Has Office in New Holland.

Dr. J. W. Bruinsma of this city is preparing to establish an office at North Holland at once in the territory formerly occupied by Dr. De Pree. Dr. Bruinsma has purchased an auto and intends to have the morning hours for his country business and to devote the afternoon to his city patients. As the trip to the country can be made by auto in fifteen minutes and as Dr. Bruinsma will have telephone service between his new office and the city he will be able to answer an emergency call from here at short notice. Dr. Bruinsma will continue to make his home here.

Local housewives are complaining because the measures of hucksters from whom they buy vegetables, fruit and farm produce of other kinds are too small, sometimes containing as much as one fourth less than the amount paid for. Chief of Police Kamferbeek suggests that the police be notified immediately in such cases as this in order that some steps may be taken to put a stop to the practice which is undoubtedly confined to a few of those despoiling of their wares from house to house.

Last night while Harm Slenk was driving his runabout along River street he came too close to the curb in front of the Westfield Blacksmith shop and the rear wheel of the vehicle caught on one of the projecting arms of the fire hydrant there. The wooden spokes of the wheel were ripped out as readily as if done with a saw but the rubber part of the tire came through without a scratch. The occupants, of car escaped without injury.

The factory of the Holland wire fence company on Twentieth street well probably be ready to begin operations in about two or three weeks. Geo. A. Lock of Battle Creek and L. A. On the nights that the building is not used for skating there will be other forms of amusement, athletic games, etc. The interior of the building has been carefully gone over and improved in many ways.

The new primary law which went into effect this month provides for a new enrollment before the primary in 1912. Under this law a voter can enroll at any time up to within sixty days of a primary with his township clerk. This leaves no excuse for a voter who does not enroll.

It is against the state law for boys under 21 years of age to smoke on the streets, and for youths who have not attained majority the law relative to the use of tobacco in public is very stringent. To even puff a cigarette of the variety that ten comes in a box for five cents is contrary to the law and may be punished by imprisonment or fine, or both.

A patent milk bottle from which the cream may be drawn without disturbing the milk has been invented by Alje Mulder, 402 West Bridge St., Grand Rapids. Notice that the patent had been granted was received from Washington yesterday. Determining that a quart of milk would have the line between the cream and skimmed milk four inches from the top, the new bottle has a glass spigot at this point. Thus the cream can be run off through this spigot without disturbing the milk.

Speculation is rife as to what is to happen in this congressional district next year. It is said that State Senator White of Niles will contest with Mr. Hamilton for the Republican nomination, "especially if in the redistricting Ottawa is taken in, thus letting into the district the great diplomat, Diekema." As in the new apportionment Michigan will have another member of congress, there will be changes in present district lines. No one is yet authorized to say that Mr. Diekema will be a candidate if Ottawa county shall be placed in the fourth district (which is unlikely), but very likely he will if any one else enters against Mr. Hamilton.—Allegan Gazette.

Charged with the theft of two horses and two buggies, George King Rothman, 21 years old, was captured in a small woods near Martin, Allegan Co., yesterday, hiding there with the stolen outfit in his possession. Rothman offered no resistance to the deputies from the sheriff's office and was lodged in jail easily. The rigs taken belonged to John Yonker, living near Overisel and to Fred Brown of Allegan. One of the outfits was stolen Tuesday and the other yesterday morning. Rothman told the officers that another man aided in the stealing of the horses, but that he disappeared when he thought the officers were on their trail. Miles appeared for Mr. Kolkeas and Attorney D. Ten Cate defended Brower.

The business of the Crawford Transfer company has been so good so far this season that it has been decided to build a new boat for next season and dispose of the Arundell. The new boat will be of steel, and have stateroom capacity for 300 and be capable of carrying 2,000 passengers. She will be as near like the "City of South Haven" in size and equipment as possible, and will make the run from here to Chicago in five hours. There has been great need for a boat of this class and Mr. Crawford has been aware of the fact for some time, but with the river in the condition it has been in such a boat could not get in. The dipper dredge will have finished its work here by the end of the season and leave a channel ninety feet wide and sixteen feet deep so that next year there should be no trouble in navigating the river. The business this year is twice as large as last, and last year's business was double that of the previous year, so it seems that there is not much risk in making improvements. The new boat, on account of its speed, will be able to draw a good deal of business that the smaller boats could not possibly have secured. Lodges, Sunday schools and various societies can use it for one-day outings. They can leave Chicago at 9 a. m. and arrive at 2, and returning, leaving here at 6 p. m. and arrive home at about the time they would if they had attended the theater.

TO AILING WOMEN.

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many a Sufferer in Holland.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing down pains, lameness, backache, etc. Uric poisoning also causes headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pain.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that has cured thousands of such cases. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Holland woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. H. Gaze, 91 W. Eighth St., Holland, Mich., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and can heartily recommend them. My first experience with this remedy took place about a year ago when I was suffering from backache and distressing pains in my kidneys. It was difficult for me to straighten after stooping and I was annoyed by the kidney secretions. The contents of two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills removed these troubles, doing me a world of good."

For sale by all dealers. Price, 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

HAMILTON.

Heasley of Burnips Corners and Rev. M. E. Remmele of Grandville, a ball game between the Zeeland Wonders and Hamilton's crack team and a band concert.

FARM BY-PRODUCTS.

A history of the evolution of by-products of manufacture and their present relation to the main industry would be the theme of a very interesting book, says the St. Paul Pioneer Press. Such a volume would hold considerable food for thought for the farmers of the country, and incidentally of the northwest. More than one careful farmer has shown that the using of a few cows and chickens has paid him profits far above what the cost of labor and rent of land occupied would lead him to expect, and in both cases, particularly with poultry, it is what might be called a by-product of farming. There are poultry farms where the main emphasis is on chickens and eggs, but most of the eggs of the state are raised on farms where the hens are rather incidental and allowed to run as they please. By a little care and attention the same hens can be made to add several million dollars to the income of the farmers of the state. The loss because the eggs are not taken to market often enough is large and care in gathering them twice a day is another source of leak in the profits of poultry. Mr. N. E. Chapman, connected with the University Farm, says if the farmers of the state added one pound to the chickens they sell the increased income would be $1,000,000 a year. At present little or no effort is made to fatten chickens before marketing them. They are gathered up and taken to town when the farmer is ready.

Dust to Dust

Labor and Capital dine at the same hour in Holland. Capital rides home from the office to a six o'clock dinner in an automobile. Labor walks home from the factory to a six o'clock supper in a cloud of dust. Capital has been out during the day enjoying the pure air. Labor has been working at the bench inside the walls of the factory. Capital gets the pure air at night. Labor gets the dust.

We do not attempt in this editorial to devise a scheme whereby Labor shall own his own automobile so that he can ride home at night neck and neck with Capital and leave the dust for the stray dogs, the man on the bicycle or the open window of the freshly cleaned home of the housewife. But we do think that steps can and should be taken to settle the dust. This is the worst time of the year for dust and for two months or more between the autos and the fall winds there will be clouds upon clouds of beautiful, pure dust circulating in the atmosphere.

Something ought to be done. None dispute that. What shall be done? We are in mind of a place on Thirteenth street where private owners of abutting property have solved the problem by applying an oil preparation. But the average man who toils and breathes the dust cannot afford an oil preparation in front of his house. We are in mind of another place on Twelfth street where so much water is spread on the street to keep down the dust that the street is altogether too wet and sloppy. But the average man who toils and breathes the dust cannot find the water to put on the street in front of his house. Ordinary sprinkling won't do it, for the water that flows from the sprinklers cart dries up too fast.

The remedy is oil. And it is oil at the expense of the city. Oil that need be applied only once and that will last till snow comes and settles the question till spring; oil that every tax payer in the city, rich or poor will be glad to pay for. We can't have water because we haven't got it but we can get oil and oil that will settle the dust till snow flies will be cheap at any price we have to pay to get it. New conditions must be met by new methods. The automobile has come to stay and with it must come a new method of settling the dust in the city streets.

JEALOUS LOVER SLAYS.

Hurls Woman to Her Death from Steamer Puritan in Mid-Lake.

Walter Hopper, the Chicago man, who hurled his lover, Grace Lyons, to a watery grave in Lake Michigan, from the deck of the steamer Puritan, approaching Holland Saturday afternoon, was arraigned before Justice Wachs in Grand Haven Monday morning where the charge of murder was read to him. Hopper stared fixedly at the justice as the charge of murder was read, and at the conclusion stated that he wanted a trial. He waived examination in the justice court and was bound over to circuit court without bail.

Hopper's crime was the most spectacular tragedy which has ever come under the care of the Ottawa county officials. An old marine man who has followed the lakes for years stated today that it was the first time within his memory that a woman had been hurled from the deck of a lake steamer by a fiend bent on murder. The deed was accomplished so quickly that those on board of the ship were stunned and by the time a boat had been launched, the victim had disappeared beneath the waves. Soon after crossing the imaginary boundary line which divides the lake between Michigan and Illinois, and at an estimated distance of between 25 and 35 miles off Holland, the man seized the woman as she stood on the after gangway on the main deck of the Puritan, and with all of his mad strength brought into play, lifted her over the rail and hurled her down into the rushing water, which foamed along the ship's hull. That was the last seen of Daisy Watts, alias Grace Lyons.

Witnesses to the wild deed stood transfixed with horror, but members of the crew seized the murdered, and under the orders from Captain Crawford, commander of the steamer, he was placed in irons and imprisoned in the hold. The wireless announced the tragedy to the stations along the shore and when the Puritan reached Macatawa an officer was waiting in an automobile to hurry the prisoner to the Holland jail. There in the keeping of Deputy Sheriff Kleis he remained over Sunday, and Monday morning he was brought to Grand Haven and placed in the county jail.

While the supposition gained ground in some quarters that Hopper would have to be turned over to the federal authorities, because of the fact that the murder was committed on the high seas, the only question in the mind of Prosecuting Attorney Osterhaus was whether the case was in the jurisdiction of Ottawa or Allegan county. Under the law the federal jurisdiction does not extend over Lake Michigan in cases of this kind, but rests entirely in the bordering states. Once satisfied that the murder was committed in Michigan waters, the case came under the joint jurisdiction of Allegan and Ottawa counties. As the criminal was apprehended in Ottawa, it was decided this morning to try the case here. Therefore the arraignment was made and all preliminaries are out of the way for the appearance of the prisoner in circuit court, whether to demand trial or enter a plea of guilty.

The latter course seems more probable as Hopper no sooner committed the crime than he remarked coolly: "I'm glad of it, because I know where she is tonight." He has made a full confession of the whole terrible affair both to the officers and to newspaper men, who interviewed him in the jail. And yet the confession is unnecessary as the crime was committed in the presence of witnesses.

The woman boarded the boat in Chicago bound for Holland, thence to Grand Rapids where she intended to visit her sister for two weeks. Unknown to her, Hopper also boarded the boat, and when the steamer was nearing the east coast he met her at the lunch room. They talked together and he tried to persuade her to marry him next month. Another girl came up and Hopper walked away but returned later with some doughnuts and coffee and some candy. These Daisy Watts spurned and threw them overboard. After several minutes of quarreling, she said: "Walter, I don't want to have anything to do with you. I don't want to see you again."

With that his rage seemed to burst beyond control and he seized her in his arms and started for the rail. The struggling woman fought to her last bit of strength. She caught the coat of the girl, Bessie Pouwels of Grand Rapids, who had been talking with her, and ripped off a button in her efforts to cling to her for safety.

In telling her story of the terrible deed Miss Pouwels said: "Before she had a chance to realize what he was about, he had lifted her over the gate of the gangway but she clung to him and to the gate and almost pulled him overboard with her. She fought to her last bit of strength and went down with a heartrending scream. I shall never forget the look on her face. I did what I could to help her but the fellow was too strong. It seemed like an age before any men came, and the girl had just dropped overboard when two men came and threw the fellow down and held him."

Nik Kik, clerk of the Grand Rapids police court, was also aboard of the Puritan, and while he did not see the crime itself, he claims to have watched the efforts to rescue the girl. The drowning girl, he states, was in sight five minutes, and although the boat was stopped as soon as possible, the small boat was not launched for fully fifteen minutes. The Puritan hove to, and lay nearly an hour, while efforts were made to locate the girl.

However, in his statement Hopper declared that his victim sank at once and did not again come to the surface. This is rather borne out by the opinion of Captain Crawford, who states that in all probability Daisy Watts was drawn under by the suction of the steamer and ground to pieces by the propellers. The fact that she was thrown into the water so close to the hull and a short distance from the stern would establish the probability of this opinion. At any rate the body of the unfortunate woman is resting in the depths of Lake Michigan, while the man who hurled her to her death, is locked up in the county jail ashore, awaiting the working out of the law, which will punish him for the spectacular crime.

Daisy Watts was well known in Grand Rapids, where she had lived formerly. Because of the fact that she was particularly fond of dressing in red, she was known familiarly as "the girl in red." She was about thirty years old, and it had long been her custom to dress in a manner which would make her appear much younger. Her sisters, Mrs. Jessie Burrows and Mrs. J. C. Johnson, both live in Grand Rapids. While the neighbors spoke only good words for the two sisters, they had not so much to say as to Daisy. Her history seems to be somewhat shady, according to the circumstances brought out after her death.

Walter Hopper, the murderer, is still cool and collected. He is not even showing a trace of nervousness, and he admits his deed readily. He has repeatedly threatened suicide and declares that he has no desire to live. His sole object in life was the woman whose life he has taken. According to his own story, he fully intended to follow the woman into the lake but hesitated too long and in the meantime he was seized and arrested.

According to Hopper's story he left Chicago at 1:30 and the affair took place at 5:20 in the afternoon. As he hurled the girl into the water he stood outside of the gangway on the guard rail ready to follow her into the sea. But the steamer's engines stopped a minute after the report of the tragedy, and the life boat was launched within five minutes. Hopper claims that he hesitated because he thought the woman was about to be saved, and he did not care to die if she was to live, and go to the man he hated with all of his jealous insanity.

Hopper, who is thirty-one years old, claims to have come, originally from Philadelphia. He is a machinist and earned good money at this trade, and three years ago he met Daisy Lyons, who was then living in a fashionable boarding house in Chicago. He fell in love with her at once, but she turned aside from him. For a time she became lost to him and he searched over the whole city for her. Five months ago he found her. He rented rooms on Cass street, and there they started life anew. Each week he gave her $15 of his pay, and for three months they were happy. Then one Sunday afternoon she left home and did not return at night. The next Sunday she repeated the act and the next, and the next, and Hopper became madly jealous. Last Sunday he followed her to a rooming house on Halsted street. Later she came home and begged for forgiveness, promising to be true.

But Hopper's suspicions were aroused and he began looking around a bit. He found a letter from a man in Grand Rapids asking her to come to him. There was another from a man in Portland, asking her to meet him in Grand Rapids. Last Wednesday she asked him to allow her to go to Grand Rapids to visit her half sister. He told her to go and Saturday morning he gave her the money for her passage and sent her trunk to the boat.

Probably filled with the desire to follow her, he boarded the Puritan himself. In his interview he stated that he had the desire to send her to a place where he would know where she was. "When she saw me I lost heart," he said. "I pleaded with her to return to me and leave the old life, and we'd start in over again."

It was then that she spurned him, refused the lunch and the candy which he had bought for her, and he was in a blind rage. He portrays his own feelings in his own words:

"I left her then and went up on deck and my desire to kill her returned. I went down stairs and found her in the gangway talking to another girl. I went up to her and she told me to go away. Then I seized her, one arm about the waist and the other about the legs and vaulted over the railing and threw her into the lake. I saw her disappear and then as I was going to jump, some one grabbed me."

The landlady at 500 Cass street, Chicago, where Hopper and Grace Lyons had been staying, was seen by a newspaper man yesterday, and although she refused to give her name, she stated positively that Hopper and the woman had been married in Milwaukee a week ago. "I knew they were married or they couldn't have remained in my house," she said.

Hopper is a tall, angularly built fellow, with an intelligent face. Just now his black beard gives him a dirty, unkempt appearance, and his clothes are very shabby. He wears an old straw hat and his appearance is that of a man who had left his work on the spur of a moment. However, he is not repulsive and while his countenance has in it that expression of desperation, there is not the look of a criminal in his dark eyes.

One glance at this man who followed the deception of an ill destined love, convinces that he has little care what becomes of his young and vigorous life, now that the glitter which he believed made life worth living, has been removed. His is only the old story of the false sirens and the shipwreck.

When arraigned in Circuit Court Tuesday Hopper pleaded guilty to the charge of throwing Grace Lyons from the steamer Puritan and all that is left now is to pronounce sentence. This will probably be done Friday.

PITCHERS CAN GIVE DETROIT ANOTHER FLAG

What American league team will be playing in the world's series with the National league champions in October. That is a question that some enthusiasts think they can answer, while there are quite a few others, who believe it still a decidedly open one. Here in Detroit there has been something of a tendency to give up hope so far as the local team is concerned, but by no means all the "fans" are agreed, and if one wants an argument on the subject, he can get one any of these days, particularly since Manager Jennings has shaken up the team, putting Jones on the bench in favor of Drake, and placing Delehanty on third, with Gainer back at first.

Unquestionably the Detroit team has been something of a disappointment to its friends this season, though to a very large extent it is their own fault. When the team got off to its remarkable start, winning 21 out of the first 23 games of the season, the naturally over-optimistic at once commenced dishing out the best way to win the world's championship. But, alas and alack! One month of baseball doesn't make a season, and the idea that a Detroit victory was then assured was by no means justified. Since that time Philadelphia has had a couple of spurts almost if not quite equal to that of the Tigers in April and May, while the latter have made one stand that was almost as profitable. But in between both teams have had hard sledding, and Detroit suffered the most. The recent slump, in which the team has lost about two-thirds of its games for a month, has been a bad one, and if the team doesn't finish first, it won't be hard to figure when the worst of the damage was done.

Recurring to that early season spurt the team can right now be thankful—if it has a mind for being thankful at all—for those 21 victories. For since the first 23 games were played it has won only a little better than half its games, and thus it is easy to figure that, but for the fine trim in which Manager Jennings brought his team to the start, and the wise way in which he used his colt pitchers before the sluggers got their batting eyes, Detroit would scarcely have figured as a contender at all. It won't do to sneer at spring victories, either. They are as hard to win as any others, though it is a different problem to do it. If you don't think it's hard, ask the average big league manager. Many a one has gotten gray hair through the troubles that have beset him in April and May.

So, acknowledging that Detroit deserved all she got in that first rush—that it wasn't chance or luck—why didn't the team hold its gait, not necessarily the 21-2 gait, but a steady, winning pace? There are several reasons that one can figure out, and perhaps some that are beyond all of us excepting the players and manager—and possibly even they may not be able to "dope" it all.

Naturally, a primary reason for the failure to keep winning as the team did at first was the fact that after a little time the young pitchers were unable to fool the batters. The latter soon commenced to solve the speed and curves, and drove the former minor leaguers' offerings to the fences. With only Mullin of the veterans in good trim at that time, Jennings was up against a hard problem, and one that has continued in large part to the present time, though Donovan has been a big help of late.

Next, the injury to Gainer was a bad blow to the team. The young first baseman was fielding finely and batting 350 when he had his arm broken by one of Coombs' fast balls, and despite the fine fielding of O'Leary, who was the extra man thrown into the game by the accident, Charley's batting was not within 100 points of Gainer's. And the experts say, and it sounds reasonable, that the latter was just getting going when he had to quit.

Delehanty at Third.

Besides Gainer's loss, the team has suffered through Delehanty's bad leg, which has slowed him up considerably in fielding. Possibly in the long run, if he makes good at third again, it won't matter for a year or two, but the time is probably past when Delehanty can play a first-class second base. This contingency has brought a new man, Baumann, to the team, and, while not many managers would like the task of trying to win a pennant with a new keystone sacker, broken in after mid-season, the young player seems to be doing more than anyone expected.

The fourth infielder, Bush, is not hitting as well as he did his first years in the league, but he is on bases a great deal and his fielding is better than ever, if such a thing is possible. Without a doubt, he is one of the finest fielding shortstops the game has ever seen, and is of almost immeasurable value to the team. More than one of the Detroit pitchers has had reason to thank the midget for saving games that would have been lost without the marvelous stops perpetrated somewhere between second and third at various stages of the play.

As at present constituted, the infield looks mighty good, and, barring accidents or a blow-up of the recruit second baseman, should be able to hold its own in the fight for the flag. And the outfield is there, or thereabouts. No need of referring to Cobb and Crawford, who are as good or better than ever, while Drake is going well.

What Will the Pitchers Do?

The great problem is the pitching. It seems certain that Mullin and Donovan can be depended upon for steady work, but just what is to be expected of the others is more or less of an open question. Summers is regarded as the most likely to be of value in the pinch, his work having been pretty good of late, though he has not been lucky. It is probable that he will be used considerably the rest of the year. Willett, who ought to be one of the mainstays of the club, is a great problem. He seems to have all the curves and speed, but doesn't know when to use them. Sometimes he gets through a game without being hit hard, while again he is bumped as if he were a green amateur. It is a source of wonder that a man who in his first year as a regular big league pitcher won 20 out of 30 games cannot come anywhere near striking that gait now, when he ought to be a better twirler in every way, and know the batsmen much better.

It may be that Manager Jennings, by using Mullin and Donovan as much as they can stand, with Summers as third choice, can get good enough pitching to hold his team up for the rest of the year. There are few doubleheaders to be played, and while in the east the team will not have to play Sundays, which will make the use of a smaller pitching staff possible. If Mullin and Donovan could be used against each of the four eastern teams, the chances of gaining ground while on the road would be much enhanced.

In this connection, one may well ask, why are the Detroit no longer the great road team they were when they were winning pennants? Probably Mr. Jennings would like an answer, too. It cannot be that the players are less courageous, for the team personnel has not been changed enough for that. It will not do to say that the other teams have become relatively stronger—though probably they are—because in those days the Detroiters would clean up in the east, and then come home and lose before their Bennett Park admirers. But this year the club is almost as much a home stand team as any in the league.

There is probably something of luck in it, or perhaps one should say chance. It happened in 1907 and 1908 that the team played its best ball away from home. This year the reverse has been true. Other things besides chance may have counted. On the first eastern trip the players were upset by bad water at Washington and didn't recover for days. Moreover, they have not had good pitching away from home, and when a team is playing before a hostile crowd it needs to have its opponents held down. Perhaps on the coming eastern tour there will be a different story.

Another way in which luck has operated is in the way the New York team has walloped "our boys." It cannot be argued that the Gothamites are so superior to Jennings' men, for they stand lower in the percentage table, yet the way they have beaten Detroit has been a shame. Had the local athletes won 14 and lost 5 in the season's series with New York, instead of doing the opposite, as they have at this writing, they would now be leading Philadelphia by some 30 points, instead of trailing that team by 40, and New York would scarcely be in the first division. Such is baseball.

Coming Series Important.

As to the outcome, who can say? Not even Connie Mack or Hughie Jennings. Philadelphia certainly has an advantage in her four-game lead and in the greater number of games she has to play at home. But the Detroit team has overcome as great handicaps in the past. It might be simmered down to this—that if the pitchers do their part the team is now in shape to finish in the front. But it ought not to be expected to overcome a five or six run handicap in every game, as it has had to do too many times this season. Quite likely the crucial series will come when the Athletics reach town next Sunday for their last series of the year at Bennett Park. Should they win, the most optimistic could scarcely accord the Detroit a chance. But if Jennings' men can take three straight, or win two in three, they will have picked up ground and gained a moral victory as well.

As a corollary to the statement of the general situation it might be added that opinion is rather general that the American league has this season been the victim of about the poorest umpiring in its history. It has happened that some of the older men have slumped—just as players do—and there have been no new ones to take their places. It seems to be especially remarkable. It seems to be harder to get good umpires than players, even, for few of the men recruited from lower down prove shining successes, and in fact few are recommended for promotion. The umpire question is a serious one, and for the good of the game the league authorities should make strenuous efforts to find better men for the places. Here in Detroit men who have in the past rarely found fault with the umpiring are very bitter about its 1911 quality, and insist that it is a hardship to both players and spectators to have such inefficient work imposed upon them.

NEW SUGAR CO.

LOCATES IN OHIO

At stated in the News before at a meeting held by the stockholders of the Holland Sugar company it was voted to consolidate with the St. Louis Sugar company and yesterday the stockholders of the latter company took similar action.

The new company will be organized and offered at once, with a capitalization of $2,000,000, of which $1,500,000 will be issued immediately to take up the outstanding stock of the component companies.

The new company may erect a third plant some where in Ohio, the exact location to be determined as soon as the new directors can be elected.

Kelsey-Brewer & Co. of Grand Rapids have handled a great deal of this sugar stock in the past and will continue to handle the stock of the new corporation.

The Holland sugar stock will be exchanged for the new stock on a basis of 15, while that of the St. Louis company will be taken in no a valuation of 16.

Land and Apple Shows

Both the Western Michigan Development bureau and the Original Fruit Belt association are busy securing apples for the big displays they will make at the First Michigan Land and Apple Show in the Coliseum at Grand Rapids November 7 to 11. They have scouts out who are covering their respective territories. The scouts are not only picking up choice specimens of summer and early fall apples, but are also making engagements for choice specimens of later apples. The apples as fast as they ripen are being shipped to Grand Rapids where they are being placed in cold storage to await the opening of the apple show.

In shipping the apples great care is taken to preserve them from bruises. Each apple is wrapped separately in paper and in the bottom of the basket is placed excelsior or some other substance to absorb possible shock.

In addition to the apples to be displayed by these two big development bureaus there will be individual displays by various growers. Farmers who have exceptional fruit have been writing to the management asking for space and a section of the big Coliseum has been set aside for them. It is expected that many will take this opportunity to show to the world what their orchards are capable of producing. The fact that fruit men from all over the middle west will be in attendance at this show is stimulating the interest of the individual exhibitors. Applications for space should be made at once as it is limited. Indications already point to numerous individual exhibitions of handsome specimens of Michigan apples.

Growers who have apples of a quality that warrants their display at the big apple show, but who do not care to make individual exhibits, should notify the apple show management at the Evening Press building, Grand Rapids, so that their fruit may be included in the mass displays of one or the other of the development bureaus according to the territory in which the apples are grown.

Some farmers are in a spirit of local patriotism, donating apples to the displays of the two bureaus, but the scouts of the Western Michigan Development bureau are also buying apples for this bureau's exhibit, where choice stock can be secured.

The promoters ask the farmers to donate the right of way and raise money to purchase the right of way at the terminus in the cities on both ends, while the promoters promise to do the rest. The farmers all along the line are very enthusiastic over the prospects of an interurban road and committees in each township are working hard to secure the right of way and raising the money.

DEATHS.

William Gerber, aged 56 years, died here Saturday of pneumonia. Five weeks ago he fell from a street car in Chicago receiving serious injuries which were the cause of the later lung trouble. He came to Holland about two years ago from Reed City, where he was a lumberman. He was brought to his home here from Chicago two days ago. He was president of the Gerber Drug company. He is survived by his widow. The funeral was held at Fremont.

Last Saturday noon, Katie, the 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Laman on 208 West 13th street, died after a lingering illness due to a complication of diseases. The deceased is survived by her parents and a brother and sister. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock from the home, Rev. Veltman officiating.

JUSTICE COURT NOTES.

Three Hollanders were arraigned in Justice Miles' court Monday on the charge of raising a disturbance. The men were Jap Breen, Albert Schakelaar and John De Vries. The first two pleaded guilty and were fined $5 and costs. De Vries protested his innocence. An investigation will be made of his case and the charge against him will probably be dismissed.

A CORK LEG BRIGADE.

Loss of a leg is essential to a job with a Chicago firm. All but two of its 102 employees in the factory and in the branch offices wear one or two artificial legs. The institution manufactures artificial lower limbs, and the employees leave their work to show the newly fitted patients how well they can walk, run and jump with the artificial article. Makers doubt if there ever was such a thing as a "cork leg"—in which cork entered in any considerable extent into the making of the limb. Some of them claim that the name was derived from one Cork, who made artificial legs early in the last century in New York. In the present day they are manufactured from English willow, covered with a thin parchment or enamel, or of wood and leather.

OLD TESTAMENT TIMES BROOKLYN BERNACLE BIBLE STUDIES

OVERTURNED UNTIL HE COME

Ezekiel xxi, 25-27—Sept. 3
"Depart from evil and do good; seek peace and pursue it."—Psalm xxxii, 1.

At the giving of the Law God plainly told the nation of Israel the terms and conditions upon which they were received as His people. If they would be obedient to the Divine requirements all things would work well with them. They would be rich, prosperous, the blessed nation of the Lord. But if, on the contrary, they should neglect the Divine Statutes and become idolatrous, the Lord would oppose them and would deliver them into the hands of their enemies for chastisement; and "seven times" should pass over them.—Leviticus xxvi, 18, 21, 24, 28.

Now had come the time for the complete overthrow of the national polity, for a period of "seven times" or seven years, as foretold by Moses. In this case, however, the years must have been symbolic because frequently they had captivities of more than seven years. Accepting, then, as a fact that these seven years or "times" were symbolic years, how long a period do they indicate?

It is an accepted fact that in Bible symbolism each day represents a year; and the Jewish year had twelve months of thirty days each. Thus each year represented symbolically three hundred and sixty years; and the seven years of chastisement represented 7 times 360, or 2,520 years.

When, therefore, we read that the kingdom would be overturned, overturned until Messiah should come, we are to understand that the period of the overturned condition, as a whole, would be 2,520 years, beginning with the time the crown was taken from Zedekiah in 606 B. C. (70 years prior to the proclamation of Cyrus permitting the people to return—536 B. C.).

A Look at the Facts
It is always interesting and profitable to students of the Bible to note the fulfillment of Divine predictions. It establishes faith, it makes all of God's promises more real; it assures us of Divine supervision in respect to Israel's affairs and thus gives ground for confidence in the supervision of the affairs of spiritual Israel—the Church.

As we look back along the aisles of history we see the fulfillment of the declaration that the nation of Israel would be overturned. After its restoration by Cyrus, B. C. 536, it continued to have a sort of national existence for 600 years; yet in all that time it had not a king of the line of David—the line of Divine promise—and it was ruled over by the various adjoining nations, as it is written, "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times (years) of the Gentiles be filled full."

The Times of the Gentiles
When God removed the typical kingdom of Israel and His typical throne in the world He gave over the earthly dominion to the Gentiles; and this lease of power, as represented in Daniel's prophecy, was to continue for "seven times"—2,520 years. In other words, during the same period that Israel would be having "seven times" of tribulation and subjection, the Gentiles would be having "seven times" of prosperity; and both will terminate at the same time.

—In 2,520 years from B. C. 606—October, A. D. 1914.

(1) The facts are, so far as the Gentiles are concerned, a lease of power for 2,520 years, as follows:—(a) Babylon, the first Universal Empire; (b) Medo-Persia, the second Universal Empire; (c) Greece, the third Universal Empire; and (d) Rome, the fourth Universal Empire. According to the Scriptural view of the matter, this fourth Universal Empire is still represented in the Papacy and the various so-called Christian governments of the world.

It is well to note particularly the dream of Nebuchadnezzar, as recorded in Daniel ii, 31-45, and its interpretation by the Prophet Daniel. Daniel does not here state the time for the end of these Gentile governments; that we find elsewhere. But every foretold circumstance indicates that the end is nigh, even at the doors. The stone cut out of the mountain without hands, which smites and scatters the Gentile powers, represents the true Church, the Kingdom of God. When glorified it will smite and destroy the kingdoms of this world. Not the people, but the governments are symbolized by the image.

(2) The next thing in order, now, following the expiration of the "seven times" (2,520 years, to 1915 A. D.), will be the establishment of Messiah's Kingdom and its recognition by the children of Israel, and through them as God's instruments and channel, the blessing of all the families of the earth.

Universal Empire—Man's View.

WHAT YOU SAW 30 YEARS AGO

A very ludicrous practical joke was played on some people in this city on Tuesday evening. Mr. P. J. Koning felt something crawling up in his trousers and not knowing what it was imagined it to be a rattlesnake, and "hollered." He grabbed the substance, and called for aid collected thereby quite a concourse of people, among whom were two doctors, who were ready to scalp the snake and save their patient; but upon careful unfolding and opening of the pants it was found to be a frog, whose scratches were augmented into bites. The laugh it created among the crowd can better be imagined than described.

At ten o'clock last week Friday night fire was discovered in the Planning Mill belonging to and operated by Jas. Huntley of this place. The fire is supposed to have started in the engine room but as it was all ablaze when discovered it is hard to tell where it did originate. It was a very short time before the whole southern and eastern part of the building was wrapped in flames. The fire department were on hand promptly and succeeded in confining the fire to that one building alone.

Capt. P. Phanstiel, in addition to his business, has established a general steamboat agency, on the Bradshaw dock, which dock he has leased for the season. Cashier C. Ver Schure contemplates the erection of a $2500 residence on the corner of Maple and Twelfth streets. Architect James Price is drawing up the plans.

Wednesday morning at 11:20 o'clock the villagers of Zeeland were startled by a loud report, followed by a deafening crash of broken timber and escaping steam. The boiler in the flour mill of H. Keppel & Son had exploded and hundreds of people soon congregated on the scene of the disaster. The boiler had been in use for twenty-four years and must have been nearly worn out. It was blown across the street and smashed the plate front of the furniture store of Wierenga and Van Hees demolishing chairs, tables and other furniture to the extent of about $400 while the damage to the store is estimated at an additional $300. A stick of timber pierced its way into the bank of J. Den Herder, passed through the cashiers window and even breaking chairs in the main office. The south-west corner of E. Boone & Co.'s store adjoining the mill was badly damaged and partly unroofed. The house of Dick Boonstra 400 feet away, resembled the remnant of a cyclone, flying bricks wending their way through siding and plaster with terrific force. Portions of the front of the store of A. Lahuis and DePree & Bro's hardware were wrecked and flying debris scattered all over the village. The boiler room was completely wrecked while the mill proper sustained its share, timbers 12x12 being torn out of the second story and demolishing part of the machinery. Fire started in the rubbish and the flames were soon extinguished. Cornelius Zwagerman, the engineer, who was standing nearby when the explosion occurred was thrown over twenty feet and his body was found a few minutes after by H. De Kruij, Jr. hanging over a pump handle in the mill. He was limp as a rag and did not gain consciousness until noon the following day; hopes are entertained for his recovery. L. Scout of Beaverdam who happened to be on the road opposite the mill at the time was thrown from his wagon to the ground as a result of a run away and was unconscious for several hours. A number of other people were slightly injured.

The Hon. Dwight Cutler, Grand Haven's leading citizen died at a late hour last Monday night from Bright's disease.

The many friends of Col. Gardener, civil governor of the province of Tavaas, Southern Luzon, will be interested in the announcement that he is engaged to marry Miss Bessie Patton, of Detroit, daughter of the late Capt. Joseph Patton, and that the wedding will take place on a government packet in the harbor of Havana within a few weeks.

ISAAC KOUW VISITS HOLLAND FARMERS IN IONIA COUNTY.

Five Holland Families Settled There and More Coming to the Colony.

Isaac Kouw has just returned from a three-day trip through this fertile and beautiful country and was so well pleased with it that he has listed several farms there which the American people are offering for sale to make room for the new comers. Several of these people are pioneers and have become independently rich, which is their reason for retiring. He also visited the different Holland families and finds all well pleased and prosperous.

Mr. Henry Kenyon, who formerly lived north of Holland, moved there several years ago, starting in as a renter, later on purchasing a farm and is now the owner of one of the finest and most fertile 240 acre farms in the state. He threshed 1500 bushels of wheat which averaged 35 bushels per acre, he is now preparing ground to put in one hundred acres to wheat this fall, besides this he is about to harvest 50 acres of beans and expects at least 1000 bushels. Mr. L. Huizinga bought a 120-acre farm last spring and has fine crops and likewise all the others, in fact the whole county with very few exceptions is one garden of excellent crops.

It is said that hay was as good a crop as any in the state, wheat exceptionally good, some of the fields producing as high as 45 bushels per acre, but the average crop is considered to be 35 bushels per acre. Oats produced from 40 to 70 bushels per acre and some years go as high as 85 bushels per acre, beans usually produce from 15 to 30 bushels and bring from $1.75 to $2.25 per bushel, and as they are a very easy crop to care for it generally is a good paying crop to raise. While corn on an average is not quite as good as some years, yet there are several fields that will produce at least 100 bushels in the ear to an acre. Every one visiting this country cannot help but speak well of it and become desirous of owning one of these fertile farms. Nowhere in the state of Michigan is there as large an area of good productive soil practically all the same quality as in these townships which are located between Sunfield, Portland and Ionia, with excellent markets the finest natural hard roads in the state, good schools, a healthy climate and railroad accommodations. The Hollanders that are already there are now thinking of organizing a Holland church and as many other families are expected to move there, they are in hopes of having a church of their own in the very near future. HOW TO TELL FRESH EGGS.

One sign of "newlaidness" is that the eggs shall be full, by which is meant that the air space is scarcely visible. Observations on the evaporation of eggs, made in cool weather, show that out of 120 eggs, one egg's contents disappeared in 6 days, 2 in 13 days, 3 in 21 days, 4 in 29 days, 5 in 36 days, 6 in 47 days and 7 in 60 days. New eggs are bright. By his meat clearness of contents through the shell, not dull opaqueness. There must be no spots which represent molds or dark areas, generally betokening development of the germ of bacterial colonies in white.—Journal of Agriculture.

The Mascot of Sweet Briar Gulch

By HENRY WALLACE PHILLIPS

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

Jim Felton bought some supplies for his camp and prepared to start for home that afternoon, as they could yet make fifteen miles before dark.

The new friends of the morning saw them off with hearty goodbyes. The boy quite unexpectedly thanked them for their treatment and the money. The poor little soul had heard few words of gratitude and had less chance to employ them.

His speech was curious, but the generous big men saw behind the words and felt really touched by the old child's attempt to express himself.

The two Jims soon pushed on through the rolling foothills near the town into the broken country. The boy kept watching, watching, but said little, until at last they came to the stupendous cliffs of Paha-Sahpedon, overhanging the trail with dark majesty. Jim happened to glance at the boy and saw him looking up, mouth and eyes wide open.

"Say, mister," gasped Ches, "who built them?"

"Built?" repeated Jim, puzzled. Then he understood. "The hand of God, my boy," he replied.

The urchin shivered. "I feel 's if dey was comin' er'op o' me," he gasped. "Let's look it outer here."

Jim spanked the burro, and they flew out of the Paha-Sahpedon at a canter.

They camped that night in the spruces of Silver creek in one of the prettiest little places that ever lay out of doors. As they prepared the supper and ate it, sharing plate, cup and spoon, the boy was fairly ecstatic.

"Dis is der bulliest ol' time dat ever I had," said he. "I didn't know dere was places like dis 'tall, 'cept Cental park. Yer can run aroun' here all yer like, can't yer, mister? Nobuddy'll stop yer?"

"Not if you ran a thousand miles, Ches. This is the free land, boy. You can do what you like." Jim spoke with warmth, for, although he felt that the child could not understand, yet the love of the country swelled in him so hot that he could never speak of it carelessly.

"Dat's pruttly d— good," responded Ches.

"It is," replied Jim. "Now, Ches, will you do something to oblige me?"

"Sure!"

"Well, then, don't swear. I don't like to hear boys swear."

"I won't cuss another cuss if I kin help it. Dey'll come out too quick for me sometimes, but I'll try to do dat now."

"Thank you. Now, let's get the stuff cleared up and roll in."

CHAPTER III.

IN the middle of the night Jim heard a strange noise, a puzzling sound he could not trace. Becoming wider awake, it resolved itself into a stifled weeping.

"Hello there, Ches! What's the matter?" he cried.

The boy flung himself into Jim's arms, with a cry. "Ar, I'm scart to death," said he. "Take hold of me, mister! Take hold of me! Dere ain't anyting but you and me here 'tall."

Jim gathered up the trembling figure. "Nothing will hurt you, Ches," he said. "You're safe here."

"I wasn't 'inkin' of gettin' hurted," retorted the boy, with shaky indignation. "Did youse 'tink I'd weaken fur dat? Yer don't know me, den. Dat ain't bodderin' me. I've been hurted plenty. I'm just scart. Dat's wats der matter."

"Well, now, you cuddle right up in my arms, like a little puppy dog and you'll feel all right."

"Say, you're pruttly good stuff, Mr.

THE WHIRRING DEFIANCE OF A RATTLE-SNAKE.

Felton, whimpered the little voice. "Dis is der bulliest time I ever had, even if I am scart."

"I think you're a brave boy, Ches. Now go to sleep."

A small hand reached timidly around until it found the man's and gave it an affectionate squeeze. "Good night, sir," said Ches.

Jim lay awake, thinking dreamily, long after the boy's regular breathing showed that he was at peace again. The man felt a tenderness for the waif so abruptly put in his care that only a lonely man can feel. He speculated about the boy's future; he wondered what kind of a man he would make. Surely, with a foundation of such courage, the better part could be brought out.

Then he wondered what Anne would say to the adoption, or, rather, what advice she would give, for he felt entirely sure of her broad humanity outside of their one difference. He felt the need of her practical sense. Soon he had drifted into thinking of Anne entirely—not bitterly now, but with a steady longing. The gray light of the waning moon sifting through the boughs was the true lumina for reverie. Why had he not answered her letter? Perhaps by this time—

What was that moving in the grass? He had noticed a sort of something before. He threw up his right hand in a threatening gesture to frighten the intruder away.

Instantly he got his answer, and an icy wind seemed to ruff his hair—that insistent, dry, shrilling sound that will make a man's blood turn cold if anything will, the whirring defiance of a rattlesnake.

Jim thought quick and hard, with chills and fever coursing over him ad libitum. He did not want to waken and frighten the boy. He managed to slip his arm out without disturbing the sleeper. But now! There wasn't a club around except the short sticks of the fire. A two foot stick is not the proper equipment for rattler hunting except to those born with nerves so strong that they do not hesitate to catch Mr. Crotalus by the tail and snap his head off.

Jim thought of the rope he had used for a cinch and made for it with his eye on the snake lest the latter should approach closer to the boy.

With a deep thankfulness for the belt of the rope he returned and struck with all the strength of his big body and pounded away in a sort of crazy rage, although the first stroke had done the business.

He snapped the sweat from his brow as he looked down at the still writhing reptile.

"My God! What might have happened if the boy hadn't waked me?" he thought. The superstition of the miner rose in him rampant. "I believe that kid's going to bring me good luck," he said. "Darned if I don't. Well, I could stand some."

He took up the body of the rattler on a stick and heaved it far away, then lit his pipe.

"I don't think I care for any more sleep tonight," he laughed. "Like Ches, it ain't that anything will hurt me out here, but I'm everlastingly scared."

He watched the night out, reveling in his enjoyment of the mystery of the coming morning, that phase of the day which never ceases to be unreal and which calls out of the watcher sentiments and emotions he is a stranger to for the rest of the day.

The sun hung on the sharp point of Old Dog Tooth like a portent before he woke the boy.

Ches was all amazement for a second; then he gave a glad cry.

"Geel! Yer still here, ain't yer? No pipe in dis." He looked all around him. "Say, dis is a reg'lar teeyater up er place, ain't it?" he remarked.

"Dis is der scene where der villun al-most gits der gent wif der sword if der stage mannecher didn't send sum-ter help 'im out."

Jim laughed at the sophisticated infant. "You don't believe in the theater much, then, Ches?"

"Aggh!" replied Ches. "If it ain't seven it's 'leven on der stage, but it's mostly craps in der street."

"Well, son, there are such points on the dice," admitted Jim. "But let's have something to eat and we'll feel better."

Ches rustled around after sticks in his funny, angularly active style, singing a song the while from the gladness of his heart. It was a merry song about mother slowly going down the hectic path of phthisis pulmonalis and sister, who has, one is led to believe, taken to small bottles, small hours and undesirable companions, refusing to come home and lift the mortgage which is shortly to be foreclosed, all in the narrow confines of twenty-five verses.

Jim listened to the inspiring ditty in astonishment.

"Bird of the wilderness, blithe and sweet, Sweet be thy matin o'er moorland and lea!"

he quoted. "For heaven's sake, child," he continued in some irritation, "where did you learn that echo of the morgue?" "Don't you like 'er?" asked Ches, in his turn astonished at such a lack of taste. "W'y, dat's er gig in der city. Everybody an' der ginnies wif der organs is givin' dat out all day long."

"Well, let 'em," commanded Jim. "Don't introduce it to this part of the country. As you render it through the nose and with the wall at the end it is a thing to make a strong man lie down and give up the ghost in sheer disgust. Ches, does it really make you feel good to sing it?"

"Yessir—kinder," replied Ches hesitatingly.

"Lord," thought Jim, "what a life to make a song like that a recreation!" Then aloud: "It's bad luck to sing before breakfast, Ches. I'll teach you a livelier song than that when we hit the trail again."

So it came to pass that during the first miles of their day's journey the way was enlivened by the notes of "The Arkansas Traveler," "Garry Owen," "Where's My Linda-Chinda Gone," "Baltimore Girls" and other songs of a lively character.

Ches approved of these in moderation. Then Jim tried an experiment. With a serious face, but half an eye on the boy, he howled, moaned and grunted "The Cowboy's Lament," which still presents the insoluble problem of whether the words or the music are drearier. "OoooooOoo! Pla-a-y your fies l-o-o-w-y, a-n-d beee-at your drums a-l-o-o-o-w-y and play the dead m-a-n-arch as you carry me o-o-o-on!" mourned Jim. Ches was all attention. "For I'm o-o-o-only a p-o-o-or cowboy, and I know I've done w-r-o-o-o-o-o-ng!" wailed the singer in conclusion. "How'd you like that, Ches?"

"Say, dat's a ringer!" cried the boy enthusiastically.

Jim sat him down by the roadside and laughed his fill. "I think you're hopeless," he gasped.

The boy was hurt in a way he could not understand. Something pained him, a new sensation of not being up to the requirements of another's view. His forced acute intelligence made a bullseye shot.

"Praps w'en I've got er chist and t'umbers on me like you I'll der udder kin'er song," he said.

Jim looked at the pathetic little figure on the burro, and his conscience smote him. "That's right, boy," he replied very kindly. "I was only joking. Oughtn't to be any ill feeling between friends over a joke, you know. Now, you sing ahead all you plenty please."

"Don't say nuttin' more about it," replied Ches. "It's all square."

A little farther on Jim noticed a piece of quartz outcrop with a metal stain on it. Now, a miner can no more pass such a thing than some others could refuse to pick up the pin shining at their feet, so he took a stone and hammered off a specimen for future reference. In the meantime Ches, on the burro, got around the turn of the trail.

Suddenly the boy set up a shout of excitement. "Oh, mister," he yelled, with a string of profanity, his promise forgotten in his heat, "come quick an' look at der cat! Come quick, quick, quick! What a cat! You never see sich a cat!"

Jim dashed forward. "Well, I should say cat!" he remarked as he took in the situation. On a ledge about fifty feet above the road crouched a full grown mountain lion, ears back, eyes furtively glimpsing every avenue of escape, yagging at the intruders savagely.

"FOR I'M O-O-O-ONLY A P-O-O-OR COWBOY."

The small boy in Jim Felton rose on the instant. "Pelt him, Ches! Pelt him!" he cried and let fly the rock in his hand by way of illustration. A wild animal seems to have little idea of a missile.

The lion held his ground and let the stone strike him in the side. Then, with a screech like the vital principle of 40,000 toment fights, a screech that left a sediment in the eardrums of the listeners for the balance of the morning, he fairly flew up the straight side of the cliff, followed by a rain of projectiles.

"Ches, we oughtn't to have done that," said Jim soberly. "If that fellow had been of another mind he'd have made this the warmest day of our lives."

"Why, will der fight?" asked Ches, his eyes wide open.

"They will that, son, sometimes," replied Jim. Then he launched into the tales of wild beast hunts, drifted from that to the romance of the gold field, the riches coming in a day—the whole glamor of it.

Never did narrator have more attentive listener. There was a sort of white joy in the boy's face.

"Oh, ain't I glad to git in dis!" he cried. "Here's just wot I been lookin' fur." Suddenly he struck Jim on the shoulder with a tightly clenched fist. "I made fur youse der first t'ing. Didn't yer see me? I know me man all right. Der second I put me peeps on yer I see ter meself. 'Dat feller won't 'trow yer down, Chummy.' Ain't I right, hey? Ain't I right, mister?"

Jim patted him on the back. "I think you're right, old man," he said. "I'll do anything I can for you."

"Yer don't hafta tell me dat. I know it," replied the boy. A sudden sob gathered in his throat and choked him. "Yer don't know wot I been t'rough, mister. It 'ud laid out many er big stiff ten times me size. I'd—don't youse laugh at me now, becuz I'm only a kid—I'd give me heart's blood fur youse, I'd help me, I would, now!"

"Shake hands, pardner," said Jim, his own voice a trifle hoarse. "We'll do fine together. I know we will."

Thirty Years Together.

Thirty years of association—think of it. How the merit of a good thing stands out in that time—or the worth-lessness of a bad one. So there's no guess work in this evidence of Thos.
Ariss, Concord, Mich., who writes:
"I have used Dr. King's New Discovery for 30 years, and its best cough and cold cure I ever used."
Once it finds entrance in a home you can't pry it out. Many families have used it forty years. It's the most infallible throat and lung medicine on earth. Unequaled for lagrippe, asthludgs. Price 50c, $1.00. Trial bottle

In fighting to keep the blood pure the white corpuscles attack disease

"Dr. Miles' Nerve Raised Me From the Grave"—Mrs. Taylor

This is a strong statement to make, but it is exactly what Mrs.
Thomas Taylor, of Blum, Texas, said in expressing her opinion of this remedy.

"Dr. Miles' Restorative Nerve raised me from the grave and I have much confidence in it. I can never say enough for your grand medicine.
If anyone had offered me $100.00 for the second bottle of Nerve that I used I would have said 'no indeed.'"

ZANZIBAR PARROT IS A PROFANE LINGUIST

BIRD SWORE LOUDLY IN ARABIC BUT OWNER DECLINED TO WRING HIS NECK.

New York.—All Ben Ding, a Zanzibar parrot, skilled beyond belief in the shrill articulation of Turkish, Arabian, Moorish, French, German and Spanish profanity, was responsible for the arraignment in the Tombs police court of his owner, Selim Hamad, a Byzantine sailor.

Selim Hamad is a young giant and he was charged by Arem Sultan, a slim, narrow chested Arab, who lives at 37 Washington street, with performing a wild Dervish dance on his chest after endeavoring to carve initials in his neck. Arem Sultan had barely survived the ordeal and when he appeared before Magistrate Krotel to press the charge there was that in his appearance to suggest that an entire caravan had romped over him.

Bird Causes Breach of Peace.

undry camels having stopped awhile to test the footing up and down the buttons of his waistcoat and athwart his dusky features.

Through a tiny interstice in the banister that wreathed his countenance he told an amazing story of the profanity of All Ben Ding and how the bird had brought him into unequal encounter with Selim Hamad.

For several days, the Arab said, he had heard the name of his ancestors reviled in his native tongue. He knew there were no Arabs in Washington street and he could not for the life of him puzzle out who was cursing him. He searched the house in which he was living from top to bottom, but could not locate the voice.

As he set out for a near by restaurant Sultan was startled by the exclamation:

"Dog of an Arab, eat the dust of your thieving fathers!"

Sultan stopped short and his blood caught fire. The honor of the tribe of Sultan had been traditional on the desert for centuries. To be called a dog was the vilest of epithets.

Sultan had halted in front of 25 Washington street and he had only to wait another instant before the same voice cried out an oath that caused the young Arab to turn pale and tremble. This bit of profanity was followed by the phrase:

"The tribe of Sultan is accursed by the moon, the stars and the dogfish that swim under the stars."

That was enough for the young Arab. He rushed into the doorway and up the stairs to the rooms occupied by Selim Hamad. The profane voice of All Ben Ding, the parrot, lured him on.

Sultan knocked at the door. Selim Hamad opened it, blocking the entrance with his giant bulk.

Greatly enraged, Sultan demanded of Selim Hamad that he slay the vile bird before his eyes.

"He is bewitched of a thousand devils," Sultan said. "Kill him at once." "Puff, little one!" replied Selim Hamad in fluent Arabic. "All Ben Ding is a wise bird and knows a dog of an Arab when he sees one."

This was too much for the little Arab, and he hurled himself upon the huge sailor, with the results already told.

HORSES BALK AT DEAD MAN

Drivers Then Learn of Veteran's Suicide in Barn, Which Animals Refused to Enter.

Cynwyd, Pa.—John H. Titlow, seventy-one years old, an inmate of the Soldiers' home at Hampton Roads, and who was on a visit to friends in this vicinity, committed suicide by hanging in the barn of John Duffy, near here.

William H. Duffy and William L. Downes were engaged in hauling hay to the barn, and about three o'clock, when they attempted to drive into the structure with a loaded wagon, the horses balked and refused to enter. Investigating the cause of the horses' stubbornness, Duffy and Downes found the body of the aged war veteran dangling from a rope fastened to the rafters directly in the path of the horses.

SENSATIONAL MURDER TRIAL IN VIRGINIA

THE trial of Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., for the murder of his young wife, which is now in progress at Chesterfield, Va., is replete with thrills and sensations. The actual standing of the accused, the circumstances surrounding the killing and the flippant bearing of the alleged murderer have already made the trial a cause celebre. In the picture above are seen (1) Judge Watson, before whom the trial is taking place; (2) the interior of the cell that is occupied by the prisoner; (3) Henry Clay Beattie, Sr., the father of the accused; (4) Sheriff Gill, left; Captain Pollock, center; Beattie with his straw hat partially concealing his face; (5) crowd outside the little court house trying to obtain an entrance; (6) profile view of Beattie.

The Holland officers were stirred the other night by unearthly screams coming from the direction of the Grand Haven bridge, and although they set out to locate the trouble nothing could be found. The mystery was cleared up later when it was learned that a certain resident of the north side of Holland had been celebrating down at Jenison Park during the evening. He had met his sister there, and was accompanying her to her home. Meanwhile his sister's husband who had been in Holland, came home to find his wife gone. Immediately he started up the road to search for her, and met her on the road. Then the women's brother and her husband mixed, and the husband sunk his teeth in the brother's ear. As he tore at it like a mad animal, the victim sent up a piercing scream. When the fight ended, the brother was minus his ear, that important member having been torn off completely by the infuriated husband.
