Additional Local.

We call the attention of ladies to the advertisement in this paper of "Dr. Mar-chisi's Uterine Catholicon." We have in our possession indisputable evidence of its worth, and we recommend the afflicted to try it.
This remedy differs from quack
nostrums in the following respects: 1st.
It is prepared by a regular physician; 2d.
It is not recommended for all diseases, but only for a particular class, peculiar to females; 3d. It is recommended and used in practice by many physicians, one of whom at least is well known to the people of New Bedford. 47-ly.

A Good Foundation.

In American households the prevailing complaints are weakness of the stomach and its consequences, Indigestion, Nervousness, and Rheumatism. Such sufferers can lay a good foundation for health by using Parker's Ginger Tonic as it tones up the stomach and nerves, and keeps the kidneys active to carry off the foul matter.

Gen. Grant on the Fritz John Porter Case.

THE article by General Grant in the North American Review for December, on the Fitz-John Porter case, will be read with great interest. In it Gen. Grant reviews the evidence in the Fitz-John Porter case, and reaches the conclusion that great injustice has been done that officer, which ought to be undone as soon as possible. The article is simply an amplification of the points contained in Gen.
Grant's letter to the president on the subject. In conclusion he says:

"Gen. Porter has now for twenty years been laboring under the disabilities and penalties inflicted upon him by the court martial of 1862, all that time contending for a restoration to his position in the army and in society, and always, as stated in the beginning of this article, on the ground of his entire innocence. The investigation of the Schofield board has in my judgment established his innocence of all the offenses for which he was tried and convicted. The sufferings of twenty years under such findings for himself and family and friends is something it is now impossible to set right. Twenty years of the best part of his life have been consumed in trying to have his name and his reputation restored before his countrymen. In his application now before congress he is asking only that he may be restored to the rolls of the army with the rank that he would have if the court martial had never been held. This, in my judgment, is a very small part of what it is possible to do in this case and of what ought to be done.
Gen. Porter should, in the way of partial restitution, be declared by congress to have been convicted on mistaken testimony, and therefore to have never been out of the army. This would make him a major general of volunteers until the date might be fixed for his muster out of that rank, after which he should be continued as a colonel of infantry and brevet brigadier general of the United States army from the date of the act, when he could be placed upon the retired list with that rank. * * * If a solemn and sincere expression of my thorough understanding of and belief in the entire innocence of General Porter will tend to draw the public mind to the same conviction, I shall feel abundantly rewarded for my efforts. It will always be a pleasure to me as well as a duty to be the instrument even in the smallest degree of setting right any man who has been grossly wronged, especially if he has risked life and reputation in defense of his country. I feel, as stated on a previous occasion, a double interest in this. As general of the army, when I might have been instrumental in having justice done to Gen. Porter, and later as president of the United States, when I certainly could have done so, I labored under the impression that he was guilty.
Having become better informed, I at once voluntarily gave, as I have continued to give, my earnest efforts to impress the minds of my countrymen with the justice of this case, and secure from the government, as far as it could grant it, the restitution due to Gen. Fitz John Porter."

The Christmas St. Nicholas comes laden with its seasonable freight of mirth and good cheer; and chiefest among its special features is a Christmas story, by Louisa M.
Alcott, entitled "Grandma's Pearls."
Other timely features are, first, the bright, colored frontispiece by R. B. Birch, — a snow scene, with children, pony, and dogs, and an unmistakable Christmas flavor. Then there is a graphic account of a long dog-sledge journey on Lake Winnipeg, capably illustrated by Fanny;
a Christmas poem by Nora Perry; and a clever short story, "The Christmas fairies," that is a true story as well. Malcolm Douglass contributes a pathetic little Christmas tale; and two pages are given to the words and music of a simple but tuneful "Christmas Carol." J. T. Trow-bridge's serial, "The Tinkham Brothers' Tide-mill," is also continued, with three chapters of accumulating interest. Besides all this is an article on whale-hunting in Japan, by William Elliot Griffis, and
"The Discovery of the Mammoth," by C.
F. Holder, with a startling picture by James U. Beard, and various other interesting articles too numerous to mention.
The entire number, including the "Departments," is copiously and handsomely illustrated by the cleverest designers for children.

Mrs. Parnell writes that his doctors forbid him travelling and that he cannot address constituents until after the session.

A Freeholder.

When I was a young man I spent several years in the south, residing for a while at Port Gibson, on the Mississippi river. A great deal of litigation was going on there about that time, and it was not an easy matter to obtain a jury. One day I was summoned to act in that capacity, and repaired to court to get excused. On my name being called I informed his

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

A FIRE occurred in the Callendar Building, at Providence, R. I., which resulted in a serious loss of life. The building was four stories high and occupied mostly by jewelry shops. The fire originated in the middle of the building, on the third floor, and was caused by the ignition of a can of naphtha. The room was filled with light, inflammable clothes, and the woodwork was dry as tinder. The room was next the stairway, and before a word of warning could be given escape by the stairway was cut off by the flames. On the fourth floor was the workshop of William H. Robinson & Co., gold-chain makers. The firm employed forty operatives, equally divided as to sex. When the flames swept up through the floor the employees made a rush for the windows. There was no fire-escape on the building. Just across the alley-way, about fifteen feet wide, was a two-story wooden structure. The help rushed for the end of the building fronting on this alley. Then a panic ensued. The roof of the wooden building was about twenty feet below the windowsills, where the excited girls were congregated. The persons in the rear crowded and pushed those in the act of jumping and many fell short. Others were injured by being jumped upon after they had reached the roof. Two girls and one man fell between the buildings and died soon after. Six girls were fatally injured, and three others had limbs broken.

COAL operators representing nine of the principal mines of the Massillon district have followed their rivals by yielding to the demands of the miners, but they take revenge by ordering reductions in the wholesale and retail prices. The public can not have forgotten the outrage perpetrated by burgins on the oil-rich brothers at Charleston, N. Y., last August, when $125,000 in bonds and mortgages, $50,000 in certificates of deposit, and $800 in cash were taken away. Parties in New York city have for some time been endeavoring to negotiate for the return of the securities. Through the labors of Sheriff Vandenberg all the stolen securities were purchased from a go-between for $150, the thieves not appearing to know the value of their booty.

THE fine residence of George Bailey, in Buffalo, was consumed by fire, involving a loss of $150,000. At Scranton, Pa., Mrs. James Ruddy, after removing from her burning house her children and invalid husband, went back to recover $250 in gold from a bureau-drawer, and was burned to death.

THE petroleum gamblers of Pittsburgh, Bradford and other speculative centers have been going through a terrible experience recently. Under the pressure of the bear influences the market, which had gone up to an unusually high figure, took a sudden tumble, dropping from $1.05 to 88 cents in one day. The speculators, who had forced up prices, found themselves overwhelmed in ruin. The excitement throughout the oil speculative regions was unprecedented.

MRS. MELVILLE, whose case furnishes a strange parallel to that of Mrs. Scoville, was the heroine of a sensational episode in Brooklyn. Accompanied by her brother she went to Miss Sarah Capel's seminary, and carried off her daughter Maude. The child had been placed there by Engineer Melville. By the explosion of a tank at Greenpoint, Long Island, the Brooklyn oil works were damaged $100,000, and Derris's refinery $60,000. The wholesale price of coffee in New York is lower than has been known since the panic of 1857.

THE WEST.

MARK GRAY LYON, who spent some years in the Elgin insane asylum for firing at Edwin Booth in a Chicago theater, is a clerk in a dry goods store at Keokuk. He has recently written to a theatrical manager in St. Louis to know which is the best acting edition of Hamlet, and announcing that he intends to star in the small towns next winter. John Herzer, a resident of Milwaukee, who weighed 486 pounds, was buried the other day. He literally choked to death, and no coffin sufficiently large to receive his remains could be obtained.

A BAND of Piegans swooped down on a party of Cow scouts, near Fort Custer, and ran off thirty ponies. In the fight which followed two Piegan warriors were killed. United States troops will be kept in motion in that region this winter, and two Canadian mounted police are working in union with them. Mrs. Mary Long, 81 years old, living alone and destitute near Indianapolis, committed suicide by taking Paris-green. The Northern Pacific Railroad Company has decided to sell 3,000,000 acres of land east of the Missouri river at $4 per acre.

THE war among the Northwestern railroads culminated last week in the Chicago Milwaukee and St. Paul fixing the passenger rate at 50 cents between Chicago and Rock Island, going both ways. The Rock Island road retaliated by making the fare from Chicago to Cedar Rapids 50 cents, and to Albert Lea $1. Freights from Chicago to Mankato and Sioux City were cut to 15 cents per 100 by the Rock Island, Cedar Rapids, and Omaha lines. Fire at Morris Mine, destroyed several business structures, including the Tribune office. The loss is variously estimated from $54,000 to $150,000, with but proportionally small insurance. The post-office authorities seem to have an against a case of systematic mail robbery so adroit as to baffie investigation. The robbers have occurred for several weeks in mills between Denver and Eastern cities, and without reckoning the thefts of money and valuables, the extent of which it is impossible to correctly estimate, the losses in drafts, checks, money-orders, etc., aggregate over $600,000.

AN early-morning fire in an Indianapolis boarding-house burned the establishment, and three domestics perished in the flames. The County Poor-house near Dayton, Iowa, was destroyed by fire, the sixteen inmates being safely removed.

THE large stove foundry of Bonnell, Duffy & Co., at Quincy, Ill., was destroyed by fire, causing a loss of about $14,000.

HON. LEWIS D. CAMPBELL, of Ohio, for many years an influential member of Congress from Ohio, and a prominent figure in the politics of the country before and during the war died the other day at his home in Hamilton, Ohio. William Wright and wife resided near St. Louis, and the report of a gun in the room where they were at work in a field. They soon discovered that their 6-year-old son had pulled a loaded shot-gun upon his younger sister, a tally blowing away her head. W. D. Hoyt, a telegraph operator at Leavenworth, quarreled over the wire with Mr. Bailey, Union Pacific train-dispatcher at Lawrence. The latter refused to retract an offensive remark, and Hoyt traveled to Lawrence and shot him in the breast.

THE schooner Collingwood was wrecked during the recent gale on Lake Michigan, fifteen miles northeast of Milwaukee. The particulars of the disaster are thrilling in the extreme. Four of the crew, including the Captain, were lost. The center-board chain parted, causing the board to drop down its full length. The additional strain proved too much for the old craft, which went to pieces. The sailors were left struggling in the water, and some of them went down. The three survivors had a terrible experience upon a raft. One of them was rendered blind and insane, and died from the terrible exposure. They were rescued by the propeller Wisconsin, eight miles from Grand Haven.

THE SOUTH.

At Frostburg, Ky., a party of young people were out walking, when a young man, Cook, called his sweetheart, Miss Austin, one side and conversed a few moments with her. Cook placed a pistol to the girl's temple and shot her dead, and then put the pistol to his own heart, and shot himself through the body and twice through the head. Both were dead in two minutes. It is believed Cook asked her to marry him, and she refused. Cook was employed in a saw-mill. Miss Austin was a beautiful young lady. Five well-known business men of Arkansas have leased the State penitentiary at rates which will amount to $45,000 a year and all incidental expenses.

THE testimony of steamboat Captains and pilots before the Congressional River Commission at New Orleans was emphatically in favor of the outlet plan and against the extravagant levee system. Capt. Leathers, who has been on the Mississippi longer than any man now living, and whose practical knowledge of the subject is probably not exceeded by that of any man living, is an earnest advocate of Capt. Cowdon's plan of drawing off the excess of water through natural outlets prepared with special reference to that result, and an equally earnest opponent of both the levee and the jetty systems.

FROM the romantic regions of North Carolina, near Rockhill, comes the recital of an extraordinary duel between two rivals in a love affair. They met in the road, armed respectively with an ax and a bludgeon, and then and there fought it out to the death. The one with the club for his only weapon being killed by a frightful gash in the side, while the survivor was little better than dead when found.

PETER DICK and Charles Roads, two Virginia clerks with general aspirations, fought a desperate duel with knives in the hardware store where they were employed. Roads was shockingly mutilated in the region of the abdomen. R. W. Barnwell, formerly Senator from South Carolina, died at Columbia, in his 81st year.

WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON telegram: The President and Cabinet are in favor of a reduction of taxes on tobacco and whisky and the abolition of all other internal-revenue duties, bringing down the receipts to $100,000,000 per annum.

THE Garfield Fair in the rotunda of the Capitol was opened by President Arthur who made a few formal remarks expressive of his hope that the wishes of those who had inaugurated it would be realized. The fair includes an art exhibit and a bazaar, and is a very creditable exhibition.

THE Department of Agriculture at Washington reports that, by reason of a clerical error in the department, the estimate of the yield of wheat in the abstract of the Commissioner's report was 100,000,000 bushels too small. The estimated yield was 510,000,000 bushels, not 410,000,000.

It is predicted at Washington that Judge French is to be removed from the Assistant Secretaryship of the Treasury, having been the object of attacks from manufacturers dissatisfied with his tariff rulings. Thomas L. Tulloch has been appointed Postmaster at Washington, in place of D. B. Ainger.

GENERAL.

ABOUT thirty persons gathered at Hamilton, Ont., to hear a lecture by Mrs. Scoville, but she announced a postponement on account of the smallness of the audience.

THE Labor Congress, in session at Cleveland, voted to strike out the protective-tariff plank from the platform. The tendency of some of the speeches was antagonistic to the Knights of Labor organization, and Socialistic organizations were denounced.

A FURIOUS wind storm prevailed on Lakes Huron and Erie on the 24th of November, causing many wrecks of vessels. Fortunately there was little loss of life.

THE business failures in the United States and Canada, for the week ending Nov. 25, numbered 157, and were confined principally to the smaller class of traders. The Eastern States had eighteen failures; Western, forty-nine; Southern, twenty-five; Middle, twenty-six; Pacific, eleven; Canada, sixteen; and New York city, fourteen.

POLITICAL.

UNITED STATES SENATOR DAVIS, of West Virginia, declines to be a candidate for re-election. The names of Congressman Kenna, ex-Gov. Matthews and ex-Senator Herford are mentioned in connection with the place, with the chances in favor of Kenna. Frank H. Hurd and other leading Democrats of Ohio have arranged for a tariff and labor dinner at Columbus on Jan. 8, when Messrs. Thurman, McDonald, Watterson and others will respond to toasts.

THE Alabama State Temperance Convention, in session at Montgomery, declared itself opposed to making the temperance question a political one, but demanded a better enforcement of the present license laws of the State.

FOREIGN.

THE awful midnight murder of the Joyce family in Connoma, Ireland, a region infamous for the many deeds of atrocity there perpetrated on the 17th of last August, will be punished in a manner scarcely less horrible than the crime itself. Three of the leaders of the band of assassins had trial at Dublin, and last week four accomplices pleaded guilty and threw themselves upon the mercy of the Crown. The appeals of their counsel, and the acquiescence therein of the Attorney General, were, however, of no avail, and they too were sentenced to die on the scaffold Dec. 15. Queen Victoria decried at Windsor 370 of the officers and men engaged in the Egyptian campaign. She took them in a field, they galloped and devotion, and with a proud air for the laurels they had aided to other noble achievements of the British army.

The French Chamber of Deputies passed a bill ratifying the treaty made by De Brazza, Stanley's hated rival, with Makoko, the Congo chief, and the Government will ask a grant of 200,000 francs to enable De Brazza to establish twelve scientific, commercial and hospital stations along the Congo river.

A CAIRO dispatch states that a report prepared by the Egyptian Public Prosecutor, in which he summarizes the evidence against Arabi Pasha and other rebel leaders, was submitted to the Khedive and approved. It will be presented to Lord Dufferin. It is understood the Egyptian Government is prepared to leave it to Great Britain to decide whether the evidence is sufficient for proceeding with the trial on the charges specified in the report.

THE authorities of Aberdeenshire, Scotland, have agreed to send a detachment of police to the Isle of Skye, if their expenses are paid, to assist in serving processes. Meantime tenants are organizing for mutual protection, and threatening any man who shall pay rent. Thirty lives were lost by the foundering of the steamer Winton in the Black sea.

GLADSTONE died in the British House of Commons that the Irish Arraers act was a failure, as the full benefits of its provisions had not yet become apparent. Trevelyan, Secretary for Ireland, informed the House that the Government were doing their utmost to improve the condition of the country, and would see to it that distress would be alleviated in whatever district it made its appearance. In the Commons the procedure rule was carried by a vote of 82 to 23. It provides that if the Speaker believes that a motion to adjourn is made for the purpose of obstruction, he may put the question from the chair. On the appeal of Great Britain, the Spanish Government will liberate the Cuban refugees seized near Malta, on the promise that they shall not return to Havana.

THE Khedive ordered a column to move to the Sudan to check the onward march of the False Prophet, but it is said the troops, well knowing the dangerous character of the expedition, and mindful of the fate of thousands of their comrades who have been slaughtered by the barbaric legions of the pretended successor of Mohammed, refused to proceed unless they are given Arabi as their leader.

THE outlook is said to be gloomy in France from a variety of causes. Paris is at fever heat, and some new and stirring developments in the political situation cannot be much longer deferred. England watches the progress of affairs with profound attention, but with too much skepticism as to the future of the republic. English capitalists regard with distrust the tricks of Wall street. The general condition of English financial affairs is good, the only disturbing element being from New York. Detective Cox was fatally shot in the streets of Dublin by a man named Christopher Dowling. Detective Eastwood pursued the assassin and shot him in the head, arm and hand, and he is not expected to recover. It seems that a party of ten men had come out of a public house frequented by Fenians, when they commenced to fire on the officers.

THE CUSTOMS SERVICE.

Abstract of the Supervising Agent's Report. Supervising Special Agent Martin, of the Treasury Department, in his annual report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1892, shows that the amount recovered on account of seizures, fines and suits was $80,579; increased duties, $708,446; miscellaneous, $12,157; number of seizures, 217; appraised value, $91,475; reduction in expenses recommended, $18,322; number of arrests, 54; number of reports received, 2,376. Of these reports, 55 relate to smuggling, 319 to under valuation, 64 to misconduct of customs officers, 123 to seizures, 129 to inspection of customs districts, 15 to suits commenced, and 2,39 to miscellaneous subjects. The Supervising Special Agent says: "To secure more efficient and honest administration of customs service throughout the country, a consolidation of collection districts and abolition of a large number of ports, at some of which there are no duties collected, and at others where the expenses are largely in excess of the receipts, would seem absolutely necessary, and in this connection it is gratifying to know that during the last session of Congress a bill for the consolidation of all fees and giving the Collectors fixed salaries was introduced by a member of the House, who was formerly a special agent and familiar with the wants of the service." Respecting smuggling, he says: "Through the activity and vigilance of the officers of this service, assisted largely by local customs officers, smuggling has been confined to very narrow limits. The seizure on the night of the 3d of January last of nearly a ton of opium valued at $20,000, while an attempt was being made to land it from the steamship City of Tokio at the wharf of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, is the largest and most important case of smuggling discovered during the year. It is reported that the business of opium smuggling on the Pacific coast has been carried on by an organized company, which includes capitalists, Custom House employees, steamship employees, local politicians and Chinamen. All customs officers suspected of complicity with smugglers have been dismissed from the service." On the subject of undervaluation, Mr. Martin says: "Investigation has shown that, upon the advice of an agent, foreign manufacturers often invoice commodities at a value below the cost of production. It is estimated that less than 40 per cent of the 60 per cent ad valorem duty on silk is collected in consequence of the undervaluation of that article."

SUPERVISING INSPECTOR DUMONT.

His Report upon the Steamboat Inspection Service.

Supervising Inspector General Dumont, in his annual report for the fiscal year ended June 30 last, gives the following statistics of the steamboat inspection service: Number of vessels inspected, 5,117; tonnage of same, 1,308,564; officers licensed, 20,467, showing an increase over the previous year in the number of vessels of $38, in tonnage of 74,561, and the number of licensed officers, 2,608. The total receipts from all sources during the year were $279,880.30; total expenditure, $227,615.63; receipts over expenditure, $52,264.67. The total number of accidents to steam vessels during the year, resulting in loss of life, were forty-one. 1 was lost from accidents to steam vessels, 120, of which but fifty-six were lives of passengers. Total persons carried during the year, 354,070,447. This number, divided by 25, the number of lives lost, shows one life lost to each 1,277,172 persons carried, as against one life lost in each 55,714 persons carried in the fifty-one years previous to the enactment of the first efficient steamboat laws. In the year last named there were 39,000,000 passengers carried, and 700 lives lost.

Don't throw away your cheap Japanese fans; remember that in a few years they will be more valuable, because in Japan, as elsewhere, purity of natural air is gradually being distorted by acquired fashions and tastes.

A BUSY LIFE ENDED.

Death of Thurlow Weed, the Veteran Journalist and Politician.

A Brief Sketch of His Active and Useful Career.

Thurlow Weed, the veteran editor, politician and statesman, breathed his last at his home in New York, at 8:55 o'clock on the morning of Wednesday, Nov. 23, after an illness lasting several weeks. At his death were his children, grandchildren, friends and attendants. He passed away as though going into a gentle sleep, with his granddaughter's hand resting on his.

Mr. Weed was possessed of a remarkably strong and vigorous constitution, and to this can be attributed the long years of his life. His physicians say that old age was his only infirmity, and the one that carried him off. Since 1877 Mr. Weed's eyesight has been failing, and latterly he had been almost blind. Last August he was prostrated by a chill, and has since been declining.

Mr. Weed leaves a considerable fortune invested in New York real estate, and in the stock of the Albany Evening Journal. He had three daughters—Mrs. Barnes of Albany; Miss Harriet Weed, who was his constant companion and house-keeper since the death of his wife, many years ago, and Mrs. Aiden, of Morrisania.

It is a curious incident that some weeks before his death, although then in good health, Mr. Weed had a presentiment that he was near his end. About four years ago a beautiful white dove flew into the window of his chamber, and was adopted by him as a pet. It has been his constant companion, roosting upon the arm of his chair by day and upon the foot of his bed by night. He fed it with his own hands, and the gentle bird curiously enough would accept food from no one else. Some weeks ago he accidentally sat upon it, crushing out its innocent life, and his sorrow was as genuine as if he had lost only a child. The death of the bird affected him seriously, and he spoke to his friends of a presentiment that he should soon die, and mentioned his belief in the poetical theory of the ancients that the spirits of doves surrounded the death-beds of the just.

Thurlow Weed was born in Cairo, N. Y., on the 15th day of November, 1797, and was the first-born of parents in lowly circumstances, and at an early age he was compelled to work to aid himself and his family. At the age of 9 he worked for a blacksmith at Catskill, N. Y., from whom he received a skilful day and his board. He subsequently worked in a tavern and sailed on a sloop as cook. At about this time young Weed's father removed his family to Onondaga, where the boy found work with the Postmaster, who enabled him to receive six months' schooling, the only tuition he ever enjoyed. In 1811 a paper, the Luz, was started in Onondaga, to the fortunes of which he attached himself as a printer's apprentice, at which business he served a year and a half, when his employer left the city. Weed continued to run the paper for several weeks. In 1812 he volunteered for service in the war as a private under Col. Petrie, and was ordered to Sackett's Harbor. Before reaching that point he received a Quartermaster's commission, for which he ever after cherished the kindest feelings toward Col. Petrie, and when the latter met with reverses Mr. Weed aided him materially. He served during three campaigns in the war and during the intervals worked at his trade in Utica and other cities of New York. After the war he was employed in Seymour's printing office, New York city, where he became intimate with James, the eldest of the Harper brothers. Returning to the country he was married, and then embarked in the extremely uncertain pursuit of publishing a country paper. The difficulties he encountered were numerous, but his industry and ability had their effect. His paper was called the Anti-Masonic Enquirer. At that time there was great excitement over the opposition to Masonic institutions. In 1824 he was again found doing the work of a journeyman printer in Albany. Political excitement was running high, and Martin Van Buren, DeWitt Clinton and others equally firm in the politics of the State were there. Thurlow Weed here virtually began his career. His wonderful powers of management were first noted. In this campaign he did the lion's share of the work which resulted in the election of John Quincy Adams to the Presidency. Mr. Weed next removed to Rochester, where, while he sustained many reverses, his reputation as an editor steadily grew. Twice he was elected to the Assembly as an anti-Masonic representative and his political influence was so wide and yet that he soon came to be recognized as a leader, and to him was accorded the honor of the victory which placed DeWitt Clinton in the gubernatorial chair of New York. In 1830 he was chosen to lead the Whigs against the Democratic party, which then controlled the affairs of the State, and it was through his efforts that the Democrats suffered their first defeat. He went to Albany and assumed editorial management of the Evening Journal, which soon gained a national reputation and influence. The political history of the State for forty years shows how he used his opportunities. He was prominent in securing the nomination of candidates Harrison, Taylor, Scott, Fremont and Lincoln. When the Republican party was organized, Mr. Weed joined the young party, and early in the civil war he was sent to England, where he was instrumental in preventing that country and France from uniting in favor of the Confederacy. Mr. Weed acted in unity with the Republican party until the close of the war, when he sided with President Johnson in his reconstruction views, but his influence has always been thrown toward the advancement of Republican principles, and has been felt in every great political movement for the last half century.

A West Point Deficiency.

West Point cadets are said to be lamentably deficient in the use of the sword, and there is talk of having more attention given to practice with it in that institution of warlike learning. This is as it should be, for it is well known that nothing so thoroughly intimidates a foe as a foeman, and especially a wild Indian on the plains, who shoots with a Winchester rifle at a distance of half a mile or so, than to see his opponent wildly flourishing his saber on the horizon, and going violently through the different maneuvers of cut and thrust. It is also a standing disgrace to our young army officers that not one in five of them can walk with the sword on without getting that so disagreeable weapon so tangled up with his legs that he is constant v in mortal peril. It is certainly high time that our cadets were better familiarized with the relations they should sustain to their trenchant blades.—Boston Journal.

ADDITIONAL NEWS.

THE aggregate clearings reported by twenty-five clearing-houses for the week ending Nov. 28 reached the stupendous sum of $1,553,799,998. This was an increase of more than $300,000,000 over the previous week, and has rarely, if ever, been equaled in the history of the American financial world.

FOURTEEN lives were lost by the sinking of the French steamer Cambonne, in the English Channel. Fourteen persons were killed, and many wounded by the fall of a train through a bridge at Fyvie, Scotland.

DENNIS FIELD, one of the jurymen who found a verdict of guilty against Hynes for murder, was passing along one of the main thoroughfares of Dublin at noon. A car containing two men drove rapidly up, and one of the men jumped off and stabbed Field several times with a sword, inflicting injuries which are expected to result fatally. It is believed that the murderers of Cox, the detective, were lying in wait for a party of Judges who had been dining together in Mountjoy Square. Several arrests have been made in connection with the affair. A mob attacked the Jervis Street Hospital, where Dolan, the murderer of Cox, was being treated. The crowd was dispersed by the police and the hospital guarded. Gambetta accidentally shot himself in the hand at Paris. Baron Mantouff, the Prussian statesman, died at the age of 77. The Russian police have arrested 180 students for revolutionary demonstrations. Troops fired into a gathering at Kazan University, and killed three.

NEAR Newburg, N. Y., a train on the Lehigh and Hudson railroad was wrecked. The engineer and fireman were scalded to death under the debris. The body of Dr. Lorenzo Ehrhart, of Allegheny City, Pa., was cremated at Washington, Pa., the process of incineration occupying two hours. The doctor was an earnest advocate of cremation as a means of disposing of the dead, and made arrangements in his will accordingly.

Two boys of Mrs. Nash, of St. Louis, whose complexions are decidedly dark, were recently sent home from a public school as being of the negro race. The mother, a lady moving in good society, has previously proven that she is a Caucasian, but admits a little Indian blood flows in her veins. Some of her children are blondes. She is determined to contest the case in the courts. Newbauer & Sons, of Milwaukee, one of the leading clothing firms of that city, made an assignment for the benefit of creditors. Depreciation in stock, indorsing for friends and the alleged peculations of a trusted employee are assigned as reasons for the failure, that it is feared will be followed by others. Frank James was taken from the jail at Independence to Kansas City, and arraigned in the Criminal Court, where he pleaded not guilty to the robbery of the Independence Bank and the murder of Detective Wither. His trial was set for Jan. 22, and he was taken back to Independence by the evening train.

EX-ATTORNEY GENERAL McVEIGH has made public a letter addressed by him to President Arthur just before his retirement from the cabinet. In this letter Mr. MacVeigh insists upon the acceptance of his resignation, and gives his reasons for declining to reconsider it. He states that President Garfield became satisfied early in his administration of the enormity of the star-route inequities and was earnest in season and out of season to get to the bottom of the cases and secure the punishment of the guilty. The day before President Garfield was shot he directed Mr. MacVeigh to offer Mr. Riddle the District Attorney's job, but this arrangement was prevented by the assassin's bullet.

COLGATE HOYT, of New York, has been appointed by President Arthur Governor of the Director of the Union Pacific Railroad, vice Spencer, removed. Aven Pearson, of Chicago, was appointed Superintendent of the Congressional Record, to succeed Helm, removed. GEN. HENRY L. HAZEN, Chief of the Signal Service, predicts that the coming winter will be a mild one. His prediction is based upon a thorough examination of all indications in possession of the signal office. Mr. Hazen, in making this prediction, disregards the assertion of meteorologists that a cool winter is invariably followed by a cold and stormy winter.

IRON AND STEEL.

The Depression Caused by Overproduction.

The Situation Probably Not So Bad as Represented.

A number of iron and steel mills in all parts of the country are to close down within a month or two for reasons which may be divided into two classes: First, the depression in the iron and steel traffic; and, second, the anticipation of free-trade legislation on the part of the next Congress. As to the latter consideration, Judge Kelley, of Pennsylvania, says that the next session of Congress cannot extend beyond seventy days, and that even were the Committee on Ways and Means disposed to re-form the tariff it would be an impossibility to get a bill through in the time that would be left after disposing of the appropriation bills and the hundreds of measures that will necessarily come under the Speaker's table. In reference to the depression in the business of the iron and steel industry, the St. Louis Iron and Steel Company, says: "The price of steel rails has fallen from $60 to $45 per ton, and pig iron only from $3.50 to $2.50. The fall in iron prices was due, he said, to overproduction. In one year the estimated capacity of the steel mills of the United States had increased 900,000 tons. The probable demand for next year would be about 1,000,000 tons, as against a possible output of 2,150,000 tons. If the demand should prove to be 50 per cent. of the capacity, all the mills could not work full time. And the probability was that next year there would be but little railroad building, and rails would be needed for reconstruction and repair alone."

Gloomy apprehensions are entertained by other firms. The manager of the Bethlehem (Pa.) Iron and Steel Works says the materials produced at his works are about as low as they can go, and the outlook is a dull one. Gen. Lilly, of Mauch Chunk, says the business outlook is gloomy, orders given for bar iron having been countermanded in a large number of instances, and there being uncertainty on all sides. The President of the Thomas Iron Company, in Pennsylvania, reports a similar condition of things at Catasqua and Hokendauqua. The large works of the Lackawanna Company, of Scranton, Pa., have shortened their time schedule. The laborers throughout the Lehigh valley are anxious about the future.

These apprehensions are not shared, however, by all the manufacturers. The Tyrone (Pa.) forges resume operations next week, and will run on full time. In Coatesville, Pa., though the proprietors consider the outlook gloomy, all the mills are busy and plenty of orders are on hand. The output of the Edgar Thompson steel works, Pittsburgh, has been reduced to two-thirds of their capacity, and the company say that among the manufacturers the question is the survival of the fittest, or, rather, the fittest pocket. They could sell at $42 a ton if they could get coke and ore and wages down, but had never gone below $45. In Bridgeport, N. J., the iron foundries are very busy. The Cleveland (Ohio) rolling-mills are not to be shut down, and the Bay View works, near Milwaukee, which have not made any steel rails for some time and shut down the iron-rail mill three weeks ago, will not be affected except through the sympathy inevitable to all lines of the iron business. The North Chicago, the Union Iron and Steel mills, the Joliet, and the Vulcan mill of St. Louis are still running, but will have a conference with their hands about Jan. 1 relative to wages for the ensuing year, when the employers will probably demand a decrease of from 20 to 25 per cent. on present rates. The trouble is attributed in Chicago to the Scranton company, which cut prices from $45 to $42 a ton, since which time sales have been made at $40, the price at which they are now quoted in Eastern circulars, and at which the President of the Union Iron and Steel Company says they cannot be made here.

A Philadelphia dispatch says: "Thorough inquiry is all over the city and in all the leading manufacturing centers of the State as to not warrant the opinion that the iron and steel trade is in as bad condition as has been represented. Indeed, James M. Swan, the Secretary of the American Iron and Steel Association, and one of the best-informed men in the country, said to-day: 'It has been greatly exaggerated. The steel-rail industry is in a very depressed condition, and the demand for other iron and steel products is not equal to the expectations of a few months ago, but there is no occasion for any excitement or alarm. Prices have been gradually declining since last spring; there has been no sudden decline, not even in steel rails. I do not believe that the present Congress, nor the Congress which has just been elected, will be so unwise as greatly to reduce the duties upon iron and steel, and hence I feel entirely hopeful of the future of those industries. Low prices are not necessarily an evil.'"

A Washington dispatch states that it is believed there "by many Congressmen and others who favor a revision of the tariff laws that the sensational reports of a general suspension of steel production are designed to influence Congress against any reduction of the enormous measure of protection which the iron and steel interests already enjoy. Indications are not lacking to show that there is a good deal of method and system in the attempt to frighten the country into the conviction that nothing short of a prohibitory tariff will prevent a general collapse of the iron and steel manufacturing of the United States."

Habit.

The force and power of habit, and especially the tobacco and whisky habit, are something marvelous. When children suck their thumbs we put asafetida on, tied with rags. Sometimes that stops the habit. It didn't with me. For the sake of the thumb I swallowed the drug. In later years, when my little girl sweetheart said the other girls laughed at her because her bean (10 years old) sucked his thumb, I stopped of my own free will. Love was more potent than asafetida. Some children make odd faces and find it impossible to stop. I do. When I am nervous and excited—not that man should ever be the one or the other, but I occasionally am—I find myself winking and blinking and screwing up my cheek. It relieves something. I don't know what, but it does. I have been told by ladies that other ladies thought I was winking at them, but life is too short for that kind of sport. I don't do it and I never did. It's habit. There are writers of my acquaintance who can't work unless they have a cigar in the mouth. I take dry smokes myself. Result—colic. Why? Because the tobacco, being more or less chewed, becomes moist, and, entering the stomach, raises the old Harry. Isn't it so, doctor? Why, certainly. Other fellows tell me they would no more think of speeding a fast crab on the road without a cigar than of broiling their own baby for breakfast or even for lunch. Beware of habit. I know men who think themselves gentlemen—yet they swear like pirates. Not that I ever saw a pirate or heard one indulge profanely, but that's their reputation, and next to being rich is to be thought so. Swearing is a terribly low habit, yet tens of thousands swear. But see. Do they swear always and in all society? No not at all. They are in the habit of swearing here and there, but not everywhere. Ergo, it is a controllable habit, but still a habit.—Philadelphia Times.

MICHIGAN AFFAIRS.

Mr. Bennett's Discovery.

A. C. Bennett, of Elsie, Clinton county, was surprised, recently, at receiving a notice to pay interest on a mortgage on his land. He investigated and found that about a year ago a man pretending to be himself presented this forged mortgage and sold it in Owosso, procuring James Jones to identify him, after which he skipped with $500. The forgery was easily proved.

An Experiment in Squashes.

A Benona gentleman, Mr. Tyler Lee, takes the premium on raising squashes. Last spring he put in thirty-six acres to squashes. His neighbors laughed at him, and said he was a fool; but the seed was planted and cared for, and now, since the results are seen, Neighbor Lee is not considered such a fool after all. He realized 150 tons from his thirty-six acres, which filled fifteen cars to the ceiling. These were sold in Boston for $40 per ton. The cost of transportation was about $80 per car. The net cost of seed, labor, etc., was about $800, leaving Mr. Lee the comfortable little sum of $3,000 for his experiment in squashes.—Muskegon Chronicle.

Hunting the Weed in the Dark.

A Maple Rapids farmer recently had an experience which he managed to keep out of the home papers, but which is too good to keep. The Kalamazoo Telegraph has it on good authority. It was early in October that "the subject of the sketch" went out to the pantry one evening to get a small piece of tobacco he had left there. Feeling along on the shelf he found the object and immediately put it in his mouth and crowded it to one side and rolled it under his cheek. He immediately became aware that it was not what he had been searching for, but a caterpillar. He threw it out as quickly as possible, but the barbs had entered his tongue and gums and the inner surface. It became necessary to call in a doctor, and it was four hours' work for him to get the hairs picked out of the man's mouth. The man who got into this trouble will probably reform his practice, at least in the matter of hunting the weed in the dark.

How It Stands.

(From the Detroit Post.)

Full returns, in most instances official, have been received from forty counties in the State, which give Gov. Jerome 110,673 and Begole 114,675. The following table shows the vote in each of these counties, compared with the vote of 1880. For the purpose of better comparison the votes for Hancock and Weaver are combined:

The foregoing counties cast 73 per cent. of the entire vote of the State in 1880. This year the vote in these counties is 39,851 short of the vote of 1880. Of this vote the Republicans lose 28,404, and the Democrats and Greenbackers combined lose 11,447. In these forty counties Begole's majority is 4,002.

The indications are that the total vote will be about 48,000 short of the vote in 1880.

In Grand Traverse, Kalkaska, Midland, Manistee, Marquette and Muskegon the vote this year is the largest ever cast, and in each of these counties, except Kalkaska, Gov. Jerome's vote is greater than the Hancock vote in 1880. In thirteen counties Begole's vote exceeds the combined vote cast for Hancock and Weaver. The counties in which Mr. Begole's vote is greater than the combined vote of Hancock and Weaver, with the number of votes in excess, are as follows:

Eaton	63	Marquette	49
Genesee	115	Meigs	101
Grand Traverse	67	Midland	104
Kalkaska	95	Muskegon	17
Kent	29	Oceana	23
Macomb	86	Wexford	4

The counties in which Gov. Jerome receives a greater vote than was cast for Hancock, with the number of votes in excess, are as follows:

Grand Traverse	255	Macomb	130
Marquette	501	Midland	22
Muskegon	25

The vote of this year only exceeds that of 1880 in the northern counties. In the southern tier the falling off is very large. The election was decided by the stay-at-home Republicans.

In the 43 counties from which we have the official vote for Lieutenant Governor the vote of 1880 compared with that for 1882 is as follows:

Garfield in 1880.....	134,855
Hancock and Weaver in 1880.....	131,794
Garfield's majority.....	13,161
Conant in 1880.....	9,802
Pringle in 1882.....	106,73

SECRETS OF SUCCESS.

Notwithstanding the constant reminder that "in the bright lexicon of youth there is no such word as fail," the fact nevertheless remains that failure or want of success in life is continually occurring. There are numerous reasons for this many of which it is within the power of young men to overcome. Some fail simply because they have no fixed purpose. With no particular task marked out for a life pursuit, they are here to day and there to-morrow, till as the years flit by they realize that they have done nothing.

Every young person should early choose the object he or she would achieve, and then devote every energy to that end. Young people will do well to harken to the advice of those older than themselves in making this choice, but when once made, energy and perseverance will surely give success. A want of perseverance is almost sure to result in failure. When a vocation is once selected the young man or the young woman must stick to it. If the task is disagreeable, it should be remembered that there is no position in life without its unpleasant surroundings. If one task is dropped to pursue another, it also may be found unsatisfactory.

Such persons gain no confidence in themselves and inspire less in others, and in the end have no reputation. It may be set down as an axiom that, having deliberately chosen a line of life, it is ordinarily best to stick to it. To achieve success one must devote himself to his calling with energy.

No Micawber has ever accomplished any great purpose. If young men wait for "something to turn up," be they ever so patient they are almost invariably doomed to disappointment. There can be no permanent success without labor, and the sooner young men realize this fact and devote their most ardent energies to the tasks they undertake the sooner will the goal be reached.

Parents should teach their children to think and act for themselves. The young lad who has been taught to always cling to his mother's apron strings is in a poor condition to support himself when he goes out in the world. Although willing, such young men do not know how, and what they do must be under constant direction.

Young people should early learn the responsibilities of life, and then, if they also possess energy, perseverance and good habits, no apprehension need be felt that success will not follow the pursuit of any worthy object.

THE SUN

NEW YORK, 1883.

More people have read THE SUN during the year just now passing than ever before since it was first printed. No other newspaper published on this side of the earth has been bought and read in any year by so many men and women.

We are credibly informed that people buy, read, and like THE SUN for the following reasons, among others:

Because its news columns present in attractive form and with the greatest possible accuracy what ever has interest for humankind; the events, the deeds and misdeeds, the wisdom, the philosophy, the notable folly, the solid sense, the improving nonsense—all the news of the busiest world at present revolving in space.

Because people have learned that in its remarks concerning persons and affairs THE SUN makes a practice of telling them the exact truth to the best of its ability three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, before election as well as after, about the whites as well as about the small fish, in the face of dissent as plainly and fearlessly as when supported by general approval. THE SUN has absolutely no purpose to serve, save the information of its readers and the furtherance of the common good.

Because it is everybody's newspaper. No man is so humble that THE SUN is indifferent to his welfare and his rights. No man is so rich that it can allow injustice to be done him. No man, no association of men, is powerful enough to be exempt from the strict application of its principles of right and wrong.

Because in politics it has fought for a dozen years, without intermission and sometimes almost alone among newspapers, the fight that has resulted in the recent overwhelming popular verdict against Robbery and for honest government. No matter what party is in power, THE SUN stands and will continue to stand like a rock for the interests of the people against the ambitious of bosses, the encroachments of monopolists, and the dishonest schemes of public robbers.

All this is what we are told almost daily by our friends. One man holds that THE SUN is the best religious newspaper ever published, because its Christianity is undiluted with cant. Another holds that it is the best Republican newspaper printed, because it has already whipped half of the rascals out of that party, and is proceeding against the other half with undiminished vigor. A third believes it to be the best magazine of general literature in existence, because its readers miss nothing worthy of notice that is current in the world of thought. So every friend of THE SUN discovers one of its many sides that appeals with particular force to his individual liking.

If you already know THE SUN, you will observe that in 1883 it is a little better than ever before. If you do not already know THE SUN, you will find it to be a mirror of all human activity, a storehouse of the choicest products of common sense and literature, a mainstay for the cause of honest government, a sentinel for genuine Jeffersonian Democracy, a scourge for wickedness of every species, and an uncommonly good investment for the coming year.

Terms to Mail Subscribers.

The several editions of THE SUN are sent by mail, postpaid, as follows:

SUNDAY—Eight pages, $1.20 a year.
WEEKLY—$1 a year. Eight pages of the best matter of the daily issues of an Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, market reports, and literary, scientific, and domestic intelligence make THE WEEKLY SUN the newspaper for the farmer's household. To clubs of ten with $10, an extra copy free.

JOTTINGS.

SLEIGHING last Monday.

NEXT Wednesday is St Nicholas Day.

Rev. E. C. Oggel, of Chicago, was visiting in this city this week.

Miss Nellie Flaher, of Grand Haven, was visiting the family of Mr. C. H. Doesburg, this week.

Don't forget the second "Social Gathering" of the P. D. Q. Club, to be held in Lyceum Hall next Friday night.

THE market price paid for wheat at the Standard Roller Mills is: 90 cents per bushel for White Wheat, and 85 cents per bushel for Long Berried Red.

A LARGE invoice of cutters, has been received at the store of Mr. B. Van Raalte. We advise those of our readers who are in need of a cutter to give Mr. Van Raalte a call.

Dr. T. G. Hulzinga, of Zeeland, Mich., operated on Mrs. Van Duine, living near Zeeland, for cataract of the eye on yesterday morning. The operation was very skillfully performed and will undoubtedly restore her sight.

WERE you invited out to dinner on Thanksgiving Day? We dined at home, and after dinner our mind wandered to some of our subscribers who happened to owe us fifty cents. Pleasant thoughts.

MR. Herman Van Ark, of the Phoenix Planing Mill, was married on last Thursday to Miss Renie Winters, daughter of Ald. P. Winters of the Third Ward. We wish the happy couple a long and prosperous journey through life.

OUR local sportsmen are having excellent luck this year in killing deer. Last Saturday Messrs. Wilson Harrington and E. M. Williams killed two very nice ones, and on last Tuesday Mr. Wilson and Geo. S. Harrington shot a splendid buck.

THANKSGIVING Day was observed by religious services held in the various Churches of this city. Dr. Scott's address on "The Ballot-box and its Relation to our Republic" delivered in Hope Church, is spoken of, by all who heard it, as a very able effort.

NEXT Friday evening, December 8th, 1882, the P. D. Q. Club will give their second "Social Gathering" in Lyceum Hall. The committee of arrangements have done everything that could be done to make this "Gathering" a social success. Hoyt & Mills' celebrated band, of Grand Rapids, will furnish the music. This band is composed of members of the renowned Hoyt Band which captured the first premium at the National Band Tournament, held at St. Louis, Missouri, last year. The stage of the hall will be reserved for spectators and for those who desire to hear the music. Admission to the stage 50 cents a couple. Regular tickets, $1.00.

Church—Services at 9:30 a. m., 2 and 7:30 p. m. The services will be conducted by the Theol. Student Weyland, of Grand Rapids.

THIS week we had occasion to pay the "Hummel Tannery" a visit. We found that the enterprising proprietors of this Tannery, Messrs Ballard & Co., had completely renovated the institution and were busily engaged in the manufacture of fine leather. We had expected to see an entirely different state of affairs and were happily disappointed. Mr. Ballard, very kindly volunteered to "show us around," and informed us that orders for leather were coming in at a rate that was beyond their most sanguine expectations. The kinds of leather to be manufactured by this firm are: Imitation Goat and Kids, bright and oil finish; Brogan Crimps, back and calf splits; Satchel and Strap Leather, plain and colored; Hand Part Leather, in all shades and colors. The firm will use in their business some ten or twelve thousand sides of leather per year, giving employment to twelve or fifteen men. The quality of leather so far manufactured by this tannery, is very highly spoken of by good judges of leather, and a brisk and successful business is predicted for the firm by most of our local tannery men. The members composing this firm are: Mr. Geo. Ballard, who will be remembered, by many of our citizens, as an employee of the Cappon & Bertsch Leather Company some eight years ago, Mr. Louis Niemaster, and Mr. P. W. Kane, who were formerly of Milwaukee, but now reside in our city.

THE price of bread "has taken a tumble."—See Special Notices.

THE indications are that our night train despatcher at this place, is not going to live alone this cold winter.

Rev. J. Rice Taylor will hold services in Grace Episcopal Church to-morrow at the usual hours, 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

At a meeting of the members of Hope Church, held last Monday evening, a call was extended to the Rev. Thomas Walker Jones, of Fonda, N. Y.

SOME kind friend who realized that editors and printers liked good things, left a nice piece of venison at our humble home one day this week. Many thanks.

LIST of letters remaining in the post-office at Holland, Mich., Nov. 30, 1882: John Bennett, John Dirks, H. Frens, P. Van Ryan.

WM. VERBEEK, P. M.

WE take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the new advertisement of G. Van Putten & Sons, General dealers in Dry Goods, Groceries, etc. Messrs. Van Putten & Sons have a large and complete stock of Dress Goods of all kinds, Hoods and Nubias, Ladies and Gentlemen's Furnishing Goods, and all the various novelties that go to make up a first class general store. Give them a call.

ON last Thursday the members of the First Ref. Church, both of the Chapel and Church edifice factions, elected their officers. The Chapel re-elected H. Broek as Elder and J. A. Ter Vree as Deacon. The Church Edifice elected K. Schaddelée as Deacon in place of G. J. te Vaarwerk who removed last Spring to Roseland, Ill. We shall endeavor to give the names of all the officers of the various Reformed Churches in this city, next week.

LAST Wednesday while coupling cars at the Chicago & West Mich. depot, John McMartin got his foot caught in a frog. He caught hold of a brake rod on the moving train and hung on with such tenacity that his foot was torn from his shoe, which was left in the frog. As it was his foot was severely pinched by one of the wheels, and but for his presence of mind this might have proved a fatal accident.—Allegan Tribune. Mr. McMartin was formerly a resident of this city.

THE most stirring event of this week, was the capture of Dan Van Wagoner, and Dan Root, in this city on last Tuesday. These two criminals had escaped from the Ionia House of Correction, on last week Thursday, and their capture was consummated in this wise. Immediately after the escape, Mr. E. C. Watkins, warden of the House of Correction, made the most elaborate preparations for their recapture, and sent hundreds of postal cards, circulars, photographs, etc., to all the officers, detectives, etc., in this State. He further placed the case in the immediate charge of under-sheriff Perry, of Grand Rapids, who went to Chicago and interested the detective agency of Mooney & Boland. Van Wagoner's father, who lives in Chicago, was immediately "shadowed," and their vigilance was at last rewarded. Van Wagoner, Sr., sent an express package, containing $30 in money, addressed to "D. Mills, Holland, Mich." Sheriff Perry, and a detective, started on the same train with the money and arrived in this city on the 5:20 train, Tuesday morning. The sheriff and the detective then commenced to watch the express office here, and finally saw their "bird" (Van Wagoner) go into the "cage," when they put in an appearance, and as soon as the victim called for the money, arrested him. The prisoner submitted quietly, only saying: "Perry, how did you get onto me? I knew I was gone the minute I saw you." Perry then asked where Root was, and was told that he was at the Phoenix Hotel, in bed waiting for Van Wagoner to buy some clothes so that they could "skip out." Perry went immediately and arrested Root and took both men to Grand Rapids on the morning freight train. Warden Watkins was immediately telegraphed the news of their capture, and that same evening they were safely lodged in prison. Van Wagoner was sentenced to forty-five years imprisonment about six years ago, for assault with intent to commit murder and robbery. The victim was a farmer living near Kalamazoo, who was shot and seriously wounded by Van Wagoner while the two were riding together in a wagon. The case was a quite noted one at the time. Four years after his incarceration, Van Wagoner escaped from the House of Correction and went to Canada. He was lured into Buffalo by some detectives, captured, and returned to Ionia. His relatives are quite respectable people. His father has a coal office at 408 West Van Buren street, Chicago, and resides at 408½ on the same street, and has a married sister living in Dubuque, Iowa. Van Wagoner's relatives have been engaged for some time, in trying to get him liberated through legal means, and profess to be much disappointed at the overthrow of their plans by his rash action. Dan Root, was "sent up" for three years for larceny.

THE officers of Hope Church were elected last night (Friday). We were unable to learn who they were.

THE men employed by Mr. R. Kanters & Sons on the breakwater at Lincoln Park Chicago, Ill., arrived home last Wednesday morning.

THE freight business on the southern extension of the Chicago and West Mich. R'y is exceeding the expectations of the company. All the stations along the road have been made regular billing stations.

THE storm of last week Thursday and Friday was the occasion of considerable loss of life and vessel property on Lake Michigan. The steamer Wisconsin, bound from Grand Haven for Milwaukee, rescued three sailors who were tossing about on the wild waves of the lake on the roof of a schooner's cabin. On being sufficiently revived from their exhausted condition, they told a pitiful tale of suffering. They belong to the crew of the schooner Collingwood, which had become water-logged and capsized nearly abreast Two Rivers point and eighteen miles from the west shore. They were the sole survivors of a crew of eight men and when rescued had been floating on the roof of the vessel's cabin for thirty hours. The Collingwood was commanded by Capt. Willitt, of Kingston, Ont. The names of the rescued men are: R. D. Sheldon, of Chicago, Mate., Nicholas Johnson, of Wallaceburg Ont., and Francis McFee, of Amherst Island, Ont., Seamen.... The J. O. Moss was stranded on the beach near Big Point Au Sable, and is a partial wreck. The mate, Barney McDonald, lost his life in an attempt to reach shore.... Four other schooners are reported ashore about six miles north of Big Point Au Sable.

GRAND HAVEN ITEMS.

ALEXANDER Lelond, who is charged with an assault with intent to commit rape on his servant girl, was held for trial under $500 bail.

A FIRE broke out in the lumber yard of Wyman & Buswell last Thursday afternoon. The fire was promptly put out by the Fire Department. Damage light.

THE Comm'n Council have ordered a new election on the question of the issuing of bonds for the purchase of the Spring Lake Bridge, to take place on December 21st. This election is ordered on account of an existing doubt as to the legality of the last election held on this question.

At the last term of the Circuit Court the case of August Hepner, arrested for the murder of his mother, was discontinued for some fault in the papers. He was re-arrested immediately and on last Tuesday and Wednesday an examination was held before Justice Pagelson. Nothing new was developed and he was held for trial.

THE heavy gale last week Thursday and Friday wrought considerable damage to the vessels on the Lakes. Thursday evening the three masted scow, Thos. S. Skinner, of Muskegon, loaded with lumber, while attempting to make the harbor ran square on to the south pier, carrying away her head-gear, and knocking off the red light on the end of the pier, she then rebounded and went on the beach south of the pier where she now lays. The vessel is broken in two and will be a total loss. Shortly after this the little schooner, Jessie Martin, bound from Racine to Muskegon with a load of Barley, Salt, and Flour, attempted the same thing with the same result, and went on the beach near the Skinner. Last Thursday morning the tug Batchelor and a party of men were successful in getting the Martin off the beach, and as she was being towed into the harbor, the vessel rolled over on her side, the sea making a complete breach over her. One of the men, John Dibble, of Muskegon, got entangled in some of the rigging and was drowned, the other men were taken off the vessel in an exhausted condition, by the life saving crew. The schooner in being towed in, carried away her main topmast and foremast. She was towed up to Kirby's ship yard where the necessary repairs will be made.

A FAIR TRAITRESS.

BY EDMUND R. BLAND.

I gave my darling a flow'et of white,
In the hush and stillness of the night,
While standing by her side,
She took the gift with a blush and smile,
It lay in her maiden breast awhile,
And then 'twas thrown aside.
Ah, will-a-day! blossoms, they say,
Wither for want of care.

I gave my darling a ring of gold,
A token her love was mine to hold,
Her life was mine to share.
She wore the ring till summer was o'er,
Then drew it off, and she thought no more
Of who placed it there.
Ah, well-a-day! when women play
Some one's heart is aching.

I gave my darling a heart of truth,
A priceless boon, the worship of youth,
With all its hopes and joy.
A few short months and he kept my love,
Then cast it down, like a worn-out glove,
An infant's broken toy.
Ah, well-a-day, when maidens betray,
Wounded love most perish.

"I WAIT FOR MY STORY."

"Nan!"

"Yes m."

"That young Englishman comes here much too often."

Mrs. Dolly took several cautious stitches in her sofa-pillow embroidery, and looked as if she had something on her mind.

Her pretty niece yawned over her magazine before looking up. Nan Browning was pretty. If she had not been this story would very likely never have been written, for it has to do with the fascinations of her golden eyes. Yes, they were really golden eyes, of a deeper tone than her yellow hair, but bright and much too brilliant to be called brown or hazel.

Nan knew she was pretty in a sort of a way. Everybody had told her so ever since she could remember. Whenever she went to a party she was always described by the society reporters as the "belle of the occasion." If she wore a twenty-five-cent muslin, with a lot of violets, cheap in their season, her "toilet" was described at length, her muslin transformed into a crope de chine, and her violets into "rare exotics."

One of the youthful journalists, Frank Humphrey by name, who described Nan semi-spasmodically in his paper, fell in love with her the first time he saw her—genuinely, desperately and deeply in love with her. He was a clergyman's son, and had ideals. He was "doing" society temporarily for his paper, expecting promotion to the religious column.

But all at once he ceased applying to his city editor for the sermon department, and devoted himself to society with an ardor which caused his salary to be raised $3 a week, with a word of recommendation from the managing editor which made his heart bound with joy. His heart always jumped with joy whenever it had a chance, it was usually so terribly weighed down with depression at thought of the immense distance between himself and Nan. Not that Nan was rich. On the contrary, Frank hadn't a cent in the world, and Nan knew it. But her aunt, with whom she lived, had money, and knew how to dress Nan becomingly, and how to introduce her into rich people's society, and there Frank had no means of pursuing her, for, alack-a-day for the course of true love, they all lived in Chicago. If they had been placed by kindly fate in some romantic city, where Frank could have played the amorous flute under her window clad in a russet-velvet coat, there might have been some hope to beat a cheering roundelay in the poor boy's bosom. But there he was in Chicago, and with only a reporter's entree into those gilded palaces where Nan shone resplendent on such festive occasions as Clara Whitehead's wedding or Susie Porking's debut.

Clearly there was nothing for it but to hold fast to the position of society reporter until he could at least win an introduction to Nan, and have the felicity of a glance for himself from the depths of those golden eyes.

A six-month before Frank Humphrey would have declared it impossible that he should lose his heart to a girl to whom he had never even made a bow.

He was just out of college, and had those profound theories about women in general that youths of his age are apt to cherish. His experience with them was all in the future, when he applied for and obtained a place on the "Chicago Morning Between-Seas." It was a good deal like his literary experience. He had taken a prize for composition on his graduation day, and his name had been in all the papers, and he had been proud and happy. He had felt as though he was on the high road to fame and success. By the way, success is fame, and fame is success, but this is a story, and has no vital relation to such parenthetical statements.

I said that Frank Humphrey's experience with womankind had been about like his literary experience. It was of about the same value to his real life. He had been tremendously interested in somebody or other when he was 16, or thereabouts. So all the rubbish had been cleared out of his heart, and the flame that Nan's eyes lit on its hearth was clear and bright and enduring. I suppose I ought not to say enduring. No flames are enduring of themselves. It is in their nature to burn out; but in this earnest young spirit there was a certain loyalty to itself which would keep the vestal fire burning always for sake of the loved one and for sake of the love.

Of course Nan did not know anything of all this on the sunny morning when Mrs. Dolly looked up from her embroidery to say to her pretty niece, "That young Englishman comes here much too often."

As you already know, Nan yawned over her magazine before replying. There are so many sorts of yawns that it is no wonder Mrs. Dolly did not know how to interpret this one, and paused to reflect before proceeding with the lecture she had been planning. Not coming to any conclusion, she very sensibly inquired, "What do you mean by yawning that way, my dear?"

"It was the story, Auntie. I beg your pardon. It is one of Mr. Howells'. I know it is the fashion to admire him, but I don't. I detest him. He makes all his characters go introspecting into their hearts and motives and intentions, till they don't know what they are and who they are, anyway, you know."

Nan finished her very evident quotation with another yawn, after the comical little drawl in which she had imitated the Englishman. Mrs. Dolly laughed. "I say again, Mr. Hargrave comes here too often. See how you read the stories he dislikes, and quote his opinions."

This was not a wise speech on the part of Mrs. Dolly; but wisdom comes.

Nan made a little grimace. "What shall I do? Shall I say to him, 'My Dear Sir—I am out of school now, and my auntie doesn't like to have me talk to boys as much as I used to when I was 16. Hoping you will take this gentle hint, I am yours truly, Angela Browning?'"

"That's so, you were christened Angela. I always thought that was so good of your mother. I had so nearly forgotten it that you might say I didn't know it."

Frank Humphrey knew, however, that Nan's name was Angela, and he thought the heavenly name quite suited to the sweet child-like face he loved.

"If I can make her care for me some day in this sort of way," he said to himself once, as he was sitting in his lonely room, dreaming over a volume of Jean Ingelow's poems:

"If I can make her care she will care so much."

He had been reading "The Songs of Seven," and his heart beat fast at thought of that wistful face of the girl of 14.

"I wait for my story," he said, "I will make Angela love me some way, somehow." And then he remembered he must be off on his duty.

He wrote his report that night of Mrs. Lumberman's reception in a sort of dazed way, for he heard some one say something as he sat writing in a little smoking-room back of the grand parlor. This was what he heard:

"It will be a good match for little Nan. She is deucedly pretty, and deserves the luck, and they say Hargrave has no end of money."

He remembered every word of it with torturing distinctness. He returned to the office, after going home, long after midnight, and hunted up his "copy" in the printer's waste, to assure himself that he had not written those words with his description of the gown Nan wore.

Nan had laughed at that description before she commenced reading the magazine story which was interrupted by Mrs. Dolly's remark already quoted:

"That Englishman comes here much too often."

Nan had hardly finished her mocking little speech in reply, when her aunt saw a sudden change in the girl's face turned toward the window. It was an indescribable expression, incomprehensible to Mrs. Dolly, because the feeling which caused it was equally little understood by Nan herself.

Mrs. Dolly was a practical woman, not given to what Hargrave called "introspecting," and she looked out of the window to see what Nan had seen to bring the inexplicable look into her eyes. And there was Hart Hargrave, in a tweed suit and an abominable cap, whirling by on his bicycle, with an absorbed air, as if bicycling was the one and only earthly occupation worthy the attention of a Christian and an Englishman. That was Hargrave's nationality coming to the surface. His countrymen are at their best in those out-door exercises which show off their splendid muscular development, and Hargrave was as proud of his arms and his inches as any son of his island.

If the truth were known, he was conscious that he was on Dearborn avenue, despite his absorption in himself. He was fully aware that he was directly beneath Mrs. Dolly's windows, and he wondered inwardly if Nan saw him and admired him. He had seen her and admired her, and fairness demanded that she should do likewise. Indeed, he had seen her many times, and admired her very much, for Nan had golden eyes. Hargrave's own were a bright brown, and his hair was not too dark. He was tall and athletic, and knew how to wear a dress-coat better than any man in Chicago. There was no acquired virtue in that, however. He came of a race of dress-coated duffers, whose evening clothes are part of their religion. Hargrave himself rather despised a man who dined in a frock-coat, before he came to Chicago. It was a mining speculation that brought him to America. He had been in Denver and Leadville, and was waiting in Chicago the result of certain business evolutions. He had letters of introduction to somebody who introduced him into Nan's world.

Hargrave rather looked down on the world, but looked up, a long way up, to Nan herself.

He found himself lingering an unconscious time in Chicago. He haunted Mrs. Dolly's parlors with persistence. He called them "drawing-rooms," and rather lisped the "r" Nan said, feeling it her duty to be funny about international peculiarities.

Nan belonged to the Margaret Fuller Society, and read Emerson, and knew some of Swinburne's sonnets, and doted on Wagner's music. At least, she said she did, and, doubtless, thought so, with the lovely enthusiasm of 19.

She talked to Hargrave about these things, and he listened with amazement. He had thought that only ugly girls and old maids knew of such things, and told Nan so in his straightforward way of complimenting.

Hargrave lingered in Chicago. When any one asked him if he intended proposing to Miss Browning, he looked grave, and retreated into himself. He did not understand outside interference with a man's private affairs.

I have read somewhere that a good story-writer lets his characters tell their own story in their own words. Very well.

Scene: The avenue. Dramatis personae: Miss Browning, Mr. Hargrave, young gentleman on his bicycle returning; young lady standing on the edge of the stone pavement in an embarrassed way examining minutely a bit of scarlet wool which she has pulled out of the tiny package she carries. In the distance, and invisible, Mrs. Dolly congratulating herself by her library fire on her good management in sending Nan to match wools at a moment when she would be sure to meet Hargrave returning from his morning run.

You perceive that Mrs. Dolly liked Hargrave, and practically advocated his interests while opposing them theoretically to Nan. Mrs. Dolly believed in the rule of contraries with young girls. That is a good rule if practically put into operation. The only trouble is that the young girls have so much innate contrariness that the application of it externally produces the wrong effect, like that old rule in the grammars about the double negatives.

That is a prologue or an epilogue, as you like it, the scene you have before you.

Here is the dialogue:

"The morning is quite delicious, Miss Browning."

"Yes, indeed, is it not?"

"Have you enjoyed your walk?"

"Oh, very much. Have you had a pleasant ride?"

"Oh, jolly, awfully jolly. There is nothing more refreshing than a brisk run on a bracing morning like this. It quite sets a man up for all day."

"Yes, indeed, I should think so. Do you ride bicycles much in England?"

"Oh, very much. It is quite the thing now. And ladies go on tricycles, too. I fancy you would like that sort of thing."

"Oh, no, indeed, I am sure I shouldn't. I must go home now. My aunt will be waiting for her wools."

"Oh, yes, how stupid of me to keep you here! May I say good morning?"

"Oh, yes, good morning!"

"Good morning; I say, Miss Browning."

"Yes?"

Good morning. Or, that is, shall you be at home after dinner to-day?"

"Yes; so will Aunt Dolly. Good morning."

"Good morning."

Now, all that sounds very stupid on paper, but it looked tragically living to Frank Humphrey, who happened to be walking by on the opposite side of the street, though he could not hear a word of the eminently interesting conversation I have set down for you.

First of all, he saw Nan coming along the pavement. He felt a thrill of consciousness that she had a little scarlet shawl around her shoulders. Frank had a sort of poetic instinct as to Nan's colors. It was more than the usual lover's sensitiveness. He was accustomed to see her in white at her parties, and he thought of her oftenest as Angela.

When, as sometimes happened, he saw her in her street dress, she was Nan to him; but now, with the scarlet wrap and the bright color in her cheeks, at sight of Hart Hargrave she was suddenly transformed into Miss Browning, of Dearborn avenue, and he realized himself to be poor Frank Humphrey, of the Morning Between-Seas.

He saw Hargrave jump from his wheel and take the girl's hand. He saw her embarrassment, and it cut his heart. He had so recently heard the society talk about their engagement, and he had no means even of guessing that it might not be true, yet he was fiercely determined from his very soul that Nan should never belong to any man but himself.

He saw Hargrave's animation of manner; he saw that he took her hand again at parting. He walked very slowly, and hated Hargrave bitterly for his chances, and then he turned and walked the other way, crossing the street so as to be near Nan, while Hargrave whirled off into a side street.

It was in the forenoon. There was no one on the avenue for a long distance. Nan looked around, saw Humphrey, and stopped short, waiting for him, and looked directly at him as he approached her, feeling irresistibly the fascination of his eyes. I can't explain it, I only know that it happened. Frank stopped near her, and they looked full into each other's eyes for a second. Then Nan drew her scarlet shawl around her shoulders with a shiver and almost ran to her home, while Frank walked away in a tumult of emotion. Nan had only one—a feeling of outrage, of keen indignation. She had seen that face somewhere, but it had never impressed her. The man might be a ribbon clerk or a slipper-man, for aught she knew. He had no right to look at her so, and make her unable to help looking at him. There was the sting. Nan sat down on the floor and cried. There was no meaning in her crying. She couldn't help it on general principles, and that would have been the end of this queer little moment of the girl's life if Hart

Hargrave had not seen the silent meeting and parting.

Humphrey had seen him talking with Nan; and fate, with a little bit of her own irony, gave Hart a tremendous twinge of jealousy at seeing this strange little encounter, although he was nearly two squares away.

Round whirled his good bicycle, and back into the avenue came the Englishman, rushing toward Nan and destiny in a desperate sort of way.

He had seen men in society talking to her, and felt confident that he was preferred before them all. And now he saw her stop for a moment beside some one whom she did not know, and the sunshine went out of the world suddenly.

Hart Hargrave saw that the future light of his summer days was all in Nan Browning's eyes.

He wondered why he had been waiting to tell her, and turned with the impulse of his heart in words upon his lips.

Whether he was blinded by the sunshine, or the swift insight into his own well-regulated emotions, I cannot tell you, but, somehow or other, he fell.

Humphrey heard and saw the fall, and ran toward him. A fall of that sort is nothing to a man like Hargrave, ordinarily; but a bad pavement corner and a frosty morning make small mischances great, and Hargrave lay unconscious, with a little blood on his face, as Humphrey lifted his head. To the first passer-by he left Hart, ran straight to Mrs. Dolly's house and asked for Miss Browning. To you that may show undisciplined youth; to me it looks generous and good; to Humphrey it meant a chance to see Angela, peraps to hear her speak to him, even though it was to say loving, pitying words of Hargrave.

Nan came into the parlor with her scarlet shawl still around her shoulders, and the signs of tears in her golden eyes. She stopped short, looking frightened when she saw who her visitor was.

Humphrey rose, grave and calm. He told her his name, saying, "Mr. Hargrave has just met with an accident on his wheel. Do you wish him brought here?"

"Why, no; he doesn't live here," said Nan, simply. Then, "I will call my aunt," and she vanished.

This was too good an opportunity for Mrs. Dolly to lose. Certainly Hargrave should be brought to her house, and Humphrey's spirits, which had risen at Nan's indifference, sunk fatally again at her aunt's interest. But he went off bravely with the servant Mrs. Dolly sent, and helped bring Hart up to the house; then he went down on the lake shore and looked at the water, and wished he could lie down forever in its cool, green depths.

That afternoon Humphrey wrote a poem, which was printed later on in one of the big magazines and copied all over the country, bringing a pang of memory to many hearts which had loved and longed and lost.

Not that Humphrey knew when he wrote the poem that he had lost something never attained. It was one of those prophetic lovers' insights that do happen to people sometimes.

That same afternoon Nan sat reading to Hargrave, who lay on the sofa in her aunt's library. Mrs. Dolly was busy with her embroidery, in the bay window, across the room.

Hargrave looked pale and touching. His forehead was bound up in fine linen, and a purple rug that Nan had made was spread over him.

I don't care about telling the rest of this story, so I will fall back upon that good rule of letting the characters do so. My thoughts are with Frank Humphrey, and I can't help wondering if he could possibly have taught Nan the story in the deep way he had learned it.

Perhaps if Hart Hargrave had not fallen off his bicycle into the arms of a friendly future, the light Frank dreamed of might have gleamed in Nan's golden eyes; she might have learned the depths and heights of the meaning she saw in Frank Humphrey's eyes in that moment when they two stood face to face, heart looking at heart.

Hargrave stopped Nan's reading. "Please bring your chair a little nearer. I can't hear you distinctly," he said.

Nan did so, feeling a little tremor of apprehension, but not having much time for her Saxon; he spoke at once in a low, but tremendously earnest tone: "I should like this sort of thing to go on always. I can make you happy, Nan; I will. I promise you I will. There is no one you like better, is there?"

Nan looked down at her hands, and said "No," truthfully, and without a flutter of her heart.

"Will you take me, then? I will make you a good husband, dear. I never cared so much for any girl, and I have seen a good many. Your home will be a long way from here, but I will make it a happy one. Will you trust me?"

"Yes, if Aunt Dolly says so," said Nan.

She rose and rushed off to her room and cried for the second time that day. Then she bathed her eyes and began to plan about her wedding gown, and to wonder what her English home would be like. And they all had dinner very happily. During the next half year the Chicago Morning Between-Seas published a column account of the wedding festivities of Miss Angela Browning and Mr. Hart Hargrave, of Blankshire, England.

Humphrey did not write the report. He had been promoted, and somebody else had charge of the Social Department.—The Wheelman.

PATENTS

CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT?

Send a rough sketch or (if you can) a model of your invention to GEORGE E. LEMON, Washington, D. C., and a Preliminary Examination will be made of all United States patents of the same class of inventions and you will be advised whether or not a patent can be obtained. FOR THIS PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION NO CHARGE IS MADE.

What will a Patent Cost?

If you are advised that your invention is patentable, send $20 to pay Government application fee of $15, and $5 for the drawings required by the Government. This is payable when application is made, and is all of the expense unless a patent is allowed. When allowed the attorney's fee ($25) and the final Government fee ($20) is payable. Thus you know beforehand, for nothing, whether you are going to get a patent or not, and no attorney's fee is charged unless you do get a Patent. An attorney whose fee depends on his success in obtaining a Patent will not advise you that your invention is patentable, unless it really is patentable, so far as his best judgment can aid in determining the question; hence, you can rely on the advice given after a preliminary examination is had. (Preliminary Examinations and the Registration of Letters Patent, Marks and Reissues secured. Caveats prepared and filed. Applications in revival of Rejected, Abandoned or Forfeited Cases made. Very often valuable inventions are saved in these classes of cases. If you have undertaken to secure your own patent and failed, a skillful handling of the case may lead to success. Send me a written request addressed to the Commissioner of Patents that he recognize GEORGE E. LEMON, of Washington, D. C., as your attorney in the case, giving the title of the invention and about the date of filing your application. An examination and report will cost you nothing. Searches made for title to inventions, in fact any information relating to Patents promptly furnished. Copies of Patents mailed at the regular Government rates, ($25 each). Remember this office has been in successful operation since 1865, and you therefore reap the benefits of experience, besides reference can be given to actual clients in almost every corner in the U. S. Pamphlet relating to Patents free upon request.

W. C. T. Union.

The temperance cause is at present in a most critical position; no one, posted, but will acknowledge this—it must be backed up by every one of its friends. It is no small thing to exterminate a business which nets its merchants over a hundred millions yearly, and in which they have their bread and butter at stake. These people, for once, believe temperance means business, and every man of them is around; money is lavished to defeat temperance work, as only kings would lavish it in a crisis. It is estimated that no less than $190,000 has been used in Kansas alone, to defeat prohibition there, while many thousands are going to Iowa and other States. Can we possibly realize the importance of an immediate arousing of our own people to lend a hand in the conflict?

In one of the most thriving cities of Wisconsin there are about 12,000 people. Of these less than eight hundred are members of English speaking Protestant churches. Of these eight hundred, less than fifty are young men between the ages of fifteen and thirty five years. Not one young man has been received into the full communion of these churches the past year on the profession of faith in Christ while over three hundred, mostly young men have been convicted of crime in the police court of the city. On a recent Saturday evening fifty-four persons, mostly young men, were seen to visit one of the more than fifty saloons of the city during a single hour. Twelve saloons were visited at ten o'clock on the same evening and found to have, on an average, twelve young men in each; showing the fact that over five hundred of the young men of the city were in the saloons at that hour of a single evening. What shall the harvest be?—Milwaukee Bulletin.

The Traveling Salesman

Is an irresistible fellow, brim full of stories, jokes, courage, self-assurance and grit. He is very taking withal. Burdock Blood Bitters are a very taking medicine; they take everywhere, and are sold every where.

Be Careful of the Babies.

If your children are threatened with croup or any throat difficulty, apply a few drops of Thomas' Electric Oil. It is the nicest medicine for the little ones we know of.

Young men who call their fathers "Governor," without intentional disrespect, will be surprised to learn from the Rev. Dr. Irénæus Prime that they are guilty of bad manners. He says that to illustrate the increased irreverence for age, and a marked declining in respect for the aged. "There is no use in telling me," he says in the Observer, "that parents, teachers, and officers command as much as they ever did, and just as much as they deserve. I know better."

An E. mira. (N. Y.) Lady,

Mrs. H. L. Clark, 304 E. Clinton street, declares: Burdock Blood Bitters are a medicine I admire. Best remedy for dyspepsia in the world. Keep house supplied with it.

"My Grandfather's Clock,"

Was once a very popular song, but like many other sentimental tunes it doesn't wear well. Dr. Thomas Electric Oil will wear; it will wear away all aches, sprains, and pains, and repay its purchaser a hundred fold.

How it was Done.

"How to manage," said a lady to her friend, "to appear so happy and good natured all the time?" "I always have Parker's Ginger Tonic handy," was the reply, "and thus easily keep myself and family in good health. When I am well I always feel good natured."

An Impossibility.

Deserving articles are always appreciated. The exceptional cleanliness of Parker's Hair Balsam makes it popular. Gray hairs are impossible with it's occasional use.

Marvellous Cure of Stone in the Bladder—Largest Stones Removed by Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

From the Pittsfield (Mass.) Eagle.

Stone in the Bladder is a very dangerous ailment; but many most remarkable cures have of late been wrought by "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy"—the invention of Dr. Kennedy of Houdou, N. Y. Another striking case is now added to the list. Mr. Peter Lawler, of Dalton, Mass., states in a letter to Dr. Kennedy that he had been troubled with bladder complaint for 14 years, and had consulted at different times seven physicians; but nothing beyond temporary allayment of the pain had been worked. Towards the end of last January Mr. Lawler called on Dr. Kennedy. Sounding him the doctor "struck stone." He decided that Mr. Lawler should first try the "Favorite Remedy," so as, if possible, to avoid an operation. And here is the remarkable result: "Dear Doctor Kennedy—The day after I came home I passed two gravel stones, and am doing nicely now. If you would like to see the stones I will send them to you." This letter bears date "Dalton, Mass., Feb. 6th." It is signed "Peter Lawler." The stones, which are so large as to warrant for "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" the claim that it is the most successful specific for Stone yet discovered, are now in Dr. Kennedy's possession. Incidentally Mr. Lawler also states that the "Favorite Remedy" at the same time cured him of a stubborn case of Rheumatism; and it is a fact that in all effusions arising out of disorder of the liver or urinary organs it is a searching remedy and works marvellous benefits. It is in itself almost a medicine chest. Order it of your druggist. Price $1.00 a bottle.
