'Vision' Is Theme At Hope Convocation

New Hope College president Gordon J. Van Wylen Tuesday night challenged students and faculty to look to the new academic year with a vision toward achievement that goes beyond themselves.

President Van Wylen addressed a convocation in Dimmet Memorial Chapel which formally opened the new school year.

"Each person here ought to have a vision of what he or she can be and become in this new year," Dr. Van Wylen said.

"In this sense, I am not speaking of a vision which comes to us in a mystical sort of way from the outside, but a vision in the sense of an ideal or goal or purpose which we set for ourselves after careful reflection and thought."

"Our years here at Hope College are not an end in themselves, but really preparation for later work and responsibilities in life."

Dr. Van Wylen cautioned against focussing too much on the large problems of the world: "I believe we focus too much on the very large problems—the global problems of war, poverty, and race, and health, and environment. And after we have focused on these large-scale problems and have not found a definitive solution, we become discouraged and frustrated and either retreat into our own little world, or become a cynical commentator."

"In my judgment, we need to look at the large scale problems, and then carve out our niche and begin to work intelligently in this area of our own responsibility."

Dr. Van Wylen looked to a person's vision of himself as the most important.

Vision, according to Dr. Van Wylen, requires "a generous measure of idealism, tempered with realism."

"We certainly need a goal that will make us stretch, which will bring out the very best in us, which will give us real satisfaction. But we also must be realistic, to know ourselves, and set goals which we can reasonably expect to achieve."

"One of our great privileges in life is to look at all of life from God's point of view, and see Him speaking to us in many different ways."

Participating in the Convocation were academic dean Morrette Rider, chaplain William C. Hillegonds, organist Roger Rietberg, and the Hope College Chapel Choir under the direction of Dr. Robert Cavanaugh.

Net Profit $20,294 For Year

Record Attendance Boosts Profits For Windmill Island

Record attendance and profit figures for Windmill Island were reported Wednesday by City Auditor John Fonger.

Net profit was $20,294.25 for the operating year ending last June 30.

All financial requirements in addition to payment of operating expenses were met. These include deposit of an additional $9,000 into the bond interest and redemption fund, $4,000 into the replacement fund, and $8,000 into the land purchase sinking fund.

Payments to bondholders were made on schedule. Principal and interest totalled $35,258.10. Interest on funds advanced to Windmill Island from the city capital improvement fund also was paid.

The park is financed by revenue bonds, and fiscal procedure requires that the aforementioned reserves be built up until they reach $40,000, $20,000, and $45,000 respectively. They now stand at $29,118.21, $17,276.69, and $31,586.31.

When these fund balances are paid up to the required levels, which at the present rate will require only another year or two, there should be a substantial increase in the amount of revenue available for further development of Windmill Island Municipal Park, according to Fonger.

No decision on immediate use of the current profit was reached by Windmill Island committee members who reviewed the city auditor's report at a recent meeting in the Warm Friend Hotel.

Various improvements in existing facilities and the addition of new attractions in keeping with the historic and cultural aspects of the park have been discussed. These include additional flower plantings, installation of a gas heating system for the posthouse and greenhouse, purchase of an authentic Dutch barge for the canal, building an inter-denominational chapel, and reconstruction of a Frisian house and barn.

The attendance figures, included in the year end report prepared by Fonger's office, showed 118,036 for the year ending June 30. This exceeded the year before by more than 6,600.

Through May, June, and July this year the attendance totalled 94,055. This is more than 4,500 ahead of the same period last year.

Total operating revenues, including admissions and commissions from the concessions, were $183,842.06. Total expenses, including payment into the reserve funds, were $163,547.81.

City administration officials besides Fonger who attended the meeting were City Manager William Bopf and Terry Hofmeyer.

Windmill Island committee members present were Willard C. Wichers, Henry S. Maentz, Nelson Bosman, William J. Murdoch, and Windmill Island Director Jaap R. deBleocourt.

Short Parade Planned Sept. 9

Costumed Units To Welcome Margriet

Mayor L.W. Lamb Jr. and his committee welcoming Her Royal Highness Princess Margriet of the Netherlands and her husband, Pieter van Vollenhoven, to Holland Saturday, September 9, Wednesday appealed to local residents who have Dutch costumes, particularly children, to march in a short parade welcoming the couple on arrival.

Plans call for costumed units to line Van Raalte Ave. from perhaps 15th St. to Kollen Park where a community salute will be staged. As the royal motorcade passes (about 10 a.m.) units will fall in to form a parade which passes in review before a special platform in the park.

It will be a short parade of costumed units and school bands, according to Mayor Lamb who has appointed former Mayor Nelson Bosman as chairman of the welcoming event, assisted by Roger Stroh, longtime Tulip Time street scrubbing and parade chairman. There will be klompen dancing and Latin - American participation at the brief program.

The princess' visit to Holland is a one-day affair associated with the city's 125th anniversary.

The royal party is scheduled to arrive at Tulip City Airport around 9:30 to 9:45 a.m. and a motorcade will proceed to Kollen Park for the community welcome. A luncheon will be held at the Macatawa Bay Yacht Club, followed by a visit to Hope College and a program in Dimmet Memorial Chapel where both Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard were awarded honorary degrees in 1941 and 1965, respectively.

The visit in September is believed to be the first visit to the United States of Princess Margriet, third of four princesses born to Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard.

Autumn in Michigan, Time Of Serenity and Beauty

As September crosses the horizon of the year, Michigan covly lowers the veil of summer green to reveal the first blush of its autumnal face. It's a casual revelation, in the beginning, with occasional splashes of crimson sumac, yellow birch and nut brown oak peeking through green pines along Lake Superior's shores in the Upper Peninsula. Then suddenly people awake to find the entire landscape transformed into a profusion of hues and tints that encompass the total spectrum of the color wheel.

This annual phenomenon usually begins between mid and late September, crossing the majestic Mackinac Bridge into Michigan's Lower Peninsula during the early days of October. From mid to late October, the entire state is ablaze with this extravagance of color, according to the Michigan Tourist Council.

Autumn in Michigan has much to offer the visitor. Activity slows to a more leisure pace and accommodations are less crowded than during the summer months. Pleasant roadside parks invite planned and impromptu picnics, campgrounds canopied by a rainbow of color promise quiet rest and mysterious, leaf covered trails beckon the hiker to, "follow me." Dew covered mornings, balmy days and crisp nights act as a magic elixer, soothing spirits and calming frayed nerves.

Many communities plan special events that blend with the season and harvest festivals, county fairs and antique shows are prevalent throughout the state. Color tours are particularly appealing because they cost nothing except time and gasoline for the car. They also afford the opportunity to indulge in some sightseeing and to absorb some of the history and legend of the twenty-sixth state.

To catch the first glimpse of the autumn spectacular, the best place to be is in the Keweenaw Peninsula, the heart of Michigan's copper country. Following this suggested tour takes visitors along the panoramic Brockway Mountain Drive and back to Houghton through lush forests and withering ghost towns that testify to the energetic days of the copper boom.

Toward the middle of the season a choice of tours can be taken along Lake Michigan or Lake Huron shores or follow inland routes that are equally picturesque. On the Lake Michigan side, Holland can be found, complete with wooden shoes, the authentic Dutch windmill and the influence of old Amsterdam. The Silver Lake and Sleeping Bear dunes hold a perennial fascination. Many travelers enjoy visiting Interlochen Center for the Arts, southwest of Traverse City and Cross Village, north of Harbor Springs, the site of Michigan's oldest Indian settlements.

Suggested stops in east Michigan include the Lumberman's Memorial on the AuSable River near Oscoda, Old Presque Isle Lighthouse and Grindstone City, once a major producer of grindstones and sharpening stones. Inland, there is Hartwick Pines, northeast of Grayling, the Glacial Moraine, north of Clare, where elm and oak abruptly give way to jack pines and brush, and of course, Michigan's capitol in Lansing.

For a final look at Michigan's autumnal face, a tour in the southeast area might be chosen. If so, a visit to Greenfield Village and the Henry Ford Museum at Dearborn should be included. Visits should also include to Walker Tavern at Cambridge Junction or Fort Gratiot Lighthouse at Port Huron, one of the first light stations on the Upper Great Lakes.

For those who enjoy the sparkle of metropolitan activity, the multi-faceted city of Detroit will bid people welcome.

Autumn is the turning point of the year in Michigan, all twenty-five shades and nineteen million forest acres of it. Free copies of the Michigan Autumn Color Tour Guide are available from the Michigan Tourists Council, Lansing 48926.

Today Marks End Of Resort Pages

The close of another resort season in the Holland area is marked by end of summer activities. Since the resort pages do not continue after today, some of the events are in the future.

Many new attractions have been listed and many old ones were listed for the convenience of summer visitors.

Items on the resort pages were geared to visitors, but many were of interest to everybody. Stories about various shops and services were limited to advertisers on the resort pages.

Water and air temperatures taken at the Holland State Park continue to be taken through Labor Day.

The resort page editor and staff are appreciative of all the cooperation given during the season and look forward to another year of services to Holland area and Michigan resorts and attractions.

FALL SPLENDOR — As children return to school, birds fly south for the winter, the trees also prepare themselves for the cold, snowy Michigan winter. A resplendent point of the year for persons in Michigan is in mid September to late October, or whenever Jack Frost begins his handiwork.

Old Car Festival Set Sept. 9-10 at Greenfield Village

DEARBORN — It's festival time again at Greenfield Village! Complete with parades, bands, colorful costumes and more than 300 antique automobiles, the annual Old Car Festival makes its 22nd appearance at the Village Sept. 9 and 10.

The newer vehicles, 1916 through 1925, test the mettle of both car and driver in a series of races and contests on Saturday, while on Sunday the field is left to the old timers.

Each day's festivities start at noon with a parade of the cars, making their way through the Village streets to the activities field.

The largest antique automobile event of its kind in the country, the Old Car Festival boasts an array of added attractions which includes related exhibits and crafts demonstrations, ceremonies honoring individuals and companies who have contributed to the growth and development of the automobile industry.

'EAT, DRINK AND BE MERRY!' — A variety of cultures, both European and Far Eastern, can be experienced at the 19 different Ethnic Festivals in Detroit. Food, songs and dances are only part of each particular festival. Originating the idea for the first festival in 1970, Mayor Roman S. Gribbs appointed a committee to enact and carry through the idea.

Variety of Lifestyles At Ethnic Festivals

Ensuing industry attracted scores of nationalities to Michigan during the last half of the 19th century with the early settlers representing all the major powers of Europe as well as the smaller countries. Along with them came their customs and traditions that kept their individual heritage alive and the influence of these variegated cultures is prevalent throughout the state with the greatest variety being concentrated in the Detroit area.

In 1970, committee of Detroit city officials and civic leaders were appointed to develop ethnic festivals. The Greek festival had been an annual event in Detroit, and, as a result, the German, Polish and Mexican Festivals were held during the summer of 1970.

The schedule for 1972 numbered 19 attractions filling every weekend from June 2 through Sept. 4. The enthusiastic Irish opened this year's Ethnic Festival Series followed by Slovak, German, Italian, American, Far Eastern, Captive Nations, Afro-American, India, Ukrainian, Polish and Scandinavian. Those yet to come are the Armenian Festival, Aug. 25-27, the International Festival, Mexican, Arab and finally the Latin American Festival Sept. 22-24.

The public enjoys the entertainment—which includes music, folk dancers and singers, poetry and dramatic presentations—free of charge. There is no admission charge to the festivals.

Booths display items representative of the ethnic groups culture with the majority of them for sale. The festivals also afford the opportunity to sample many of the favorite foods of the world as well as several varieties of beers and wines throughout the season.

Michigan is endowed with a generous abundance of natural resources, but its most important asset, however, is and always has been its human resources, the proud heritage of people from many lands.

For more information regarding the Detroit Ethnic Festivals, write to Report and Information Committee, Room 1008, City-County Building, Detroit 48226.

Historic Galena Homes Ready for Fall Tours

GALENA, Ill.—Come step into the past on Sept. 23 and 24 and visit Galena, oldest city in northern Illinois. This little city for 23 years has opened private-owned homes to the public on the annual Tour Historic Galena Homes when thousands have come to turn the pages of history and catch glimpses into the time of our ancestors six generations ago.

Galena holds a treasury of nineteenth century architecture and you see Greek revival, Victorian mansions, miner's cottages of brick and stone, French, German and English houses almost as they were in the eighteen hundreds.

The Guild of the First Presbyterian Church, oldest church building in the Northwest Territory, started the tour in 1950 and has opened 30 different houses on the annual pilgrimages. The following six homes will be shown this year:

General U. S. Grant's pre-civil war home 1840.—It is fitting that the modest brick home of General Grant is open this year during the Sesqui-centennial of his birth. This was Grant's home at 121 High St. when he worked in his father's leather store and rented the house for $100 a year from James Robinson. Ulysses S. Grant, Captain ret., left from here to rejoin the Federal Army and two years later was given supreme command of the Union forces. Except for the addition of the front porch, the house is almost unchanged with original floors, and woodwork. The furnishings are 1860 or older. Opened to the public by the present owner, Mrs. Walter J. Ehrler, who has been General Chairman of the Tour since its beginning.

Porter House 1842 Home of an early Galena merchant. Owner is Roger Buskowski Krentz who has equipped this stately home with early and mid - Victorian furniture. Of special interest are a bedroom set once belonging to John Deere and a rose colored dresser set presented as a wedding gift by General and Mrs. U. S. Grant to the daughter of the James Ryans. Hermann House 1835.—Typical Galena house built by present owner, Mrs. Anna Mae Hermann's grandfather. Lavishly furnished in early Victorian. Of special interest are Belter chairs, Adams dinner ware, Sheffield tea service and Meissen lamp and compote.

The Simeon K. Miner house owned by Mrs. Henry Hoehn, was built in 1849—a Victorian brick displaying furniture, china and brass of that period. Of special interest: Kitchen: Harvest table with drop leaves, Majolica collection, china kilned in Galena and hand-painted for General Chetlain, amber hob-nail hanging lamp.

The C. Franklin Brown home, 408 Broadway, built in 1842 of native stone in the past known as Old Town because many of the earliest homes were here. The first town pump stood in the parkway in front of the house and in the early days Indians came from nearby encampments for drinking water. Of special interest are the original doors whose panelling forms a cross in the upper portion. This design is said to be a symbol of the carpenter's trade of this period. Two rosewood hall chairs were from the mansion of Gov. Marmaduke of Missouri and the parlor stove was cast in Belgium in 1835.

Norris House built of Galena brick in 1850's. Early occupant, Barney Norris 1855—footman for John Quincy Adams, companion of Col. William Hamilton son of Alexander Hamilton, and sexton 30 years at First Presbyterian Church. Owned by Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Mulich and furnished with pine, cherry and walnut.

Other Galena attractions to be visited include the beautiful century old churches, the State owned by General Ulysses S. Grant Memorial Home, Old Market House and Market Days, the fascinating Old General Store, Historic Museum, the Stockade, and the Vinegar Hill Lead Mine. The Galena Art Theatre will present a thrilling melodrama both Friday and Saturday nights, Sept. 23 and 24 at Turner Hall on Bench St.

Tickets for the complete Tour of Homes are $3. Costumed hostesses will provide information in each room. The tour is clearly marked and bus transportation for 50 cents is available for those who do not wish to drive. The homes are open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. central daylight time on both Sept. 23 and 24.

For further information write the Tour Historic Galena Homes, Galena, Ill.

BUOYS — The Consumers Power Company, U.S. Coast Guard, Ottawa County Sheriff's Department and the Port Sheldon Board of Supervisors have worked independently and cooperatively in taking measures prohibiting swimming, fishing, wading and boating in the Consumer's Power discharge channel. The tremendous sporadic discharge of warm water from the plant into Lake Michigan creates an ever present lethal danger. (Sentinel photo)

Brooks Family Praised For Rescue Operations

Cries of "Help! Help!" wafted up from the beach and carried through the kitchen windows rupturing the after lunch quiet of the Brooks home. Joann Brooks, all too familiar with the chilling sounds, tore down the steep and many stairs to the beach and into a small dinghy. Some distance out in the water were two pre-teen girls screaming wildly and the floating body of a woman, apparently drowned. She rowed frantically and pulled the two girls into the safety of the boat. Believing the woman to be dead, Mrs. Brooks began to row to shore ordering the screaming girls to avert their eyes from their mother when a nearby fisherman raced to the motionless woman and began struggling to bring her into shore. Summoning Mrs. Brooks, together they pulled the woman by her hair dumping her into the boat. She was revived on the shore.

Mr. and Mrs. James Brooks, 7977 Margaret Ave., West Olive, recently were officially commended by the Port Sheldon Township Board for the life saving of persons from the Consumers Power Company discharge channel in the township.

The channel, located on the south side of the Brooks' home, flows into Lake Michigan from the power plant, where the water has traveled through its condensing process. As a result, the water is an attractive 72 degrees during the warm months and somewhat cooler during the winter months.

However, appealing as the water temperature may seem, the lethal danger lies in the channel's swirling currents caused by the discharge of upwards of 300,000 gallons per minute during the peak season.

The U.S. Coast Guard has clocked the current at 10 knots carrying out as far as 300 yards from the shore. Coast Guard officials say variables such as atmospheric pressure, winds and the discharge amount make the area totally unpredictable and there is no way to determine when discharges are the greatest. Therefore, the danger is ever present the year-round.

The Consumers Power Company, the Port Sheldon Township Board, Ottawa County Sheriff's Department and the U.S. Coast Guard have individually and cooperatively worked to inform and educate the public. Buoys, fences, and signs have been placed marking off the hazardous area from the public Port Sheldon Beach on the channel's north side. Yet since 1968, 77 reported near and 5 actual drownings have occurred, according to Ottawa County Sheriff's Department.

The Brooks family have personally made at least a dozen rescues including nine persons so far this summer. Cries of "Help!" have penetrated the peaceful Brooks' home day and night.

They tell their horror tales with resolution: a mother and her two young daughters, eight teenagers, young couples. In all cases, they have been swimming in the illegal area. Caught in the currents, it is virtually impossible for even the strongest of swimmers to free himself of its grip.

The Brooks have not tried to ignore the nightmare. Instead, they have attempted to equip themselves to meet any emergency. Mrs. Brooks enrolled in a life saving class; a raft and life rings were installed but have since been washed away; shoreline lights were rigged following a 2 a.m. rescue by Brooks that nearly ended in disaster when Brooks was unable to see from where the pleas were coming.

Their efforts reach farther than the immediate and are aimed toward solving the problem. Brooks has written a letter to Rep. Guy Vander Jagt seeking clarification of responsibility: what level of government is legally and financially responsible for what portion of the water and shoreline.

TRESPASSERS — Swimmers blatantly ignore the signs posted at the Consumers Power Plant discharge channel in Port Sheldon. Since 1968, Ottawa County Sheriff's Department has recorded 77 near and 5 actual drownings in that area. The James Brooks family, whose home is on the north side of the channel, have made 12 rescues, with nine persons saved so far this summer. (Sentinel photo)

The safety and protection of his family is foremost in Brooks' mind when he talks of their rescues. Each and every time they have answered the cries, their own lives are put in a precarious jeopardy. The urgency and often times panic associated with such rescues has rarely, if ever, been overshadowed by reasoned thinking and/or action.

The Port Sheldon Board has met with Ottawa County Prosecuting Attorney Calvin Bosman to begin steps to draw up an ordinance prohibiting swimming, wading, fishing and boating in the area.

As is the case in so many other potential and real tragedies, Brooks' statement, "You cannot protect people from their own ignorance" holds sadly true in this instance.

Cut Facilities At State Park For Labor Day

Budget difficulties are forcing state parks in Michigan to remove some camping facilities before the Labor Day weekend.

Holland State Park assistant manager Douglas Carter said seasonal personnel were being laid off as of Labor Day evening, necessitating an early removal of equipment for the winter season.

Carter said by Sept. 9 the park staff will have dropped from 32 for the summer season to about 10.

Picnic stoves are being removed from the beach areas, some picnic tables are being removed, the life guard stand will be removed before Labor Day and posts for the snow fences are being installed.

Carter said life guard will be on duty through Labor Day. Because of the early fall preparations, camping in the park will be discontinued after Labor Day until next spring.

A PRINCIPLE REAFFIRMED

Open court proceedings are information in the public domain, not to be withheld from the public. The Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, sitting in New Orleans, has just resoundingly reaffirmed that important principle.

This welcome ruling was handed down in the case of two New Orleans newspaper reporters who had written stories in defiance of a judge's order expressly forbidding this. The stories, published in the Morning Advocate and State Times, recounted testimony in a U.S. District Court hearing on charges of assassination and political intrigue against a civil rights worker, Frank Stewart. The court found the two newsmen guilty of criminal contempt for violating the judge's order that "no report of the testimony . . . shall be made in any newspaper or by radio or television, or any other news media."

It is gratifying that the Fifth Circuit found the newsmen's conviction "constitutionally infirm." The three-judge panel made a memorable statement in support of this view:

"No decision, opinion, report or other authoritative proposal has ever sanctioned by holding, hint, dictum, recommendation or otherwise any judicial prohibition of the right of the press to publish accurately reports of proceedings which transpire in court."

In short, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals is saying that what occurs in open court may be reported to the public. It is good to have this strong reinforcement of the public's right to know.

The Bible in Our Changing World
Joshua 1:19; Isaiah 40:6-8;
John 8:12

By C. P. Dame

It is not necessary to say much about the changes which have taken place and are happening now. The older generation can talk about changes. During the new quarter we shall make clear that the biblical teachings and principles are still valid.

I. God makes and keeps His promises. The text is composed of three passages, two from the Old Testament, one from the New Testament, all dealing with times of change. Moses, a great leader, died and Joshua, who had been trained by Moses, succeeded him. God spoke to Moses again and again and He also spoke to Joshua - we don't know how and it doesn't matter. God told Joshua to go over the Jordan and lead the nation to the land which He had promised them, assuring him that they would have every place upon which they would put their feet, however they would have to fight for it. "Only be thou strong and very courageous." God even told him the extent of the land God planned to give them, almost the whole of which got under the control of David and Solomon.

The exhortation to be strong and to obey the law which God had given to Moses was timely. We have more than Joshua, who had the written word, as we have a responsibility to keep it and strictly obey it. Today some think the Bible is outmoded, having no authority, and hence may ignore its teachings. God keeps His promises to those who keep His word.

II. God's word is eternal in a changing world. The second part of the text is from Isaiah, one of the greatest of all the prophets. The chapter from which the text is taken mentions two voices. The first voice orders preparation of the roads for the coming of the King and the second voice says that all that is human decays, humanity is like grass that withers and like flowers that fade, but the word of the Lord will stand forever.

Most encouraging is the fact that the Bible is permanent. Books come and go and slogans, sayings and issues are temporary but the Bible outlives all and its teachings are as much needed today as ever and are still accepted and obeyed by millions.

III. Jesus is the world's only light. Jesus made a number of claims regarding Himself. How many can you recall? The Jews spoke of the Messiah as "the Light." At the Feast of the Tabernacles, when the two golden candlesticks were lighted in the Court of Women and flooded the city with light, Jesus called Himself the Light of the world. Those who follow Him walk in the light and see themselves and God who has revealed Himself in Jesus.
