Local News

D. C. Ver Hage, a farmer near Vriesland, has made a record with thrashing. Thursday he thrashed 2,188 bushels of grain in one day.

Due to a fall from a ladder, little Clarence Meppink living at 21 East Sixteenth street fractured his arm in two places Monday morning. The lad is about ten years old. Dr. Poppen attended him.

The carpenters and contractors will hold their annual picnic at Alpena Beach, on Aug. 18, and plans are being made for a program of athletic sports and other activities which will tend to make the day an enjoyable one.

A number of young people from Holland who spent Monday evening in Saugatuck were so infatuated with the town and its pleasant walks missed the last car and stayed in the interurban office the remainder of the night.

Two South Haven barbers have given notice to the public that hereafter grocery men and butchers will be asked 15 cents for a shave claiming that the prices asked for necessities by those merchants warrant the increase. A shave will probably soon cost the coal man a dollar.

Unable to compete with the Graham & Morton line the Crawford Transportation company has taken the steamer Arundell off the Holland Chicago line and has taken it to Saugatuck where it will run on the Saugatuck-Chicago line for the remainder of the season. The steamer Arundell opened traffic here in opposition to the Graham & Morton company on June 28, but it proved a losing venture.

Mrs. Fannie Boswell of Saugatuck was arrested Thursday afternoon, charged with shoplifting. Mrs. Boswell was seen to enter at least a half a dozen stores until finally Deputy Sheriff Leonard, dressed in plain clothes, followed her in B. Steketee's drygoods store and soon afterward took her to police headquarters. When searched some fifteen yards of dress goods were found in her possession and she finally confessed to the theft. Justice Miles sentenced her to fifteen days in the county jail and to pay a fine of $5.

After having conducted a second-hand business here for fifteen years Wm. Bourton has sold his business to the Trust Furniture Co., of Grand Rapids. The company that has bought the local store is a well known firm doing a large business in this line in Grand Rapids. They will continue their business in this city and will also run the business here much in the same way as it has been conducted by Mr. Burton. Mr. Burton came here from Chicago fifteen years ago and will leave tonight for that city where he will make his future home.

No Action on DeYoung's Resignation.

The much looked for fight on the resignation of James DeYoung did not materialize last night at the council meeting. Two petitions, one asking that Mr. DeYoung be requested to stay at a raise in salary and another of the opposite sentiment, were presented to the aldermen. On motion of Ald. Van Eyck action was deferred until Friday evening when a special meeting will be held for that purpose.

West Eighth Street Paving

The long contention of Westrumite vs brick as paving material for west 8th street was finally settled last night when the council decided in favor of Bessimer brick. One of the largest delegation of citizens that ever attended a meeting of the council was there in the interests of the paving proposition, and representatives of Westrumite, Metropolitan brick and Bessimer block made speeches.

It was shown by the City Engineer that Bessimer Block came up to the standard in all tests, that it was practically very satisfactory in Grand Rapids, and that it was a little cheaper than Metropolitan which has been found very satisfactory on River street brick. The choice of Bessimer met with popular approval.

In the Matter of Gas Connections

The city has won a victory on its contention with the Holland Gas Co., according to an informal report of City Attorney Van Duren at the council meeting. According to the franchise the company cannot charge for making connections in the houses. This it had been doing and the committee appointed by the council, after due investigation, offered a protest. The council threatened to take away the company's franchise, and the head office of the company has sent in the decision that the city is right and that in the future the company will live up to the franchise.

Business Men Will Help Club

Not desiring the report to go about the state that the Holland Baseball club had to go out of business because the salaries of the players were not forthcoming and thus securing for Holland a great deal of unwelcome advertising to the effect that the fans of this city are not "game", a number of Holland business men have made arrangements by which they believe most of the troubles of the club will be solved. The men who will make an attempt to straighten out matters are E. P. Stephan, John Vander Sluis, C. Vander Meulen, Herman Van Tongeren and B. Van Raalte Jr. Every effort will be made by the committee to raise money for the players' salary. They will not be responsible for debts contracted in the early part of the season, but will simply do all they can to help it over the present difficult spots. Next week there will be given a lawn fete for this purpose, at which Holland's fans will be given a chance to show their colors by coming out and thus distributing their mite toward the support of the team.

The management of the team will remain the same with E. W. Dickerson as president and E. P. Stephan as treasurer.

How the City Hall Stands.

Some time ago the council asked the city hall committee of which Ald. Dyke is chairman, to prepare a report of how matters stand in the construction of the building, and these are some of the facts brought out in the report last night.

Architect Edwin A. Bowd who receives 4 1/2 per cent of the contract price for his services, has so far done his work well, has safeguarded the interests of the city and has received on account $1633.43.

Geo. Rickmans Sons Co. of Kalamazoo, to whom was let the contract for building, at the sum of $40,955.00, has been paid on account the sum of $32,018.97, less an order for $2,642.00 which is held pending certain settlements. They have given a bond to the city in the sum of $12,700.00 for the faithful performance of the contract and to the state $12,700.00 for the prompt payment of all labor and material.

The contract for the plumbing and heating was let to N. J. Yonker at the sum of $3,700.00 and he has been paid on account $1811.55.

F. N. Jonkman, who is employed as Superintendent of Building at 50 cents per hour while on the work, has been paid $1,026.44.

The electric wiring of the building which was let to the Capitol Electric Engineering Co. for the sum of $600.00 with extra items recommended by the board of public Works amounting to $253.00 has been completed and there has been paid on account to the company $400.00.

The building has been wired for telephone by the two companies with out expense to the city.

Incidental expenses have amounted to $119.40.

Although the building should have been completed August 1, unavoidable delay has come up, but the committee stated positively that it would be completed for occupancy November 1.

Has an Unevenable Job.

With a record of 2,000 dogs killed within the last eighteen years Holland boasts of having a most vigilant poundmaster in Peter Verwey. Through his energetic warfare the canine population during that period has been reduced from 1,500 to less than 300, according to the number of license tags taken out for the present year.

Previous to the drafting of an ordinance requiring all dogs to wear a tag an order annually was passed during the so-called dog days, for the poundmaster to shoot all canines not properly muzzled and it was during his first year of active service that Verwey reaped a harvest by sending more than 700 dogs to their happy hunting ground. Since that time his record has been an average of 16 annually, the highest number slaughtered in a month being twenty-three.

Verwey has met with all sorts of opposition on the part of dog owners and it is a surprise that he is still alive. In his hunt for the animals he repeatedly has been threatened and warned to keep off the streets if he valued his life. He often has looked into the muzzles of revolvers and pistols, has seen clenched fists stuck under his nose, has been taken by the neck in a fit of anger and passed through heated controversies, but he never shows the least sign of relaxation in the performance of his duties. He coolly displays his star and for the rest follows his legal course.

In his first years of service Verwey hunted at night and the following morning his kennels were filled. Oftentimes owners hid their pets for weeks, but the moment the animal was seen Verwey had him collared. He never has proven himself a coward and always gets the dog he wants. Most dogs know the dog catcher and keep at sage distance, but during some unsuspecting moment he is gathered in. He has been bitten more than fifty times, but his vigilance does not slacken and the most vicious bull-dog as well as a little harmless creature are numbered among the slain.

At his home Verwey keeps a thirty-eight caliber revolver and the first shot often does its work. Some of the animals killed were valued as high as $50, but the dog catcher says he makes no distinction as to value, nor as to the owner. If the dog has no tag three days of grace are given for his redemption, otherwise off goes his head.

Verwey is an eccentric character and does little else for a living. He is often styled the most hated man in Holland, but this does not worry him. He realizes a bounty of 75 cents for every dog slaughtered and his record is invincible. Verwey has a cinch job on the office of poundmaster and at the annual election of city officers the common council always returns him by an unanimous vote.

Former Local Boy Kills Self and Wounds Sweetheart.

"Yes, I am going away tonight, and—, so are you."

With these words Anthony Van Dort, aged 26 years, rose from his chair at the Hub restaurant, 97 South Division street, Grand Rapids, last night and fired two shots at his former sweetheart, Mrs. Hattie Bauman, one of which took effect in her arm, then turned the revolver to his breast and fired a bullet through his heart, dropping dead in his tracks. The tragedy was enacted at 6:15, when the restaurant was full of diners, but the bullet that went stray, found lodgement in a table and no one else was injured.

The attempted murder and suicide was the culmination of a love affair that through a change in the affections of the woman had resulted disappointingly to Van Dort, the final jilting coming yesterday afternoon during a quarrel between the two which lasted the entire afternoon.

The woman is at Butterworth hospital under the care of Dr. R. J. Hutchinsen, who announces that barring possibilities of septic poisoning, recovery will be speedy.

The Bauman woman came here from Greenville several months ago after a separation from her husband, William Bauman. She obtained employment at the Hub restaurant about three months ago and worked steadily as a waitress. She met Van Dort, it is said, after coming here. He showed her every attention and professed to be deeply in love with her.

A few weeks ago the woman, it is said, met a man with whom she became deeply infatuated, and on Van Dort's return to the city, after a period of employment as cook for a Pere Marquette railroad bridge gang, apprised him of her intention to cease receiving his attention. The couple, it is said, had frequent discussions and quarrels over the woman's action, and yesterday they spent the greater part of the afternoon quarreling and arguing at the home of Mrs. David Thomas, a sister of the wounded woman, at 60 Commerce street.

Mrs. Bauman left the Thomas home about 4 o'clock to go to her work at the restaurant, leaving Van Dort at the house. He, according to the story told by Mrs. Thomas, remained but a short time, going to a Division street saloon. He later returned to the Thomas home and at that time appeared to be slightly under the influence of liquor.

About 6 o'clock he entered the restaurant and sat down at a table near the street door. Mrs. Bauman, who was in the kitchen when he entered the place, asked another waitress to take his order. Mrs. Bauman remained in the kitchen, but in a few minutes was obliged to go into the dining room and take an order at the very table where Van Dort sat.

As she approached the table to take the supper order of Miss Laura Gregory, who sat opposite Van Dort, Mrs. Bauman called out to him.

"I thought you were going away," she said, "and so are you," he replied, rising in his chair. At the same time he drew a 38-caliber revolver from his coat pocket and fired point blank at the woman, who stood at Miss Gregory's side in the act of placing some dishes on the table.

He followed the first shot with another and the woman fell to the floor with blood streaming from her right arm near the shoulder. Without another word, Van Dort settled back in his chair, placed the muzzle of the revolver close to his breast and pulled the trigger. An instant later he slipped from the chair to the floor, where he rolled over on his back, dead. The bullet has passed through his heart and body.

Van Dort was for sometime employed at one of the local restaurants and also was employed at the Kings basket factory.

How to Use the Telephone.

The telephone which hangs on your wall is not an ornament, but an instrument which you could scarcely do without. The ornament proposition applies just as much as your end of the line as it does at the other fellow's. When the bell rings make it a rule to get to the instrument just as quickly as the good Lord will let you and the man at the other end will thank you in thought if he does not in words. You know how exasperating it is to call up some one whom you know is at home and have to stand there and wait for several minutes while the party is making up his mind to respond to you call. You all know how nearly impossible it is to get one of the passenger stations to answer a telephone call and when they do answer it is in a tone of voice that implies that they are doing you a great favor by the service.

A man who is quick to answer his telephone can be put down as a good business man, and when a merchant or business man is slow to get to the instrument he will be slow to get other things, including money.—Commercial News.

HERE'S A GOOD CHILD STORY

One Which Comes From the Family of a Boston Educator and Has Unusual Originality.

Perhaps the most startling child story extant, however, comes from the family of a famous Boston educator, whose children all are distinguished by an unusual degree of originality. Several boys and girls of various ages have been adopted into this family, so the sudden appearance of new and well-grown associates seems to the younger members quite natural. This rather unusual attitude toward family growth worked out oddly a year or two ago, upon the occasion of the Christmas play, which the little ones annually write, rehearse and produce, quite without adult assistance, for their parents.

The plot of the play included the financial redemption of a highly worthy couple—this being an extremely cultured and sociologically learned yet natural group of youngsters—by the good luck of the husband, played by an eager urchin of seven, in the gold fields of Alaska. The happy bridegroom returned to his weeping bride of a year in the nick of time, bearing with him a huge and heavy bag of gold. The bride, in a neat speech, revealed to him the poverty-stricken, hungry straits to which she had been reduced, and warmly commended his skill and industry in gold finding. Then, rising with a proud and modest air, she gently informed him: "And I, meanwhile, have not been idle!"—and, drawing a convenient curtain, disclosed an assorted group of laughing boys and girls as "Our children, dear!"

The audience, not unnaturally, rocked with helpless laughter, but those dear little lads and lasses still are wondering why.

"So, you—you need not be hension on that score." A peculiar expression came into the other's glance. "You see, his niece told him it was not her secret; asked him to help her, to trust her. Never was a man more perplexed, but he kept the word he gave her on leaving for London and forbore to question her. Even when they drove through London in that fog—"

"Yes, yes. I know!"

"You? How?"

John Steele seemed not to hear. "She saw you that night?"

"She did, alone in the garden of Rosemary Villa. Sir Charles behaved splendidly. 'All right, my dear. Some day you'll tell me, perhaps,' he said to her. 'Meanwhile I'll possess my soul in patience.' So while he smoked in the cab we talked it over."

"Well!" John Steele said shortly. "And the upshot of it all was—"

"She suggested my going to Lord Rosendale."

"To invoke his assistance, perhaps?" Steele once more laughed. "As an old friend!" Captain Forsythe started to speak. The other went on. "Well, we'll keep his secret as long as he keeps his compact."

"But—"

"I promised. What does it matter?" Sir Charles may be disappointed at not being able to bring about— But for her sake—that is the main consideration."

"And you, the question of your innocence—to her?" Forsythe looked at him narrowly, smiled slightly to himself.

"Is—inconsequential! The main point is—the Frisco Pet is dead. Gillett won't speak. You won't. Lord Rosendale can't. Another to whom I am about to tell the story will, I am sure, be equally silent."

"Another?"

John Steele smiled. "Can you think of no one to whom I am bound to tell the truth, the whole truth? Who extended me his hand in friendship, invited me to his home? Of course it would be easier to go without speaking. It is rather difficult to own that one has accepted a man's hospitality, stepped beneath his roof and sat at his board as—not to mince words—an impostor. I could have delegated you to tell him all, but that wouldn't do. It is probably a part of the old, old debt, but I must meet him face to face. So I have sent for—"

A bell rang. A servant opened the door of the library. Sir Charles Wray walked in.

Below, in the cab, Jocelyn waited. Her pale face expressed restlessness. She held in her hand a bit of crumpled paper. It was John Steele's note to Sir Charles asking him to call, stating nothing beyond a mere perfunctory request to that end, giving no reason for his wish to see him.

"Can you drop in at my chambers for a few minutes?" John Steele had written. "A few minutes." The blue eyes shone with impatience. He was leaving London, Captain Forsythe had informed her, and she concluded, he wanted to see her uncle before he left.

to the illogical action that had preceded it, she was held to the spot by the door suddenly opening. A man—a servant, broom in hand—who had evidently been engaged in cleaning one of the chambers within was stepping out.

"You wished to see Mr. Steele?" The proud head nodded affirmatively to the inquiry.

"Well, you can be stepping into the library, miss," said the man. "Mr. Steele is engaged just now."

Jocelyn on the instant found no reason for refusing. The door closed behind her, and she looked around. She stood in a library alone. Beyond, in another chamber, she heard voices—her uncle's, John Steele's.

CHAPTER XVII.

PAST AND PRESENT.

"THOSE boxes contained books—yours, Sir Charles," were the first words the girl caught.

"Mine! Bless my soul!" her uncle's surprised voice broke in.

"You don't mean to tell me that all those volumes I had boxed for Australia and which I thought lost on the Lord Nelson came ashore on your little coral isle?"

Came ashore on his coral isle! The girl caught at the words. Of course he had been saved—he who had saved her from the wild sea. She had realized that after their last meeting at Strathmore House. But how?

"Exactly!" said John Steele succinctly.

"Bless my soul!" Sir Charles' amazed voice could only repeat. "I remember most of those books well—a brave array—poets, philosophers, lawmakers! Then that accounts for your— It is like a fairy tale."

"A fairy tale!" Jocelyn Wray gazed coral isle, a system or systems—codes of conduct or morals built up for the swarming millions, so to speak—could not but possess fascination for one to whom those millions had become only as the faraway shadows of a dream."

"As a boy?" John Steele repeated the words almost mechanically. "My parents died when I was a child. They came of good stock—New England." He uttered the last part of the sentence involuntarily—stopped. "I was bound out, was beaten. I fought, ran away. In lumber camps, the drunken ruffian cursed the new scrub boy, on the Mississippi the sailors and stevedores kicked him because the mate kicked them. Everywhere it was the same. The boy learned only one thing—to fight. Fight or be beaten!"

"In a wordy sense I prospered after I was rescued—in New Zealand, in Tasmania. Fate, as if to atone for having delayed her favors, now lavished them freely. Work became easy. A mine or two that I was lucky enough to locate yielded and continues to yield unexpected returns."

"And then, having fairly, through your own efforts, won a place in the world, having conquered fortune, why did you return to England knowing the risk that some one of these fellows like Gillett, the police agent, might—"

"Why," said John Steele, "because I wished to sift, to get to the very bottom of, this crime for which I was convicted. For all real wrongdoing, resisting officers of the law, offenses against officialdom, I had paid the penalty in full, I believe. But this other matter—that was different. It weighed on me through those years on the island and afterward. A jury had convicted me wrongfully. But I had to prove it, to satisfy myself, to find out beyond any shadow of a doubt, and—"

"He did." For the first time Captain Forsythe spoke. "Steele has in his possession full proofs of his innocence, and I have seen them. They go to show that he suffered through the cowardice of a miserable cad, a titled scoundrel who struck his hand from the gunwale of the boat when the Lord Nelson went down. Yes, you told that story in your fevered ramblings, Steele."

"Forsythe!"—the other's voice rang out warningly—"didn't I tell you the part he played was to be forgotten unless—"

"All right; have your way," grudgingly.

"A titled scoundrel! There was only one person I rank on the Lord Nelson besides myself, and— Forsythe!—the old nobleman's voice called out sharply—"you have said too much or too little."

John Steele made a gesture. "I have given my word not to—"

"But I haven't!" said Captain Forsythe. "The confession I procured and what I subsequently learned led me directly to— Here is the tale, Sir Charles."

It was over at last. They were gone, Sir Charles and Captain Forsythe. Their hand clasps still lingered in his. For a few moments now John Steele remained motionless, listening to their departing footsteps, then turned and gazed around him.

Never had his rooms appeared more cheerless, more barren, more empty. No; not empty. They were filled with memories. The man squared his shoulders and looked out again from the window toward that small bit of the river he could just discern. Once he had gazed at it when its song seemed to be of the green banks and flowers it had passed by, but that had been on a fairer occasion—at the close of a joyous spring day. How it came back to him, the solemn court of justice, the beautiful face, an open doorway, with the sunshine golden without and a figure that, ere passing into it, had turned to look back! It was but for an instant, yet again his gaze seemed to leap to that luring light, the passing gleam of her eyes, that had lingered—

That he saw now, or was it a dream? At the threshold near by some one looked out—some one as fair—fairer, if that could be—whose cheeks wore the tint of the wild rose.

"Pardon me. I came up to see if my uncle—"

He stared at her.

"You?"

"Yes." She raised a small, gloved hand and swept back a disordered tress.

"Your—your uncle has just gone," he said.

"I know."

"You do?"

"I was in the library when they went out. I had come up to see—I was with my uncle in the cab and wondered why he—"

She stopped. He took a quick step toward her. "You were in there, that room, when—"

"Yes," she said and threw back her head as if to contradict a sudden mistaking that seemed stupidly sweeping over her gaze. "Why did you not tell me—you did not—that you were innocent?"

"You were in there?" He did not seem to catch her words. "Heard—heard—"

A moment they stood looking at each other. Suddenly she reached out her hands to him. With a quick exclamation he caught and held them.

But in a moment he let them fall. What had he been about to say, to do, with the fair face, the golden head, so near? He stepped back quickly. Madness!

"You are going away?" She was the first to speak. Her voice was in the least uncertain.

"Tomorrow"—without looking at her—"to America."

"It is very large," irrelevantly. "I remember, of course, you are an American. I—I have hardly realized it. We—we Australians are not so unlike you. But your friends here?" Her lips half veiled a tremulous little smile.

"My friends!" Something flashed in his voice—went, leaving him very quiet. "I am afraid I have not made many while in London." Her eyes lifted slightly, fell. "Call it the homing instinct!" he went on with a laugh. "The desire once more to become part and parcel of one's native land, to become a factor, however small, in its activities."

"I don't think you—will be—a small factor," said the girl in a low tone. She stole a glance at his face. He was looking down. The silence lengthened. He waited. She seemed to find nothing else to say. He, too, did not speak. She found herself walking toward the door.

"Goodby."

"Goodby." He spoke in a low voice. "As I told Captain Forsythe, you—you need not feel concern about the story ever coming out."

"Concern? What do you mean?"

"Your telegram to Captain Forsythe, the fear that brought you to London—"

"The—you thought that?" swiftly.

"What else?"

The indignation in her eyes met the surprise in his.

"Thank you," she said—"thank you for that estimate of me!"

"Miss Wray!" Contrition, doubt, amazement, mingled in his tone.

"Goodby," she said coldly.

And suddenly, as one sees through a rift in the clouds the clear light, he understood.

"You will go with me? You!"

"Why, as for that?"

Fleece of gold! Heaven of blue eyes! They were so near!

"And if I did you who misinterpret motives would think?"

"What?"

"That I came here to—"

"I should like to think that."

"Well, I came," said the girl. "I don't know why. Unless the boy who was taking down the signs had something to do with it."

"The?"

"He said to go 'straight up,'" she laughed.

He laughed, too; all the world seemed laughing. He hardly knew what he said, how she answered, only that she was there, slender, beautiful as the springtime full of flowers; that a miracle had happened, was happening. The mottled blur in the sky had become a spot of brightness; sunshine filled the room; in a cage above a tiny feathered creature began to chirp.

"And Sir Charles? Lady Wray?" He spoke quietly, but with wild pulsing of temples, exultant fierce throbbing of heart. He held her from all the world.

"They?" She was silent a moment, then looked up with a touch of her old bright imperiousness. "My uncle loves me, has never denied me anything, and he will not in this—that is, if I tell him!"

"What?"

Did her lips answer or was it only in her willful, smiling eyes that he read what he sought?

"Jocelyn!"

Above the little bird, with a red spot on its breast, bent its beaklike eyes on them, but neither saw, noticed. Besides, it was only a successor to the bird that had once been hers, that had flown like a flashing jewel from her soul to his in that place, sea washed, remote from the world.

THE END.

Farming Is So Easy.

A Jackson county farmer serving on the jury recently stood in the hallway of the criminal court building, stretching and yawning and complaining about not getting enough exercise out on the farm.

"You fellows around the city do a lot of walking and shifting about," the farmer commented to a city man.

"When I was on the farm plowing and cultivating the soil I had no complaint to make about not getting enough exercise," was the suggestive comment of the city man.

"You lived away back there at a time when a man followed the plow and lifted it around at the end of the furrows after having carried it to the field on his back and such things," the farmer explained. "We ride and plow these days, you know. Almost everything else is done by machinery. Why, we have to construct a gymnasium on the farm to get a little exercise when we get up in the mornings and before we go to bed at night."

Then he stretched and yawned again, while the city man kicked himself metaphorically—for having to work so hard.—Kansas City Star.

Music Hath Charms.

Ignaz Pleyel, a musician held in high repute in his day and a Viennese by birth, was appointed kapellmeister at Strassburg in 1783. During the troubled times of the French revolution he lost his post, and his life was in grave danger.

He escaped death and satisfied his accusers that he was not an aristocrat by writing music to some most revolutionary stanzas, which were placed before him for the purpose, while beside stood two gendarmes with fixed bayonets.

Another instance, proving that "music hath charms to soothe the savage breast," is that of Alessandro Stradella, an Italian composer of the seventeenth century, who carried off a lady named Ortensia from the home of a nobleman of high rank. Two assassins who were hired to kill him followed them to Rome. "Entering a church where an oratorio of his was being performed, they were so moved by the music that they warned Stradella of his danger and allowed him to escape."

WHEN ANNOUNCING THE BABY

There Are Various Ways of Spreading the News of the Stork's Visit.

When the stork visits a household the most modish way of spreading the news of his call is by card announcement. This plan has the disadvantage of delay, however, as there is a minimum of time in which cards can be engraved and mailed, not to mention the fact that the oftentimes perplexing question of naming the baby must be decided first.

One young couple, however, though somewhat wastefully, overcame that seemingly necessary delay by deciding that if their "first" were a boy he should be called, say, John Henry, while if she happened to be the less desired girl her name was to be, say, Clementine. So they had two sets of cards engraved and ready for mailing the moment that the exact status of things was known. It would have been dreadful, though, if in the inevitable household confusion the wrong box of cards had been mailed and the others thrown into the furnace before the mistake was discovered.

So far as New York is concerned, it is those of European birth or parentage who most frequently make the paid public announcement. Sometimes they are amusing in their frankness and ingenuousness. These sometimes contain the postlude, "Mother and son doing well," and one started off with the words: "A loving daughter born to." The climax was capped, however, by one the other day that closed in this wise:

"A 12-pound boy. Thanks to Drs. So and So and Such and Such and to Mrs. Blank."

WHEN ASTOR SOLD REALTY

Only Sale Ever Recorded in John Jacob Astor's Life Was to His Son, and the Consideration One Dollar.

"One of the most stringent real estate rules of the Astor family is 'never sell,' and only one sale is recorded in the entire life of old John Jacob Astor," said Niles F. Watkins, a real estate broker of New York, to the Washington Herald. "In 1830 Astor took down his house in Broadway, cleared the whole block from Vesey to Barclay street, and built the huge gray Quincy granite hotel which held forth until not many years ago as the Astor house, being one of the first notable landmarks in New York, and also one of the best paying pieces of property."

"A few days after it was finished the old gentleman and his eldest son, William, were walking through City Hall park, and stopped a moment to admire the building—the finest hotel in America at that time."

"Pop, what's a mighty fine building," said William, "I wish to gracious it was mine."

"So," answered the father. "Well, Billy, give me one dollar and you can have it."

"Out came the dollar—a big silver dollar, that is cherished by the family to this day as the dollar of our daddies—and within an hour the deed of the property was made out and recorded. This was old Mr. Astor's sale of real estate in his life."

Mistaken Identity.

A Westchester county commuter told this story a few days ago to his daily fellow-travelers while the cards were being made ready for the first rubber: "As I entered the station this afternoon a man with a number of parcels said to me in German: 'I want to go to Port Chester.' I was warm and cross and felt like quoting Thackeray, and asking him: 'Why in H—arlem don't you go!' But he seemed to be so thoroughly foreign that I knew the joke would have been wasted and I gave him the information he wanted in a few words. Then I was curious to know what made him think that I could speak German and I asked him in the best German I could command. He smiled, showing a set of teeth of the Oyster Bay brand, and said: 'I could tell by the looks of your wife,' and nodded toward a woman who happened to have come into the station next to me. The funny part of the story is that I know the woman, and, like Kelly, she is Irish through and through."

A Good Trap.

The members of the Cumberland club in Portland tell this story about Tom Reed.

Reed and a companion went to the club one evening, hung their coats in the cloak room, and spent the evening talking politics. When they went to get their overcoats on leaving, Reed's friend thrust his hand in the pocket for his gloves and pulled out a pocket-book that was not his and which some one had put in there by mistake.

"What shall I do?" he asked Reed. "If I go around the club with a pocket-book in my hand it will look strange."

"That's all right," said Reed. "Keep the pocketbook and set the coat again. We'll go back in the smoking-room."

Ancient Coins Discovered.

Building operations in the Rue d'Arasant in Brussels have led to the discovery of a metal case containing about 130,000 ancient coins. Of these, 80,000 are English, Irish and Scotch, and the remainder were minted in Belgium in the time of Henry III. of Brabant.

It is supposed that the coins belonged to a knight of Brussels, who held them about 1264, and that he was killed in fighting and carried with him to the grave his secret, which was to remain hidden for nearly seven centuries.

Fire Protection for West Side

There has been an abnormally large number of fires on the west side during the last few months, the most disastrous one being that of C. L. King & Co.'s plant sometime ago, and each time the fact was pressed home more forcibly that that part of the city is not properly protected against fire. Holland has two engine houses, and both are located at this end of the city. We do not mean to say that that is any too many for the protection of the business section of this city. This part of the town needs these engine houses, and is thus adequately protected.

But our fire system was put in when Holland was not what it is today. One of the firemen said to the News that he had been on the job for nearly ten years, and although improvements have been made in all other lines, very little had been done to extend or improve the fire protection system. Meanwhile the city has been growing. It is not so very long ago that the west side was a comparatively unimportant section of the city. But today most of Holland's industries are located there. The Sugar Co., Heinz Pickling Works, C. L. King's factory, Shoe factory, Bay View Furniture factory are a few of the plants that make that part of the city important enough for the best possible protection.

Each time when there is a fire it takes a long time for the firemen to get there on account of the great distance from the engine houses, and meanwhile the blaze can make considerable headway. It seems to us that the companies who have thousands of dollars invested in their plants and the men whose livelihood depends on them are entitled to more adequate protection. If an engine house built in that part of the city is not practicable at this time, some other means could be devised to give the necessary protection. However, such a method could only be temporary, since if Holland is to grow at all there will have to be added fire protection eventually in a permanent way.

Halt or Forward March?

Republican voters of Michigan are face to face with a problem which affects not only their party but the state at large. Within a month they will be called upon to form ranks behind one of two leaders, will be compelled to choose one of two candidates and in the making of that choice lies the committal of the party to one of two standards and the dictation of probably four years of Michigan history.

Upon one hand the voters find a candidate whose entire campaign argument has been destructive in its policy; who has preached the doctrine of reform but who has provided for no progress; a man who has promised to tear down but who has had no thought of building up; whose ideas of government are confined to the creation of political earthquake and internal upheaval but whose mind grasps vaguely the necessity of tilling the fields of state progress that they may remain fertile and may bring forth to the thousands within their borders, fruit to the full limit of their possibilities.

Upon the other hands stands a man who not only advocates the wisdom of meeting the evils as they arise but who would meet them upon the march rather than in the camp. He would marshal the forces of the state and send them forward on a constructive campaign remembering always that "dishonesty, inefficiency or disloyalty to the state shall be wiped out root and branch wherever discovered."

His record in public life gives proof that his promises for the future are no idle words. His battles have been crowned by victories and to his unending credit it may be said that these victories have been victories for the people. The rugged honesty that has characterized his actions when the time came in which it was necessary for him to make his decision; the fearlessness that has carried him through ceaseless attacks of political slander and misrepresentation; the excellence of the legislation for which he has battled, all lead to the belief that here is a man whose watchword is "Progress" and who recognizes no order for retreat.

Which man is to be the choice of the republicans of this state? All Michigan waits upon the answer. Shall he be the man who knows no policy save that of reformation, or shall he be the man who disposed of the problems of today honestly and well, but with an eye upon the exigencies of the morrow. Is Michigan to break step in the march of progress and camp upon the scene of past mistakes or is she to go forward, steadily and surely, discarding that which is bad, reaching out for that which is good and writing, ever writing a history of advancement?

Which shall it be—Chase S. Osborn or Patrick H. Kelley—Halt or Forward March.—Lansing State Republican.

Is Mr. Osborn inconsistent? A very few instances of his campaign will answer the question. In his opening address at Greenville he boldly advocated the encouragement of the farmers, even to the extent of relieving them of taxation. The bait failed, Michigan farmers are not to be caught so easily. Turning from the farmer to the mechanic and the laborer he advocated a law providing for their immediate pecuniary compensation for damage without regard to the interests of the employer or to his share in the causes of accident. This in turn failed and was dropped. Another fancy which was held aloft for a moment was that recommending the compulsory use of the Bible in the public schools. That too has faded away. Following these came his uncalled for attack upon Judge Montgomery of the state supreme bench and a demand that the honored gentleman resign from the high post he held lest he besmirch the robes of his office with mire from the political swamp. But after Judge Montgomery had withdrawn from the race Mr. Osborn aided in the organization of an Osborn club among the instructors and students of the University of Michigan following a meeting in which he as regent of the university had voted to increase the salaries of several of the members of its corps of instructors.

This then is the record of Mr. Osborn's uncertain wanderings since he first launched his bark upon the gubernatorial sea, tying fast to one buoy, abandoning that for another anchorage painted in gayer colors and in turn slipping his moorings and sailing away to still another port, often to leave it before he has yet mad fast.—Hartford Day Spring.

The council members should not be short sighted and haggle over a few dollars when it comes to hiring good men. This is especially so in the case of James De Young. What is a salary of $2500 for a man who handles a half million dollar business. Private corporations are willing to pay much more for services of a man like De Young. The electric light plant has developed into the best dividend paying institution in this city under his management aided by an efficient board. Why should not a man who achieves these results receive a just remuneration?

Leaves for Mission Field.

Miss Bernice M. Takken, of 31 W. 13th street sails in a few days for the Arcot Mission of the Reformed church in India. At Ceylon she will be met by the Rev. Bernard Rottschaefer who graduated from the Western Theological seminary in 1909, and the two expect to be married in the old Dutch church at Colombo.

Sunday night worship at Hope church, where she is a member, was a farewell one, the pastor presiding. The Rev. W. J. Van Kersen, representing the board of foreign missions under whom she goes; President G. J. Kollen, in behalf of her church and city; Mrs. W. H. Howell, for the Woman's Missionary society of which her mother is an energetic member; C. Vander Meulen, Esq., for her fellow members of the Christian Endeavor society made five minute addresses.

It Means Something.

On October 13th 1906, the Grand Rapids Evening Press, in an editorial headed "It Means Something," had the following to say: "Before the state board of law examiners in session at Lansing eleven young men went through the ordeal of the examination.—When they had finished but one of them had come up to the required standard and was allowed a certificate, the others being advised to put in more study and try again. When it is remembered that each of these ten disappointed men had put in long days and nights preparing for this ordeal the contrast with former days becomes more marked. Before the present law was enacted lawyers were ground out with little preparation and scant ceremony. Now, however, a Michigan certificate of standing at the bar means something and the profession is a gainer thereby."

The subject of this editorial,—the one young man who succeeded where ten others failed,—was Louis H. Osterhaus, of Grand Haven, who has since been in active practice in both State and Federal Courts, has served as Circuit Court Commissioner and as City Attorney for Grand Haven, and who is now a candidate for the Republican nomination for Prosecuting Attorney at the Primary Election to be held Sept. 6th 1910.

Those who listened so attentively to Mayor Ellis, the congressional candidate, when he spoke in Holland Tuesday night, are still wondering. In his remarks he straddled Congressman Diekema for "opening his campaign for congress in a 'saloon' in Grand Rapids." It seems almost unnecessary to call attention to the facts in the case as they really stand out. Mayor Ellis has always been regarded as a "wet" candidate in Grand Rapids by the voters. Just why he should torn "Jry" during his visit to Holland is a question. Then, too, the good voters of Holland know full well that the Diekema campaign was in full swing fully two weeks before Congressman Diekema entered the cafe in question at Reed's lake, which, by the way, was a "Dutch" lunch gotten up, as it afterward developed, in the interests of Chase S. Osborn.—Grand Rapids News.

Holland Defeated Sparta

The Holland Merchants baseball team defeated the fast Sparta Independents at Sparta, Saturday by the score of 6-2. Rinkus the old star pitcher of the Merchants who has been sailing on the big lakes all summer returning last week was on the mound for the Merchants and struck out ten men allowing but one scratch hit.

Court Grind

Justice Vander Meulen had a steady grind in his court this morning. Geo. Kramer and "Slick" Van Oort were both arrested for using bad language in the presence of women and children. They pleaded not guilty and their trial will be held Monday and Wednesday. A. Evenhuis and John Brouwer were arrested for being drunk and Geo. Reemerma was sent up for assault and battery.

LAMB ONCE A JOURNALIST

At One Time He Was Actively Engaged on the Staff of the London Post.

In connection with Lord Glenesk's recently published history of that old-established London journal, the Morning Post, it is interesting to recall the fact that at one time Charles Lamb was on its staff of contributors. This gentle essayist wrote largely for a column headed "Fashionable Intelligence;" in those days, as Lamb says, "every morning paper, as an essential retainer to its establishment, kept an author who was bound to furnish daily a quantum of witted paragraphs." It was in this capacity that Lamb was engaged on the Post; furthermore his contract stipulated that in "the chat of the day, scandal, but above all, dress" he should supply six paragraphs a day, not one of which was to exceed seven lines in length, and the payment for which was to be 12 cents each.

In his essay "Newspapers Thirty-Five Years Ago," Lamb seems to have been rather pleased with the "sticks" of chat he contributed to the press; we now find that "Dan Stuart," his editor, entertained a different opinion as to their value. "As for good Charles Lamb," he said, "I never could make anything of his writings. Of politics he knew nothing; they were out of his line of reading and thought, and his drollery was rapid when given in short paragraphs fit for a newspaper."

HOW SHE GOT RID OF THEM

Discouraged Visits From Her Niece's Children by Teaching Them Verses From the Bible.

"What has become of those two children who visited you so often?" asked one West side woman of another. The other smiled discreetly. "They are the children of my niece, and she was making a convenience of me. Of course I love the children, but I never allow myself to become much of a victim of imposition. My niece is an extremely gay young widow, and she does not like to take care of her children. She is fond of shopping, matinees, afternoon teas and everything, in short, which takes her away from home, and she got into a habit of sending her children over to my house for me to take care of whenever she wished to gab about. I decided it was time to break up the habit, for her own good and that of the children, as well as mine, so I did."

"I suppose that made your niece angry?" "Oh, no; it couldn't. I never said anything about it. The last time the children came over I spent the afternoon teaching them verses from the Bible, and they didn't find it sufficiently entertaining. They never came back. Just how they managed to work it out with their mother I do not know, but I suppose they struck or begged off. Of course, she could not object to what I had done, and it proved a very simple solution."

The Boss.

President McCrea of the Pennsylvania railroad, in his study of all classes of men who are under him, entertains a great admiration for the Irish foreman of a gang of laborers who went to any lengths to show his men that he was the real boss. One morning this foreman found that his gang had put a hand car on the track without his orders.

"Who put that han' car-r-r on the track?" he asked.

"We did, sor," one of the men answered respectfully.

"Well," he said shortly, "take it off ag'in!"

The laborers did so with some difficulty.

"Now," said the foreman, "put it on ag'in!"—Popular Magazine.

Knew She Was Right.

An auction was announced of the library and household effects of a man who had once entertained in a lavish way, and among the persons who went to the sale were many who had enjoyed the fallen family's hospitality. When a set of after-dinner cups was put up one woman said: "There are only five of those, not six." The auctioneer consulted his catalogue and replied: "Thank you; you are right," and proceeded with the sale. Then the woman whispered to the one next to her: "I knew I was right, because my husband dropped one of that set the last time we dined there."

Couldn't Come Back.

Enoch Arden crept softly up to the window and peered in.

The former Mrs. Arden sat talking sternly to Enoch's successor.

"Do as you like," she was saying. "But remember this, it's just as I told Enoch when he got to thinking he was boss of the house: You may go away, but you can't come back."

Fortunately Mr. Tennyson learned of the incident before the eminent literary of the prize ring got to it.

Sensitive.

"Miss Pessay is furious with that society reporter."

"Why so?"

"He published the announcement of her approaching wedding under the column headed 'Late Engagements'."

WIFE DEFIES CREW AND KEEPS DEAD BODY 42 DAYS

SEA CAPTAIN'S WIDOW, AIDED BY MATE, FIGHTS OFF SUPERSTITIOUS SAILORS.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The body of Captain James Lorenz of the bark John Ena, whose death occurred while the vessel was just off Cape Horn, was removed from the cabin of the bark on arrival here and shipped to San Francisco, the late master's home.

Accompanying the casket was the young widow of the captain, who for 42 days and nights sat and watched by the side of the rough pine box in which the body was incased by the ship's carpenter, while the crew grumbled and threatened mutiny if the body was not cast overboard, according to the custom of superstition.

Mate Oleson of the vessel, armed with a revolver and a belaying pin, was compelled to use force a number of times to check the mutinous spirit of the crew, which was made up of Japanese, Porto Ricans, Sandwich Islanders and a few white men.

Demanded That the Body Be Cast Overboard.

The members of the crew declare that they knew something was going to happen when a black cat, belonging to Mrs. Lorenz, was discovered on board shortly after the beginning of the cruise from Honolulu to this city, and the sailors demanded that the animal be cast overboard. It was Mrs. Lorenz's pet and the captain and Oleson refused to comply with the demand.

When just off Cape Horn, Captain Jim, as he was called, was seized with an attack of Bright's disease. For two days his wife put up a heroic fight for his life, but without avail.

For several days the captain's death was kept a secret from the crew, but when they learned of it they demanded that the body be cast overboard. Oleson, the mate, refused to comply with the demand, and watched over the young wife and her dead, day and night until the vessel was towed to her anchorage here. It was Mrs. Lorenz's first trip with her husband, though they had been married a few years.

GETS MEDAL AS BRAVE MAN

Young Englishman Plunges Into the Gas-Laden Hold of Ship and Rescues Three.

Yonkers, N. Y.—Thomas A. Broadbent, a slender young Englishman who came to work as a machinist in a factory here six months ago, has just received a king's medal from the British government in recognition of his having performed "the most heroic act of the year 1909 in all the English maritime service."

Broadbent was on the ship Fantee, which left Liverpool for the west coast of Africa. Off Cape Palmas, Liberia, the ship ran upon a reef and it became necessary for all hands to get to work shifting the cargo. The cargo included some jars of an acid, which when mixed with water generated a deadly gas. In a lower hold, where six men were working, the ship's carpenter, the captain and the first mate, inhaled the gas and dropped dead.

Three seamen who were just outside the death zone fell unconscious. When this was discovered there were calls for volunteers to bring back the living. Broadbent volunteered and, with a rope about his middle, was lowered into the chamber of death.

One at a time, he brought the three sailors to the fresh air and then, barely conscious, he was lowered again at his own request to bring up the captain's body.

This time he collapsed and was delirious for five weeks. The ship itself subsequently was succored by another British vessel and Broadbent came to this country.

Lady Cope in Spokane.

Spokane, Wash.—Three women are now full-fledged members of the police department of Spokane. They wear regulation stars and will don uniforms of dark blue when on duty. Their quarters are in the city jail, where they are designated as matrons, and they have full charge of all women prisoners. The three women have divided the work into three shifts of eight hours each, so that one is on duty all the time.

TUNA A REMARKABLE FISH

Swaggering Musketeer of the Sea is the Largest of the Game or Bony Fishes.

Charles Frederick Holder, the California naturalist, thus describes that remarkable fish the tuna: "The tuna is a pelagic fish, a free lance, an ocean rover, a sort of swaggering musketeer of the sea, the largest of what may be termed the game or bony fishes, attaining a maximum weight of nearly 2,000 pounds and an approximate length of fourteen feet or more. Such a fish is very exceptional, though specimens weighing 1,500 pounds have been taken on the New England coast. I once entered a school in a big launch. The school divided to port and starboard as we passed through it, and I had a view of one or two fishes that appeared to be more than half as long as the boat.

"These fishes spend the winter in warm latitudes, and migrate north as far as the mouth of the St. Lawrence. They are found in the Mediterranean, and north, to the Loffoden island; yet so far the efforts of anglers, except at Santa Catalina, have failed to take them with the rod. Even here there is a stretch of but eight miles or so where they can be satisfactorily played and taken with rod and reel.

"This region lies on the north side of Santa Catalina, from Avalon to Long Point, and to the east as many more, facing the north, and generally smooth—more like a Scottish loch than a fishing ground 20 miles out to sea."

TAMENESS OF A SEA LION

Old Ben, Weighing Half a Ton, is Often Met on the Streets of Avalon.

In describing the islands lying off the southern coast of California Frederick Holder writes: "The feature which will really amaze the wanderer among the Channel islands is the tameness of some animals. To meet a bull sea lion weighing approximately half a ton on the main avenue of a town, 50 feet from the water, is a possibility of a startling nature, yet I have seen Old Ben, the head of the Santa Catalina sea lion rookery, on Crescent avenue, Avalon, surrounded by tourists who snapped their cameras at him with impunity.

"At that time Ben could be induced to come ashore when the lure was a fat, long-finned tuna, but one day he climbed upon the wharf, coming entirely up the steps, following the man with a fish. Then some unreasonable person made a threatening demonstration; Ben started for the step, lost his hold, slipped and fell, smashing them and wounding himself. For a long time he remembered this, but gradually his faith in human beings has returned.

"He is good-tempered and never attempts to bite. But he is a savage looking animal, and when he comes leaping up on the boat landing, driving off women and children by mere ferocity of appearance, and seizing their fish, as he did recently, he makes a very clever imitation of a ferocious beast."

A New One.

Nimble wits and a glib tongue frequently save erring New York "coppers" on trial before the deputy commissioner at police headquarters. Not long ago a giant patrolman, accused of being about a quarter of a mile off his beat, evolved this excuse: "You see, it was like this, your honor. I was patrolling my post, when I thought I heard a man up the street yelling 'Fire! Fire!' I ran in the direction of the sound, and, would you believe me, Mr. Commissioner, there stood a fellow out on the sidewalk trying to wake up a friend of his on the second floor, and he was yelling with all his might, 'Meyer! Meyer!' "Well, that's a brand new one," said the trial commissioner, the suspicion of a smile crossing his face. "Complaint dismissed."

Bride Was Deaf.

At a marriage service performed some time ago in a little country church in Berkshire, when the minister said in solemn tone, "Wilt thou have this man to be thy wedded husband?" Instead of the woman answering for herself, a gruff man's voice answered:

"O' will."

Again the minister looked up surprised, not knowing what to make of it, when one of the groomsmen at the end of the row said:

"Er be deaf. O be answerin' for'er."—London Telegraph.

An Editor's Trials.

People won't love us; we have finally made up our mind to that. Yesterday we mentioned the case of a man who has one child and who every evening buys the child an ice cream cone from a street wagon. And we mentioned how the five poor children across the street looked longingly at the fortunate child and wanted some. Up to noon today nine men had claimed that it was a "dig" at them, and said the man across the street had plenty of money but was too stingy to buy his children ice cream cones.—Athens Globe.

A Welcome Exchange.

"What was the happiest moment of your life?" asked the sweet girl. "The happiest moment of my life," answered the old bachelor, "was when the jeweler took back an engagement ring and gave me eleven links in exchange."—Tit-Bits.

A TYPEWRITER BUILT TO ORDER

If you could have a typewriter made to order, how would you have it? Built for show—or built for service? Loaded down with attachments, devices and mechanism—or simple, durable and efficient? Would you demand the most machinery—or the best, in materials, workmanship and results?

The ROYAL

has every quality that you would demand in a made-to-order machine. It meets every requirement of efficiency, durability and economy.

The first thing you notice about the Royal is its simplicity. You see instantly that it is constructed on new and correct principles, with all needless attachments and devices eliminated.

The Royal is built for service. It has only about half as many parts as other standard machines. The simplicity thus secured works for your advantage in four ways: A saving in the original investment; low cost of maintenance; minimum of effort and maximum of convenience in operation; and the long life of the machine.

The price of the Royal is $65—a new standard price for a high grade writing machine.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDIES THE GREATEST—THE SERVANT. Matthew 20:17-34.—August 21. "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give his life a ransom for many."

AMBITION moves the world—selfish ambition. A certain kind of ambition—to please God and to have his rewards, is encouraged by the exceeding great and precious promises of God's Word. Think of the promise held out to the consecrated, self-sacrificing followers of Jesus—that, if faithful unto death, they shall receive the "crown of life," immortality, and attain a place with their Master in his Throne—as participants in the glories and honors of his Kingdom! There is no earthly appeal to ambition so strong as this, which comes from the Creator to such as have the hearing ear of faith. Nevertheless, the ambitions awakened by these promises, we are warned, might become our snares. The very condition upon which we may attain the Kingdom is our faithful endurance of shame, contempt, misunderstanding, and our demonstration to the last of humility and absolute loyalty to God and full resignation to his providences. Whoever would reign with Messiah in his coming Kingdom, for which we pray, "Thy Kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as in heaven," must humble himself under the mighty hand of God that he may be exalted in due time.—1 Peter 5:6.

The prospect of the Kingdom was bright before the minds of the apostles, even when Jesus was foretelling his ignominious sufferings and death; so that two of his beloved followers, James and John, through their mother, importuned a promise that they should sit, the one on the right hand and the other on the left hand of the Great King when his Kingdom should be established.

This request drew from the Great Teacher the suggestion that his loving and ambitious disciples had, perhaps, not fully counted the cost of such exaltation. He inquired if they were willing to drink of his cup of ignominy and reproach and if they were willing to be baptized with his baptism, into his death—the sacrifice of all earthly interests. They had counted the cost, and promptly responded as to their willingness. They had learned well the lessons of the Great Teacher. He assured them that with this willingness of mind the privilege would be theirs of sharing his ignominy and his death and of sitting with him on his Throne. But as respects the chief positions, they were not at his disposal. At the conclusion of the testings of his people, those positions of highest honor in the Kingdom next to himself will be given according to the just standards which the Father has prepared and established. How we can rejoice with those apostles in the fullness of their consecration and in the assurances of the Master! And we also should strive by faithfulness to attain a place with the Master in his Throne, as members of his Body, the Church.

The ambition of James and John was shown in their desire for places of special nearness to the Lord. Jesus did not reprove them specifically, but indirectly. When the other ten heard how these two had sought to bespeak the chief places of honor they were indignant. The Master took advantage of the incident to show how different is God's judgment from that of men. With men the aggressive and powerful hold the lordship and dominion over others, but in the Divine arrangement the order is reversed. God will honor most and put in the highest positions, the humble, the submissive, the meek. On this incident the Lord based a general instruction to his followers on the necessity for humility. We are to take the Divine standpoint and honor most in the Church those who most serve the Church, and not those who demand service and honors and seek self-exaltation. Our Lord pointed to his own course as an illustration; they acknowledged him as their Master and yet no one served them so much as did he. Indeed, he came into the world not to be served, but to serve others, even to the extent of laying down his life as the ransom price for the many, for the world, to be applied for their release from sin and death condemnation in God's due time—during the Messianic Kingdom.

Journeying on the Master had an opportunity of exemplifying his position as a servant. Two blind men, learning that he was passing, exercised such faith that they hailed him as the Messiah, the Son of David, entreating Mercy, Help, Relief. Instead of passing them by, saying, "You are only blind beggars, anyway," the Master stopped and called them to him and, in response to their request, touched their eyes, and immediately they received sight. Other Scriptures indicate that the Great Teacher's miracles were not performed without cost to himself. "Virtue (vitality) went out of him and healed them all." (Luke 6:19).

He who was rich, for our sakes became poor, humbling himself to serve the humblest and poorest of the world! Here we have an illustration of the spirit of meekness, the spirit of service, which must characterize the hearts, and, in some degree, control the lives of all true followers, disciples, of the Great Teacher. If it is not in our power to open the eyes of the physically blind, it is in our power to help many to a clearer insight into the things of God which the natural eye hath not seen, nor ear heard—the things which God hath in reservation for them that love him and that, following him, follow in the footsteps of Jesus.—(1 Cor. 2:9). Let us, then, seek the true, God-given ambition; but let us specially seek to know and to do the will of our Father in heaven.

A temperance meeting was held in the Methodist Church on Wednesday evening. Mr. W. Cropley presided, with Mr. A. Visscher as secretary. It was resolved to continue in the work and organize a temperance society which should not be "secret." Messrs. Prof. C. Scott, I. Cappon and G. L. Matchan were appointed a committee to draft the necessary articles of association, and report at the next meeting, to be held at the same place on next Tuesday evening.

The Graafschap post office, and store of Mr. Mokma, were entered by burglars on Sunday night last. They took some money, postage stamps, and other goods, to the value of about $20. It is reported to us that a team of Mr. E. Brink was taken the same night. Up to this present writing no clue to the thieves.

At about 10:30 in the evening of Thursday the bells announced another fire. This time a fire had begun by some unknown process, perhaps spontaneous combustion or incendiary on the second floor of the large double store of Mr. W. Wakker, on the corner of Ninth and River streets, furniture dealer. The engines and water were close at hand and the fire was put out after a hard fight, although the upper part of the building sustained considerable damage. The greater part of the furniture on the first floor, which was the costliest, was saved and stored in neighboring buildings. The total damage is not yet known, but is covered by insurance. Ed this is now the Van Raalte implement store.

Doing Their Duty.

Scores of Holland Readers are Learning the Duty of the Kidneys.

To filter the blood is the kidneys' duty.

When they fail to do this the kidneys are sick.

Backache and many kidney ills follow.

Urinary trouble, diabetes.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure them all. Holland people endorse our claim.

Thomas Boven, lumber salesman, of 151 W. Fourteenth St. Holland, Mich., says: "For some time I was afflicted with kidney complaint and I suffered severely from pain in the small of the back. My back ached intensely at night and I was subject to dizzy spells. The least cold I caught settled in my kidneys and made me feel worse. Some time ago I commenced taking Doan's Kidney Pills and in a week they relieved me. The contents of one box effected a cure and I now have no trouble whatever from my kidneys."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Business Stationary.

It has been said that a man's hat and shoes are the index to his dress; and it may be said with equal emphasis that to the man at a distance the stationary used by the merchant is an index to his business. There is much more that the first thought would suggest in the letter head.

Job printing is now so cheap that no business man can afford to dispense with it. It takes a comparatively short time to write your name and address; yet try writing it a thousand times and you will tell a different story. The thousand letter heads will go rapidly, and there is even more time wasted in writing them in doses of one, two or three at a time than when one makes a business of it and writes the whole thing at once.

Aside from the labor saved, there is the gain in neatness, and in a business-like appearance. Without the printed form we naturally suppose that the firm is a little one-horse affair; but let the same combination appear in a neat type setting, and the opinion is quickly changed.

Again, when writing to strangers there is much danger that proper names will be read wrong. Even if the writing is considered legible, and is really so where special names are not involved, the names of places are easily read wrong and the substitution or omission of a single letter is liable to send a missive across the continent on a useless trip, thereby necessitating a loss of time even if the letter is eventually returned to its original destination.

The printed form looks neater as well as more legible. With the proper spacing and balancing, there is entire harmony. There is a legitimate excuse for attaching your business card. And advertising pays, on your stationery as well as in your show window. Look out for the firm which does good work and then note the saving in time and the gain in appearance.

Present: Mayor Brusse, Alds. Van Eyck,
Van Tongeren, VandenBerg, Drinkwater, Hyma, Kammeraad, Dyke Lawrence, Holkeboer and the Clerk.

The reading of the minutes and regular order of business were suspended.

PETITIONS.

John Neis petitioned for permission to place building material on East 8th street adjacent to Lot 14 except the west 44-1-2
ft. block 31.

Granted subject to ordinance.
Slagh and Smith petitioned for permission to place building material on East 8th street adjacent to the west 43 ft. of lot 6 block 35.

Granted subject to ordinance.
Chas. P. Limbert Co. petitioned for the right of way for sidewalk across Columbia avenue between 6th and 7th streets.

Referred to the committee on streets and crosswalks with power to act.

S. A. Keane & Co. petitioned to have their certified check for $500.00 which accompanied their bid for Park Bonds, returned.

Clerk was instructed to return said certified check.

John Busby, Supt., and 27 others petitioned the Council to accept the lowest bid for paving West 8th street, and that Westrumite be substituted for brick in accordance with the proposition submitted by the Central Westrumite Co. it being understood that the part between the tracks will be brick with asphalt filler.

Ald. Van Eyck moved that the petition be filed.

Ald. Holkeboer moved as a substitute that the petition be referred to the Committee on streets and crosswalks.

Said substitute motion prevailed.
The clerk presented communication from the Central Westrumite Co. relative to Westrumite street oil to be used on West 11th and 12th streets stating that they only expected pay for the oil actually used.

Accepted and filed.
Mr. U. S. Van Westrum, manager of the Central Westrumite Co., appeared before the Council and stated that his company would expect no payment for the road oil shipped to the city of Holland, and which was not used by the city. And further that he consented to the use of said road oil on two blocks of street in the city for an experiment to show what could be done with their product, to be paid for by the city only if three-fourths of the owners of property abutting on the streets on which said oil is used pay for the same, the balance to be paid for by the city, viz: the other one-fourth which is so used for experimental purposes, on such two blocks.

On motion of Ald. Van Eyck,
Resolved, that the proposition of the Central Westrumite Company with reference to the Road oil, so that the city is not to pay for oil not used nor for that used for experimental purposes unless paid for,
by three-fourths of the owners of property abutting on the streets upon which such experiment is made, be and hereby is accepted.

Carried.
H. Van Ry petitioned against the sprinkling of Westrumite oil on West 12th street, Filed.

The committee on streets and crosswalks and the city engineer, to whom was referred the several bids for the paving of West 8th street from River street to Dock street, reported having examined same and found that the lowest bid was that of C.
Marsma of Grand Rapids, Mich., also that they had examined the several kinds of brick upon which bids had been submitted and recommended the use of Bessemer Brick.

On motion of Ald. Dyke,
Action in the matter of bids for West 8th street paving was deferred until the next meeting of the council.

The City Engineer reported that the Central Westrumite Company had finished paving East 18th street from Central Ave.
to Columbia Ave., and requested the Council to inspect the same, recommending that 80 per cent of the cost of said pavement be paid to said Central Westrumite Co.

On motion of Ald. Drinkwater,
The time set for inspecting said pavement was Saturday, Aug. 3, 1910, at 3
p. m.

The committee on ways and means and the city attorney, to whom was referred the matter of charges being made by the Holland City Gas Co., contrary to the provisions of the franchise granted to said Company, through its predecessors, and under which it is operating, reported that they found such charges are being made and that the same are in violation of the terms of the franchise; and recommend that the said Holland City Gas Co. be given notice in writing, that the ordinance under which they are operating is not complied with by them, and requiring them to comply with the same within thirty days, and to cease such violation, and that if the said Company refuses and neglects so to do, that then the said franchise will be forfeited and annulled. Adopted.

On motion of Ald. Van Eyck,
Whereas, from reports of certain citizens and after careful investigation by several committees from the Common Council, we learn that the Holland City Gas Company is making charges for making connection for the furnishing of gas for fuel purposes, which we believe to be contrary to the letter and spirit of the ordinance under which the said company is operating.

And Whereas, It is also reported, and we believe that the said Company refuses and neglects to make extensions to its mains contrary to the provisions of said ordinance, therefore,

Resolved, That notice in writing be served upon the said Holland City Gas Company, by the Chief of Police or any policeman of the City of Holland, by serving a copy thereof personally upon the person in charge of the local office of the said Company, and also by sending a copy
by registered mail to John A. Covode, President, Grand Rapids, Michigan, and a copy to Joseph H. Brewer, Secretary, Michigan Trust Building, Grand Rapids,
Michigan, which notice shall state the matters wherein the said company is violating the terms of the said ordinance, under which it is operating, and requiring the said Company to cease such violations and requiring them to comply with the terms of said ordinance within (30) days after receipt of said notice; and that upon failure of the said Company to comply with the terms of said notice and the said ordinance as required in said notice, then that the City Attorney be instructed to take such steps as may be necessary to declare the said franchise forfeited, and to annul and rescind the same, all as provided for in Section 18, of the said ordinance, being Ordinance No. 213, of the ordinances of the City of Holland, and entitled "An Ordinance Granting to Bascom Parker of Niles, Michigan, and his Assigns, the Right to Construct, Maintain and Operate Gas Works in the City of Holland," which said ordinance was passed March 9, 1903, and approved March 10, 1903.

Said resolution prevailed by yeas and nays as follows:—
Yeas—Ald. Vnn Eyck, Van Tongeren,

raad, Dyke, Lawrence, Holkeboer, Jellema,

Flying signals of distress, the launch Catherine B was sighted off Holland harbor Wednesday morning and the life savers went to the rescue of 18 terrified passengers who had been tossed about on the choppy sea for several hours. The party headed by Editor Louis H. Conger, were returning from Saugatuck and a crippled engine left them helpless.

Fate seems to pursue the family of Mr. and Mrs. John Ver Schurs in this city. The recent death of their youngest daughter marks the seventh in a family of eight and the last is seriously ill. Two of their children died of diphtheria, two were drowned, one was killed in a log jam at King's basket factory, and the last death resulted from heart disease in a Milwaukee sanitarium.

A case that had created a good deal of interest was that of the four lads who were charged with stealing ice cream at the wedding of George Zeuwerink, August 4. The boys claimed that the theft was not with malicious intent. Mr. Zeuwerink was willing to take the boys' point of view and Justice Miles simply imposed the cost suspending the ten day jail sentence.

Tuesday morning a party of picnickers from Kalamazoo passed through the city to enjoy a day's outing at Jenison park. The party was composed chiefly of members of the H. O. H. society of the Celery City and was some 600 strong, occupying ten coaches of the Pere Marquette train. They marched from the P. M. station to the Interurban station headed by a Kalamazoo band some carrying bunches of celery as insignia of the city from which they came. Boarding a car they left for Jenison Park to spend the day there on the picnic grounds.

A crowd of 500 persons from Grand Haven went to the resort on an excursion Sunday and found even the refreshment stands were closed. Deputy Sheriff Kleis made the rounds of the Black Resorts again Sunday and found some of the concessions at Macatawa park running. He took the names of the operators and no doubt warrants will be issued for their arrest this week. The cases against the resort men at Jenison park will be tried in Justice Miles' court today, tomorrow and Saturday. Prosecutor Coburn will represent the township board and Attorney George E. Kollen will ap-

Chief of Police Kamferbeek, who returned last week from Niagara Falls, witnessed during his stay there the suicide of a man who chose the great waterfall as a sure means of death. The local chief was standing on the brink of the American Falls when he observed the body in its course thru the rapids immediately above the brink of the falls and also as it went over the edge. The police instinct was too strong for Fred's vacation recess, and he immediately turned to in an effort to solve the mystery. A few minutes later the man's coat, hat and umbrella were found nearby, where he had laid them down before taking the awful plunge. There was no clue to his identity.

DROVE HIS AUTO THROUGH FLAMES

RAN THE MACHINE FACE TO FACE WITH DEATH AND ESCAPED.

SAVED MOTHER FROM DEATH

Also Rescued Sister, Brother-in-Law and Others Hemmed In by the Great Forest Fires That Have Been Raging for Some Time.

Chicago.—A vivid story of how he drove an automobile nine miles through a flaming forest on a road not more than twenty feet wide in its widest parts, to rescue his mother, sister and brother-in-law from death amid the burning trees, while great tongues of fire shot across the road and blinding smoke assailed his eyes and nostrils, was told by Louis Nissen.

"Acres of forest and flame!" Thus Mr. Nissen summarized his realistic description of the recent forest fires in Wisconsin, in one of which he experienced his thrilling adventure. His pig red touring car made three trips through the heart of the blazing woods, bearing to safety, in addition to his mother, brother-in-law and sister, the latter two Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wachsmuth, a liveryman named Strube with a party of four strangers who had been touring the country.

Mr. Nissen's own people were trapped in their farmhouse nine miles north of Ogema, Wis., situated in the north central section of the state. The liveryman and his party were in the same general neighborhood and unable to move either forward or back, as their rig, a four-seated buggy, had broken down. All were in a dangerous plight when rescued. Mr. and Mrs. Wachsmuth and Mr. Nissen's mother are now stopping at the home of Mr. Nissen.

"Ogema is about 420 miles north of Chicago," said Mr. Nissen. "I was only up in that country for a few days, but they were certainly replete with interest. My brother-in-law, his wife and my mother were at their farmhouse, some nine miles beyond Ogema, at the time the fires began. I had gone north primarily on a pleasure trip and contemplated

Duluth, Minn., as my destination. Needless to say, when I found out the desperate situation of my people I gave up all thought of any further 'joy riding.'

"No one who has not seen one of the forest fires can have any conception of what a fearful thing it is. All about are burning woods and flaming marshes, and they burn morning, noon and night for days and days. It is only heavy rains which finally extinguish the big blazes.

"There is only one road leading to the 360-acre farm of my brother-in-law. There he had a sawmill, three stables, a home and 400,000 or more feet of timber, and up there he was trapped with the forest burning on all four sides of him. I went up this road for him and his wife and my mother and I had an awful time. The roadway was possibly twenty feet wide at its widest points and on either side all along the nine miles I was forced to travel the woods were burning. Great tongues of flame shot across the road at places and the smoke was awful. I was choking and half-blinded during the entire trip, but I kept the machine at top speed—or at as high a speed as I could force it along the poor road.

"Finally I reached them and just in time. I hurried them in the machine to a clearing about three miles distant, where we fixed up a shelter. Then I went back and tried to save some of the household goods, but found that next to impossible. My brother-in-law lost practically everything—his sawmill, his home and nearly everything in it, besides all his acres of timber.

"It was prior to my trip after my own people that I had heard of the plight of Strube and his party. His rig was out of whack in some way and he was stranded up on a country road in the northern part of the state, but I got to him in time and by crowding we managed to get all the party into the machine and hurried them to safety."

COOK TO BE JUDGE

Unique Methods of Determining Potato's Worth to Be Inaugurated.

MICHIGAN'S LEADING VEGETABLE PRODUCT WILL BE BAKED, BOILED AND STEAMED AT WEST MICH. STATE FAIR.

It is the desire of the management of the West Michigan State Fair to make each of its departments valuable to the exhibitor and to the public in the way of demonstration and education. For the past two years the wheat has been judged by representatives of the State Millers' association, the object being that the exhibitor, as well as the visitor, may acquire more definite knowledge of what is actually demanded by the millers of the state for the manufacture of flour. In the same way it has been the endeavor of the management to procure the best commercial judges of beans.

This year another innovation is introduced. Potatoes will be exhibited in classes and not as varieties, and prizes will be awarded by two judges. The first judge will be the best commercial judge of potatoes than can be secured; the other will be the best possible cook of potatoes that can be secured. So that the awards will be made on the basis of actual merit as demanded on the market and in the home. Potatoes from each worthy exhibit will be cooked upon the grounds and scored on the basis of cooking value. The cooking will be done by baking, boiling in jackets, and steaming.

Michigan leads all other states in the production of potatoes. It is the plan of the management of the West Michigan State Fair to determine in the above practical way what county and what individual exhibitor has grown the best potatoes of the season. The exhibit of potatoes, therefore, that receives the highest award may be assumed to be the best exhibit of potatoes produced in the greatest potato state in the Union.

Here is an opportunity for the growers of potatoes to make a study in potato quality, and an opportunity also for the different counties to show what can be done within their borders in the production of this important crop.

FINE STOCK.

West Michigan State Fair's Great Cattle Show.

Noted for its cattle shows ever since its organization, the West Michigan State Fair of 1910, to be held in Grand Rapids, Sept. 12-16th, will excel past exhibitions on the Comstock Park fair grounds and equal any cattle show of a similar nature ever held elsewhere.

A premium list of nearly $5,000.00 helped to attract last year the highest class of entries, and the special rewards offered by the Holstein-Friesian Breeders' association and the American Shorthorn Breeders' association still further enhance the attractiveness of exhibits in this department, and this year's exhibits in this department will be greater than ever before. Increased premiums and greater activity in the past on the part of the management in endeavoring to secure fine exhibits have met with such generous responses as to insure a bigger and better cattle show than last year.

The special dairy tests, which have been features of the past three West Michigan State Fairs, will be repeated this year. These will be conducted under the supervision of the state dairy and food department. For the purpose of encouraging economical production and business methods, $75 is offered, in four prizes of $30, $20, $15 and $10. The tests will be conducted during the entire period of the Fair. Special rates on all railroads will be given to patrons of the fair.

Grand Cavalcade.

On Wednesday and Thursday of September 14th and 15th, at 1:30 p. m. each day, there will be a great cavalcade of all prize winning cattle at the West Michigan State Fair. These cavalcades have come to be a pronounced feature of this Fair. They attract the attention of a larger portion of the visitors to the fair than any one other feature of it. Be sure to visit the fair one of these days.
