Additional Local.

We call the attention of ladies to the advertisement in this paper of "Dr. Mar-chisi's Uterine Catholicon." We have in our possession indisputable evidence of its worth, and we recommend the afflicted to try it. This remedy differs from quack nostrums in the following respects: 1st.
It is prepared by a regular physician; 2d.
It is not recommended for all diseases, but only for a particular class, peculiar to females; 3d. It is recommended and used in practice by many physicians, one of whom at least is well known to the people of New Bedford. 47-ly.

Worth Remembering.

Now that good times are again upon us, it is worth remembering that no one can enjoy the pleasant surroundings if in bad health. There are hundreds of miserable people going about to day with dis-ordered stomach, liver or kidneys, when a bottle of Parker's Ginger Tonic would do them more good than all the medicines they have ever tried.

DOLMANS, Cloaks and Ulsteretts of the finest quality and manufacture have been received at my Dry Goods Store.

Any person with a Cough, Cold, or any Bronchial Complaint or even in the first stage of Consumption will be relieved and cured by Elliott's Extract of Tar and Wild Cherry. It is especially prepared for Bronchial Complaints. Thousands who have tried it now live to testify of its merits—give it an immediate trial, you will be surprised at the result.

CHILDREN have health and Mothers rest when Dr. Winchell's Teething Syrup is used. It produces natural sleep, regulates the bowels, cures dysentery and diarrhoea arising from teething or other causes.

eral amounts.

REPORTS OF STANDING COMMITTEES.

The Committee on Streets and Bridges reported having raised the grade, and clayed the west end, of Sixteenth street at the railroad crossing, that they had expended $36.66 for said work, of which amount $18.33 was to be paid by the township of Holland, to the city of Holland, as their share of the work. The Committee recommended the graveling of that part of Sixteenth street at the railroad crossing, the same being necessary to complete the work. The Committee recommended the payment to Mr. Klaassen for 100 yards of sifted gravel, and to Mr. Plim for 92 yards of sifted gravel, less the amounts paid on account.

—Report accepted and recommendations adopted and the Committee instructed to collect from the township of Holland the amount due for work on Sixteenth street.

The Committee on Poor reported presenting the semi-monthly report of the Director of the Poor, and said Committee recommending $32.50, for the support of the poor, for the two weeks ending Oct.
18th, 1882.—Adopted and warrants ordered issued on the City Treasurer for the amounts.

HOLLAND CITY, MICHIGAN.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

The Chief of Police at Somerville, Mass., threatened the boy employees of the glass-works, who were on a strike for higher wages, that he would compel them to go to school, and they resumed work in preference. The factory of Maltby, Stevens & Curtis, manufacturers of plated and coconut wares at Birmingham, Conn., was burned. Loss, $50,000. The wholesale dry-goods house of Wellington Brothers & Co., of Boston, which has been rated at $300,000, made an assignment to three prominent merchants, causing great surprise.

Five desperate men who recently robbed the express office at Greenville, Pa., were jailed at Mercer, where they made their escape by gagging and binding everybody in authority, locking fifteen other prisoners in their cells.

A FIRE at Philadelphia destroyed the candy factory of Philip J. Wunderle, on Market street, valued at $50,000. The Trustee appointed by the court at Philadelphia in the Keeley motor case says the machine will be completed by December, when patents will be applied for.

JAMES KELLY, one of the oldest residents of Pittsburgh, who was worth $5,000,000 in 1872, died almost a pauper. While he gave liberally to charities and indorsed notes for all his friends, he fought public schools and the tax gatherers, and resisted the annexation of his lands to the city. A fire which broke out in the Democrat office at Ridgeway, Pa., destroyed seventeen of the leading business houses, causing a loss of $150,000. In the star-route cases at Philadelphia the jury reported its inability to agree upon a verdict.

THE WEST.

CHRIS DAVIS, a wife-beater, fired the jail at Detroit, Minn., and perished in the flames. Thomas Fortune, an engineer on the Kansas Central road, while on a curve in the woods at low speed, discovered a tottering child on the track. After reversing the engine and opening the sand-box he leaped out upon the pilot and grabbed the little fellow by the clothes.

The prizes in the rifle-shooting contest between the teams of the Military Departments of the Platte, Missouri, Dakota and Texas were awarded by Gen. Sheridan at Fort Leavenworth. Lieut. Partello, who has the best record in the world at long-range shooting, received the first gold medal, and medals were also presented to eleven other competitors. Excellent shooting has been done by the different teams, and marked improvement is visible. Five persons entered an old boat to cross the Miami river at South Lebanon, Ohio. During a playful struggle for the possession of the oars the boat capsized and four of the party were drowned. Their names were Newton and Ella Wallace and Abraham and Belle Lucas. A series of earthquake shocks, slight in force but distinctly perceptible, was experienced at St. Louis and a number of localities in Illinois on the 27th of September. Beyond the usual sensations incident to the oscillation of the earth's surface no harm was done. Mr. Dyniewicz, the editor of a Polish newspaper in Chicago, shot and instantly killed a tramp who invaded his premises.

GEORGE AMES, a grandson of the late Bishop and nephew of Senator Booth, became insane on his way from Washington to Indianapolis. Having locked himself in his room for two days without food, it was deemed time to send him to a private asylum. He escaped from the landlady of a hotel at Richmond, Ind., and threw himself from a third-story window, alighting head first on the stone pavement, and there he lay till the stone of his recovery. The Flat-head Indians of Northwestern Montana have agreed to permit the Northern Pacific railroad to build a line through their reservation for a compensation of $25,000. The distance is fifty-three miles, and the width of the strip granted is 20 feet. Two strangers opened the jewelry case of C. O. Kamp in the Cincinnati Exposition, and coolly walked off with $12,000 worth of diamonds.

EX-GOV. RAMSEY, of the Utah Commission, states that the leading polygamists offered to make no attempt to vote, and have kept their word. The Mormons can carry the elections by large majorities, and will probably nominate Mayor Kane, of Salt Lake, for delegate to Congress. The effect of the Edmunds law will be the eradication from politics of all the able and wealthy men of the Mormon church.

THE SOUTH.

A RELIGIOUS gathering at Hampton Cross-Roads, in Virginia, was the scene of a double tragedy. The Baptist Association was holding its annual meeting, attended by a very large crowd of men, women and children, and among a number of wild and reckless young fellows who had gone to the meeting two became involved in a quarrel, and a duel with pistols in the midst of the throng was the result. The worshippers were seized with a panic and rushed for a place of safety, several women and children being thrown down and trampled on in the confusion, while the duelists kept on blazing away at each other until both had received mortal wounds, one through the neck and the other in the back.

At Palmyra, N. Y., fifteen years ago, a serious quarrel occurred between George Hollenbeck and William Stratton. They met again the other day at Canijo pass, Texas, and fought a duel in a darkened room, Stratton being killed.

At Heathsville, Va., a milldam was carried away by a flood, and the water swept down upon the house of a Mr. Bush, drowning his wife and five children.

MELISSA POWER and Addie Johnson fought at New Orleans with butcher knives about a young man. Melissa was stabbed to the heart, and it is thought Addie will die. At a political meeting at Lancaster, S. C., which was addressed by Col. Cash, a difficulty arose between a negro and a white man, and in the riot which followed three colored men were killed and many wounded.

PLEURO-PNEUMONIA is prevailing to an alarming extent in Caroline county, Md., and some of the largest cattle-owners of the section have made application in Baltimore for veterinary aid. The damage to farmers has reached a heavy amount.

The monument over the grave of the daughter of the widow of the late President Tyler has been defaced. Some one, a few nights ago, visited the grave and knocked off the drapery of the statue of the Madonna, writing beneath the work of vandalism that the drapery was a botch. The statue was a fine work of art imported from Italy. The sacrilegious vandal is not known.

WASHINGTON.

THE Secretary of the Navy has received the following cable message from Minister Hunt, St. Petersburg: "Gilder has arrived here, accompanied by Henry Wilson, of the Jeannette. Both are well."

GEN. SHERMAN, acting as Secretary of War, has accepted the resignation of George Stoneman as Colonel on the retired list, after thirty-six years of service. Stoneman is the Democratic candidate for Governor of California, and has a large income from his farm in that State. Ten million acres of land in Northern Dakota, withdrawn from settlement by Secretary Schurz because of claims urged by the Turtle Mountain Indians, have been reopened for settlement by Secretary Teller, who decides that the Indian claims are invalid.

THE resignation of W. H. Wickensham, United States Minister at Copenhagen, Denmark, has been received at the State Department. During the twelve months ended Aug. 31 the value of imports into the United States was $741,983,917; last year, $643,248,555. This year the exports were valued at $737,038,772, and last year they amounted to $894,717,454. The gross receipts at the Postoffice Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, were $41,256,317, against $36,217,511 the previous year. Receipts from the sale of postage stamps, postal-cards and envelopes were $38,583,317, against $34,678,812 the previous year. The issue of stamps, etc., for 1882 amounted to $49,978,053; increase over the previous year, $6,352,617.

THE pending changes in the Navy and War Departments, whereby a number of officers will be involuntarily retired, and naval commanders assigned to duty on shore, are attracting the attention of interested parties, who are hovering around in numbers and diligently working to secure for their friends the easiest positions.

POLITICAL.

SECRETARY FOLGER has appointed a committee to examine and report upon a reorganization of the employees of the custom house at New York.

In the Republican Convention for the Seventh district of South Carolina, held at Charleston, after a bitter struggle which lasted one week, E. W. Mackey, white, was nominated for Congress on the 21st ballot. A stormy scene ensued, Mackey's colored competitors, Lee and Smalls, charging Mackey with having secured the nomination by bribery. A State Convention of the Anti-Monopolists of Nebraska was held at Hastings, 400 delegates attending. E. P. Ingersoll, President of the State Farmers' Alliance, was placed in nomination for Governor. A strong anti-monopoly platform was adopted, denouncing railroad encroachments, asking for a reduction of the tariff, and for the adoption of postal savings bank, telegraph and telephone systems.

At a meeting of leading citizens of Massachusetts, over which President Seelye presided, resolutions were adopted favoring a constitutional amendment to prohibit the manufacture or sale of liquor. A contribution of $1,000 was taken up for campaign purposes. A Washington dispatch says that at a meeting of the Women's National Labor League Mrs. Myra Clark Gaines became a member and made a speech, in which she announced that her membership would be an active one. She expressed opinions as to woman's right to labor and to vote of a radical character, and said she expected to give twenty years to the work in hand, if it took so long to secure the ballot to women.

R. H. McDONALD for Governor, and William Sims for Lieutenant Governor, are the tickets placed in the field by the California Prohibitionists.

GENERAL.

MEXICO has just made provision for the succession in the event of the death or removal of the President of the republic. By a constitutional amendment just adopted the succession falls upon the Senator who presided over the Senate during the month preceding the vacancy, and should the Senate not be in session the President of the Permanent Committee, alternately a Senator and a Deputy, succeeds to the Presidency, instead of the Chief Justice, as heretofore.

THERE were twenty-eight deaths from cholera in one day at Uxla, a town of 5,000 inhabitants in the State of Cheapas, Mexico. Great alarm prevails in the infected region, and measures have been taken to prevent a further spread of the epidemic.

ROBERT T. LINCOLN has shipped from Springfield to Washington sixty-two trunks belonging to his mother, which were filled with dress goods and trinkets purchased in Europe. The business failures of the past week in the United States, many of which were large and important, numbered 173, being an increase of 32 over the preceding week, and 61 more than in the corresponding week in 1881.

THE National Liberal League, at its annual meeting, elected T. A. Wakeman, of New York, President. The calendar was changed by making 1900 the starting point, and substituting E. M., meaning the era of man, for Anno Domini.

FOREIGN.

THE soldiers of the Salvation Army from London who have invaded Calcutta met with hard usage at the outset. Their campaign ended almost before it began, as the natives became very much excited over the efforts to bring about their conversion to the Christian religion, and to avert a riot the authorities found it necessary to arrest three of the Salvation contingent. The small-pox is increasing at Cape Town, South Africa, to a fearful extent. Already there have been 2,000 cases, and the streets are deserted and business is at a standstill. Germany, it is asserted, will be favorable to Great Britain in the settlement of the Egyptian question.

DECREES have been decided upon by the Egyptian Cabinet providing for the trial and punishment of persons engaged in rebellion against the authority of the Khedive. A large reduction of the cases to be considered will be made by the granting of amnesty to all officers of and below the rank of Captain who served with Arabi Pasha, excepting those participating in the riots or who joined the army subsequent to the beginning of the campaign. A special commission is to be created for the trial of both civilians and military, and two courts martial will be convened as auxiliary tribunals at Cairo and Alexandria respectively. An ancient revolution was nipped in the bud by the execution of two Nicaraguans, one of whom captured an American schooner, seized the city of Greytown, and declared himself "Chief of the Provisional Government of the Atlantic Coast." The American ship Aranza, owned by Lorillard, won the Great Eastern Handicap at Newmarket, beating Hornpipe six lengths. The betting before the start was twenty to one against Aranza.

FROM some unknown cause an explosion occurred in an ammunition train at the Cairo (Egypt) railway depot, shells bursting at intervals of thirty seconds for a long period, killing a number of people, demolishing the station, firing the cars and destroying military stores in large quantities. A farmer in Tipperary, named Hickey, has been murdered for paying his rent, or for defending men employed in gathering crops on the farm of an evicted tenant. Prince Ibrahim telegraphed to Arabi Pasha, on the announcement of an alleged Egyptian victory, that he hoped at the next feast of Bairam Englishmen would be sacrificed instead of sheep. A dispatch from Bucharest states that Russian officials at Kilia, near the mouth of the Danube, are taking soundings, notwithstanding the remonstrance of the International Commission. The Russian Government also has arranged that the Russians shall perform police duty instead of the employees of the commission. In consequence of these infringements a meeting of the commission has been summoned. The construction of 300 Berdan torpedoes is ordered to be hastened. All other work at the arsenal gives place to the manufacture of torpedoes.

SERIOUS anti-Jewish outrages are reported at Presburg, in Hungary. The shops and warehouses of the Jews were forced open and plundered. The rioters offered the military obstinate resistance, some of them setting the soldiers' bayonets with their hand. Similar excesses were committed in the neighboring town of Blumenthal, where thirty persons were arrested. Several hundred Jews fled to Vienna. Fifteen days' supplies for 25,000 men were destroyed by the explosion at Cadro. The disaster was caused by a band of Egyptian incendiaries.

THE Japanese Envoy to Korea, after laboring for twenty days, secured a pledge that the insurgents should be punished, their victims properly buried, that 500,000 yen should be paid as indemnity, and that the Japanese legation should have the protection of a body of its own troops. The Chinese Ambassador then took 4,000 of his soldiers and carried off the chief Korean assassin. A grand review of British troops was held in the square at Cairo, the strength of the force evidently making a great impression upon the Egyptians. The review was watched through the bars of the prison windows by Arabi Pasha and Toulba Pasha. The Khedive placed over his canopy the union jack and the Egyptian flag. Two officers and thirty men were killed by the explosion of a torpedo magazine on board the Russian iron-clad Admiral Popoff at Odessa. A royal Commissioner has been sent to Presburg with unlimited power to suppress the anti-Jewish riots.

DUEL IN THE DARK.

A Thrilling Romance from a Texas Mining Camp.

How a Ventriloquist's Art Served Him in a Crisis.

A dispatch from Dallas, Texas, says: The Evening Times publishes a letter from Carizzo pass, 600 miles west of Dallas, giving an account of a hostile meeting between two miners in the Pecos Mining Company's camp, twenty miles north of the Mexican border, last Monday night. The duelists were George Hollenbeck and William Stratton, New Yorkers, born and raised near Palmyra; they were of rich descent of the early Hollanders. They were educated at Cambridge; the former graduated as a lawyer and the latter as a physician. They came out of college about the same time of Lincoln's first call for volunteers to suppress the Southern rebellion. They enlisted and went through the war, serving in Col. Gordon's One Hundred and Forty-fourth New York regiment. At the close of the war they returned home, but, finding professional pursuits too tame for them, they concluded to go West. Before they left home a difficulty arose between them which was prevented from ending in bloodshed by the interposition of mutual friends. Before they had a chance to meet again Stratton sought his fortune in the far West. He wandered to California, where he went to work as a miner. Hollenbeck went in the same direction, but stopped at Colorado, where he also became a miner. They never heard of each other after this. They have since followed the business of mining, but have never become as rich as they at first expected. A few days ago they met in the Pecos mining camp and recognized each other. The school and social polish had been rubbed off by the trials and hardships incident to life in the mining camps. Hollenbeck was overjoyed to meet Stratton, who repelled him and said they would settle that little unfinished difficulty which arose between them at their last meeting. Hollenbeck said he had forgotten all about the difficulty referred to, and entertained no ill-feelings whatever against him. Stratton insisted on a settlement according to the code. Hollenbeck said if nothing short of that would do he would accommodate him. Accordingly arrangements were consummated for a duel. They were to fight with pistols in a dark room. Each man was to announce ready, after which a third party was to count three, when they were to fire. The room was as dark as Egypt. They went into it and announced ready from opposite corners. "One, two, three," and Stratton fired. Stratton fired a second shot, but the only response from Hollenbeck was a groan. Stratton, believing he had wounded Hollenbeck, fired a third shot in the direction of the groaning. The report of a pistol came from a corner directly opposite from where the groan appeared to proceed from and Stratton fell. No more shots being exchanged the miners opened the room and entered. A light revealed the fact that Stratton had been killed, while Hollenbeck was unhurt. Hollenbeck is a ventriloquist, and, on entering the room, took his stand in a diagonal corner from his adversary, and, to make him believe he was in the opposite corner, threw his voice in that quarter of the room where the bullets from his adversary's pistol harmlessly buried themselves in the wall. It had been so long since they had seen each other that Hollenbeck's ventriloquism had entirely escaped the memory of Stratton. The affair has caused a great deal of excitement through the camp; but, as anything is called fair in such business, no fault is found by the miners with the strategy employed by Hollenbeck.

A CHEERFUL face, says the German-town Telegraph, is nearly as good for an invalid as healthy weather. To make a sick man think he is dying, all that is necessary is to look half dead yourself. Hope and despair are as catching as contagious complaints. Always look sunny, therefore, whether you feel so or not.

In the United States Circuit Court at Utica, N. Y., Judges Cox and Wallace dismissed Sergeant Mason's petition and denied his application for a writ of habeas corpus on the ground of want of jurisdiction, in that a decision had already been made by the Supreme Court denying such writ, and also denying that the Judge Advocate General had judicial power to reverse the finding of a court martial, or that his office was analogous to that of any Appellate Court civil proceedings. A Washington dispatch says that Gen. Sherman, acting as Secretary of War, in the absence of Mr. Lincoln, has recommended the pardon of Sergeant Mason. In a suit involving the obligation of a railroad company to honor a ticket sold by a "scalper," Judge Trunkay, of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, has decided that when a railroad company issues a ticket it must honor it, no matter in whose hands the ticket may be, and must carry the holder the distance stipulated on the face of the ticket.

SECRETARY FOLGER has accepted the Republican nomination for Governor of New York. After stating that the delegates to the convention fairly represented the views of their constituents, and that the convention itself acted with due deliberation, he admits that individual acts of wrong-doing occurred which honest men cannot tamely tolerate, and that he seems an election by such means. Influential Republicans have asked him to decline the nomination, but such an act, in his opinion, would produce an utter collapse of the Republican party. A. B. Hepburn declines the Republican nomination for Congress, man-at-large in New York. The Trades Assembly of St. Louis, Mo., nominated a full county ticket, headed for Sheriff by Peter Johnson, a well-known bricklayer, and indorsed the Greenback State ticket.

It is stated that the Grand Continental railway has been organized at Quincy, Ill. The capital stock is $5,000,000. The object is to build a line of railroad from Quincy southeast to Cincinnati, Ohio, and northwest to Bismarck, D. T., with a branch to the south line of British Columbia, thereby connecting Chesapeake bay and Puget sound. The gentlemen present were leading men from different States and sections throughout which the line is to pass. The storage warehouse of Raymond & Kinsman, grocers of Fargo, D. T., was destroyed by fire. Loss, $40,000; insured for $2,000. As the result of an old feud, ex-United States Senator D. J. Jewett was cowhided in his law office, in St. Louis, Mo., by W. H. Clifton, a well-known attorney and prominent Democratic politician.

LYNCH law was administered at Charlottesville, Va., where a mob of 100 men took from the county jail and hanged to a tree James Rodes, who was accused of the murder and robbery of Mr. and Mrs. John O. Massey. The west-bound Memphis and Charleston railroad train was thrown from the track at Madison, Ala., and the sleeping-car conductor had his leg broken, while several passengers were wounded. At the riots at Lancaster, S. C., it is now said, there were seven persons killed and twenty-one wounded. Mrs. Alice Simmons and 6-year-old son, of Atlanta, Ga., were killed by a train in that city. The boy was thrown fifty feet.

National Woman-Suffrage Association.

The annual meeting of the National Woman-Suffrage Association was held at Omaha. There was quite a large attendance of the advocates of the ballot for women. Resolutions were adopted thanking Congress for the appointment of a select woman's-suffrage committee in each house; thanking Senators Lapham, Ferry, Blair and Anthony for their report in favor of an impartial-suffrage amendment to the constitution of the United States; that it is the paramount duty of Congress to submit a Sixteenth amendment which shall secure the enfranchisement of woman; declaring that the association should labor for the submission of an amendment to the national constitution prohibiting the States from disfranchising on the ground of sex; that the action of the State conventions of Republicans in Kansas and Indiana, the Democrats in Massachusetts, the Anti-Monopolists in New York and the Prohibitionists in Chicago indicate a recognition of the strength of our cause and the near approach of the full recognition of woman's political rights; that it is the duty of the Legislatures of Iowa, Oregon and Indiana to ratify the proposed woman-suffrage amendment; and that the enlargement of woman's political freedom in Ireland, Scotland, India and Russia is encouraging, while the refusal of these privileges is the more inconsistent in our republic. Elizabeth Cady Stanton was elected President for the ensuing year.

SHOCKING DISASTER.

Destruction by Fire of a Mississippi River Steamboat.

Appalling Loss of Life by the Accident.

The steamer R. E. Lee—one of the most noted boats on the Mississippi river—was burned to the water's edge about thirty-five miles below Vicksburg. Twenty-one persons were lost. The boat had been freshly painted, and the flames spread rapidly. One of the passengers said: "She burned like gunpowder." The Mississippi boats at best are frail and inflammable structures, but this one was particularly fitted to burn quickly and carry as many as possible of the passengers to their graves. She was not only freshly painted, but loaded with 500 bales of cotton, which added fuel to the flames. The Lee was valued at $100,000 and insured for $50,000. Capt. William Campbell, who was in command of the ill-fated steamer, gives the following account of the disaster:

"We left Vicksburg about 6 o'clock on Friday evening with about 400 bales of cotton on board, about thirty passengers and a crew of about ninety or 100, including officers. We first discovered the fire just below Brooks Landing, Miss., about thirty-five miles below Vicksburg. The fire was first seen in the kitchen a little after 6 o'clock Saturday morning. Pilot Stout, Engineer Perkins, the second mate, Kilpatrick, Clerks Hall, Wells and Bell and myself were on watch at the time. I shouted to the pilot to land the boat as quick as he could, which he did. We ran a line out, made the boat fast, and lowered the stage. All persons forward got ashore safely. Those aft were cut off from the stage by the fire and smoke, and went to the stern of the boat to save themselves. Some were saved and some were lost. The yawl was lowered and picked up many persons in the river who sprang overboard to escape the flames. All my men did their duty as long as the flames allowed them to. One lady from Pittsburgh, going to Natchez, saved herself and seven children. She displayed great presence of mind, and was cooler than many a man would have been under such trying circumstances. Our sailor man, a Greek, and two of the firemen behaved splendidly with the yawl. Pilot Stout, a brother of Mrs. Mason, one of the owners of the boat, and Engineer Perkins behaved nobly. Second Mate Mike Kilpatrick ran the lines out and lowered the stage, showing coolness and heroism. All the cabin-boys who were lost gave up their lives in trying to save those of others. Ovid Bell woke up all the persons on the Texas deck, not trying to save himself until all were awake. Mate Hines was everywhere, displaying great energy. We worked the engines as long as the fire would let us, and they did a great deal of service in holding the boat to the bank. The hose was worked, but all to no purpose. Our outfit was complete. We had 700 feet of hose, and the inspectors had been very particular in seeing that we had a full outfit the day before we left New Orleans—last Tuesday. The flames spread quicker than I can tell. When the shore was reached the flames had already wrapped some portions of the boat. In an hour the boat was burned to the water's edge. We gathered up all we could and waited for the dawn of day. We saved nothing but a little money out of the office. The books, papers, United States mail, cargo and all were lost. At the time of the fire our cargo consisted of 512 bales of cotton, 20,000 feet of lumber, sundry freight and express packages. The cargo, I think, was valued at about $20,000. The boat was worth $100,000, and was insured for $50,000. At about 6 o'clock in the morning the J. M. White came along and took the whole crew on board. I left the second mate and two men in a yawl to gather up floating cotton and take care of the wreck until I received further advice from the insurance companies. I reached Vicksburg about 9 o'clock. The lady and her children from Pittsburgh I placed on a tug and sent to Natchez. My mate was also instructed to hunt up the bodies of any of the lost and offer rewards for their recovery. The new Robert E. Lee was built in 1876 by the Howards of Jeffersonville, Ind. She was considered one of the best boats on the river. She never met with any accident except the breaking of a shaft last year."

HOLLAND CITY, MICHIGAN.

MICHIGAN AFFAIRS.

Copper in Calhoun County.

The Battle Creek Moon says that Stephen Gaskill, who owns a farm four miles south of that city, exhibited a lump of copper ore weighing five pounds at the office, which he picked up on his farm. The ore is nearly pure, and when filed or pounded shows as plain as fine copper. Mr. G. says there is considerable of this copper on his farm near a certain spring, and, if investigation proves that it exists in sufficient quantities to mine, a company will be organized.

Michigan-Raised Figs.

Mrs. Peter Laquay brought to our office to-day a fine specimen of figs raised by herself on her husband's place in this city, and from a tree of about twelve years' growth, which this year bore a crop of 175 figs. Another tree, 4 years old, in the same yard, has thirty-eight figs. The fruit is of good size and very palatable. The experiment shows that the fig tree, with proper care, can be cultivated in this climate. Mrs. L. has the trees planted in tubs and keeps them in the cellar in the winter. The trees bear three crops each season, the fruit here mentioned being from the second crop.—Battle Creek Journal.

Michigan's Score at Creedmoor.

The team of Michigan State troops who went to Creedmoor under the auspices of the Michigan Military Rifle Association lost a $3,000 prize and a dozen gold medals by only two points. The last shot in the Hilton trophy match, fired by C. D. Root, was the losing one. T. E. Webster, of Bay City, in the same match, made a perfect score at 500 yards and a total of 100 out of a possible 105, the best record ever made with a military rifle in a match. The Michigan team were pitted against Pennsylvania, the Department of the Atlantic U. S. A., Maine and New York. The Department of the Atlantic won the Hilton trophy prize last year, and New York the year before. The other teams have competed in similar matches before, while this was Michigan's first year. In practice the day before the Hilton trophy match the Michigan team made a total of 998 points, or twelve more than the winners of the prize. The scores of each team were: Pennsylvania, 986; Michigan, 984; Department of the Atlantic, 966; New York, 968; Maine, 785. In the all-comers team match, any rifle, a picked-up or scrub team of four, consisting of S. H. Avery, John McKenzie, A. McNaughton and W. B. Merston, made 119 points out of a possible 140, winning fifth prize against five teams with sporting rifles and three teams from Great Britain.—Detroit Post.

A Traveler's Tale.

A correspondent of the Louisville Courier-Journal discourses as follows concerning that largest and loveliest of American villages, Kalamazoo, and the Michigan Game law:

Kalamazoo is situated half way between Detroit and Chicago. This euphonious and unanimous patronymic, translated from the aboriginal dialect into plain English, turns out "Boiling Water." Kalamazoo is one of the typical and wide-awake cities of Michigan—a city in size, with a population of 15,000, yet "pointing with pride" to the fact that she is a village, the largest in the republic. She refuses to take on "city airs," and her local government is run on the village plan.

I ran across an interesting and entertaining institution and landmark in the person of Sam Brown, an old and wealthy mulatto gentleman who has charge of the depot. Sam is one of the most respected and important citizens. He was for twenty-one years steward at the Kalamazoo House. Sam was born in Mason county, Ky., near Maysville, but left with his mother when very young, and has grown up and ripened with this country. He has amassed quite a snug fortune, and his latter days will be spent in peace and plenty. His wife was the daughter of the hero of Fenimore Cooper's "Bee Hunter," one Harris, a colored man who came from Pennsylvania in the early days and settled on Genesee prairie. He was a very intelligent man and called himself the first white settler, because all his neighbors were Indians. His name appears as Harrison in the novel, I believe. Harris lived about seven miles from Kalamazoo, and Cooper spent several summer seasons with the "hard-sense" mulatto, and wrote a number of the "Leather-Stockings" series, "The Deer-Slayer," "Oak Openings," "The Bee Hunter," etc. Cooper entered the township which bears his name. His will was probated in the County Clerk's office. He left his land to his wife.

Judge Wells, of the old and re-organized Court of Alabama Claims, resides here in sumptuous style. The court has, I understand, about $9,000,000 to distribute yet.

Will Carleton, author of "Betsy and I Are Out," "Over the Hills to the Poor-house," etc., lives at Hillsdale, not far distant. He is nominally a farmer, and an awkward, gawky, plain and unassuming country squire.

It was here that the flying Flora

Temple made her celebrated trotting, which stood so long untouched. It was 2:19—a rather slow pace for Misses Maud S., Trinket and other duff-debutantes of the last few years. When Flora made her then phenomenal time engineers were sent from all over the country to measure the track to see if any fraud had been practiced, but they found the distance on time.

The famous frog farms are out some twenty miles from this point. The blue-backed beauties and delicacies of the bon vivant are caught among the swamps and along the margin of the lakes, and shipped in crates like wild pigeons. The Chicago market is supplied from this section. Not a few men make this their business—a remunerative one, too—and herd up the frolicsome frogs, feeding and taming them until they are easily caught by hand. There are few or no snarks in this county (thanks to St. Patrick of the Emerald Isle) to bother Mr. B. Frog, and he sings sweetly and undisturbed until the Chicago epicure sighs and sends for his toothsome hindquarters. Under an enactment of the last Legislature no fish or game can be shipped from the State. The law was passed to prevent the indiscriminate slaughter of game which succeeded the great forest fires. The widespread conflagration drove all the forest game into that neck of the State toward Mackinac Straits, and it was an everyday occurrence for men to kill forty or fifty deer and ship them to hotels and restaurants in every direction. If the wounded deer failed to fall within sight or short range of the hunter, it was not pursued, as others were nearer, and as a consequence the woods were full of carcasses.

A Repentant Singer—A Story of Early Michigan.

A contributor to the Kalamazoo Telegraph relates the following incident: The story I am about to relate was only a small incident at the time, but its influence in after time who can estimate? It was on a warm summer day in July, the announcement had been passed from mouth to mouth that Elder H. was to preach in the school house morning and afternoon. This was before churches had been begun, and before any settled pastors of any denomination had arrived within our settlement. One or two circuit ministers occupied the whole field, extending over and beyond the county lines to Slater's Mission on the north, and east and west as far as horse could carry them, so as to get round to meet at the appointed stations about once in two weeks. Although there were few pious people then in our place, nearly all the inhabitants turned out to hear what the elder had to say. All unnecessary work being suspended, the boys and girls were glad to appear, and in their better clothes, if they had any. On this day the school house was full. I remember the young men were nearly all there, for it was expected that a certain Miss S., then visiting a married sister, and lately come from an Eastern city, would help the singing. She was a young "school-marm," perhaps a trifle overdressed for the occasion, but evidently refined in manners and education, and, withal, good looking. Of course she was the observed of those more intent on passing objects of beauty than their prayers, and she appeared well satisfied with her position. At this distance of time I could not describe her dress, but everyone, I believe, noticed her gold watch and long, small gold chain, such as was then worn. The elder gave out the first hymn and the tune, and as usual commenced himself alone, expecting the congregation to join. Scarcely had he reached the end of the first line when Miss S. poured forth her melodious voice, almost drowning the feeble voices accustomed to join in the singing. All but a few envious people enjoyed the sacred song. After a somewhat lengthy prayer, the elder commenced his discourse without notes. It was a warm day, in midsummer, the windows open to their fullest extent, and there being in the piazza of the next house a fine canary bird, scarcely fifty feet distant from the school-house, and as usual the bird appeared desirous of rivaling our music, and poured forth his song with all his force. Suddenly the elder stopped in his sermon apparently to listen to the bird—a long pause. We waited, expecting he would resume the thread of his discourse, but after waiting a long time the elder exclaimed: "Listen to the beautiful song-bird and learn a lesson. He obeys the command. 'Let every one that hath breath praise the Lord.'" The elder appeared to have taken that for a new text; he dwelt on the power or privilege of birds to manifest their joy, the instinct of all creation to praise their Creator in joyous music, and then in sorrow the preacher compared mankind with the feathered fowl, dwelling on the base ingratitude of Christians demanding pay for the privilege of singing praise to Him who gave them their voice. The arrow from this uneducated servant of God flew to its mark. I observed the wounded Miss S. wiping away the tears, and as soon as the preacher had finished his discourse she, with a nervous, hasty step, walked to the desk, and kneeling down with the eyes of all on her she exclaimed, looking up to heaven: "Heavenly Father, I have sinned," and, presenting the watch and chain to the elder, said, "take the wages I have received for singing at church, and what more I have had I will restore four-fold." She retired to her seat. The act was so sudden it surprised us all. The elder, with admirable coolness, took the offering, and, looking on the congregation, proclaimed aloud: "Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord. Brethren and sisters, let us join in thanks that God, in His infinite goodness, condescends to teach us. His children, our duty by the birds of the air and the beasts of the fields!" He then closed with a sweet, tender prayer for all mankind.

I am not yet prepared to approve or condemn this public demonstration of the wounded feelings of Miss S. It became a common subject of conversation for that Sabbath day, at least. I remember that scarcely two viewed it alike. Such remarks as these I remember hearing: "The church hypocrite played her part with skill. It is not her first performance. The paltry watch and chain she will get again; it was her bid for a beau." "It was a put-up job," and "I was disgusted with such clap-trap." Others expressed themselves approvingly. One was completely carried away, and declared that Raphael never painted a Magdalen, or the Virgin whose countenance revealed the wrapped devotion, the contrition exhibited by Miss S. I distinctly remember the remark of our Solon: "Gentlemen, you have all seen what you looked for; to the pure thou wilt show thyself pure, to the froward thou wilt show thyself froward."

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the State Board of Health, Lansing, by observers of diseases in different parts of the State, show causes of sickness during the week ending Sept. 23, 1882, as follows:

Diseases in Order of Greatest Area of Prevalence.	Number of Cases.	Number of Deaths.
1 Diarrhea.....	47	81
2 Intermittent fever.....	46	79
3 Remittent fever.....	37	64
4 Rheumatism.....	35	10
5 Neuralgia.....	34	59
6 Consumption of lungs.....	34	59
7 Bronchitis.....	31	53
8 Dysentery.....	26	45
9 Influenza.....	25	41
10 Typho-malarial fever.....	24	41
11 Cholera infantum.....	22	36
12 Tonsillitis.....	21	36
13 Whooping-cough.....	20	34
14 Diphtheria.....	13	22
15 Pneumonia.....	11	19
16 Typhoid fever (enteric).....	10	17

18 Whooping-cough.....	8	14
19 Inflammation of bowels.....	6	10
20 Inflammation of brain.....	5	9
21 Scarlet fever.....	5	9
22 Pteroperal fever.....	3	5
23 Cerebro-spinal meningitis.....	3	5
24 Membranous croup.....	2	3

Beside those tabulated above, the following named diseases were reported each by one observer: Diabetes, gastric fever and asthma.

For the week ending Sept. 23, 1882, the reports indicate that influenza increased, that cholera morbus considerably decreased, and that neuralgia, dysentery, cholera infantum, diarrhea, diphtheria, whooping-cough and intermittent fever decreased in area of prevalence.

At the State Capitol, during the week ending Sept. 23, the prevailing winds were southeast; and, compared with the preceding week, the average temperature was lower, the average absolute and the average relative humidity slightly more, the average day ozone the same, and the average night ozone less.

Including reports by regular observers and by others, diphtheria was reported present during the week ending Sept. 23, and, since, at twenty-one places, scarlet fever at eight places, and measles at one place. Small-pox was not reported from any locality in Michigan. HENRY B. BAKER, Secretary.

The Expanding Power of Ice.

Mr. Bergh has drawn attention to the powerful agency exerted by ice in severing rocks, of which he gives a striking instance on the Aalesund, of West Norway, where a low ledge rising out in the fjord is all that remains of one extensive field promontory, which in the year 1717 was suddenly blown up and precipitated into the water by the force of ice within the interstices of the stone. The winter had been mild, and during a rapid thaw a considerable stream had welled up from the ice-covered summit of the field, and carried its waters into every crevice of the rock, when a sudden change of wind brought about a sharp frost, which turned the descending waters of the newly-formed stream into ice, arresting their course within the interstices of the rock. The result was the explosion of the entire mass of the field below the outbreak of the stream, and its projection from a height of more than 500 feet, into the neighboring fjord, which engulfed the whole of the promontory with its cultivated fields and farmsteads. Simultaneously with the disappearance of the land below the surface of the fjord a huge mass of water was propelled against the opposite shore, carrying with it rusty anchors, boat rafts and numerous other objects which had lain at the bottom. The disturbance extended a mile beyond the point at which the land was submerged, and the waters, in retreating, carried with them a wooden church which had stood fifty feet above the fjord, besides sweeping away all the fishing boats for two miles and a half. Before this occurrence, which was attended by loss of life to about a score of persons, the headland had been much resorted to on account of the halibut which abounded in the neighborhood, but since that period, the fish have never returned, a circumstance which, according to local popular belief, is due to the covering up by the infalling rock of certain submarine cavities and springs frequented by the fish.

It may be very difficult to get women from France to this country who are used to reeling silk, but it is no trouble to get men here who are experts in reeling drunks.

KILLED IN WAR.

Some of the Methods of Destruction Lawful and Unlawful.

[From the Gentleman's Magazine.] It is curious to notice distinctions in naval warfare between lawful and unlawful methods, similar to those conspicuous on land. Such projectiles as bits of iron ore, pointed stones, nails or glass are excluded from the list of things that may be used in good war, and the declaration of St. Petersburg condemns explosive bullets as much on one element as on the other. Unfounded charges by one belligerent against another are, however, always liable to bring the illicit method into actual use on both sides under the pretext of reprisals, as we see in the following order of the day, issued at Brest by the French Vice Admiral Marshal Conflans (Nov. 8, 1759): "It is absolutely contrary to the law of nations to make bad war, and to shoot shells at the enemy, who must always be fought according to the rules of honor with the arms generally employed by polite nations. Yet some Captains have complained that the English have used such weapons against them. It is, therefore, only on these complaints, and with an extreme reluctance, that it has been resolved to embark hollow shells on vessels of the line, but it is expressly forbidden to use them unless the enemy begin." So the English in their turn charged the French with making bad war. The wound received by Nelson at Aboukir on the forehead was attributed to a piece of iron or a langridge shot. And the wounds that the crew of the Brunswick received from the Vengeance in the famous battle between the French and English fleets in June, 1797, are said to have been peculiarly distressing owing to the French employing langridge shot of raw ore and old nails, and to their throwing stinkpots into the portholes, which caused most painful burnings and scaldings. It is safest to discredit such accusations altogether, for there is no limit to the barbarities that may come into play in consequence of too ready a credulity.

Red-hot shot, legitimate for the defense of land forts against ships, used not to be considered good war in the contests of ships with one another. In the three hours' action between the Lively and the Tourterelle, a French privateer, the use by the latter of hot shot, "not usually deemed honorable warfare," was considered to be wrong, but a wrong on the part of those who equipped her for sea more than on the part of the Captain who fired them. The English assailing batteries that fired red-hot shot against Gluckstadt, in 1813, are said to have resorted to "a mode of warfare very unusual with us since the siege of Gibraltar." The "Treatise on Tactics," by the Emperor Leo VI. carries back the record of the means employed against an enemy in naval warfare to the ninth century. The things he recommends as the most effective are: Cranes, to let fall heavy weights on the enemy's decks; caltrops, with iron spikes, to wound his feet; jars full of quicklime, to suffocate him; jars containing combustibles, to burn him; jars containing poisonous reptiles, to bite him; and Greek fire, with its noise like thunder, to frighten as well as burn him. Many of these methods were of immemorial usage, for Scipio knew the merits of jars full of pitch and Hannibal of jars full of vipers. Nothing was too bad for use in those days, nor can it be ascertained when or why they ceased to be used. Greek fire was used with great effect in the sea battles between the Saracens and Christians, but it is a fair cause of wonder that the invention of gunpowder should have so entirely superseded it as to cause its very manufacture to have been forgotten. Neither does history record the date of, nor the reason for, the disuse of quicklime, which, in the famous fight off Dover, in 1217, between the French and English, contributed so greatly to the victory of the latter.

Face Difficulties.

Have the courage to face the difficulty, lest it kick you harder than you bargained for. Difficulties, like thieves, often disappear at a glance.

Have the courage to leave a convivial party at the proper hour for doing so, however great the sacrifice; and to stay away from one upon the slightest grounds for objection, however great the temptation to go. Have the courage to do without that which you do not need, however much you admire it.

Have the courage to speak your mind, when it is necessary that you should do so, and hold your tongue when it is better that you should be silent. Have the courage to speak to a poor friend in a seedy coat, even in the street, and when a rich one is nigh. The effort is less than many people think it to be, and the act is worthy of a king.

Have the courage to admit that you have been in the wrong, and you will remove the fact in the mind of others, putting a desirable impression in place of an unfavorable one. Have the courage to adhere to the first resolution when you can not change it for a better, and to abandon it even at the eleventh hour upon conviction.

The Lawless Rulers of a Kansas Town.

Dodge City is one of the termini of the cattle trail where cattle are put on the cars for shipment East. It is a hard place. When the cowboys congregate here after their long ride from Texas they raise hades. They commit all varieties of sin. "Dodge," as it is called, is the only place in the State where the Prohibition law is openly defied, and where its enforcement would do the most good. It is said that when the law first took effect the saloon keepers and gamblers made up "a pot" of $500 and deposited it in a bank with the written statement that it was "for the benefit of the widows and orphans of—who informed on the sellers of liquor in Dodge City." The money is still in the bank and the unfortunate cowboy gets horribly drunk and squanders in bar-rooms and gambling hells the hard-earned wages that has been accumulating for months. If he does not get killed, or what is worse, kill somebody else, he is a lucky cowboy. So far "Dodge" seems to be "a bigger man" than the State of Kansas.—Exchange.

Bishop Clark on Incorrect English.

Though the schoolmaster holds his receptions in almost every nook and corner of the land, there is a great deal of incorrect talking even among educated people. Bishop Clark gives a few specimens of these popular errors of speech in the form of a dialogue between a careless talker and his critical friend:

"Good afternoon, John, how long have you been 'setting' here?"

"I have been 'sitting' here for about an hour watching to see these men 'set' the stones in my wall."

"It 'kind of' seems to me that the the work is done rather 'illy'."

"Perhaps it is not done quite as 'welly' as it might be."

"I 'kind of' think that word 'welly' sounds odd."

"It is as good a word as 'illy.' But why do you say: 'It kind of seems,' and 'I kind of think,' when you might just as well say: 'It seems' and 'I think'?"

"I've got 'sort of' used to talking in that way."

"It is a very poor sort of way."

"I never had nobody to 'learn' me any better."

"You mean that you have had nobody to teach you?"

"I am getting tired, and think I will 'lay' down on the grass for a 'spell.'"

"You can lie down, but it would be well for you to lay your cloak on the ground for you to lie on."

"'Be' you going to 'stop' here for long?"

"I stopped here when I arrived, but shall not 'stay' long. Are you going home soon?"

"I be."

"Why not say 'I am'?" "Be you" and "I be" are very raw and disagreeable phrases."

"All right; O K; but the master always says to the scholars: 'Be you ready to write?' 'Him' and 'me' met at the deacon's last night."

"What did 'him' and 'you' do after you got there?"

"We looked at 'them' things he has just brought from New York."

"Were 'them' things worth looking at?"

"Tolerable." By the way, the deacon must have 'quite' a fortune."

"What sort of a fortune? Quite large or quite small?"

"Quite large, of course."

"Why did you not say so?"

"My next neighbor has just put up a fence on either side of his front yard."

"I suppose you wish to say that he has put up a fence on both sides."

"Between you and I—"

"Please change that to 'Between you and me.' You would not say: There is no great difference of opinion 'between you and he'."

"I usually say: 'Him and me agree pretty well.'"

"Then you speak very bad English, and you probably say 'It is me,' instead of 'It is I.'"

"Of course I do, and so does 'most' of the people I know. My boy is just going to school, and as he is a 'new' beginner I suppose he will appear to be rather green."

"Did you ever hear of any beginner who was not new?"

"I wish to simply state—"

"That is, you wish to state—"

"That our 'mutual' friend—"

"Please say our common friend. You would not call him a 'reciprocal' friend."

"Why do you interrupt me so often?"

"Because you make so many blunders."

Dickens at His Best.

The critics are still busy with Dickens. This, from the London Spectator, is not without interest:

Dickens, as we think, was at his best, when he was freely inventing humorous variations and caricatures of the effects which his quick and laughing eye had seized, variations and caricatures which were not in the least dramatic, but rather imaginative extensions of his wide and quaint experience. Directly he tried to tie himself down to telling a story in dialogue, he became either poor, feeble and conventional, or disagreeably excited and melo-dramatic. It is said that as an actor he was marvelously "earnest," which means, of course, that he threw his whole mind into the attitude of the moment. And that we can well believe. But then he so often threw his whole mind into a thoroughly unreal and affected attitude that this is no evidence at all of dramatic capacity as an author. When, for instance, he makes Florence Dombey throughout a whole conversation insist on personally addressing the old mathematical-instrument maker as "Walter's Uncle," the reader is positively outraged by the intolerable sentimentality of this melo-dramatic "earnestness; and, no doubt, if Dickens could have acted a girl's part, he would have insisted on this odious conceit with supreme "earnestness."

A LADY writing from England complains that the restaurant waiters there always wait on the gentlemen first. Perhaps the waiters have learned from experience that a man generally knows what he wants as soon as he sits down.—Philadelphia News.

HOLLAND CITY NEWS.

WILLIAM H. ROGERS, Editor.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1882.

We have had moody and sullen weather through a great part of September, but this month we look for golden days. Those who yet stay at summer resorts in the country will be amply repaid with the sight of masses of tinted foliage and changing forest hues. The leaves will become sensitive to the sun's rays as the sap begins to return to the roots, and by and by will, fall bearing photographs, of sun-beams mottled with pictures of passing clouds. The air is getting more bracing, and every day grows better suited for cheerful hard work. Those who enjoy good health and steady labor may find many a splendid day in October.

The recent tables of the Bureau of Statistics show very strikingly the change which has been brought about in the foreign trade of the United States within a year. During the twelve months preceding Sept. 1, 1881, the excess of exports of merchandise over the imports reaches more than a quarter of a billion dollars; but during the corresponding period prior to Sept. 1, 1882, the imports exceeding the exports by nearly five million dollars. The total difference is $256,414,044. The probability, however, is that the next monthly publication of returns will show a gain in exports, however it may be with imports, as the autumn crops are moving across the ocean.

The connection between snakes and whiskey has just been freshly illustrated in a new form by the capture of a North Carolina moon-shiner, who was tracked to his hole in the ground by the revenue officers, and there exposed to such a fire in the rear from rattle-snakes that between the two evils he considered the officers to be the less, surrendered. It was found that he had fought the reptiles vigorously by pouring boiling liquor on them from his still, killing the first party, till others re-enforced them and caused him to beat a retreat. Whether he now regrets the choice he made between them and the officers does not appear.

It is now announced that the gross receipts of the Post Office Department for the last fiscal year were more than five millions greater than those of the previous years. Auditor EIA believes that when the returns of expenditures have been ascertained there will be found a net revenue for that year of a million dollars. It is well known that the Post Office receipts still continue to increase very fast, so that it is fair to presume not only that no appropriation at all will be required from Congress next winter, but that the end of next June will see a surplus of several millions, which the department will not know what to do with. Shall this be left to excite the cupidity of the Star route and other thieves, or shall letter postage be reduced to two cents?

The following item is taken from the Orange City, Ia., Volksfreund, and speaks well for one of our local architects: "Mr. Van Oosterhout now occupies his new residence and we heartily congratulate him. We can say nothing, but that which smacks of the highest kind of praise, about his house. It answers perfectly the purposes of a dwelling house, as it is provided with all the latest improvements, and far excels all in this vicinity. It is very comfortable and well calculated to supply the want of a well-to-do family. It is built neatly and solidly. The ornamentations are plain and yet fine, while the nice portico creates an agreeable impression and makes one think of a comfortable villa in the old country, at the same time feeling that it is a different country. It is only just, that a due amount of credit be given our able carpenters, E. Van der Bosch and W. Jansen, but we go a step further and declare that the projector of such a work merits no less praise and recognition. If he were a resident of this county, we should warmly recommend him to our citizens. We hope the people of Holland, Mich., will remember that Mr. Geo. H. Sipp, their fellow citizen, is very competent to project buildings, both as regards solidity and beauty."

Embalming.

Experiments have been made at the New York morgue to test a process by which it is claimed dead bodies, though badly swollen and decomposed, can be restored to something like a natural appearance, and preserved so that it will be recognizable after months of burial. The subject operated upon was the corpse of an unknown woman who had died from erysipelas. It was soft, black and blue, and out of all human proportions. An incision was made in the right leg and an embalming fluid injected into the femoral artery. In less than half an hour the body assumed its natural size, became harder than in life, and as the degree of hardness increased the discoloration disappeared leaving it of a marble whiteness. The body of a man, operated upon seven weeks before, had been kept unburied without decomposition. It retained a natural appearance, and was without odor.

The Absent-Minded Man and his Box.

"I was going to Kinzua, when a young man got on at Warren and sits down beside me, and bays 'I've got a little box here I call my bean box.' With that he pulls out a little round box and shakes it, and I bet the cigars on there being odd or even beans in that box.' 'All right,' says I, 'it's odd.' 'You've lost,' says he. 'Yes,' says I; 'we'll get the cigars at Kinzua.' And then we fell to talkin' about somethin' else a long time, until all at once says he, 'I just want to show you a little bean box I've got here; an' he pulls out that box again. Says he, 'Let's bet the cigars or something on odd or even beans in this box.' Thinks I to myself, you poor absent-minded critter, can't remember that you showed that to me a minute ago. And I says, 'All right; s'pose we make the bet five dollars.' I thought I'd just teach him to remember things. 'I'll do it,' says he; 'now what is it?' 'Even,' says I. He opened the box and—

"Well, what then?" says the reporter, as the Colonel paused.

"He wasn't so absent minded after all," said the Colonel. "There was seven beans in that box."

"I found out afterward that the box had no bottom, or rather had covers at both ends. On one of the covers was fastened three beans, and there were four loose beans in the box. When the man who bet said odd, the cover to which the beans were fastened was taken off, and when he said even, the other end was lifted."—Oil City Derrick.

JOTTINGS.

POTATOES 30 cents a bushel.

THE Board of Supervisors will be in session next Monday.

Mrs. L. T. Kanters arrived home from Chicago last Thursday morning.

Miss Mary Herold left last Monday for a six week's visit to St. Louis, Missouri.

Mr. Douwe Van Bruggen left last Thursday afternoon for Grand Rapids, where he will invest in a drug store.

FREIGHT business on the Chicago & West Michigan Railway, has been the heaviest during the past two weeks of any similar length of time this year.

Mr. C. A. Dutton, raised two and one-half bushels of potatoes this year from five "murephes" which he brought from the East. This is a rather large crop from so small an amount of seed. Who can beat it?

Now as the fruit season is nearly over, we would like to have all those persons who made such faithful promises to pay their subscription from the proceeds of the sale of their fruit, to pay now, as we need the money very much.

Mr. R. Kanters and his son L. T., left for New Orleans La., and Galveston, Tex., last Tuesday. There is $500,000 worth of U. S. harbor contracts to be let there next week, and it is the desire of these gentlemen to be present at the awarding of the contracts.

Dr. J. H. Schouten, of South Wolde, Drenthe, Netherlands, father of Drs. R. A. and F. J. Schouten of this city, has just completed the fiftieth year of services as practicing physician. At the last meeting of the Grand River Valley Medical Society, he was made an honorary member of the society.

LAST Sunday morning Mr. G. Brouwer, of Vriesland, while driving home from church with his family, one of the wheels of his buggy ran off the axle and tipped the vehicle over, breaking Mrs. Brouwer's arm just above the elbow. She was taken into the house of Mr. C. Pik and Dr. Moon was summoned. At this hour of writing the patient is doing nicely.

OUR banker, Mr. J. Van Putten, has got the material on the ground, and is about to construct a fire and burglar proof vault in his "Holland City Bank." The dimensions of the vault will be 8x10 feet, the wall will be 20 inches in diameter, while on the inside it will be covered with boiler iron, and when completed, will be fitted up with all the latest improvements that generally baffle the most expert safe-breakers.

AMONG the recent promotions on the Chicago & West Michigan Railway, we are pleased to mention that of our young friend Nick. Mohr, son of Michael Mohr, of this city. Nick. has been promoted to the position of locomotive engineer, having charge during the past three weeks of Engine No. 38, on the White River division of the road, in the absence of the regular engineer of that engine. This shows our young men what steady work and close application to business will accomplish.

ACCORDING to the new registration law an entire new registry of electors is made necessary this year, and no person who fails to comply with this law will be permitted to vote at the coming election. The new law requires that every person wishing to register shall appear personally and leave his name with the Clerk of the township in which he resides. Heretofore it has been the custom to send in names by a third party, but this is not allowed under the present law. A person can, however, leave his name with the clerk or deputy clerk of the township in which he resides at any day prior to the meeting of the Board of Registration and his name will be registered the same as if he waited until the Board was in session. We advise the electors of this city to attend to this matter at once, and not put off registering until the Board of Registration meets four weeks from to-day.

THE following appeared in the Chicago Times of the 29th inst., "A Toledo dispatch says that it is now an assured fact that the Michigan and Ohio railroad will be built. The route, from present indication will traverse the line surveyed in 1879, and known as the Toledo and Milwaukee road, running via Tecumseh, Addison, Marshall, and other thriving towns and villages of Michigan, to Allegan, which will be the western terminus of the road. At that point it will connect with the Chicago and West Michigan Railway. The eastern terminus of the road has not as yet been fully determined although the probability is that it will be independent of other roads, and located at a point on the Maumee river, near the Wheeling and Lake Erie bridge. Should this be the case, the road will have a length of about 140 miles. Work will begin immediately. Eight engineering parties are now in the field, and the company confidently expect to have between 70 and 80 miles of road completed this winter."

RATHER warm for this time of the year.

WE have received a pamphlet from the St. Clair Mineral Spring Company.

CHOICE steaks of beef, pork and lamb at the market of C. Landaul to-day.

WE were shown a bunch of Concord grapes this week that weighed over a half pound.

WE understand that Mr. W. H. Parks, of this city, contemplates removing to Cadillac. We hope this is not so.

LIST of letters remaining in the post-office at Holland, Mich., Oct., 4th 1882: M. S. Cambell, Phill McNany E. J. Porter. Wm. VERBEEK, P. M.

Mr. N. H. Reynolds, the genial jeweler employed by Mr. O. Breyman, left last Monday afternoon on a two week's trip through Indiana and Illinois. We think that a "watch" ought to be set on him during his absence.

Mr. John Borst, proprietor of Fairview Cheese Factory, of Vriesland, captured the first premium, at the Grand Rapids Fair last week, for "display of cheese, single cheese factory and private dairy," this is the way the premium list has it.

THE Democratic-Greenback Senatorial Convention met in Muskegon, yesterday. We were in hopes that we would be able to give our readers the result of the Convention, but up to a late hour we received no news and went to press. The nominee will undoubtedly be the Hon. John Roost, of this city.

Mr. O. Breyman, our popular jeweler, is constantly receiving additions to his already large stock of silver plated-ware, watches, both gold and silver, clocks, jewelry, etc. To a question propounded to him this week, as to his intention in thus increasing his stock, he replied, "getting ready for the Holidays." We had forgotten the fact that Christmas was coming.

LAST Sunday a construction train passed through this city bound for Benton Harbor. It came from Kalamazoo via Allegan and its mission was to distribute ties and rails on the western end of the Cincinnati, Wabash and Michigan Railroad now being extended from Niles to Benton Harbor. Twelve cars of rails and three of spikes also went through, with the same destination.

Mr. H. Boone, of this city, while in Grand Rapids last Thursday was quite severely injured by a team running away. It appears that he was out driving with another gentleman when the team became frightened and ran away, throwing the gentlemen out, and the wagon passed over Mr. Boone. We were not able to ascertain to what extent he was injured, but understand that there is no doubt but what he will recover.

WHILE in Grand Rapids attending the Fair last week, Mr. Arnold De Feyter, of the township of Holland, purchased the Cotwold lamb called "Enterprise", which weighs 150 pounds and is 6 months old. The lamb was bred by A. M. Hill, of Caledonia, Mich., and was bought by Mr. De Feyter for the purpose of improving the common breed of sheep which he has. The Cotwold is the "long wool mutton sheep" and is a very fine animal.

THE Democrats and Greenbackers held separate conventions in Grand Haven last Monday. At one o'clock the delegates met, the Democrats at the Court House and the Greenbackers at the Council Rooms. The chairman of the Democratic Convention was Mr. John Roost, of this city, the secretary, Mr. R. A. Hyma, of Holland township. The officers of the Greenback convention were, chairman, Geo. E. Hubbard, of Grand Haven; secretary, Mr. Jacob Baar, our present courteous and capable Register of Deeds. After the regular routine business had been gone through with, a committee of three were appointed from each convention, to take into consideration the question of "fusion." The committee reported favorable and the marriage was consummated. The Democrats were given the following nominations to make; Clerk, Treasurer, Circuit Court Commissioners, Coroners, and Representative for the first district. The Greenbackers were entrusted with the duty of nominating men for Prosecuting Attorney, Register, Surveyor, Fish Inspector, and Representative for the second district. The nominations were then made and the following ticket put in the field: Sheriff, D. C. Wachs, of Grand Haven; Prosecuting Attorney, S. L. Lowing, of Grand Haven; Treasurer, R. A. Hyma, of Holland township; Register of Deeds, Jacob Baar; Clerk, Frank P. Whitman, of Tallmadge; Circuit Court Commissioners, V. W. Seeley, W. N. Angell; Surveyor, Thos. Sheridan, of Polkton; Fish Inspector, John Zeitlow; Coroners, I. Fairbanks, Dr. J. B. McNett; Representatives, first district: Major B. D. Safford; second district, Geo. F. Richardson, of Georgetown. Both conventions were fairly attended and acted harmoniously. The ticket is considered, by members of the Demo-Greenback party, to be a strong one and it is expected that a portion, if not the whole ticket, will be elected. Time will tell.

THE county conventions are done with. Now look out for "stump" orators.

Mr. H. A. Carnahan, of Steamburg, N. Y., is visiting his brother-in-law, Mr. M. Fuller, of this city.

WE are pained to record the death of the infant child of Mrs. S. Kuyper. The bereavement falls heavily upon the mother, who still so keenly feels the loss of her lamented husband. —Sioux County (Ia.) Herald.

LAST Friday night the Democrats of this city held a caucus in the office of I. Fairbanks, Esq., and elected the following delegates to the Democratic County Convention: W. J. Scott, K. Schaddelee, E. M. Williams, John Roost, I. Fairbanks, G. Van Schelven, and Jacob Van Putten.

To those of my scholars who have not completed their term of Guitar instruction, also to those who contemplate beginning a new term, I wish to give notice that I will be in Holland ready to re-organize my classes during the week of Oct. 16th.

FANNIE E. HOPKINS, ALLEGAN Oct. 5th, 1882.

LAKE SHORE ITEMS

IN accordance with our promise of last week, we send you the following which we deem of interest to the people of this locality. Mrs. Cochrane, the wife of one of our well known citizens, is seriously ill. Mrs. Cochrane taught one of our district schools a few years ago and all feel an interest in her speedy recovery. The past two weeks has been "fair time," in a number of our neighboring counties but this long neglected spot was not as well represented as it should have been in a county fair. By the way Mr. Editor, why does not Holland "stir up" and organize a Colony Fair, in place of those detestible "market-days" which are of no good to anybody, we feel sure that the "Lake Shore" would do all that could be reasonably expected of us, to make the enterprise a perfect success. Our district schools commenced last Monday, one of them is being taught by Mrs. Rogers, from our vicinity, a lady who has had experience and success in the profession. The school usually spoken of as the "North School" is in charge of Miss Annie Wiersma, of Holland, a recent student at Hope College, we hope she may be successful with this, her first school. Mr. Editor we all wish we could recall "Biddy" long enough to ascertain for a certainty, who the paragon she spoke of is, if it is the person who recently handled the broom-stick instead of a buggy whip in a recent affray that we, together with some of our neighbors, were silent spectators, we say deliver us from all paragons of the female kind. We don't want that broom-stick against us. It was a very realistic drama of the border-ruffian kind. If the weapons had been of a dangerous specie it might have ended tragically. ZEKE.

FLASH.

THE FIREMAN'S STORY.

Flash was a white-foot sorrel, an' run on No. 2; Not much stable manners—an' average horse to see; Notional in his methods—strong in love an' hates; Not very much respected, or popular 'mongst his mates;

Dull an' moody an' sleepy on "off" an' quiet days;

Fall of turbidly sour looks, an' small sarcastic ways;

Scowled an' bit at his partner, an' banged the stable floor—

With other tricks intended to designate life a bore.

But when, be't day or night time, he heard the alarm-bell ring,

He'd rush for his place in the harness with a regular tiger spring;

An' with nervous shivers the clasp of buckle an' band,

Until it was plainly ev'dent he'd like to lend a hand.

An' when the word was given, away he would rush an' tear,

As if a thousan' witches was rumplin' up his hair,

An' wako his mate up crazy with its magnetic charm;

For every hoof-beat sounded a regular fire alarm!

Never a horse a jockey would worship an' admire

Like Flash in front of his engine, a-racin' with a fire;

Never a horse so lazy, so dawdlin', an' so slack

As Flash upon his return trip, a-drawin' the engine back.

Now, when the different horses gets tender-footed an' old

They ain't no use in our business; so Flash was finally sold

To quite a respectable milkman; who found it not so fine

A-busin' of God's creatures outside o' their reg'lar line.

Reems as if I could see Flash a-mopin' along here now,

A-feelin' that he was simply assistant to a cow;

But sometimes he'd imagine he heard the alarm-bell's din.

An' jump an' rear for a minute before they could hold him in;

An' once, in spite o' his master, he strolled in 'mongst us chaps,

To talk with the other horses, of former fires, perhaps;

Whereat the milkman kicked him; wherefor, us boys to please,

He begged that horse's pardon upon his bended knees.

But one day, for a big fire as we was makin' a dash,

Be' o' the horses we had on somewhat ressemblin' Flash,

Yellin' an' rinishin' an' rushin', with excellent voice an' heart,

We passed the poor old fellow, a-tuggin' away at his cart.

Ever I see an old horse grow upwards into a new,

Ever I see a driver whose traps behind him flew,

'Twas that old horse, a rompin' an' rushin' down the track,

An' that respectable milkman, a-tryin' to hold him back.

Away he dashed like a cyclone for the head of No. 3,

Gained the lead, an' kept it, an' steered his journey free;

Dodgin' the wheels an' horses, an' still on the keenest "silk,"

An' furnishin' all that district with good respectable milk.

Crowds a-yellin' an' runnin', and vainly hollerin' "Whoa!"

Milkman bracin' an' sawin', with never a bit of show;

Firemen laughin' an' chucklin', and hollerin', "Good! go in!"

Hoss a-gettin' down to it, an' sweepin' along like sin.

Finally come where the fire was, halted with a "thud,"

Sent the respectable milkman heels over head in mud;

Watched till he see the engine properly workin' there;

After which he relinquished all interest in the affair.

Moped an' wilted and dawdled—faded away once more;

Took up his old occupation of votin' life a bore;

Laid down in his harness, and—sorry I am to say—

The milkman he had drawn there drew his dead body away.

That's the whole o' my story; I've seen, more'n once or twice,

That poor dumb animal's actions are full of human advice;

An' if you ask what Flash taught, I simply answer you, then,

That poor old horse was a symbol of some intelligent men.

—Will Carleton, in Harper's Magazine.

THE SMALL BOY'S STORY.

It all came of my having a railway key and being made to take music lessons.

Thompson gave me the key when he was leaving last term. I don't know how he came by it, or what good it was to him, as he never saw a train except when he went home for the holidays; but he was always talking of the convenience of having such a thing when you were traveling, and hinting at the mysterious penalties the company might inflict if they caught you using it.

He gave it to me in exchange for a bit of Letty's hair (she's my sister, and Thompson was dreadfully in love with her) and a scrap of the bonnet trimming she wore in church. I stole that, but had to ask her for the hair, and she brought out a whole bundle and said I might trade away the lot if I chose. "Hair wa'n't worn much now."

Music was another thing altogether. Herr Otto Finke was an old friend of my father's, and lived at Luckboro', our market town.

He took a fancy to me—both him, and actually persuaded my father and mother to let me come over to Luckboro' every market-day, with my father, for a lesson in German and music. I didn't mind dining with him first (uncommonly queer messes we had, and lots of jam with them)—but the music was simply disgusting—in the holidays, too!—and the lessons generally ended by Finke getting to the piano himself and warbling songs of his Vaterland by the hour. He did so once too often, though—and now I have got to my story.

We used to come and go between Mosslands and Luckboro' by omnibus. There was a Mosslands station on the line between Luckboro' and London, but my father never went by it if he could help it. When he did, though, I had the key with me. I never dare use it, and began to think I had made a bad bargain with Thompson.

One Tuesday, however, last winter, Finke got so carried away by his own sweet singing that he kept on long after I ought to have started to meet my father, and then got so remorseful that I thought he was going to cry, or perhaps want to keep me all night.

"Look here," I said, "it doesn't matter. There's a train that gets in as soon as the bus. I can catch it if I run—Good by!" And off I scudded, one arm in and one arm out of my top-coat, for I was sure he'd object or want to see me off. I had money, and there was a train, which came up long before I had seen all I wanted about the station.

I made a dash at a carriage. It wasn't locked, as I half hoped it might be, and in I scrambled, but was nearly blown out again by a volley of the strongest language I ever did hear. The train started and jerked me down into a seat before I'd time to get my breath. I was not used to bad expressions, and my fellow-traveler's remarks made my blood run cold.

There were ladies in the carriage, but he didn't seem to mind that. He had a red, scowling face, with heavy red eyebrows and bloodshot eyes. All the rest of him was a mass of railway rugs and wraps. I had tumbled over his toes into the middle seat opposite, where I sat, scared and speechless, till I caught the eyes of the lady next to him fixed on me.

Ugh! such a bad old face! A tight, cruel mouth, with all sorts of coil-lines about it, and wicked, sharp, gray eyes that screwed into one like gimlets. I didn't care much for Redface by this time. I didn't believe he would "twist my neck and chuck me out of the window," as he suggested; but I hated her all over at once, from her sausage-curls—grizzly-gray, two on each side—to her hooked claws of fingers that were twitching away at her knitting-needles, in and out of a big gray stocking.

"Hush, Sammy," she said quite sweetly; "the poor child means no harm, and he can easily get out at the next station. Where are you going to, love?"

I could only gape in reply, and she must have thought I was a softy, for she twisted my ticket clean out of my hand before I knew what she was after.

"Mosslands. Very good. That's the next station. I'll see him safe out, Sammy dear."

Sammy growled an inarticulate response from under his rugs.

The third passenger had neither spoken nor stirred. She sat on the same side as the other two, covered with a big plaid rug and a blue woolen veil tied over her head. I could make nothing out except that she seemed asleep in a very uncomfortable attitude.

I sat in the middle opposite the old woman. It was so disagreeable, finding her sharp eyes on me while her needles clicked on just the same, that I thought I might as well pretend to go to sleep, too. So I curled myself up and gave one or two nods, and then dropped my face on my arm so that she couldn't see it.

Presently I heard the needles go slower and slower. I peeped and saw the big bonnet and sausage curls give a lurch forward and then backward, once, twice; then a big snore; and then she was off, too.

I didn't stir for a minute, for I saw that "Sammy" was up to something. He leant forward and peered at her to make sure she was asleep; then cautiously groped in the seat beside her and hauled up a little black bag. He opened it softly, drew out a silver-topped flash and closed it just as a jerk of the train roused the old lady. Sammy dived back into his corner, and she sat bolt upright, rubbed her eyes hard, felt suspiciously about till she found the bag, stowed it way behind her and resumed her knitting. Only a few moments, though. With a weary groan she let stockings, needles and all go down with a run and dropped back sounder asleep than before.

Then from Sammy's corner came a goggle—soft and low—many times repeated, then all was quiet.

Now was my time. I began to look about and think what I should do first. Whether I dared get up on the seat and see how the communication with the guard worked, and what would happen if I pulled it. The train did stop I could make off or say it was Sammy. He was half tipsy now and people wouldn't believe him. First of all I went to the window: to look out a little. It was pitch dark outside, and all I could see was the reflection of the carriage and of the lady in the blue woolen veil. She was sitting up now and looking intently at me. What an uncomfortable set they were, to be sure.

I looked round at her directly. She was very young—younger than Letty, and she's just 17, and not pretty—but so thin and frightened looking that I felt quite unhappy about her.

She fixed her big bright eyes on me and put up her finger. "Don't speak," she said in a clear whisper. "Keep looking out of the window. Can you hear what I am saying?"

I nodded and she went on, looking now at me and now at the old woman.

"If they get me to London I am a dead woman. You are my last chance. Will you help me?"

I nodded very hard indeed, and looked at the communication with the guard. She shook her head.

"No, that's no good. I must get away at the next station. He's safe. Can you stop her from following me?"

I didn't believe I could. I might have thrown a rug over Sammy, and at a him for a minute or two; but that old woman was too much for me. I felt that directly she woke she'd see what I was thinking of, and struggle me before I could stir. The precious minutes were flying—the miles were hurrying past us in the outside gloom—the girl's big woful eyes were fixed on me in desperate appeal.

"I have friends that will save me if I can but get to them," she panted. "Just one minute's chance—only one—"

All at once I had an idea. A splendid one! "Look at this," I whispered, and held up my railway key. "If I open this door, dare you get out? You can hold outside till the train stops. Run straight across the down line. There's only a gap and a hedge on the top. Lots of gaps in it nearer the station. There you are on the Luckborough road. Do you hear?"

I was quite hot and out of breath whispering all this as plain as I could. She caught every word as fast as I could think it almost.

What with the feelings of my own cleverness; hatred of that nasty old woman and delight in spiting her, and pity for the poor girl, I felt as brave as any fellow, however big, could do, and full of ideas as well.

"Give me that," I said, pointing to her blue veil. "They won't see you're gone if I sit here with it over my head."

"Oh, no, no! They'll kill you."

"Not they! They can't interfere with me." (I declare I felt as if I could fight Sammy and a dozen old ladies just then.) "Quick! now or never." I tied the veil over my head and lowered the window as softly as possible. There was no time to lose for the train was slackening speed even then. I unlocked the door. She gave me one look that made me feel braver than ever, and inclined to cry, both at once; and in a second she was out on the step. The train stopped. I saw her skirt flutter in the stream of light that fell from our open carriage door across the down line of rails, and that was all, and I was huddled down under the big plaid rug with the old woman wide awake standing over me.

"Drat the boy, Sammy, call the porter; he's got out at the wrong side."

"Call-un-yre-self," answered Sammy, all in one word.

She pulled the door to and tramped back to her seat, taking no more notice of me than if I had been a cushion of the carriage. "It don't matter if he has broken his neck, either," she muttered, "perhaps we'd better make no fuss." The train was off again. I dared not jump up while she was in the way, and thought I must take my chance at the next station.

"Oh, my bones and body!" she groaned, presently. "Oh, what a time it has been! Sammy!"

No answer.

"Sammy!" She was up again and I think she hauled him up and shook him, for something fell with a crash, like a broken bottle.

"You idiot!" she screamed. "When you want all the brains you've got, and more too! To play me this trick! Serve you right if I get out and leave you at the next station—ugh!"

It sounded as if she were banging his head against the carriage. That and the fresh air seemed to rouse him. He got up and put his head out of the window for a short time, and then replied slowly and impressively:

"Now, look here, old woman. None of your nonsense. When he's wanted, Samuel Nixon is all there. And no man alive can say he isn't," he went on solemnly, holding on to one word till he was sure of the next. "As to this business, I ask you—is it mine or is it yours? Now, then?"

"Yours, I should think; as it's your wife who is giving us all this trouble. I wish I'd left you to fight it out yourselves."

"Stop that," said Sammy, who was talking himself sober, and, consequently, savage. "I'll not have it put upon me. I didn't want to marry her; that was your doing, and I don't want to make away with her; that's your doing, and, if it's a hanging matter, I am not the one to hang for it."

"Heaven forgive you, Sammy," said the old woman, evidently horribly scared. "Don't you talk in that way to your poor old mother—don't. If the poor creature was in her right mind she'd be the first to say her old nurse was her best friend—the only one she had in the world when her pa died and left her."

Here she sniffled a little. Sammy gave a sort of derisive growl.

"And as to her marrying you, it stood to reason she must marry somebody, sometime, left all alone in the world with her good looks and her fortune; and why not my handsome son? It was luck for you, Sammy, though you turn against me now. There you were, just come home from foreign parts, without a halfpenny in your pocket or a notion where to turn to find one; and there was she without a relation or friend to interfere with you—as a baby—not a creature to stop her doing as she chose with herself and her money. It would have been a sin and a shame to lose such a chance! Of course, I wanted to see my handsome lad as good a gentleman as the best of them." The old woman seemed to be talking on and on purposely, like telling a riddle to a child to keep it quiet. Sammy growled again in a milder tone.

"Oh, yes. Say it was my fault, do! You can talk black white when it pleases you."

"It was your fault, Sammy. You might have lived happy and peaceably if you'd chosen. Haven't I been on my bended knees to beg you to let her alone when you was treating her that shamefully that the whole country-side was ringing with it? You know it and others know it. And I can tell you what Mr. Samuel Nixon, if she'd been found dead in her bed, as I expected every morning of my life to hear, there wasn't a servant in the place that wouldn't have spoken up before the Coroner—and glad to do it. Who'd have swung for it, then, I'd like to know?"

The brute was mastered. I heard him shuffling his feet about uneasily; then, in a maudlin whimper: "It was drink, nothing else, and her aggravating, whining ways. Don't be hard on me, old woman, I'm sure I've given in handsome to all your plans."

"Because you couldn't help yourself—yon fool. Now you see what it is to have your poor old mother to turn to. Your wife may talk as much as she pleases now. Who'll believe her when we've got it written down by two grand London doctors that she's as mad as mad can be? Who's to mind her talk, or any one else's? Aren't we taking her up to London just for the good of her health, to a nice safe place where she will get well looked after and kept from getting herself and other folks into any more trouble; and then you and me will go back, Sammy, and live as happy and comfortable as you please."

"They will treat her like a lady—oh, mother?"

"Of course they will; a beautiful place, and the best of living. Bless you, she'll be as happy as the day is long. It does you credit being so tender-hearted, Sammy. I knew you couldn't abide seeing her storming and raving as she did that night, so I just gave her a little sup of something before we started, and you see she's been sleeping like a baby ever since. And the gentleman—where she's going you know—he gave me this bottle; and when we get to London I've just to give her a whiff of it on a handkerchief, and off she goes as quiet as a lamb. No screams or tantrums this time; and he and his nurses will be on the look-out for us with his carriage, and before she knows it there she'll be as snug as you please."

This was awful! What should I do? Were we ever going to stop? Was there another station before London? Should I be drugged, dragged off and made away with! I knew if they found me it was all over with me. The pattern of the blue Shetland veil danced before my eyes—the noise of the train was as the sound of the roar of artillery in my ears. I sat up, ready for a spring and a struggle.

A jerk! Another! A stop, and the door flung open.

"Tickets, please." I made one plunge. I flung the rug clean over the old woman, dashed my arm into Sammy's face, and tumbled headlong out into the arms of the astonished ticket collector. I felt him clutch me, and then the ground rose up, or I went down—down—into an unfathomable depth of blackness!

"Hallo! old fellow. Better now?" were the first words I heard. Thompson's voice! There he was with a glass of water in his hand, stooping over me. Thompson's mother was kneeling beside me, cnddling me up against her nice soft sealskin. I was on the waiting-room sofa, and about a dozen people were all standing around. Thompson went and telegraphed home I was safe, and then he and his mother took me to the house in London where they were staying.

I can't remember much after that. I was ill for many weeks, I believe. I tried to tell people what had happened, but no one would listen. They try, even now, to make me believe I dreamed it in my illness. I've got it told now through, and every word of it is solemn truth. Beside, didn't I see and smell Letty burning the blue Shetland veil.

I've had no more music lessons since, that's one good thing.

The railway key? Oh, I left that sticking in the door. That's all—The Argosy.

Alexander the Great.

Alexander, son of Philip, King of Macedon, was born at Pella, 356 B. C. His early education was intrusted to the philosopher Aristotle. When 16 he acted as regent, during the absence of his father, and two years later he fought at the battle of Chaeronea, that sealed the fate of Greece. At the age of twenty he mounted the throne, and immediately prepared himself for the conquest of Persia. Crossing the Hellespont, in 334, he met the Persians at Granicus, and there won his first victory over the Persian king, Darius. He then marched through Asia Minor, conquering as he went until he reached Gordium, where, unable to loose the famous Gordian knot, which, it was said, only the conqueror of Asia could untie, he cut it with his sword, as a proof of his future success. In 333 he defeated Darius at Issus. He next besieged Tyre for seven months, until that city was forced to surrender; then he entered Egypt, and was gladly received by the people as their deliverer from the Persian yoke. While there he founded the great city of Alexandria as a monument to his own power. Soon after his return to Asia Minor occurred the battle of Arbela (B. C. 331), which ended in the final defeat of Darius and the subjection of all Asia Minor to the rule of Alexander. It also opened the gates of Babylon and Susa, but having robbed them of their gold Alexander passed on toward India. During this campaign he married Roxana, a daughter of one of the conquered chiefs of Punjab. His plan to invade India failed through the insubordination of his troops, and he returned to Babylon, which he designed to make the capital of his Asiatic empire, but while planning improvements for the city he was attacked with a fever which proved fatal, and he died B. C. 323, in the 33d year of his reign and the 33d year of his life.

THERE is a curious geographical fact in connection with the Kootenai river. Its course is in the shape of a horse-shoe. It rises in British Columbia, runs into the United States, and waters a vast region, and then circles back to the land of its birth, and empties into the Columbia in British territory. During its course it passes within half a mile of Columbia, and a canal of that distance over a grassy prairie would save it a course of five hundred miles before reaching its goal.

RED is the favorite color at present for children's frocks. It rivals the white dresses formerly used for little girls, and appears in some guise in almost every toilet of the season.

"I HAVE found St. Jacobs Oil to be a most excellent remedy for rheumatic pains," says Mr. F. Latham, 5 Harrison street, Providence, R. I.—Boston Herald.

The Precious Blood.

The blood is the most precious element of life. It is very susceptible to the influence of organic diseases. It is quickly poisoned by coming in contact with anything of a poisonous nature. Don't let this stream of life ebb too low. When the blood becomes thin and watery, disease enters the citadel of life and becomes master. Dr. Guyssott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla is a blood purifier. It will infuse new strength and vigor into the whole circulatory system. It makes the blood rich, red and pure, and drives out all disease and poisonous humors, and gives strength to every part of the body. Ask your druggist to get it for you.

Train Robbery in Colorado.

A recent telegram from Denver gives the following particulars of a train robbery near Granada, Col., on the Santa Fe road: Two masked men mounted the engine and told Engineer Bishop to pull out, showing two revolvers at his head. He refused, and they told him to go ahead or die. He opened the throttle and pulled out about a mile and a half beyond Granada, where they ordered him to stop. He did so. Here fifteen men with revolvers ran along either side of the train, while the two made the engineer hold the train. Conductor Dees ran forward to see what was the trouble. The robbers fired, and he ran back to the smoking-car. A Sheriff and deputy from Raton and another from Las Vegas were on the car. He asked for protection for the passengers. They pulled their revolvers, and the two men who boarded the train at Granada left the smoker by the rear door and joined the robbers. They no doubt intended to rob passengers, but when they saw the Sheriff pull their revolvers they weakened. The forward express car was entered and robbed of $5,000. They did not get into the rear car, which was locked and bolted. When they had secured all they wanted they ran to their horses, which were hitched nearby, and told the engineer to pull out. A safe in the rear car contained about $10,000, but it was not molested. They did not know it was there. There was no offer of resistance to the Sheriff. A posse of citizens from Granada went in pursuit of the robbers.

Mr. JERRY WINCHELL, of Warsaw, Ky., writes: "Dr. Guyssott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla is the best blood purifier I ever used. I find it cures pimples, etc., very quickly. For indigestion it is unexcelled by any medicine I ever tried."

Fiction for Public Libraries.

A controversy has been in progress for three years among the trustees of the Public Library concerning the quality of fiction on the shelves. They are agreed that many books in the library are unfit for general circulation, but they are not unanimous about the amount of oversight that should be placed on the reading of the public. The worst books have been put by themselves, and anybody who has come of age can get them without going to the trouble of searching the catalogues. The majority of the trustees are willing to have the supervision of books issued to minors made a little more strict, but the minority go further. They ask for a new examination of all the works in the juvenile and fiction departments of the library, and the removal of all such as are "of a positively immoral character," if any, such as "tend to lower the moral tone of the reader," and such as "tend to encourage a spirit of irreverence concerning religion and virtue." From the books that remain they wish to have besides an approved list prepared for issue to boys and girls.

JUDGE HILTON, while proposing to convert into an office building that landmark of Broadway, the Stewart store, at the corner of Chambers street, New-York, really desires to sell it for $2,250,000 and has been offered $2,000,000. Mr. Potter will not rebuild on the World site, but offers the property for $800,000.

A Suggestion.

A day's pleasure at your disposal, instead of a day's agony. Every one who has corns can testify to the constant discomfort they produce. "I could have enjoyed the ball, or the picnic, or some other social pastime, but oh! how my corns ached!" No necessity now for such complaints. PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR removes the cause speedily. Try it. Beware of another article "just as good." Take only Putnam's. Sold everywhere. Wholesale, LORR, STOUTENBURGH & Co., Chicago.

A CORRESPONDENT asks: "What time of year do the days begin to shorten?" When you have a note in bank. A note in bank is the great annihilator of time. The days are crowded together in thin layers, and the nights are like a smear from the blacking brush.—Arkansas Traveler.

DURING 1880 Europe produced 203,330 tons of zinc, of which nearly 99,000 tons came from Germany, and about two-thirds from Upper Silesia. Belgium contributed 65,100 tons, England 22,000, France 12,715, and Austria-Hungary 3,200.

TWENTY-FOUR HOURS TO LIVE.

From John Kuhn, Lafayette, Ind., who announces that he is now in "perfect health," we have the following: "One year ago I was, to all appearance, in the last stages of Consumption. Our best physicians gave me up. I finally got so low that our doctor said I could not live twenty-four hours. My friends then purchased a bottle of DR. WM. HALL'S BALM FOR THE LUNGS, which considerably benefited me. I continued until I took nine bottles. I am now in perfect health, having used no other medicine."

Appeal to the Conscience

Have you not good and sufficient reason for believing that the common practice of vending ardent spirits by the small quantity has greatly increased the sin of drunkenness?

How can you conscientiously adopt, or continue a practice which is productive of so much evil?

How can you conscientiously sell a man rum, when you have reason to believe he has taken more than he ought?

How can you furnish one with rum, or other intoxicating spirits, when you know that it will convert him into a madman, and send him home to abuse and injure his family?

How can you sell a man ardent spirits, when you clearly perceive that he is wasting his property, reducing a worthy family to want?

How can you take a poor man's sixpence or shilling every day, as he gets it, when you have reason to believe his children are without a morsel of bread, or wholly dependent on charity?

How can you conscientiously furnish a man with a jug of rum on Saturday evening, when you have sufficient reason to believe that he will spend the Sabbath in drunkenness, or riot, and perhaps call his neighbors to increase the excess of wickedness.

How can you conscientiously assist the intemperate man to this particular means of self-murder, merely because he desires it, when you would not for your right hand sell him arsenic or laudanum for the same purpose?

Above all, how can you conscientiously encourage, or even permit inconsiderate young men and boys to hang about your store and drink, when you must know that this is the high road to intemperance, and that they are beginning to form a habit which will most probably end in their temporal and eternal ruin?

Is it "doing to others as you would that they should do to you," to witness the existence of any of the evils to which the preceding questions allude, and not use your influence to prevent or remove them?

When you see the intemperate perishing on your right hand and on your left, does the solemn question never occur, what influence have I had in forming their character, and bringing upon them this ruin? I speak as to wise men; judge ye what I say.

Virtue Acknowledged.

Mrs. Ira Mulholland, Albany, N. Y., writes: "For several years I have suffered from oft-recurring bilious headaches, constipation, dyspepsia, and complaints peculiar to my sex. Since using your Burdock Blood Bitters I am entirely relieved." Price $1.00.

Years of Suffering.

Mrs. Barnhart, cor. Pratt and Broadway, Buffalo, was for twelve years a sufferer from rheumatism, and after trying every known remedy without avail, was entirely cured by Thomas' Electric Oil.

Popular Everywhere.

"Burdane," the French name for Burdock, is as popular in France as in America. As an anti-scorbutic, aperient and diuretic it cannot be too highly extolled. Burdock Blood Bitters combine "in a condensed form" all its good properties. For gout, cutaneous disorders and kidney troubles they are unequalled. Price $1.00.

How's the Baby.

"How's the baby?" "His croup is better this morning, thank you. We gave him some of Thomas' Electric Oil as you advised, doctor, and shall give him some more in an hour or so." Next day the doctor pronounced the youngster cured.

A Valuable Addition.

Because it is beneficial to the scalp and adds to personal beauty by restoring color and lustre to gray or faded hair, is why Parker's Hair Balsam is such a popular dressing.

Marvellous Cure of Stone in the Bladder—Large Stones Removed by Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

From the Fallstaff (Mass.) Eagle.

Stone in the Bladder is a very dangerous ailment; but many most remarkable cures have of late been wrought by "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy"—the invention of Dr. Kennedy of Rondout, N. Y. Another striking case is now added to the list. Mr. Peter Lawler, of Dalton, Mass., states in a letter to Dr. Kennedy that he had been troubled with bladder complaint for 14 years, and had consulted at different times seven physicians; but nothing beyond temporary allayment of the pain had been worked. Towards the end of last January Mr. Lawler called on Dr. Kennedy. Sounding him the doctor "struck stone." He decided that Mr. Lawler should first try the "Favorite Remedy," so as, if possible, to avoid an operation. And here is the remarkable result: "Dear Doctor Kennedy—The day after I came home I passed two gravel stones, and am doing nicely now. If you would like to see the stones I will send them to you." This letter bears date "Dalton, Mass., Feb. 6th," and is signed "Peter Lawler." The stones, which are so large as to warrant for "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" the claim that it is the most successful specific for Stone yet discovered, are now in Dr. Kennedy's possession. Incidentally Mr. Lawler also states that the "Favorite Remedy" at the same time cured him of a stubborn case of Rheumatism; and it is a fact that in all effusions arising out of disorder of the liver or urinary organs it is a searching remedy and works marvellous benefits. It is in itself almost a medicine chest. Order it of your druggist. Price $1.00 a bottle.

NOTICE.

Public Notice is hereby given, that on the 12th day of October A. D. 1892, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the house of John Bhole, in the Township of Blendon, in the County of Ottawa, I will be present for the purpose of letting contracts for the construction of a Drain in said Township, described as follows: Commencing at a point 15 feet south, and 16 00-100 chains west of the 1/4 post on the east line of sec. 35 T. 6 N. R. 14 W. and runs 1/4 S. 84 degrees 50 minutes W. 22 rods 7 links; 2nd 3/4 S. 4 degrees W. 45 rods 19 links; 3rd N. 89 degrees 30 minutes E. 30 rods 11 links; 4th S. 14 degrees 25 minutes E. 30 rods 11 links; 5th S. 18 1/2 degrees 25 minutes to the south line of said sec. 35. The above described line is the center line of the "Beaverdam Drain," of Blendon, width of said drain is to be 4 feet on the bottom and the slope of sides 8 inches to one foot rise, the depth 3 feet at the commencement and at other points as marked on the "ade stakes, and that at that time I will let contract for the construction of said Drain by sections, to the lowest responsible bidder or bidders. Also take notice that I will then and there, at the time of the letting of such contracts, be present to review all assessment of benefits upon the lands upon which said Drain is to be constructed, and assessed for the construction thereof.

Dated Blendon, this 28 day of September. A. D. 1892.

HORACE B. ATWOOD,

Township Drain Commissioner for the Township of Blendon in the County of Ottawa.

Wanted

AGENTS! For Gen. Dodge's new book,

THIRTY-THREE YEARS AMONG

OUR WILD INDIANS

Introduction by Gen. W. T. Sherman. Contains a truthful and graphic record of the author's observations, thrilling adventures and exciting experiences during 33 years among the wildest tribes of the Great West. Splendidly illustrated with Steel Plates, Fine Engravings and Superb Chromo-Lithograph Plates in fifteen colors. Has received the unqualified endorsement of the most eminent men of our country. Gen. Grant writes: "The best book on Indian and Frontier Life ever written." Bishop Wiley, of Cincinnati, says: "A much needed book and one of immense value." Chicago Interior: "A book of standard and substantial value." Chicago Advance: "No other book contains as full and accurate account of the Indians." Chicago Tribune: "It reads like a romance, and is far superior to any book ever published on the subject." The Chicago Inter Ocean: "It vividly portrays the Indian just as he is."
