THE "ice house" property, at the head of the lake has been purchased by Jacob Van Putten, Jr. and Adrian Van Putten. It will be used in connection with the butter tub factory.
Some of our enterprising young men must prepare to erect a new building, ter.

THE Werkman furniture factory is now running night and day, and is far behind on its orders for goods. Who said furniture cannot be sold, unless made in Grand Rapids? With the same railroad rates, water transportations, cheaper labor and less expensive ground plant, Holland is a better point for manufacturing than the big city on the Grand.

THE Chicago exposition is now open.
The display of valuable paintings and statuary in the art department is said to be the best ever made. All the other departments are excellent. This is the last exposition in Chicago, until the big fair in 1892. We advise all our readers, who can do so, to take a trip to the Garden City, on the Mabel Bradshaw, and see this exposition.

steamer J. B. Gordon will come to Holland, and be put on a new line from this city to Benton Harbor. The Gordon will be here next week, when the Captain promises to give the people of Holland a free ride. The captain easily takes the belt as the champion "hust-ler" of the city.

THE preliminary organization of a new bank, was made, in this city, on zens of Fillmore, Zeeland, Holland and Olive townships, are interested in the enterprise. It is expected that the institution will be ready for business by

The Holland City Baseball Club defeats the Grand Haven Club for the Championship of the County.

The members of the Holland City baseball club had no idea, when they went to Grand Haven, last Tuesday, to play the club of that city a match game of baseball, that they would wrest the championship of Ottawa County from their opponents. They went, however, with the intention of doing their best,
and they played the best game of the season, completely shutting out Grand Haven, the score standing 13 to 0. Dr.
Wetmore, of this city, acted as umpire,
and gave good satisfaction.

Drove Twelve Thousand Miles.

Walter Billings, an old pioneer, who started out two years ago from the Lake Shore to drive through Kansas, Nebraska and other western states, has arrived home again. He is the same inimitable Walt, and looks hale and hearty, having thoroughly enjoyed his sojourn there. He drives the same horse that took him on a western tour some five years ago, and during this absence he has driven him between 10, 000 and 12,000 miles. Mr. Billings will remain in Michigan until spring and then journey westward again, and in the meantime will regale his friends with descriptions of his wanderings.

Grand Rapids Demoralized.

A Reminder.

Don't forget the Tribune when you have a news item. If your wife whips you, let us know it and we will set you right before the public. If you have company, tell us, if you are not ashamed of your visitors. If a youngster arrives at your house and demands food and raiment, let us know.
If you have a social gathering of a few friends, bring around a big cake, six or seven pies and a ham, not necessarily to eat, but as a guarantee of good faith. You needn't bother to invite us as it may be a little cool for our wardrobe.—Grand Haven Tribune.

The same good advice applies to the readers of the News. We would also include the weddings. Whenever one happens at your house, bring us a big watermelon and a box of cake. We will then describe the bride "as the loveliest of her sex"; and the groom as "a paragon of manly qualities."

River Street Victorious.

The long-talked-of baseball game between the businessmen of Eighth street and those of River street, was played at the fair grounds last Monday afternoon. The River street nine succeeded in conquering their opponents, the score being 13 to 7, at the close of the seventh inning:

Ghostly Fish.

Over on the Wolverine shore of Lake Michigan is a well-known resort called Ottawa Beach, and up Black River some distance is a place called Macataw Beach, and back of this is a lake of almost fifty acres in area that is creating some consternation. Wells
B. Sizer, the stationery and newsman, has a cottage at Ottawa Beach, and he says there is great excitement over the happenings at this lake. "Mr. Sizer says it is called Kelley's Lake, and that there is no bottom to it, or, at least, none has ever been found, and no one has ever yet seen or caught a fish there.
This has appeared so odd that every one who goes there takes a "try," and all meet with the same startling result.
The bait is always eaten off the hook and not infrequently is the hook itself taken. Mr. Sizer vouches for this story, for he says he has tried and failed himself."—Chicago Herald.

The Canal Scheme.

The Grand Rapids Board of Trade is agitating the canal project from the Valley City to Lake Michigan. The manufacturers of that thriving city begin to find that a town depending entirely on railroads never can become more than a big village, and that if they wish to live in the largest city in Michigan, some means must be devised to obtain lake transportation.

At a meeting of the members of the board, held this week, the matter was discussed. Since the meeting the following letter from Mr. H. Walsh, of this city, has been published in the city papers. We are pleased to know that we have enterprising men, like Mr.
Walsh, who keep the interests of our city before the public.

HOLLAND, Sept. 11.

Charles R. Sligh, Chairman, Grand Rapids, Mich.

DEAR SIR:—We notice in today's Grand Rapids papers that your citizens are again agitating the canal project and that all your efforts are directed to Grand river. The report says "three United States engineers have reported against the attempt to deepen Grand river and that you must therefore construct outside the river banks." Please look at a map of Kent and Ottawa counties and make your canal outside of Grand river from Grand Rapids to Jenisonville. You will find that the distance from Jenisonville to Grand Haven in a direct line is about twenty-three miles; to follow the bends of the river it will be over thirty miles. The distance from Jenisonville to Black lake at Holland is seventeen miles and this can be shortened by using Black river, so that the distance will be about one-half that by Grand river. This is a matter well worth your consideration.
The route to this place would be direct and about on a line with the C. & W. M. railway. The land is well adapted for a canal and water can be found to supply it. Our lake has twenty four feet of water in front of the city to the piers. Outside the pier heads there is not a better entrance on the great lakes. Between the piers we have had a partial dredging made this season, and Col. Ludlow, United States engineer in charge of Michigan harbors, informs me under date of Aug. 6, 1889, that he expects to finish this dredging from pier to pier, early next season.

Please give this careful consideration, bring it before your Board of Trade and let me hear from you at your earliest convenience.

I am respectfully,
H. WALSH.

Foreign and Domestic Intelligence Transmitted by Wire—A Kaleidoscope of Interesting Occurrences—Political, Criminal, Accidental, and Industrial.

AN ENORMOUS LOSS.

The Damage by the Antwerp Fire May Reach $5,000,000.

ESTIMATES of the loss by the recent fire at Antwerp range from 25,000,000 to 35,000,000 francs. No public building was injured. The fire still smolders over a large area, which is surrounded by a cordon of troops. The firemen are working night and day pouring floods of water upon the ruins. Ten persons who ventured too near the ruins met with accidents, due to the occasional explosion of cartridges. Some steamers in the dry docks are badly damaged about the decks. Mr. Corvillan, the proprietor of the cartridge factory, is charged with homicide by imprudence. His defense is that the fire originated in the petroleum sheds and caused the explosion in the cartridge factory. Large subscriptions to the relief fund have been received. King Leopold sends the list with 12,000 francs. Relief fairs and performances have been given in Brussels, Paris, and Berlin.

BURIED AND BURNED.

Eleven Miners Meet a Horrible Death Underground.

ELEVEN men were killed in the White Ash Mine, near Golden, Col. They were working in a drift 730 feet under ground and 800 feet from the shaft. The drift runs near an old abandoned shaft, in which there was some fifty feet of water, which finally burst through into the drift where the men were working. Shortly afterward fire broke out in the mine on the 285-foot level, which is just above the water's edge. The mine has been blocked for the purpose of smothering the flames. All hopes of recovering the bodies of the men are now abandoned. The victims are John Murphy, William Collins, Jack Collins, Joseph Butler, Joseph Allen, William Bowden, David Lloyd, John Morgan, Henry Huseman, Richard Rowe and one whose name is unknown.

GOOD SUPPLY OF SWINE.

The Hog Product Likely to Exceed That of Last Year.

The following report appears in the Farmers Review:

The reports of our correspondents indicate that the hog crop of 1899 equals and probably exceeds that of 1898. The supply in Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, and Kansas is somewhat less than that of last year. Wisconsin and Missouri have about the same number of hogs, while Kentucky, Iowa, Nebraska, Michigan, Minnesota, and Dakota show an increase, particularly the State last mentioned. As a rule hogs are reported unusually healthy for the season of the year. A number of correspondents report scattering cases of hog cholera, but very few general or disastrous outbreaks. The greatest number of reports of disease come from Illinois.

Swept Off in the Gale.

THE monitor Passaic encountered heavy seas off Sandy Point, near Annapolis, Md., the other day. The monitor was towing the steam launch Swan, which swamped and went down. John H. Rush, a seaman left on the launch, was in the water, and a whaleboat, containing Ensign H. C. Dreisel, David Moore, Frederick Carr and Seamen Parker and Scott, picked him up. The whaleboat could not get back to the Passaic and drifted down the bay.

THE New Jersey Democratic State Convention met at Trenton and nominated Leon Abbott for Governor by acclamation. The platform reaffirms the St. Louis platform, declares that trusts cannot be justified upon any fair play of commercial enterprise, and favors equal taxation and a revision of the electoral laws.

About five blocks on each side of Main street were burned. The fire was incendiary in origin.

FRESH AND NEWSY

PRESIDENT YOUNG, of the National Base-Ball League, favors changes in the playing rules that would make foul tips "strikes," and for two umpires at every game.

FROST has been reported at several points in the West and Northwest. At Alma, Neb., a heavy frost fell in the valley. The damage to corn was slight. Reports from points in Kansas and Missouri show that a light frost prevailed throughout the northern part of those States. No damage to the corn crop is reported. Dispatches from Northwestern Iowa tell of colder, clearing weather, with a slight freeze in some places. It is not believed that this cold wave is severe enough to injure more than the late corn, except in case of backward fields upon low ground. A pretty hard freeze will be necessary to damage it materially. At Plattsmouth, Neb., a heavy frost is reported. Much corn there will be injured, as only on the dry, high land was the crop out of danger. At Dodge Center, Minn., a heavy frost did considerable damage to the corn crop.

It has been decided to elect ex-Senator Thomas C. Platt President of the Tennessee Iron and Railroad Company, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of ex-Governor Brown.

GRAND COMMANDER ALGER, of the Grand Army of the Republic, has issued

THE visible supply of grain afloat and in store, as reported by the New York Produce Exchange, is: Wheat, 14,098,032 bushels, a decrease of 287,684 bushels; corn, 12,090,698 bushels, an increase of 335,114 bushels; oats, 6,111,257 bushels, a decrease of 19,401 bushels.

BURGERS entered the hardware store of W. C. McLeod at Woodstock, Ont., and captured $450 in cash and $35,000 in notes.

R. G. DUN & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Real improvement is seen in almost every department of business. With each week it becomes more certain that the crops of the year will be large, and of late the news from abroad has clearly indicated a larger foreign demand, while such speculation as might arrest the outward movement of grain and provisions has thus far been prevented. In cotton, on the other hand, the present scarcity rules the price in spite of bright prospects as to the crop. The prevailing opinion is that all danger of monetary stringency is over for the year. The reports from various cities are unusually reassuring, indicating at every point either improvement or continuance of previous activity where the expansion of trade had been greatest. At Chicago sales and collections are up to the average, and the supply of money is ample for the demand. At Omaha and St. Louis business continues, and at Kansas City there is an increase, with money at all these points in fair supply and collections fair. The demand is brisk at Milwaukee, but the supply ample. At Detroit collections are better and business increasing. At Cleveland there is a great activity. At Philadelphia improvement continues in the iron business, and the demand for steel is active. During the last week there has been great activity in the export trade in steel. Both in imports and exports the increase over last year continues enormous, and the rate of foreign exchange has advanced to 48, the Bank of England holding the rate at 25 and 1/2. The general level of prices of commodities is shade lower than Sept. 1. The business failures number 301, as compared with a total of 211 the previous week, and 230 the week before that. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 224.

The week has been warmer than usual in the North Atlantic, and the weather in the Northern States east of the Mississippi, and also in Kentucky, West Virginia, Minnesota, and Dakota, the greatest excess in temperature occurring in the lake regions, Minnesota, and East Dakota. The weather during the week has been generally favorable throughout the principal corn-producing States. The much needed rains have occurred over the entire corn region, and the light frosts are reported to have caused no material damage to the crop. Corn cutting is now progressing in Southern Michigan and a large percentage of an abundant corn crop will probably be secure from frost during the coming week. Drought and high winds caused some damage to late crops in Dakota. In Kentucky and Tennessee heavy rains caused some damage to ripe tobacco. The damage to the cotton crop from frost in Arkansas and the Northwest is slight, but considerable damage has resulted from this source in Minnesota. In New England and the middle Atlantic States the weather conditions for the week were especially favorable for all crops. In the potato region the potato crop was improved. The damage from rot will not be so great as was first reported. In New England the bean crop is improving, a heavy crop of buckwheat is ready for harvest, and cranberry and grape crops, with a prospect of more than an average crop.

CONGRESSMAN COX DEAD.

THE STATESMAN AND AUTHOR BREATHE HIS LAST.

His Death the Result of Heart Failure Caused by Peritonitis—The End of a Busy Career—Incidents in the Life of a Noted Man.

A New York dispatch reports the death of Congressman S. S. Cox at his home at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday evening. The end was quiet, and the dying man breathed his last as peacefully as if falling into a light sleep. Mrs. Cox, who had been scarcely away from her husband's bedside for the last two days and nights, held his hand, while his old friend Douglas Taylor held the other. He had been conscious all day until about a quarter of an hour before the end. Dr. Lockwood was in attendance at the time. Nicholas Kearney, William Hirschfeld, two nurses, and two servants were in the room. All knelt about the bed. Mr. Cox's last conversation was about the four Territories whose statehood he hoped to father. He mentioned New Mexico and Arizona, and said something about making a great effort in their behalf at the coming session.

Two hours before he died his colored servant, who had just come on from Washington, went to the bed and Mrs. Cox asked her husband if he recognized him. He looked at him and patted him on the shoulder. The colored man's eyes filled with tears, while all were deeply affected. In the afternoon, while Dr. Lockwood was talking to him, Mr. Cox made some witty remarks which completely upset the doctor's dignity. Later in the afternoon telegrams were sent to Mr. Cox's three sisters, two of whom live in Zanesville, Ohio, and the other in St. Louis. Mr. Cox's nephew, who is the superintendent of the Smithsonian institution, was also telegraphed for. Dr. Lockwood said that the immediate cause of death was heart failure, and the cause peritonitis. Telegrams were sent to Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives J. P. Leedom and to Speaker Carlisle.

Mr. Cox was taken ill four weeks ago while on a tour of the four newly acquired States. He returned home and improved for a few days, but took to his bed two weeks ago and did not leave it. He retained his mental faculties to the last, and made a determined battle against death. Mr. Cox was the son of Ezekiel Taylor Cox and was born in Zanesville, Ohio, Sept. 30, 1824. He attended the common school and afterward spent some time in the Ohio university. He then entered Brown college at Providence, R. I., and graduated in the class of 1846. He studied law and returned to Ohio to practice his profession. He did not take kindly to the war and made a trip to Europe, the story of which he told in "A Buckeye Abroad." Oh his return he became editor of the Ohio Statesman, published at Columbus. In 1855 he was appointed secretary of legation to Peru, and on his return was elected to Congress from the Columbus district. He stood by the Union in the dark period just before the war, and was returned to the XXXVth, XXXVIth, and XXXVIIth Congresses. In 1864 he was defeated by the Republican candidate, and the following spring removed to New York.

In 1868 Mr. Cox first appeared as a candidate for Congress in New York city and was elected by a large majority over Starr, his Republican opponent. The majority was greatly augmented two years after, when Horace Greeley ran against him, he was defeated. He was a few months after chosen to fill the seat made vacant by the death of James Brooks. He was re-elected to the XLIVth Congress, was appointed speaker pro tempore June 7, 1876, and was elected speaker pro tempore June 10, 1876, serving until June 24.

The Holland City News.

JOHN C. POST, Editor.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1889.

The News has received a copy of a circular announcing that Victoria C. Woodhull presents her name as candidate for the presidency of the United States, in 1893. This document was mailed in London, England, where the lady is preparing for her victory in the next campaign. By means of the office tongs, the circular was tenderly placed in the waste basket, for future reference.

The Allegan Railroad.

A large delegation of representative citizens of Douglas and Saugatuck passed through Holland on their way to Allegan on "railroad business," on Monday. They returned on Tuesday. The people of Saugatuck, Douglas, Fennville and Allegan have subscribed over $62,000 of aid, in addition to offering to give the right of way, depot grounds and valuable terminal property at Saugatuck. Men with such public spirit certainly deserve success, and we are glad to learn that the prospects are excellent for the building of the road. A little of the same work and generosity will secure another railroad for Holland, and we hope to see it manifested in a short time.

How to Cheapen Tinplates.

During the last fiscal year the people of the United States paid to one of the wealthiest syndicates of Great Britain $21,222,625 for tinplates, notwithstanding the fact that every single item entering into their manufacture can be found within our own borders, and thousands of competent and willing hands are ready for the necessary work.

In view of these facts, no valid objection can be urged against encouraging capitalists to erect the necessary establishments, with the view of soon relieving the country of its dependence upon a foreign monopoly for one of the indispensable necessities to every household.

The prominent items required for making 735,737,990 pounds of tinplate bought last year, are, in round numbers, 900,000 tons iron ore, 325,000 tons limestone, 1,750,000 tons coal, 317,000 tons pig-iron, 5,250,000 bushels charcoal, 3,250,000 pounds lead, 26,250,000 pounds tin, 10,500,000 pounds tallow, 3,250,000 pounds sulphuric acid, and about 11,000,000 feet of lumber.

The present tariff on tinplates is 1 cent per pound. With a slight increase to partly offset the difference in cost of labor here and in England, American capital and enterprise will be found to take hold of the business, when, so far as prices are concerned, our experience with the steel rail manufacture is likely to be repeated. But the same class of economist who fought protection to domestic steel rail manufacture, under which prices have been reduced to one-fifth the former standard, are fighting protection to tinplate manufacture—and with the same arguments—alleged fear of raising the price. Blind to teachings of experience, they deny the advantage of domestic competition in supplying the home market with home labor, in utilizing our unlimited natural resources, and insist that we shall continue to send abroad $68,500 per day for labor and materials no better than are to be found at our doors.

The World's Fair.

An interesting struggle is taking place between New York and Chicago to secure the exposition with which it is proposed to celebrate the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus.

The centennial exposition at Philadelphia proved an excellent advertisement for the whole country, and it was worth millions of dollars to the city of Philadelphia. Chicago and New York, therefore, are both anxious to secure the great fair of 1892. In each city active work is going on to that end. At Chicago, George M. Pullman has headed the subscription list with the generous gift of one hundred thousand dollars, and other wealthy men are contributing liberally to the fund of five million dollars, which that city intends to raise. The New York millionaires are more modest than those of Chicago, and they have thus far contented themselves with holding meetings and discussing the question of the site for the location of the buildings.

The matter will be decided next winter, in Congress, as a bill will be presented and passed at Washington, giving the exposition the sanction of the national government, designating its location, and, probably, making a loan to the enterprise of ten or fifteen million dollars, as was done in 1876.

Chicago will have the advantage of the eastern city, at Washington. The majority of senators and congressmen are from the west and south. They will, undoubtedly, vote for Chicago, as being nearer their constituents. The western city will also have the support of the great railroad corporations, as they will have the longest "haul" in bringing passengers to and from Chicago.

Many thousands of visitors will come from foreign countries, and the enterprise will result in great benefit to the industrial interests of the country as well as advertising the future metropolis of the world, which is the modest title by which a Chicagoan designates the town he lives in.

The people of Michigan will be a unit in working to secure the exposition in Chicago. The present prospects seem to assure the success of the Garden City in the contest, and the great world's fair of 1892 will probably come to the shores of Lake Michigan. Since the establishment of the direct steamboat line to Chicago, we seem close neighbors to the big city of the west. Another year will give us a daily line of boats, when the question of annexation to the metropolis will be in order.

The Business Season.

The opening of the schools announces that the play time of the year is over for the children, and that active work begins for them. It has become customary for many of the older people to take a rest during the summer from the hurry and worry of life in order to be better prepared for the work of the rest of the year. This affects the whole community.

As the vacation is now over, we desire to have our citizens join hands and work together for the interests of the town.

The annual fair is the first thing on the programme. This has proved of great benefit to the city and farming townships in this vicinity. To continue to make it successful, all our citizens must do everything in their power to assist the officers of the association. Make an exhibit at the fair, and be sure to attend it with your whole family, and all the relatives and friends you can take with you. The local fair, where you meet all your friends and acquaintances, is much more interesting to you than those held away from home, where you are packed among a crowd of strangers.

Mention is made in another column of a new bank organization in Holland. This is a valuable enterprise for the whole community.

The Chicago steamboat line has become an assured success, but we need a daily boat to the city. This will be secured if our people will continue to give to the new line all the freight and passenger trade they have with Chicago.

The manufacturing establishments in Holland are all in a flourishing condition. It is fully demonstrated that Holland is one of the best locations in the state for manufacturing purposes, and we must keep this fact constantly before the public. More than this, we must be ready to assist any new enterprise which will employ labor and give promise of success. The furniture factory here is crowded with business, and its owners intend to enlarge the buildings in a short time. A plan is on foot to establish another furniture factory in the city, which bids fair to be realized.

Other enterprises can also be secured by the co-operation of all our people in the work. Every citizen should remember that he represents a part of the community, and owes the duty to the town he lives in, of doing all he can to advance the interests of his locality. With this spirit manifested in Holland, the town could be doubled in population in a few years. The natural advantages are here, and all that is required is to develop them.

Lake Shore Enterprise.

The contract was signed, sealed and delivered last week for the entire construction and equipment of an elegant side wheel passenger and freight steamboat for the Graham & Morton Navigation company, to run between Benton Harbor and Chicago, and to cost $175,000 complete. Mr. J. H. Graham, president of the company, finished the negotiations for the new steamer at Bay City, Mich., September 4, where and when the papers were signed and work began at once on the boat, Messrs. F. W. Wheeler & Co., the well known contractors, being awarded the entire contract. This effectually disposes of all rumors that the Graham & Morton company have bought or intend to buy any other steamboat or steamboat interest. The keel has already been laid for the new steamer which is to take the place of the Lora in the company's equipment here June 1 next. At the close of navigation this year, or when it becomes apparent that the Puritan can finish the business of the season, the Lora will go to Bay City, where she will be turned over to Wheeler & Co., at a valuation of $35,000 in part payment of the new steamboat which, as above noted, is to cost $175,000.

A deal was consummated in this city yesterday by which the Chase Brothers Piano company, which has been doing business in Grand Rapids most successfully for the past five years, was reorganized under the state law and the company becomes a Michigan corporation with a capital stock of $225,000, of which $175,000 is already paid in. The stockholders in addition to the Chase brothers number some of the wealthiest men in western Michigan, among them Charles H. Hackley, Lyman G. Mason, Thomas Hume, Charles T. Hills, John W. Moon, Alex. B. Mann, Randall T. Van Valkenberg and Frank H. Holbrook of Muskegon. Some time ago certain citizens of Muskegon approached Milo J. Chase with a proposition for the Chase company to build a factory in the "Sawdust City." Mr. Chase referred the matter to his attorneys, Messrs. Crozier & Cutler of this city, and upon the offer of the citizens of Muskegon to donate a site for the erection of a factory and offering certain other valuable considerations the matter was entertained. The proposition led to the enlargement and reorganization of the company, as above stated, and the Chase Brothers Piano company will build a large factory in Muskegon, in which they will employ from 200 to 300 men in addition to those employed in this city.

The Chase Brothers came to Grand Rapids from Richmond, Indiana, five years ago, and from a comparatively small beginning have succeeded in building up a large business in this city. In extending their field of operations our sister city of Muskegon cannot fail to be greatly benefited. Messrs. Crozier & Cutler, the attorneys of the company, who are also stockholders, say that the new factory will be a source of great revenue to the company, as the manufacturers will have the advantages of water as well as low railroad rates in the shipment of instruments.—Daily Democrat.

Pensions Paid.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—A statement prepared at the Pension Bureau shows that on June 30, 1885, there were 345,125 pensioners on the rolls. June 30, 1888, 489,725, an increase of 144,600. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, the appropriations for pensions were $76,386,846, and the payments $64,972,848. For the year ending June 30, 1889, the appropriations were $80,473,000 and the payments $88,275,113. For the current year ending June 30, 1890, the appropriations are the same—$80,473,000.

The Fair.

The Fifth Annual Fair will open at Holland next Tuesday. As this time draws near, everything indicates a successful exhibition. The intense heat and drought of August, has been broken by an abundant rain, followed, by most agreeable autumn weather. The industrious farmer has, by this time, completed his sowing, and is rejoicing in a satisfactory return for the sweat of his brow.

The obstruction of travel caused by the delay in completing the bridge on the Grand Haven road, has been overcome by securing a temporary crossing of perfect safety, which will secure to us a liberal patronage from our friends north of the city.

Entries for the Fair, in the various departments, are already coming in liberally. Our exhibit of horses will exceed anything we have ever had. Our efficient superintendent of the grounds is kept busy in building new stalls, repairing old ones, and getting the grounds and all the buildings in readiness for the exhibition. The amusements and attractions at the Fair are more and better than of any previous year, among which will be an exhibit by the "Great De Boe" and other artists.

Following the State Fair as it does, and preceding the Grand Rapids Fair, we can and will obtain a fine display of Agricultural Implements and Machinery. Among them will be the State Fair exhibit of "The Empire," of which Kanters Bros. are agents. Benj. Van Raalte and Henry De Kruijff, will also not be behind.

The liberal purses offered for the speed trials will secure to us many of the very best horses of Western Michigan and lovers of speed can have their full satisfaction.

The secretary would urge all those who wish to exhibit, to make their entries with him on Saturday or Monday, and not later than Tuesday. The earlier the better, the more orderly can the work be done, and less likelihood for mistakes. Bake your bread and cake on Monday or Tuesday if possible. Be sure to attend and take your entire family and all come in at the gate.

A Woman's Discovery.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made and that too by a lady in this county. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus write W. C. Hamrick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. Get a free trial bottle at the drugstore of Yates & Kane, Holland; and A. De Kruijff, Zeeland.

OUR NEIGHBORS.

Olive Centre.

Sept. 11.

The effects of an over dose of tangle foot was seen in our streets a few days since, this being the third time with the same party in as many weeks. The supply was got in Holland. Better let up gentlemen it is getting monotonous, with the mercury up in the nineties. The corn crop bids fair to ripen, and will probably be about half a crop; potatoes are nearly all ripe, damaged by drought some. A good big rain would be very acceptable to farmers now. Mr. R. Merritt still languishes at his popular resort, Port Sheldon. Mrs. Grodevent and Mr. and Mrs. Dibble, of Grand Rapids, were guests of G. C. Jones, this week. Mrs. J. E. Brown of Coldwater, is visiting her brothers, M. R. and J. D. Merritt. Ernest Lyon visited his parents here, last week. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Boone were making calls and bidding friends good-bye yesterday. The happy couple go to Grand Rapids this week. It is reported that some of the old couples who jumped into matrimony a short time since, have fell out and are going single file, now. The sowing of wheat has commenced and the streets of our town seem deserted. Mr. J. De Vries of Grand Rapids is looking for saw logs in this vicinity, to be cut next winter.

Sept. 12.

The new bell for the school house is to be placed in position for ringing, today. O. Trumble, P. M., who was taken sick two weeks ago, is able to be out, but is still feeble. Mr. Lewis Newman went to Grand Rapids Monday, with his father, who was on his way home to Williamston. Mr. T. Cole returned from Allegan to-day, where he has been to be examined in reference to an increase of pension. Mr. and Mrs. Verwey have gone to Grand Rapids to-day. Mr. G. W. Davidson, who has been away through the summer, has returned.

Sept. 12.

Mr. James Clark started for Cuba, New York, last Monday, with Woodlark, owned by Caton & De Kruijff. Cornelius Hieftje paid $7.50 into the village treasury, last Tuesday for creating a disturbance on the streets last Saturday night. His brother John was arrested on a similar charge. He will have his trial to-morrow. Mr. Isaiah Peak will appear for the defendant. Special policeman John Pyl was arrested this morning by constable Lokker of Holland, for attempting to quiet the disturbance last Saturday night. Mr. Pyl will appear before Justice Post next Monday. A suspicious looking vehicle was seen on our streets last Friday, containing a Prosecuting Attorney, Sheriff and Justice of the Peace. They picked up one of our citizens and took him a few miles out of town, where the case was tried. The charge not being withdrawn, he settled with them for $25.00. Mrs. Rev. H. Borgers, of Greenleaf, Minnesota, formerly a teacher in our public schools, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. P. Benjamin last Tuesday. Prof. and Mrs. G. J. Kollen called on Mr. and Mrs. E. Benjamin last Saturday. Mr. Peter Veneklasen and Miss Rika Boohe were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, on Thursday afternoon, at the home of the brides parents. Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Huizinga, of Holland, are visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Huizinga.

One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Belleville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters. Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys and Blood. MRS. LYTTON'S MONEY.

Early one spring afternoon two shabby figures could be seen mounting wearily the great stone steps of the Lytton mansion.

One was a pale, fragile young woman, scarcely more than a girl, with a face that was beautiful despite the ravages care and sorrow had made; the other was a tiny boy, who clung fearfully to her skirts as his mother, after a brief hesitation, pulled the heavy silver knob that sent a loud peal through the house.

Ethel Waring started and pressed one hand upon her heart, while with the other she drew the child closer.

"I almost wish I had not come," she thought. "I am so nervous; but I must be brave and calm for Archie's sake."

She gave a fond glance at the little golden head beside her, and then a dignified servant in rich livery opened the door to admit her into the great dark hall.

"I wish to see Mrs. Lytton," she said, timidly. "Tell her that Mrs. Waring—Mrs. Archibald Waring—is here, and will esteem it a great favor to be permitted an interview."

When the servant had disappeared Ethel sunk into a chair near by and looked about her.

The wide hall was in semi-darkness, but she could see the polished woods and massive carvings, the gleam of statuary in the niches, the rich tapestries that hung between the Ionic columns of the entrances to the vast apartments, the mullioned window at the farther end, with its tiny panes of rich stained glass, seen above a bank of exotics.

"How grand and solemn!" thought Ethel.

"And she lives in this luxury while I am destitute. Surely, surely, however hard her heart is, she will not deny me—and her child."

This thought lent her courage, but when a moment later she faced Mrs. Lytton she knew not what to say.

The lady in a gorgeous robe of mauve and lace languidly reclined upon the plush cushions, and as Ethel entered she merely arched her brows and motioned to a chair.

"So you are Archibald Waring's widow?" she said, in her fine even tones. "He married for love, they say. Her gaze went calmly, almost scornfully, over the shabby raiment of the twin before her.

"Yes, and we were happy together," said Ethel, quickly. "It is only since his death I have known what real suffering is."

"Oh, Archibald was clever, though he made a mistake in marrying you," said Mrs. Lytton. "But men will do much for a pretty face, and I can see that you were pretty. That is his child, I suppose; he has his father's eyes. Well, why have you come to me?"

"Because you are Archibald's aunt," replied Ethel, who resented her tone and manner. "I am in great want, my child has been ill, and I could not find work, and—"

"You want me to support you," interrupted Mrs. Lytton with a disagreeable smile.

"I do not. I do not ask for charity of any kind," said Ethel, indignantly. "I thought you would give me work; or aid me in some way to earn a living. For myself I ask nothing, but I came here for Archie's sake."

"What can you do?"

"I can sew and embroider. You have so many friends, Mrs. Lytton, I thought—"

"That I was going to them and say my nephew's widow and child are poor and want your assistance?" asked Mrs. Lytton, with a sneer. "Indeed you thought nothing of the kind—it is my money you want."

She turned to the table and wrote out a check.

"Here, I will give you $50, but do not come to me again," she said. "You are Archibald's widow but you cannot live upon his rich relations."

She languidly held out the paper, but Ethel, who had risen, struck it from her fingers.

"How dare you insult me?" she said, passionately. "I am not a beggar, and I do not want one penny of your money. I would rather starve than take it—remember that."

Then snatching up little Archie, she rushed from the room and down the stairs.

Once on the walk she felt strangely faint, and the next thing she knew some one was supporting her with a strong arm, and a clear, musical voice said:

"There, you're all right. I saved you from an awkward fall. Let me call a cab. Your address, please?"

And before Ethel fully realized what had happened she and little Archie were seated in a carriage with a handsome young man opposite.

"I could not let you go alone; you looked quite too ill," he said, as he met her earnest glance.

"No, I am not ill," said Ethel, "only faint."

"You should not have left Mrs. Lytton's house."

"You know her?" cried Ethel. "Oh, what a cruel woman she is! I will never forgive her, never! How could she treat me so?"

She forgot he was a total stranger, in her emotion; indeed, she was speaking more to herself than to him.

"Cruel in what way?" he asked. "If you want her influence I may be able to—" cheeks, she was very pretty. The dark gray eyes were luminous as stars the pale gold curls fell carelessly upon the white brow, the sweet, red lips were drooping.

"How young and fair," he thought. "But what a spirit. I would not dare to tell her that the despised Mrs. Lytton is my mother."

"To whom am I indebted?" asked Ethel, at the door of her home. "You have been very kind."

"I am Roy Graham," stammered the young man, "an artist. I am much interested in you; will you allow me to aid you in some way?"

"Anything you may put in my way by which I can earn a living for myself and little Archie I will be grateful for," said Ethel, with dignity. "But please never speak of me to Mrs. Lytton."

It was not long ere he called at her home, and with his influence Ethel sold some of her art work at the exchange.

Their mutual interest ripened into something warmer, for such impulsive, ardent natures learn the lesson of love quickly.

Had Ethel known who her new friend really was, she would not have permitted him to cross her threshold, but she believed him to be a struggling artist, and when he confessed his love she yielded her heart to his keeping.

In the meantime, however, Mrs. Lytton discovered that her son was changed; she questioned him and learned the truth.

Roy did not tell her the name of the girl he was pledged to marry, however; he feared unpleasant results.

"You are in love with a penniless girl," said his mother. "You know that I have always intended that Sybil Garrison should be your wife. I will have no beggar bride here."

"Then I will take her elsewhere," said Roy, firmly.

"And not a cent of my money goes to either of you!" almost shrieked Mrs. Lytton. "Marry that girl and I'll disinherit you."

"I am sorry to oppose you, mother," said Roy, "but I shall marry the girl I love whether you deprive me of a fortune or not."

"Very well," said his mother, in great passion. "I have said it, and I will keep my word."

A few weeks later Roy came to Ethel with a very pale face.

"Ethel," he said, "Mrs. Lytton your late husband's aunt, is dead."

"Dead," exclaimed Ethel.

"Yes; she died suddenly, and—you will hear the news from her lawyers—she has left all her money to you."

"To me? You are jesting?"

"It is true; but there is a condition. It is a strange will. You are to marry her son."

"I—I do not understand," said Ethel. "I never saw her son. What can she mean? Roy, how do you know of this? Was she in her right mind? I do not want her money—nor her son, either. Who is he?"

Roy bowed his head.

"Forgive me, Ethel," he said slowly. "I am he—Roy Graham Lytton. I dared not tell you at first, fearing to lose favor, for I loved you when I first saw your face. But it is true; my mother is dead, and has left her fortune to you. She threatened to disinherit me when I told her I was to marry a poor girl. She had already chosen a bride for me."

"I see," cried Ethel. "She had discovered that I was the one you loved, and, repenting at the last moment, left her fortune to me—no rather to you through me."

"Then you accept the condition, Ethel?"

"I accept Mrs. Lytton's son, but not her money," she answered, as she nestled in his arms. "Roy, I am sorry I ever spoke harshly of her. I can forgive her, since she was your mother. But the fortune is yours, dear."

"What matters it when we are one, Ethel darling? And you will marry me soon?—for I am sad and lonely, and need your sweet presence."

Ethel consented; but after their marriage she insisted upon making over to her husband her new fortune, reserving only a portion for little Archie, who, after Roy, was the only one who had a claim upon Mrs. Lytton's money.

A Hero of the Revolution.

A dead oak tree was taken up on Wraggall, Charleston, S. C., recently and under the roots, about four feet deep, was found an 18-pounder solid shot, apparently from a siege or ship's gun. The tree was thirty or forty years old, and, besides, no such shot fell in the city during the last war. It is, therefore, a relic of the revolution, fired probably during the siege of Charleston, by Sir Henry Clinton, and from a battery near Haddrell's Point.

The only non-Alcoholic Vegetable medicine put up in liquid form ever discovered.

It is not a vile fancy drink made of rum, poor whiskey, or refuse liquors, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, but a purely vegetable preparation, made from native California herbs.

Twenty-five years' use have demonstrated to millions of sufferers throughout the civilized world, that all the medicinal uses discovered Vinegar Bitters only possesses sweet and wonderful curative effects upon those troubled with the following diseases, viz:

Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Neuralgia, Headache, Bile, Scrofula, Skin Diseases, Jaundice, Gout, Piles, Biliousness, and all diseases arising from blood impurities, and as a Vermifuge it is the best in the world, being death to all worms that infest the human system.

It is always safe to take at any time, or under any condition of the system, for old or young or for either sex. It is put up in two styles. The old is slightly bitter, and is the stronger in cathartic effect. The new style is very pleasant to the taste and a perfect medicine for delicate women or children. Each kind is distinctly marked on top of carton.

Many families keep both kinds on hand, as they form a complete medicine chest.

As a Family Medicine for the use of ladies, children and men of sedentary habits, the New Style Vinegar Bitters has no equal in the world. It is invaluable for curing the ill that beset childhood, and gently regulates the diseases to which women at every period of life are subject.

Ladies, get a bottle from your druggist and try it. If your druggist has not the New Style Vinegar Bitters, ask him to send for it. If you once try it you will never be without this priceless remedy in the house.

I have just used three bottles of Vinegar Bitters, and it has done me more good than the springs. It is the best medicine made."

JOSEPH J. EGAN, of No. 75 West St., New York, says: "Have not been without Vinegar Bitters for the past twelve years, and consider it a whole medicine chest in our family."

MRS. MATTIE FERGUSON, of Dryden, N. Y., says: "Vinegar Bitters is the best medicine I ever tried; it saved my life."

THE RICHEST MAN IN MAINE.

But Nobody Would Suspect It to Meet Him as He Travels on His Own Steamboat.

Passengers on the Maine line steamers frequently notice in the pilot house a tall, slender man, with a long gray beard and the general aspect of a retired steamboat captain or something of that sort. He seems to take a casual interest in the navigation of the vessel, and is evidently on familiar footing with the officers of the boat. Occasionally he may invite some curious passenger into the wheel-house to see the compass or to peep through the glasses. With such he will chat entertainingly about ships, the ocean, the weather, or any other ordinary subject. Incidentally it will probably come out that he is President of the line, and he may mention that he is also in the oil-cloth business in New York, though his home is in Maine. He is full of thoughtful suggestions about the best way to avoid seasickness, the best staterooms to try to get for the return trip, and as to other matters relating to the comfort of the trip. The passenger who has been fortunate enough to fall in with him concludes that the Maine line has a most accommodating gentleman for its President, and thinks it would be a good thing for the line if it would hire its President to sail on every trip and make things pleasant for the patrons.

"Going to stop over in Portland and come back with us next trip, are you?" he said to a couple of voyagers recently. "Well, now, don't you stay in Portland; go over to Cushing's Island, to the hotel there, the Ottawa; it's the only one there, and you can't miss it. It'll only take half an hour or so to go there, and you can spend one night and two days there a good deal more comfortably than you can in Portland. Just mention at the hotel that I told you to come—Mr. Bailey, President of the steamship line; it won't do you any harm."

These two passengers were more than ever impressed with the geniality of the Maine line's President, and they took his advice. They had the best room at the hotel, and received other attention that made them curious as to where Mr. Bailey got the "pull" that he evidently had with the hotel proprietor. They asked some one who this Mr. Bailey was.

"Bailey? Oh, President of the steamship line? Why, that's Charles S. Bailey. He's the richest man in Maine. Worth ten or fifteen millions, and made it all himself. He was about the first oil-cloth manufacturer in the country, and is the biggest one yet. He most owns the steamship line and a lot of other things. Close as a chestnut burr, too, about business, but does an almighty lot of good with his money on the quiet. He don't go much on churches, but he has a fancy for helping young men studying for the ministry, or young preachers. He'll put up all the money they need right along until they get to mixing in politics or temperance. Then he shuts down on 'em right off. Says a minister's business is to do good to humanity, not to talk politics or prohibition. He'll do most anything for a man he takes a fancy to. I knew a young man went to him once and asked him for $5,000. He got it, and was going to give a note for it. 'Never mind that,' he said; 'if you're honest you'll pay me without it, and if you're dishonest you won't pay me anyhow; your word is all I want.' That's the kind of a man he is, though you'd never suspect it if you had any business dealings with him. You don't mean to say you were talking to him and didn't know who he was? Reckon you don't know much about Maine; there ain't many pies down Eastways that he ain't got a finger in."

The two travelers made up their minds that they had reversed the usual form and had been entertained by an angel unawares.

Buffaloes on the Cars.

The buffalo had a strong aversion to leaving their old homestead; and considerable difficulty was experienced in getting them aboard the cars, two days being spent in the effort. Half a dozen expert horsemen, besides a number of cattle-drivers who had loaded hundreds of wild Western cattle, found they had a more difficult task before them when endeavoring to load buffaloes. However, by a strategic movement, they were eventually got into the pens of the cattle yards. How to get them to walk the gangway was a still more serious matter. The infuriated and maddened beasts, when they found themselves caged, commenced to have a little circus on their own account. Some terrible combats took place between them, and when the enormous size and strength of these animals is considered, one can conjecture how high one of the younger ones would be thrown in the air when caught on the horns of one of these mighty bulls.

Every conceivable effort was made in endeavoring to get them on the cars, but to no purpose; prods with sharp-pointed forks, lashes that would almost cut a sheep in two, seemed to be appreciated as a tickle in the ribs or a soft and gentle caress.

Eventually, a tremendous old bull undertook to be master of ceremonies, and succeeded, after every effort of man had failed. There was nothing new in the manner in which he did it; he only did what buffaloes have done from time immemorial, when working up a stampede. He got behind the herd and began making it lively for those ahead, prodding, bellowing at them, and driving the lagging forward with vigorous digs of his horns in their haunches. They had to travel, and having no other place to go, they passed over the gangway and into the cars. When the "big pusher," as the crowd dubbed him, had driven them all in and reached the door himself, he seemed to be quite astonished! This was the most extraordinary stampede he had ever engineered. Tossing his head scornfully, he wheeled about and ran back into the den; he next accomplished the feat of jumping a ten-foot fence, and seeming to like it, bounded from one pen to another, clearing or smashing everything in his way, until he reached the board fence which bounded the west side of the yards. The paling is about fourteen feet high, but he jumped at it, struck near the top, went through with a crash, and steered for home, a much agitated bull.

Uncle Sam's Great Seal.

It may not be generally known that we have a "keeper of the great seal" of the United States, but it is a fact. He does not bear that title; in truth, he bears no title, being simply a clerk in the State Department, but for forty years he has had sole charge of the great seal of the United States, and the Secretary of State himself cannot induce that faithful old clerk to unlock the doors which guard that emblem of the country's liberties, without a formal warrant signed by the President of the United States.

The present seal of the United States was made after the design of Mr. Dwight, formerly Librarian of the State Department, and it is the fourth of the series.

It depicts the American eagle, holding in each claw a sheaf of thirteen arrows, and surmounted by a circular wreath inclosing thirteen stars, corresponding to the original States, and encircled by the motto "E Pluribus Unum." It is mounted upon a massive block, and is so admirably constructed mechanically that the slightest turn of the screw will develop all the pressure required. The cost was over one thousand dollars.

The original seal of the United States is still preserved in the department. It is intricate in design, and crude and clumsy in operation. It was superseded by a second seal, more nearly approaching that now in use, but smaller in size. This, as it wore out, gave way to a third, which was used for a number of years before the fact was discovered that the eagle, by inadvertence, had been given only seven arrows in its claws, instead of thirteen. This defect has been remedied in the present seal.

The uses to which the great seal is put are various. It goes upon all commissions, pardons, and other official documents issued by the President; but a law passed in 1789 says it shall not be affixed to any instrument except a commission "without the special warrant of the President therefor."

When an autograph communication is sent by the President to one of his "great and good friends" of the royal monarchs of Europe, the envelope which bears the august missive is always stamped with the impress of the great seal.

Numerous applications for an impress of the seal are received, but to all such applications a formal reply is made that the law forbids it.

A Miser's Hoard.

A Parisian miser had for many years lived in a ghastly looking house, inhabited solely by himself and the rats, mice, black beetles, and spiders, which made it their home. No one save the Miser Dubosque was ever seen to enter this mysterious mansion. When the Franco-Prussian war broke out, however, and misrule held high level everywhere, it is natural to suppose that a place with so tempting a reputation would be the first to be invaded. Indeed this was done by the Mobles quartered in the neighborhood, who are said to have discovered Dubosque dead from sheer fright in one of the passages of the house. Suspicion pointed to the probability of his having met with foul play.

Search was, at all events, forthwith made for the old fellow's hoard, when, to the astonishment of every one—as he was known not to have banked his money—not a solitary sou was to be found anywhere. Even to the very cellars the place was empty, save for the trundle bedstead on which the old skinflint slept. It was even without the commonest necessities.

One day, however, one of the soldiers, for some purpose, was hammering a huge staple into one of the walls of the vaults, when, to his surprise, a quantity of liquid spouted out upon him and startled him not a little. He was still more horrified, on emerging into the light, to see its sanguinary hue. Had a man, then, not quite dead, though embedded behind those bricks, received his coup de grace from the Mobles' hammer? Suffice it to say it turned out to be nothing more nor less than a bricked-up wine cellar of enormous extent.

It was in this form that Dubosque had hoarded his wealth, feeling, with much wisdom, that every year added immensely to its value; though it was not long, as one can imagine at such a crisis, before the fine old fruit savings of a lifetime were scattered, and inebriated soldiers were drinking deep draughts of the rosy to the repose of the soul of Dubosque, the miser.

Why the Widow Was Crushed.

Speaking of widows marrying made me think of an incident that happened near where I lived way back in the fifties. I lived next door to Dick Tolbot. He had five little brats. Dick went off hunting one day and shot his leg. It was mighty bad weather, and at last the doctors had to cut off his leg to save his life. He lingered along for several months and then died at last. I was there the night he died. His wife took on mighty bad. Some of the neighbors went to her to console her, but it did no good. At last I went to the seemingly heart-broken wife and told her that poor Dick was gone, and told her it did no good to "take on" so. "I can't help it," said she, and continuing, pointing toward her children, said: "Just think that these poor children will have to come under a stepfather. It is more than I can bear."—Chattanooga Times.

Home-Made Soap.

I have found a way in which I can make soap while waiting for the teakettle to boil for supper, says a writer in Good Housekeeping. It is very easy. Get of a druggist or grocer a pound box of the pulverized lye now sold so cheaply and in such convenient shape. It will cost you 15 cents. It comes in a neat can, which can be opened with any penknife. Dissolve this lye in three pints of cold water. The lye heats the water, and you must wait till this heat passes off before making your soap. Melt your grease and strain through a cheese-cloth and weigh 54 pounds. As soon as this melted grease is cool enough to bear your hand in, pour grease and lye together and stir thoroughly a few minutes, and you will see it thicken. Now pour it into a box or dripping pan, lined with greased paper, and let it stand in a warm place for 24 hours, then cut into bars. It will be ready for immediate use, will keep growing better, is clean and thoroughly satisfactory for dish washing and the laundry, makes a good suds and is economical, having cost you only 15 cents, the price of your lye, as the grease was saved at odd times. It can be made without fire, as you see it does not have to be boiled or even have boiling water added. Our laundress uses it and says "It is good," and she is apt to be critical.

To Those Interested.

HASTINGS, Mich., April 22, 1893. Rheumatic Syrup Co., Jackson, Mich.: GENTLEMEN—This is to certify that I had been troubled with rheumatism in all its forms for the past twelve years, and was confined to my bed at various periods from three to six months at a time, and I could get about only by the aid of crutches. I employed several first-class physicians of this city, none of whom effected a cure or gave temporary relief even.

About two years ago I was induced to try Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup, and, after taking a few bottles I experienced relief, and now consider myself cured. I enthusiastically recommend this medicine for rheumatism. I know what it has done for me, what physicians could not do. I am cured me of rheumatism.

Lost His Hand and Didn't Know It.

Early Wednesday morning Officer Wells, of Lynn, discovered a man coming down the Boston and Maine Railroad from the direction of West Lynn. The man appeared very jolly and entirely oblivious of the fact that he had but a bleeding stump of his right arm, his hand having been severed above the wrist. The man was leaving a trail of blood to mark his course. On investigation it appeared that the man had lain down to sleep with his right arm across the track, and when at daylight a freight train was backed down its wheels cut his hand off as clean as though with a knife. The man's nerves in the arm were perfectly numb, and he did not realize what had happened to him until his attention was called to it. He had been drinking, but did not appear to be drunk. He gave his name as William Cable, of Hartford, Conn. Christopher Gaffney saw Cable coming through the freight yard singing. His hand was gone then. Cable is 24 years old.—Boston Journal.

Very Risky Indeed.

To tamper with symptoms indicative of growing kidney disorder; to neglect for a brief time needful stimulation of the renal organs when their inactivity points, as it always and unmistakably does, to their eventual permanent disease, is certainly very risky indeed. This is, however, a risk that many persons perceptibly drifting into Bright's disease, diabetes, catarrh of the bladder, etc., constantly incur. To those who read, reflect and heed the lessons of recorded experience, the advisability of using Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a diuretic need scarcely be more than a suggestion. No fact is more generally admitted by the medical profession and the public than its efficacy for the prevention of serious renal disease. The unmediated excitement of commerce, no matter how pure, bear in mind, react prejudicially upon the kidneys when inactive. The Bitters subdues malaria, constipation and rheumatism.

A Case of Conscience.

A case of conscience has lately come to our notice which is so exceptional as to merit attention. A merchant in this city some time ago applied to the Governor for an appointment as a Justice of the Peace. His application was favorably acted upon, and he took the usual oath to obey all the laws of the Commonwealth. After taking the oath it occurred to him that there were some things he would have to give up if he obeyed his conscience. He enjoyed an occasional game of poker, for instance; but he must give this up or prove false to his oath. He was addicted to numerous other fashionable vices, which, though not particularly deep-dyed, are contrary to the law. Thinking it all over he concluded that he couldn't live up to his oath, and so he sent in his resignation.—Boston Herald.

His Blasphemous Prayer Fulfilled.

Several days ago Patrick Gallagher felt in his coat pocket for his pipe. It was not there, and its absence caused him to make a terrible wish. His wife reproved him.

"Well, I don't care," he said, "here with this uplifted hand to heaven I pray that my Creator will paralyze the man who has my pipe."

Before his utterances had died away Gallagher felt a severe twitching of the heart, and complained of feeling unwell. A doctor was hastily dispatched for, and said he received a stroke of paralysis. As Gallagher was in straitened circumstances it was deemed best to remove him for treatment to the Home for the Aged Poor, where death ensued in less than twelve hours.

The grief-stricken family were at a loss to understand his sudden death. In looking yesterday, however, through his clothes, removed at the time of the paralytic stroke, they were filled with superstitious horror, for in one of his outside pockets was found the missing pipe, which had worked its way into the lining.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Of Course They Did.

A small boy was crying and making use of some very emphatic expressions and exclamations the other day, when a gentleman halted and observed:

"Tut, tut, my boy! Such words as those won't help your case any."

In backing up he struck the same loose plank which had tripped the boy up, and he fell at full length and rolled off the curb-stone. He gave proper vent to his feelings as he lay there, and as he struggled up, the boy exclaimed:

"What do you say now? Didn't they help you a heap?"

THE HOME.

Good Morning.

"Good morning, world!" On the window seat she balanced her two little timid feet; She clung with dimpled hands and stood Framed in like a picture of babyhood. The clambering vines hung low and green Round the sunniest curls that e'er were seen. As she stood with beauty and light impelled, And bade "Good morning" to all the world. "Good morning, world!" and the great world heard; Each rustling tree and each singing bird. The dancing flowers and the fields of grass Nodded and waved at the little lass; And the far-off hills and the sky overhead Listened and beamed as the word was said; And the old sun lifted his head and smiled— "Good morning world! Good morning child!" —Woman's Journal.

Flower in Japan.

From an article by the artist. Wores in the September Century we quote the following:

"The love of flowers in Japan amounts almost to adoration. They are inseparable from the life, art and literature of the people, and to deprive the Japanese of them would be to take the sunshine out of their lives."

"On one occasion I received through my young friend an invitation from his parents to accompany them on a visit to a very celebrated grove of plum trees that were then in full bloom. After an hour's ride in a 'jinrikisha' or 'kuuma,' as these little man-carriages are more commonly called, we arrived at our destination, where great numbers of people were flocking from all points."

"The trees were one mass of fragrant white and delicate pink blossoms. Hundreds of visitors in holiday attire were strolling about under the branches with extreme delight depicted on their countenances. Others again spread rugs under the trees, where they were served with delicious tea from the neighboring tea houses. The brightly clad children were dancing and frolicking in the shade of the blossoms, and a more perfect picture of sunshine and happiness can hardly be imagined. Innumerable little strips of paper fluttering amidst the blossoms attracted my attention. Miss Okiku informed me that it was the happy custom of the people to give vent to their delight on these occasions by inscribing poetic sentiments, too brief perhaps to be called poems, and hanging them up in the boughs. And sure enough as I looked about me, I observed several persons with paper and pocket inkstands in hand engaged in composing these little sonnets in praise of the blossoms."

"Yasumaru was at some pains to explain to me that these poetic effusions were supposed to be composed on the spot—that the expression, the form of the idea, was derived from the inspiration of the scene; but his father added, with a twinkle in his eye, that many came with their poems already prepared. I was honest enough to confess to the old gentleman that this proceeding was not altogether different from our after dinner orators who surprise their friends with impromptu composed, at their ease."

Feeling on Buttons.

Did you ever see a man in the solitude and privacy of his study attempt to sew a button on by himself? It is, in all its details, one of the most interesting performances in the world.

First, he hunts for a button. Generally, to secure it, he robs Peter to pay Paul, and cuts one from some other garment. This may be much larger or much smaller than the size he is wearing. Next, he hunts for a needle. Probably he goes out and buys a paper of needles. He always chooses the largest, having an impression that large needles will sew stronger than small needles.

As to the thread, he gets the coarsest he can find, and this he doubles. He would thread his needle. He takes the big needle in one hand and his coarse black thread in the other; he bites off the thread to the desired length; then he tries to twist it to a fine point. Generally in this he succeeds in making two and sometimes three fine points out of one end. Of course, he can't get all of these points through the needle's eye at once.

He tries hard to make the needle and thread get on friendly terms with each other. Sometimes it is the needle that kicks, sometimes the thread. Sometimes he really imagines he has threaded his needle. It is an ocular delusion; the thread has missed the needle's eye by half an inch. It is harder work than sawing wood.

At last the needle is threaded. Now he tries to sew the button on without taking his trousers off. This proves a failure. He twists himself into an uncomfortable position and so would sew. But he cannot see so. He runs the needle into his finger and makes an inaudible exclamation. Again the needle slips into the fleshy part of the hand, which induces a very audible dash from the operator. The recording angel knows what is going on inside of him and debits him with every item. He sews hard.

He has forgotten all about the necessity for a thimble. He jams his thumb down on the needle's head, and it punctures his thumb or runs under the nail. By and by he sews the button eye full of thread. His big needle does not pass through any more. He must stop. He ends by winding the thread as many times as it will go under the button, and perhaps he leaves off with two or three inches of thread sticking outside.

At last the button is sewed on, and he is proud of his work.

Ten Good Things to Know.

1. That salt will curdle new milk; hence, in preparing milk porridge, gravies, etc., salt should not be added until the dish is prepared.
2. That clear boiling water will remove tea stains and many fruit stains. Pour the water through the stain, and thus prevent it spreading over the fabric.
3. That ripe tomatoes will remove ink and other stains from white cloth; also from the hands.
4. That a tablespoonful of turpentine boiled with white clothes will aid in the whitening process.

5. That boiled starch is much improved by the addition of a little sperm, salt or gum arabic dissolved.
6. That beeswax and salt will make rusty flatirons as clean and smooth as glass. Tie a lump of wax in a rag and keep it for that purpose. When the irons are hot, rub them first with the wax rag, then scour with a paper of cloth sprinkled with salt.
7. That blue ointment and kerosene mixed in equal proportions and applied to the bedstead is an unfailing bedbug remedy, as a coat of white-wash is for the walls of a loghouse.
8. That kerosene will soften boots and shoes that have been hardened by water, and render them as pliable as new.
9. That kerosene will make tin teakettles as bright as new. Saturate a woollen rag and rub with it. It will also remove stains from varnished furniture.
10. That cool rain-water and soda will remove machine grease from washable fabrics.—The Sanitarium.

"My daughter, twelve years of age, has suffered for the past year from General Debility.

A few weeks since, we began to give her Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Her health has greatly improved."—Mrs. Harriet H. Battles, South Chelmsford, Mass.

"About a year ago I began using Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for debility and neuralgia resulting from malarial exposure in the army. I was in a very bad condition, but six bottles of the Sarsaparilla, with occasional doses of Ayer's Pills, have greatly improved my health. I am now able to work, and feel that I cannot say too much for your excellent remedies."—F. A. Pinkham, South Moluncus, Me.

"My daughter, sixteen years old, is using Ayer's Sarsaparilla with good effect."—Rev. S. J. Graham, United Brethren Church, Buckhamton, W. Va.

"I suffered from Nervous Prostration, with lame back and headache, and have been much benefited by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I am now 89 years of age, and am satisfied that my present health and prolonged life are due to the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—Lucy Moffitt, Killingly, Conn.

Mrs. Ann H. Farnsworth, a lady 79 years old, So. Woodstock, Vt., writes: "After several weeks' suffering from nervous prostration, I procured a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and before I had taken half of it my usual health returned."
