Admission Policies

FACING NEW PRESSURES

By John W. Hollenbach
Vice President

With the rapid increase in population of college age youth and the corresponding pressure for entrance into colleges and universities, many liberal arts colleges are faced with the new and somewhat exhilarating experience of having more students knocking at their doors than they had expected, more even than they can accommodate. This is also a sobering experience. The need for educated citizens and highly trained leaders in America in this Satellite Age is frighteningly apparent, and the colleges and universities cannot slough off their responsibility in this task.

At its June 1957 meeting, the Board of Trustees of Hope College examined the problem of the future of Hope squarely and resolved that effort be made to continue the present admissions policy of accepting those applicants whose academic record and personal qualities give sound prospect of success in college. To provide the facilities and finances necessary to meet the rise in enrollment which such a policy will undoubtedly entail, a campaign to raise funds was authorized. You will hear more about this latter phase at a future time. This letter is concerned with the question of our admissions program.

On the surface, the action by the Board would indicate that our admissions practices will proceed "as usual." This is not quite the case. Neither the Board of Trustees, nor the faculty, nor the alumni, nor the parents, nor the students of Hope College want the quality of the instructional program to decline; rather the imperative exists to make the college even better. Yet a decline in quality is inevitable if we increase our student body faster than our facilities and resources, and especially than our ability to find for these students competent new teaching staff (the biggest single problem facing American higher education of the next decade). The same decline in quality is inevitable too if we accept ever larger groups of poorly prepared applicants who turn to us at the last moment because they cannot find entrance in some other college.

The recent publicity given Hope College by its national rating as one of the top liberal arts colleges, plus the general pressure for admission to college has brought an increasing number of inquiries and applications to our admissions office. How to keep Hope a college with a heart, serving its constituents—church and alumni—yet providing an excellent program; how to maintain the personal relations and the community concept of a liberal arts college in the face of constant but gradual growth in size—these have been subjects of constant deliberation this fall here on the campus. Among the decisions reached so far are a few common-sense procedures governing our admissions program.

First, we can reasonably expect that students present their applications and credentials for admission in time for an orderly and sound appraisal and in time for the college to provide adequate housing and classroom facilities and good instruction for them. The best time to do this is the period between the close of the junior year and the end of the first semester of the senior year. By late spring it becomes increasingly difficult to process applications properly and to insure facilities. Those applying during the summer months may well have to wait at least one semester before their application can be considered.

Secondly, since Hope is not able to provide everyone who applies the opportunity to enroll, it must seek to make more sound and discriminating judgments on the capacities and potential success of the applicant in the type of liberal arts degree program which it offers. High school students are urged, therefore, to apply themselves diligently in a sound academic sequence during their high school career and to take College Board Examinations. Applicants with spotty or irregular high school records are especially urged to apply early, so that diagnostic tests and counseling can be given. Borderline cases may be required to take summer work or a post-graduate year as additional preparation for acceptance.

Thirdly, increased efforts should be made to discover young people of excellent intellectual capacities and qualities of leadership and to encourage them to enter Hope College.

I am writing this letter to you because you can help us in several ways. First, what I have said underscores the need for continued financial support from you, in order to meet the challenge of numbers. Secondly, those of you who are parents of high-school age children are urged to have a good discussion with them about the importance of their acquiring good study habits and a sound background if they want to be accepted in the college of their choice and succeed. If your children are sophomores or juniors, get them interested now in college—including Hope. If they are seniors, the time for application is now. Finally, if you know of any young people of scholastic quality and promise of leadership who should be encouraged to attend Hope, tell them about your college, and tell us about them. To facilitate the latter, use the card inserted in this bulletin. A college is no better than the students who are enrolled. Your help in finding the right kind of student body is invaluable.

Because science education is so much in the news just now, it seems fitting that Hope College, with its reputation in the field of science, should speak about the motivation of her men and women in science careers.

To prepare a study, we sent questionnaires to every tenth graduate who is professionally engaged in any field of science. Sixty-two circulars were mailed. Thirty-six (36) had been returned by the time it was necessary to prepare this copy.

From this sampling, which we consider fairly representative of our graduates, it must be concluded that the greatest external stimulus to following a course of study in science, and perhaps any field, is provided by teachers. Eighteen (18) of those responding filled in the "whom" space in the counseling question (see chart below). Of these, eight (8) gave credit to high school teachers, several naming the specific teacher; eight (8) gave credit to college teachers, most of them naming the specific teacher or teachers who influenced them; two (2) remembered counseling by junior high teachers. Three (3) mentioned counseling by parents as well as teachers. One (1) gave credit to his family physician and another to his family dentist.

The second most important factor in motivating the individual to science is his own reaction to his reading and studying. Perhaps the factors of receptivity and desire to find a goal for life are contained in this motive.

However, only five named the subjects read and studied which helped in making their decisions. Those who did named aeronautical engineering, civics course, science books, books on vocations, and Boy Scout first aid books.

Those who checked "evidence of success by friends or relatives" for the most part did not name the person, though space was provided to do so. Those who did, gave credit to: family dentist, parents, an uncle, Drs. Harrison and Thoms (medical missionaries), engineering graduate, doctors in family, family doctor (in three cases).

Only one person checked "scholarships available for graduate study" as his first reason for studying science. None gave it second spot and just eight (8) listed it as number three reason.

You may find the fringe motivations interesting. The one cited most often under "other explanation" was "interest and aptitude" in the subjects. "Opportunity for service" followed rather closely. Others mentioned were: "Hope's good chemistry department," "desire," "personal incidents," "father's stimulus to interest in math," "desire to become a medical missionary," and "admiration for my physician during long convalescence."

Interesting as individual motives are, for the most part, from our study, we must conclude that the three most influential motives are: counseling by teachers, reading and studying, and evidence of success by relatives and friends.

It is evident from the responses to our questionnaire that the greatest number of our people made their career decisions during high school years.

When we combine the Chart I main factor—counseling by teachers, with the time element, the natural conclusion is that the high school science teacher holds the key spot in the science education picture.

From our study it is interesting to note also that Hope College, with its enviable record of turning out science professing people, has not produced any in this key position. (There certainly are some Hope people teaching science in high schools, but the percentage would be very small if the sampling in our study is adequate.)

You may be wondering just what is the spread of the professions of these Hope College people reporting?

You will note in this chart that the greatest number of those responding were M.D.'s. Of the thirteen (13) we heard from, eight (8) are in private practice, two (2) are still studying, one (1) is in the U.S. Public Health Service, one (1) is a pathologist and university lecturer and one (1) is in research and university teaching.

The distribution of the seven (7) Ph.D.'s shows that four (4) are teaching in colleges and universities, although two of these are combining teaching with other services such as public health laboratory supervision and research. Two (2) are industrial chemists, one in the field of manufacturing and the other in petroleum research. One (1) is a market development engineer in chemical and petroleum manufacturing.

All the dentists are in private practice.

The four (4) with M.S. degrees: one (1) is a physics teacher in a university, one (1) is doing graduate work toward a Ph.D., one (1) is a chemist in a plastics manufacturing concern, and one (1) has been in sales for a large company for 33 years.

The six (6) reporting A.B.'s: two (2) are industrial chemists; one (1), a product development chemist; one (1), a medical technologist; one (1) a chemical company executive; and one (1), a medical student.

Space does not permit quoting all the interesting comments that came with the completed forms, but one (from a Ph.D.) was different and you may find it interesting: "There is no shortage of scientific manpower that proper utilization of presently trained personnel can't solve. People trained in science are in sales, their own businesses, management and such diverse fields because of lack of monetary incentive to remain in research."

Other general comments for the most part went something like this: "The strong tradition in chemistry at Hope affected my final decision"; and "Were it not for the motivation I received from my teachers and fellow science students at Hope, I would probably have branched off down an easier road before I finished."

MUSIC LIBRARY

The Karol Fairchild Music Library in the Music Building has been enlarged this fall by the addition of several gifts.

One valuable gift was a large number of used records from Dr. Charles Warren Fox of the Eastman School of Music in Rochester. Dr. Fox has become interested in the Hope collection through Anthony Kooiker, former member of the Hope faculty, who is now working on his doctorate at Eastman. Several unusual recordings by Bartok & Mahler were included in this gift.

Other donors in recent months have been Clyde Geerlings, Anthony Kooiker and Nicholas Pool '56.

Since the building of the Music Building, a fine record library has been established. It is open all day, and is being used increasingly by the students and faculty.

Hope's collection now includes approximately 1600 records, 600 of which are Children's Records, to be used only in Music Education courses.
The Hope College football team ended a bang up season with only two losses, each by one point, and seven wins. This was the finest football record since 1953 and the best football team ever coached by Russ De Vette.

The highlight of the season was the game with the powerful Hillsdale club which up to game time had 30 wins and no losses in 5 years. But despite a key-up Hope squad for this important Homecoming game, they dropped a 7-6 decision by Russ De Vette.

The seven out of nine record placed Hope in a tie for second place with Albion in the MIAA.

Mert Vander Lind, Larry Ter Molen, and Ken Faber, all of Grand Rapids, were selected on the MIAA all conference team. Larry Ter Molen and Dick Gantos, also of Grand Rapids, were selected for the all-state small college team. Ken Faber was chosen Most Valuable Player by his teammates. Larry Ter Molen was selected to be the 1958 captain by the team.

The Hope College basketball team is off to a good start toward the MIAA championship. Before the season began, the MIAA coaches had already picked Hope as the team to beat because the co-champions of last year had their entire starting lineup back for this season.

More than 2,000 cheering fans saw Hope open the season by downing Albion 77-66 at Holland's Civic Center. Three days later the team traveled to Alma and walloped them 82-61. At the next home game a capacity crowd saw one of the fastest games of the season as Hope rolled up a score of 112-80 against Eastern Michigan, the most points ever scored by a Hope team in the Civic Center.

The Hope-Calvin games have provided the highlight of college basketball for Western Michigan fans for many years. This year's game played at Grand Rapids was no exception as Hope came back in the second half rally to beat their arch rivals 92-77. If Hope beats Calvin again on their own floor on February 12, it will be the first non-split season victory since 1950 in this long series between these two traditional rivals.

During the Christmas vacation Hope received its first set back at the hands of Central State of Ohio, the all Negro team, by a score of 77-74, but reversed the picture at home when Central State appeared

VIENNA SUMMER SCHOOL TO BE REPEATED

The Vienna Summer School, so successfully carried out last summer, will be repeated this summer of 1958. Dr. Paul Fried, director of the project, has had inquiries about the program from students everywhere, including a group from the University of Sacramento in California.

The project offers students a unique opportunity to integrate the pleasures of touring Europe, the challenges of intensive academic work under European professors, and the experience of residence in private homes in one of Europe's oldest and most beautiful cities.

The program offers, primarily, courses in which students will derive the maximum benefit from the European location. These include five language courses taught in German, and five liberal arts courses in History, Music, and Literature taught in English. From two to eight semester hours academic credit can be earned to apply to the regular undergraduate program offered by Hope College. Credits are also transferable to other institutions.

The faculty of the Vienna Summer School will consist of members of the faculties of the three cooperating institutions: The University of Vienna, The Institute of European Studies and Hope College.

The 1958 program will begin on June 18. The port of debarkation is Lisbon. The group will then go by car to a stay with stopovers in romantic Seville, Granada and Madrid. In France the itinerary will include Mt. St. Michel and Chartres on the way to Paris, where a stopover of three or four days is planned.

For those who do not wish to attend summer school, but who would like a conducted tour of Europe, Dr. Donald Brown, head of the department of Spanish at Hope since 1948, is planning to arrange the trip as a private venture. He expects his tour will be attractive to Hope alumni, especially those who are in the teaching profession.

His tour will sail from New York June 18. The port of departure is Lisbon. The group will then go by car to

HOLLEMANS IN TAIWAN

Dr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Holleman, both class of 1914, are in Taichung, Taiwan, where Dr. Holleman has charge of a hospital.

Hope people will remember that Dr. and Mrs. Holleman (Ruth Vanden Berg) were medical missionaries in Amoy, China, from 1919 to 1950. Dr. Holleman was superintendent of Hope Hospital in Amoy, which was founded in 1898 by Dr. John A. Otte, Hope 1893.

Through Chinese acquaintances and personnel with whom he formerly worked, Dr. Holleman was located by the Chinese Christian Church for his new position. The Amoy dialect is spoken on Taiwan and a doctor who understood and spoke it was needed.

The Hospital in Taiwan, Mackay Memorial, was established by the Presbyterian Church in Canada in 1878 and has been continuously in operation since. It is an institution of more than 150 beds and has a daily outpatient attendance of 200.

Dr. and Mrs. Holleman have been living in Pomona, California since 1950, where Dr. Holleman has been associated with the Roos-Loos Medical Group.

They sailed from Los Angeles on August 3 and arrived in Taichung on September 3, spending two weeks in Japan en route. Address: Section 2, No. 94, Chungshan Pei Lu, Taichung, Taiwan.

*1952. Gordon De Pree started his duties as pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Cuba, New Mexico on November 1. He will spend a year in Cuba before being sent by the Presbyterian Board to Korea to establish a Christian Service Men’s Center in Seoul. Address: c/o Presbyterian Church, Cuba, New Mexico.

We are hereby reporting the results of the "$1.00 per year" plan of alumni giving which has been in progress during the year 1957. Dr. Harold Dykhuisen '30, former president of the Alumni Association, has been director of the fund. It is with real appreciation that we report that $47,862.89 was contributed to Hope College in 1957 by 1,572 alumni. This represents 66.7% of our potential (571,649), figuring $1.00 per year for each graduate; and 37% of the total number (4,190) of alumni.
TRIBUTE TO HOPE'S FUND DIRECTOR

By Mildred Ramaker '26

For untiring service and vigorous leadership, the Hope College Alumni Association salutes Dr. Harold Dykhuisen '36, who continued as fund director when he retired from the presidency in June, 1957.

The splendid contribution of the Alumni Association to the college this year—$47,662.89—did not just happen. Shortly after Harold's election to the presidency in 1955, he sought an interview with President Lubbers to determine exactly the duties and the opportunities for service this office entailed. Then through additional conferences with Clyde H. Geerlings, Marian Stryker, and the executive committee, the groundwork for the alumni activities for the year was laid.

"A dollar a year for each year since graduation for each alumnum" was the challenge Dr. Bud threw out to the Board of Directors, and to the college at the Alumni dinner, and then at the club meetings from Muskegon to New York and back to Chicago. With 1,572 of our 4,190 alumni actually contributing to the college, the Hope College Alumni Association is beginning to assume new vitality.

Continued enthusiastic support to assist in keeping Hope college one of the TOP TEN will be the best expression of appreciation to Dr. Dykhuisen for a job well begun.
These resolutions prepared by the Hope College Alumni Association Board of Directors at the Homecoming Meeting, are published here upon the direction of the President of the Association, Max D. Boersma.
