Ken Peffers Back From Costa Rica

Ken Peffers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon E. Peffers of 164 Dunton Ave., returned to Holland on Dec. 24 after a four week stay in Costa Rica, while he was following an independent study period in Latin America.

Peffers and Miss Ann Chandler of Atlanta, Ga., were guests of Peace Corps volunteers in two rural areas of the country. They are both first year students at New College in Sarasota, Fla.

Peffers was assigned to Peace Corps volunteer John F. Guerre.

Ken Peffers

He spent the month with Guerre in the village of La Fortuna de Bagaces, in the state of Guanacaste. A plane flew Peffers to Costa Rica from Miami on Thanksgiving Day. From the airport he took a five hour bus ride and then proceeded by horseback for three hours finally arriving at the village of 400 Costa Ricans.

Peffers observances dealt with emphasis on the villagers' involvement in local government, and studying their customs.

While there he also noted the efforts being made to build a bridge and repair a road, which would provide better transport of the village's farm produce to market. What once allowed for a nine hour journey by pack train would be greatly improved and the time element reduced by enabling trucks to drive all the way to the village, Peffers said.

Cost of the trips was borne entirely by the students. To participate, each must have a working knowledge of Spanish. Students must plan a research project to be carried out during their stay. When they return, they are required to present a written report to the faculty member with whom they planned their work.

Peffers will return to his studies at New College on Jan. 1.

Recommend Local Man For Medal of Honor

Officer Fell On Grenade In Vietnam

Capt. Charles Banks Cited for Top Honor In Can Tho Incident

A Holland man has been recommended for the Congressional Medal of Honor for heroism in Vietnam.

Capt. Charles Banks, 32, a pilot, threw himself on a grenade at a base in Can Tho, South Vietnam, last Wednesday. The grenade had fallen near a gas truck. It would have killed Banks, five airmen and could have destroyed 11 planes on a nearby flight line.

Capt. Banks had just finished a mission, parked his plane and walked toward five airmen who were standing beside two tankers filled with aviation fuel. About 300 yards away a Vietnamese youth crossed a rice paddy toward the Americans, and from 25 yards away hurled an object which fell between Banks and the truck.

He dived for the grenade, yelling: "Grenade! Scatter!" As the men sought shelter he said to himself, "I've got four kids. What am I doing this for?"

After the other airmen reached safety, Banks grabbed the grenade and hurled it over a drainage ditch and it exploded harmlessly. It had taken about 15 seconds, but it seemed a lifetime.

"The only thing that saved me was the fact that it was a home-made grenade," Banks said. "If it had been a U.S. grenade I wouldn't be here." The Vietnamese youth was with the Viet Cong.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Banks, 401 Big Bay Dr., Holland, were very happy to learn their son had been recommended for the honor but happier that he would be alive to receive such an award. The joy was shared by two sisters, Mrs. Basil Beck and Mrs. Ronald Buckley, both of Holland.

There was a flurry of excitement in the Banks home as news filtered through of their son's exploit. They could only be thankful that their son who is in his 17th year with the service was alive.

"Charlie always wanted to be a soldier," the elder Banks said. "He loves the service."

Banks' wife, the former Ruth De Vries of Grand Rapids, lives in Fort Lewis, Wash., with the couple's four children, Terry, 12, David, 10, Julie, 9, and Laurie, 7. She is expecting another and the family was anxiously waiting for word of her condition.

"If it's a boy, they will name him Charles Jr.," Banks' father said. "They haven't decided on a name in case it's a girl."

Banks said his son, who also has served in Germany, Korea and Panama, would probably come home in about four months but has expressed the thought he might go back. The elder Banks has not talked with his son since he left for Vietnam eight months ago. But he has received many letters.

"It's a necessity," Charlie wrote his parents about the war in Vietnam. "If we don't stop them here, we'll be fighting them in Thailand."

Capt. Banks was born in Holland and graduated from Holland High School. His interest in the military started when he joined a Boy Scout troop in Waukazoo. Then he joined the National Guard. He spent a few months in the reserves and then joined the regular army, working up to the rank of captain.

He took his officer training in Fort Benning, Ga., received special flight training in California and went to jet school at Fort Rucker, Ala. For a time he taught in the ROTC program at Cornell University.

Vietnam is his fifth foreign assignment. His family has always been with him while he was in this country. They once joined him on a three-year tour in Germany but the tour was cut short after a year when their 1½-year-old son became ill of cancer and the child died en route home.

Capt. Banks recently received the Purple Heart after his L-19 reconnaissance plane was shot down in Vietnam.

Charles was only 15 years old when he joined the National Guard. He was within weeks of his 16th birthday and couldn't resist sliding over a simple question of "Are you old enough?" in the lineup. By the time it was all cleared up he was 16, and it has remained a family story.

Capt. Charles Banks

Water Pollution Can Spell Death for the Great Lakes

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in series on water pollution compiled by Sentinel reporter Fred Oettle.)

By Fred Oettle

Why is pollution a danger to the Great Lakes?

First, it seems obvious that pollution represents a very real health danger to the millions of people who drink water from the lakes and use the lakes for recreation. Also, pollution spells doom for the commercial fish industry, already in a state of decline.

But just as important as these short-range dangers is the long-range problem that pollution may well cause the end of the lakes themselves. Lakes are like people — they are born, they grow old, and they die. These are natural geological occurrences, but pollution can cause the untimely death of a lake just as arsenic can cause the untimely death of a human being.

The five Great Lakes were born about 20,000 years ago, when the most recent ice age scoured huge holes in the earth of North America. How important are the Great Lakes? They constitute the largest reservoir of fresh water on the face of the earth. They are an invaluable natural resource for the United States and Canada.

The lakes supply huge quantities of water for various needs: drinking, industrial uses, etc. They serve as a transportation system 2,000 miles long (including the St. Lawrence River) linking the American midwest and Canada to the Atlantic. Their falls and rapids generate fantastic amounts of electric power. Their fish life is a large potential source of food, and, finally, they serve as a huge playground for human relaxation through boating, swimming and fishing.

Although less than 3.5 percent of total U.S. land area lies in the Great Lakes basin, 13.5 percent of the nation's population (and about one-third of Canada's) makes their homes in the basin.

Economists claim the Great Lakes basin is potentially the fastest growing region in America because of its unlimited supply of water. But this supply looks more limited all the time.

Under ideal conditions, the life of an inland lake is always limited, but the Great Lakes are so young (on a geological scale) that natural aging would be of no concern, but pollution so speeds aging that the death of the Great Lakes is a real possibility.

The natural aging of a lake results from a process called "eutrophication", which means biological enrichment of its water. A newly formed lake is a body of cold, clear, pure water. But as drainage brings in nutrients like phosphorus and nitrogen, the plant and animal life of the lake increase. As the living matter multiplies, organic deposits pile up on the bottom, the lake becomes shallower and shallower and its waters become warmer. Plants can then take root in more of the bottom and gradually take over more of the lake. Their deposits speed up the filling process and eventually, the lake becomes a marsh, is overrun by vegetation and disappears.

The Great Lakes, of course, are huge and deep — Lake Superior averages 487 feet in depth. But Lake Erie, the real danger spot in the system, averages only 58 feet. Lake Erie has been called a biological disaster, because pollution has so accelerated the aging process that one-fourth of the lake, some 2,600 square miles, has almost no oxygen at all and supports only the lowest forms of life, algae and the like. New pollutants added to Lake Erie will tend to make the water toxic, instead of being partially consumed by fish and plants.

Lake Michigan is reported to be on the verge of the same fate. The statistics of fish population illustrate the problem well: from 1941 through 1946, the take of lake trout in Lake Michigan averaged more than six million pounds per year, rivalling Lake Superior. After the next 10 years, Lake Michigan fisheries only produced a fraction of lake trout for market.

The southern end of Lake Michigan is the real villain — most of the rest of the lake is still relatively clean. Surprisingly, Chicago is not the polluter of the lake, as many think, since Chicago dumps its wastes into the Mississippi, away from the lake, according to a leading scientific journal. The main discharge of pollutants comes from the large industrial concentration along the southern shore of the lake.

This trend can be stopped and, hopefully, reversed with enlightened popular effort. But the probability now is that some day, Great Lakes residents will find themselves in the same boat as New York City, where water last year was drastically rationed while billions of gallons of polluted water flowed uselessly past the city in the Hudson River.

Sunday School Lesson

Time of Preparation
Luke 3:21,22; Luke 4:1-13
By C. P. Dame

People who read this column are interested in the Sunday School. Lovers of the Sunday School hope and pray that during this New Year the Sunday Schools may grow in numbers and in spiritual power.

During the last few years attendance in the Sunday Schools has been declining in spite of the fact that the teachers are better trained, and facilities are more efficient and the curricula are supposed to be far superior to anything we have ever had. Why not put more emphasis upon the study of the Bible?

I. Jesus identified himself with sinners. In the days of Jesus, when he was living in Nazareth, religion was at a low ebb. Suddenly a new voice, that of John the Baptist stirred people. Great crowds went to hear him preach. John baptized people who confessed their sins.

Jesus heard about the preaching of John and since he was interested he went to hear John and wanted to be baptized but John refused. Jesus had no sins to confess. Jesus insisted and John baptized Jesus. Why did Jesus insist? He wanted to identify himself with sinners and with the revival movement.

At the Lord's baptism the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon him, and a voice came from heaven which said, "Thou art my beloved Son; in whom I am well pleased." Three times God spoke from heaven, at his baptism, at his transfiguration and when the Greeks asked about him. At his baptism Jesus became conscious of his Messiahship.

II. Jesus was tempted in all points save sin. When Jesus was thirty years old the Holy Spirit led him into the wilderness to be tempted there. To be tempted means to go beyond the bounds set. The temptability of man is a fact. All three gospels record the temptation.

The first temptation was to turn stones into bread. Jesus refused to use his divine powers for selfish purposes. This was a temptation to enjoy. Jesus quoted Deuteronomy 8:3 to refute the devil who wanted to ignore God's promises. Luke mentions second the temptation which Matthew places third.

The devil wanted Jesus to worship him and in return he would give him "all the kingdoms of the world in a moment." This was a temptation to get-by compromise. This time Jesus quoted from Deuteronomy 6:13.

Finally the devil took Jesus to Jerusalem "and set him on a pinnacle of the temple and said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down from hence: For it is written, He shall give his angels charge over thee." . . . quoting Psalm 91:11, but leaving out the words, "in all thy ways." This time Jesus quoted Deuteronomy 6:16. This was a temptation to do—to do something sensational. Jesus refused to presume upon God.

Observe a few facts. It is not sinful to be tempted but it is sinful to court temptation and to yield. Jesus used the Bible to overcome temptation. We also have this weapon and we should know it and use it. Jesus was tempted to avoid the cross. The devil left Jesus "for a season."

The devil still tempts people not once but again and again. However since Jesus was tempted in all points save sin we can find great help from him seeing that he understands.

Tigers Run Past Holland, 93 to 67

Shinabarger Scores 31 In League Loss

Muskegon Heights got its free-lancing fast-break offense in gear for about four and one-half minutes Friday night and that was enough to keep the Tigers unbeaten with a 93-67 victory over Holland High.

A crowd of more than 2,000 saw the Heights rip off 25 points in the first four and one-half minutes of the final period to break open what had been a closely-contested Valley Coast Conference game in the Holland High fieldhouse.

The unbeaten Tigers' scoring flurry not only broke open a tight contest, but also offset a brilliant one-man scoring show staged by Holland's junior guard Dan Shinabarger.

Shinabarger tossed in 10 of 19 field goal attempts and 11 of 14 free throw tries to take game scoring honors with 31 points, tops for any VCC performer this season.

Prime offensive threats for coach Donn Westman's Tigers were veteran guard Art Davis, who scored 22 of his 26 points in the first three quarters, and 6'5" forward Ralph Houston, who put in 15 of his 23 points during the early fourth-period scoring spree.

"We took their game away from them in the first half," said losing coach Don Piersma after the game.

That game is simply run and gun — and rebound. Thanks to good shooting and an even match on the boards, Holland battled to a 16-16 deadlock after a quarter and trailed only 33-31 at halftime.

With the score 46-43 in favor of the Heights in the third period, the Tigers turned loose a full-court press which netted them three baskets within 40 seconds.

Muskegon Heights' nine-point lead at that point (52-43) was its largest of the game up to that point and equalled its advantage after three periods (57-48).

A tip by Tiger center Jim Turner, two free throws by sub guard Ken Young, and three straight layups and a foul shot by Houston gave the Heights a 68-50 margin just two minutes into the fourth frame.

Once the Tigers had shifted the tempo of the game into high gear, there was no stopping the Muskegon Heights express.

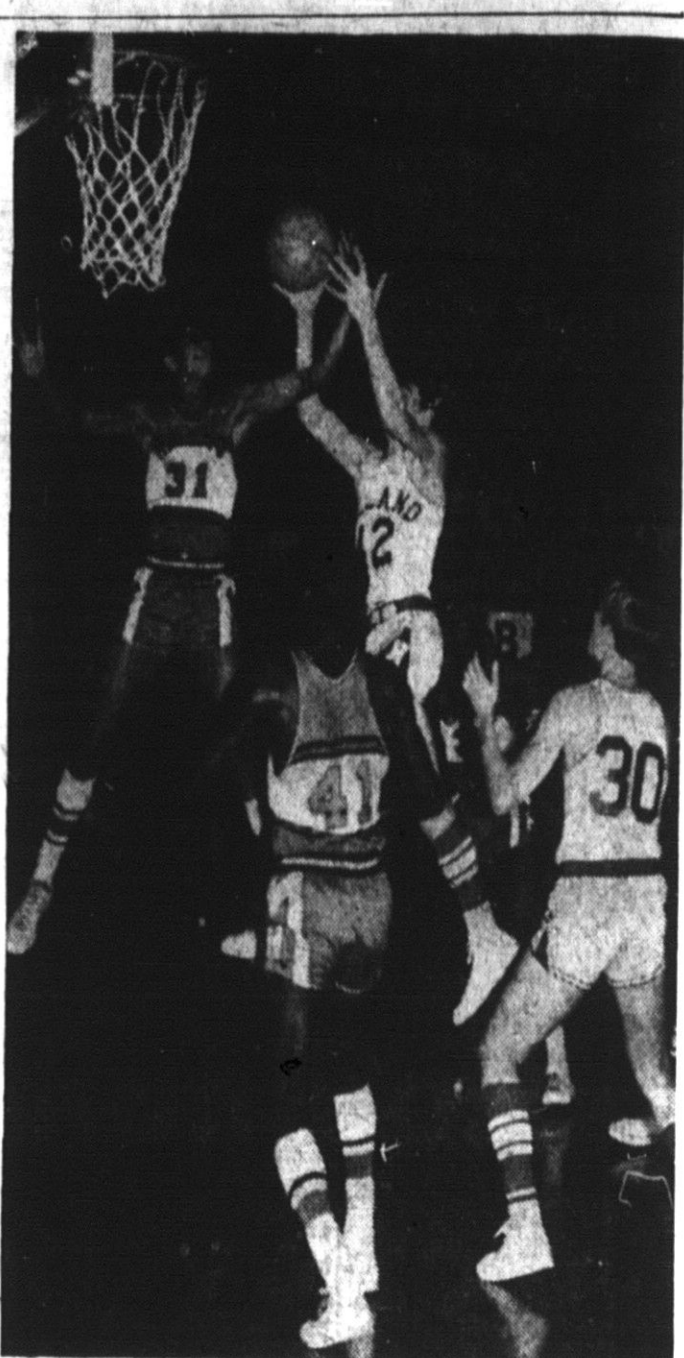

Westman took his regulars out with between 4:30 and 3:00 to go and despite the constantly changing lineup, the Heights scored 36 points in the final quarter for a 60-point second half. A week ago, against East Grand Rapids, the Tigers scored 69 points in the second half to roll to a 108-66 victory.

The rebounding of Steve Jacobusse, Bob Venhuizen, John Thomas and Jim Fortney kept the Dutch in contention in the first half. That quartet provided Holland with its only semblance of scoring support for Shinabarger, too. Fortney had 12 points, Venhuizen and Jacobusse eight apiece and Thomas four.

It was Jacobusse's first appearance since the season opener, as he just recently recovered from painful elbow injuries suffered in practice for the second game of the season.

Muskegon Heights wound up with a deceivingly slim 44-39 rebound advantage. Not included in this total, were the approximately 30 offensive tips that the Heights pushed toward the basket.

The Heights finished with 40 of 89 from the field for 44.9 per cent. Holland was just behind with 25 of 57 for 43.9 per cent. The Tigers were 13 of 21 from the free throw line, the Dutch, 17 of 25.

Ball control errors were nearly even with the Dutch committing 22 miscues, the Heights 21. The Tigers' free-wheeling offense accounted for their errors, and the Heights' tenacious press (usually half-court) for the Dutch miscues.

Piersma summed up the Muskegon Heights team in this manner, "They can shoot, rebound and run — what else do they need?" Not much.

Godwin Takes Title In Zeeland Tourney

ZEELAND — Wyoming Godwin heavyweight Ken Colby took a 4-2 decision over Connell of Muskegon Catholic Central in the final event of the meet to give Godwin the team title in the sixth annual Zeeland Holiday Invitational wrestling meet Friday night.

Colby's decision gave his Godwin team 10 points (77 for the meet). A loss would have resulted in Colby settling for second place and seven points and the Wolverines would have been forced to finish on the short end of a 75-74 count to Muskegon Mona Shores.

As dramatic as Colby's victory may have been, it wasn't enough to sway the participating coaches from selecting Grand Rapids South's Rick Vaughn the top wrestler in the tournament.

Vaughn didn't win the title in the 120-pound class, but won two decisions with a broken hand before being forced to default in the finals to Andy Palmer. It wasn't just a two-school race for the team title. Coach Dan Czuhai's Godwin team won with 77, Mona Shores followed with 75, Grandville with 71 and Muskegon Catholic with 70.

Grandville was the defending champion. The title was Godwin's second, as the Wolverines won one of the two divisions in 1962.

Fifth place finisher was Otsego with 60 points, followed by Grand Rapids South 41, Allegan 29, Wyoming Lee 27, Grand Rapids Union 25, West Ottawa and Zeeland 17 apiece and Muskegon Orchard View 12.

Coach Gordon Kerr of the host Zeeland Chix and Robert Larsen served as tournament directors.

Trophies were presented to first and second place winners in each individual weight class, as well as to the top two teams (Godwin and Mona Shores.)

Top showings by Holland area wrestlers were a second by Zeeland's Blauwkamp in the 127-pound class and a fourth by West Ottawa's Rich Schultz in the heavyweight division.

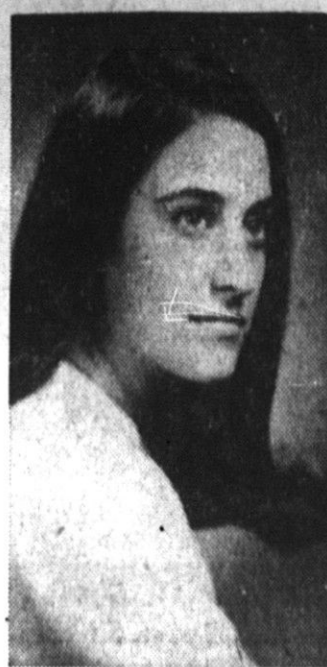

The individual champs, their schools and weight classes follow:

Overflow Crowd Hears Gert Behanna's Message

An overflow audience crowded into First Reformed Church Wednesday night for a lecture by Gert Behanna, a woman of strong conviction who devotes her life to the Lord after a lifetime that encompassed vast wealth, alcoholism, three divorces and attempted suicide.

Admittedly hitting 73 next Feb. 1, Mrs. Behanna delivers a message from a no-nonsense approach geared mainly to her book written some nine years ago under the pen name of Elizabeth Burns and titled "The Late Liz."

Reared by a multi-millionaire father in a pagan world of high society, Gert Behanna at 53 was a human wreck with nobody to turn to but God.

"Perhaps the hardest thing I did in my new life was giving up my money," she said. "Money is a divisive thing. It's like bricks. You can make a shrine or slug somebody over the head to death. I figured if I were really sincere in this thing I'd have to give up the money and cut down to a home and $300 a month. I sort of ish I had waited for some of this inflation. Two hundred a month these days just isn't enough. But the Lord always provides," she said.

In her husky voice, Mrs. Behanna told parts of her life story interspersed with scriptural references and humorous asides. She spoke of her two sons, Bill who hit the skids and "came back" just over a year ago, and Bart, now an Episcopal clergyman.

She told the moving story of Bill's "return" and how he

Their children and grandchildren include Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Nykamp, Roger and Janice De Long, Glenda and Norman, Mr. and Mrs. Foster Nykamp, Ronald and Ruth, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Bos, Karen, Lila and Loren.

Switching from 100 per cent pagan to 100 per cent Christian, Gert Behanna today says all people are sinners. "If you think you don't sin, that's a doozy of a sin," she said. "If you're going to sin, enjoy it. There's nothing like a sniveling sinner."

She added, "The most frightening thing in the world today is that people think this is a Christian country. If this is a Christian country, I'd hate to live in a pagan country. Why are we all running so fast? If we could just convert the Christians in this country, we'd have it made!"

All one really needs, Gert Behanna contends, is prayer, the Bible, a minister and a church. It's never too late to find God and it's not impossible, she said.

Mrs. Behanna's appearance was sponsored by the women of First Church. Mrs. Harry Young presided and Mrs. Marvin Shoemaker introduced the speaker.

Mrs. Behanna this morning addressed young people attending the annual conference of the Reformed Church Youth Fellowship meeting this week on Hope College campus.

Ottawa County 4-H News

By Willis S. Boss

Extension 4-H Youth Agent
Calendars are being mailed and distributed to all of the 4-H leaders and in turn will be handed out to their 4-H members. Those not mailed, will be delivered personally, especially to the large clubs. Again, we wish to take this opportunity to thank the business places which contributed to the 1967 calendars for Ottawa County 4-H Club members.

The 4-H leaders elected to the Ottawa County 4-H Council in the recent vote-by-mail ballots were John Koning of the Coopersville area, Barney Zuidema of the Holland area, and Harvey Brouwer of the Hudsonville area. We have also asked the following to serve an appointed one-year term on the council: James Meerman of the Coopersville area, Chet Raak of the Holland area, and Mrs. John Van Aller of the Hudsonville area.

They, along with the present council members, will work to unify the 4-H program in a county and area basis.

The next meeting of the Ottawa County 4-H Council will be held on Jan. 10 at Jack's Restaurant in Holland. Husbands and wives of council members will be invited to attend this dinner meeting which will include a short business meeting.

We are planning to have two training sessions for 4-H clothing leaders at the Allendale Public School in the band room (number 33) on Jan. 10. One will be held at 1:30 in the afternoon and a similar one will be held at 7:30 in the evening. Hems will be one of the main topics of discussion. It is suggested that books be brought. The books will explain the different ways of doing hems — the training session will help decide when these techniques might be used to the most advantage. Mrs. Alfreda McGuire, home extension economist, will be in charge of these meetings.

At the last meeting of the Area Council, Ron Knoblock of Allegan was selected as the official representative of Area 5 to the State 4-H Council. Mrs. Ken Krammer of Kent County is the alternate for this position. Mrs. Mae Spoolstra was selected to give the report of the area council to the Ottawa County 4-H Council's next meeting. The Area Council decided to meet on Jan. 26 and discuss the possibilities of a spring rally similar to the Kick-Off held in the fall of 1966. The purpose of the organization was spelled out.
