Residents Prepare For Thanksgiving

Holland residents today prepared to celebrate Thanksgiving Day Thursday with trips to relatives' houses, turkey to eat and perhaps a few sober thoughts about the Pilgrim Fathers.

It is the first Thanksgiving holiday in more than a decade with U.S. servicemen engaged in combat overseas.

Churches in thousands of towns across the nation will hold Thanksgiving services.

Weather predictions called for cloudy and not so cold tonight with rain occasionally mixed with snow, and Thursday colder with occasional light snow or snow flurries.

The Automobile Club of Michigan said Thanksgiving trips to relatives are usually one-day affairs. Only at Detroit are traffic problems anticipated and these are associated with the big Hudson's parade and the Lions football game.

President Johnson, in an official Thanksgiving proclamation, hailed America for "an abundant harvest" and the "greatest prosperity in history."

At the Alameda Naval Air Station in California, Thanksgiving promised to be a very special day. In a laughing, crying, hugging and kissing reunion, 3,800 American servicemen came home to their wives and children Tuesday from a tour in Viet Nam.

MUSICIAN — Untalented Hannibal, played by Darl Dalman, believes he is an accomplished violinist in "The Curious Savage," a three-act comedy being presented at West Ottawa School cafeteria. Here he demonstrates his musical ability for Mrs. Ethel Savage, played by Shelly Kolean, who also is a patient in his hospital.

West Ottawa Production Pleases First Nighters

The excellent performance of the cast in the West Ottawa play, "The Curious Savage" Thursday left the first night audience highly pleased as the curtain closed on the last scene of the comedy written by John Patrick.

Starring in the leading role was Shelly Kolean as Mrs. Ethel Savage, a wealthy widow, placed in the Cloister, a mental institution, by her greedy children, who want to know what she did with the $10 million which she had converted into negotiable bonds. Mrs. Savage's gracious manner in the institution won the hearts of the inmates and they in turn do all they can to aid her.

The supporting roles of the three children were ably played by Carol Beekman as the haughty Lily Belle, Rog Stam as Titus, a senator, and Dick Howard playing the part of Samuel.

Their frequent outbursts in demanding where their mother had hidden the bonds only made Mrs. Savage more determined not to tell them and led to embarrassing situations when she suggests where they might be hidden.

The more than 250 persons who attended the opening performance were especially pleased with the performances of the gentle inmates of "the Cloisters" with Mrs. Savage gaining the affection of all.

Colleen King played the part of Florence who constantly worries about her dead son, John Thomas, the part of Hannibal was taken by Darl Dalman, a violinist. The witty remarks of Fairy May played by Jan Caauwe and the frequent outbursts of Mrs. Paddy, taken by Joen Hudzik, greatly delighted the audience. She only speaks to tell of things she hates.

Steve Northuis portrayed the part of an inmate, Jeff, a would-be pianist who refuses to play because he is self-conscious about the scar on his face.

Steve Helder as Dr. Emmett and Nadene Slayer as Miss Wilhelmina greatly add to the play as the plot unfolds, the three acts taking place in the living room of "the Cloisters." The final moments of the production are absent of dialogue but the action speaks for itself.

The play under the direction of B. J. Berghorst with Jan Wiley as assistant director and Rita King as stage manager, was repeated tonight and Saturday.

Dr. D. I. Dykstra Tells AAUW of Confucius Idea

An interesting and informative talk on Confucius and Confucianism was given by Dr. D. I. Dykstra, professor of philosophy at Hope College, Thursday evening to the Holland Branch of the American Association of University Women.

"Confucius was a most remarkable man — he was to China what Socrates was to the west," Dr. Dykstra said. As a teacher and scholar he never claimed he had done anything original but only put into writing what the Chinese had been living for many years. His doctrines were ethical and political. They dealt with the contacts of human life. The good life consists of learning to do the right thing from the wrong thing.

He went on to tell the five relationships set down in Confucianism and the seven conditions which make Confucianism work.

A short business meeting was conducted by Mrs. Kenneth Leggett, president. Chairman and program leaders gave reports.

The Dec. 16 meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. C. Vander Werf. Mrs. Jerome Counihan, branch member, will speak on "Moods of Christmas."

Sunday School Lesson

Amos
Amos 7:12-15; 1:14-15, 18-24
By C. P. Dame

Religious leaders differ much. Our lesson mentions two, Amos, the prophet, and Amos, the prophet. The prophet was concerned about an institution, the prophet about people and the nation. In this age when there are many people who care little for justice, it is fitting to study Amos, the man of God who called people to righteous living.

I God calls his true servants. In the eighth century before Christ a number of prophets, Amos, Hosea, Isaiah and Micah preached to God's people. Amos preached from about 785 to 745 B. C. Amos was a layman, not a professional prophet, a graduate of the school of the prophets, but an herdsman and a gatherer of sycamore fruit.

When God called him to leave his daily work and he responded and perished. "And the Lord took me as I followed the flock (the sheep of the special breed) and the Lord said unto me, Go prophesy unto my people Israel." He made no excuses but went determined to do his best for God and the nation.

Amos met with opposition. True preaching has always been opposed. Amos, the priest objected and told Amos to go home and preach there and make a living. The priest spoke of the king's chapel, not of God's house. Religion had become a state affair. The priest was concerned about maintaining an institution.

II. God's servants preach God's message. Amos preached to religious people. Their religion was an outer matter, not something inner. They worshipped on religious days in the temple but their conduct was godless. Injustice prevailed in the land. Wealth, position, prestige, and social status were important. The wealthy cheated and oppressed the poor.

The prophet told his hearers to seek good, hate evil, do the just things and live, in short he urged repentance. All who are familiar with modern conditions in the nation realize that repentance is much needed today in our own land where injustice is prevalent.

III. Righteousness is far more important than ritual. "I hate, I despise your feasts days, and I will not smell in your solemn assemblies." God delights in church-going but He objects when worship is not followed by action. The words of Amos, "But let judgment run down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream" are fitting for this age too. God demands justice in the lives of His people and in the nation.

The church always faces dangers. And that is why the church must be watchful. Today there is much emphasis upon ritualism. There is room for ritual in our churches. The danger is that "the altar" crowds out the pulpit.

The evangelical church has always thrived when it put preaching first. One more danger note—laymen—watch this danger carefully. In church life much is made of organizational efficiency. This is commendable but the church does not grow simply because it is highly efficient in organizations.

Church mergers are promoted so that there may be a more efficient witness. But do not promote the witness that is needed. The early church had a meager organization but it had spiritual power. Today there is a crying need for dedication, fervor, Christ-centered preaching which will result in repentance and in conversions. Laymen—be watchful in these times.

FOLLOWING SUIT

If imitation is a compliment, we Americans have been paid one by the Japanese. For Japan has taken a page from our foreign policy book and organized a "peace corps," the Japan Overseas Cooperation Volunteers (JOCV), very much like ours. The first contingent of 38 Japanese youngsters will be assigned to four Asian countries: the Philippines, Laos, Malasia and Cambodia. Here they will work with the natives mostly on agricultural problems but also assisting them with engineering projects and initiating physical education programs.

The project seems well-planned. Volunteers are carefully screened, then trained for three months before they are assigned to a specific country and program. Assignment is made after consultation with the host country.

Volunteers serve a two-year stint, but the period of assignment can be extended if everybody involved agrees. By March of 1966 there should be 60 volunteers in the field rather than the present 38. If the program proves successful, which no one in Japan seems to doubt, the number of volunteers and countries to which they may be sent will increase rapidly.

If the young people from Japan can render the same useful service to needy nations that has been contributed by our own Peace Corps, we can see nothing but good coming from this program. Certainly it would be a better world if we had more organizations like the peace corps and fewer armies.

Perhaps Japan's imitation of our peaceful program looks forward to the day when nations will work together in beating their swords into pruning hooks, and when peaceful pursuits will be so pressing that no one will have time to study war any more.

Bargaining Vote Sought in Issue At West Ottawa

West Ottawa's Oonk Selected on O-K Team

John Oonk, 5'11", 182-pound senior tackle and captain of the 1965 West Ottawa football team, today was named to the Ottawa-Kent Reg. Division all-conference football first team selected by league coaches.

Hudsonville placed two players on the first team, senior end 6'1", 190-pound Gerald

John Oonk... named at tackle

Schut and 5'11" senior quarterback Greg Gerkin.

Zeeland failed to place a player on the first team but placed three on the second team. Junior tackle Larry Beus, 5'10" and 170, was named to the second team along with 5'8", 160-pound junior guard Roy Velderman and 6'1", 175-pound senior Scott Van Hoven.

Conference champion Wyoming Rogers placed two on the team while Wyoming Park and Forest Hills each placed three players. Selected from Rogers were senior end 6', 180-pound Randy Boedy and 6'1", 175-pound senior back Barry Barr. Wyoming selections were senior tackle 6'2", 230-pound Tom Morse; senior guard 6', 210-pound Rich Kornoelje and sophomore back 5'9", 195-pound Jim Wicht.

Forest Hills choices are senior guard 6', 170-pound Jim Teft; senior center 5'8", 190-pound Walt Perchbacher and 5'11", 170-pound senior Berkley Freeman.

Hudsonville's second team picks were 5'11", 170-pound senior center Jim Van Geest; 5'10", 165-pound junior Bruce Van Klompenburg and 6', 170-pound senior end Mark Bolhuis.

Other second team selections include senior guard Larry Piatek; junior quarterback Al Beamer and junior back John Krutel, all of Rogers; senior tackle Jim Hill of Forest Hills and senior end Lee Heyboer of Wyoming.

Champion Wyoming Lee led the Blue Division first team with five selections. Choices include tackle Fred Cole, guard Dennis Dertien, center Larry Doe, quarterback Don Looman and back Tom Nauta. All are seniors.

Other selections include end William Schueller and guard Don Yokom of Northview, tackle Dan Quist and back Mike Stiel of Kentwood and end Rocky Ringold of Kenowa Hills. All are seniors but Yokom who is a junior.

Second team picks include end Bruce Hoorn, guard Jim Scarlett, center Chuck Krieve and back Gary LaLonde of Kentwood, end Wayne Beld and quarterback Doug De Boer of Byron Center; tackle Dan Neely and guard Gary Meyers of Kelloggville and back Dick Ross of Kenowa Hills. All are seniors.

Both teams, however, were cold from the floor during the first half. Allegan succeeded in pulling down 14 defensive rebounds, whereas the Panthers had only eight. Jim Pritchett, 6'4", 240-pound forward, did most of the rebounding.

West Ottawa stayed in the game in the third period through the individual efforts of center Dale Boeve, who scored nine points, five from the free throw line.

Even though the Panthers outscored the Tigers, 14-11 in the period, West Ottawa still had 42 per cent from the floor to 43 per cent for Allegan and the Tigers had a five-point lead, 38-33 at the third period buzzer.

With Dan Bauer hitting two quick free throws to open the fourth period, the Panthers were only three points away, 38-35. But it was at this point that Allegan began using a full court press, stole the ball three times in a row and led 46-35 in a matter of seconds.

West Ottawa capitalized on the fouls by the over eager pressing Tigers and made eight free throws for half of their 16 points in the period. The Tigers scored 20 points for its best quarter of the game.

On Dec. 3, West Ottawa will meet Wyoming Rogers in the O-K League opener in the West Ottawa gym.

Views From The Campus

(Stuart Wilson is an instructor in the Department of English at Hope College. Majoring in philosophy, he received his A.B. from Hope in 1960; in 1961 he received the A.M. degree in English Language and Literature from the University of Michigan. While continuing his graduate studies toward the Ph.D. degree, Mr. Wilson taught freshman composition, holding appointments to the position of teaching fellow from September 1961 until the fall of 1965 when he joined the Hope faculty. Editor's note.)

By Stuart Wilson

We Americans are addicted to the use of the word "product."

This is especially true in our talk about education. Planners and speechmakers commonly use the word, along with the verb "produce," in their discussions and deliberations. It is a convenient word and seems proper to the people of a society that finds satisfaction and takes pride in its technological skill, in the number of things it can produce. It is a word from the language of manufacturing and mechanics.

Though we Americans may not always use the word in its mechanical sense, that is in the sense that an automobile and electric toothbrushes are products, we should not use it at all when we talk about education lest we adopt the cold neutral meaning along with the word. "Product" is, after all, a colorful word.

In fact, it is my impression that we have already done this very thing. We are fond of the word and the idea. We measure and plan educational programs in terms of producing a certain kind of student with a certain number of characteristics that will enable him to function properly in society, just as we design and produce a gear with a proper number of teeth and made of a specific metal alloy.

To think about what happens to the minds of people when they are constantly being referred to as products makes one uncomfortable. The effect is an unhappy one. People begin to think of themselves in the terms of manufacturing. Words and the ways we use them are a part of our behavior and reveal our attitudes and the values we attach to things just as the grime of a small boy reveals what he thinks about white shirts, neckties, and small girls.

Five weeks ago, fifty-one of my freshman students wrote papers on the topic, "My Conception of the Ideal College." The assignment followed discussion of several articles about education in our textbook. By looking beneath the surfaces of these papers, one can see the attitudes and values of the students. One can also see what the students think of themselves.

The college programs and activities they described and the impossibility they placed on the faculty and administration show that they almost unanimously consider themselves to be raw material that is pliable, able to take any shape whatever, waiting to be worked upon by outside and superior forces. The colleges they described are not places where mind and imagination flourish; they are forges and heavy presses.

The unhappy aspect of all this becomes apparent when we remember the nature of raw material. It neither feels responsibility nor senses involvement. It is fixed quantity, unthrilled, and not very thrilling. Is it any wonder that superficial knowledge, absence of vision, and confused values are so prevalent among college graduates when they begin their careers with such a pathetic image of themselves?

At Hope College, we try to bring our students into profound contact with the accumulated wealth of historical tradition and challenge them to bring their critical intelligence to bear on all that is new. We try to confront them (and ourselves) with all the things that re-vitalize and re-create the soul. We are successful often. How much more successful we could be if one small word and its cold meaning were confined to its proper place and never uttered in the same breath with the word "education," the ancient, honorable, and continuing search for Truth.

Nature Center Applauded at Garden Meet

Mrs. Carl S. Cook, 603 Crescent Dr., a member of the Holland Garden Club and member of the Civic Improvement Committee of the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan was one of six delegates from Michigan attending the Third Annual Midwestern Conference on Garden Clubs at the Center for Continuing Education at the University of Chicago on Monday and Tuesday.

Progress on community beautification through the Sears, Roebuck and Co. civic improvement contest was reported by Mrs. Donald B. Smith, president of the state club.

Among prize winning projects reported was the Holland Nature Center Jackson library landscaping, art center in Battle Creek, an elementary school in Vassar, a Chamber of Commerce building in Traverse City, a park in Farmington and the Inter-faith Chapel on the grounds of the Kalamazoo State Hospital.

Particularly relevant to Holland's Nature Center was Thomas Kimball's address on "The New Look in Conservation" at the opening luncheon.

He said conservation's new credo is to "Leave to future generations a glimpse of the world as God made it, not as man sees it now after applying the ax, the plow and the match."

The landscape plan prepared for the development of the Holland Nature Center by Carl S. Gerlach, Michigan State University, provides for this type of conservation.

Water Bonds For Jenison Project Sold

GRAND HAVEN — Final approval of the financing of the $1,100,000 Jenison area water system was approved last week by the Ottawa County Road Commission, which is the authority for water and sewer projects in the county.

The road commission recently sold $700,000 in water and sewer bonds for the Jenison area in Georgetown township and work will start soon, Walter Ruscett, utilities director of the road commission, announced.

This money will finance the installation of transmission, bulk metering and storage facilities for the project, to be known as "Georgetown Township Water Supply System No. 1." The township will finance the rest of the project, distribution mains in the Jenison area, which is a fast-growing area on the outskirts of Grand Rapids. The township will finance this phase of the work itself, through the sale of special assessment bonds, in the amount of $400,000.

Successful bidder for the $700,000 issue, approved last week, was Security First Bank and Trust Co., Grand Haven, which bid with two Chicago bonding firms. The bonds are county general obligation bonds and the average interest rate in the sale is 3.58 per cent.

The Jenison area, and Hudsonville, also in Georgetown, will be supplied water after the summer of 1966 through the mammoth Wyoming city pipeline now being installed in Ottawa county from Lake Michigan, along New Holland St., to the Kent city. The total cost of the Wyoming project is $13,800,000.

Hudsonville is working on a transmission line in preparation of the hook-on to the Wyoming line and Holland and Park townships may also join the line.

Other brochures are "The Methodist Episcopal Church in Michigan During the Civil War," a 75-page work by Margaret B. MacMillan, professor of history in Western Michigan University; "The Impact of the Civil War on the Presbyterian Church in Michigan," by Maurice F.
