Our merchants are enjoying a good fall trade, and since the recent change in the weather are satisfied with the outlook. The territory from which they draw is extending annually and assuming its old-time proportions. Good roads and good markets tell in their favor. It is also generally conceded in the rural districts that goods are sold cheap in Holland.

The eighth grade grammar room, began their thanksgiving holidays by gathering at the home of their teacher Mrs. S. J. In a recent decision the supreme court of this state laid down the following rule, whereby witnesses are entitled to respectful treatment at the hands of the prosecuting attorney: "Zeal in a prosecuting attorney is entitled to the highest commendation, but he must exercise it within proper limits. Witnesses are entitled to respectful consideration, and it is the duty of the courts to protect them from the insinuations and attacks of counsel. In criminal cases the prosecuting attorney is a public officer acting in a quasi-judicial capacity. Juries very properly regard him as unprejudiced, impartial and non-partisan, and insinuations thrown out by him regarding the credibility of witnesses for the defense are calculated to prejudice the defendant.

Not satisfied with placing a marble bust of their local philanthropist, Charles H. Hackley, in the Public Library of their city, the citizens of Muskegon have contracted with a Boston sculptor, for the erection of a bronze statue, eight feet high on a granite pedestal, at a cost of $15,000. One of the villages in Washington state has adopted a modification of the old curfew bell that, while it may be necessary there, would create a rebellion here. Promptly at eight o'clock every night the bell is tolled, and every boy and girl under the age of sixteen must skurry home. If any are caught on the streets after the bell stops tolling, they must show a permit from their parents or they are arrested and fined.

Some towns in Montana have adopted a similar regulation. This is certainly a summary way of keeping children off the streets, and it begins to look as if some such measure would become necessary. Our children and especially young girls, are getting wilder each year.

Three separate escapes by tunnel have been recently made from the penitentiary at Jackson, and Aaron W. Hamacher, a foreman on contract work, has been arrested for conspiracy in assisting in the escapes. His trial developed many sensational features. It was shown that the warden of the prison had been made the victim of a conspiracy among the free laboring men inside. It was also developed that R. Irving Latimer, the famous matrielde, had again tried his hand at escape, but, as in the case of the dynamite plot, he weakened, played sick, and actually went to the hospital in the prison the day the others got out. If he had not weakened he would now be free.

Mr. Blom has commenced an action against Mr. Wiersma to recover damages for the value of the horse.

Capt. Ole Thomson, of the schooner Rockaway, which was lost off South Haven last week, stood at the wheel nineteen hours without anything to eat. One of those painful arrests, exemplifying the next thing to total depravity in certain grades of our population, was made this week by the city marshal, upon the complaint of a reputable citizen, and two young girls of the ages of fourteen years were arraigned before one of our local magistrates for uttering language as obscene as can be conceived of. The investigation however, terminated very unsatisfactory. It was a repetition of the old, old story—the ordinance was n. g.

Tuesday night the floor in Mr. Richardson's pool room, Eighth street, caught fire from the contents of an old-style spittoon, filled with saw-dust. Thanks to his two spaniel dogs, it was discovered in time to prevent a serious conflagration. The two dogs slept in the saloon on the ground floor. The family lives up-stairs. Driven by the smoke one of the dogs went to the bedroom of the domestic on the second floor and aroused the occupant from her sleep, while the dog down stairs kept up an incessant barking. By the time Mr. Richardson appeared upon the scene the long smoldering fire had already developed into a full blaze, but fortunately he succeeded in extinguishing the flames, and escaped with the nominal damage of a good-sized hole in the floor.

That Turkey Dinner.

How dear to our hearts is the Thanksgiving dinner. As fond recollections present it to view, when father & mother come home from the fields, a winner. And bring along with him a gobble or two. And then in the kitchen was busy and bustle. And mother just making the whole of us bustle. To hasten the dinner that filled us so well. The Thanksgiving dinner, the gorging old dinner. The big turkey dinner that filled us well. Oh, how can I tell the ingredients measure. That dear bill of lading prescribed as our store. The turkey and his mystic abdominal treasure. The beans and the giblets, the gravy galore. The elder we brought in a jug from the depot. The truck agricultural none could excel. And oh! the lush fruit of our curbside nectar. The dear pumpkin pie that we garnered so well. I am, yam, what a dinner! That turkey and punk dinner! That Thanksgiving dinner that crammed us so well.

Thou turkey! Proud bird of freedom! This is thy day, and the eagle is not in it. Hark! Hark! When well cooked! Thou art of all the feathered kind The richest and the juiciest. Within thy corporate limits What wealth of mingled flavors tempts The faded appetite! These appetizing aromas through the house. And dost deserve for this The heaving that The flushed domestic in the kitchen Giveth thee. And hark! Swelled and puffed up fowl! On this thy day Thou art going to get The stuffing gloriously put out Of thee! Thy glory!

Current Topics.

The directors of the Columbian Exposition will make a great mistake if they suppose that only the Sabbatarians demand the closing of the Exposition on Sunday, or that the demand rests upon Puritan grounds.

It comes from a very much larger constituency, and is urged by very different considerations.

Sunday has become the Nations rest-day. That the Nation derived this gift from the Hebrew people, that the Hebrews believe that they received it directly from God, and that the Puritans entertain the same opinion, does not lessen the value of the gift for others who hold a different opinion.

Never did any age more need this weekly rest-day than does the present age; never a people more than the American people.

Those who have not possessed it are beginning to clamor for it, not on religious but on social and sanitary grounds. Louisiana has for the first time in her history put a Sunday law upon her statute-book. The German Socialists are beginning to demand it, not as a day consecrated to worship, but as a day reserved for rest. A like demand is heard in whispers even in France. Here is a ground on which the religious and the unreligious can and do meet. The worshiper wishes that law should preserve the quiet of the day in order that worship may not be disturbed; the secularist wishes law to preserve the quiet of the day that he may not be deprived of his rest-day by an employer or by a competition equally compulsory.

Closing the Columbian Exposition on Sunday will be a National recognition of the double demand; opening it on Sunday will be as distinctly a repudiation of this demand.

Nor will it be enough to stop the machinery, which will be almost a physical necessity. If the Exposition is otherwise open, an army of exhibitors and custodians must be present. Their rest-day will be denied them. And the Exposition will say, more distinctly and emphatically than any resolution of Congress could say: This Nation does not recognize Sunday as a National rest-day; it sees in it only the religious fête-day of a sect.

Nor is the opening of the Exposition on Sunday necessary to enable workmen to visit it. The same end can easily be secured by an act of the Illinois Legislature establishing a Saturday half-holiday during the period of the Columbian Exposition. The one policy will take for the Exposition time now consecrated to rest; the other, time now expended in toil.

How candid Americans will doubt that the Nation can better afford to lessen its toil than to lose its rest.

The Prohibitory Third Party has never shut up a single saloon in the United States. The saloons have been closed either by the Republican party, in Maine; by the Democratic party, as in parts of the South; or by non-partisan legislation, as in portions of the West. We can not advise temperance voters to abandon the organizations which have closed saloons for one which has never closed even one.

Voting for a ticket which could not possibly be elected, such voters have no political right to demand anything of the party which they have tried to defeat, and if they make demands they will not be heeded.

When a social evil has assumed the proportions and secured the power of the saloon in this country, it is better to attack it in detail. Restriction is the shortest road to prohibition. Slavery was abolished, not by the small party of abolitionists who demanded immediate abolition, but by the Republican party, which demanded that it should not be extended beyond the slave States. If the saloon is ever abolished in this country, it will be by continuous and increasing restrictions, not by one act of extinction, once for all.

To tax a business is not to sanction it, and a license is only a form of tax. The United States Supreme Court has decided that a license does not imply protection to or approval of the business licensed. Theoretical considerations need not prevent any man from voting any ticket or adopting any policy which will decrease the saloon. Restrict in hours; restrict it in numbers; restrict it in geographical area.

Then again, a small majority for prohibition never wins, because criminal laws must have behind them the public sentiment of the community, and not of a bare majority in the community. In a republic, law is no stronger than the conscience and the will which have enacted and are determined to enforce the law.

The situation in Russia becomes steadily more desperate as winter approaches. Twenty millions of starving people in an area of thirteen provinces covering about 500,000 square miles, and constituting what is often called the granary of Europe, is a brief description of the situation, but does not convey any adequate impression of it. The winter is setting in, and yet, at the very beginning, the mortality from starvation and epidemic diseases has already become terrible. Murder, arson, and robbery are common. Thousands of peasants are roaming through the country almost as lawless as the wolves in the forests, wrecking railroad trains, demolishing store-houses, storming churches, descending almost to cannibalistic practices, so maddened are they by their situation. The correspondent of the New York Tribune, who makes these statements, goes on to enumerate a few of the scenes which he has actually witnessed, of little children dead in the cabins, of deserted villages, and of half-insane people rushing away from a misery which follows them wherever they go. It is not surprising to read in connection with these facts that a very extensive conspiracy has been discovered by the police, with ramifications in all the principal cities of the Empire; a conspiracy with aims, not at Nihilistic methods like the killing of the Czar, but at the creation of a representative assembly. It is said that sixty prominent people, members of the nobility and of the higher classes, have already been arrested, and that the authorities at St. Petersburg are becoming more and more nervous. With the usual blindness of despotism, every attempt is made to suppress the expression of this appalling misery. All manifestations of political feeling against the Government are to be suppressed; the universities and higher schools are watched; tutors are ordered to avoid the society of students; the rooms of students are constantly searched, and every book treating of social questions in the slightest degree from the political standpoint is promptly seized. These facts need no comment.

Minister Thayer, who represents the United States in the Netherlands, was at the White House and State Department one day last week, paying his respects to President Harrison and Secretary Blaine. His presence in Washington caused a Minneapolis man to tell the story of how Senator Davis of Minnesota got Mr. Thayer appointed.

"A quarter of a century ago," he said, "a young Lieutenant was returning from the war, feeble from a fever contracted while in the service, on board a Mississippi steamboat on which Mr. Thayer was a passenger. Mr. Thayer was on his way to Minnesota. As the boat stopped at a little place on the Wisconsin side of the river the young Lieutenant attempted to walk up the stairs to the upper deck, and, in his weak condition, lost his balance and almost fell. Mr. Thayer was behind him and after saving him from the fall took the officer in his arms and carried him to the deck. They got into a conversation, and before they reached St. Paul had become good friends.

The Lieutenant's name was Cushman K. Davis, now a Senator of the United States from Minnesota. The friendship formed aboard the boat has continued and the two men are devoted to each other. When Gen. Harrison was elected President, Senator Davis made it his business to press the claims of Mr. Thayer for the position he now holds, and on the Senator's recommendation Secretary Blaine sent Mr. Thayer's name to the White House."

THE BOOK TRUST KNOCKED OUT

A Card To The Public.

Some six months ago we began the publication of our reprint of the famous Encyclopedia Britannica in 25 Volumes, which we issued at $1.50 per volume. The price of the English edition always has been and still is $8.00 per volume, and the Scribner edition $5.00 per volume in the cheapest binding.

That the public appreciate so great a bargain is shown by the fact that over half a million volumes of this reprint have been sold in less than six months.

This elegant new edition we still offer at the same price, $1.50 per volume. This is the greatest bargain ever known in books.

Better still, we will deliver the set complete on small easy payments, to suit the convenience of customers.

Remember this is not an abridgement, but the great Edinburgh ninth edition, reproduced page for page, with important articles on American subjects rewritten to date by eminent American authors, and new maps, later and better than in any other edition.

We further announce that we have in preparation three volumes of "American Additions and Revisions," thoroughly supplementing the original work. With these supplemental volumes you will have at small cost an Encyclopedia unapproachable in completeness; a thorough "dig" of the libraries of the world, and a complete record of current progress and events.

SPECIAL OFFER.—We claim that our reprint compares favorably with the high priced editions in every respect, and in respect to maps, and strength and beauty of bindings is superior to them. In order that this claim may be tested by a personal inspection we make the following proposition: We will furnish volume I. at 60 cts.—a fraction of actual cost—if sent by express. Add 40 cts. postage if wanted by mail. Amount paid for Volume I. will be credited on price of set when ordered.

Drs. Starkey Palen's

TREATMENT BY INHALATION.

1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

The original and only genuine Compound Oxygen Treatment, that of Drs. Starkey & Palen is a scientific adjustment of the elements of Oxygen and Nitrogen magnetized; and the compound is a condensed and made portable that it is sent all over the world.

It has been in use for more than twenty years; thousands of patients have been cured and one thousand physicians have used it, and recommended it,—a very significant fact.

The great success of our treatment has given rise to a host of imitations, unscrupulous persons; some calling their preparations compound oxygen, others appropriating our testimonials and the names of our patients, to recommend worthless concoctions. But any substance made elsewhere or by others and called Compound Oxygen, is spurious.

"Compound Oxygen—Its Mode, Action and Result," is the title of a new book of 300 pages, published by Drs. Starkey & Palen, which gives to all quivers full information as to this remarkable curative agent, and a record of surprising cures in a wide range of chronic (cancerous) cases after being abandoned by other physicians. Will be mailed free to any address on application.

WIND IN WASHINGTON.

MANY OTHER EASTERN CITIES STORM SWEEPED.

Fonseca "Resigns," as He Calls It, and Nominates His Successor—Teachers Rebel—An Arkansas Town Scorched—Four Were Burned to Death.

Teachers in Rebellion.
Of the sixteen young women employed in the public schools of Woodhaven, N. Y., twelve live in Brooklyn and Long Island City. Last June they obeyed an order of the trustees and signed an agreement which stipulated that they were to reside in Woodhaven. Now these teachers are calling the trustees tyrants.

FIRE INTO THE AIR.
Extraordinary Duell in Oklahoma—Bravery Saved a Man's Life.

The particulars of a strange duel come from the Cimarron country, near the western border of Oklahoma. A gambler named Bassett had a quarrel with a ranchman named Weaver. Both men drew pistols, but bystanders stopped them before they had a chance to use them. It was decided that a duel was the only way that would settle the trouble. The ordinary duelling code did not satisfy the men, and they made a peculiar agreement. They were to withdraw and their friends were to load one revolver. A blanket was placed over the table and two revolvers were placed under the blanket, one empty and the other loaded. Both men were to draw and fire at the same time. The positions were taken and the revolvers drawn. Bassett fired first, but his revolver failed to respond. Without flinching he placed his revolver on the table and folded his arms, calmly looking Weaver in the face. Weaver took his time and deliberately aimed at the center of Bassett's forehead. After what must have seemed an eternity to the latter Weaver slowly raised the pistol and fired the ball through the air, saying that Bassett was too brave a man to die, and he did not believe he had cheated. The men became fast friends and all trouble between them is past.

SWEEPED BY A CYCLONE.

Washington City Devastated by a Terrible Wind-Storm.

Baltimore was entirely without communication with Washington. Intelligence was received from that city that a terrific hurricane was raging and that several people had been killed. It was also said that great destruction to buildings had been caused by the tornado, many being unroofed. Immediately after the receipt of this information the wire went down. All other telegraph wires were also interrupted, giving evidence of the fury of the gale. Advice from neighboring cities show that the hurricane was general in that section, being accompanied in many instances by furious rain-storms, amounting almost to cloud-bursts. Floods have resulted from the heavy rains in Maryland and South-eastern Pennsylvania, and it is believed that reports of great damage and perhaps loss of life will be received as soon as any means can be had of conveying intelligence. The gale on Chesapeake Bay was one of the hardest known for years. The oyster smacks have run for shelter when possible, but it is not deemed possible that all have escaped.

FONSECA BOWED OUT.

Revolutionist Pressure Too Great for the Dictator.

Dispatches from Rio de Janeiro bring the intelligence that the opposition to Dictator Fonseca has gathered sufficient force to break through the barriers erected by the government to hold it in check and make itself master of the situation. All that is known is that the uprising was so formidable that Fonseca considered it impossible longer to maintain his ascendancy and has surrendered his authority. In retreating, or "resigning" as he called it, he declared that he did so in favor of Floriano Peixoto, the Vice-Chief of the Provisional Government, of which Fonseca was the head. The news that Fonseca had resigned spread like wildfire. Everywhere it was received with enthusiastic cheers and exclamations of satisfaction.

FOUR BURNED TO DEATH.

The Old Homestead Hotel at Jamestown, N. Y., Destroyed by Fire.

At Jamestown, N. Y., three servants and one child were burned to death by a fire in the Old Homestead Hotel. All escapes were cut off and the people in the hotel were compelled to lower themselves to the ground from the second-story windows. The bodies of the victims were found in the room where they slept. None of them was burned, but they had been suffocated. The loss on the building is about $6,000. The hotel was conducted by Snowden & Tompkins. Their loss on contents is about $3,000; insured for $3,000. The Grand Central restaurant suffered considerable loss by water.

Falls to the Flour City.

Minneapolis will have the next National Republican Convention. So the National Committee decided, after six ballots, the Minnesota town being victorious on the seventh, when it received twenty-nine votes. The convention will be held June 7.

South Sea Island Outrages.

The British ship Royalist recently visited the South Sea Islands, where outrages had been committed on Europeans. The marines destroyed the village of the guilty natives, and in doing so killed several of them.

He Was a Capper.

The story is now going that Wells, the Englishman who made such big winnings at Monte Carlo, "stood in" with the bank and the scheme was arranged to divert the business.

Governor Hovey Dead.

Governor Alvin P. Hovey, of Indiana, died quite suddenly in Indianapolis from ailments contracted from climatic influences while in Mexico a short time ago.

Prohibits Gambling in Grain.

A bill rendering people who gamble in grain on the Bourse liable to prosecution has been introduced in the German Reichstag by the Conservatives.

Deadly Decoction.

Mrs. Catharine Corcoran, of Minnesota, City, Minn., committed suicide by taking the heads of matches and drinking them in coffee.

Biped Game.

The last week has been a notable one for hunting accidents in Rockland County, N. Y. Many gunners have been hurt every day.

BOUGHT OUT DEERING.

Cordage Trust Pays $250,000 for His Twine-Making Plant.

The price of twine will be advanced rapidly, it is thought, and thereby hangs a $5,000,000 tale. With a transaction, which was finished prior to Nov. 13 every independent plant for the manufacture of twine has been absorbed by the twine and cordage trust. The official designation of this trust is the National Cordage Company, and further, as it would appear from the records, the "Security Corporation," in its purely financial dealings. The last independent plant to be absorbed by the trust was that attached to the immense harvester and reaper establishment of William Deering & Co. in Chicago. The trust paid Mr. Deering $250,000 for his twine plant and five and a quarter acres of ground underlying it. When the deal was made and the final papers signed the only opposition to the trust had been bought out. The International Cordage Company, by this manipulation of interests becomes the controller of every cordage factory of importance in the United States. Not an inch of twisted fiber—except sewing thread—can be sold save at a price fixed by the trust. From grocers' wrapping-twines to ships' hawsers, all rope made in this country will be the property of the consolidation. Farmers' binding-twines, of which an immense quantity is used in the great wheat fields, is also under the control of the combination.

ST. PAUL SCORCHED.

Two Large Wholesale Houses Burned—Loss, $1,500,000.

The magnificent business houses of Griggs, Cooper & Co., wholesale grocers, and Farwell, Osmun, Kirk & Co., wholesale hardware, St. Paul, were gutted by fire. The total loss will reach $1,500,000. A careful estimate of the individual losses is as follows: Griggs, Cooper & Co. on stock $350,000; on building $300,000; Farwell, Osmun, Kirk & Co. on stock $400,000; on building $250,000. Insurance on Griggs, Cooper & Co.'s stock equal to loss; on Farwell, Osmun, Kirk & Co., $250,000; buildings fully insured. Loss on Karl Simmons' drug store, $7,000; insurance, $5,000. No cause has been assigned for the fire. The firemen worked without a rest for four hours, with the thermometer at zero, and succeeded in confining the flames to the Shepard Block, although it was located in the very heart of the wholesale district of the city. Ice formed all over the clothing and gun coats and pants of the firemen, who had to be frequently relieved to give them an opportunity to knock the huge chunks of congealed water from their legs and boots. Icicles four feet in length formed on the telegraph wires near the building.

AT THE MERCY OF FIERCE WOLVES.

New Brighton, Near St. Paul, Terrorized by the Brutes.

The community of New Brighton, fifteen miles northwest of St. Paul, has been terrorized for the past few days by the visitation of a large pack of gray wolves. It is believed the forest fires in the vicinity of Pine City drove out the wolves and a number of them were attracted to the spot named by the presence of the great droves of sheep about the Twin City Stock Yards. Three children have been killed and devoured by the wolves in the last three days. Though as many as thirteen of the brutes had been slaughtered in one day, no organized effort at extermination had been attempted, and the great body of wolves were safe in the fastnesses of the swamp. An expedition will go out, when 500 men with bounds and rifles will surround the swamps and end the depredations. The State pays a bounty of $5 for each wolf scalp and the township of New Brighton has offered $100 to the hunter killing the largest number of wolves.

DIED A HERO'S DEATH.

A Pennsylvania Miner Killed While Saving the Lives of His Fellow-Workmen.

Napoleon de Montague, a miner, was killed in the Lancashire colliery, at Plymouth, Pa., while endeavoring to save his fellow-workmen from a terrible death. He had fired a shot and ran behind a pillar. When it exploded the flash set fire to some gas near the roof of a chamber communicating with the main gangway. Realizing that the fire might spread in a moment through the whole mine, De Montague drew off his coat and smothered the fire. Just as the fire was extinguished the roof of the chamber, loosened by the blast, fell upon him. He was extricated as soon as possible, but only to die in the arms of his rescuers. Had he fire spread a terrible explosion would have followed, endangering the lives of over a hundred men.

VIRGINIA TO PAY HER DEBTS.

Agreement Reached Whereby the State Obligations Will Be Funded.

At Richmond, Va., an agreement was reached between the Virginia State Debt Commission and the Olcott Commission, representing the foreign bondholders. It provides that all bonds of the State not heretofore funded in Riddledorger shall be lumped in a capital of $10,000,000, bearing 2 per cent. interest for ten years and 3 per cent. for ninety years. This will make the total indebtedness of the state about $24,000,000, as about $8,000,000 has already been funded in Riddledorger 3 per cent. It is expected that the legislature and the bondholders will promptly ratify this agreement and that the vexatious debt problem will be finally settled.

EX-GOVERNOR HOADLY ILL.

Ohio's Late Executive Stricken with Pneumonia at New York.

Ex-Gov. George Hoadly is dangerously ill with pneumonia, and for a day or two his life has been despaired of. The physicians have given some encouragement, although it is slight. Since Gov. Hoadly left Ohio to practice law in New York he has been a very busy man. He found a large practice awaiting him of the most profitable kind. Gov. Hoadly's work has told seriously on his health and his friends have feared that he was undermining his constitution.

Georgia Lynchers Poised.

Martha Scott and four companions are in jail at Atlanta, Ga., charged with the murder of Postmaster Church, of Mount Airy, who was killed by a stray bullet which was fired from a house of ill-repute in which the inmates were quarrelling. A vigilance committee was formed to lynch the party. They did not succeed, however, as the jail was too well guarded and the prisoners could not be reached.

Killed Twenty-eight Ducks.

The last day of the President's stay at Bangor, Me., with the ducks was up to the average in sport. He spent the forenoon in the Persimmon Point blind, and secured twelve ducks, making the number killed during the visit twenty-eight.

Horrible Death of an Epileptic.

Louis Miller, aged 18, a blacksmith's helper, met a horrible death at Columbus, Ohio. While suffering from an epileptic fit he fell into the forge and was burned to death.

IT WILL BE WAR NOW.

FONSECA REJECTS THE OFFER OF THE RIO GRANDE JUNTA.

Both Sides Are Now Preparing for the Inevitable Conflict—England Being Badly Hoaxed—A Score of Buildings Burned—Large Iron Mill Discontinues.

The Conflict Inevitable.

A dispatch from Montevideo says that Fonseca has indignantly rejected the demand of the Rio Grande Junta for his resignation, and said that he would use all the means at his command to bring those whom he called rebels to obedience. In addition to the large force already sent to attack the troops of the Junta, Fonseca is offering a large bounty and liberal pay for recruits. These are not hard to get among the numerous floating population of Rio Janeiro, which includes many desperate characters from all parts of the world. These are coming forward to take service in Fonseca's army. Great indignation has been aroused in Rio Grande at the prospect of having these mercenaries turned loose upon the people, should Fonseca prove victorious, and the consequence is a great stimulus to the voluntary recruiting for the Junta. For the present the policy of the Junta will probably be one of defense. The Junta has, however, given it to be distinctly understood that they are in arms for the liberties of Brazil.

ENGLAND IS BEING BADLY HOAXED.

An Old American Drive Museum Freak Drawing Crowds.

At London, the sensation of the week comes from a music hall. It is furnished by Miss Annie Abbott, the "Georgia Magnet," who is exhibiting at the Alhambra, and every day the excitement increases over her performance, which is not only being discussed in the ordinary critical way by the papers but they go so far as to write leaders on her. The reserved portions of the house are closely booked a week ahead of time, a thing hitherto unknown in London music halls. Many of the American colony, who believe the whole affair is a gigantic fake, are laughing at the way staid Londoners are being humbugged.

TWENTY BUILDINGS BURNED.

Fire Destroys Property at Correctionville, Iowa. Valued at $80,000.

Fire destroyed about twenty buildings at Correctionville, Iowa, inflicting a loss of $80,000. The heaviest losers are G. W. Fletcher & Co., lumber dealers, whose loss is $20,000 and insurance $12,000. The Laub Block, which contained the opera house, was destroyed. At Syracuse, N. Y., fire broke out in a dime museum in the Bastille Block on East Genesee street. The loss on the block is estimated at $50,000, and on goods about a like amount.

They Were Saved by a Tramp.

The lives of a number of Burlington freight officials were saved by a tramp who halted a special composed of Manager Holdrege's private car and an engine forty feet from a partially burned bridge over a deep canon near Crawford, Neb. The bridge is 110 feet long, and three of its bents had fallen. The tramp was given a purse, a hearty meal, and a pass to St. Joe, but he was on board No. 42 in a later wreck at Leahy's siding and was badly shaken up. The train was running forty miles an hour and was stopped so suddenly that the passengers were distributed over the cars and badly bruised.

Pittsburg to Relieve the Coal Famine.

There are fair prospects of a relief of the coal famine in the South and West by the shipment of coal from Pittsburg, Pa. The rivers, which have been too low for boating purposes for several months, are rising and an effort will be made to send out enough coal to relieve the present wants of the South at least. The towboat Seven Sons started with six barges for East Liverpool, O., and others will get out if there is a rise of one or two feet more. The Pittsburg harbor is blocked with coal barges and fully 15,000,000 bushels is awaiting a boating stage of water.

To Control the Phosphate Output.

At Ocala, Fla., at a convention of those interested in the Florida phosphate industry, forty-four mining companies were represented by one or more delegates each. Six private miners also participated. The convention adopted a plan for a phosphate combination, which provides for the organization of the Florida phosphate syndicate which shall regulate the output of the mines, control the sale of rock and the handling of it, fix prices, etc. It will be managed by a board of directors with plenary powers.

Spanish Politics.

The rumors of a Ministerial crisis in Spain have taken a more acute form in consequence of the increasing differences of opinion reported to exist in the Cabinet. The Conservative party is endeavoring to induce Senor Camacho to accept the post of Minister of Finance. Admiral Beranger will probably be once more Minister of Marine.

Convict Dies Wealthy.

A convict who had been sentenced under an assumed name died at the Michigan City (Ind.) State Prison. Just before his death he said his true name was Shaw, and that his mother resided at Beardstown, Ill. It was subsequently learned that his mother died six months ago leaving her convict son $8,000.

The Minister Shot in Self-Defense.

R. S. Bingham, a Methodist minister, who lives near Abingdon, Va., has surrendered himself, saying that he had shot Frank Queensberry during a quarrel. He claims that the shooting was done in self-defense after Queensberry had assaulted him. The injured man, it is said, will die.

Charges Against a St. Louis Fireman.

Fireman Reedy, of St. Louis, is in disgrace. He was discharged from the force on a charge of sending in false alarms. It is alleged that while the big "Famous" fire was raging Reedy sent in three false alarms from as many different localities.

DYING FROM LOCKJAW.

A New York Man Over Sixty Years Old Cutting a New Wisdom Tooth.

William Pangburn, of Savannah, N. Y., is reported as dying from lockjaw. Although he is 60 years of age, two weeks ago a large tooth made its appearance, cutting through the gum at the extreme end of the jaw, back of the wisdom tooth, on the left side. Pangburn went to a dentist, who made vain efforts to extract the tooth. These efforts aggravated the pain and soreness. Pangburn's face continued swelling, and it now measures more than a foot across. The tooth continues growing, and Pangburn cannot open his jaws, which are tightly pressed together. All the nourishment he receives is what he can sip between his teeth. His sufferings are terrible.

BIG MEXICAN CONTRACT.

A Harbor to Be Constructed at Coatzacoalcas for $4,500,000.

The Diario Oficial, in the City of Mexico, has published the contract entered into between the secretary of communication and William Pulchad for the construction of a port and harbor work at Coatzacoalcas, in the State of Vera Cruz, in the sum of $4,500,000. The Legislature of the State of Durango has passed a law authorizing the Governor to purchase corn and establish places for its sale in all parts of the State where people are oppressed by high prices caused by failure of crops.

EIGHTY PERSONS DROWNED.

Great Loss of Life by a Tidal Wave in the Gilbert Islands.

A dispatch from Sydney, N. S. W., says information has reached that place of a disaster at the Gilbert Islands, in the South Pacific. A tidal wave has caused great loss of life and damage to property throughout the group. Eighty people were drowned upon one of the islands.

Crazed by His Crime.

Twenty miles southwest of Milan, Tenn., four cattle drovers went to the house of John Rogan to collect some money due them. Rogan thought they meant to levy on his cattle. This maddened him and he smilingly invited the quartet to remain for supper. Shilling from the room he took a quantity of rough on rats and poured it into a jug of whisky. During the meal the whisky was brought out, the doomed men drinking freely. Rogan poured his liquor down his boot leg. The debauch continued far into the night, and one by one the men expired in terrible agony. A neighbor passing the house next morning heard screams issuing from the place and stopped to investigate. On the floor of the dining-room he found the bodies of Jack Barger, Tom Haley, Sam Wilson and Will Hager, a raving maniac, screaming: "They're gone home." The crazed man is under arrest.

Accidentally Shot a Dakota Banker.

Banker Thomas A. Short, of Edgerton, S. D., was accidentally shot and killed. In company with a party of friends he went to the Missouri River goose hunting. Upon the approach of a flock Charles Beebe raised his gun to fire, and at the same instant Short, who was five or six feet in advance, suddenly rose to his feet and received the entire charge of buckshot from Beebe's gun in the head.

Clogged the Fire Escapes.

Thirty-one poor women were fined $2 each by Justice Smith in the Essex Market Police Court at New York. Their crime was heinous. They had stored furniture and bedding on the fire escapes of the tenements in which they dwell, and had actually allowed their children to play there when the weather was fine.

Gov. Hovey's Condition Critical.

At Indianapolis, Ind., Gov. Hovey's illness has developed into a complication of pneumonia and heart trouble. The three physicians who are attending him regard his condition as critical. He has been violent and at times it was necessary to give him inhalations of oxygen.

The Y. M. C. A. banquet at Hope College, Wednesday evening, was a very pleasant and successful affair, in that these terms imply. It was as creditable to the young men of Hope, as it proved acceptable to our citizens. In response to the invitations sent out some two hundred ladies and gentlemen answered in person around the banquet tables, set out in the chapel. The arrangements in all their details were carried out with precision and dispatch. The spread was fine, accompanied by a neat bill of fare:

Y. M. C. A. Banquet to City and College. One in aim and united in interest. Committee—Jacob Van der Meulen, Sheldon Vandenberg, Cornelius S. Effens, Minus Oysters, raw or stewed; ham, cold tongue; biscuits, cookies; cakes, coconut, fig, nut, celery, olives, pickles, Java coffee.

What followed proved to be equally entertaining to the guests. The tables being cleared, Mr. G. J. Diekema appeared at his best as toastmaster of the evening and the following sentiments were presented and responded to:

Oysters—Prof. J. H. Gillespie.
Greetings from the City—Mayor O. E. Yates.

Greetings from the College—Prof. J. H. Kleinheksel.

Holland's Future—G. Van Schelven.
City and College, One in Aim, United in Interests—Prof. G. J. Kollen.

Y. M. C. A. Work—Henry Veldman.
Y. M. C. A. Needs—J. Sterenberg.

It was just eight o'clock when the last speaker was wrapped down and the gathering proceeded to Hope church, to listen to an address of Rev. J. T. Bergen on some of the essentials a Y. M. C. A. stands in need of, here as well as elsewhere, in order to fill its place in these practical days of ours, prominent among which are suitable quarters. The exercises closed with a few devotional exercises and a collection in behalf of the Y. M. C. A., a part of which, we learn, will be set apart as a nest-egg for future accumulations with a view to provide quarters for the association along the line indicated by the speaker.

Negotiations that have been long pending, were consummated the other day for the transfer of a large block of the stock of the Macatawa Park Association. Messrs. H. Walsh, C. A. Dutton and Prof. C. Scott disposed of their shares to H. W. Perry of Brazil, Ind., E. C. Westerveld of South Bend, Ind., and H. S. Earl of Chicago. The remaining local stockholders at present are Messrs. H. Boone and J. C. Post. The latter named gentleman, who is secretary of the association, in speaking of this transfer to a reporter of the G. R. Democrat, the other day, said:

"The purchase is made with reference to an important extension of the privileges of the resort in the near future. Primarily, the development of the park is being made with reference to the expected influx of visitors to the world's fair. Among the plans entertained for the improvement of the premises are the extension of hotel, railway and steamboat facilities. It would not surprise me if an immense hotel, second to none along the east shore of Lake Michigan, was erected here. You see, we are but a short distance from Chicago, and a cool and refreshing ride across the lake will be just the thing for the exhausted world's fair sight-seers. Of course the plans of the new combination are elaborate and on a scale commensurate with the importance of the occasion and the natural advantages of the park. There can be no doubt about the wisdom of the financial policy that prompts the enterprise. The experience of the Centennial Exposition settled that. There was not a resort within fifty miles of Philadelphia at that time that could not sell its privileges at a premium. And the coming event at Chicago will overshadow any similar occasion the world has ever seen. The plans also contemplate first class water communication between the park and the world's fair grounds. This will be supplied either by the park company or by other parties. That they will be provided, is beyond question."

The sheriff's sale of the Ottawa Beach resort, next month, is expected to land that property absolutely in the hands of the C. & W. M. people, thereby placing it on a more solid footing. Between the two resorts Holland harbor will no doubt become one of the points sought after, on this shore of Lake Michigan.

The National Republican Committee, at a session held in Washington, Monday, have fixed upon June 7, 1892, as

First formal ballot: New York 10, Omaha 3, Minneapolis 14, Cincinnati 8, San Francisco 5, Detroit 1, Pittsburgh 1, Chattanooga 4.

Second formal ballot: New York 11, Omaha 4, Minneapolis 13, Cincinnati 12, San Francisco 2.

Third ballot: Minneapolis 13, New York 10, Cincinnati 13, Omaha 4, San Francisco 7.

The West Side News of Grand Rapids, published by John G. Lee, formerly of Grand Haven, last week charged D. R. Waters, publisher of the G. R. Press, with having written a letter to Henry Sanford, of Grand Haven, during the late congressional campaign in this district, of the following import:

"Friend Henry: Stick to the Third party and get the boys out to vote; we will then be able to dictate terms to the Democrats next year, and get what we ask for."

Mr. Waters denied the above as a forgery, whereupon Mr. Lee in the next issue of his paper produced a facsimile copy of the letter in question, which reads as follows:

"October 23, 1891. HENRY SANFORD, Grand Haven. Dear Sir—I hear you are working for the People's party. That's right; do your best and stick to it. If we pull a big vote it will put you and I both where we will have something to say in the future. I sent you twenty five papers this morning; do all you can with these. Yours truly, D. R. WATERS."

In order to obtain a correct understanding of the political "deal" implied in the above, it is well enough to add the following information, taken from the News of the 19th inst.:

"In 1882 D. R. Waters was a fusion delegate to the state convention, where he boldly and persistently advocated a fusion between the Greenbackers and the Democracy. This was the same year that Josiah Begole was elected governor and the late Julius Houseman as congressman from this district. He was given the wardenship of the Iowa prison at a salary of $1,500 a year, besides a home for his family, and board, as a reward for his political work, and appointed Henry Sanford as engineer."

At the time of Cleveland's election he again strongly advocated fusion, and labored hard to effect it and as a reward was made United States Marshal, one of the fattest offices in the gift of the government, in this district."

Four fishermen had a thrilling experience in Lake Erie near Loraine, this week. They went out to their nets Monday morning. Their sail boat capsized and was carried away from them. Each man then swam to a pound net stake and lashed himself to it. They remained in that position for twenty-six hours, exposed to the heavy seas that broke over them. They were rescued Monday forenoon nearly dead from cold and exposure. One man said his suffering during the night was so terrible that if he could have reached his knife he would have cut his throat.

The members of Eagle and Columbia Hose companies, being in need of new uniforms, are presenting their claims to our citizens by way of a subscription list, and are meeting with very encouraging responses. The business men, and the manufacturers especially seem to fully appreciate the services of the fire ladders that constitute our volunteer fire department, and are filling in the space opposite their respective names with liberal figures. Let the good work go bravely on! Every resident of the city feels a sense of relief, during these stormy nights, that in case of an emergency the "boys" are sure to be on deck. The present fire department has never failed us yet.

The architect of the new bank block is figuring on an alteration in the tower, by which its height will be increased about 15 feet. All of which is being brought about by the proposition to place a town clock therein, when complete. The bank will stand the additional expense involved as far as the tower is concerned, and Jas. Huntley, the contractor, has sufficient confidence in the liberality and public spirit of our citizens, that he has assumed the responsibility of the clock, and will see that the necessary funds are forthcoming.

Rumor has it that word has been received in this city from Mr. Coppock, the elopist, and that after a stay of a few days with his illicit companion somewhere in Wisconsin, he has again mysteriously disappeared, single handed this time, leaving his guilty partner to shift for herself.

Grand Rapids horsemen intend to have a racing season next year for which they will raise a purse of $25,000.

Dr. F. J. Schouten: Dear Sir—About three months ago I bought a box of your anti-rheumatic pills and after using one half of them I find myself in perfect health. Last year I went to Mt. Clemens, Mich., and although I obtained relief there, it did not cure me. At the urgent desire of some of my friends I tried your anti-rheumatic pills with the above happy result. I deem them the best I have used and I have tried nearly everything.

Respectfully Yours,
WILL BREYMAN.

Kalamazoo is known to-day as the Celery City' the world over, said an enthusiastic burgher of what was once the largest village in the United States, in a recent interview. Our product is not only the greatest, but the finest of any known in the American market; and I tell you it's a big thing. Why, bless you, the entire valley of the Kalamazoo, rich as it is in black deposit of vegetable and animal precipitation, is one vast celery field. Outside the habitations of our people, stretching in one grand unbroken sweep for miles, the graceful celery plumes salute the eye with vivid, grateful greeting. Thousands upon thousands of acres of that rich soil have been rescued from the condition of quagmires and frog ponds by the diligence of our Holland citizens, and the entire valley converted into a great source of wealth, industry and prosperity. The business has assumed grand proportions, and we now have a host of celery kings and aristocrats. Thousands of beautiful homes dot the sterile barren stretch of marsh and mud, and where once only the boom of the prairie hen or the whir of the old duck's wing awoke the solitude, now the music of the school bell and the hum of industry prevails. The growth of this celery industry, with us, has developed a sturdy, industrious, intelligent and progressive portion of our citizenship. Our Holland neighbors are today among our proudest population. They are independent, in their houses, have comfortable homes, beautiful children, a healthful bank account and a spirit of enterprise.

MORNING-GLORIES.

O dainty daughters of the dawn—most delicate of flowers!
How fitly do ye come to deck day's must delicious hours,
Evoked by morning's earliest breath, your fragile cups unfold
Before the light has cleft the sky, or edged the world with gold.
Before the luxurious butterflies and moths are yet set free,
Before the careless breeze has snapped the leaf-hung gossamer—
White-showered dewdrops, yet unquaffed by thirsty insect-thieves,
Frother with rows of diamonds the edges of the leaves.
Ye drink from day's o'erflowing brim, nor ever dream of noon;
With bashful nod ye greet the sun, whose flattery cheeks soon
Your trumpets trembling to the touch of humming bird and bee,
In tender trepidation sweet, and fair timidity.
No flower in all the garden hath so wide a choice of hue;
The deepest purple dyes are yours—the ten, dearest tints of blue;
While some are colorless as light—some flushed incarnadine,
And some are clouded crimson, like a goblet stained with wine.
Ye hold not in your calm cool hearts the passion of the rose,
Ye do not know the haughty pride the regal holly owns;
But ah! what blossom has the charm, the purity of this,
Which shrinks before the tenderest love, and dies beneath a kiss?
In this wide garden of the world, where he is wise who knows
The bramble from the sweet brier, the nettle from the rose,
Some lives there are which seem like these, as sensitive and fair,
As far from thought of sin or shame, as free from stain of care.
We find sometimes these splendid souls, when all our world is young,
Where life is crisp with freshness, with unshaken dew-drops hung.
They blossom in the cool dim hours, ere sunshine dries the air,
But cease and vanish long before the noon-day's heat and glare.
And if in manhood's dusty time, fatigued with toil and glow,
We crave the fresh, young morning heart which charms us long ago,
We seek in vain the olden ways, the dewy moist and fair—
The heart-shaped leaves may linger, but the blossoms are not there.

Relations by Marriage.

BY AMY RANDOLPH.

Everybody went to Pamela Pepper's wedding. It was quite natural that they should. Miss Pepper was as well known in Cornstalk Corners as the old town clock itself on the steeple of the Methodist meeting-house. She had made dresses and trimmed bonnets there for more years than she cared to remember. She was gossip-in-general, prime mover in all the tea-parties, quilting-bees and apple-butter frolics, head of the charitable and religious societies and chief chronicler of all the dates in regard to births, deaths and marriages. She knew what everybody said to everybody else, what Mrs. Meloth gave for her new seal-skin cloak and in how many weeks Mr. Luckless's farm would be foreclosed on. She was quite au fait as to every household quarrel, all the family skeletons and a score of motives for each action, which no one else would have dreamed of. No story was quite complete unless Miss Pamela Pepper's version of it had been heard. And if people didn't know their own speeches after they had been through the mediumship of Miss Pamela's interpretation, surely that was no fault of hers.

But the blossoming-time comes, we are told, even to aloe a hundred years old—and Miss Pamela Pepper was married just before she floated into the forties. How it had come to pass, nobody knew exactly. There were some who had the hardihood to assert that Mr. Josiah Black had come to the dressmaking establishment to see Mary More, the blue-eyed little apprentice who made the button holes and sewed the straight seams, but that being skillfully intercepted by Miss Pamela, she had taken his overtures as intended for herself and accepted him effusively, before he had proposed; and that Josiah, being a meek young man with white eyelashes and a flat, freckled face, had not the requisite courage to escape from the meshes wherewith she had so artfully trapped him.

Be that as it might, it was certain that Mary More had been discharged and that Miss Pepper was now Mrs. Josiah Black. There had been an outfit ordered, economically, from New York, a wedding-cake nearly as big as a cart-wheel, and a deal of ostentation. The bride declared that it was a case of love at first sight.

"It ain't a month," she remarked, gushingly, "since me and Josiah first set eyes on each other, when he came into the store to ask the way to Squire Robinson's. He looked at me—oh, how he looked at me! And I felt a sort of old overishness that I couldn't describe noway in the world! He didn't think of money nor yet of lineage, nor none o' them things; he only felt as we was made for each other by Providence!"

In which case, Squire Robinson remarked, sub rosa, Providence had made a bad mistake of it for once. For Mrs. Josiah Black was tall and shallow, with the frame of a Prussian grenadier, while Mr. Josiah Black was slight and round-shouldered, with flaxen locks and watery, blue eyes. Mrs. Squire Robinson said there was fifteen years' difference in their age. But the bride said it was only five. And who should know if the bride didn't?

But when the couple were seated in the train, speeding toward Blue Point, where the ancestral halls of the Black family were situated, Pamela grew confidential.

"We're agoin' right to your house, Josiah, I suppose," said she.

"Yes," said Josiah, with a deep sigh. "Where else should we go?"

"Some folks board," suggested the bride. "Just at first, at least."

"I hain't no money for that sort of fancy-work," dolefully remarked the groom.

"Is it pleasant there, dear?" asked the bride.

"Well, it ain't bad," responded Josiah, in a non-committal way.

"You never told me about your family, Josiah," went on Mrs. Black, soothingly.

"Fam'ly?" repeated Josiah, with a startled look. "I hain't got no fam'ly. I ain't never been a married man before."

"I mean your relations, Josiah."

"There's my step-mother," said Josiah.

"And there's my two sisters and my brother and Uncle Lijah and Aunt Nancy—"

"Oh, stop, stop!" ejaculated the bride. "They don't all live with you?"

"No," Josiah answered. "Not all."

"Dear me, Josiah," said Mrs. Black, "how dead and alive you seem. Nobody would realize that you had been only three hours married."

"I don't seem to realize it myself," said Mr. Black, leaning his head against the car window, with a thoroughly discouraged air.

"But if you s'pose I'm going to turn my house into a refuge for all your relations," added Mrs. Josiah, with energy, "you are very—dear me! Blue Point, a ready? This can't be the place, can it? Why, we hain't—"

Just then the relentless conductor, swooping through the train, bore Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Black off to the platform, the latter still remonstrating loudly.

Mr. Black was silent and moody as they walked up the steep hill leading to the village street. Mrs. Black was secretly resolving that, husband or no husband, she would not be captured by the Goth and Visigoth horde of relations who doubtless were waiting to pounce on her hearth.

"I must assert myself," she thought, "at the very first, or I shall be overruled!"

"Here is the house," somberly remarked Josiah.

A long, low, red building faced them at the top of a hill, with a fence draped with morning-glory vines, trailing hops and wild vetches, and two or three gnarled quince trees leaning up against the south end.

"There's lights inside," said the late Miss Pamela. "And a fire! There's somebody there!"

"My folks," briefly remarked Josiah.

"Your folks!" repeated Pamela; and there was a world of unsyllabled meaning in her voice. Walking valiantly forward, she flung open the door, and stood facing the little group which was gathered amicably around the blazing fire. And Josiah Black, following, pushed her, in rather an undignified manner, into their midst, with the introductory speech:

"My wife. Here she is!"

"How d'ye do, Mrs. Josiah?" said an elderly woman. "I'm your husband's step-ma."

"And I'm his sister," said a blonde matron with lilac ribbons in her cap.

"And I'm his other sister," spoke up a short, sharp, little female with a black-and-tan-terrier sort of face and a rustling black silk dress.

"Brother Simeon," announced Josiah, as a stout man with a profusely pomatumed head rose and ducked it toward her.

"And Uncle Lijah and Aunt Nancy," motioning toward a solid-looking couple in the background; "and my cousins, Heber and Stratton," as two tall, awkward young men emerged from behind a calico-covered screen in the rear.

"I hope you all find yourselves pretty well?" said Mrs. Josiah Black, with the geniality of an arctic iceberg. "But I shain't find it convenient to entertain you here."

The herd of relations stared, and Mr. Josiah's step-ma bridled, and said:

"We wasn't a-calculating to stay to tea."

"Tea or dinner, it makes no difference," said the bride. "If we're to get along comfortable together, all these things has got to be understood at once. I ain't goin' to keep free hotel for my husband's relations, and I don't want it to be expected of me."

There was an indignant buzz among the relations at this remarkable piece of plain speaking—they all rose up in concert.

"Well," said they, addressing Josiah's "step-ma," as if she were the representative of the mass, "if Josiah's wife don't want nothin' to do with us, we certainly don't mean to trouble her."

"Don't be in a hurry," faintly uttered Josiah; but none of the relations took the least notice of him, as they seized upon their hats, bonnets, shawls and other articles of outer wrapping with precipitate haste.

"Of course," added Mrs. Josiah, a little alarmed at the result of her own generalship. "I shall always be happy to have you call in a friendly way."

Josiah's step-ma, who had taken a package from the table, stonily remarked as she held it up:

"My ice-pitcher—best triple plate and porcelain-lined—as I had intended for a wedding present. But if folks don't want me, they don't want my presents, so I'll wish you good-bye, Mrs. Black."

One of the sisters took up a cream-jug of chased silver—the other put a plated caster back into its box, and off they marched.

"Our simple offerings," said they, "are hardly elegant enough for one so exclusive in her tastes as our brother's wife."

Simeon Black swung a heavy wicker-basket across his shoulders.

"A tea-set of real Irgy china that belonged to a Chinese sea-captain," said he, "and I got it at a bargain—but I guess it ain't wanted," and he, too, departed, banging the door.

One by one the others took a hasty leave, each carrying some little offering of more or less value which had been brought thither for the delectation of "Josiah's wife," while that lady herself stood gazing after them in blank dismay, with an agonized consciousness that she had committed an awful political blunder in this, the first term of her married life.

"There!" said Josiah, grimly, "now you've done it, Pamela. Every one'll 'em well-to-do and livin' in their own places. And, as sure as you live, they'll never forgive you in this mortal world!"

"I—I thought they was comin' here to live!" gasped the bride. "I only wanted to protect myself."

"Well, you've done it now," said Mr. Black. "There is such a thing as bein' too beforehand."

And he sat slowly down, too spiritless even to upbraid his wife. While Pamela felt that her wedding day had not been altogether a success.

For the Blacks were a clanish tribe, and it was even as the bridegroom had predicted. They never forgave Josiah's wife for that first reception.—[The Ledger.]

TESTING A TERROR.

He Found out that he had Mistaken His Occupation.

When we opened the old "Four X" mine in Nevada, says M. Quad in the New York World, it was no time at all before a lively town was founded and hundreds of people came pouring in. In those days every community had its terror. He was supposed to be able to out-drink, out-yell, out-shoot, and out-fight everything on legs in his jurisdiction. Some times he was a free-lance, and again he was employed as a sort of policeman. We wanted a man to protect company property, and one day a giant of a chap, weighing 205 pounds and 6 feet tall, applied for the place.

"Are you a fighter?" was the question asked of him.

"I am," he replied. "I've had seventy-nine fights in seven weeks."

"Afraid of anything mortal?"

"Nothing mortal or immortal."

"Shoot both handed?"

"I do."

"Use the bowie knife?"

"Perfectly at home with it, sir."

"How many men have you killed this last year?"

"Well, this has been an off year with me, as I was sick abed for six weeks, and so I haven't got but 'leven."

"Suppose, now that a terror from some other camp should come over here to clean you out? Have you ever met any other terror and downed him—a genuine, first-class terror from the headwaters of Fighting Creek?"

"I can't say that I ever have, sir—not a regular terror."

"Then you can't tell how you would act?"

"Why, I should probably fight him."

"But you can't say for sure. However, come back at 4 o'clock this afternoon."

We sent over to Cedar Flats, five miles away, for their terror. We knew him to be the genuine stuff, and when he arrived we posted him as to what was wanted.

At 4 o'clock, when our alleged terror returned to the shaft, the Cedar Flats terror suddenly waltzed out on him with a hair-raising whoop and called out:

"Whar's the bloody, bloomin' hyena who has been passin' hisself off around here as a fighter? Whoop! Waug! Ugh! Somebody pint him out to me and then tie my hands and legs while I bite his ears off!"

Our alleged terror turned pale and looked nervous, and the Cedar Flats man pranced around, cracking his heels together and crowed.

"Cock-a-doodle-doo! Whoop! Pint him out. Let him stand before me! Whoop! Tie me all up in knots, head me up in that bar! and then I'll lick him or go over the cliff! Great snakes! but won't somebody show me the fellow who—"

I pointed to our terror, and the Cedar Flats man uttered a scream and rushed for him. The chap who had only killed 'leven men just fell right down in a heap, and it was five minutes before we could bring him to. He was whiter than flower and as limpy as a rag, and it was all of half an hour before he could walk away.

"How do you account for it?" I asked as he was ready to go.

"I must have gone into the wrong business," he gloomily replied.

"How do you mean?"

"I ought to have been a preacher!"

The National Beverage.

The United States ranks high among the coffee-drinking nations, being surpassed by Belgium and Holland alone. The average consumption of coffee per inhabitant in this country last year was eight and a quarter pounds, while that of tea was but one and two-tenths pounds. Coffee is the national beverage of the United States.

During the last ten years the annual consumption of coffee per head has increased two or three ounces. This is due in part to the fact that the people are better off and can afford to spend more in luxuries. But the average quantity of tea drunk has not increased in last decade. So it is evident that the United States is becoming more and more addicted to the Arabian or Brazilian berry. In 1820 the consumption per head was about seven ounces of tea and nineteen ounces of coffee. Ten years later it was about nine ounces of tea and forty-four ounces of coffee. In 1840 it was nearly fifteen ounces of tea and five pounds of coffee. Sixty years ago the value of tea imported was about half to a third of that of the coffee. It is now about a sixth. The tea has been losing ground, comparatively speaking, all the time.—[Chicago Tribune.]

Save the Feathers.

Children who live in the country and keep chickens can easily get plenty of pillows if they will only take the trouble to save and feed perfectly all the nice soft feathers whenever a chicken is killed. Sofa pillows—and no prettier holiday or birthday present could be given than a pretty sofa pillow—are so much the fashion now that five or six are sometimes piled on one small sofa; they are also used in chairs for cushions and rests for the back, and when made of some beautiful material are among the chief decorative features of many rooms.

The case should be made of unbleached muslin, and may be made of any size, only it must be square; it must not be stuffed too full or the pillow will be hard, and if you do not wish to use silk for the covering, a light cretonne with gay flowers would be very pretty and suitable.—[Detroit Free Press.]

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

HE PREACHES ABOUT PAUL IN THE CITY OF ATHENS.

A Wonderful Oration Before the Greek Wise Men Which Told Them the Greatest Truths Their Ears Had Ever Listened To.

Given Up to Idolatry.

The sermon is the sixth of the series Dr. Talmage is preaching on the subject, suggested by his tour in Bible lands. His text was taken from Acts xvii, 16, "While Paul waited for them at Athens his spirit was stirred in him, when he saw the city wholly given to idolatry."

It seemed as if morning would never come. We had arrived after dark in Athens, Greece, and the night was sleepless with expectation, and my watch slowly announced to me one and two and three and four o'clock, and at the first ray of dawn I called our party to look out of the window upon that city to which Paul said he was a debtor, and to which the whole earth is debtor for Greek architecture, Greek poetry, Greek eloquence, Greek prowess and Greek history.

That morning in Athens we sauntered forth armed with most generous and lovely letters from the President of the United States and his Secretary of State, and during all our stay in that city those letters caused every door and every gate and every temple and every palace to swing open before us. The mightiest geographical name on earth to-day is America. The signature of an American President and Secretary of State will take a man where an army could not.

Those names brought us into the presence of a most gracious and beautiful sovereign, the Queen of Greece, and her cordiality was more like that of a sister than the occupant of a throne room. No formal bow, as when monarchs are approached, but a cordial shake of the hand and earnest questions about our personal welfare and our beloved country far away. But this morning we passed through where stood the Agora, the ancient market place, the locality where philosophers used to meet their disciples, walking while they talked, and where Paul, the Christian logician, flung many an impertinent Epicurean.

The market place was the center of social and political life, and it was the place where people went to tell and hear the news. Booths and bazaars were set up for merchandise of all kinds, except meat; but everything must be sold for cash, and there must be no lying about the value of commodities, and the Agoranomi who ruled the place could inflict severe punishment upon offenders. The different schools of thinkers had distinct places set apart for convocation. The Platons must meet at the cheese market, the Decellans at the barber shop, the sellers of perfumes at the frankincense headquarters.

The market place was a space 350 yards long and 250 wide, and it was given up to gossip and merchandise and lounging and philosophizing. All this you need to know in order to understand the Bible when it says of Paul, "Therefore disputed he in the market daily with them that met him." You see it was the best place to get an audience, and if a man feels himself called to preach he wants people to preach to. But before we make our chief visits of to-day we must take a turn at the Stadium. It is a little way out, but go we must. The Stadium was the place where the foot races occurred.

Paul had been out there no doubt, for he frequently uses the scenes of that place as figures when he tells us, "Let us run the race that is set before us," and again, "They do it to obtain a corruptible garland, but we are an incorruptible." The marble and the gilding have been removed, but the high grounds against which the seats were piled are still there. The Stadium is 680 feet long, 130 feet wide and held 40,000 spectators.

There is to-day the very tunnel through which the defeated racer departed from the Stadium and from the hives of the people, and there are the stairs up which the victor went to the top of the hill to be crowned with the laurel. In this place contests with wild beasts sometimes took place, and while Hadrian, the Emperor, sat on yonder height, 1,000 beasts were slain in one celebration.

But it was chiefly for foot racing, and so I proposed to my friend that we try which of us could run the sooner from end to end of this historical ground, and so at the word given by the lookers on we started side by side, but before I got through I found out what Paul meant when he compares the spiritual race with the race in this very Stadium, as he says, "Lay aside every weight." My heavy overcoat and my friend's freedom from such incumbrance showed the advantage in any kind of a race of "laying aside every weight."

We come now to the Acropolis. It is a rock about two miles in circumference at the base and 1,000 feet in circumference at the top and 800 feet high. On it has been crowded more elaborate architecture and sculpture than in any other place under the whole heavens. Originally a fortress, afterwards a congregation of temples and statues and pillars, their ruins an enchantment from which no observer ever breaks. No wonder that Aristides thought it the center of all things—Greece, the center of the world; Attica, the center of Greece; Athens, the center of Attica, and the Acropolis the Center of Athens. Earthquakes have shaken it; Verres plundered it.

Lord Elgin, the English Ambassador at Constantinople, got permission of the Sultan to remove from the Acropolis fallen pieces of the building, but he took from the building to England the finest statues, removing them at an expense of $800,000. A storm overthrew many of the statues of the Acropolis. Morosini, the general, attempted to remove from a pediment the sculptured car and horses of Victory, but the clumsy machinery dropped it and all was lost.

The Turks turned their buildings into a powder magazine where the Venetian guns dropped a fire that by explosion sent the columns flying in the air and falling cracked and splintered. But after all that time and storm and war and iconoclasm have effected, the Acropolis the monarchs of all ruins, and below it bow the learning, the genius, the poetry, the art, the history of the age. I saw it as it was thousands of years ago. I had read so much about it and dreamed so much about it, that I needed no magician's wand to restore it.

At one wave of my hand on that clear morning in 1889 it rose before me in the glory it had when Pericles ordered it and Ictinus planned it and Phidias chiseled it and Protogenes painted it and Pausanias described it. Its gates, which were carefully guarded by the acedants, open to let you in, and you ascend by sixty marble steps the propylæa, which Epaminondas wanted to transfer to Thebes, but permission, I am glad to say, could not be granted for the removal of this architectural miracle.

In the days when ten cents would do more than a dollar now, the building cost $3,300,000. See its five ornamental gates, the keys entrusted to an officer for only one day lest the temptation to go in and misappropriate the treasures be too great for him; its ceiling a mingling of blue and scarlet and green, and the walls abloom with pictures utmost in thought and coloring. Yonder is a temple to a goddess called "Victory Without Wings."

But we cannot stop longer here, for there is a hill near by of more interest, though it has not one chip of marble to suggest a statue or a temple. We hasten down the Acropolis to ascend the Areopagus, or Mars Hill, as it is called. It took only about three minutes to walk the distance, and the two hill tops are so near that what I said in religious discourse on Mars Hill was heard distinctly by some English gentlemen on the Acropolis. This Mars Hill is a rough pile of rock fifty feet high. It was famous long before New Testament times.

The Persians easily and terribly assaulted the Acropolis from this hilltop. Here assembled the court to try criminals. It was held in the nighttime, so that the faces of the judges could not be seen, nor the faces of the lawyers who made the plea, and so, instead of a trial being one of emotion, it must have been one of cool justice; but there was one occasion on this hill memorable above all others.

A little man, physically weak, and his rhetoric described by himself as contemptible, had by his sermons rocked Athens with commotion, and he was summoned either by writ of law or hearty invitation to come upon that pulpit of rock and give a specimen of his theology.

Paul arrived in answer to the writ or invitation, and confronted them and gave them the biggest dose that mortals ever took. He was so built that nothing could scare him, and as for Jupiter and Athena, the god and the goddess whose images were in full sight on the adjoining hill, he had not so much regard for them as he had for the ant that was crawling in the sand under his feet. In that audience were the first orators of the world, and they had voices like flutes when they were passive and like trumpets when they were aroused, and I think they laughed in the sleeves of their gowns as this insignificant looking man rose to speak.

What I have so far said in this discourse was necessary in order that you may understand the boldness, the defiance, the holy recklessness, the magnificence of Paul's speech. The first thunderbolt he launched at the opposite hill—the Acropolis—that moment all aglitter with idols and temples. He cries out, "God who made the world." Why, they thought that Prometheus made it, that Mercury made it, that Apollo made it, that Poseidon made it, that Eros made it, that Pandrosus made it, that Boreas made it, that it took all the gods of the Parthenon, yes, all the gods and goddesses of the Acropolis, to make it, and here stands a man without any ecclesiastical title, neither a D. D., nor even a reverend, declaring that the world was made by the Lord of Heaven and earth, and hence the inference that all the splendid covering of the Acropolis, so near that the people standing on the steps of the Parthenon could hear it, was a deceit, a falsehood, a sham, a blasphemy. Look at the faces of the auditors; they are turning pale, and then red, and then wrathful. There had been several earthquakes in that region, but that was the severest shock these men ever felt.

The Persians had bombarded the Acropolis from the heights of Mars Hill, but this Pauline bombardment was greater and more terrific. "What," said his hearers, "have we been hauling with many yokes of oxen for many centuries these blocks from the quarries of Mount Pentelium, and have we had our architects putting up these structures of unparalleled splendor, and have we had the greatest of all sculptors, Phidias, with his men chiseling away at those wondrous pediments, and cutting away these friezes, and have we taxed the nation's resources to the utmost, now to be told that those statues see nothing, hear nothing, know nothing?"

Oh, Paul, stop for a moment and give these startled and overwhelmed auditors time to catch their breath! Make a rhetorical pause! Take a look around you at the interesting landscape and give your hearers time to recover! No, he does not make even a period or so much as a colon or semicolon, but launches the second thunderbolt right after the first, and in the same breath goes on to say, "God dwelleth not in temples made with hands."

Oh, Paul! Is not deity more in the Parthenon, or more in the Theseum, or more in the Erechtheum, or more in the temple of Zeus Olympus than in the open air, more than on the hill where we are sitting, more than on Mount Hymettus out yonder, from which the bees get their honey? "No more!" responds Paul, "He dwelleth not in temples made with hands."

But surely the preacher on the pulpit of rock on Mars Hill will stop now. His audience can endure no more. Two thunderbolts are enough. No, in the same breath he launches the third thunderbolt, which to them is more fiery, more terrible, more demolishing than the others as he cries out: "Hath made of one blood all nations." Oh, Paul! you forget you are speaking to the proudest and most exclusive audience in the world. Do not say "of one blood." You cannot mean that. Had Socrates and Plato and Demosthenes and Solon and Lycurgus and Draco and Sophocles and Euripides and Eschylus and Pericles and Phidias and Miltiades blood just like the Persians, like the Turks, like the Egyptians, like the common herd of humanity? "Yes," says Paul, "of one blood, all nations."

Surely that must be the closing paragraph of the sermon. His auditors must be let up from the nervous strain. Paul has smashed the Acropolis and smashed the national pride of the Greeks, and what more can he say? Those Grecian orators, standing on that place, always closed their addresses with something sublime and climacteric, a peroration, and Paul is going to give them a peroration which will eclipse in power and majesty all that he has yet said. Here-before he has hurled one thunderbolt at a time; now he will close by hurling two at once. The little old man, under the power of his speech, has straightened himself up and the stoop has gone out of his shoulders, and he looks about three feet taller than when he began, and his eyes, which were quiet, became two flames of fire, and his face, which was calm in the introduction, now depicts a whirlwind of emotion as he ties the two thunderbolts together with a cord of unconsumable courage and hurls them at the crowd now standing or sitting aghast—the two thunderbolts of Resurrection and Last Judgment. His closing words were: "Because He hath appointed a day which He will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom He hath ordained, whereof He had given assurance unto all men in that He hath raised Him from the dead."

Remember those thoughts were to them novel and provocative; that Christ, the despised Nazarene, would come to be their judge, and they should have to get up out of their cemeteries to stand before Him and take their eternal doom. Mightiest burst of elocutionary power ever heard. The ancestors of some of those Greeks had heard Demosthenes in his oration on the Crown, had heard Eschines in his speeches against Timarchus and Ctesiphon, had heard Plato in his great argument for immortality of the soul, had heard Socrates on his deathbed, suicidal cup of hemlock in hand, leave his hearers in emotion too great to bear; had in the theater of Dionysius, at the foot of the Acropolis (the ruins of its piled up amphitheater and the marble floor of its orchestra still there), seen enacted the tragedies of Eschylus and Sophocles, but neither had the ancestors of these Grecians on Mars Hill, or themselves, ever heard or witnessed such tornadoes of moral power as that with which Paul now whelmed his hearers. At those two thoughts of Resurrection and Judgment, the audience sprang to their feet. Some moved they adorned to some other day to hear more on the same theme, but others would have torn the sacred orator to pieces.

The record says, "Some mocked." I suppose it means that they mimicked the solemnity of his voice, that they took off his impassioned gesticulation, and they cried out: "Jew! Jew! Where did you study rhetoric? You ought to hear our orators speak! You had better go back to your business of tent-making. Our Lycurus knew more in a minute than you will know in a month. Say, where did you get that crooked back, and those weak eyes from? Ha! Ha! You try to teach us Grecians! What nonsense you talk about when you speak of Resurrection and Judgment. Now, little old man, climb down the side of Mars Hill and get out of sight as soon as possible." "Some mocked." But that scene adjourned to the day of which the sacred orator had spoken—the day of Resurrection and Judgment.

As in Athens, that evening in 1889, we climbed down the pile of slippery rocks where all this had occurred, on our way back to our hotel, I stood half way between the Acropolis and Mars Hill in the gathering shadows of eventide I seemed to hear those two hills in sublime and awful converse. "I am chiefly of the past," said the Acropolis. "I am chiefly of the future," replied Mars Hill. The Acropolis said: "My orators are dead. My lawgivers are dead. My poets are dead. My architects are dead. My sculptors are dead. I am a monument of the dead past. I shall never again see a column lifted. I shall never again behold a goddess crowned."

Mars Hill responded: "I, too, have had a history. I had on my heights warriors who will never again unsheath the sword, and judges who will never again utter a doom, and orators who will never again make a plea. But my influence is to be more in the future than it ever was in the

GOV. HOVEY IS DEAD. CURRENT COMMENT.

SUDDEN DEMISE OF INDIANA'S CHIEF EXECUTIVE.

La Grippe Does Its Work—Trained as a Lawyer, He Was Successfully a Soldier, a Diplomat, a Legislator and an Executive—Ira D. Chase, the New Governor.

The death of Gov. Alvin P. Hovey, which occurred at Indianapolis, was a shock that Indianians were not prepared to receive, although it did not come unexpected to those who have lately been more or less intimate with him.

When he became Governor it was with health as vigorous as one could look for in a man 68 years of age. During the summer of 1889 he was at times confined to his room by illness, but it was nothing of a dangerous character. Early in the year following he was attacked by la grippe, and that led to the immediate cause of his death—heart failure. For weeks la grippe and its complications kept him in his room, and when he was able to leave it a great change for the worse was observable in the man on a so robust.

Two months ago it was suggested by friends close to him that a trip to Mexico would do him good. He did not readily fall in with the idea, and to the last would have been willing to abandon the journey had it not been for his friends. He left the city with his party on Oct. 31st, their absence to cover three weeks. Crossing the alkali deserts he began to show feelings of discomfort, and reaching the City of Mexico the air of the high altitude affected him so much that it was decided to return home at once. The party reached home with the Governor a very sick man. From that time on he would have his hours of feeling better and his hours of relapses. The rainy weather and the heavy atmosphere checked improvement, it becoming more and more difficult to restore the respiratory organs to their proper functions.

On the day of his death he himself realized that his condition was extremely critical, but appeared to be hopeful. His mind was clear, and he talked occasionally in a reminiscent way. His messenger, Otto Pfafflin, an old veteran who attended him all through the war as a bugler, was constantly at his bedside, tenderly and devotedly caring for him. During his waking hours the Governor persisted in talking with Pfafflin about war times, recalling with remarkable accuracy the scenes of blood, and carnage, and triumph through which they passed side by side.

The Governor showed much emotion and Otto stroked his forehead, assuring him that McLenard was clearly to blame for the result, and the old warrior sank into peaceful sleep again.

As the day wore on his breathing became more and more difficult. Dr. Hayes said that the immediate cause of the patient's dangerous condition was the damp atmosphere, which impeded his respiration. He said that clear weather would do for the sufferer what medicine could not and anxiously telephoned for information regarding the indications. The answer came that it would continue cloudy and rainy all day, with a probable change to snow. The doctor's countenance changed to an expression of despair as he turned from the telephone. The words were like a death-knell to the sufferer up-stairs. The Governor rapidly grew weaker, every breath was drawn with an effort. Mrs. Menzies, the Governor's daughter, and other friends and attendants went out for a moment, leaving Mr. and Mrs. Hayes remaining with him. Looking about the room, the dying man thought he saw his grand daughter, Miss Mary Menzies. She was always a favorite with him, and at sight of her, as he thought, his face brightened and he called out "Mary." At that moment his heart stopped beating, and the pallor of death overspread his features. He was laid gently back among the pillows, and his family and friends were called in. As they gathered about the bed he drew one convulsive breath and was dead.

Alvin P. Hovey was born on a farm near Mount Vernon, Posey County, Ind., Sept. 6, 1821, and was educated in the country schools and by private teachers. In 1840 he was a school teacher, and while so engaged pursued the study of law evenings, being admitted to the bar in 1842. He practiced with success. He was a delegate to the Constitutional Convention of Indiana in 1850. In 1851 he became Circuit Judge of the Third Judicial District of Indiana and held the office until 1854, when he was made Judge of the Supreme Court of Indiana. He was chosen United States District Attorney for Indiana in 1856 and held the office two years.

During the civil war he entered the national service as Colonel of the Twenty-fourth Indiana volunteers in July, 1861. On April 28, 1862, he was promoted Brigadier General of volunteers and brevetted Major-General for meritorious and distinguished service in July, 1861. He was in command of the eastern district of Arkansas in 1863, and of the district of Indiana in 1864-5. In October, 1865, he resigned his commission and was appointed Minister to Peru, holding the position for five years. He was elected to Congress in 1886 on the Republican ticket, and two years ago was chosen Governor of Indiana.

On the morning following the Governor's death the remains were taken to the rotunda of the Capitol, where they lay in state until the afternoon, when an impressive memorial service was held, under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic. The following morning the G. A. R. posts and other civic and military bodies turned out and escorted the remains to the depot, where a special train was in waiting to carry the body and a large escort to Mount Vernon, the Governor's old home, where the interment took place.

Ira J. Chase, who as Lieutenant Governor will succeed Governor Hovey, is 57 years of age, and a native of Monroe County, New York. He spent his early manhood on a farm thirty miles from Chicago. He served as a private of Company C, Nineteenth Illinois Regiment, but ill-health led to his discharge after more than a year's service. After several years in business he entered the ministry of the Church of Disciples, and filled many important pulpits of that denomination in this State, the last being at Danville, where his home is now.

Train Robbers. Train robbery is to modern society what piracy was on the high seas in the days of the buccaners.—Philadelphia Record.

Isn't it about time for trainmen to be properly armed, thoroughly drilled, and prepared for these individuals?—New York Recorder.

Another train robbery is reported, this time near Milwaukee. The thieves, escaped, of course, but it is "momentarily expected" that the passengers will be promptly placed in custody.—Columbus Journal.

The train robbers have come out of the wilderness and are now playing their avocation at the very gates of metropolitan cities. If something is not done to stop them express cars and locomotives will have to be fortified as they were during the war.—Louisville Commercial.

Sitting safely in an easy chair it is not hard to demonstrate how ridiculous it is for a few men to subject a whole trainload of passengers. Looking into the mouth of a big revolver you have quite a different job before you.—Milwaukee Journal.

Train robbers are fully alive to the improvements of the age. They now employ bombs to break open cars, but these failed when they came to the treasure boxes. Next time they will probably provide themselves with one of the recently invented armor-piercing projectiles adopted by the government.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Voice on Earth

Is not the boon vouchsafed to the chronic, nervous invalid. Slight noises startle him, odd and unexpected sensations perplex him. He neither sleeps soundly nor eats heartily. He is almost invariably troubled with dyspepsia. What should he do? Begin and pursue systematically a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. With digestion fortified and food assimilated, strength returns, the nerves grow tranquil and the rest of life returns. A blessed consummation, indeed, and not only effectually but pleasantly wrought by the Bitters. Biliousness, malaria, rheumatism, kidney complaint are also prevented and cured by this sovereign regulating medicine. Try it at once if your nerves are out of order, and if their weakness is perpetuated by the existence of disease. A superb appetizer and promoter of sound repose.

Two Views of Bad Literature. In Paris a league has been formed for the suppression of all forms of impure literature, photographs, etc., in France, and M. Constans, Minister of the Interior, is lending it active assistance by ordering the police to overhaul the news stands in all cities and confiscate everything savoring of indecency. The aims and intentions of the league and M. Constans, no doubt, are laudable, but whether they will meet with success is very doubtful.

Experience has shown that prohibition of a certain kind of literature in most cases serves only for an advertisement of it, and does not restrict its circulation, but on the other hand tends to a dangerous interference with the liberty of publication. Far better is the remedy proposed in Germany—namely, the propagation of wholesome and moral views by encouraging the circulation of works of a pure and healthy tendency. In Germany, societies have been founded for that purpose, and their marked success during the last few years ought to encourage imitation in other countries.

The Only One. The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway is the only line running solid vestibuled, electric lighted, and steam heated trains between Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, and Minneapolis.

The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway is the only line running solid vestibuled, electric lighted, and steam heated trains between Chicago, Omaha, and Sioux City.

The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company now operates over sixty-one hundred miles of thoroughly equipped road in Illinois, Wisconsin, Northern Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, South and North Dakota.

On all its through lines of travel the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway runs the most perfectly equipped trains of sleeping, parlor, and dining cars and coaches. The through trains on all its lines are systematically heated by steam. No effort is spared to furnish the best accommodations for the least money, and, in addition, patrons of the road are sure of courteous treatment from its employees.

The Result of a Dream. About the year 1777, a Bristol, Conn., plumber named Watts dreamed that he was out in a shower of molten lead. He observed that the metal came down in spherical drops, and afterward, to find whether it would be so, he went to the top of a church and poured melted metal into a vessel of water below. To his great delight he found that the lead had gathered into beautifully formed globular balls and he at once took out a patent.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury. As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good they can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

ALL pieces of glass formerly wasted are now put to use for decorative purposes by a firm of manufacturers in Paris. Fragments of various colors are placed in a fire-resisting mold and raised to a high temperature, when a coherent mass is produced, which, when dressed and cut into blocks. These are, of course, irregularly colored. They may be used as artificial marble, and one surface of each block being usually rough, they are readily secured to walls by mortar. Designs in relief may be pressed upon the surface while still plastic.

It Pays to Read the Papers. Especially your county paper, for often through this medium business chances and opportunities are presented that might otherwise entirely escape your attention. For instance, B. F. Johnson & Co., Richmond, Va., have an advertisement in this paper that will prove of especial interest and value to a large number of people hereabouts.

Three of a Kind. In Mississippi recently three interesting events happened on one evening in a family: An old lady and her husband celebrated their golden wedding; a daughter and son-in-law their silver wedding and a grand-daughter her wedding.

A CONNECTICUT farmer recently found a package of 100 $1,000 bills. Imagine his disappointment when he found that they were counterfeit.

"All she lacks of beauty is a little plumpness." This is a frequent thought, and a wholesome one.

The Varnish Tree. Some years ago Prof. Rein planted in the Frankfurt Botanical Garden some of the trees from which it is stated the Japanese obtain their lacquer or varnish. The tree is known to botanists as the Rhus vernix, and it appears there are now thirty-four healthy trees, some thirty feet high. Prof. Rein has taken sap from a few of the trees and sent it to Japan for trial by native artists. It is, however, almost a cress for Europeans to attempt to compete with the Japanese in their line, but the lacquer, if it can be made from trees grown in Europe, may be used for other purposes than varnishing wood. The Rhus Coriaria, or varnish tree, grows in many parts of what may be termed the Mediterranean district, and its juice is known for its deleterious, or injurious properties, and has consequently been let alone. The Japanese, however, seem to understand it, and it is certain they make a beautiful lacquer or varnish from the juice of their tree; but they keep the process a secret.—English Mechanic.

The Only One Ever Printed—Can You Find the Word? There is a 3-inch display advertisement in this paper this week which has no two words alike except one word. The same is true of each new one appearing each week from The Dr. Harter Medicine Co. This house places a "Caucus" on everything they make and publish. Look for it, send them the name of the word, and they will return you BOOK, BEAUTIFUL LITHOGRAPHS, or SAMPLES FREE.

A Strong Defense. The witnesses for the defense in a libel suit at Montreal testified that so high did the character of the plaintiff stand that it would be impossible to libel him. No one would believe his traducers, and hence his business standing could not suffer. On this ground the jury returned a verdict for the defendant.

A TIMELY SUGGESTION.—Some folks seem to think that dyspepsia means piety, and others imagine themselves good simply because they have a bad liver. If these suggestions apply to you, gentle reader, we would advise you to get Dr. White's Dandelion Alternative at once. It cures dyspepsia, regulates the liver and overcomes that feeling of weariness and lassitude. Very large bottle for a dollar, and every bottle warranted.

"A sense of gratitude and a desire to benefit those afflicted prompts me to recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all who have catarrh. I tried about everything I saw recommended for catarrh, but failing in every instance of being relieved, I became

The money is yours, and the misery is yours; and until you are willing to believe, and spend the one for the relief of the other, they will stay so. John H. Foster, 1122 Brown Street, Philadelphia, says: "My wife is a little Scotch woman, thirty years of age and of a naturally delicate disposition. For five or six years past she has been suffering from Dyspepsia. She became so bad at last that she could not sit down to a meal but she had to vomit it as soon as she had eaten it. Two bottles of your August Flower have cured her, after many doctors failed. She can now eat anything, and enjoy it; and as for Dyspepsia, she does not know that she ever had it."

Saturday evening a party of four young men returning from a hunting trip to G. in Lake drove into Plainwell, in a lumber wagon on their way home. One of them, Arthur H. Glen, about 28 years old, held a loaded and cocked gun between his knees, and it was exploded by the jar as the wagon passed over a crosswalk, the charge taking effect in his forehead. Death ensued two hours later. His parents, his young wife and three young children are grieved with grief.

Last summer an Englishman who had lived in this country long enough to find that there are a few things in America about as good as he had seen in England, had a friend come over from his old home to visit him. The newcomer could find nothing that was quite as good or as large here as he had left at home. He talked a great deal about the English watering places, and how much superior to anything in America they were. Full of practical jokes, the older resident took his new friend to Old Orchard Beach; but even that splendid resort did not suit him—there were a great many places in England that were better. Finally he arranged with the landlord to have a lobster put into the bed of his new friend just before he retired. In a short time the young man got into bed and in a half-minute he was out of it, screaming and shouting in the loudest and wildest manner. The man of practical jokes went to see what was the trouble. "See there," said the young man; "look at that blasted thing!" "Oh, that is nothing," said the other, "but an American bedbug! Suppose you have bigger ones in England?"

"Aren't you ever going to grow old, like the rest of us?" asked a man of an acquaintance he hadn't seen for some time. "Well, not so long as I can purify my blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla," was the apt reply. This man knew what he was talking about.

At Fair Haven, in the new state of Washington, there has been organized "The Consolidated Black Cat Company," for the propagation of a certain breed of black cats. One of the promoters of the enterprise thus sets forth the object: "An island is to be purchased somewhere in the Puget Sound region, so that the cats cannot intermix with other cats of the surrounding regions, and there the black-cat breed is to be perpetuated. The black cats will live on fish, thus the expense of running the big cat ranch will be reduced to a minimum. The cats are to be grown for their fur, and we expect to make great profit out of it. Most of the original stock will be brought from Holland."

"Did yer father lick yer, Jimmie?"

Suzie—"What did she die of?"

Willie—"She overloADED her stum-mick with turkey an' mince pie on Thanksgiving!"

Suzie—"O, what a lovely death—how I envy's her corpse!"

We have received a copy of the handsomely illustrated prospectus for 1892 issued by the Detroit Free Press. The achievements of this famous paper in the past have been great, but if its promises for the future are to be fulfilled—and there certainly is no reason to expect the contrary—The Detroit Free Press will in 1892 be, as its publishers confidently claim, the most entertaining and instructive paper published, giving additional pleasures to its thousands of old subscribers and fresh enjoyment to the many thousand new ones that its merits deserve. Its list of contributors for 1892 includes many of the most famous names in American literary and public life, and most of the articles to be published are of unusual importance and interest, presenting a splendid array of valuable features in addition to the inimitable work done by its own staff of bright and famous writers.

The weekly Detroit Free Press is not only the brightest humorous and literary paper published, but it gives also an incomparable news service. No event or incident worth chronicling escapes its attention. Important matters are always treated in the fullest manner, while the ordinary news of the day is carefully condensed in order that nothing may be omitted for want of space. Its State news service is especially complete and valuable, while its general and foreign news columns are not surpassed in excellence by any paper in the land.

Something less than a year ago The Free Press began the publication of a Semi-Weekly edition, issued on Tuesday and Friday. We understand that the publishers are somewhat surprised by the success of their new venture, although there is no reason why they should be, for it is just such a project as is bound to succeed when backed by the resources and skill of The Free Press establishment. This Semi-Weekly edition fills the place of a daily newspaper better than any other medium, and at a mere nominal cost. Its two weekly numbers make sixteen pages, containing all the bright features of the literary edition of The Free Press, and, in addition, the most complete news service known outside of the metropolitan dailies.

The publishers of The Free Press will mail copies of the paper and prospectus to all applicants.

The World Grows.—Noah Webster would not know his old dictionary in the perfection it has attained in the hands of modern scholars. The world grows, however, and dictionaries with it so that a cheap reprint of the 41 years old "original" Webster is worth about as much as an old almanac. WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY, the recent successor of the latest and still copyrighted "Unabridged," is the best work of its kind ever published, and, well used in a family, will be of more value to the members thereof than many times its cost laid up in money.

When, from any cause, the digestive and secretory organs become disordered, they may be stimulated to healthy action by the use of Ayer's Cathartic Pills. These Pills are prescribed by the physicians, and are for sale at all the drug stores.

The third edition of "Diseases of the Throat and Nose," by the great English Surgeon, Lennox Browne, is out. On pp. 557-8 he discusses the various methods of treating such diseases as catarrh, cold in the head, sore throat, asthma and bronchitis, and concludes by saying that he has used Cushman's Menthol Inhaler for several years in the hospitals under his charge; and that he has had better success with it than all other remedies. For these diseases he gives it his unqualified endorsement. A trial at the drug store will show you that it is neat, convenient and pleasant to use, and gives almost instant relief. It costs 50c and lasts a year. Guaranteed to give satisfaction. A free trial at H. Walsh's Drug Store.
