Local News

"Sheepy" Riemersma paid a fine of $13.95 in Justice Sooy's court last Friday following a scrap that began at the Fair Grounds. The charge was profanity.

The prize in the corn kernel guessing contest conducted by George Huizinga & Co. at the fair has been awarded to Ada Bannister and she has been presented with a $25 Standard Phonograph.

The Zealand veterans of the Spanish-American war are circulating a subscription list to help raise funds wherewith to purchase a large silk banner. The Zealand veterans with those from Holland form one post and the banner will be for use of the organization.

In the Calhoun county fair at Marshall Charles Harrington, the pacer, raised by the Boone Bros., easily won the 2:20 pace to which was attached a $1,000 purse. The horse was sold last week to a Detroit man but Johnnie Boone drove him in the race that he won Friday.

James Lyons, aged 78, has spent most of his summer in fishing and perhaps has the record for number of fish. When he cast up his accounts he found that he had caught 1,064 fish in Black lake. He finished up the season Friday by catching a six-pound pickerel.

Dr. Edward J. Strick, formerly of Forest Grove and who is a graduate of Hope college, will leave for Amoy, China, October 16, where he is under appointment as a medical missionary. Dr. Strick will fill the position formerly occupied by Dr. Otte, who died in China last year having been stricken by the plague.

Dr. Edward Hunderman, formerly of this city and a last June's graduate of the Detroit College of Medicine, was in the city last week visiting friends. Mr. Hunderman will locate in Grand Rapids, where he will begin practicing in October. He is a native of Drenthe and attended Hope college for a number of years.

Henry A. Brink, formerly of this city but for the past four or five years a resident of Detroit, has been granted a divorce from Anna Brink, also formerly of this city. The suit was brought by Mr. Brink and the ground on which the decree was granted was desertion. The case was argued before Judge J. W. Donovan in judicial circuit of Wayne county in the city of Detroit and Dickema, Kollen & Ten Cate acted for Mr. Brink. The decree was granted Saturday.

Fire at 1 o'clock Saturday night in Allegan caused a loss of $1,000 in the McDuffy block owned by the Amberg estate of Grand Rapids. The blaze started in the basement among dry goods belonging to Carson, who formerly occupied the building with a bazaar. Two or three families were routed out of the flats above but none of them sustained any loss. Spontaneous combustion is supposed to have caused the fire.

The officers of the South Ottawa and West Allegan Fair association are winding up the business matters connected with the fair as fast as possible, and within a few days they hope to close the books for another year. R. Van Til was arrested by Officer Leonard on the charge of engaging in a fight on the fair grounds last week with "Sheepy" Riemersma, who paid a fine last week for the same offense. Van Til was arraigned before Justice Sooy Monday morning and was fined $8.25.

The Ottawa County Good Roads commission has started on a tour of inspection working in the northern townships of the county, hoping to cover the entire county before long. Some surveying will also be done this fall so as to be in shape to commence actual work next spring. After attending the State Good Roads convention at Lansing the commission is very enthusiastic about the prospects of good roads in Ottawa county. The commission wishes to have anyone interested in good roads to co-operate with them in working for good roads in Ottawa county.

City Attorney Vander Meulen has started suit against the firm of Schliess, Hodgkins & Bachmann of Grand Rapids and the Bankers' Surety company for alleged breach of contract in connection with the job of digging the new city well. A new contract has been awarded the Calumet Construction company of Chicago for $4,440, the job to be completed by December 1. The Grand Rapids firm recently abandoned the job when the well caved in at a depth of thirty-two feet and declared it to be beyond repair. The firm holds that the specifications were defective and has filed a claim for $900 still due. The Calumet Construction company will undertake the work on the same specifications.

G. Bontekoe of this city died last night at the 76 years. He is survived by eight children. The funeral will be held Sat. afternoon at one o'clock from the house and at 2 o'clock from the Central Avenue church.

He is survived by three daughters Mrs. Fred Pfanschuel, Emily and Francis and two sons Harry and Stanley, all of this city. The funeral will be held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home.

The trial of Francis Van Dugtering of Jenison Park and Paul Fliemen will be held next Wednesday in this city. The arrests were made by Deputy Sheriff John Kleis and they were arraigned before Justice Miles where they pleaded not guilty.

Nick De Rose, an Italian fruit dealer with his family disappeared from Holland between two nights. Like the Arabs, he silently folded his tent and quietly stole away to sunnilytally. Few his creditors can whistle for their dough. De Rose was located in the store formerly occupied by Nick Dykema's clothing store. About six years ago another De Rose who conducted a fruit store in the McBride block also disappeared in a similar manner.

The John Neils sons of this city are offering a series of prizes to the farmers in this vicinity. The first prize will be an Imperial Universal Hard Coal heater or range valued at $65; second prize a double barrel shot gun, valued at $15; third, 26 piece set of Rogers silver ware, valued at $7 and 15 other prizes. These prizes are given to the farmers who bring in the six best ears of corn raised this season.

Stealing a watch cost Charles Severance a night's lodging in the city jail, 90 days in the Detroit House of Correction and his position as a life saver. C. McNearney, also a life saver, mislaid his watch and a trap was set for Severance. Thinking he was suspected Severance placed the watch in a patrol box two miles from the Holland Life Saving station but Deputy Sheriff Dornos shadowed and apprehended him. Severance confessed. Capt. Van Weldon has sent the full particulars to Washington.

Several changes have been made in the crew of the Macatawa Life Saving service. C. McNearney of Grand Rapids returns to school and his place is filled by Z. Vander Nagel, an old sailor of this city. Lee DePeyer has been appointed in the place of Charles Severance, who is serving time in Detroit. Arthur Horning another substitute, will leave the Macatawa crew the first of October, when he will join the crew at Michigan City. Souter and Bertsch who were injured some time ago when a scaffold broke, are out again, although they still need crutches. Mr. Swarthous whose leg was broken in 2 places will be confined to his house for some time to come.

Making necessity the mother of invention the city of Holland has hit upon a new kind of paving that has a good chance of becoming the standard material to be used on the streets in future jobs. When the Central Avenue paving was begun last June the Warren Bros. secured an injunction against the city for infringement of their patent rights. The Barbour company held the contract of the city and offered to stand back of the work and furnish bonds and a cash certificate to fight the case in court. They wished to make a test case of it, but just at that time lost a similar case in New York and as a result did not push the matter in Holland. City Engineer Naberhous, City Attorney Vander Meulen and Mayor Stephan held a conference and decided to use half-inch crushed stone in the mixture instead of the inch and a half that is protected by patent. The street was built of this stone and City Engineer Naberhous declares it to be better than the larger kind.

Lost—F-x hound. Black, white and tan. V shaped piece out of right ear; long thick tail. Liberal reward. Martin Vander Bie, Union Bottling Works.

The Degree of honor will give a tea at the home of Mrs. Bert Barnard West 9th Friday afternoon Sept 29-1911.

Mr. Bertsch has just returned from the Philippines and is now engaged in army transportation work in San Francisco. He has been in the Philippines three times and served in the Spanish-American war in Cuba. He graduated from West point in 1891 and was at that time the youngest officer in the United States army. He is also a graduate of Holland High school.

GILBERT HAD GOOD MEMORY

He Never Forgot That at Harrow One of His Lines Was Considered Improper.

This Gilbert story reaches me from an old Harrovian, says a writer in the Manchester Guardian. In 1872 the people of the town got up theatricals to raise funds for a hospital. Doctor Butler, the head master, said he would not allow the school to go unless the pieces were first submitted to him. One was Gilbert's "Palace of Truth." In it is a passage in which the hero says to the heroine: "Meet me at nine o'clock tonight outside the garden gate." Doctor Butler vetoed this and substituted: "Meet me at three o'clock this afternoon." This seemed to him more decorous. About five years ago Gilbert was invited to the Harrow speeches. In reply to the toast of his health he said: "I am very much interested in visiting Harrow, for as far as I know it is the only place in the world where a line of mine has ever been condemned as improper." Great consternation prevailed—all the greater because no one except the speaker and one other person, who was just leaving Harrow in 1872, knew what he meant. It was not Gilbert's way to forget these things.

TALES OF KINGS' CROWNS

Alfred the First English Monarch to Wear One—Richard II. Once Pawned His.

The first English king who wore a crown was Alfred, A. D. 871. Long prior to that date we know that a crown was worn by the Roman king, Tarquin. And in the Bible it is told how the Amalekites brought Saul's crown to David.

But the early crowns were not as they are now. At first merely a fillet of cloth was used, then a garland, and, later on, cloth adorned with pearls.

The popes gradually developed this emblem of kingship, and in A. D. 925 Athelstan, king of England, wore a modern earl's coronet. In 1066 William the Conqueror added a coronet, with pearls, to his ducal cap. The crosses on the crown of England were introduced by Richard III., and the "arches" were added by Henry VII. in 1485.

Richard II., as most people know, was at one time in such a needy condition that he pawned his crown and regalia to the city of London for $10,000.

BEE BOTH BUSY AND BRAVE LURE OF LOST INHERITANCES

It Never Seeks Notoriety But Resents Interference With a Vigor That Arouses Respect.

It was Maeterlinck who idolized the bee. The master of modern playcraft found in the busy insect a bookful of entertaining marvels. The bee is not only the symbol of industry, but it is the exponent of good government, of good order, of practical socialism.

Incidentally, the tiny creature is fiercely sensitive regarding its place, its home and its right to pursue happiness in its own uneventful way. In the Omaha Union depot two hives of bees fell off a truck, and the inmates buffeted and disturbed, swarmed through the great inclosure seeking the unknown enemy and speedily clearing the floor of everything animate. For an hour they held possession of the station, held it against all comers, until expert advice was called in and the marauders were lured back to confinement.

In England an accident of a similar character occurred when a hand hive was broken open in Waterloo station and a panic promptly followed.

But all the stories concerning the bee cannot be accepted without investigation. The bee never poses. It never seeks notoriety. All it asks is to be let alone—and it resents interference with a vigor and effect that are at times overwhelming.

A creature so tiny and yet so resolute, that can hold up all traffic at one of the leading railway centers of the country is entitled to a good deal of respect—and respect is a tribute which the bee has commanded even as far back as the promised land, which flowed with milk and honey.

JUMBLED ORATOR WAS A HIT

Valedictorian Got Badly Mixed Up But the Result Pleased His Audience Immensely.

The trouble with the valedictorian was that he had started orations on three different subjects and abandoned two, after committing them to memory.

This may account for the fact that the trouble ensued early in the engagement.

The youth made a good getaway and was covering the ground steadily when he suddenly switched.

"Beyond the Alps lies Italy," he cried as he took careful aim with his index finger at the gallery. "Such were the inspired words of Patrick Henry as he faced the astonished gathering, and pointed to the throbbing lid of the steaming kettle. If he had turned aside at the crucial moment, if Hannibal had not braved the millions of the English king, the power and helpfulness of harnessed steam might have been left for the discoverers of a future age. But such is the inexorable decree of fate. Hannibal swept down upon the plains of sunny Italy, the seeds of American independence were deeply rooted, and the steam engine was given to an amazed world. If James Hannibal—I should say Patrick Watt—I mean Liberty Henry—had hesitated—or looked back—the course of empire would have remained unchecked and history would have been rewritten!"

Then he sat down amid tremendous applause.

Laughter.

Here's to laughter! The sunshine of the soul, the happiness of the heart, the heaven of youth, the privilege of purity, the echo of innocence, the treasure of the humble, the wealth of the poor, the bead on the cup of pleasure; it dispels dejection, banishes blues and mangles melancholy, for it's the foe of woe, the destroyer of depression, the enemy of grief; it is why kings envy peasants, plutocrats the poor, the guilty the innocent; it is the sheen on the silver of smiles, the ripple on the waters of delight, the glint on the gold of gladness. Without it humor would be dumb, wit would wither, dimples would disappear and smiles would shrivel, for it's the glow of a clean conscience, the voice of a pure soul, the birth cry of mirth, the swan song of sadness. Laughter!

The First "Lady in Trade."

Perhaps the most notable instance on record of the feminine street trader is that of the "white widow," otherwise the duchess of Tyrconnell, the Frances Jennings of the De Grammont memoirs, who, at the time of the revolution in 1688, according to Horace Walpole, "being reduced to absolute want on her arrival in England and unable for some time to procure secret access to her family, hired one of the stalls under the Royal Exchange and maintained herself by the sale of small articles of haberdashery. She wore a white dress wrapping her whole person and a white mask, which she never removed, and excited much interest and curiosity."—London Chronicle.

Knew His Business.

A negro, having won a dollar at a crap game, decided to spend it on having his fortune told. The fortune teller led him into a gloomy room with dirty hangings and misty red lights. She took his palm, traced it with a dollar, spread out her cards, and then said: "You are very fond of music; you like chicken; you have won money at craps; and you have been in jail." The negro looked at her with bulging eyes and finally ejaculated: "Mah goodness, lady; why you jest read mah inmost thoughts!"

Many Centuries Old Fortunes Awaiting the Claim of the Lawful Heirs.

In Rhenish Bavaria two associations have recently been organized to obtain a $400,000 inheritance left in 1676 by the Dutch Field Marshal Baron von Ornholm. In Bavaria there is a new effort under way to secure five fortunes now estimated at about $17,500,000, the amounts left by five Dutchmen to their German relatives, between 1636 and 1706, plus the interest that has accumulated since that time. Every one of these five fortunes, the largest of which was $1,120,000, has completely disappeared.

There is a record that the money left by Johann Joss, an Amsterdam ship's captain, who died in 1707, reached the representative of his heirs in Augsburg in 1785. In the next year the heirs were informed that $700,000 had been deposited for them in an Augsburg bank. The heirs of a leather dealer, Van Gratz, received small payments on account, and even obtaining $40,000 about 1791. In 1855 an Augsburg banker by the name of Von Halde confessed on his death bed that the inheritances had been deposited in his bank, and that by means of them he had made his own fortune.

Since then every effort has been made to trace the bequests through the municipality of Augsburg, the Bavarian minister of the interior, and the courts. There are endless documents in the case, but the money has never appeared. Recently the Dresden bank absorbed the Von Halde bank business, and the heirs are now of the opinion that it must account to them for $17,500,000 and they have engaged a distinguished Munich lawyer to devote his time to a search for the money.

DOG'S EYE GRAFTED ON MAN'S

American Oculist Restores Lost Sight by Performing Wonderful Operation.

That a person totally blind from ophthalmia, even from birth, can be made to see by having a portion of a dog's eye grafted on his own was the startling communication made by Doctor Borsch, an American oculist at present in Paris, in a paper read before the meeting of the French Ophthalmia society a few days ago.

Doctor Borsch explained that as a result of blindness from ophthalmia, as also from some other causes, the cornea, which is the transparent membrane in front of the eye, becomes opaque and in such a case the only chance of restoring sight is to replace the defective cornea by a healthy one.

To perform this feat, Dr. Borsch first operates on a dog and lays back from its eye the conjunctiva or skin of the eyeball surrounding the cornea. He removes a portion of the latter and places it aside in blood serum. He then performs the same operation on the patient's eye, removing part of the front of the eye of the same size as the cornea, taken from the animal.

The dog's cornea is now placed in position on the human eye and secured with stitches of the finest possible silk, the surrounding skin, which had been laid back, being brought into place over the edge of the cornea and also sewn.

The new graft unites with the eye in a few days, aided by a temporary glass cover to keep it in shape and injections of serum to stimulate vitality.

Bones Stronger Than Solid Oak.

The wonderful power of our structure has been tested scientifically to show how that hollow bone bears strain. A very small bone, only one square millimeter (.0155 square inch) in diameter, will hold 33 pounds in suspension without breaking, while a piece of the best oak of the same thickness will hold only 22 pounds.

The bone is, therefore, half again as strong as the solid oak, thus showing that nature is economical in the weight given to bones, making them hollow, and at the same time makes them stronger than if they were solid and much heavier. The principle has been recognized in mechanics, engineers using hollow steel tubes instead of solid to meet great strain.

His Garter Upside Down.

The late duke of Devonshire, who was very careful in everything, once entertained King Edward VII. at a ball at Devonshire house, which was the talk of London. As his majesty went away, he complimented the duke on the magnificent manner in which everything had been done and the way in which the evening had passed off. He said he could not suggest any change for the better, save in one little thing, which he hoped his grace would not mind his mentioning. "What is it, sir?" inquired the duke with much anxiety. "Pray tell me."

"You have got your garter on upside down," replied the king.

Sarcastic Diner.

"Did you like your dinner?" asked the waiter. "Like it?" echoed the guest. "Why, it made me feel like a boy again." "Thank you, sir," smiled the waiter. "We aim to please in every detail, sir, and if you—"

"Yes, like a boy," continued the enthusiastic guest as if he had not noticed the interruption. "Spring lamb we had. I ate it. And if that was spring lamb I am still a boy. You have cut many years from my 'fe.'"

A Worthy Man

With the resignation of Rev. Edward Niles from the pastorate of Hope church and his leaving Holland, the News feels that we are saying farewell to a man whose influence among many individuals in this city has brought to them higher ideals of manhood and citizenship. Mr. Niles is what we would call an up-to-date minister. He is a man who believes in the old truths but who believes that practical 20th Century methods apply to church work as well as to any other kind of work in obtaining efficiency.

Our acquaintance with Mr. Niles has extended over the past year that he has been here and we have ever found him true to the highest ideals that he announced from the pulpit. His religion is the every day sort and not the kind that is to be exhibited only on Sundays and for an hour each week to those who can be induced to attend an old fashioned prayer meeting.

During our acquaintance with Mr. Niles we have found in him only the most admirable traits of character. It is impossible that this man has appealed to everyone in exactly the same way, yet we are certain that those who have found him different from our estimate are few indeed. He has been admired by members of every denomination for his fearless battle for truth. When he found the wrong he hit, and hit hard. And to most people the sting of a real truth pressed home with unflinching courage is not always pleasant or acceptable. But a minister who takes his rightful place in any community preaches unreservedly those truths that Mr. Niles has told.

In leaving Mr. Niles goes where he can work more freely and more effectively with up-to-date tools in one of the city churches that seeks him. He can conscientiously leave his charge here, having rounded out a full year since his installation according to his promise and he leaves with his year of work well done and with the admiration of the citizens of Holland.

Appeal that Case

Again we wish to point out and emphasize the necessity for the appealing of the Kamferbeek-Hennessey case. And again we wish to argue that the city of Holland stand back of the appeal.

With this bad precedent hanging over us we have less police protection than we had before. No one can blame any officer in this city, or for that matter, any officer in this county for refusing to make an arrest without a warrant. If one of these officers now has reason to believe that he can by making a prompt arrest secure the person of a criminal and acts in perfect good faith without malice toward that man he knows that he is not to be allowed an opportunity to go before a jury and have it decided whether or not there was probable cause for making the arrest. This leaves matters in a healthy enough state for the criminal but not very pleasant for the people whose protection is the first duty of the officer.

If the city through the council does not see its way clear to have this case appealed it should be taken up by some public spirited citizen and carried to the state supreme court.

There was nothing conservative in the way Canada turned it down.

HOLLAND IMMIGRATION.

The following from the Outlook should be of special interest locally: "It is worthy of note that, regardless of the changes in the volume and the composition of the stream of immigration, one race has maintained a slow but steady increase in its contribution. It is the one denominated by the statisticians of the Bureau of Immigration 'Dutch and Flemish.' No more desirable immigration than this could come to our shores, and it is a notable fact that it is the only one of the races of northwestern Europe which continues to show an increase in volume. Despite the fact that this is an off year for immigration, the inflow of Dutch and Flemish promises to exceed that of any previous year. The movement is one of marked economic interest, for its components in a large proportion are families of the agricultural class who are being crowded out of Holland. The Hollander is emigrating, in the words of Dr. Frederick van Eeden, 'because the soil in the Netherlands is either very high in price or barren, so that it can only be used for agricultural purposes by intensive culture and a big outlay of capital. The son of a gardener in Holland who has a few thousands for his share cannot start a farm in Holland. He must rent the land, and he can never become well off. For that reason he prefers to go to America, where he can start with a much smaller sum.' Nearly one-half of the males over fourteen years of age who enter under the heading 'Dutch and Flemish' are farmers or farm laborers. They bring their families and their clergymen with them. They also bring capital with which to start anew in this country. They occasionally move in small colonies led by their pastors, indicating a long and careful preparation for the transplantation from one soil to another. Some time ago such a colony arrived at Ellis Island with its spiritual leader at its head, part coming in the second class and the remainder in third class. The latter had difficulty in passing the inspectors, owing to a surprising lack of money. The clergyman, who wore excellent clothing and a fur cap, was in New York arranging for the railway transportation to the West. A messenger informed him of the predicament of these members of his flock, and he hurried back to the island, where he displayed more than a thousand dollars which had been intrusted to him for safe keeping by his followers. They were admitted immediately. The Dutch and Flemish are settling chiefly in Illinois, Iowa, New Jersey, New York and Massachusetts, and are going in increasing numbers to California, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Missouri, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Washington. The proportion of those returning to Europe is approximately ten per cent, as compared with an average of thirty per cent for all immigration.

Looks Like Another Call For Judge Kirby.

While charges and rumors of changes are rife in the political field there is one public official who seems to be immune, and that one is Edward P. Kirby of Grand Haven, Judge of Probate. The reason for this probably lies in the fact that no other officer is nearer to the people than the probate judge. This is because the probate judge is the person who has in his care the destinies of the widows and the orphans of the county, and the adjustment of property interests in case of deaths. When people find that the interests of the widows and the orphans and the property rights are protected they are loath to change—and probably that is the reason why there is a sentiment prevailing to hold Judge Kirby for another term.

One thing is apparent, and that is that the people are well satisfied with the official record of Judge Kirby. He has been a staunch friend of those who in the course of events come within the scope of his works, whether it be the friendless widow and the homeless orphan or the big property holder. All get simple and exact justice; and all feel secure that their rights are protected. On account of his efficient and just administration of the affairs of his office the judge has made a host of friends not only in Holland and Grand Haven, the city centers, but in the entire county.

One of the strong points in Judge Kirby's favor is that he has a sound legal mind and that his training has been in the law. From this standpoint he has been the most thorough Probate Judge the county has ever had and his opinions on probate law carry great weight not only among the Probate judges of this state but of other states as well. The practice and the custom throughout the state tends toward the elevation to the probate judgeship of men who are trained in the law, for it is with the law, that these have to deal.

If knowledge of law and experience counts with the people the people it seems will extend another call to Judge Kirby.

NEW BAKE OVEN.

The Holland Rusk Company has installed a new oven much larger and more convenient than the old to take care of the steadily increasing business of the firm.

The structure has external dimensions of 56x15 feet. The new oven is so arranged that in stoking no particles of coal dust or gases produced in the burning of coal can escape, thus aiding in securing a maximum degree of cleanliness. The product will be baked by heated air hereafter, free from sulphur and gaseous impurities. The unbaked buns are fed into the oven automatically, each one being in the oven the same length of time. The capacity of the oven is 200,000 rusk per day.

The work is being superintended by W. J. Roberts of London, England, who is an expert in this line, having installed many of the largest ovens in Europe as well as in America. The material for the oven is imported from England. The entire cost of the new oven is about $10,000.

NOVEMBER JURORS CHOSEN.

County Clerk Jacob Glerum, Sheriff Andre and Justices of the Peace Chas. K. Hoyt and Daniel C. Wacjis have drawn the jury for service at the next session of the circuit court in November. The following from Holland and this vicinity have been drawn:

STAINED GLASS AND WOMEN

Latter Sometimes Desert Churches Because Colors From Windows Put Streaks on Faces.

Churches whose treasures include costly stained glass windows find that their anxieties do not end with securing the money to pay for the window and the artist to execute the work.

"Every bit as important are the complexions of the women in nearby pews," said a minister. "I have known churches to lose valuable parishioners because the window at the back or side cast an unbecoming light on a lady's face. That would have happened in my own church just a few days ago if we had not considered the lady's feelings and changed the design of the window, which was easier than changing the lady's pew or losing her support. The pew was a family inheritance, having been handed down by will from generation to generation; therefore it was out of the question to move. At the same time she had my sympathy in her revolt against that memorial window. No matter in what part of the pew she sat the glass cast a bright red spot right on the end of her nose and yellow streaks across her cheeks and forehead. Even a handsome woman would have been less attractive under that barbaric illumination; as my parishioner had not been particularly favored by nature those startling tints were positively deforming. Fortunately it was not too late to change the lower half of the window, and the lady now sits bathed in a becoming violet glow."

SWORDFISH AND BEER KEG

New York Judge Tells a Lurid Tale of Adventure Off Block Island.

Judge Tom Dineen is back with his good ship Nomad after a cruise in which he had some rare adventures, says the New York World. Here's one as he tells it himself with his well known regard for veracity:

"We were fifteen miles off Block Island in the dusk of the day when we came on a school of salt mackerel. First thing we knew a swordfish butted in and there was a wild scramble among the mackerel. The swordfish filled up on the school and then like an overfed hog took a nap on the surface of the water. My engineer used to be a New Bedford whaler and he carries a lot of old-time tackle on the Nomad. He went forward and heaved a harpoon into the small of the swordfish's back. He had already secured an empty beer keg—got that 'empty'—to the end of the harpoon line. Mr. Swordfish as soon as the harpoon got into him took it on the run with the beer keg trailing along. He dived and tacked and doubled on his tracks, but the keg was ever on the job. Finally his despair and exhaustion did the trick. He gave a feeble flicker with his tail and we hauled him aboard. He was six feet two inches long and weighed four hundred pounds, and say—he was fine eating."

Inclined to Be Skeptical.

"What do you see?" asked the business man who had permitted the fortune teller to lead him into a dark room and hold his hand.

"Ah, I see many wonderful things here," she replied. "You will have good luck with the business you are going into."

"What else do you see?" "You will make a great deal of money soon."

"Anything more?" "You will live to be a very old man and have good health."

"All right. What else?" "That is all I see."

"Isn't there anything about a dark little lady who loves me?" "Oh, I will look again. I thought you were old enough to have a wife and family. So, you are widower?"

"Yes, but I don't more than half believe you can foretell the future, after all."

Powerful Cosmic Process.

"Let us understand, once for all, that the ethical progress of society depends, not on imitating the cosmic process, still less in running away from it, but in combating it. The cosmic process born with us and, to a large extent, necessary for our maintenance, is the outcome of millions of years of severe training, and it would be folly to imagine that a few centuries will suffice to subdue its masterfulness to purely ethical ends. Ethical nature may count upon having to reckon with a tenacious and powerful enemy as long as the world lasts."—Huxley.

Friendly Offices.

Friends bound the bridal pair with ropes, shackled them to their seat in the car, and covered them with placards which coarsely set forth that they were newly-married.

"Boys," protested the groom, at length, "this isn't fun!"

But the friends did not take offense, graciously bearing in mind that where a man is so desperately in love, his sense of humor undergoes a temporary suspension.

Minds Mated.

"I can tell you one thing," said Tawkins with emphasis, "when I marry, it won't be any 'higher education' girl. My wife won't know Greek."

"No," said Edgely, looking at him attentively, "nor beans."

A GREAT HOWL FROM UP HOPPIN' HOLLER

The Geeville Trumpet Blast of Freedom Kills Scoop.

One of the Bungbubble Brothers Learns That All is Not Gold That Glitters.

BY ED MOTT.

As I was deep one day in writing for the ensuing number of The Geeville Trumpet Blast of Freedom, a man with hickory trousers stuffed in cowhide boots, wearing a limp felt hat, and with joy beaming from his face like a candle shining through the holes in a pumpkin jack-lantern, came bustling into the office.

"Fol de rol, de rol, de raddidy! Fol de rol, de rol, de ray!" was his introductory remark, as he cut a series of backwoods pigeon wings around the room.

It was court week, during which event the back districts invariably turned out their denizens almost to a man, either as witnesses, jurymen or litigants, and the Geeville tavern set out to the popular demand a tippie that had won much fame for the promptness with which it took dull care by the neck and chucked it out of the window, so to speak; so I at first thought that my sudden and joyous visitor was one of these, and had been in fond and too-protracted dalliance with that insinuating and insidious bowl. But such was not the fact. After he had warbled and plerouetted off his first burst of glee, he feller wants that place he's got to take her with it an' change her name to his'n. What do you think o' that, Squire?"

"An' who do you think's been edgin' round the widder, anxious to git the clearin' on them diskerridin' terms? Actully willin' to marry the Widder Smudgecrack to git that clearin'?" Why, Solon Pippa! An' why is he so egotistical durn anxious to git the place on them diskerridin' terms? 'Cause he's found out that the place has got this here on to it. That's why!"

My beaming visitor took a handful of glittering, heavy bits of what seemed to be ore from his pocket and handed them to me. Then he danced joyously again, making a football of his old felt hat.

"Gold, by jicketty!" he shouted. "Gold! Fol de rol, de rol, de raddidy! Gold on the Widder Smudgecrack's place! Fol de rol, de rol, de raddidy! She's old, an' as rattly as a dried gourd, an' deaf, an' shy an' off eye, an' her place ain't worth seven shillin' an acre fer aggercult'ral purposes! But there's gold on to it! Tons an' tons of it! Fol de rol, de rol, de raddidy! An' Solon Pippa, poor feller, has found it out somehow, an' is willin' to marry the widder! He told me so! But he don't know that the widder's dead sot on to me! He fergits that I'm one o' the Bungbubble boys from Hoppin' Holler—Jehosaphat Bungbubble, called 'Hoss' fer short, just what I am, by jicketty! A hoss that always gits there, an' gits there first! Fol de rol, de rol, de raddidy!"

"An' Solon's goin' up to ask her to-night. An' the widder don't know she's got gold on her place. She's dead sot on me an' Solon can't tetch her! Fol de rol, de rol, de raddidy! She's old enough to be my mammy, but she's plunked down in a chair, slammed his hat on the floor, and said:

"I'm one of the Bungbubble boys, from Hoppin' Holler! I'm Jehosaphat Bungbubble—'Hoss' they call me fer short, an' that's what I am, Squire! A hoss, you bet you! A hoss that always gits there, an' gits there first! You had a Blarin' from Blarin' Ridge in your paper last week, statin' p'tic'lar an' quite conspicuous like, as s'orty makin' Blarin' Ridge some punkins, that Elnathan Jaggers's wife Araminty Jane had run away with young Socrates Munyon, somethin' that hadn't happened at Blarin' Ridge sence nobody knowed when. That's about the natur' o' the Blarin' from Blarin' Ridge that brung the Ridge to the top o' the heap in the Trumpet Blast last week, ain't it?"

I admitted that The Trumpet Blast had been enlivened the last week by an item such as he mentioned.

"Hub, huh," said the beaming visitor, nodding. "That was a humper an' no mistake. It was most as excitin' an' entertainin' as the one you had in The Trumpet Blast the week afore that yit, in the Limpin' from Lane Crow Barren, about Rube Sloper havin' been ketched settin' fire to 'Biram Wing's barn, an' the flindin' out that he had lugged away all the hay an' others things that was in it 'fore he sot the fire."

I said I thought his judgment was about correct as to that. "The item from Lane Crow Barren certainly was unique," I said.

"Hub, huh," nodded my critical visitor, who then remarked with a great rousing of positiveness:

"But I'm goin' to give you a piece for your paper that's as much more unique than runnin' off with somebody's wife, or hoss stealin', or burnin' your neighbor's barn as lynchin' a feller-citizen is more tetchin' than trappin' a mushrat! You know the Widder Smudgecrack, an' you know the Widder Smudgecrack's place, don't you?"

I had some knowledge of the widow and her place, I told my eccentric visitor.

"Why, consarn it!" exclaimed this excited representative of the Bungbubble family. "She's sixty-eight if she's a minute! Sixty-eight past. An' ain't she humly? Jeff Slifer, what worked for her, says he'll make affidavit that she sot in her cornfield this past season an' actly skeert the crows away, she's that humly! An' thin? Why, Squire, an' ash saplin' has got more meat on it than the widder Smudgecrack kin brag on! Fact! She's deef'n a post, too, an' her off eye is out. As fer her place, you couldn't raise white beans on the most of it! For aggercult'ral purposes that place o' the widder's ain't worth seven shillin' an' a gro. But she's that contrary an' sot in her ways that she won't sell the blasted place for no price. She says if any got gold on her place! Say! Ain't this goin' to be literatooor fer your paper that'll make it crack from Dan to Beersheby?"

One look at the specimens the joyous announcer of his prospective good fortune handed me told me what they were. Iron pyrites. I put them on a shovel and held it in the fire. Presently they crumbled and almost vanished as if they had never been. The Bungbubble brother dropped in the chair, gasped and stared at the dust on the shovel with bulging eyes.

"That's what they call fool's gold, Mr. Bungbubble," said I. "It's entirely worthless. Couldn't get a dollar for a wagon load of it. You've had a narrow escape, old boy! You might have married the decrepit and unattractive widow and her worthless farm. Let your friend Solon Pippa have her if he wants her."

Mr. Bungbubble sat a moment as if in a trance. Then he rose, stamped and thumped and knocked things around the office, and yelled an' swore until all looked blue.

"Let Solon Pippa have the widder!" he yelled. "Why, great pizen pepper-pods! There ain't no widder! The crack! She's Mrs. Jehosaphat Bung-Widder Smudgecrack, old an' rattly as a dried gourd, an' deaf, an' shy an' off eye, ain't the Widder Smudge-

Then he went pounding out of the office, tearing his hair.

WHEN LIGHT FAILED IN TOWN OF GEEVILLE

The Trumpet Blast of Freedom Forced to Skip Issue.

Cyrenus Bimflick, Touring Genius, Works Havoc With Editor's Plans.

By ED MOTT.

A touring professor of the art preservative came into the Trumpet Blast office and agreed in consideration of a quarter, to be paid when I returned, and a dime to him in hand duly paid for present requirement in the form of two of Fritz's schooners, to set a column of matter needed for the paper that week, while I rode eight miles on Deacon Beaver's lame old mare and collected five dollars that a man down the river, and good as the wheat, owed me for some horse bills, and which would insure satisfactory negotiation with the express company of the Trumpet Blast's paper for the current issue. I showed the tramp printer the copy book with the copy on it, among which was a very able story of my own about the wonderful doings of a rat, and rode away.

It happened that the man I was going to see had come to Geenville that morning and I did not know it until I got to his house. On my way back, though, I met him. He did not stop, but as he drove on by he shouted to me that he had stopped in the Trumpet Blast office and paid that five dollars to my partner.

My partner! Visions of the tramp printer and that five dollars in association over at Fritz's rose before me, and it was a shame the way I rode the deacon's old mare back to Geenville. The Trumpet Blast office was empty when I got there. I dashed over to Fritz's, fearing the worst, but hoping that the lure of the place had held the tourist there in soft dalliance with its wares; but he had tarried, so they told me, only long enough to put away two schooners and get a five-dollar bill changed, and then had gone his way. I went back to the office, and all the consolation I got was in a communication he had left on my table addressed to me. This was it:

"Sir: With one fell swoop you hurl me from the realm of art back to sideshow barking again, and I flee!"

"Listen to my tale of woe. "Years ago I wrote a little story of the doings of a common house rat that showed the possession of something trespassing on genius. On the part of the rat. The item was printed in a New York newspaper. At the time I was a compositor in a small weekly down York state way. Soon afterward, the rural editor I was working for was constrained, owing to almost universal noninterference on the part of the reading and business public in the affairs of his office, to discontinue the publication of his saying, sir, that you will pause right here and call me a liar, but I refer you to the foreman of that office for corroboration. I forget his name, and think he has left there, but you can look him up. I had the rat story for a take right away, and it was credited to a rural paper 'way up in Minnesota! Bad enough for me to go to St. Louis after that, but worse still to find my rat story waiting for me in a newspaper office there, credited to an Indianapolis paper.

"I journeyed southward, only to find Nashville, Atlanta, New Orleans, Mobile, Charleston, Savannah, and other places, both as I went and came, always ready with that rat story to shove into my hand, credited to as many different papers.

"I began to feel at last that this rat story was sort of an Old Man of the Sea to me. Its burden was becoming unbearable. The form it took as a pet white rat was more than I could bear. This was passed to me in the composing room of a Philadelphia newspaper. I set it up, jumped the town, and fled to New York, fearing to tarry by the way in New Jersey, for if I had been confronted with the rat story and Jersey both, I know that certain and lasting collapse would have been mine.

"I will fly to New York," I said. "There, if anywhere, I can escape that rat and the unfortunate genius of it that impelled me to put it on record." "You may imagine my astonishment, sir; I may well say my horror, then, when in the office of the very newspaper which had printed that rat story for me originally five years before, I found the haunting item, the avenging Nemesis, my Old Man of the Sea, awaiting me!

"This is a warning of some kind,

newspaper, and I was thrown out of a job.

"The office owed me $15. All the money that was due the office was just that amount. It was owed by a marble cutter, and he was perfectly good for it. I asked the editor to give me an order on the marble cutter for the amount. He said he would if I insisted on having it, but the debt was payable in trade. He was saying it, he said, with tears in his eyes, to get a tombstone for his poor old father, who, he said, was then on his last legs. But I could have the order if I wanted it, he said, mournfully. I couldn't see where I could use any grave stones to advantage just then, and I hadn't the heart, anyway, to rob the editor of the poor comfort of marking the last resting place of his old father with a suitable memorial, and so I didn't take the order. I did what all aspiring types do in similar situations. I combined pedestrianism with my art, and started out to do the country and the newspapers of the country.

"The first place I paused in was Buffalo, N. Y. Got a sit, subbing. The very first take they handed me out was that rat story of mine, clipped from the paper that had printed it first. Said nothing. Set it up. Cleveland lured me next. One night stand. Minute I grabbed a stick they put me to work on that rat story, clipped from the Buffalo paper. Walking was good all the way down through Ohio. In four country newspaper offices I set up that rat story of mine.

"Fled to Chicago. Got a sit, in a big newspaper office. Pardon me for sure as fate!" said I. "This irrepressible rat story isn't chasing me all over the country in its various disguises for nothing! I'll quit the business."

"Threw up my job then and there. Gave up my beloved art. Took up barking for a sideshow. That was five years since, and I was barking still, when a little while ago the siren voice of the old time began to buzz in my ears.

"Sir, yours is the first town I have struck, and I hailed it with joy. But now I flee from it, and am getting away as fast as I can. Why? Listen. I took up here the composing stick again for the first time in years. What have you dug up and put before me as my first take of copy? My Old Man of the Sea! My avenging Nemesis! Reincarnation of the rat story, the haunting thing from which I fled five years ago! And done by you!

"Sir, not for less than $7.50 would I confront such a shock as this and remain to defy the warning of it! But I credit you with the five the nice old gent brought in. You can forward me the balance by first mail, my risk.

"With one fell swoop you hurl me from the realms of art back to sideshow barking again, and I flee. I say good-by, not au revoir. Yours, crushed, Cyrenus Bimflick.

There are people to this day who do not know why the Trumpet Blast of Freedom missed publication that week. "Rush of outside job work," so I stated in the next number that came out.

ROYAL Baking Powder Economy

The manufacturers of Royal Baking Powder have always declined to produce a cheap baking powder at the sacrifice of quality.

Royal Baking Powder is made from pure grape cream of tartar, and is the embodiment of all the excellence possible to be attained in the highest class baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price, and is more economical at its price than any other leavening agent, because of the superlative quality and absolute wholesomeness of the food it makes.

Mixtures made in imitation of baking powders, but containing alum, are frequently distributed from door to door, or given away in grocery stores. Such mixtures are dangerous to use in food. In England, France, Germany and some sections of the United States their sale is prohibited by law. Alum is a dangerous mineral acid, and all physicians condemn baking powders containing it.

The label of alum baking powders must show the ingredients.

Ezekiel iii—Oct. 1

"Hear the Word of My mouth and give them warning from Me."—Ezekiel iii, 17.

EZEKIEL ranks amongst the great Prophets. Most realistic were his visions and powerfully described. A portion of his prophecy was written before the final serious troubles upon the kingdom of Judah, which resulted in the overthrow of Zedekiah's kingdom. The remainder of the book was written after the complete overthrow of the kingdom. The entire prophecy was given in Babylon. Ezekiel himself residing there and ministering as a Prophet chiefly to the captives, arousing their hearts to an appreciation of their situation and to a hope of return in God's set time to their own land.

It would be a mistake, however, to suppose that Ezekiel's mission was entirely or even chiefly to the Jews of his time. Rather we are to understand, through St. Peter's statement, that he, with other Prophets of old, spoke and wrote things which they themselves and the people who heard them did not understand—things which God did not wish to have understood. Ezekiel prophesying.

stood until after the giving of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost—things which would be "meat in due season" for the spiritual Israel throughout this Age. For instance, when Ezekiel tells the people, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die," he was delivering a truth applicable to the Gospel Church during this Age, and a truth which will be applicable to the whole world during the Messianic reign, but which was not applicable to the Jews at the time of the utterance. Why? Because the whole world at that time was lying in the Wicked One; as St. Paul explains, they were all under sentence of death already through Adam's disobedience. Hence they could not be put on trial for life, individually, until first they should be redeemed from the Adamic condemnation.

The blood of bulls and goats could never take away sin from the Jews; the redemption could come only in the Divinely appointed way—through the death of the Savior; and the Savior had not yet come, had not yet brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel. And as for Israel's Law Covenant, it was merely typical of the New Covenant of the future.

"Times of Restitution"

In the 16th chapter of Ezekiel's prophecy the declaration is clearly set forth that in the Divine Plan a great restitution is sure to come which will affect not only Israel and the living nations of Ezekiel's time, but also the dead of all nations. From the 40th verse onward the Prophet describes the certainty of God's promise to recover Israel, to bring them back into His favor, and that on a better basis than ever in the past. At the same time the Lord declares, through the Prophet, that the Samaritans will be restored and blessed, and that the Sodomites will be restored and blessed. The latter nation had been entirely destroyed by fire from heaven, as the Redeemer declared. It follows that their restoration must be from the tomb, from death, hades, sheol.

The prophecy goes on to declare that the Lord will not do this because of any worthiness of the Israelites or others, but for His own Name's sake—of His own good pleasure. In other words, this is the purpose which God purposed in Himself from before the foundation of the world. This is the purpose which He declared to Enoch, saying that in due time Messiah would "come with myriads of holy ones" to establish justice and righteousness in the earth, to bless the people.

This description is found in verses 40 to 60, the conclusion being that when Israel thus experiences the goodness of God in their restitution they will be ashamed and never open their mouths again by way of boasting or complaint. This will be after God's favor shall have been restored to them and He shall be pacified toward them in respect to all of their idolatrous doings of the past.

The pacification of Divine Justice is found in the redemption accomplished by our Lord and Savior.

Not Torment but Death

It is worthy of note here that neither the Prophet nor those whom he typified were ever commissioned to say to mankind that the sinner would be eternally roasted, nor suffer eternally in any condition. The extreme penalty for sin presented to us in God's Word is, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." In other words, God declares that He will not give eternal life to the wicked, but only to those who will turn from sin to righteousness. Thus we read, "Turn ye, turn ye, for why will ye die?" And again, "He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son shall not see life (everlasting), but the wrath of God abideth on him"—the sentence of death everlasting.

On Monday evening, G. VanSchelven, Esqr., addressed the citizens of Zeeland on the political issues of the day, under the auspices of the Tilden and Hendriks club, which club is said to number now about one hundred members. The list of membership was increased by 20 on that evening.

The Hon. W. B. The bald eagles, our national emblematic bird, still hovers around our vicinity, and were seen around Point Superior on Monday last. They are represented to be of extraordinary size.

The Hayes and Wheeler Guards organized here last week are diligently drilling. We had the pleasure to see them one evening not far from our premises, and will say that they presented a very gay appearance under the light of their torches. Tally one more for Holland! The memorial services of President Garfield on Monday last, on the day of the day of his funeral were a decided success. The first Reformed Church which was magnanimously tendered for these services, was beautifully draped, and some fine taste was displayed in the execution of his works. The building was full to overflowing. The clergy were well represented, and they and the professors of Hope college made some eloquent remarks appropriate to the occasion. Toward the closing of the services ex mayor Cappon arose and read the card issued to the American people by the Cleveland committee for the raising of a Garfield monument by subscription not exceeding one dollar each, and moved that the mayor be requested by the meeting to appoint a suitable committee for that purpose, and that their names be sent in by message to the Common Council, in order to make it a matter of official record. The motion was seconded by Mr. H. Walsh, and carried by a rising vote—one man, whose name we shall omit, risked the negative.

The temple was elaborately decorated in white and green; palms, ferns, smilax, roses and carnations being used in the display. The bridal couple took their places before the altar, beneath a large horseshoe of smilax and carnations, while potted plants were in front and behind the altar. The rail and alter were entwined with smilax and white greenhouse flowers were arranged upon the altar, which, with the illuminations of candles, presented a magnificent appearance. The bride was attired in white Duchess satin, en train, wore a white veil and carried diamonds and bride's roses. After the ceremony the bridal party and guests were driven to the American House, where a reception, banquet and dance ensued. After congratulations the company partook of an elaborate wedding supper, served in a very handsomely decorated dining room. Cable and telegrams were received bearing congratulations. ## WOMEN'S WOES.

Holland Women are Finding Relief at Las.

It does seem that women have more than a fair share of the aches and pains that afflict humanity; they must "keep up," must attend to duties in spite of constantly aching backs, or headaches, dizzy spells, bearing-down pains; they must stoop over, when to stoop means torture. They must walk and bend and work with racking pains and many aches from kidney ills. Sick kidneys cause more suffering than any other organ of the body. Keep the kidneys well and much suffering is saved. Read of a remedy for kidneys only that is endorsed by people you know.

Mrs. Edwin McCarty, 290 Van Raalte Ave., Holland, Mich., says: "I cannot say too much in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills, as they are the best remedy I ever used. Backache caused so much suffering and I was subject to spells of dizziness. None of the remedies I tried brought me relief until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills. They not only removed the pains in my back, but corrected the difficulty with the kidney secretions. Another member of my family has taken Doan's Kidney Pills and has been helped as greatly as I."

THE NEW RATIO.

Speaker Clark, talking in Chicago for publication, said that the Democratic victory next year will be a tidal wave. We say, when a thing is really cocksure of happening: "It's all over but the shouting." When the shouting comes first, there is sometimes reason to suspect that those doing it are not as cocksure as they pretend to be. But this can hardly be said of Champ. He is always cocksure of a Democratic victory at the next election, and he always means it. He had roseate dreams of the election of Parker in 1904. Every two years between 1892 and 1910 he was predicting the election of a Democratic House. The thing happened at last because it had to happen under the law of probabilities.

All of that is old. But the speaker, at Chicago, proclaimed a new Democratic ratio. Sixteen to one is down and out. Two to one is the ratio now. This is a goodly shrinkage, but Champ admits it. "I don't think it will be an ordinary defeat for the Republicans," said he. "We will beat them two to one." This is overplaying the law of probabilities, and it is a part of that law that, when it is overplayed, it reacts. A Republican defeat at such a ratio next year is so far from being a probability that it is not even a possibility. Mr. Clark must not so tamper with the law which is the only thing that has ever enabled him to call the turn. The laws of chance are as immutable in their va-

"Sixteen to one or bust!" cried the Democratic party in 1896—and "bust-ed." Going into the campaign of 1912 with such a foolish cry as "two to one or bust!" it would "bust" again. ## The Yellowstone Wonders.

Dr. Arnold Hague shows that there is a strong contrast between the geological conditions connected with the geysers of Iceland and those of the Yellowstone park. Volcanic eruptions may be said geologically to be still going on in Iceland, while in the Yellowstone such action ceased many thousands of years ago. The Yellowstone phenomena as seen today represent a phase in the evolution of thermal springs. The tendency of a geyser is to develop a hot surface pool, after which explosive action may cease and the geyser, as such, become extinct, but this is a very slow process. Dr. Hague rejects the idea that the cessation of activity in a geyser indicates the dissipation of the original source of heat and ascribes it simply to a shifting of the channel of the ascending waters.

Money in the Laundry.

Three little heaps of silver and copper coin lay on the laundryman's counter.

"That is money that I have just found tied in the corners of customers' handkerchiefs," he said. "It is strange that with all the purses and hand bags manufactured for the accommodation of women so many of them will still tie their money up in a handkerchief. Sending it to the laundry is funnier still. Every day we dig out a little pile of unsuspected wealth, and many a careless customer gets her laundry back with nearly enough money in the package to pay the bill."—New York Sun.

A GREAT SCHEME NIPPED IN THE BUD

The Geeville Trumpet Blast of Freedom Stands Pat.

By-Product of Pork Falls Utterly as a Weather Prognoscicator.

By ED MOTT.

Cold weather had come on quite early that fall, and I was writing a hurry call for stove wood on subscription to the Trumpet Blast of Freedom, to go in the paper that week, when one of the fattest men I ever saw came into the office. He was in his shirt sleeves, and wore a broad-brimmed straw hat. Without noticing my surprise, and before I had time to recover from it, he came up close, and in a mysterious undertone said: "Am I correct in assuming that you are the editor?"

I told him he was.

"And publisher?"

"Yes," I said. "And publisher."

Business manager went along with it, I assured him. He then said: "Then we can come to business. I see by scanning the columns of your estimable paper that you are not running any clothing store advertisements. The local tailor shops seem to ignore you. The patronage of the outfitters of men as to garb doesn't show up a bit in your paper, which I see you furnish at the ridiculously low price of one dollar a year, in advance; one fifty if paid at the end of the year. Worth three times the money. I say I see the shops that make clothing their business don't seem to have discovered you."

There was only one tailor and one ready-made clothing store in Geeville, and it was true that neither of them a thing or two. That's what I've done this fall. When I killed my pigs the other day I directed my attention as usual to a spot under the diaphragm of the most prognostic-looking pig I had, and removed the viscous from the left hypocondrium. Now, in going for the pig's milt in its unfailing capacity of weather prophet, let me tell you in passing, just notice if the big end of it, the small end of it, or the middle of it is bigger than by normal condition it ought to be. One or t'other of 'em is bound to be so.

"If it's the big end, get things ready for the coming in of an early winter, and a winter that'll make things crack. If it's the middle part that is exaggerated, you needn't count on having any fun skating or sleigh-riding with your girl not before the fog end of January."

"That's the way the pig's milt casts the meteorological horoscope. I have looked it over for this year, and I want to tell you that the small end of the milt has a nub on it bigger than a prize rutabaga. So you can keep right on wearing your last summer's clothes until almost time for Johnny jump-ups to push their noses up, and then you can tide over the weather that may drop down for a spell about then by taking the old ulster from the peg, for it'll be too late to buy any new winter clothes. Too late. No use at all."

"Yes, yes. Put your trust in the viscous situated in the left hypocondrium, under the diaphragm, and—do you follow me? See the cinch? In your mind's eye do you see the tailors and the clothiers on the run for head of column, next to reading matter, in your invaluable Trumpet Blast of Freedom?"

I tried to see it, but somehow my mind's vision seemed all blurred, and I told the pig's milt expert so.

"What!" he exclaimed. "Don't see how important it will be to tailors and clothiers to keep this quiet? Don't see how, if this should get out and

MAN OF FALLEN FORTUNES

He Was Stirred to New Ambition by the Act of a Cigar Salesman.

"Cigars of the brand I used to smoke," said the man of fallen fortunes, "are, like those of many others, made in various shapes and sizes, to be sold at various prices, and of my favorite brand there was one particular size and shape that especially pleased my fancy and that I always smoked. Stogies I usually smoke now, but occasionally, when I feel that I can spare the money, I go in and buy a few of those fine cigars."

"For one of these occasional fond smokes I went in this morning and, looking down into the case, I named my brand and reaching into the case the salesman brought out a box. But these were not of my size and shape; I indicated the ones I wanted, and the salesman brought out that box—cigars at six for a dollar, of which I now took three. I noted casually the card on the box which the salesman had first brought out, and that card I confess gave me a little thrill of pleasure and then, what was better, a stir of ambition."

"The cigars in that other box were three for a dollar, and had not the salesman brought them out to me confidently as if I were that sort of a customer? He certainly had, and I must look it. And if I looked it, why should I not be it? Why should I continue to be a stogie man? Why should I not retrieve my fallen fortunes and far surpass them—come to be not merely a six but a three for a dollar man?"

WHAT TRUE EDUCATION IS

Rev. Charles M. Sheldon's Idea of the Right Development of the Human Mind.

What is an education? It is the right development, in the right direction, all the time, of the whole being, for the purpose of giving one as much life as possible for himself, and to share with others.

This means that the whole person must be taken into account. Education means more than a one-sided development of one talent or ability. It means symmetrical and many-sided growth. The reason why there are not more interesting people in the world is because so many people are content with a one-sided development. They are willing to be musicians and nothing but musicians. They are willing to be newspaper men and nothing but newspaper men. They are willing to be lawyers and nothing but lawyers; teachers and nothing but teachers; ministers and nothing but ministers. And so their range of thinking, of conversation, and of action is limited. True education takes into account a whole being, with many different possibilities—a life which has in it the elements of surprise and an eagerness to know everything which can be known about a very great world in order to sympathize with and enter into the thought, so far as possible, of all sorts and conditions of men.—Rev. Charles M. Sheldon in the Christian Herald.

One on the Locusts.

"You know," said Silas, as he drove Mr. Commuter to the station, "them there seventeen-year-locusts is curious beasts. Oh, I've watched them, I know their ways. They comes up out of the ground and they makes for the nearest tree, and they climbs up the trunk till they gets to the leaves. Leaves is what they're after!"

"T'other day I seen a man standin' in the road, a-lookin' up at a telegraph pole and a-laughin' to beat the band. 'Wot yer laughin' at, friend?' says I."

"See all them dom seventeen-year-old locusts, a-scuttlin' and a-scurryin' up that there pole?" says he.

"Yes," says I, "what of it?"

"I'm just a-thinkin'," he says, a-most doublin' up laughin', "what an April fool it'll be for them when they gets to the top!"

Cleaning Gilt Frames.

Where is the home that has not its quota of gilt frames, be they tiny and few or large and many? And the problem of keeping them bright, how many know it? This is information that ought to be pasted in your scrap-book on one of the pages "C" for cleaning.

For cleaning gilt frames there is nothing better than a wad of fresh bread sprinkled with a few drops of benzine and ammonia (benzine away from fire) and you will find that the moisture in the bread is enough to absorb the stronger qualities of the ammonia and what remains of it on the surface is sufficient to supply the frames with a pretty appearance of newness. Wash off the frame afterwards with water in which a little borax has been added.

College Women and Marriage.

A good many women do not marry. Probably the proportion of marriage worthy the name would be found, if we could make an accurate census, as large among college women as among others. It is not a college course that takes a woman out of the marrying class, but something with which her education has rarely anything to do—native traits, or domestic responsibilities, or the lack of a calling for matrimony, or accident, or any of a thousand things which might have diverted the current of your career, and mine without our voluntary complicity.—Francis E. Leupp, in the Atlantic.

GREAT OHIO RIVER IMPROVEMENT.

THE FERNBANK DAM

THE formal opening of the great Fernbank dam near Cincinnati the other day marked a long step forward in the improvement of the Ohio river as a traffic water way. Very appropriately, too, the event came on the centennial of the first steamboat trip down that river, made by Captain Ro:sevelt, a great-uncle of the ex-president. The Fernbank dam, for which $1,300,000 was appropriated, is part of the general scheme to create a nine-foot stage in the river from Pittsburg to Cairo.

"Put Your Trust in the Viscous, Situated in the Left Hypocondrium, Under the Diaphragm."

had taken advantage of the Trumpet Blast's columns to boom their trade, in which particular, however, they were in no way unique among the tradesmen of Geeville.

"No," said I, smiling at the protest against this delinquency of the clothing men that seemed to lie in the mysterious stranger's manner, "they haven't come in yet."

"Well," said he, with no little positiveness, "we'll bring 'em in! Just listen to me and act, and we'll have the tailors and the clothing store men tumbling over each other to get here first with their ads. I've got a cinch on 'em that is yours if you'll listen and act. I've killed it and it's all right."

This startled me some, and I looked up quick. The man didn't look crazy, but I thought he certainly must be.

"Ah," said the man, showing satisfaction. "Few do know the pig's milt as a weather prophet. There's where this cinch of mine is. That's what's going to make the tailors and the clothiers come across to you if you'll listen to me and act. Yes. Weather prophesying. That's about all there really is to the pig's milt. I have known it intimately for forty years, and that's all the use I've ever discovered that it had. If you think there is any other use the pig's milt puts itself to, see the dictionary. Look it up."

The man seemed so eager that I should know, and I wanted to keep on the right side of him so much until help of some kind might come in, that I turned to the dictionary and the "milt." The principal duty of milt, according to the dictionary, I found to be this:

"Milt; a viscous situated in the left hypocondrium, under the diaphragm; see melt."

"But you needn't see melt," said the man, nodding his head as I read from the dictionary. "If you see melt it will merely advise you to 'see milt.' Having seen milt, you will of course serve no purpose by calling on it again, and you have learned all there is to learn in the dictionary about milt. But long familiarity with it and personal observation of it have taught me that pig's milt is a weather prognoscicator so infallible that, if folks only knew it, the Kentucky goose bone and the woodchuck burrow and the corn husk covering and the muskrat nest and all the rest of the old weather prophesying standbys would find their occupations gone. Infallible? Why, say! For forty years, whenever I kill my pigs in the fall, I have read the sign of the milt the very first thing, and then I know

WHERE COLONEL NEWCOME ENDED HIS DAYS

THE CHARTERHOUSE, LONDON

IN this, the centennial year of William Makepeace Thackeray, visitors to London have been especially eager to seek out the places intimately connected with the books of the great novelist. One of these is the Charterhouse, a hospital for poor gentlemen founded by Thomas Sutton in 1611. To this retreat Colonel Newcome in "The Newcomes" goes to end his days after the loss of his fortune. Thackeray draws a touching picture of the colonel's life among the Poor Brothers, and of his death in a room in the old buildings. In the accompanying photograph the buildings at the right date from the medieval Cartusian monastery, and those in the background are more modern dwellings for the Poor Brothers.
