On board
Pres. Hoover—
Going to Manila.

My own dear family:—

Will this heading surprise you, or have the newspapers told you of the evacuation of foreigners from Shanghai? If so, you probably guessed we might be in it. Well, we are, and we have a long, long story to tell!

If ever we proved the truth of the words: "A thousand shall fall at thy side, and 10,000 at thy right hand, but it shall not come nigh thee"—we have done so this trip. Will try to give you a record of our experiences since I last wrote.

As you know, Christine Wang, (a Chinese teacher) and I attended the General Assembly in Tsingtao, while Jean Nienhuis spent those two weeks in the Missionary Home there. During the Assembly, rumors of trouble between China and Japan became more and more serious. Many delegates had similar plans to our own, viz., to go up to Peiping after Assembly. Because of fighting up there, no one was able to go, however, and so most of the delegates left Tsingtao on July 31st for Shanghai to return from there in various directions for their homes.

Mr. Kooppe went back at that time also. We decided, since we could not visit Peiping, that we might better stay in in Tsingtao for the rest of a week or two before returning to Amoy. Accordingly, Christine and I joined Jean at the Missionary Home where we had a lovely restful time.

Because of the uncertainty in the atmosphere, we got busy at once arranging for steamer passage to Shanghai and from there to Amoy, so that in case of sudden trouble we should be able to get out. We negotiated through the Chinese pastor there, through the Chinese pastor, then, just before the week we planned to leave, he sent word that he had done his utmost, but because of unsettled conditions, so many were leaving that all steamers were full and it was impossible to get passage of any kind. Just as it began to look as though we really were stranded in Tsingtao, we were informed that the railway line was open and that the trains of Chinese jamming the tracks the previous week had ceased, so that travel by this route was very possible. We made up our minds to start at once, for the news of troubled conditions was growing increasingly threatening and the quicker we could get back to Amoy the more at ease we would be.

On Wednesday, Aug. 11th, we started on the first lap of our journey—a ten-hour trip from Tsingtao to Tsinan, which is the capital of Shantung province. We landed at 11:00 P. M., found our way to the Y.W.C.A. hotel, and had a fairly good night's rest. We decided to spend the day in Tsinan, as we might never have another opportunity to get to Tsinan with a Chinese nurse who has worked in Jean Nienhuis' hospital this past year—she was just home for vacation—and she did her best to give us a worthwhile day. We saw Cheloo University, the famous Tsinan Springs, had a lovely ride at sunset on the lake, and got back to the hotel about 8:00 P. M. Our plan was to take the 5:00 A. M. train the next morning, stopping on the way to Nanjing at Confucius' birthplace, but when Christine and I hurried over to get these tickets we heard things in Shanghai were serious, and decided we'd better move as soon as possible. There was a through train to Nanjing going out at 9:15. It was then 8:20. We rushed back to the Y.W.C.A. packed, and got back to the station just in the nick of time. Had no more time to get into the train than it pulled out. We had taken a sleeper, so had a comfortable night on the train, arriving in Nanjing the next day on schedule time at 3:30 P. M.

Here the first hint of trouble met us. At the station there were two missionaries saying it was impossible to get to Shanghai—all services were discontinued because of the severe fighting in Shanghai. It was Friday afternoon, and we were headed for the Nurses' association headquarters of which Jean is a member. Christine was going to Gilling College where she is planning to stay this year to do research work. Before we could start, however, we must wait for our checked baggage. Waited for nearly two hours in vain, only to be told that baggage was so congested we might have to wait several days before it could come through. That was the first of a series of adverse circumstances which caused us to end up on this steamer for Manila. Our comfort through it all has been that "God knows the way. He holds the key. He guides us with unerring hand."

Minus the major part of our baggage, we finally found ourselves at the Nurses' Home, while Christine went on to Gilling. We were grateful for a clean, quiet place to stay. The next day we inquired about our baggage and also about trains. Baggage not in sight, and no trains whatever. Upon returning, Christine suggested we do some sight-seeing—she has lived in Nanjing for 8 years, so knows it well. We had little heart for it, yet it did no one any good to sit still at home, so we set out. Jean saw Nanjing last spring at the time of the Nurses' Conference, so she decided to stay in to rest. We found Christine's nephew (he had just come to Nanjing to take college entrance exams) and two other Amoy boys, so that we started out with the five of us to Sun Yat Sen's tomb. Had a great time sight-seeing, ending up with supper at a Chinese restaurant, after which we returned to the Nurses' Home. Everything was as quiet and peaceful in Nanjing as one could wish for—not a hint of trouble anywhere.

THREE GIRLS IN WAR ZONE FROM HOLLAND

In the letter on this and page two from Tena Holkeboer of Holland, giving a gripping story of the Japanese slaughter in the Orient, it is well to place the personnel mentioned in the letter. Miss Tena Holkeboer is a Holland girl, whose mother and family live in this city. Miss Jean Nienhuis also comes from this vicinity, North Holland, and has many relatives living in Holland and surroundings. Miss Nettie De Jong also comes from Holland and is well acquainted throughout Ottawa County.

These missionaries have been in China for a number of years and have witnessed many trials and hardships, but the war in China is undoubtedly the most trying situation during their stay in the Orient. Miss Holkeboer and Miss Nienhuis, except for furloughs, have been in China for at least fifteen years. The companions of Miss Tena Holkeboer, mentioned in the letter, are all educated, Christian Chinese, the results of her work in the Far East.

On Sunday (Aug. 15) morning, we felt we must pursue our inquiries about baggage and trains, so Christine and I set out. After this we intended to go to Gilling and have a quiet service together, staying on until time for the English church service at 5:00 P. M. Such were our plans—soon we'll see how much of them were carried out!

We went to baggage headquarters to search for our baggage. What a relief when we finally discovered one piece among the piles! In a short time all 4 pieces had come to light. With them in rickshas, we made our way to the R.R. station. To our joy we learned that the first through train to Shanghai was going out that night at midnight and we could reserve passage on the sleeper. Reservations made, baggage checked, we started back with light hearts, feeling that God was indeed guiding, opening our way step by step.

I forgot to tell you that in Tsingtao we had been able to get steamer passage from Shanghai to Amoy, the steamer scheduled leave Shanghai on Tuesday, Aug. 17th. By getting this train out on Sunday night, we should be able to make our steamer for Amoy on Tuesday, without difficulty. We got back to Jean at 1:00 P. M. and prepared to go out to a restaurant for dinner. Just as we got to the door on our way out, a peculiar whistle sounded. Those in the house called to us not to go out, as this was the warning signal for an air raid. The whole place was closed up tight, while all remained close together on the first floor. Soon we heard the whir of the planes, and then the battle was on. Oh, the deafening roar of bombs and machine guns—it was terrible. It was two hours before the signal was given that all was over. Poor Christine worried about her young nephew, so I suggested I would go out with her to find him. No one thought of dinner. We set out to gether, expecting to take rickshas to the school. No rickshas would take us, so we went out walking, a policeman directing us to the back gate of the school. When we got there the gates were closed to open, saying he had strict orders to open to no one, telling us to go to the main entrance. Just then it started to rain. We started running around the compound wall—it must have been at least a mile around to the main gate. We had gone no more than halfway when the signal for another air raid sounded. What to do? There was nothing to do but trust God and go forward. We ran on reaching the main entrance just as the planes appeared. Here we stood under the trees (the safest spot we could find) and watched the bombs drop on the airfield much less than a mile away. When the raid was over we found

Farmers Day In Holland 55 Years Ago — Farmers Day This Saturday

Now that Farmers' Day is to be held Saturday and the entire countryside is expected to be the guest of Holland, the Chamber of Commerce, the merchants' division and Prairie Farmer, it would be well to picture just what Farmers' Day was in Holland fifty-five years ago. You see above a real, old-fashioned Market Day, when the farmers came to town with cows, horses, poultry, hogs, and the products of the farm, and on that day it was all barter and sale—in some instances cash was paid, but more often part of it went in "store trade." That has been a thing of the past for a long time.

The picture shows very few horses. The horses were largely around the livery barns—Boone's, Harrington's, Nibbelink's, Havelka's, and other livery, where horses and buggies were for rent, and where "horse-trading" was part of the livery business. Anyone wanting a horse, whether private citizen or a horse owner, would be seen around the livery barns on Market Day, endeavoring to find what he desired for his purpose, picked from the droves the farmers brought to town. There were many horse suits in justice court, between farmer and citizen, the outgrowth of this horse trading.

Anyway, Market Day was looked forward to with nearly as much interest as a 4th of July. The fairgrounds, until the time fairs were discontinued, was on East 16th St. We might go on indefinitely, giving stories of Market Days, horse-trading, and fairs, but space forbids going into detail at this time. The picture shows the south half of 8th St., then Main St., from River Ave., East. The buildings now located there are the Vander Veen building, occupied by Yonker's Drug Store, Pieper's Jewelry Store, Fabiano's Confectionery store, the Spritama block, occupied by John Pieper, Optometrist, Fris Book Store, the Boot and Kramer building, occupied by the Holland City News and C. Thomas store, and the old Vander Veen building. You will notice that only part of the corner Vander Veen building had been built. Some years later the second store was erected. That is the store now occupied by Post's Jewelry. The corner store is now headquarters for Brink and Schilling's food store.

The buildings as they appear in this picture: first, is the Koningburg boarding house, conducted by an old German. It was a three-story frame building. The next is Jap Kuite's meat market. He was the grandfather of "Sonny" Kuite and alderman for many years. The next is Peter Brown's saloon, a man who never allowed a "drunk" in his place. If a man "in his cups" came in, he would simply say, "I dank you got enough," and that was that, and the customer knew it was time to walk out. The small building is the old Holland City Bank, conducted by Jap Van Putten. This was the foundation of the Holland City State Bank later.

The next building became the Boot and Kramer Grocery store. It was the old E. Vander Veen Hardware Building, which is evident from the sign, until the brick structure was put up and the pioneer hardware man, the first in Holland, father of John Vander Veen, occupied that site for at least a half century. This tells briefly just what part of 8th St is shown in this picture.

Well, Farmers' Day, Saturday, will not be anything like this. The skyline of fifty-five years ago presented wooden shacks. Today all these have been replaced with substantial, commodious structures of brick and stone, indicative of the progress this city has made. The transformation shown here is also evident in every part of the city, whether that be in the business district, the manufacturing area, the residential district, or Holland's environs. We are indeed proud of this community and its development, and proud of our neighbors all about, where this same kind of development has been apparent for years.

Anthony Nienhuis, of the local post office, has acted as secretary for many years.

Dick Boter has put in ten years in the young peoples' work division. During the administration of George Schulling, covering a period of seventeen years, the Ottawa County Sunday School Association has developed what is termed, "The Departmental Program" in the Sunday School. Just how these different departments are divided from very young children to the older grown is fully given in the official program of this convention, together with the heads of the different departments as they exist today.

During recent years the high school oratorical contest has also been inaugurated and developed. Each year a religious subject is chosen by the department of education of the association, and on this subject the high school students in every part of the county, eight high schools in all, send their winners to a centralized contest, where the best orator, girl or boy, is chosen. For many years cash prizes have been offered and won by different contestants, the amount of the prizes varying with the years.

During the last three years the Ottawa County Sunday School Association has been supplying the Ottawa County Infirmary with able speakers and music for Sunday services so these unfortunate can also receive the Word of God and find solace in these Bible truths. Before this new program, meetings were only held six months of the year. However, today religious services are held at this institution the year around.

The Ottawa County Sunday School Association has developed the convention idea to such an extent that today there is no county in the state that can equal Ottawa County in record of attendance and in the programs given. It is a wholesome "get-together," where there is an exchange of ideas, comparing of notes, discussing of policies, changing of methods, or adopting new ones. The results of these gatherings, held annually in different parts of the county, have been very gratifying. The communities have vied with one another in playing "host the best" for the outside guests.

This Ottawa County gathering, the fiftieth anniversary, when Holland will be host, reminds us of another large convention held in this city, when the Ottawa County Sunday School Association was host to the parent organization, namely, the State Sunday School Association. It was the fifty-sixth annual convention of the Sunday School of the State of Michigan, held in November, 1916.

John Vander Sluis was then mayor and gave the address of welcome. Henry Geerlings was chosen the state chairman of the organization at that time. Hon. G. J. Diekema was not only a speaker, but filled so many places during that week as toastmaster, presiding officer, and speaker, that Holland then, as it has done many times since, felt that this townsmen was a very loyal and helpful citizen.

Carnegie Hall was headquarters for most of the meetings and the musical program, which, as usual, was in charge of John Vander Sluis, despite the fact that he was the mayor at that time.

One large meeting was held in the Knickerbocker Theater, now the Holland, donated for that purpose. At this meeting the late E. K. Warren, chairman of the executive committee of the Michigan Sunday School Association and president of the International Sunday School Association, gave a discourse to a gathering that crowded the theater to capacity. Mr. Warren was a forceful speaker and not only was he a hard worker in the ranks, but being a man of considerable wealth, donated a large part of his fortune to Sunday School work.

It would be well to reprint a paragraph from a newspaper file, in which Chairman Warren introduced the Hon. G. J. Diekema as a man who needs no introduction in the State of Michigan. In answer Mr. Diekema gave tribute to the presiding officer by naming him the greatest Sunday School worker on earth.

Some of the speakers were Bishop Hartwell of Africa; Dr. Anne Venema, President of Hope College; Rev. Henry Beets, D. D.; Miss Cynthia Maus; Mrs. H. M. Leyba; Rev. W. A. Brown; Frederick Goodrich, Jr., speaking for the young people; Prof. E. O. Sellers, Moody's Bible Institute; W. B. Phillips, state chairman of the Sunday School Association, whom Henry Geerlings succeeded; Rev. J. G. Benson, D. D.; Prof. F. S. Goodrich, general secretary of the association; and others.

Carnegie Hall during the convention was beautifully decorated with flags of all nations, and dotted around the convention hall were appropriate mottoes and slogans, inspiring to the delegates present. The review of this convention covers three pages of a newspaper, and is altogether too voluminous to be given in this short review.

It is well to mention, the climax to the convention was a splendid parade with beautiful floats, exemplifying the spirit of the Sunday School. In that parade the most inspiring feature was the singing of "Onward, Christian Soldiers," a continued refrain by the thousands of marchers in this pageant, accompanied by the several band organizations placed at intervals in the marching column.

The convention was an unprecedented success and well handled by the local committees and the state men in charge.

We could go on indefinitely reviewing columns of the Ottawa County Sunday School Association, its aims and its achievements. This short review, however, is indicative that much has been accomplished and that the celebrating of this Golden Anniversary is indeed apropos.

This subject matter was taken from the files of the Holland City News covering a period of a half century, and the compilation of this history is by your editor. Supervisor Willard C. Wickers and staff, through the good offices of the Government Historical Record Survey, assisted materially in gathering data from the files of the News, covering a period of fifty years, as this relates to the history of the Ottawa County Sunday School Association.

INTERESTING ARTICLES AP- PEARING IN THIS WEEK'S NEWS

On page 1, section 3, will be found a letter from Dr. John Banning, missionary in India, who writes on the gathering of delegates selected from all church denominations of the world. Mr. Banning was a delegate, and his letter is not only interesting, but instructive.

On page 1, section 2, are pictures of a new method to build houses, an invention of Frank Bolhuis of this city.

On this page appears a personal letter of Miss Tena Holkeboer of Holland, who has been an eye-witness to the bombings and killings now going on in China.

On this page will be found a concise history of the Ottawa County Sunday School Association, covering a period of fifty years. This data was gleaned from the files of the Holland City News covering a half century.

The Holland City News wishes to say that Saturday of this week is Farmers' Day, and a pretentious program by the Prairie Farmer folk has been arranged for the afternoon and evening, to be held at the Armory. The News wishes to add its welcome to the "tillers of the soil" from this area, together with the welcome already extended by the Holland Chamber of Commerce and the merchants' division of that body.

The column, Fifty Years Ago Today, an interesting feature, had to be omitted for one week only for the reason that already considerable historic matter appears in today's issue. It will re-appear next week as usual.

ALL READY FOR FARMERS' DAY SATURDAY

The program for Farmers' Day, Saturday, was officially given in the Holland City News last week. It is expected at least 3,500 farmers from Ottawa and Allegan Counties will come to Holland to hear the Prairie Farmer program in the afternoon and evening at 2:00 p.m. and at 7:30 p.m. Henry Geerlings will give the address of welcome and admission to the Armory will be by complimentary ticket for farmers only.

The Holland greeters who will meet our neighbors are composed of the following committee:—William Durr, James Boter, Martin Verburg, James Nibbelink, Isaac Kouw, W. A. Butler, John Kelly, J. A. Hoover, and Ben Mulder.

MANY SPECIAL SALES FOR SATURDAY

With Farmers' Day it is only fitting that the merchants put on a sales' day. Many of the merchants of Holland have availed themselves of this opportunity, and a score or more are putting out some very attractive bargains for Saturday. It would be well for prospective purchasers to peruse the columns of the News for Farmers' Day bargains, and there are many, and naturally this is also good news.

MRS. COX GOES BACK EAST

Mrs. W. R. Cox of West Orange, N. J., who was staying with her mother, Mrs. George Van Duren, has returned to her home in the East. It will be remembered that her husband passed away suddenly and interment took place in the Van Duren plot in Pilgrim Home Cemetery.

Mr. Cox was interested in a large tannery in the East, where he was the manager, and his sons are also identified with that institution. Mrs. Cox has gone to her home in order to look after her interests there. For some years Mr. Cox was identified with the old Cappon-Bertsch Leather Co., Holland's first industry which grew to tremendous proportions. Today this plant is located on the north side and is owned and operated by the Armour Co.

The tannery in the East is called the Wm. Cox Tanning Co. A daughter, Emily Jane Cox, is secretary and Wm. P. Cox, Jr., is assistant secretary. It is said to be a thriving tanning enterprise.

FLOWER BLOOMS UNSEEN UNDER DARK PORCH

One of the most peculiar floral stories of the year came to light during the Coopersville's flower show last Saturday. When Mrs. Lina Hutchins moved from her home on East Ave., last June, she placed an amaryllis bulb under the porch, with the intention of letting it "sleep" until fall. Shortly before the show opened, she noticed a flash of color, as she was passing the porch. Investigation revealed that the bulb, which was supposed to have been resting, had blossomed. Mrs. Hutchins brought the bulb to light with its two blossoms and had it on display at the show. Coopersville Observer.

HAMILTON PUPILS ATTENDING HOLLAND SCHOOLS

Several Hamilton students returned to their respective schools last week and several others commenced school. Those commencing at Holland high school are: Joyce Lohman, Joyce Kooiker, Gladys Bultman, Pearl Bartels, Elwyn Maastman and Donald Lohman.

Others attending high school are: Miss Henrietta Brower and Gordon Dangremont. These students started school last Tuesday morning.

Hope College students from Hamilton first attended College Wednesday morning, when they met at the annual convocation services at the college chapel. Rev. Leonard Greenway of Grand Haven delivered the address. Those students from Hamilton attending college are the Misses Mildred and Dorothy Strabbing and Julius Lubbers.

Mrs. B. Huisenga quietly celebrated her 77th birthday anniversary Wednesday.

Allegan Co., In Part, to Close to all Hunters

8,000 Acres Involved in Area; Farmers Co-operate

An interesting experiment in the restoration of farm-land game will be carried out this fall by a group of farmers in the northern part of Allegan county.

Led by the Dorr Sportsmen's club, farmers of this vicinity are now posting 8,000 acres of land with no-hunting signs.

For farmers to ban visiting hunters in southern Michigan these days is not especially unusual. But the Allegan county farmers are going a step farther than that. They are signing written agreements to permit no hunting at all on their lands for a period of one year, either by visitors or by the owners of the farms themselves.

By renouncing their own hunting rights as well as by closing their lands to others, the farmers hope to bring about a substantial increase in pheasants, cottontail rabbits and squirrels. State game men say the game supply in this district was at a low ebb last fall and praise the closing of the 8,000 acre tract as a worthwhile move to bring back the depleted wildlife population.

If the game increases as much as sponsors of the plan hope, the areas will be thrown open to hunting in the fall of 1938 under the Williamson plan of regulation, with the state conservation department cooperating and with visiting hunters required to obtain written permits. To date the conservation department has taken no hand in the project.

Unfortunately much of the land involved is sandy and does not normally produce a heavy crop of game. This will make it difficult to judge the results of the one-year closed season and will reduce the value of the experiment, conservationists point out.

A GAME FIGHT

Whatever may be the final outcome of the fighting around Shanghai, the Chinese troops in that sector have displayed qualities that command the respect of the world. Japanese officers freely admit that.

The Chinese have had certain tactical advantages.

They are fighting on their own soil, and in a narrow, fan-shaped area, which tapers down to a point at the junction of the Whangpoo and Yangtze Rivers, where the Japanese have to land.

They can fall back, if necessary, foot by foot, and mine the land they abandon to embarrass the oncoming enemy.

The Japanese are handicapped by the lack of room in which to maneuver.

The Chinese forces in this area outnumber the Japanese by three or four to one, a large proportion of them has been intensively trained by foreign officers, and they have the benefit of these officers' counsel and advice in their operations in the field.

Against these advantages must be offset the fact that the Chinese are facing a highly organized, well-equipped army enjoying a reputation of never having been beaten in a modern war, which is backed up by a navy infinitely superior to their own.

The Chinese, confronted with this situation, are showing a courage and tenacity that must be giving the Japanese cause to ponder the immediate losses they are suffering, if not the final outcome of the war.

Japan is not in a financial position to stand a long and costly war. China has millions of men it can feed to the cannons, although not many of them are properly trained and equipped, and if it is willing to pay the price in blood, there is a possibility that it may be able to prolong the struggle until Japan cracks up at home.

The Japanese people are capable of great sacrifices, but even their patience and patriotism cannot support forever the demands of war upon their purses and their manpower.

Tena Holkeboer Midst Of China Air Bombing

The three Amoy boys. They had already been called home by telegrams a few days before, so we discussed plans to take them with us that evening upon leaving Nanking. Jean and I had berths reserved on the train and also a cabin on the steamer, so we felt it worst came to worst we could take Christine and the three boys in with us. Two of the boys had an uncle there who was responsible for them and he advised them not to leave, so the four of us—Christine, her nephew, Jean and myself—prepared to get off on the midnight train.

Later
Have just attended church service—a very fine sermon on the second psalm by a Southern Baptist Missionary, Rev. Ware. Now to resume my story.

We returned to the Nurses' Association, packed as fast as we could, trying to get to the station before dark, as the city was in state of panic and confusion. No taxis were available, and rickshaws which ordinarily charge 30c a trip, demanded $1.00 fare. We were thankful to get them at any price, and went off in a pouring rain to the station. Here confusion reigned. Crowds kept pouring in—whole families with bag and baggage—all terrified by the air raids and seeking some place of shelter. How thankful we were to know our berths were assured, for before long people actually got to be in their struggle to get to the ticket window. We snatched a lunch at the station at about 8:30 (had nothing since breakfast), went out to buy some food supplies, for we did not know what might be available on the train. Christine's nephew gave us some anxiety because he had agreed to meet us at the station at 8:00, and by 10:00 he had not yet arrived. He got in about 10:30—had been unable to get a conveyance to take him to the station. Our hearts at rest, we got into the train and settled down for the night. At eight the next morning we were shoved off on a platform and were left there most of the day, making way for the troop trains. By noon it became apparent we could not get to Shanghai that afternoon, as had been promised. Instead, at 4:00 P. M. found us crawling into Soochow, near which we had stopped in the morning. At the Soochow station we were surrounded by troops, all on their way to Shanghai. Just as we got there, there was the sound of planes overhead, and once more we find ourselves in an air-raid. We did not learn till the next day that the very station at which we were stopping was the object of the Japanese attack, because of the many troops just then concentrated at that point. What we did see was the anti-aircraft guns just by the side of our tracks—ready for action. The paper stated that the Japanese missed their aim at Soochow because of the low-hanging clouds. They dared not fly low because of the anti-aircraft guns. We saw them dropping bombs into the city of Soochow, but could not tell what damage they were doing. Soon after this we started moving, and by evening our porter told us we could pack, for we would get to Shanghai by 9:00 P. M. No lights of any kind were allowed in the train, however, for the lights of Japanese planes were sighted high overhead, and a lighted train would be a splendid target for them. So, with the help of a flash, we managed to get packed, and waited for the signal to get off. Instead of that, at about 10:00 P. M., the porter came in to say we could go to sleep, for there was no hope of getting to Shanghai before morning. Though only a short distance away from Shanghai, there were 5 bridges still to be crossed, and it was feared the Japanese bombs might have damaged one or more. We went to sleep, feeling safe in God's care. Others in the train said they had been up all night, as we had been in such imminent danger. At daylight we started, only to stop soon because one of the couplers had broken and we had to back up to the nearest station for repairs. It was hard at this time to really trust and not worry, for this was the day our steamer was to sail for Amoy, and delay now might mean missing our steamer. Meanwhile, all day Monday and also this Tuesday morning we met trainloads after trainloads of refugees leaving Shanghai. It was a sight to make one's heart ache. Both freight cars and passenger cars were jammed with human freight—pressed so close together that it was impossible for anyone to move an inch. Not only the inside was packed, but the roofs of the cars as well—to the very edge. There were men clinging to each rung of the brakeman's ladders, sitting on the cow-catcher of the engine, and wherever there was a ledge to set a foot. They say there were many accidents—people falling off as the trains lurched forward—and I don't wonder. It was raining most of the time, so that the poor folk were drenched to the skin.

As our train was on its last lap our porter warned us to organize our baggage as carefully as possible because of the mad hordes at the station wanting to get on the train. Having seen the trainloads of refugees, we could imagine something of what we were in for. The next day from the newspapers we learned that we were in the region of a Chinese air field, and the Japanese were bombing it. Just a bit farther, we were in Shanghai. It is impossible to describe our landing. We were nearly torn limb from limb in our efforts to get out with our baggage. Aside from some bruises, torn dresses and damaged baggage, we finally got through the worst. Once again, airplanes were soaring overhead (from the next day's paper we learned they were aiming at our station at that very time.) We realized we were in a dangerous place and must get out as soon as possible. We had decided that if worst came to worst, we would call on the American consul to rescue us. Even that proved impossible, for we couldn't get near to telephone. There were no taxis to be had. Finally a well-dressed Chinese who could speak English came to help us out. We had to pay $3.00 apiece for rickshaws ordinary costing 30c, but any price was worthwhile to get away from those threatening planes.

One more problem had to be faced. This station was outside the Shanghai-International Settlement and French Concession. We had to pass through the latter to get to the former, but both settlements are strongly barricaded and no one can get in or out except through one huge iron gate. When we got to this gate mobs of refugees were waiting there to get in (these settlements are under protection of foreign troops and so more safe, but they have been forced to refuse to let these refugees in because it means more danger of Japanese attack.) Here we waited for a long time—the only foreigners in a mob of Chinese. Finally I motioned to our rickshamen to go on—there was evidently no hope of the gates being opened. After going on for several blocks, I sighted a foreigner and hailed him. He was a Frenchman and evidently could not understand, but he motioned that it was impossible for him to do anything. I kept on pleading, telling him we were American citizens just in from Nanking who must get to the American Consulate. Finally a Chinese appeared who could understand English. He called another foreigner who offered to call the consul and tell him of our predicament. In a few moments he returned, the barred wire barricade was opened and we four were permitted to go through. I was so afraid they might refuse permission to Christine and her nephew, who are Chinese, but fortunately they considered them as part of the party. Soon we were on the Shanghai Bund. The harbor was filled with war-vessels flying the flags of various nations, most of them Japanese. Planes were flying overhead. What a sigh of relief when we reached the American Consulate. Here we learned that the Missionary Home to which we always go had already been closed, as it was in the danger zone. One of the assistant-consuls kindly directed us to a club which was taking care of refugees in the emergency. How thankful we were to get to this place—only a block from the Consulate. It was after 1:00 P. M., we had had no breakfast nor lunch, but we decided we must first inquire about our steamer, in the hope we might still be able to catch it.

We made haste to reach the steamship office. If only our steamer had not left—how we hoped and prayed we could get away! Our hopes were dashed, however, when informed that we were four hours too late! The ship had gone out under protection of a battleship and was the last one to get out except for the ships commandeered by the various governments to evacuate their nationals.

Monday, P.M.
Could not continue writing because of the vibration of the engine. Now we are actually in Manila, staying with Amoy Christian friends.

Once more to go back to my story. It's Tuesday, Aug. 17th, and our steamer for Amoy has left, with no hope of another steamer for Amoy to be gotten. It took faith to keep cheerful at that time. All that afternoon and all day Wednesday and Thursday we went from one steamship company to another, from one consulate to another, trying to get passage for ourselves and also for our two Chinese friends. Everybody was kind but firm—it was utterly impossible to get anything except through one's own consul, and he utterly refused to consider anyone except American citizens. Each government was doing its utmost to withdraw their own nationals, but they had strict orders under no condition to admit citizens of another nation. We tried to go via Hongkong to Amoy, but as that is British territory, we couldn't even get permission to pass through. As for trying to get something for Chinese, it was hopeless. We left no stone unturned, you may be sure. Were ready to give up anything, if only we could save them with ourselves. Oh, how we prayed for a way out! In the meantime, on Tuesday P. M., we witnessed another air-raid. 16 planes in succession swooping down on the Shanghai R.R. station less than a mile from where we were standing. During the three days we were in Shanghai the battle raged night and day, the main line of battle scarcely a mile from our refuge. Our anxiety for Christine and her nephew made us less intent on the noise from bombs and machine guns, but we realize now what a strain we were under, for were every sudden noise startles us.

On Thursday P. M., we had to decide whether to take passage on the S. S. Hoover for Manila. We could do nothing in Shanghai. Americans were advised by the Consul to get out, yet we couldn't bear to leave our friends behind. That afternoon we met some other Amoy friends who were situated in a comparatively safe place, and they were glad to take them in. It may be possible for them to get to Amoy by an overland route before long, while it would be impossible for us to do so. When we found we could leave them with friends, our hearts were more at ease, so we decided it was wisest for us to come here. We have come here, not to escape trouble, but because it is our only way to get back to Amoy. There is a steamer leaving here tomorrow, directly for Amoy, so that in two more days we hope to see our people. The consul has not forbidden Americans to return to Amoy, and for the present there is no trouble there. You need not worry about us, for in case trouble breaks out, we will all doubtless be evacuated. For the present, our duty seems to go back and carry on as long as possible.

Forgot to tell you that when we got on the Hoover Friday A. M., August 20th, all the passengers were given quite a scare. Just as we were boarding the tender (the big ship was anchored way out beyond the firing line), a Chinese plane soared above, doubtless for observation purposes. At once the Japanese anti-aircraft began firing, and we were literally underneath a shower of bullets. Many began to scream, all were ordered below deck, and no one was injured. You may be sure all breathed a sigh of relief when we cleared the Shanghai harbor.

Had a very quiet trip and landed here safely. One pleasant surprise on shipboard was to suddenly come face to face with Nettie De Jong. She, too, was fleeing Shanghai. Had been having medical treatment in Shanghai for some time and was unable to get back to her station. Many missionaries were on board. You must not worry about me. "I am in my Father's keeping, I am in His tender Care. He has kept me in perfect peace through it all." I know you will be praying for us and for poor China.

COSSACKS TO COME TO HOPE MEMORIAL CHAPEL OCT. 8

The Don Cossacks, famous Russian Male Chorus that has thrilled American audiences for eight years, will give a concert in Holland on Oct. 9, their only performance scheduled this year in Michigan. Serge Jaroff, leader of the thirty-six members, organized the nucleus of the present chorus from a cavalry regiment of the Russian White Army during the Great War. While in various prison camps, and later in Bulgaria, the men continued choral practice under their tiny director. With their first concert, "The Singing Horsemen of the Steppes" entered upon a career of triumphs that has carried them to England, Australia, and America. They form a part of that pathetic band of people to whom the League of Nations has issued "Nansen" passports. No mention is made of nationality in these passports; only the words "en voyage" are written in.

For fourteen years the Don Cossacks have wandered from country to country, their only contact with their homeland being the singing of their native music, and singing it in a manner that has made them the sensation of the musical world.

This concert will be the first in the series of the Holland Choral Union, and to miss a Don Cossack performance is to miss one of the most thrilling and glamorous experiences on the concert stage today. Not only have this little man and his giant Cossacks given 3000 concerts in less than fourteen years, but because of their efforts, the history of a lost race is being preserved in their glorious singing.

Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Wolbrink of Ganega left Friday for Detroit where they enjoyed a boat trip to Sault Ste. Marie.

The Fennville Woman's club will begin its club year Sept. 29 with a luncheon and program on parliamentary usage.

New York Crew Wins The Coast Guard Contest

DEFEATS CHICAGO, HOLLAND COAST GUARD BOATS IN RACES

A husky coast guard pulling boat crew from Oswego, N. Y., won the first annual $200 Great Lakes coast guard boat race at Grand Haven in competition with champion district crews from Chicago and Holland. The race was pulled over a two-mile course in the heavy coast guard surfboats and the New York starters from the ninth district finished in 18 minutes and 20 seconds, two seconds ahead of Chicago, and eight seconds ahead of Holland, from the 11th and 10th districts respectively.

The Oswego crew pulled in perfect rhythm and at the finish speeded up and shortened stroke to edge out the crew from the Old Chicago station. The start was by the range light on the pier and the pull was up river for two miles to a point opposite the Sag, so-called. A southerly tail wind offset the effect of the current against the oarsmen.

Boatswain J. J. Daly of Oswego station who trained the winning crew, watched his men pull to victory under Boatswain's Mate First Class Arthur Anderson, coxswain. In the crew were Surfmen D. Alke, R. McCrea, C. H. Backer, W. V. Pinell, B. D. Byescher and C. D. Goretzki. Lieut. Commander M. W. Rasmussen of the ninth district was also present.

HOLLAND STAR ROUTE IS DISCONTINUED; MAIL FOR CHICAGO BY 9 A.M.

The morning mail deadline for delivery in Chicago, or for locations north of Allegan, has been set up to 9 a. m. according to Clair McOmber, postmaster, because of the discontinuance of the star route service from Allegan to Holland.

This route, which made connections for Chicago and northern Michigan cities at Holland, was discontinued because of the light mail carried since the Dunningville office was closed last summer. The main purpose of this route was to serve the Dunningville post office. Deliveries to Allegan from Holland will be little affected by this change, because there has been practically no mail coming over the route from that source, and any that does come can be easily routed through Kalamazoo.

SEVERAL FROM OTTAWA COUNTY ATTEND REPUBLICAN CONCLAVE AT BAY CITY

More than 2,000 upstate Republicans motored to Bay City, where the first real large convocation of Republicans was held. Those from Ottawa County who attended were John R. Dethmers, member of the Republican State Central Committee; Nelson Miles, State Representative, both from Holland; County Clerk William Wilds; Register of Deeds Frank Bottje; Judge Cora Vande Water, all of Grand Haven. From Zeeland Att. and Mrs. Jarrett Clark and Mrs. Angus De Kruij were present and from Coopersville, R. P. Dethmers, father of the Prosecuting Attorney; James Scott; Howard Irwin; Mr. Lin of the Coopersville Observer; and Mr. Klemersma from North Ottawa, were present.

They say it was an intensely interesting and enthusiastic Republican gathering. So many came that Bay City had difficulty in taking care of the guests, and not a few went to Saginaw for sleeping accommodations. It was a two-day session that was more of a get-together than to propose policies or platforms, which a vast majority felt was a matter for the official convention to take care of at a later date. There was plenty of music and oratory, but the highlight of the convocation was at the close, when Senator Arthur Vandenberg gave one of the best discourses of his career.

His speech was given a nationwide broadcast from coast-to-coast at 9:45, and the reception in Holland by radio was perfect. His discourse covered a period of forty-five minutes. At the convocation the Republicans avowed that Arthur H. Vandenberg is the man to lead the Republican party in 1940 as their nominee for president, although Mr. Vandenberg's modesty made no reference to it in his speech. Many of the leading newspapers of the nation have printed stories about the possibility of Mr. Vandenberg being the Republican standard-bearer.

CITY OF HOLLAND MAY ENFORCE ZONING ORDINANCE, JUDGE MILES DECIDES

The City of Holland is entitled to enforce the zoning ordinance, according to an opinion handed down in Ottawa county circuit court by Judge Fred T. Miles. He authorized that a decree be prepared giving the city of Holland the right to an injunction to prevent Capt. Mark L. Gilbert from continuing to allow more than one family to occupy the house.

The suit was brought by the City of Holland some time ago through City Attorney, Elbert Parsons, heard by Judge Miles. The house is situated at 115 East 18th St., and the testimony revealed there were four apartments in the house, which is in violation of the zoning ordinance which limits the occupancy to one family.

In his decision, in discussing the court's decision, City Attorney Elbert Parsons stated that he was more interested in having the zoning ordinance upheld than the litigation against Capt. Gilbert. Answering a charge of Captain Gilbert that there are 28 similar violations in this particular district, the city attorney said that he plans to take the matter up with the zoning board.

He stated the question has arisen that it appears more logical to eliminate this restriction rather than to try and enforce it. Mr. Parsons said that no further action will be taken against Captain Gilbert until the zoning board has reached its decision as it is his wish to treat all persons alike. Judge Miles pointed out that the claim made by the defendant was no defense in the cause.

MANY VALUABLE HUNTING DOGS LOST

In view of the many thefts of hunting dogs reported to Lansing in past years, the department of conservation advises upland hunters this fall not to let their dogs stray too far either on training trips or while hunting afield. The department of conservation has no authority to investigate or prosecute in the case of stolen hunting dogs, authorities point out. Hunters whose dogs are stolen, however, may seek the assistance of civil authorities.

Planning and Building Homes While You Look

FRANK BOLHUIS HAS INVENTED METHOD DOING AWAY LARGELY WITH PLANS

You Want a New Home and, Presto-Change, Frank Builds It Right Before Your Eyes in Ten Minutes

Home building is in the minds of all home-loving persons these days. From 1929 until 1933 there was a let-up on the building of homes, and what is more, the homes that were, in many instances, were allowed to deteriorate. With the return of better times the thought of home and pleasant surroundings is again paramount in the minds and hearts of the American people. Not for a long time has there been such a period of rejuvenation of homes and home surroundings as during the past three years. Folks owning homes have become obsessed with the thought to paint up and "spruce up." One must only look over the building permits allowed by our common council to get some conception of the trend of remodeling, rebuilding, and building new homes now going on. This has been an era of new home building in this vicinity, and what is going on in Holland seems to be going on throughout the nation. The building of a new home is just what we have in mind at this time.

The writer knows very about the construction of a home. Floor plans, and architects' drawings are "Greek" to him. At the invitation of Frank Bolhuis, head of the Bolhuis Lumber & Mfg. Co., the editor was shown a plan that simplified building to such an extent that even a layman could follow the construction. Mr. Bolhuis has devised plans whereby he can show anyone who wants to build a home just what kind of a home he is going to get—not from architects' drawings, but by building the home right before the prospective customer's eyes. The writer was invited into a large room in the office building of the Bolhuis Lumber & Mfg. Co., in the center of which was a large sturdy table. Alongside were shelves containing all sorts of patterns, house sides, chimneys, gables, dormers, vestibules, porches, pergolas, bay windows, in fact the list is long. To the uninitiated it would look like a labyrinth of patterns or mold forms, as they use in iron works, but this is far from correct.

For the past two years or more Mr. Frank Bolhuis has been working on plans that would simplify building of homes and put them within the reach of folk in moderate circumstances. His plan is to do away with selling and building these homes on plans and specifications alone. He felt that the more convincing way was to show the customer a complete house in miniature, and build it while the customer was looking.

So he built several houses, all according to scale. The main room of one house, which he built to show the writer, was 13 by 16 inches. According to scale, this room would be 13 by 16 feet when the big house is completed. This house in particular was 24 by 26 inches. This would mean that the house would be 24 by 26 feet when actually constructed. Another unusual feature was that these same floor plans could be built into a house of one story, a story and a half, and two-story houses.

Frank Bolhuis made all his own patterns which enter into the building of a miniature house. He starts his building on the large high table and from the shelves at the side he picks parts of houses and puts them together. Building blocks are not in it, and surely this large room, in the Bolhuis Lumber & Mfg. Co. offices, would be a delight to the hearts of the kiddies. It surely was an enjoyable afternoon, at least for one grown-up.

Mr. Bolhuis built the contour of the house first by sliding the sides into grooves over the frame. These all fit snugly over this frame of joints, uprights, and different work that enters into the skeleton of a house. Within a few minutes the house, with one story or full size, is complete, with the exception of the trimming. Then the transformation begins. From the shelves Mr. Bolhuis picks a couple of dormers and attaches them to the miniature roof. Then if you want a bay window ornamenting a side of the house, "presto," the bay window is placed, and for good measure and ornamentation Mr. Bolhuis places miniature flower boxes with flowers along the bottom of the bay window.

These same changes are manifest at the front door. Delving into the patterns on the shelves brings to light a vestibule with peaked roof or Colonial ornamentation covering a door at the side or at the front, according to the lines on which the house is built. Or you can have a beautiful front porch, or one with pergola effect and ornamented with small iron rails leading down the veranda to the walk.

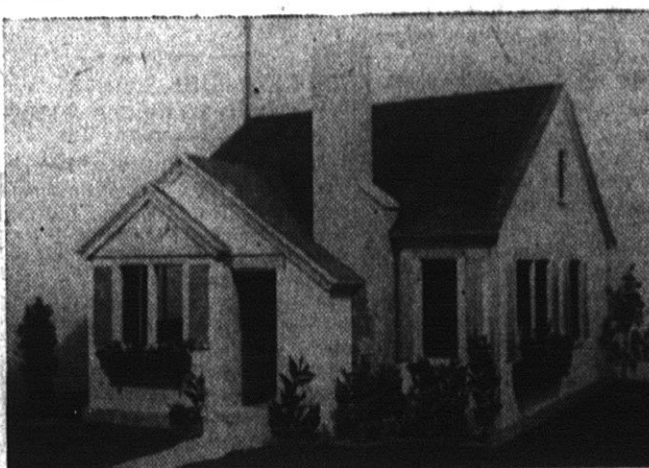

Then another transformation takes place. Undoubtedly the customer wants a fireplace. Well, a fireplace he shall have; and on the shelves Frank finds a chimney fitting on the outside of the house that makes an unbelievable transformation in its appearance—in fact, he showed different kinds of fireplace chimneys adaptable in different types of house architecture. Then he made changes in gables or put on an open porch instead of a closed porch. After these changes were made you simply wouldn't know that it was the same house you had looked at a few moments before.

Through his pattern method Mr. Bolhuis can also change the arrangement of windows. In certain rooms he has placed three windows side by side; and another pattern makes the windows more sparing, but produces a tremendous change. The bay window simply means an-

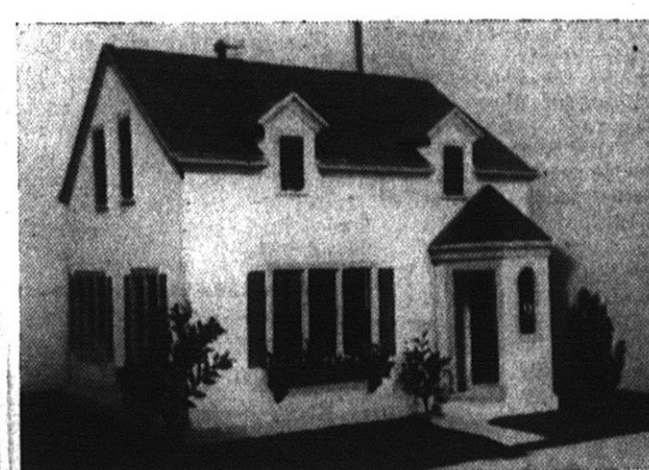

These Are Block Houses Only A Yard Square

The house below this one is the same as the one above only with "presto change" alterations.

The first house has open porch, dormer, and large window, while the other has a fireplace, chimney and sheltered front door.

This house, as you can notice, although with the same floor plans, is diametrically opposite from the first two. These miniature houses are three of several others built by Frank Bolhuis of the Bolhuis Lumber and Mfg. Co. You must read the article on this page so you will understand the pictures better. Mr. Bolhuis has patented the idea.

other pattern added, and a room can be enlarged by adding a sun room, which, according to Mr. Bolhuis, adds 8 feet more to the living room.

Mr. Bolhuis stated that the patterns he has thus far are for Colonial houses, and typically so, or homes in the so-called Cape Cod class, many of which are found in New England. These, it will be remembered, have the dormer effect in the roofs. The homes are built, so to speak, right on the floor plans, but what is rather convincing is that, while the plans are there, the prospective builder sees his house go up as he is watching.

Mr. Bolhuis stated that there are many changes that can be made in the interior of the houses, which he has also standardized. Arrangements of bedrooms, closets, accommodations, stairways, interior vestibules, have all been planned and standardized to fit certain kinds of architecture and certain imperative needs in the home. A home builder who selects a model receives what he puts into it. He chooses his own material, and the price of the material, whether brick, wood or stone, enters into the cost. When asked at what price these houses can be constructed Mr. Bolhuis stated, "From $2400 to $4500 and up, and all houses are insulated and built according to the most approved and improved methods." He stated that you can build a house as much or as little as you see fit. It is a matter of addition or subtraction.

On one Cape Cod house Mr. Bolhuis placed two dormers. He said, "Now those dormers will cost $80 more. Leave the dormers off and you save $40 for each dormer." Then he placed a vestibule at the front door. This vestibule cost $123. With the vestibule off it simply would mean $123 less on the building of the house. And so the entire list is arranged and priced, and it is up to the prospective customer to build according to his means, but if additions are desired later these can easily be supplied.

After showing the writer the building of complete houses Mr. Bolhuis showed the framework of one of these houses, with the uprights, studdings, rafters, all in miniature, well defined. He stated that in building his miniature houses this would be of great convenience if some reconstruction had to be done in plumbing, heating, or for other reasons, and by these means the part of the house which is covered up can be easily broken into without destroying any part of the framework, since the position of the framework is clearly shown in the miniature plans of the house.

That in substance is a new method of house planning and building conjured in the mind of Mr. Frank Bolhuis. He states that he has had several visitors whom he has shown this unique plan and they have become thoroughly interested. He tried this "presto change" house building at the Holland Exchange Club some time ago and it was an interesting luncheon session. Mr. Bolhuis only deplored the fact that he was unable at that

PHEASANT DAMAGES RADIATOR OF CAR

A Coopersville motorist reports that the radiator on the car being driven on a highway east of town was considerably damaged last Friday when a pheasant flew up from alongside the highway and crashed into the machine. The motorist reports the impact was much harder than one might have imagined and had the driver not had a good hold on the wheel, the car might easily have been ditched.

GRAND HAVEN ALLOWS LIQUOR BY THE GLASS

Recent action limiting the number of places where liquor may be sold by the glass to four, was rescinded by a three to two vote of the common council of Grand Haven, Mayor Richard L. Cook and Alderman James Van Wessem dissenting and a resolution passed by the same margin, increasing the number to not more than six. A license to sell liquor by the glass was approved for Joseph Cech, doing business at The Well Cafe, 23 Beech Tree Street. A request for similar approval from John Niemaszak was taken under advisement. Grand Haven now has four places licensed to sell liquor by the glass, although one license, issued recently to George Weber on North Seventh street is disputed on the grounds of proximity to a church.

JUDGMENT OF $720 IS GRANTED IN COURT TO HOLLAND WOMAN

A judgment of $720.07 against Henry Hilbrink, Holland township, was granted in circuit court in favor of Mrs. Susanne Brill, Holland, who claimed damages of $1500 on her house which was wrecked when a car belonging to Hilbrink crashed into the front porch. The co-defendant, Martin Vander Bie, was given a verdict of "no cause for action."

The accident in question occurred last April on the northeast corner of Maple Ave. and 17th Street. Mr. Hilbrink collided with a car which was coming from the west on 17th St. driven by Mr. Vander Bie, a member of the Holland Fire department. Mr. Vander Bie was on his way to a fire and said he was driving at the rate not to exceed the speed limit at that particular point. He had left the Essenburg Lumber Co. where he was employed.

As a result of that accident Mr. Vander Bie's car shot across the street to the northeast and crashed into the corner of the house occupied by Mrs. Brill showing the house off its foundation several inches, breaking the front porch and some 19 windows in the house.

Mrs. Brill, who did not know which one of the two drivers was to blame, brought action against both and Vander Bie according to the jury, was exonerated. Mrs. Brill was represented by her attorney, Clarence A. Lokker. Mr. Hilbrink was represented by Daniel Ten Cate and his son, Vernon Ten Cate; Mr. Vander Bie, as a member of the fire department was represented by City Attorney Elbert Parsons.

Nelson A. Miles, Holland attorney, transacted business in the Kent circuit court at Grand Rapids Monday.

Applications for marriage licenses have been filed at the county clerk's office by Victor Robins Hanson, 35, Holland, and Gunhild C. Anderson, 29, Holland.

"Movie" Stars Have Baker Co. Furniture

ONLY ONE FACTORY IN THE WORLD MAKES CERTAIN ART GLASS

Hollis Baker Loyal to Holland and Its Lakes and Beautiful Summets. Compares With Europe

Seventy members of the Holland Exchange Club and guests enjoyed an unusually interesting address by Mr. Hollis Baker, president of the Baker Furniture Company, on "Furniture and My European Experiences." In his introduction of the speaker, George Pelgrim called attention to the appropriateness of this address as National Furniture Week begins next Saturday.

Mr. Baker said that he came to Holland four years ago from Allegan and is greatly pleased with the fine co-operative spirit shown to their company by the people of Holland. He loved to discuss furniture but said he would confine his remarks to his own business.

In the making of furniture today, utility is not the sole nor prime consideration but style and originality count a cheap wooden table may be as serviceable as a fine mahogany one but their high class trade demands the best. The Baker Factory specializes in period reproduction, now in 18th Century English. To obtain the right finish in carving even the national specialists must be considered as an Italian will give a different cut to a design from an English.

Mr. Baker stated that in their quantity production many distinct activities and details must be taken care of, credit for which he gave to Exchangeable John De Wilde, the superintendent. Then everything is finished to order so that they try to bridge the gap between the custom worker and the specialist. Their first contact with the customer is in their Grand Rapids show room. Their wholesale stores are in New York, Chicago, and other cities.

The speaker mentioned the fact that so many of the movie people were now buying artistic furniture. Recent customers of their furniture were Owen Young, Elliot Roosevelt, Greta Garbo, and Shirley Temple. Their various articles have on them beautiful descriptive tags and these are valued by the lady customers.

He then told in an interesting way the story of his trip from January 27th to June 4th to England, France, Italy, Germany, and Holland. In all these countries he visited the antique shops and furniture factories so that he might bring back some new or beautiful old designs. He asked the question as to whether the old designs should be copied or entirely new ones made and said that among the ruins of Pompeii, Roman bronze replicas were found of the ancient Greek sculptures and paintings. So we are doing the same thing today that the Romans did 2000 years ago.

Mr. Baker and his son landed at Southampton, England, on their cruise, in the evening. The next morning upon arriving at London, they stopped in an antique shop run by a World War Veteran. This village is only a mile from the birthplace of Sir Bodin-Powell, founder of the Boy Scout movement. In London, he continued his visiting of antique shops and factories and plants there are from courts. In Nelson Brothers, a large wall known for employing 100 men, the buildings have no heating plants and the offices were small littered rooms with the Clerks "Clarke" sitting on stools.

Our local factory imports English crown glass used in 18th Century furniture. There is only one firm left in the world making this type of glass, so Mr. Baker expressed anxiety that this firm may continue. The Bakers made only a brief stop in Paris visiting some shops stating his factory makes but little French furniture and for that reason there was less interest in looking for French designs.

In Italy, he was especially interested in the excavations at Herculaneum and Pompeii. Italy, he said, is beautiful, but buildings so different from ours often seem only caves dug out of the sides of a hill. Hand work is important and space for our quantity production is not needed.

The Netherlands seemed very clean with happy healthy people. As Mr. Baker's father was of Holland birth, he was unusually interested in his visit there. The wide cement roads are crowded with American cars. But solid blocks of new apartments are taking away the peaceful appearance of the once quiet, quiet streets.

In closing, Mr. Baker told how he is constantly impressed with the beauty of our own Lake Michigan. Living as we do here on a shore with clean beaches and facing the setting sun, we are privileged to enjoy one of the world's beauty spots. Its very profusion makes us lose our appreciation of the fine scenery we have here. His address gave his audiences at the Exchange Club luncheon, a new and increasing appreciation for our

LOCAL NEWS

James Heerspink, Washington Square jeweler, returned this morning from a business trip to Chicago.

Junior Welfare League, local philanthropic organization, began fall activities with a meeting, Tuesday evening, in the Woman's Literary club. Mrs. Jack Bos, president, was in charge of the meeting. Announcement was made that the dancing school project will be continued by the league this year, with the opening set for Thursday, Oct. 7. Mrs. Sidney Tiesenga, chairman, stated that Miss Helen St. Andre of Grand Haven, who has been studying with the Ernest Belcher studios, will again be in charge of the classes. The league has grown in size and scope since it was organized in the fall of 1932, by a group of young women, all college graduates. Meetings are held weekly in the Woman's Literary club building. Obstetrical kits are made and distributed and other assistance is given needy families. Many needy school children have been supplied with glasses as one of the more recent projects of the group. A baby incubator and oxygen tent were gifts to the Holland hospital from the league, and gifts also have been made to the baby clinic which is operated by the Woman's Literary club.

WARDEN HEYNS, FORMERLY OF HOLLAND, LAUDE
STATE PENAL SYSTEM

An effective step to meet the crime problem has been taken by Michigan's action in reorganizing and modernizing its penal system, according to Warden Garrett Heyns of Michigan reformatory at Ionia. He explained the changes brought about by the last legislature in revising the penal system and providing for boards of experts to supervise inmate examinations and activities in each of the three major state prisons at a talk given Saturday before the LeValley PTA at the LeValley church.

Mr. Heyns, the former man, said, "I am convinced that Michigan's new policy in stressing rehabilitation activities among its criminals, particularly among first offenders, will have important results. This program cannot hope to make good citizens of all offenders, but it will help to make useful citizens of many of them, perhaps, even, a majority of them."

Mr. Heyns pointed out law violators are imprisoned for the three-fold purpose of punishment, protection to society and rehabilitation.

FIREMEN ANSWER THREE ALARMS

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the tool house at Pilgrim Home cemetery, Sunday night. Fire Chief Cornelius Blom estimated the loss between $300 and $400. Earlier in the evening firemen were called to the home of J. Bos, 50 East 19th st., when the roof of the home was discovered on fire. The damage was estimated at $25. It's believed fire started from sparks from the chimney. Chemicals were used to extinguish a blaze Monday at 11:30 a. m. in an automobile owned by the Holland City Bump Shop, 16th st. and Columbia ave., which caught fire while the motor was being cleaned. Damage was reported as slight.

I see a LITTLE OLD LADY growing older before her years"

Can it be that, without your realizing it, an out-of-date kitchen range is making you grow older before your years? Is it possible that a hot, stuffy kitchen . . . a kitchen in which even a plant couldn't live because of the burned-out oxygen, is putting fatigue lines in your face and giving you that droopy "kitchen look"?

One thing is certain: An electric range will put a stop to all that. It will give you a cool, clean, fresh kitchen in which to work. It will give you new freedom. It will save your walls and curtains from getting dull and grimy, your pots and pans from getting blackened. It will save your vitality, preserve your attractiveness.

ELECTRIC COOKING

With electricity your cooking is done accurately, effortlessly. There is no wasted heat, . . . no burning flame to foul the air you breathe. All of the dirt and soot stays at the power plant; you get only the concentrated, direct heat which electricity alone can give.

And it's cheap, . . . much cheaper than you probably imagine. So why not get the facts! Let electric cooking give you a happier, fuller life . . . now, before you start growing older beyond your years.

The World Conference on Faith and Order

Held at Edinburgh, Scotland, August 3-18, 1937

By John Banninga, of Holland and India

London, England
August 24, 1937

Mr. Ben Mulder
Holland, Mich.
My dear Ben:

I am taking the liberty of sending you an article, this time on the World Conference on Faith and Order, which was held in Edinburgh, Scotland, from Aug. 3 to 18 inclusive. It was in every sense of the term a great conference and accomplished a great deal more than its predecessor at Lausanne in 1927. The delegates were all determined that there should be real progress in getting together to understand the things that separate the various Christian Churches from one another. As at Oxford, so here, there were representatives from all the Churches of the World except one. To think that delegates representing such differing bodies as the Quakers and Greek Orthodox, the Anglicans and Congregationalists, the Lutherans and Presbyterians, could get together as they did was nothing less than a manifestation of the Divine Presence. I am glad that representatives of the Reformed Church in America also had a share in these meetings. Dr. and Mrs. Beardslee, Dr. Warnshuis, Dr. Romig and others were present.

Have had a wonderful time as well as a most profitable one for I have seen a number of friends in this country and have also seen something of its natural beauty and its historic buildings and remains of former ages.

Sincerely yours,
John J. Banninga.

The first Conference on Faith and Order was held in Lausanne, Switzerland, in August, 1927. At that Conference a Continuation Committee was appointed and under its guidance several committees and commissions did most valuable work in studying the subjects on which agreement had not been found in 1927. It might therefore be expected that 1937 would record far better results and much greater agreement than was possible at the first conference. And this proved entirely true. Not only was there a spirit of far greater harmony among the delegates but questions that were left quite open at Lausanne were regarded as closed subjects when the sections, into which the Conference at Edinburgh was divided, reported on them and their reports were adopted by the full Conference.

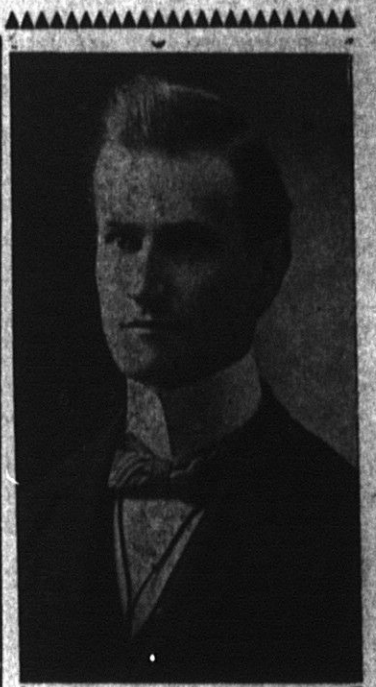

The Chairman of the Conference was the Archbishop of York, from whom a more learned, tactful, and gracious presiding officer could not well be imagined. It is true there were few times when he had to exercise his gifts but on the few occasions on which there appeared sharp differences among the delegates his Grace was able to reword a resolution, suggest a harmonizing thought, or tactfully bring the exponents of the differing theories together. The opening sermon was preached by the Archbishop on the text Ephesians 4:13, and was a masterful presentation of the spirit that must animate all union movements as well as a statement of the evils of our divisions and the tasks that lie before us. He said in closing that we must not only understand each other better, but "we must more fully understand God. It is toward Him that our eyes must be directed... Only when God has drawn us closer to Himself shall we be truly united together; and then our task will be, not to consummate our endeavour, but to register His achievement."

After the first day when representative leaders from various Churches gave up their thoughts on union, the whole Conference was divided into four groups studying as many aspects of the questions before the Conference. In one of the opening addresses the Right Reverend, the Bishop of Dornakal, spoke on the need of union in the mission field, and emphasized the fact that, in a very real way, those holding extreme views concerning the Church, both of the Anglican High Church and the Free Churches were preventing the consummation of union in South India. His address was received with general satisfaction and there was a spirit present in most of the delegates at the Conference that the South India Scheme would be carried through to completion since all parts of the world were looking to South India for guidance in the matter. South India was mentioned in almost every session of the plenary Conference.

The four sections met for several days. In most cases the sections were divided into sub-sections. Matters were discussed, referred to drafting committees, resubmitted to the sections, revised, redrafted and finally approved for presentation to the plenary meetings. Here they were again debated, modified and finally approved. The final report consists of about 40 pages and is divided into the following chapters:

- I. Introduction.
- II. The Grace of Our Lord Jesus Christ.
- III. The Church of Christ and the Word of God.
- IV. The Communion of Saints.
- V. The Church of Christ: Ministry and Sacraments.
- VI. The Church's Unity in Life and Worship.

The great advance made over the Lausanne Conference can be seen that was found on each subject discussed but especially in the last chapter which sets forth not only differing conceptions of Church Unity and obstacles to union, but answers the question, "What can we do to move towards the unity we should seek?" Under this latter head are found seventeen definite suggestions of steps that can be taken to bring the various Churches into a better understanding of each other, including study, fellowship in prayer and worship, regional conferences, and a World Council of Churches.

This last suggestion was also dealt with at the Oxford Conference and plans were made whereby after consulting the Churches, the Continuation Committee should be authorized to form a permanent body which would act as a link for uniting the Churches in research and study as well as in common action when and where possible. This will mean that there will be a body functioning continually that can act for and on behalf of the Churches in any crisis that may arise. The great thought of ecumenicity will be embodied in a group of men who will represent all the Churches of the world, except one. That in itself is a result of this Conference that was well worth all the time and expense of holding this conference. The Ecumenical Church will, henceforth, be not merely an ideal but will have a nucleus from which the complete and more perfect Church can grow. It will be a living cell which will grow and expand until it will become the efficient organ that will function for all Christendom.

The religious services connected with the Conference were the living force that made all other work possible. The morning prayers and evening sessions of thanksgiving and consecration bound the delegates together as nothing else could have done. One morning the service was in English conducted by an Anglican or a Free Churchman. Another morning it was in German of one of the Lutheran Churches. And again it was in French when the leader was a member of the French Evangelical Church or perhaps a Patriarch or Archbishop of the Greek Orthodox Churches. But whoever it was that led the service, all bowed as a unit before the Throne of Grace and sought divine help for the work of that day. We learned much from each other, both as to the spirit and manner of worship in the various Churches. There was no doubt that the Spirit was present at each of these gatherings.

Living together in hostels of the university also did much to make the delegates acquainted with one another. At one meal one sat next to an American liberal, then next to a continental conservative. Sometimes with a High Church Episcopalian and again next to a Quaker. And all were friends seeking the solution to a burning question which must be solved if the Church is to do its duty in a world largely hostile to any religion, indifferent to much the Churches stand for and groping in the dark for the way out of national and international difficulties. But in this gathering of men and women from various races and civilizations, the way of friendship and the way of dependence on God was shown to be the way out and up to a better and more glorious day.

On the last day of the Conference an Affirmation of Unity was adopted unanimously. After stating that this Conference had brought together 414 delegates from 122 Christian communions in 43 different countries, it went on to affirm that these are all one in faith in their Lord Jesus Christ and that their union is found in Christ. While the differences are largely of the intellect, their unity is of the heart and will. "In this Conference we may humbly claim that the Spirit of God has made us willing to learn from one another, and has given us a fuller vision of the truth and enriched our spiritual experience. We have lifted up our hearts together in prayer; we have sung the same hymns; together we have read the same Holy Scriptures. We recognize in one another, across the barriers of our separation, a common Christian outlook and common standards of value. We are therefore assured of a unity deeper than our divisions. We desire also to declare, to all who will hear, our assurance that Christ is the hope of unity for the world in face of the distractions and dissensions of this present time. We pray that all men everywhere may turn to Jesus Christ, our Lord, Who makes us one in spite of our divisions; that He may bind in one those who by many worldly claims are set at variance; and that the world may at last find peace and unity in Him; to Whom be glory forever."

John Banninga.

JOINS FIGHT AGAINST INFANTILE PARALYSIS

Paul De Kruij, nationally known author and authority on children's diseases has been appointed to a special commission by President Roosevelt to make a thorough study of infantile paralysis which is now prevalent throughout the nation. Mr. De Kruij who maintains a residence near Holland, left Monday for Washington, D. C. Much of the research work in Mr. De Kruij's laboratory has been with the use of monkeys where it was found that animals inoculated with the recently-discovered preventative recovered while the animals suffering with the disease and not given the preventative died soon afterwards. The results of these tests show that the serum enters the body through the nose and thus reaches the brain more quickly. The new preventative is composed of a zinc sulphate solution and is given as a nasal spray. Doctors in Chicago are using this preventative to stop the spread of the disease among children of that city.

God in the Making of a Nation—Deuteronomy 8:11-20.

Henry Geerlings

It should not be necessary for us to remind ourselves that there were times in the wilderness journey, and many of them, when the Israelites were on the verge of desperation because of the lack of food and drink. It was necessary for God to interpose to avert calamity.

Can we not imagine what would be most likely to happen when they should come into a land that had the reputation of fertility and wealth? Moses was the first man to size up the situation. As he looked backward and then forward he could visualize a nation that would be so determined to enrich itself that God would have little chance to keep His place in its life. In a land that flowed with milk and honey, that abounded in grains, fruits, flocks, herds, vegetables, minerals, seafoods, and all else that was necessary to the physical comfort of the people, they would come critically near the point of rejecting altogether Him who had brought them face to face with the best conditions they had ever known. The plea of Moses, therefore, that they remain loyal to Jehovah was a much-needed word.

Paul in one of his letters to Timothy, wrote that the love of money is the root of every kind of evil. But Moses anticipated him by more than a thousand years in thoughts of the very same nature. That the temptation would be terrifically strong there could be no doubt. Of the struggle they would have to keep God first in their hearts, Moses had much to say. He projected himself far enough into the future to see the waves of prosperity rolling over them, even as the waves of the sea tumble over the swimmer who is struggling for his life. The comfort and the happiness they would experience were destined to become the gods of this world they would have to fight.

Leaving a wilderness that was comparatively barren and taking possession of a land whose fields would respond with abundant harvests to their labor would provide the sorest temptation they had ever faced. One can come through hardship and want with more of manhood left in him than he can through plenty and comparative ease.

We would fail to see here a very important message if we did not observe the care Moses exercised to draw the attention of the people from himself and focus it upon God. It reminds us of the experience of Professor Morse, the renowned inventor of the electric telegraph. You will recall that the wire was "What hath God wrought?" There were multitudes of people who never thought of God, but of the inventor. But Morse said that when he thought he would not be able to complete the invention he would ask God for more light, and he attributed his success to a higher power.

Moses frankly told these people that it was not he that brought them through this terrible wilderness, but God. He would have been as helpless as they were to meet the emergencies that arose had it not been that he was the instrument of God Himself. Forty years of precarious living would never be forgotten by them, and the very memory of it must have made them heart sick. They could never have wished for their children the experience that was theirs.

Moses recited, what must have been very familiar to them, the hardships and privations they had experienced during the long journey which had now come to a close. Every step of the way God journeyed with them. He had manifested Himself in unmistakable ways. What He did not provide them through the natural growth of the wilderness He gave them in ways beyond their understanding. What Moses desired them to see was that all the way from Egypt to the Jordan had been vocal with the presence of Jehovah. They were kept alive on food their fathers knew nothing about. He met every emergency and by Him their lives were spared.

The human heart has not changed very much. Moses was a good reader of human nature. He knew how easy it is for possessions to so fill the heart that there is no room left for God. That is happening every day. The love of riches early became a rival of God for human affections. Apart from Jesus no two men in the Bible so constantly admonished against the selfishness of this world's goods than Moses and Paul. They faced somewhat similar situations, and both were indifferent to material things for themselves.

Moses pictured these people going even so far as to take from God the credit for His miraculous intervention, as well as for His part in granting health and abundant crops.
