done by flanking to the right and left from the centre, so as to unmask the force along the battle line and expose the enemy to their fire along the entire front.

Col. Moore had imbued his command with an enthusiasm, and a devotion and confidence in him unsurpassed in any other organization in the service. He told them, and they believed it, that there were no rebel troops organized that could whip them upon their own front, as long as their flanks were protected. Col. Moore was a thorough soldier, an officer in the regular army, and he had drilled his regiment by the bugle. It was this that confounded Gen. Morgan greatly during the battle, as he was led to infer from the bugling the presence of a strong cavalry reserve.

On the evening of July 3, Col. Moore broke camp, crossed the river, and occupied with his command the ground previously selected and prepared for the battle. That same evening Gen. Morgan encamped with his entire command about 5 miles south of the river.

The next day was to be the Fourth. And what a memorable day it would be! Gettysburg had just (July 1, 2 and 3) been fought; Vicksburg was about to capitulate; and here on the banks of the Green River was to be witnessed one of those memorable exhibits of American valor, of which the late war has furnished us so many striking instances.

That night our men slept on their arms, knowing that in the morning it was to be demonstrated of what metal they were. Remember, they had never been in action before, and this engagement was to be their "baptism of fire."

At the gray of morning—it was about 3:30 o'clock—the fire of the rebels upon the pickets resounded through the woods and the entire division of Gen. Morgan was pressing upon our front. The fire was returned with spirit as our pickets felt back upon the breast-work and joined the 75 men already stationed there. (It was at this time that Peter Verschure, of Co. L, who was one of the pickets, fell, mortally wounded.)

Gen. Morgan had a battery of light artillery, four pieces, with him, and having planted it where Col. Moore expected he would, opened fire, disabling two of our men. He then sent in a flag of truce, with the following dispatch:

HEADQUARTERS MORGAN'S DIVISION, IN FIELD IN FRONT GREEN RIVER STOCKADE, July 4th, 1893.
To the Officer Commanding the Federal Forces at Stockade near Green River Bridge, Ky.:
Sir—In the name of the Confederate States government, I demand an immediate and unconditional surrender of the entire force under your command, together with the stockade.
I am, very respectfully, sir,
JOHN H. MORGAN,
Commanding Division Cav. C. S. A.

As to the nature of the reply made by Col. Moore, there is no dispute. But when it comes to the exact phraseology made use of by him, there is a marked discrepancy between the recorded page, and the recollections of those that stood within hearing of the peremptory refusal. But be that as it may, upon this disputed point we at this time prefer to follow the record:

"Colonel Moore rode forward between the lines, where he met the delegation of rebel officers, who appealed to him with marked courtesy and diplomacy, urging the surrender of his command, and promising kind treatment, as their only interest was to move forward in their course. Colonel Moore replied: 'Present my compliments to General Morgan, and say to him that, this being the 4th of July, I cannot entertain the proposition to surrender.'"

"Col. Alliston, of Morgan's staff, said: 'I hope you will not consider me as dictatorial on this occasion; I will be frank; you see the breach we have made upon your works with our battery; you cannot expect to repulse General Morgan's whole division with your little command; you have resisted us gallantly and deserve credit for it, and now I hope you will save useless bloodshed by reconsidering the message to General Morgan.' To this the Colonel replied: 'Sir, when you assume to know my strength you assume too much. I have a duty to perform to my country, and therefore cannot reconsider my reply to General Morgan.' The rebel officer seemed to be moved by these remarks, extended his hand, and, with a moist eye, said: 'Good bye, Col. Moore; God only knows which of us may fall first.' All turned their horses and galloped in opposite directions, and at once renewed the conflict. No sooner had the rebel battery reopened fire than Col. Moore commanded the force to 'rise up and pick those gunners at the battery,' and no sooner was the command given than a deliberate and deadly fire by the ranks was delivered, which silenced the battery. Col. Johnson's brigade then charged the rifle-pit, and the little command abandoned it, as previously instructed. When the rebels reached it they found that it availed them nothing against the deadly fire which was poured into them from the main force on the battle line in the timber.

"The rebel foe, with a hideous yell, charged across the open field eight successive times in the face of the terrible fire, which repulsed them on each occasion, with severe loss. The conflict was almost a hand-to-hand struggle with nothing but a line of felled trees separating the combatants. At the same time the rebels were engaged in cutting out a gorge leading through the precipitous bluff into the river bottom, which had been obstructed with felled timber. The entrance was finally effected, and a regiment, commanded by Col. Chennault, opened fire upon the right flank of the line of the Union troops. This was a most critical and trying moment; the rebels had gained a most important point; to defeat it was of the utmost importance. Company E had been held in reserve for any emergency which might arise during the battle; it was now brought forward, deployed as skirmishers across the river bottom, with the right flank extending beyond the rebel line, and presented the appearance of being the advance line of reinforcements.

"The strength of Col. Moore's command was a matter of doubt with the rebels, rendered more so by his having instructed his men to keep quiet and pour in as rapid and deadly a fire as possible. As cheering was suppressed, nothing but the efficacy of the firing afforded ground for estimating their strength, and when Col. Moore brought forward and maneuvered the reserve company with the shrill notes of his bugle, it had the desired effect of impressing the rebels with the idea that reinforcements of cavalry or artillery were advancing, and by the bold front and deliberate firing of the line of skirmishers the rebel command in the river bottom was routed, the rebel Colonel commanding killed, and they were promptly driven back through the gorge through which they entered, disheartened and defeated."

Col. Moore was everywhere, encouraging and inspiring his men. His horse was wounded. The fighting at times was terrific. In his official report he says:

"The battle raged for three and a half (3½) hours when the enemy retreated with a loss of over fifty (50) killed and two hundred (200) wounded. Among the killed were Colonel Chennault, Major Brent, another major and five (5) captains and six (6) lieutenants, as far as can be estimated. □

The conflict was fierce and bloody. At times the enemy occupied one side of the fallen timber while my men held the other in almost a hand to hand fight. The enemy's force consisted of the greater part of Morgan's division. My force was a fraction of my regiment, consisting of two hundred (200) men, who fought gallantly. I cannot say too much in their praise. Our loss was six (6) killed and twenty-three (23) wounded.

After the battle I received, under a flag of truce, a dispatch asking permission to bury their dead, which request I granted, proposing to hold them in front of our lines."

Gen. Morgan seeing he could not dislodge his enemy gave up the fight, managed to ford the river some distance below, left his wounded behind in charge of a surgeon, and continued his march to Lebanon.

The battle of Tebb's Bend, for its size, and in its results, was a most important one. If Morgan had not been checked he would have made his way into Louisville, and destroyed millions of dollars worth of government stores and a large number of locomotives and rolling stock. The confederate sympathizers had on the quiet made preparations to receive him with tables set, fresh horses, and steamboats ready to transport his command to the Indiana side of the river. Louisville had no troops except the other five companies of the 25th Mich. Infy. The delay enabled the city to be reinforced. Gen. Morgan admitted that his defeat at Tebb's Bend knocked the bottom out of his raid. The heroic resistance and gallant fight at Green River encouraged the small force at Lebanon, which was the next point of attack, to make a gallant defence, although Morgan finally forced them to surrender.

The battle of Tebb's Bend was an independent battle, not ordered from headquarters or directed by any commanding general, but entirely planned by Col. O. H. Moore and fought under his command. Gen. Morgan's tribute to the 25th Mich. Infy. was that it might be wiped out, but that it could not be whipped.

For the memorable fight and splendid victory Col. O. H. Moore and his command received the thanks of the Kentucky legislature. The Louisville Journal, which only a few weeks previous had seen fit to abuse Col. Moore most terribly, among others had this to say:

"Col. Moore's repulse of a force equal to twenty or twenty-five times his own was one of the most chivalrous affairs on record. Though it is unquestionably history, it reads like the wildest romance."

We do not think that Col. Moore made a very good provost marshal when he was here, but he fights like the devil. We rashly invited him to make a charge with his fraction of a regiment upon the Journal office, but we now hope he won't do it. We apologize. We retract. We back out. We knock under."

ATTENTION FARMERS!

There is no use running to Zeeland to buy your Farm Implements, or anything else that you can buy just as cheap, and some a good deal better at the stand of J. FLEEMAN, River St. My own make Lumber Wagons, with double Truss Braces, to which I will challenge any man's make, as for light running and finish is concerned. Rock Island Bake and Hay Loader. No more use for Hay Rakes now. This Loader takes the Hay, just as the Mower leaves it, rakes it up and loads it on the wagon. No matter how hard the wind blows, the hay must go on the wagon.

TALK DON'T GO.

I will here challenge any and all makes of Hay Loaders on a field trial of five acres. Will take the same number of horses and men, and then see which will do its work the quickest and best. The machine which comes out ahead to receive $100, besides the competing machine. This amount I will deposit in the Holland City State Bank, providing my competitor does the same.

Old Reliable Buckeye Mower and Binder, and the Wm. N. Whately Mower, either of which cannot be beat.

MICHIGAN FARMS.

Some Interesting Figures Taken from the Census Bulletin.

The Farmers of the State Are Gradually Getting Out of Debt, While the Residents of Cities and Towns Increased Their Liabilities.

MORTGAGE STATISTICS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 8.—The farmers of Michigan are gradually reducing their indebtedness, while the people of the cities and towns of Michigan are gradually increasing their debts. This is the general conclusion affecting Michigan in one of the most instructive statements the census officials have yet received. It covers the farm and city indebtedness of the whole country, showing that farm mortgages have increased more than 70 per cent. in the last ten years and city mortgages more than 216 per cent. In the face of this general increase the showing made by Michigan is one of exceptional progress. The number of farm mortgages made in Michigan in 1880 was 27,611, amounting to $30,547,833. Since then the number and amount has gradually fallen until 1889, the last year of the present census, the number made was 24,438, amounting to $18,859,377. This shows a reduction of more than 800 farm mortgages within the decade. On the other hand, the city and town mortgages made in Michigan increased from 11,720 in 1880 to 19,459 in 1889, and the amount increased from $3,594,000 to $16,673,000.

Adding the mortgages made in the last ten years to those previously existing, the total mortgage indebtedness in force in Michigan on January 1, 1890, was as follows:

Farm mortgages, 144,923, amounting to $95,753,329; city mortgages, 78,738, amounting to $54,719,371.

The total Michigan acreage covered by mortgage on this date was 9,669,723, and the total number of city lots, 129,752.

The average life of Michigan farm mortgages is five and one-half years, the average of city mortgages four and two-tenths years. The average unpaid amount on each farm mortgage is $66.55, on each city mortgage, $69.5. The total mortgage debt of Michigan, farm and city, is 13.92 per cent. of the taxed valuation of real estate. The mortgage indebtedness is at the rate of 72 per capita for every man, woman and child in the state. Each farm mortgage covers an average of sixty-seven acres and each city mortgage an average of 1.67 lots. Of the entire number of farms of Michigan 30.06 per cent. are mortgaged. The annual interest on Michigan mortgages is $10,727,335, of which the farms pay $6,886,788 and cities $3,890,547. The bulk of Michigan mortgages are at 7 per cent., but sixteen out of every hundred are at 8 per cent., and a few run as high as 12.

Resort Notes.

This has been a gala week at the Park. The annual assembly is being held with an excellent programme, both as regards the speakers and subject matter. The hotel and every cottage at the park is filled, and the other resorts are also receiving excellent patronage. The illuminations at the cottages near the Grand Rapids landing every Saturday evening are very fine, that of Hon. John Steketee being especially beautiful. They are made with "fairy lamps" such as were used on the wooded island at the Worlds Fair. Watch for them when you go down to the Park Saturday evening.

Independent of the fact that Monday was the opening day of the Assembly it was an eventful day at Macatawa Park. Early in the morning Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bird drove in from Douglas with the intention of spending a week or ten days. While looking for a suitable camping place in Glen Arthur, their team, a very spirited one, became frightened, ran a way and overturned the conveyance. The lady was thrown forcibly to the ground and had one of her limbs severely fractured. The accident robbed them of their long anticipated summer's outing, as it was deemed advisable for them to return home in the afternoon, after the injured woman had received necessary medical attention.

In the evening, soon after the supper had been concluded at the Macatawa Park Hotel, one of the large lamps in the dining room fell and the burning oil ignited the floor and furniture. There was no one in the room at the time, but the crash was heard by Mrs. Ryder and her employees, and by the prompt use of water and wet blankets they succeeded in extinguishing the flames. A table and half a dozen chairs were destroyed and a large hole burned in the floor. It is the first damage sustained by fire in the eleven years that Mrs. Ryder has had the hotel.

A meeting of cottage owners at Macatawa Park was held at the Auditorium some time ago to consider various matters of interest both to themselves and the Park Association. At this meeting a committee composed of Messrs. Harris, Steketee, Stowe and Powell, of Grand Rapids, and Dr. Garrison, of St. Louis, was appointed to prepare a report to be submitted at a future meeting. This meeting was held Saturday night, with quite a large attendance to hear this report. It was concluded to form a cottage owners' organization, with a president, secretary and treasurer, the three to constitute the executive board. For the present the organization will only be of an informal character, owing to the fact that the park is located in two counties and a special act of the legislature will have to be obtained before a permanent organization can be effected. It is proposed that each cottage owner contribute $5.00 annually toward the maintenance of the sidewalks and the protection and care of their property during the winter season. Mr. W. E. Calkins, the chairman of the meeting, was selected to solicit names, and he reports that thirty-five cottage owners have already signified their intention of joining the organization. At the first meeting there was a disposition shown to criticize the Park Association for their failure to keep the sidewalks in good repair and make other needed improvements. At the Saturday night meeting, however, the committee stated that the Park Association spent on an average $500 a year in keeping up the walks, and that in many other respects they had done more than their share. Besides this, the Association had volunteered to invest $500 toward lighting the park by electricity, providing the cottage and lot owners would contribute $200, which was looked upon as being a liberal proposition. The feeling as between the cottage owners and the Association is now very harmonious, and it is anticipated that with the earnest co-operation of the two organizations much good will result another season.

Captain Morton of the life saving station says that no one can be accused of fabricating who makes the statement that two ton of perch were caught from the south pier last Saturday and Sunday. One hundred and fifty persons were seen fishing from this pier at the same time.

Messrs. Luman and Lucius Jenison, the owners of the Jenison Park Hotel, have been refurbishing a number of the rooms in their hotel. They asked for figures both in Grand Rapids and Holland, and found that the same designs at J. A. Brouwer's were much cheaper than those offered by the Grand Rapids competitors. Consequently a Holland merchant made the sale.

Holland as an Educational Centre.

The fall term of Hope College will open on Wednesday, Sept. 19, the examinations for admission being held on the day previous. In anticipation thereof President Kollen has sent out a word of greeting to those interested in Christian education, from which we gather the following:

"Our past year has been a prosperous one. Some 225 students were enrolled; who, by their diligence in study and commendable deportment, brought credit to the institution.

The change in the curriculum, by which the natural sciences were given greater prominence, was hailed with enthusiasm on the part of the students, and has given a popularity to the College, which is very helpful.

While the College is widening its course of instruction, it is the aim of the Faculty that it shall not do this at the expense of depth and thoroughness. Thus it is the purpose to lay foundations broad and deep, well calculated upon which to build a professional course.

Knowing that Hope College offers a thorough practical education, at a relatively small expense, where the young are especially surrounded with Christian influences, we do not hesitate to invite all who desire such an education, to avail themselves of these advantages.

With improved accommodation, enlarged facilities, and a Faculty of experienced men, who teach the lower classes as well as the highest, we feel confident that we can do a good work in the course of education.

Parents, are you blessed with such children? Then, if possible, give them a chance to become men and women of power and influence. Pastors, have you such young people in your parish? Give them a helping hand, and give direction to the latent power that may some day do great things for God and for humanity. Teachers, give an encouraging word to the brightest and best of your pupils. By your timely advice, you may unearth a diamond, albeit unpolished, as yet, that will in the course of time be a shining light in Church and State.

For catalogues and further information address Prof. J. B. Nykerk, Holland, Mich., or seek a personal interview with any of the faculty.

The faculty is composed of—

Gerrit J. Kollen, A. M., LL. D., President. In charge of Logic, Moral Philosophy and Psychology.

Twelve years ago we built the finest mill in Western Michigan and the first one constructed, in the section named, on the then new ROLLER PROCESS system. Competitors predicted the speedy downfall of this innovation but the flour produced by us was of such manifest superiority that they were speedily compelled either to imitate us or fall hopelessly back and out of the ranks.

The steady growth of our trade has incited us to make additions from time to time and now compels us to enlarge our milling capacity and our buildings.

We will tell you more about this later and want to assure you now that we can take care of all our trade till we resume grinding, from stock on hand.

Watch this column for an invitation to witness the starting of our new machinery.

The steamer City of Holland experienced some delay by her grounding Friday, and did not leave on her return trip for Chicago until Saturday morning early, instead of the evening before. Her bow was on so hard that it required extra efforts to get her off, and a Muskegon tug, the Crosby, was sent for. Trifling as the accident was, it has nevertheless been the means of securing a vast amount of gratuitous advertising for the steamer and the line. Considering that the boat missed her dock within a very few feet only and by reason thereof got her bow in the mud; that the passengers were taken off and landed without any delay, trouble or inconvenience; that there was no damage incurred whatever, the steamer upon being loosened resuming at once her position on the line and that all the loss sustained by the company is a tow bill—considering all this, it was amusing to read the extra-vagant reports manufactured for the daily press of Grand Rapids and Chicago. Think of such statements as the following:

".....As soon as she struck the sea made a clean breach over her, but the frightened passengers were seen huddled on the lee side of the cabin and were then in no particular danger...."

Among them were many women and some children, and to these the situation was one of terror. The women cried, while the shrieking children clung to their skirts. The men and officers tried to pacify the frightened passengers, assuring them there was no danger, but their efforts met with but little success. As the sea would break over the side of the boat and sweep everything loose upon the decks break-out afresh. The cabin, however, protected them from any real danger of being swept overboard. But the panic was extreme.

The steamer was landed high and dry. The captain headed his boat for the piers, in an attempt to run into the river, but in the furious sea his boat was driven past the opening and sent on the beach.....

The shore around Holland is not dangerous and we cannot account for the accident. The gale was a most furious one and it is probable that the vessel was simply blown onto the beach. Capt. C. B. Coates was in command of the Holland. He is a splendid sailor and we know that the wreck was not due to any negligence on his part. Mate Campbell is also an oldtimer, knows every foot of the lake and is as brave a man as ever clung to a spar.

There were from seventy-five to eighty passengers on board. They are in no danger. There is a life-saving station within a very short distance of the scene of the wreck, and certainly the passengers could be taken off and saved if need be. The crew at this point has a good record for bravery, and has assisted in rescuing several crews. Those aboard must have had a most exciting time of it and may thank their stars that they escaped.

The officers of the company refused to give the names of any of the passengers.

It was generally felt that the passengers and crew had all escaped."

A DEVOTED MOTHER BEAR.

She Sacrificed Her Life to Save Her Helpless Young Ones.

During an exploring expedition in the Arctic regions several years ago, said an officer of the navy recently, some of the men in our party used to spend considerable time in hunting the polar bears. I joined a party of hunters one day, but the pathetic sight I witnessed deterred me from ever seeking that kind of sport again. We were in an open boat, and had not gone far before we sighted a big bear with two cubs lying on the ice not far distant. When we drew near enough the sailors threw them great lumps of sea horse flesh, and these the old bear divided between her cubs, reserving only a small portion for herself. Then, when all three were happily feeding, the sailors fired, killing the cubs almost instantly, and severely wounding the dam. It would have drawn tears of pity from any but the most unfeeling to have marked the affectionate concern expressed by the poor beast in the last moments of her expiring young. Though she was dreadfully wounded, she tore another lump of the sea horse flesh in pieces and laid it before them. When she found they would not eat she laid her paws first on one and then the other and tried to raise them up, all the while moaning piteously. Finding at last that they were lifeless, she raised her head toward the boat and uttered a grovel of despair, which the men returned with another volley of bullets. Then she fell between her cubs and died licking their wounds.

A SUCCESSFUL APPEAL.

Young America Fired the Patriotic Heart with Patriotism.

The peculiar brightness of Boston children is established anew by a story printed in the Journal. It concerns a girl twelve years old, whose father told her just before the Fourth of July that he could not afford to buy any fireworks, but that she and Willie would have to watch the other children.

The small brother seemed quite resigned to the inevitable, and on the morning of the Fourth marched across the street to see the other boys fire their torpedoes.

The little girl was not so easily satisfied. At first she could not believe but that it was a joke, and hunted all over the house for bundles which might suggest firecrackers. At breakfast, however, when nothing was said about fireworks, she became convinced that her father had really meant what he said, and that she and Willie would have no firecrackers, nor even a bundle of torpedoes. All at once she covered her face, burst into tears, and said:

"O papa, what do you suppose Samuel Adams and George Washington and John Adams and John Hancock would say if they were alive?"

That was too much for the fond father, who came home two hours afterward loaded down with firecrackers, torpedoes, pinwheels, Roman candles and what not.

GAVE HIM MORE LIGHT.

The Sexton Lost No Time in Doing the Rector's Bidding.

"I was sexton of Grace church when Rev. Mr. Blank was rector there," says a writer in the Utica Observer. "It was a summer night and rather warm, so when the rector commenced his sermon I turned down the gas in the body of the church to make it a little cooler."

"The text that night was, 'I'll remember it, let there be light.' I was sitting in the rear part of the church, not paying particularly close attention to the sermon, nor, in fact, to anything else. Suddenly the rector exclaimed loudly:

"'More light! More light!'

"I jumped to the stop-cock in the gas supply and turned on the gas full head all over the church. Well, sir, you ought to have seen those people! Some of them laughed right out, and those that didn't had hard work not to. I found out afterward that when the rector said 'More light!' he was not giving directions to me, but quoting the dying words of Goethe."

SOME ODDITIES IN ETIQUETTE.

What Is Considered Proper and Improper in Different Countries.

In Holland a lady is expected to retire precipitately if she should enter a store or restaurant where men are congregated. She waits until they have transacted their business and departed.

Ladies seldom rise in Spain to receive a male visitor, and they rarely accompany him to the door. For a Spaniard to give a lady—even his wife—his arm while walking is looked upon as a violation of propriety.

No Turk will ever enter a sitting room with dirty shoes. The upper classes wear tight-fitting shoes with goloshes over them. The latter, which receive all the dirt and dust, are left outside the door. The Turk never washes in dirty water. Water is poured over his hands, so that when polluted it runs away.

In Syria the people never take off their hats or turbans when entering the house or visiting a friend, but they always leave their shoes at the door. There are no mats or scrapers outside, and the floors inside are covered with expensive rugs, kept very clean in Moslem houses and used to kneel upon while praying.

In Persia among the aristocracy a visitor sends notice an hour or two before calling, and gives a day's notice if the visit is one of great importance. He is met by servants before he reaches the house, and other considerations are shown him, according to relative rank. The left and not the right is considered the position of honor.

In Sweden, if you address the poorest person on the street, you must lift your hat. The same courtesy is insisted upon if you pass a lady on the stairway. To enter a reading room or a bank with one's hat on is regarded as impolite.
