Mr. Gough on Temperance.

Mr. Gough was received with great applause. In the course of an hour's address, he said: They all agreed that drunkenness was an evil, and that the traffic in alcoholic drinks was immoral. Whether it was a lawful principle to suppress the consumption of alcoholic drinks or not was not what they ought to specially think about. The question was, after all, were these drinks necessary? He had made 7,200 speeches in favor of temperance, had traveled 40,200 miles to make them
and he had done all that since the year 1846. They held that their principle was lawful. If a man ceased to be a drunkard, that was all that was wanted. Every man who drank a glass of whiskey or any other spirit drank it at a risk, because one glass led to others. They could not make a moderate drinker out of a drunkard.
Total abstinence was the only cure. The grace of God enabled a man to take away the terrible temptation of drink, and without grace the man would still have the depraved tendency. He spoke of facts, and not of theories; of men and of women.
For Christian men and women there was no enemy to fight, for they had lost it; but drink, which was devastation and death,
was the dire enemy of morality. "Drink's my curse" came from the House of Correction, from the lunatic asylum, from the hulks, and from everywhere where character was lost and where crime was paramount. In the end of his address, Mr.
Gough said, if a principle was worth adopting as an example to save others,
was it not worth adopting for its own sake?
As the tiger became rabid for blood when it had once tasted it, so was the man who had the taste of drink in him, and total abstinence was the only cure for the taste
—a taste which was positive destruction.
It was his duty to show he was right, and not that everybody else was wrong. God never gave them a duty to perform but He found a way for them to do it. The cry was, "Forward! and God speed the right for the grand and glorious purpose of total abstinence!"—At the close a vote of thanks was accorded to the lecturer.—
London Times.

A Tribute to Woman.

Capt. R. Kelso Carter recently paid the following neat and just tribute to "lovely woman," in an impromptu address at the close of a debate on "Woman's Emancipation," on board the steamer Indiana from Philadelphia to Liverpool:

"Much has been said upon the subject of 'Woman's Emancipation,' but, after all is she not emancipated already? The hand that rocks the cradle always sways the sceptre in fact if not in name. When the Spartan mothers trained their sons to steal, encouraged them in every warlike pastime,
and said to them, 'Come not back from the battle except you come upon your shield,' the nation became a nation of warriors, and the rod of empire was held by a military power that shook the world beneath its tread. But when the Christian mother of to-day teaches her boy to be kind, to be gentle and courteous, to be considerate of the feelings of others, restrains in him the natural uprising of the lex talionis, and inculcates the grand principle of doing unto others as you would have them do unto you, then, and not till then, we find men governing with some regard at least to the tenets of humanity and justice, then and not till then, we find liberality, toleration and liberty.

I would like to propose a toast to night,
although a total abstinence man myself—a toast to woman. To be drunk, not in liquor of any kind, for we should never pledge a woman in that which brings her husband reeling home to abuse where he should love and cherish, sends her sons to a drunkard's grave, and her daughters to a life of shame. Oh, no, not in that, but rather in the life giving water, pure as her ghastly, clear as her intuitions, bright as her smile, sparkling as the laughter of her eyes, cheering as her consolations, strong,
and sustaining as her love—in the crystal water I would drink to her that she may remain queen regnant in the empire she has already won, grounded deep as the universe in love; built up and exercised in the homes and hearts of the world; I would drink to her the full blown flower of creation's morning, of which man was but the bud and blossom, to her who in childhood clasps our little hands and teaches us to lip the first sweet prayer to the Great All-Father, who comes to us in youth with good counsel and advice, who in manhood meets our heart yearnings with the faithfulness of conjugal love, and whose hand, when our feet go down into the shadow, smooths the rough pillow of death as none other can; to her who is the flower of flowers, the pearl of pearls, God's latest, best and brightest gift to man —woman, peerless, pure, sweet, royal woman."

Sailors "All Ready."

The remarkable exemption from disasters of the Cunard line of ocean steamers is undoubtedly owing in a great measure to the thorough discipline maintained on board.

By the rules of the company, a portion of the day before that appointed for the sailing of a Cunard steamship is devoted to drilling the crew in such duties as they may be called upon to perform in the case of fire, wreck, or other disaster. The boat drill has reached such perfection on board the Bothnia that all ten of her boats have been placed in the water inside of three minutes. Some of Capt. McMickan's friends having doubted this statement, the Captain invited a party of them to be present one day recently, and time the operation for themselves. One of the heaviest of the life-boats was selected for the experiment. Capt. McMickan stood on the bridge, and the boat's crew of 12 sailors was stationed near it. The Captain raised his hand, the boatswain sounded his whistle, and the men sprang to their work. The canvas covering of the boat was torn off, fore and stern sheet men sprang to their places, and the forward and then the after davits were swung out. In an instant the davits were screwed fast, and at the command "Lower away"
the boat was lowered quickly into the water. "Man her," shouted the Captain, and almost immediately a dozen men were in their places ready to toss oars. From the raising of the Captain's hand until the officer in charge touched his cap and reported "All ready, sir," was exactly 0.1.40.
In three minutes more the boat was on deck, carefully housed beneath her canvass covering, and her crew had disappeared below.

Lippincott's Magazine for November is noticeable for the diversity of its contents, which include several articles of a light and entertaining character, with others that deserve attention for the information conveyed in them. The opening paper,

THE EAST.

A DISPATCH from Providence, R. I., reports that the bark Susan, of New Bedford, which left that port Oct. 12, with a crew of twenty-five men, on a whaling voyage, encountered a hurricane, capsized, and all but three of the twenty-five were drowned.

REAR ADMIRAL PAULING, Senior Flag Officer on the retired list of the navy, has just died at Huntington, L. I. Admiral Pauling was the son of the captain of Maj. Andre, and the last surviving officer of the battle of Lake Champlain. Thomas P. Wallace, a New York brewer, has purchased the trotting horse Hopeful for $25,000.

COL. J. H. WOOD, of Wood's Museum fame, now a resident of New York, has failed for many thousands of dollars.

There seems to be little doubt that the little ship Florence, which was sent to the Arctic regions, under Capt. Howgate's direction, has been lost at sea. She returned and touched at Newfoundland some weeks ago, and sailed thence for New London, Ct., since which time nothing has been heard of her. A furious gale prevailed shortly after she left Newfoundland, and the Florence, with her entire crew of thirteen, including Capt. Tyson, undoubtedly perished in it.

THE WEST.

EVANGELIST MOODY, as on a flying visit to Chicago, his old home. He will winter in Baltimore, where he proposes conducting a series of religious meetings.

The Constitutional Convention of California has adopted a resolution to memorialize the President and Senate of the United States to modify the Burlingame treaty as to prohibit Chinese immigration.

The United States Circuit Court at St. Louis has ordered the foreclosure and sale of the great bridge which spans the Mississippi river at that place, under the mortgage held by the foreign bondholders. The first mortgage is for $4,000,000, and the second $2,500,000. The sale takes place on the 20th of December. Dr. Roswell Walcott, surgeon of the Marine Hospital at Cairo, died of yellow fever last week. Another new play is on the boards at McVicker's Chicago Theater the present week—a dramatization from one of Bret Harte's sketches—called "Miss J." This play has been the source of contention in the New York courts. In its production at Chicago, Katie Mayhew will sustain the title role, supported by McVicker's admirable company. The scenery, as usual at this house, is excellent.

A BAND of robbers, who were preparing to make an attack on a Kansas Pacific railway train, near Fort Ellsworth, were surprised in camp by officers, who arrested the leader, one Mike Bourke, and wounded another. The rest of the gang escaped.

A DOZEN of the Cheyennes whom Maj. Thornburgh failed to find in the sand-hills north of the Union Pacific railroad, put in an appearance at a stage station only thirty miles from Sidney, Neb., last week. They killed a man and a boy, nearly whipped a child to death, and attacked a freight train, but he escaped. It is thought the savages have established themselves in the sand-hills, with the intention of raiding the settlements and freight trains during the winter.

CATHOLIC BISHOP ROSCERANS died quite suddenly, of hemorrhage of the lungs, at Columbus, Ohio, a few days ago. He was a brother of Maj. Gen. Roscerans.

The largest dry-goods house in St. Louis, that of Dodd, Brown & Co., has failed. Their liabilities are placed at $1,200,000, and their assets at about the same. The failure is attributed to the prevalence of the yellow-fever epidemic in the South.

THE SOUTH.

A DISPATCH from Natchez, Miss., dated Oct. 16, says: "A fight occurred with the negroes yesterday in Goldman's field, some four miles above Waterproof, La., in which it is said that thirty-six negroes were killed, and the whole of them dispersed. Some apprehend further trouble, while the general impression is that the negroes will not again assemble. Assistance was put in from all directions. Fifty more men left here this evening, in answer to a call from St. Joseph, La. No plantation has been burned. A communication just received from a citizen of Waterproof, states: 'All quiet and settled. Ten negroes killed yesterday.' Waterproof is situated immediately on the banks of the Mississippi, in Tensas parish. The parish at the last election registered 5,000 colored and 450 white voters. The following is said to be the origin of the trouble: Fairfax, candidate for Congress for the Fifth district, called a meeting of colored Republicans at Waterproof. The quarantine officers interfered, and the negroes, collected in large numbers around Fairfax's house, just out of town. An armed posse sent out to expostulate with them were fired upon, and three of the posse killed."

A SHOOTING accident is reported from Lynchburg, Va. During a marriage ceremony at a colored Baptist church, which was crowded to suffocation, a piece of plastering fell from the ceiling. Some one in the audience became alarmed and cried out that the roof was falling. The scene that followed this announcement was indescribable. An uncontrollable panic ensued. Persons in the second and third stories jumped from the windows to the ground, fifty or sixty feet below, meeting instant death or permanent injuries. The persons in the auditorium rushed for the doors, and in the excitement that followed were crushed and mangled frightfully. At the first sound of alarm the bridegroom and bride fled, and a rush for the door followed by the gaiters. Not one of them ever reached that opening, but were trampled to death before they could escape; the bride, it is believed, by some one jumping on her from the gallery. The groom met his death by a piece of the rail from the gallery being thrown upon him, injuring him so that he could not rise, and was trodden upon by the excited crowd and killed. Ten persons were killed outright by jumping from the windows, and about forty or fifty, most of them women, were wounded. Among the victims of the yellow fever at Memphis figures the name of Jeff Davis, Jr., aged 21.

ADVICES from the plague-ridden localities of the South to Oct. 18 report the advent of cooler weather and a gratifying decrease in the mortality roll. The fever broke out on the relief boat Chambers, which was sent down the Mississippi loaded with supplies for the isolated points along the river, and the expedition was ordered to proceed up the river to quarantine, below St. Louis. Lieut. Benner, the commander of the vessel, died, and was buried at Vicksburg. There was great grief at his untimely taking off, and nearly every well person in Vicksburg followed his remains to the grave.

ADVICES from the fever-afflicted cities of the South to Oct. 18 show that, although the advent of frost had not altogether checked the march of the plague, there was a marked abatement in the mortality as well as in the number of new cases. In some of the interior towns, however, the situation is still very discouraging, the fever holding on with disheartening stubbornness. The whole number of deaths from the fever in New Orleans up to the 20th of October was 3,635, while Memphis had lost 2,802 of her citizens from the same cause. These figures show the frightful malignity of the plague in the latter place, for, with but a fifth of the population of New Orleans, Memphis has had nearly as many fatal cases of fever.

THE United States mail coach running between Fort Worth and Weatherford, Tex., was halted by highwaymen the other day, the mail pouches rifled of their contents, and the passengers stripped of their valuables.

GENERAL.

THE books of the New York Mine Company, which were recently seized at Marquette, Mich., by Tilden's counsel, have been delivered up, in accordance with the order of the United States Court.

THE trial of the Montreal Orangemen for unlawfully assembling on the 12th of last July has resulted in their acquittal. It is likely that damages for false arrest will be instituted by the Orangemen against the prosecution.

THE official Gazette, of Montreal, announces the new Canadian Ministry, as follows: Sir John A. Macdonald, Minister of the Interior; B. L. Tilley, Minister of Finance; Chas. Tupper, Minister of Public Works; J. J. Pope, Minister of Agriculture; John O'Connor, President of the Council; James MacDonald, member of the Privy Council and Minister of Justice.

THE Orangemen who were arrested while attempting to parade in Montreal on the 12th of last July have brought an action for false arrest against the Mayor of the city.

POLITICAL.

THE full official returns of the Ohio election give the following as the total vote cast for each candidate for Secretary of State: Barnes, Republican, 274,130; Paige, Democrat, 270,066; Ray, National, 38,332; Robinson, Prohibition, 5,674; Barnes plurality, 3,154.

SAMUEL J. TILDEN is out with a letter denying all knowledge of the cipher telegrams recently published in the New York Tribune, alleged to have been exchanged between his friends in relation to the purchase of electoral votes in South Carolina and Florida. He says of the alleged telegrams, "which relate to an offer purporting to have been made in behalf of some member of the State Board of Canvassers of Florida, to give, for pecuniary compensation, certificates to the Democratic electors who had been actually chosen, none of these telegrams, nor any telegrams communicating such offer, or relating to such offer, was seen by me, translated to me, or the contents of it in any manner made known to me." In relation to the ciphers bearing on the canvass of votes in South Carolina Tilden says: "I can speak of them no less definitely and positively. No one such telegram, either in cipher or translated, was ever shown to or its contents made known to me. No offer or negotiation in behalf of the State Canvassers of South Carolina, or any of them, or any dealing with any of them in respect to certificates to electors was ever authorized or sanctioned in any manner by me, directly or through any other person."

At a political meeting in Philadelphia, the other night, some one hurled a large stone at Speaker Randall, which barely missed his head. The anti-Tammany Democrats and Republicans of New York city are running Edward Cooper (Democrat), a son of Peter Cooper, for Mayor, in opposition to Augustus Schell, the regular Tammany nominee.

WASHINGTON.

THE October returns to the Department of Agriculture place the average condition of the corn crop a little above the September average, and promise a total yield of 1,600,000,000 bushels. The wheat crop, it is estimated, will exceed 400,000,000 bushels. The yield of oats, it is believed, will be somewhat larger even than the very fine crop of 1877.

SECRETARY SHERMAN says 400,000 ounces of silver will be the amount purchased weekly by the Treasury Department. The treasury now holds $48,089,850 in bonds to secure public circulation; $13,780,400 to secure public deposits, and $4,622,000 to secure subscriptions to the 4 percent bonds.

FOREIGN.

It is announced in a cable dispatch from Rome that "the first basis for an arrangement between the Vatican and Germany having completely failed in consequence of the attitude of the Center party in the Reichstag, a new and less radical basis will be substituted, and the relations between the church and state will be regulated as nearly as possible in accordance with the existing German laws." It is announced from Berlin that the Emperor William will resume the Government the beginning of December. A Bombay dispatch says the Amir of Afghanistan is endeavoring to engage the Mohammedans of Central Asia in a religious war against England.

THE Sultan of Turkey has written to the Amir of Afghanistan, calling upon him as a good Mussulman to come to an amicable arrangement with England. It is reported that England, Italy, and France have informed the Belgrade Government that they will not recognize Serbia until the civil and political equality of the Jews is proclaimed. A Bombay dispatch says the reply of the Amir of Afghanistan has been received by the Viceroy of India, and is unsatisfactory.

DESOLATING floods are reported in the valley of the river Bormida, in Italy. Full amnesty has been granted by the Austrians to the Bosnian insurgents who have taken refuge in Serbia. The investigators' report of the condition of the Bank of Glasgow, which recently failed, discloses the appalling fact that the total loss, including the capital stock, will reach $20,064,357.72.

ALL the managers and Directors of the City of Glasgow Bank have been arrested on a criminal charge of fraud. A cable dispatch says the city of Glasgow "is absorbed in melancholy contemplation of the terrible picture of crime and ruin presented in the official report of examiners of the broken Glasgow bank. The figures and facts are so overwhelming that even financial minds, familiar with figures and cash books, seem utterly to fail to grasp the situation. A kind of apathetic paralysis appears to have seized upon the citizens. The business exchanges are absolutely stagnant. Signs of approaching punishment for the Directors are visible, and eagerly hailed by the whole community. The important feature in the report is the deliberate falsification of the returns made to the Government of the gold held by the bank against notes issued. The legal issue was limited to £72,921, but at the suspension of the concern the note circulation was £38,403, and the coin amounted to only £281,758, but the deficiency was made to appear lost by illegally including coin lying at the bank's branches. This scandalous proceeding exposes the bank to tremendous penalties under the laws of Great Britain."

PREPARATIONS are making to try 34 Nihilists at Odessa. The cable reports a disastrous railway collision at Pontypridd, in Wales. Twelve persons were killed and forty wounded, many of them fatally.

THE distribution of Exposition prizes took place at Paris on the 21st of October. Among the Americans who received decorations of the Legion of Honor are mentioned Commissioner General Richard C. McCormick, who is made Commander; Prof. F. A. P. Barnard and Wm. W. Story, who are made officers; Cyrus H. McCormick and Walter A. Wood, who were in 1867 made Chevaliers, have been raised to officers. Thomas A. Edison, and Elisha Gray are made Chevaliers. The Amir of Afghanistan replies in a defiant tone to the English envoy, and dares the English Government to do its worst. Austrian papers complain that the export of Hungarian wheat is almost at a standstill, partly in consequence of the Americans underselling the Hungarian markets.

A FRESH outbreak of the Kafir war is expected by the English in South Africa. One of the most powerful chiefs of the Zulus threatens open hostilities. But he will doubtless be thrashed into submission long before the British troops reach the capital of Afghanistan.

Nabbed by a Shark.

An English paper says: The ship Alice Davies has arrived in the Mersey from the coast of Java, and reports the death of one of her crew, a Welshman, named William Jones Owens, under circumstances of the most horrifying character. Owens, with four others of the crew, went to bathe as the ship lay at anchor at Probolinggo. They had not been in the water many minutes when Owens, who was the farthest from the vessel, uttered a piercing shriek. It was then seen that he had been attacked by a shark, which with one bite had completely disemboweled him. The mate being on deck and hearing the cry threw a rope to the unfortunate man, who grasped it. He then hauled toward the ship, but becoming exhausted he loosened his hold of the rope and sank immediately. The shark, which was following Owens, disappeared below to complete its work. Owens was only 22 years old, and belonged to Bangor, North Wales. Owing to the river being almost full of sharks, the men had been previously warned against bathing in it. The shark appeared to be about fifteen feet long, though many of them measured over thirty feet. The other four got safely back to the ship. The sharks in the river are ground sharks, and scarcely ever come to the surface of the water, except when disturbed.

Foreign Immigration.

The revival of foreign immigration to this country begins to be very noticeable. During last month the arrivals of immigrants at New York were 8,955, against 6,673 for the same month last year; during the last three months they were 25,263, against 20,109 in the same time last year. Causes are now at work that will still further add to this increase. The Socialists in Germany have avowed their intention of emigrating to the United States by wholesale to avoid persecution at home. There are something like 900,000 Socialist voters in Germany; should they all take it into their heads to come hither with their families they would form a handsome addition to our population. The threatened increase of hard times in Great Britain will also have the effect of accelerating and enlarging the immigration movement. It will not be surprising, if, ere long, we shall see the tide of immigration rolling in upon us in as great a volume as ever.

The Santa Cruz Insurrection.

A Havana telegram says: "A French steamer from St. Thomas has arrived, bringing further particulars of the insurrection in Santa Cruz. The insurrection broke out in the west end of the island, where three-fourths of the towns were burned and pillaged. The insurgents then traversed the island toward Bassin, but, fortunately, the timely arrival of forces from St. Thomas saved that part of the island. Sixty-seven sugar estates were burned. Only nine of value remain. The principal leaders of the insurrection are now undergoing trial. About 800 insurgents are still scattered about the country. The cause of the insurrection was short payment of wages and refusal of the authorities to give passports to the negroes. Santa Cruz was already declining rapidly, and the island is, therefore, totally ruined. The merchants of St. Thomas lost heavily by the insurrection."

The Biter Bitten.

In trying to be a biter, Mr. Moens, of Boston, was bitten. He met Andrew Bressant, who carried a bag and seemed to be crazy. Bressant talked senselessly, and showed that the bag contained gold coin—$5,000, he said. This money he wanted to leave with Moens for safe keeping, but demanded $900 in paper money as security. Moens, ready to take advantage of the supposed maniac, gave the $900 and took the bag, which he afterward found to contain very little coin and a great deal of lead.

RICHARDS & SELLINGER's shingle mill, seven miles west of Big Rapids, blew up the other day, injuring five men, Sellinger, James Kennedy, Benj. Teeple, Fred Miller, and one other. Teeple died from his wounds. The balance, though badly scalded and otherwise injured, will probably recover. The cause of the explosion of the boiler is not known.

A BOY named Thomas Easley, employed by Col. Hudnutt, in his flouring mills at Big Rapids, came near being killed a day or two since. His clothes got caught in a shaft and wound him up in an instant. He escaped by bracing against a wall near by, his clothes being stripped entirely off. He had nothing left upon him but his shirt waist-bands when he got loose.

RANSOM GOODSPEED, a farmer living two miles from Middleville, Barry county, was gored to death by a stag, which tossed and trampled him half an hour before his body was recovered. A neighbor who tried to rescue him narrowly escaped death. He was one of the most prominent farmers of Barry county, owned the best farm, and had lived in the county forty years.

ADRIAN LANDERS, a farm-hand in the township of Pavilion, was run over by a Grand Rapids and Indiana train, the other day, at Ward's crossing, and so severely injured that he died shortly after. He was driving a team and wagon, and was struck by the engine while passing over the track. The team, vehicle, and driver were lifted and thrown into the air, and in falling Landers' skull was fractured. One horse was killed. Deceased leaves a wife and five children.

THIS is the way a Traverse county courtship was conducted, to wit: Last December, a girl named Stala was helping to put up a stove-pipe upstairs in the house where she lived. By accident she stepped upon a loose floor-board, and went down into the room below. A chap named Gardner saw her for the first time in his life as she came down, and when she was picked up he proposed to her, was accepted, and ten days later they were man and wife—and a month ago they parted.

THE Iron Port, of Escanaba, tells a horrible story of crime and murder. It states that Philomen Thompson, who lived in the township of Nauma, Delta county, and who was at one time Deputy United States Marshal, has been having criminal intercourse with one of his granddaughters, a girl about 15 years of age. When the matter became known the old man fled to the woods, and it is now charged that he was searched for, found, and murdered by his son, Douglas H. Thompson, a constable named Thomas Conklin, and an Indian who had lived in his family who was known as Thomas Wanwagaso. On complaint of Conklin a search was made, and the body was found in Big Fish Lake, with a charge of shot in the head, and marks of pounding on the body.

MRS. MATTIE FARMELL, aged nearly 70 years, was found dead upon the floor of her bedroom, in a miserable house at Detroit, one morning last week. There was blood upon the floor, on the base-board, and on a trunk that stood at the foot of the bed. The old woman was wrapped in quilts, the covering of the bed, from off which she had apparently rolled in the agony of death, her hands clutching the coverings firmly. Her face was bruised badly, and over her right eye was an ugly gash. Her neck was broken also. The police suspected foul play, and arrested Henry Langauge, son of the deceased, who, with his little 4-year-old daughter, were the other occupants of the apartments. The prisoner protested his innocence, and, as he left the house, shook his finger menacingly at the child. The latter was questioned, and, despite her tender years, gives an intelligent and clear account of the tragedy in her own childish way. At first she would only say, "Papa told me not to say anything," but finally related how her father struck and kicked her grandmother, and when the latter was dead, made the little one hold a candle while he washed the blood from the face of the corpse.

Advertising and Drumming.

A Chicago wholesale grocery house, which a few years ago carried sixteen drummers at an expense of $40,000 per annum, and did an almost profitless business, has abandoned the drummer system, spends one-fourth their cost annually in newspaper advertising, dividing the balance among customers. As a natural result, their trade has increased ten-fold, and the net profits to the house in 1877 were $130,000. This year they will do still better.—St. Louis Journal of Commerce.

SABBATH READING.

The Infinite Presence,
I gaze aloof,
On the tissued roof,
Where time and space are the warp and woof
Which the King of Kings
As a curtain flings
O'er the dreariness of eternal things.

But could I see,
As in truth they be,
The glories of heaven that encompass me,
I should lightly hold
The tissued fold
Of that marvelous curtain of blue and gold.

Soon the whole,
Like a parched scroll,
Shall before my amazed sight uproll;
And without a screen,
At one burst be seen
The Presence wherein I have ever been.

O, who shall bear
The blinding glare
Of the majesty that shall meet us there?
What eye may gaze
On the unveiled blaze
Of the light-girdled throne of the Ancient of Days?

Sacred Memories.

SERMON BY REV. H. W. THOMAS OF CHICAGO.

In remembrance of Me. 1 Cor. xi. 25.

When humanity finds saints and martyrs and philanthropists from any land or age, or any walk in life—souls that abound in the love of God and man—souls that love truth and justice and virtue; it says "These are the good of the world; let us canonize them!" The heart of man is true to this higher impulse; and, however it may be blinded by the glare, or swayed by the passion of any time, or drawn to worship the false hero of the hour, yet in its calm historic view it separates the sheep from the goats. The bloody war-path of Alexander or Napoleon must stand out in history like the desolate track of the hurricane; and in their day they dazzled the world by their power and the conquests of their armies. But humanity, once away from the fear of their presence, is not drawn to them with the sense of obligation, or reverence, or tenderness that would bring to their graves offerings of flowers or tears. But when the heart of the race hears of the name of the woman who was a sinner, and washed the feet of Jesus with her tears and wiped them with the hairs of her head, it says, "That name must not die," and when it hears of Mattie Stephens, the martyr, to yellow fever in 1871, or of the woman who was a harlot, but opened her home in Memphis as a hospital for the sufferers at the outbreak of the fever this summer, it says, "Those names, too, belong to the roll of life; place them on high." Thus we seek to conserve the good, and fill the sky of the past with beautiful constellations whose lights may shine on into the coming ages. And this noble impulse is seen further in the unwillingness of the race that permanent injustice should be done to anyone who has lived in the past. If, in the heat of debate, any life has been misunderstood, or traduced, humanity says, "We must go back and do justice to that name." Thus the men and women whom one age crucifies are often crowned by the next. The dust of the exile is gathered up and brought back to his native land and tenderly buried. John Wesley could not preach in the English pulpit, but the marble statue of John Wesley has a welcome place in Westminster, and the noble Dean Stanley unveils that statue in the presence of Bishop and priest, Lovejoy, and Garrison, and Sumner were persecuted and glorified in the same generation.

In the light of these general facts and principles, let us look at the life and death of our blessed Lord. He came as a stranger to our world; came to His own and they knew Him not. He came not to condemn, but to save. He came to give life and light to man; He healed the sick; He fed the poor; He raised the dead; He walked our world homeless, and almost friendless. He was despised; He was rejected of men. He was led from the garden to the judgment seat, and from cruel mockings and scourging He was led to the cross. He prayed for those who nailed Him to the tree. And for all this He asked, not the world's honor, or the world's gold. He asked the hearts, the love of mankind. He asked a place in the thought, in the love of coming generations. He asks now that His name be remembered; that His kingdom be accepted. And it would seem that there is enough in the life and death of our Lord to fix the attention and win the hearts of all mankind that His name should be remembered with increasing love to the end of time. When we study those things that are dearest and live longest in the human heart; the things that the heart most loves and worships, we find that they are all centered in that one life. In Him was wisdom. His doctrines of God and man life have been for their simplicity and beauty, and marvelous for their sublimity and grandeur. I do not underrate the teachings of Confucius, of Buddha, or Socrates or Zoroaster—they were all wiser than their day and reflected much divine truth; but in Jesus Christ was the perfection and fullness of wisdom. The human soul worships simple beauty and worth in life and character. And the world has had many lives that may be remembered for their beauty and goodness; but in Jesus Christ there is such an absence of all that mars human lives, and such a fullness of all that enriches and nobles character as to lift it above all other lives. So forgetful of self, of ease, or gain, and so given to others. So tender and deep in sympathy, so fearless and strong for justice and truth. He would not break the bruised reed, nor would he shrink from the cross. He helped the lowly and the fallen, and He rebuked those who were false in spirit or life, however high their place. Like a star He held on His matchless way. True, He had human weakness and suffering; He hungered, He grew faint by the way, He shrank from pain, He fainted beneath the cross; but in all there was patience, there was submission even unto death; and in all there was that overshadowing, that outshining, that uplifting of the divine that is nowhere else to be found. The soul of man adores disinterested love—the living of one's self for another, or for a principle, or a cause. Jesus Christ gave himself for the world. He was rich; He became poor. He was King; He became the servant of all. He came into the world's suffering and sin; He took upon Himself our sickness, our darkness, our want; He was fully entered into our lost condition—bore insult and pain, and at last died on the cross; and all that the world might be saved—not pardoned alone in a legal sense, but saved, saved from sin, saved into righteousness, saved into character, saved into truth and justice and mercy, and saved forever. And in all this Jesus Christ transcends all others. He fills a place all His own, and should be remembered above all others.

Now, if what we have said about the noble sentiment in man to remember the good be true, and if what we have said about Christ be true, the question arises, Why do not all souls fall in love with this Savior? Three things may be said: Jesus Christ makes demands of His followers: He rebukes sin. He calls upon men, if they would be his disciples, to leave sin and follow in His footsteps. Men cannot love sin and love Christ. Many pause here; they would like to be Christ, but they cannot take His baptism of separation from evil and consecration to righteousness. Again, many do in their hearts love the real Christ, as the lofty ideal and realization of beauty and truth and justice and tenderness and love and sacrifice—the Christ of the gospels—but they cannot love the cold, lifeless Christ made up to fit many systems of theology, and they cannot love the Christ that has been represented in the bloody persecutions and narrowness of many churches and many men professing Christ. But, oh! could they see Him as He is; see Him in beauty and love and sacrifice; see Him as the good shepherd hunting the lost sheep; see Him blessing little children, weeping at the grave with loved ones; see Him in the garden and on the cross; see Him as the risen Lord; see Him as King of Kings—King of truth, King of righteousness, King of beauty, King of those principles and sentiments dear to the human heart—could they see Him as He is, the sinner's friend, the world's savior, they would love Him.

And again: His power upon the life of the world has been very great. Sober criticism says His life was a fact in our world, and has been fairly represented. The best minds of earth confess the truth of His teachings and the beauty of His life. The literature of the world is permeated with His spirit and truth, and the civilization of the world follows the lead of His religion. The painters and sculptors have lent willing hands that He might live in art. The great composers have woven His name in the hymns of the nations, and childhood has been taught to chant His name in prayer. The earth that had no place to shelter His head is now filled with His temples. His missionaries are in all lands. Millions take this holy communion, bow at His altars, and thus show forth His death till He come again. And as the better life of humanity comes into view, and as Jesus Christ is seen—not in formulas and creeds, but as a loving personal Savior—and as His truth is seen more and more in its beauty and power, the nations will strew again the way with palms and flowers, and shout again, "Hosanna in the highest." As He comes, not as of old, riding upon a dumb beast into the little city of Jerusalem, but as coming upon the wings of steam and electricity, coming upon the light that the spectroscopic catches from the old stars, coming upon the wings of justice and liberty and brotherhood, He enters the temple of humanity to reign forever.

Our Barometer.
The best and surest, and, we may add, simplest—barometer we ever saw is the cord by which manuscript, etc., is sent up and down from our counting-room and composition-rooms. It is made of good hemp, just about the proper strength to hang a tramp who carries and threatens to use, or does use, a pistol. When the weather is damp and threatening rain, it gradually contracts, so as to become very tight; and, as warmer and clearer weather sets in, it relaxes correspondingly. We can tell quite as soon as the weather-glass can inform us when we are to have a change of weather. A well-twisted hemp cord, tied between any two points, will operate similarly, and prove a sure and cheap barometer.—Concord People.

Nothing Like Being in Style.
In San Augustine county, Tex., when a gentleman desires to escort a lady to church, he writes her as follows: "Compliments of Mr. — to Miss —. I respectfully solicit the pleasure of escorting your corporal system across the alluvial landscape that lies between your father's hospitable domicile and the sanctuary of God, there to hear the expounding of the scriptures."

The maiden replies: "I will with pleasure allow you the exquisite beatitude of escorting my corporal system over the space of ground intervening between my parental domicile and the edifice of divine worship when the diurnal orb of day shall have sought his last resting-place behind the occidental hills."

EDISON'S ELECTRIC LIGHT.

What Will Revolutionize the Present Method of Illumination—Cheaper and Better than Gas—How the Wizard of Menlo Park Guards His Secret.

(From the New York Herald.)

The alarm among the English gas companies and the panic in their stocks on account of Edison's last invention in electric lights are not without good cause. America's great inventor has, in truth, solved the problem which for years has puzzled the ablest electricians of the age. He has successfully divided the electric light, and made it for illuminating purposes as far superior to gas as gas is to the tallow candle of the past. His marvelous invention gives a mild, soft, yet brilliant light, pleasing to the eye, clear, steady, and without blemish, and, at a cost less than one-third of that required for gas. Those who have seen the invention pronounce it wonderful. Already a company has been formed, composed of a number of wealthy capitalists, and Mr. Edison's lawyers are engaged in completing the final arrangements for the legal transfer. Before long, therefore, the work of introduction will begin. The patents for the United States have only just been granted, while those for the various countries of Europe have not yet been obtained. To-day the Professor's solicitors send by steamer the necessary documents to their London agents for the procurement of the British letters patent. The French and other patents will be applied for simultaneously with the British ones. When word is cabled that the patents have been granted, he will throw his own invention open to the public gaze, but until then he declines to make known its details, his recent controversy with Prof. Hughes over the alleged stealing of the telephone having made him cautious.

When the great inventions of Mr. Edison were in progress the laboratory was free to all visitors. The telephone was seen by hundreds long before letters patent were granted. The same was the case with the phonograph, the tasimeter, the megaphone, the quadruplex telegraph, and many other of his inventions. When urged, as he often was by his associates of the laboratory, to be more circumspect in exhibiting them prematurely to strangers, he invariably laughed off their fears and renewed his orders to show the inventions to all who desired to see them. The case with the electric light is far different. Its place in the laboratory is one sacred to a favored few. If the hosts of visitors who daily swarm the laboratory of the great inventor see it, they see it only in detached form. The essence of the discovery is missing. Mr. Edison himself speaks but little on the subject, but he is almost constantly at work on it. Early morning sees him in the laboratory, and it is after midnight when he leaves. On Thursday last he worked continuously from sunrise until sunrise the following day, and ceased only after the earnest importunities of his assistants. All his energies were wrapped up in the new invention. His megaphone and phonograph lie idle save the work done on them by some of the professor's numerous assistants.

A Herald reporter learned, recently, the system proposed to be adopted after the patents are all granted. First the professor will light up all the houses in Menlo Park gratis, and from his laboratory watch the light's progress from night to night. When all is in readiness for general introduction, central stations will probably be established throughout New York city, each station controlling a territory of, perhaps, a radius of half a mile. In the central stations will be the magneto-electric generating machines run by engines. Wires will then be run in iron pipes under ground after the manner of gas-pipes, connecting with dwellings, stores, theaters, and other places to be lighted. The gas-fixture at present used, instead of being removed, will be utilized to increase the wire. In the place of the burner will be the invention, and meters will be used to register the quantity of electricity consumed. Their form is not yet determined upon. The light is to be of the burning, fifteen-candle power character. To light it a little spring is touched, and instantly the electricity does its work. The amount of light can be regulated in the same way as can that from gas. To turn off the light the spring is again touched, and instantly all is darkness. No matches being used, and there being no flame, all the dangers incident to the use of gas are obviated. The light gives out no heat. It is simply a pure white light, made dim or brilliant at the fancy of the person using it.

The writer last night saw the invention in operation in Mr. Edison's laboratory. The inventor was deep in experimental researches when he called. The apparatus consisted of a small metal stand placed on the table. Surrounding the light was a small glass globe. Near by was a gas-jet burning low. The professor looked up from his work to greet the reporter, and, in reply to a request to view the invention, waved his hand toward the light, with the explanation, "There she is." The illumination is such as would come from a brilliant gas-jet surrounded with ground glass, only that the light was clearer and more brilliant. "Now I will extinguish it and light the gas, and you can see the difference," said Mr. Edison, and he touched the spring. Instantly all was darkness. Then he turned on the gas. The difference in the light was quite perceptible, the light from the gas appearing in comparison tinted with yellow. In a moment, however, the eye had become accustomed to it, and the yellowish tint disappeared. Then the professor turned on the electric light, giving the writer the opportunity of seeing both side by side. The electric light seemed much softer. A continuous view of it for three minutes did not pain the eye, whereas looking at the gas for the same length of time caused some little pain and confusion of sight. The inventor next exhibited the light turned down low. It gave a mild illumination.

One of the noticeable features of the light when fully turned on was that all colors could be distinguished as readily as by sunlight.

Public Manners.

Nothing more surely marks a gentleman than his public manners. It is, for instance, impossible not to feel that a man who arrives at a hotel late at night, and goes noisily, talking and laughing, along the corridor to his room, flinging his boots down heavily, and slamming the door, though an upright and excellent person, yet lacks the finer qualities of the gentleman. The essence of courtesy is moral. It is a sympathetic regard for the feelings of others which spares them unnecessary annoyance. When it is instinctive it is called tact. But it is, at the bottom, humanity. So when a public man vituperates another, however "smart" the abuse may be, there is an instinctive perception of the want of true gentlemanly feeling. However polished the invective, it is nothing more than the style of the stove. When Lord Beaconsfield spoke of Mr. Gladstone in the strain that we quoted last month, it was instantly felt that he had made a mistake; and although he might be, as his admirers assert, the last unmingled representative of the Sephardim, or those Hebrews who can trace their pedigree unbroken through interminable generations of ancestors always of gentle blood, he was yet not quite a gentleman. When a member of a public assembly had been berated by an opponent with every kind of offensive epithet, and was asked to reply, he said, "but there is no reply to a slop-pail." If a guest disturbed from sleep by the noisy comers we mentioned should open his door, and, by way of reprisal, "why his boot-jack" at the door of his noisy neighbor when he had fallen asleep, it might be what was called, when one scientific man spat in the face of another who had questioned his assertion, "the wild justice of expectation," but it would not be gentlemanly.

Perhaps, then, it is better sometimes not to be gentlemanly? That is undoubtedly the practical conclusion of those who feel uncomfortable when they are covered with mud, until they can throw mud in return. But the self-restraint which good manners imposes is always better than "letting yourself go." Mephistopheles is never a good counselor, and largely because he is not a gentleman. The real Sephardim may or may not trace continuous gentle blood through interminable generations of ancestry. But they do not slam their boots nor their doors, nor bustle in late at concerts and talk during the performance, nor occupy more seats in a railway car than they pay for, nor keep their seats in a street car, compelling a woman to stand. They may, indeed, reprove and rebuke, but without heat or personality, like Thomas when he feared the music interrupted the conversation, or like the true gentleman whom the older Berkshire knew, and who said to the young woman to whom he had given his place in the car, and who asked him what he was waiting for, "Only to hear you say, 'thank you, my dear.'"

Choate Before a Jury.

In jury trials his main object was to influence the wills of the twelve men before him. He addressed their understandings; he fascinated their imaginations; he stirred their feelings; but, after all, he used all his powers in subordination to that one primal power which dwelt in his magnetic individuality, by which he subdued them, bringing on that part of their being which uttered its reluctant "yes" or "no" to the pressure of a stronger nature as well as of a larger mind. As an advocate, he thoroughly understood that men in the aggregate are not reasonable beings, but men with the capacity of being occasionally made reasonable, if their prejudices are once blown away by a superior force of blended reason and emotion—in other words by force of being. His triumphs at the bar were due to the fact that he was a powerful man, victorious over other men because he had a stronger manhood, a stronger selfhood, than anybody on the jury he addressed. On one occasion I happened to be a witness in a case where a trader was prosecuted for obtaining goods under false pretenses. Mr. Choate took the ground that the seeming knavery of the accused was due to the circumstance that he had a deficient business intelligence—in short, that he unconsciously rated all his geese as swans. He was right in his view. The foreman of the jury was a hard-headed, practical man, a model of business intellect and integrity, but with an incapacity of understanding any intellect or conscience radically differing from his own. Mr. Choate's argument, as far as the facts and the law were concerned, was through in an hour. Still he went on speaking. Hour after hour passed, and yet he continued to speak with constantly increasing eloquence, repeating and recapitulating, without any seeming reason, facts which he had already stated and arguments which he had already urged. The truth was, as I gradually learned, that he was engaged in a hand-to-hand—or rather a brain-to-brain and heart-to-heart—contest with the foreman, whose resistance he was determined to break down, but who confronted him for three hours with defiance observable in every rigid line of his honest countenance. "You fool!" was the burden of the advocate's ingenious argument; "you rascal!" was the phrase legibly printed on the foreman's incredulous face. But at last the features of the foreman began to relax, and, at the end, the stern lines melted into acquiescence with the opinion of the advocate, who had been storming at the defenses of his mind, his heart and his conscience for five hours, and had now entered as victor. He compelled the foreman to admit the unpleasant fact that there were existing human beings whose mental and moral constitution differed from his own, and who were yet as honest in intention as he was, but lacked his clear perception and sound judgment. The verdict was, "Not guilty." It was a just verdict, but it was mercilessly assailed by merchants who had lost money by the prisoner, and who were hounding him down as an enemy to the human race, as another instance of Choate's lack of mental and moral honesty in the defense of persons accused of crime. The fact that the foreman of the jury that returned the verdict belonged to the class that most vehemently attacked Choate was sufficient of itself to disprove such allegations. As I listened to Choate's argument in this case, I felt assured that he would go on speaking until he dropped dead on the floor rather than have relinquished his clutch on the soul of the one man on the jury whom he knew would control the opinion of the others.

Terrible Famine in Morocco.

The crops having been a total failure, the farmers and peasants in the interior were ruined, and, failing to pay taxes and imposts, all their cattle and little property were confiscated by the local authorities, so that they had left their ruined homesteads and tramped to the seaports in a starving condition, many dying on the road. At Mogador there were over 2,000 of these poor refugees, besides thousands of poor townsfolk, both Moors and Jews, in a state of utter destitution. Living skeletons of men, women and children might be seen groping on foul refuse heaps for hideous bits of food. Down at Waterport and in the streets along which grain bags are carried poor starving wretches were constantly scratching and sifting the sand, dust and mud for stray grains of rice or barley. Over the rocky ledges trudged, at low tide, half-naked women, eagerly collecting mussels, limpets and other shell-fish. Beggars were awaking in the streets, corpses were often seen, small-pox was horribly rife among the poor folks, who all huddled together—those afflicted with the disease were neither isolated nor tended. Sick, sound and dead might be seen lying together in foul, fetid dens. Owners of horses and mules could no longer afford to feed them. Outside the town gates and along the sea beach lay scores and scores of carcasses and skeletons of beasts of burden which had been brought out there to die of starvation—rich feasts for jackals, dogs and carrion crows. The wild country Moors were very desperate with hunger and misery. Murders were very frequent, one man being killed for a bunch of grapes, another for a loaf of bread, and soon. Robberies were, of course, also frequent. The English people were pretty safe; we were in high esteem and received greetings and blessings everywhere. The committee had been giving relief for many weeks past to from 1,200 to 2,000 people daily—first in bread and afterward soup. The poor refugees were very grateful. Deaths were from twenty to forty per day among the country folk alone; of course, many other deaths in the Moorish and Jewish quarters. The cattle left to the townsfolk were nearly starving. There is no grass in the land; the cattle and sheep go out miles into the country daily to feed on scrubby brushwood and dry, prickly plants, and come back, staving slowly, thin and hungry-looking still.—Mogador (Morocco) Cor. London Globe.

A Remarkable Suicide.

A faithful nurse, who had poisoned by sheer accident a patient in the St. Louis Female Hospital, committed suicide recently, after writing a letter to her mother and sister which cannot be read without a heartache. Corrosive sublimate was given to a young girl in place of a solution of salts. The nurse could not account for her blunder, and could only repeat the words, "My God, doctor, I did it; I alone, am to blame. I have killed her, ruined myself, and only hope it will not ruin you." She watched beside the patient for several days, frequently declaring that she would live if Alice lived and died if Alice died. When the poor girl breathed her last the terror-stricken nurse cried, "Don't talk to me; I'm crazy." In an hour she was herself in the agony of death, having taken a large quantity of carbolic acid. Among the last words written to her home friends were these: "My dears, if it is God's will that she should die, then I shall go with my victim at the same time, life for life. This is the way I make atonement. Through the night to light."

CHILI is the gem of South American republics, having enjoyed fifty years of independence, during half of which time there has been no serious revolution, such as are constantly turning and overturning the lower half of this continent. Sir Horace Rumbold, Secretary of the British Legation there, attributes this happy condition of affairs largely to the fact that the extensive seaboard and narrow territory permit troops to be moved from the capital to any part of the country in four days.

"A REPUBLIC" ON SALE.

Among the many political parties with which our so-called "sister republic" of Mexico is blessed (in the machine politician's view of what constitutes a blessing) there is a new one, of not very large numbers yet, which has for its "platform" a scheme to remodel Mexico and raise a few "stamps" in a rather novel manner. The programme of the remodelers is set forth in eleven clauses, the first and principal one being a proposition to sell by public auction to the highest bidder "all the sparsely populated country bordering on the United States, Guatemala and Belize," the transfer to include not merely the title to the really but political and territorial dominion over it. In other words, it is proposed that Mexico shall sell and transfer all her right, title, and interest, political as well as territorial, in and to all the "sparsely populated country" aforesaid, and abandon all claim of right as well as all her absurdly futile attempts at government in that country. In putting up the country at auction, the auctioneer will state that bidders of the Latin races will be preferred. America and England will not be admitted as bidders if any Latin bidders should appear; but if there should be no Latin bidders at a satisfactory price, then bids from Anglo-Saxon, Gothic, Teutonic, and Fenian bidders will be received. The sale to be positive and unconditional, excepting that the Mexican inhabitants of the sections sold are to have the option of remaining or emigrating, and their property to be respected.

The programme further proposes that the proceeds of the sale shall be applied to the colonization of the new frontier, "to serve as a barrier against future encroachments." It does not stop there, but goes on with a fanciful paternalistic scheme for the political regulation of the remainder of Mexico. "For the indigent classes lands are to be bought" by papagovernment "from the landholders." "An effort is to be made to civilize the Indians."

In all this, that which should excite our wonder is the childlike faith in the potency of political arrangements which it exhibits. The idiotic Indians of Mexico could hardly betray a more superstitious habit of idolatry than that which causes their superiors of the "Latin race," and of many who have sprung from still better races, to think it possible to save Mexico from political death in the way proposed.

In Mexico we behold one of the latest attempts to establish representative institutions among a people unfitted to receive them, and incapable of doing what is necessary to their maintenance. Of the nine millions of inhabitants of Mexico, less than one million can be called civilized. Three millions are nomadic tribes of savages, of whom the Navajos and Comanches are examples. Three other millions are the "idiotic Indians" spoken of by the Mexican writer, who are to-day, morally and physically, as little above the condition of domesticated brutes as they were at the time of the Spanish conquest. Two and a half other millions are mongrels that have inherited all the vices of their Latin and all the brutishness of their Indian progenitors. The remainder are more or less civilized creoles of the Spanish branch of the so-called Latin race. The mongrel montano and the idiotic Indians are quite as unfit as the wild savages (who are physically and morally their superiors) to receive, maintain, and carry on a representative constitution. The only political system they are fitted for, or that is suitable for them, is the "beneficent despotism," in which their only part would be that of obedience to law made for them but not by them. The empire which the unlucky Maximilian set out to establish in Mexico was undoubtedly the best plan of government which the inhabitants of that country could have accepted. Had its projectors succeeded, they would not improbably have been the political saviors, if not the true founders, of a Mexican autonomy. Their failure was the sure foreordination of the disappearance of Mexico as an independent political power. It is simply puerile to assume that the "idiotic Indians" and the vicious montanos can be converted into intelligent, capable, and well-behaved citizens by any possible method of state agency, but especially by an agency to be maintained and operated by themselves. As to civilizing the wild Indians, the experience in such undertakings of more capable races than Spanish creoles have anywhere shown themselves to be has not been such as to encourage faith in the speedy success of like undertakings in Mexico.

Some ground of hope for the salvation and regeneration of Mexico might appear in a proposition to politically disfranchise the idiotic Indians and vicious mongrels that comprise more than half the population of Mexico, were it not for the fact that the Spanish creoles themselves, though more or less civilized, are as a whole incapable of receiving, maintaining, or working a representative constitution. Though Spaniards have set up many so-called republics, in no single instance has the experiment failed to prove the incapacity of Spanish people to maintain and operate a republican system. Even were they able to disfranchise the idiotic Indians and vicious mongrels in Mexico, the Spanish creoles, comprising about all the civilized population of Mexico, would be unable to save or to regenerate a Mexican republic. The idea of effecting that object by selling one-half the country by auction and using the proceeds to still further incapacitate the population of the other half for self-dependence, while it is in keeping with the general character of the Latin races, is singularly absurd.

The absorption of Mexico into the American republic and its government by the territorial method is the only possible way to give to that country anything deserving the name of a representative constitution. Such absorption will take place. It is only a question of time. The time might be hastened, but it could not be delayed, by a scheme to put Mexico up at public auction.—Chicago Times.

Notings.

THE yellow fever is abating down South.

Mr. Geo. A. Farr, Republican candidate for Senator in this Senatorial district, addressed the citizens of Drenthe on Tuesday evening last.

This week we saw a prairie schooner passing through town on its way to Kansas, and Mr. A. Van Kooi with his family and household goods started by rail to the same State.

The Board of Supervisors closed its session on Wednesday last—occupying precisely the same number of days it did last year. We may review some of its acts after we get the printed proceedings.

On Monday evening last we had the honor to listen to a speech from the Hon. E. G. D. Holden, our Secretary of State, but we were considerably disappointed. The stump is evidently not Mr. Holden's best hold.

A young lady hesitating for a word in describing the character of a rejected suitor said, "He is not a tyrant, not exactly domineering, but—" "Dogmatic," suggested her friend. "No, he has not dignity enough for that; I think pupmatic would convey my meaning admirably."

Mr. Chas. M. Copelin, son of Rev. Copelin of this city, is at present pursuing a course of studies at the Commercial College of Prof. Swensberg, at Grand Rapids, and speaks volumes of praise of that institution, the thoroughness of the instruction, and the gentlemanly and genial mien of the Professor.

A LITTLE boy whose father was a rather immoderate drinker of the moderate kind one day sprained his wrist, and his mother utilized the whiskey in her husband's bottle to bathe the little fellow's wrist. After a while the pain began to abate, and the child surprised his mother by exclaiming: "Ma, has pa got a sprained throat?"

THE City Hotel has received a new roof, which was no small job in the way of repairs. The owners of the building have with commendable enterprise supported the endeavors of the lessees by repairing everything that is necessary, in order to keep it as it was originally intended to be, the first-class hotel in the city.

QUITE a runaway occurred on Tuesday last. Mr. Eusing's team took fright while standing at the City Mills and ran down Eighth street at their best speed, smashed the wagon and collided with the team of Mr. Menne Stegenga; one of the running horses was badly injured. The runaways were stopped shortly afterwards without doing further damage, and miraculously missed killing two or three persons.

LAST Sunday morning the family of John Marks, consisting of himself wife and two children, living at Ventura, about eight miles northwest from here, were accidentally poisoned. The mother, in preparing butter for pancakes, mixed it up with arsenic instead of saleratus. Although they are still suffering from the effects, they will recover. Timely aid of a neighbor, who knew enough to administer a powerful antidote, saved their lives.

THE pump business has always been large here, and still it is being increased. Mr. C. Blom, Jr. tells us that he is furnishing a new combination pump that excels all the others. He drives a point down in the water, thus obviating the digging of a costly well, and puts a wooden pump on the iron pipe—thus furnishing a pump that works easier and gives water faster than an all iron pump. For pumps or estimates, or repairs our citizens will do well to call on him.

A STORM of terrible violence swept over a large part of the Atlantic seaboard, on Wednesday last. Philadelphia suffered more severely than any other locality, a large number of churches and other buildings being injured or destroyed, and some lives lost. Great damage was done in other places in Pennsylvania; and in Albany, N. Y., and along the whole course of the tornado, the effects were most disastrous. Later accounts report a large number of shipwrecks and fearful loss of life. More detailed accounts will appear in our next issue.

DR. S. L. Morris, for a number of years practicing physician in this city left on Tuesday last for the west to look up a new field of business. The doctor was successful in procuring the traveling agency for a company in Philadelphia, who manufacture the "Porous Splint"—an article which doctors prize very high—and he will thus be enabled to travel over a large territory and pick out a good location. Dr. Morris takes with him letters of recommendation from the Governor, judges, lawyers, Drs. Shepard, De Camp, and others, and what is better than all, he takes with him a high degree of ability in surgery and medicines, which, it seems to us, is enough to introduce any gentleman in a new field of labor. We hope to hear from him as being successful in his endeavors, and wish him, God speed!

A SAD accident happened to a child of Rev. P. de Pree, of Vriesland, on Monday morning last. While playing around the kitchen it fell backward into a tub of hot water, and the burning is so severe that the child will probably die.

DR. J. C. Kennedy probably the best known physician in western Michigan, will be at the City Hotel, in this city, on the evening of the 28th and forenoon of the 29th. He will also be at Grand Haven on the 2nd day of November, and at Grand Rapids on the 12th and 15th.

THE progress of science can be seen in almost every business. We were shown a new patent fire-back for stoves by our hardware man, Mr. Meils, which is intended, or can instantly be made to fit to any sized stove of almost every kind. The thing must be seen to be appreciated and therefore we advise our readers to call at Meils' hardware store.

SHERIFF Verplanke, successfully followed up and captured two men, named Charles and Lewis Gillette, who are charged with stealing a buggy, laprobe, and single harness. He traced them up to Chagrin Falls, Ohio, took them and arrived with them in Grand Haven on Thursday of last week. The stolen property belonged to a farmer in Jamestown, this county.

ON Saturday evening last a large number of Odd Fellows congregated at Hamilton, Allegan Co., Mich., to assist in the building of a new Lodge. Hamilton Lodge, No. 315, I. O. O. F. starts out with twelve members, and with Mr. Geo. Sheffield as their presiding officer. Several Odd Fellows from this city participated in the ceremonies, and all agree that the new lodge starts out with good prospects.

As we predicted a few weeks ago we saw partly realized this week, that Mr. Boney Carpenter, of Grand Rapids, is fast drawing to himself that trade from this section of the country which Crosby used to enjoy before his demise. Mr. Carpenter's place is opposite Sweet's Hotel, and is conveniently located for business men. He is always pleasant and kind and willing to furnish all information needed to strangers. We think his place will become the most popular eating saloon in Grand Rapids. Give him a call and see for yourself.

If the bills are true we are to have quite a political day on Tuesday next. We notice that Governor Croswell is billed to speak here on that day, also a Mr. Baker, for the Republicans, and the Greenbackers will again produce the redoubtable Sam'l D. Clay. Not knowing the first two mentioned speakers, we cannot say much about them; but knowing the eloquent Clay, it is safe to predict a large audience for him; and if he is as successful this time as he was last, Hon. C. C. Comstock will be the gainer of several votes. The brass band has been engaged to enliven things.

As we announced in our last issue Rev. Daniel Van Pelt preached in the 2nd Reformed Church on Sunday last to a large congregation. As far as we have been able to ascertain he has made a very favorable impression personally, and the doctrine advocated by his sermons proves Rutgers College to be as sound as the strictest orthodox could wish. Rev. H. Uiterwyk commenced his services in the English language on Sunday evening last to a vast audience. He was beautifully supported by a large choir. These services bid fair to become popular, and may eventually lead to more strenuous efforts from Hope Church. Why can't Hope Church have a good large choir? She contains some of the best talent in this city, and if organized on a basis of outing a long vacation, could be made one of the best choirs in the County.

OF the 5,136 immigrants who arrived in New York during September, 2,428 were from Germany, 2,077 from England, and 1,415 from Ireland, 375 from Scotland, 638 from Sweden, 450 from France, and 398 from Russia.

THE first of the blizzards is reported in telegrams from the northwest. Snow has appeared along the Northern Pacific, in some places of sufficient depth to impede the movement of trains. A wintry storm also prevailed in the northern peninsula of Michigan.

C. W. INGRAHAM publishes a statement that he has engaged a Hollander to assist him in the Register's office, and this to catch the votes of Hollanders. And this is the smallest piece of electioneering that has fallen under our observation.—Gr. Haven Herald.

BEN Hill of Georgia has touching faith in the longevity of the Democratic party, although he has heard from Maine. He remarked a few days ago: "Secession did not kill it; the war has not killed it; fraud has not killed it; it has not killed itself, and it will not die."

THE committee on Fire Department together with the officers of the Fire Department tested the new fire wells on Thursday evening last and found them in good condition. The addition of these fire wells gives the Fire Department considerable more confidence in themselves, and increases the chance of extinguishing a fire.

A DARKEY was boasting to a grocer of the cheapness of ten pounds of sugar he had purchased at a rival shop. "Let me weigh the package," said the grocer. The darkey assented, and it was found two pounds short. The colored gentleman looked perplexed for a moment, and then said: "Guess he didn't cheat dis chile much. While he was gettin' de sugar I stole two pair ob shoes."

AT a session of the Common Council held in their rooms on Wednesday evening last the recently adopted auction license ordinance was rescinded, owing to glaring defects discovered after adoption, and a new one is to be substituted. Messrs. Van Landegend & C. Blom gave a bond of $300 to guarantee the water supply of their recently constructed fire wells. The assessment roll which has been made out to cover the expense of repairing bad sidewalks will be open for review on Nov. 6th.

THAT our fruit business is not declining but steadily augmenting can be seen by the tremendous purchases and shipments of Mr. John Dewell. He is at present filling an order of fifteen hundred barrels, or four thousand five hundred bushels of apples, which he has purchased at Salem. The apples will be brought here, assorted, packed and shipped to his customers. By driving through the country one can perceive what this fruit business may grow into, when you observe the thousands of young trees not yet in bearing.

For the Holland City News.

MR. EDITOR:—A great deal has been written and said against the Hon. C. C. Comstock, who is too well known in this Congressional district as an honorable and upright business man, always favoring the workmen, or doing business which furnishes employment for labor, to stand abused by partisans, without having the chance to tell the people his side of the case, and this will be done on Tuesday evening, the 29th day of October, by his attorney, Sam'l D. Clay, Esq., of Grand Rapids. Come and hear him! Mr. Clay is an eloquent speaker and will interest every one. A brass band will announce the time of beginning, and a lively evening is anticipated.

Respectfully,
F. S. LEDEBOK.

SECRETARY Sherman has decided to issue legal tender notes of $5,000 and $10,000. The highest denomination of United States notes now issued is $1,000. The new notes will not be issued until the 1st of January, and are intended to take the place of coin certificates, which it is expected the notes of the larger denomination will in a great measure, if not entirely, supersede. As the legal tenders, it is hoped, will be at par with gold after the 1st of January, the Treasury officers believe there will be little demand for coin certificates after that date, except where persons desire to deposit gold with the government for safe-keeping. In such cases the four per centum bond offers the desired security, and as the Secretary is anxious to sell the largest amount possible of these bonds, it is probable he will decline to issue coin certificates for any purpose after the 1st of January.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

TO CURE BILIOUS HEADACHE.—Drink the juice of two oranges, or of one lemon, about half an hour before breakfast every morning.

BAD COLDS.—A medical authority asserts that the severest catarrh cold can be removed in about ten hours by a mixture of carbolic acid ten drops, tincture of iodine and chloroform each seventy-five drops. A few drops of the mixture should be heated over a spirit lamp in a test tube, the mouth of which should be applied to the nostrils as volatilization is effected. The operation should be repeated in about two minutes, when, after the patient sneezes a number of times, the troublesome symptoms rapidly disappear.

HABITUALLY DRUNKENNESS.—The Scientific American contains an account of an experiment of Liebig's theory for the cure of habitual drunkenness. The experiment consisted of a simple change of diet, and was tried upon twenty-seven persons with satisfactory results. The diet proposed is farina, corn, and in the cases reported was composed of macaroni, haricot, beans, dried peas and lentils. The dishes were made palatable by being thoroughly boiled and seasoned with butter or olive oil. Breads of a highly glutinous quality were used, care being taken to prevent their being soured in course of preparation. In his explanation of the theory, Liebig remarks that the disinclination for alcoholic stimulants, after partaking of such food, is due to the carbonaceous starch contained therein, which renders unnecessary and wasteful the carbon of the liquor.

CURE FOR BRONCHITIS, LARYNGITIS, AND QUINSY.—Mr. C. A. Sala, in a recent Illustrated London News "Echo," writes: "Until two or three evenings since I had never heard of the treatment of bronchial complaints by the external application of the most precious of metals. I was talking to an American gentleman on the subject of bronchitis and spasmodic asthma, when he said: 'Why don't you try a gold necklet? I have worn one, my wife has worn one, my children have worn such necklets for months together. I have recommended the remedy to hundreds of my friends, and in no case have I found it fail as a cure for bronchitis, laryngitis and quinsy sore throat.' He went on to say that the necklet should be worn so just as to be concealed, in the case of men-folk, by the shirt-collar. It should not be so tight as to inconvenience the wearer, but it should be made to press flat on the throat."

A CURE FOR DIPHTHERIA.—Dr. Chenery, of Boston, has lately discovered that hypsulphite of soda is the specific remedy against diphtheria—that so much-dreaded ailment, which of late years has carried off many valuable lives. He reports a very large number of cases (158 within his own practice) saved by the use of this remedy. The dose of the hypsulphite is from five to fifteen grains or more in strong every two to four hours, according to age and circumstances. It can do no harm, but if too much is given it will purge; as much as the patient can bear without purging is a good rule in the severer cases. The solution or mixture can be used in doses of five drops to half a drachm in milk. The amount for thorough stimulation is greater than can be taken in water. The doctor usually gives it in such doses as can be easily taken in milk, using milk besides as a food for small children. One fact, however, needs to be borne in mind, namely, the hypsulphite prevents the digestion of milk, and it should be given in less than an hour after taking the medicine. They may be used alternately, however, without interference, in sufficiently frequent doses.

ACIDITY OF STOMACH.—A sufferer for many years from want of appetite, acidity of the stomach, etc., has constitutional weakness, and relief can be only hoped for; the advice and medicine of a good physician will give that. Abstaining from certain articles of food and practice would materially help; eat no soups, soft dishes, like boiled, steamed or stewed meats, hominy, oat meal, etc., and no cheese, cake, pies, fried meats, fish, spices, catsup, mustard, sauces; use no Indian meal, no spring wheat or rye; use only white winter wheat made into good bread; use no potatoes or milk for fermentations; use no warmed-up potatoes, no fresh-baked bread unless it is baked out dryish; use no black tea or English breakfast, only weak green tea pure coffee, and in moderation. Remedies—Elixir of vitriol, as sold by all druggists; dose five to ten drops in a half tumbler of water, after breakfast; four drops mother tincture of nux vomica, in tumbler of water; dose two teaspoonfuls two or three times a day, a little bicarbonate of soda placed in the mouth and swallowed, and as much flower of sulphur as can be placed on a 3-cent piece on going to bed. Parched corn, boiled lean meats, baked or boiled potatoes, good Vienna bread or such kind of bread, weak green tea, and weak pure coffee, and, as the health improves, other things.

Sugar from Corn-Stalks. As has already been announced, Prof. Collier has within a short time, at the Department of Agriculture in Washington, conducted a series of important and interesting experiments in the production of sugar from corn-stalks and sorghum. From 25,000 pounds of these stalks he obtained 382 pounds of corn syrup and 659 pounds of sorghum syrup, equaling 781 pounds of very good crystallizable sugar. With more perfect machinery he thinks that he should have collected 1,150 pounds of sugar. The correct percentage of sugar, he thinks, ought to be about 75 per cent.

The experiment with millet-stalks was promising. From 130 pounds of a new French millet-stalk and leaves he obtained twenty-nine pounds of juice. The experiments of making sugar from sorghum in Minnesota, by private firms and individuals, have been tolerably successful.—Chicago Journal.

Juvenile Literature. Extract from "Chicago Primer" for the infant class: There was once a good little St. Louis boy who was told by his pa never to go sailing on Sundays or he would be drowned. He obeyed his father though the bad boys made fun of him. One Sunday he and his sister were walking by the river when they saw a boat full of bad boys. "Oh, see," said Tom; "by-and-by these bad boys will get up-set." In a few minutes the boat turned over and the bad boys were drowning. "I can save them," said Tom; "quick, Susan, off with your shoe!" So Tom took one of his sister's shoes and pushed it off and got in it. He rowed with a piece of board to where the bad boys were kicking in the water, and took them all in and brought them safe to land. Do you not think that Tom was a very brave boy, and that his sister had very big feet?—Boston Traveller.

Talmage and the Newspapers. Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage, of New York, in one of his recent sermons, paid his respects to the newspapers in this fashion: "But," you say, "don't you know the papers are criticising you for the position you take?" I reply yes, I know it; and do you want to know how I feel about it? No man is more indebted to the newspapers than I am. I am here to preach the truth, and they help. The press of the world give me each week 300,000 souls for an audience. Am I not indebted to the press? It is a debt I can never pay. So, slash away, gentlemen, the more the merrier. If there is anything I despise it is a dull time. Give my love to the editors of the secular newspapers. Brisk criticism is like a coarse-crash towel with which it is well for every public man to be rubbed down. It prevents him from catching cold."

How He Did It. A Fulton (N. Y.) man laid his finger on the table in front of a buzz saw to feel the momentum of air. The saw was going so fast that the teeth were not to be seen. His finger was taken off. While he was looking at it the foreman came up with the question, "How did you do it?" "Why, I put my finger down so," answered he, placing the other forefinger, as he thought, well away from the teeth. To his horror, the saw took that one, too, clean off at the second joint.

The Deadly Threshing-Machine. A most horrible threshing-machine accident is recorded by the Welland (Ont.) Tribune. A boy of 16, named Kimar, who was cutting bands on a threshing machine, slipped and fell into the cylinder. The machine was being driven by 10-horse power at the time, and the unfortunate victim was at once drawn in, bodily being disemboweled and mangled out of all human shape and, horrible to relate, some parts of the body actually passed through the machine.

A Seasonable Hint. The Boston Commercial Bulletin, reminding its readers that the next few weeks give the best season of the year to "plant fences," supplies some very remarkable figures as to the use of wire fence, and especially of the Barb Fence of the Washburn & Moen Manufacturing Company. Since the introduction of wire fence, twenty years ago, one hundred and fifty thousand miles of wire fence have been constructed. The Barb Fence has been before the public only three seasons, yet already twenty-four thousand miles of this fence are in use in this country and various parts of the world. It is in the highest favor with land owners, for farm and home protection against depredations of the crops and orchards. The fence is constructed of Galvanized Steel Wire, and carries steel barbs firmly attached by the process of manufacture patented in this country, and very widely abroad. The Barb Fence is literally a steel thorn hedge with all the defensive qualities of the most perfect hedge, and all the durability of galvanized steel wire. It is cheap as a material, easy in construction, and has almost the life and tenacity of a stone wall. The Barb Fence Wire is being extensively used in single strands to perfect and give efficiency to walls and fences of old construction. It will turn the breachiest steer, and is as useful in the home inclosures as in the outlying fields.

Physicians Recommend Dr. Graves' Heart Regulator as a cure for Heart Disease, showing they have confidence in it. A lady says: "From a child I have been subject to palpitation of the heart, and for the past few years have continued to grow worse, palpitation being followed by dizziness and suffocation so much so that I attempted to lay down my heart would seem to cease beating entirely, causing great prostration. I was obliged to have a physician in attendance for nearly a year. At last he advised me to use Dr. Graves' Heart Regulator, which I have used, and have not taken any other medicine since. Am now well, and have been able to resume my usual life entirely cured by continuing to take the HEART REGULATOR."

That Any. Dramatis personae.—A young American in roundabout and leggings, perched upon the fence devouring a huge piece of mince pie, and a maiden of five summers, in pantalones, looking very wishfully at the gourmand on the fence. Young America.—I say, sis, does your mar make mince pies? If she does, I'll bet they ain't so good as my mar's. Little Miss (timidly).—I like mince pie awful well. Young America.—Well, now, that's funny! Just look here (drawing a quarter of a pie out of his jacket pocket, and it being so! Ain't my mar good?) (carefully stowing it away in his pocket). That boy "is father to this man" who must have his cigars and any other masculine luxury his contemptible selfishness allows, while his poor sickly wife must do the work of two women (girls waste more than they earn," he says, and for the want of a little money to purchase a few bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the sovereign remedy for female diseases and weaknesses, she is literally dying by inches—and all because of this masculine selfishness that would not divide the childish luxury with his playmate, and now tacitly refuses his wife the luxury of health.

Destroy the Cut-Worm Moths.

A simple and cheap contrivance for destroying cut worm moths is simply a pan of water with a little oil upon it—placed on any convenient support. A block of wood is put in the center of the pan, upon which is set a lighted glass lantern. The moths, attracted by the light, dash against the sides of the lantern, and, falling into the pan, are thus destroyed before depositing their eggs. The army and the cotton-worm moths have been destroyed in quantities in this way at the South; and Mr. White, of Massachusetts, has destroyed large numbers of the cut-worm moth in the same manner. We shall test this experiment thoroughly during the present spring, as we have found the cutworm a troublesome pest of late years. The early part of May, in the latitude of New York, is the time that the cut-worm moth is flying. As all moths are most active just as darkness comes on, the lantern should be lighted at that time.

Planting Trees.

I have transplanted many hundred forest trees in the last ten years, and I have rarely lost a tree, and most of them were set in the fall. One of the most important rules to be observed is, before taking up a tree mark it in some manner so that you will know which is the north side, so as to be able to reset it in exactly the position it grew in the woods. This may seem to many of no importance, but to those who know that there is in the bark and wood of all trees a radical difference between the north and south sides, the north side being close-grained and tough, while the south side is invariably more open-grained and brash, or soft, the importance will be seen. If this is done, your tree does not have to undergo a complete change in all its parts, and is ready to start off and grow at the proper time as readily as though it had not been moved.—[Letter to Prairie Farmer.

The sheep bites closer than the ox. He was designed to live where the other would starve; he was designed in many places to follow the other, and to gather sufficient nourishment where the ox would be unable to crop a single blade. Two purposes are answered by this: All the nutriment that the land produces is gathered from it, while the pasture is made to produce more herbage than by any other means it could be forced to do; the sheep, by his close bite, not only loosens the roots of the grass and stimulates their spreading, but by cutting off the short suckers, causes the plant to throw out fresh, more numerous and stronger ones, and thus improves and increases the value of the crop. Nothing will more expeditiously or effectually make a rich, permanent pasture, than its being occasionally and closely eaten down by sheep.

CARROTS FOR HORSES.—At Cornell University they have been feeding their work teams liberally with carrots the present winter, and the experiment has proved this crop to be one of essential value for feeding to horses. One bushel of carrots and one bushel of oats, fed in alternate meals, are of equal value with two bushels of oats alone, while they can be grown at a much less expense. Henceforth carrots will profitably replace one-half the oats that we have fed. Horses, like human beings, require a variety of food, and thrive best upon a ration that involves a change of diet. Succulent food, in part, will always prove beneficial, and this is best afforded by carrots.—American Farmer.

A PLANT of somewhat remarkable properties is partially described by Major Stuart, in his report on Hayti. Its narcotic properties are so powerful that they can produce coma of any desired intensity and duration. A priest putting himself under the influence of an extract of this plant can simulate death and resurrection. All persons within a house can be put asleep by it and a burglary committed with impunity. A few families only know this plant, and the knowledge of its properties is handed down from generation to generation as an heirloom: but it is believed that an experienced botanist may discover it and make it available for medical purposes.

To plant peach stones, dig a hole in the ground (say six or eight inches), plant as soon as the pulp is off, let them remain in the ground all winter. In the spring take them up, crack the stones, plant the meat. The first year they will grow five feet.

THERE is a submarine plant growing in the North Pacific Ocean which, according to Professor Reinsch, dwarfs all others in its vast proportions. The Macrocystis pyrifera, one of the Melanosperma, has been known to grow to such an extent as to cover vast areas of the ocean bed. One specimen by measurement was found to cover three square miles, and the stem from which the growth proceeded was eight feet in diameter.

PLANT more shade trees—it will pay you.

DEFAULT having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed by Albert B. Tucker and Mary E. P. Tucker, his wife, to Anson H. Platt (in said mortgage called A. H. Platt) dated the first day of January, A. D. 1880, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Ottawa County, State of Michigan, on the thirtieth day of January, A. D. 1880, at eight o'clock in the afternoon, in Liber 4 of mortgages, on pages 223, 224 and 225, by which the power to sell in said mortgage has become operative; which mortgage was duly assigned by the said Anson H. Platt to Louisiana P. Middleton, now Louisiana P. Platt (in said assignment called L. P. Middleton) by a deed of assignment, dated the seventeenth day of October, A. D. 1879, and recorded in the Register's office aforesaid, on the seventeenth day of September, 1878, at half past four o'clock in the afternoon, in Liber No. 8 of mortgages, on page 587; and which mortgage was duly assigned by the said Louisiana P. MAMMOOT: HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

Just published, a new edition of DR. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical cure (without medicine) of Spermatorrhea or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance, &c.

Price in sealed envelope, only six cents. The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife, pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, post-paid, on receipt of six cents or two post stamps. Address the Publishers.
